Russian Armies Driving On To New Victories As Nazi Defense Crumbles

Chernigov On Kiev-Gomel Railway Captured; Smolensk Defense Line Broken by Flanking Movement; Nazi Losses Of Men And Material Described As Heavy

By JAMES M. LONG London, Sept. 21.—(AP)—The whole German Desna river winter defense line collapsed today under a terrific Red army onslaught which broke the Nazi stand along the entire west bank and took by storm the important bastion town of Chernigov, 30 miles from the Dnieper river and 77 miles northeast of Kiev. Marshal Stalin announced in an order of the day.

The successful forcing of the Desna, described by Stalin as a skillful outflanking maneuver, followed three days of violent fighting, the Premier's announcement said.

The order of the day, broadcast by Moscow and recorded by the Associated Press said as the result of Chernigov's fall, "the Germans' defenses prepared on the western bank of our troops along the whole length of the river and the plan of our troops on the line of the river Desna must be considered to have failed."

An earlier Moscow communique announced that Red army forces had slashed across the Kiev-Chernigov highway on the middle Dnieper and cut the main Russian escape railway between Azporezh and Dniepropetrovsk. Other Russian troops stormed on from captured Velich, 65 miles northwest of Smolensk, to outflank that German central front anchor.

The Moscow communique disclosed an amazing list of triumphs marked up by the hard-slugging Russian troops, including the start of a great wheeling movement pointed toward Cherkassy, key center of the German southwest of Kiev, in an attempt to entrap the hundreds of thousands of German troops reported massed in the river bend.

More than 1,130 towns and villages fell before the slashing Soviet advances, the Russian war bulletin said. Tremendous piles of war equipment, including strings of fully loaded troop and material trains, armored cars, guns and anti-aircraft guns, were reported taken intact as well as great caches of grain, indicating the haste in which the Nazis were fleeing on practically all sectors of the battle front.

The enemy left more than 10,000 dead on the field of battle, the Russians said. Red army airmen smashed an apparent attempt of the Germans to (Continued on Page Three)

ALLIED PLANES HIT JAP BASES

Japs Suffered Staggering Losses In New Guinea

By OLEN CLEMENTS Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Japan paid a high price in men and equipment while losing Lae and Salamaua on New Guinea. Now that these air bases are firmly in General MacArthur's hands, enemy garrisons in the area are beginning to undergo attacks by fighter-escorted bombers and to see more strafing Allied fighters than they have experienced before.

Just how many of a Japanese army once estimated at 20,000 men were slain at Salamaua fell Sept. 12 and Lae Sept. 16 remains to be disclosed in official reports. But a spokesman for Gen. MacArthur said today the enemy, caught in a jungle encirclement movement, lost heavily.

He said evidence has been found that the Japanese lost an entire regiment, ordinarily averaging 2,200 men, in killed and hospitalized during the outpost battles at Wau, Mubo and Komatum leading up to the larger scale fighting at Salamaua and Lae.

Japanese soldiers who fled north from Lae now are being added to the mounting list of enemy dead. American and Australian soldiers who placed armed blockades across the jungle trails above Lae, in expectation of just such a retreat, now have contacted these fugitives. And Allied soldiers moving behind them from Lae also have caught up with them.

Today's communique told of effective air raids on enemy air installations at Pishchiden, only 30 miles up the Hugin peninsula from Lae, at Cape Gloucester, across Dampier strait on New Britain, 120 miles from Lae, and of extensive fighter activity in the north New Britain coastal area of Kimbe Bay, roughly half way along the route to the choicest target on that island—the big air and shipping stronghold of Rabaul, Australian-manned Beaufighters poured 20,000 rounds of ammunition into an air-drome, supply dumps, anti-aircraft (Continued on Page Six)

Penney Company Buys $4,000 Bonds

C. R. McBrayer, manager of J. C. Penney Company's store in Greenville, has delivered his company's check for $4,000 to purchase War Bonds through the Pitt County War Bond Committee. In yesterday's paper the amount was erroneously stated as $500. The Penney Company's purchase here was part of a nation-wide plan to buy War Bonds in stores. The company is buying through its various store managers $10,000,000 of War Bonds in the Third Victory Loan Drive, McBrayer stated.

Decorations For Pitt County Man

Mr. and Mrs. Lester M. Meeks of Bethel, have received official notice from the War Department of the posthumous award of three medals to their son, Lt. Thomas J. Meeks, who was killed in action on the European front in June. The awards for meritorious achievement against the enemy included the Purple Heart, Air Medal and Oak Leaf Cluster. Meeks was a member of the U. S. Eighth Airforce. Lt. Meeks was well known in Greenville, having graduated from East Carolina Teachers College and been employed at the Pitt County Farm office prior to his entry into the armed forces.

Jap Planes Raid Guadalcanal Area

Washington, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Japanese planes raiding American positions on Guadalcanal in the Solomon Islands caused slight damage and minor casualties, the navy reported today. The raid, the third in a week upon Guadalcanal, apparently was of the nuisance variety and probably was carried out by bombing planes on a reconnaissance mission. The navy previously had reported that on the night of September 10 a single Japanese plane bombed the island causing minor damage and injuring one man. Earlier on September 13 and 14, enemy planes had bombed Lunga Point with only slight damage.

Economy Bloc Renews Battle Against OWI

Washington, Sept. 21.—(AP)—The Office of War Information was set up today as the target for the first economy drive of the fall session of Congress. "Their operations are a continuing menace," said Rep. Taber of New York, ranking Republican on the House Appropriations Committee. He urged a reorganization of OWI and removal of its administrator, Egan Davis. The New Yorker, who led last summer's fight which resulted in closing most of the field offices in OWI's domestic service, told reporters he believed Davis should be replaced by a "trained executive." Taber also criticized the OWI overseas activities, which he charged were "getting worse instead of better," and emphasized that his

DELAY ACTION ON DRAFT BILL

Senate To Consider Father Draft Issue Tuesday

Washington, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Senate consideration of the Wheeler bill to defer the drafting of pre-war fathers the rest of this year was postponed today until next Tuesday.

Majority Leader Barkley (Ky.) said Senator McNary, the minority leader, and Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.) author of the bill, had agreed to the delay to permit members to study the voluminous testimony taken before the Military Committee. Bernard M. Baruch, the presidential adviser who recently completed a study of west coast labor shortages, is scheduled to testify at 2 p. m. tomorrow as the final witness in the committee's supplemental hearing on the bill, previously approved by an 11 to 4 vote. Meanwhile, Sen. Taft (R-Ohio) proposed the drafting of fathers under 30 years of age before calling those over 30. Chairman Truman (D-Mo.) of the Senate War Investigating Committee, asserted today the army and navy could reduce their draft quotas by "several hundred thousand men" without "impairing their striking force." Urging that the armed services pare their manpower requirements to the "barest minimum" before any general drafting of fathers, Truman told the Senate a full utilization of men already in the (Continued on Page Six)

Declares No Time Needlessly Lost In Italian Campaign

By E. C. DANIEL London, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Prime Minister Churchill declared today that the second front will be thrown open "at the right time" and "a mass invasion of the continent from the west will begin." Calling the Mediterranean battlefield the "third front," the prime minister told commons that the second front "already exists potentially and already is rapidly gathering weight. The second front exists and is a main preoccupation already with the enemy." "It has not yet been thrown into play," he continued. "That time is coming." "At what we and our American Allies judge to be the right time this front will be thrown open and a mass invasion of the continent from the west will begin."

Surveying the whole sweep of the war with serene confidence, Churchill also declared: 1. Not a moment was lost needlessly in the operations against Italy and except for French units, the prime minister told commons that the second front "already exists potentially and already is rapidly gathering weight. The second front exists and is a main preoccupation already with the enemy." 2. American forces have landed on the island of Sardinia to assist Italian troops who drove the German garrison over to Corsica, now being occupied by French units. 3. A tripartite conference of representatives of the United States, Britain and Russia will take place "at an early date" and no question will be barred from discussion. Any differences will be set aside for a conference of President Roosevelt, Premier Stalin and the Prime Minister himself. 4. The Allies are prepared to place large armies in Italy and to de- (Continued on Page Three)

The WAR TODAY AN ANALYSIS OF THE NEWS

By DEWITT MACKENZIE Associated Press War Analyst It makes one wonder whether the army and navy journal hasn't opened the closet door on an international skeleton by its sensational assertion that powerful interests would like to remove chief of staff General George C. Marshall from the Washington scene. Who are these powerful interests? The Journal leaves it to us to figure it out for ourselves. The public has learned of only one different opinion between Marshall and critics. The chief of staff is said to have held firmly to the conviction that western Europe should be invaded directly from England. Other strategic, particularly those on the British side of the table, have frowned on cross-channel invasion. "Timing of the drive also is said to have caused some dissension. It certainly is interesting to know where General Marshall has stood on such invasion, for that has been one of the major issues of the war. Nobody with any knowledge of military affairs would suggest such an invasion short of full preparedness. Plenty of military experts feel that had the Allies been able to invade France this summer, it likely would have been possible to finish Hitler off by the end of the year. Some think it still might be done, if the operation were started soon, late.

HOUSE ADOPTS POSTWAR PLAN

Fulbright Resolution Approved By 300 To 29 Vote

Washington, Sept. 21.—(AP)—In an historic stand on foreign policy, the House overwhelmingly passed today the Fulbright resolution, placing Congress on record in favor of United States postwar collaboration with other nations to maintain a "just and lasting" peace. The first congressional pledge of its kind was made on a roll call vote of 300 to 29, or more than the two-thirds vote required for approval. The measure goes now to the Senate, where it will be considered by the Foreign Relations Committee along with several other resolutions similar in purpose but different in language and scope. A total of 26 Republicans and three Democrats voted against the resolution, the unanimous support of the House Foreign Affairs Committee. A comparative handful of lawmakers battled bitterly against it. They declared its adoption would sign away American sovereign and constitutional rights, that its acceptance would involve the United States in the conflicts, the responsibilities and the wars of other continents. Against that argument was leveled the repeated contention of the resolution's backers that Congress had dealt this nation out of post- (Continued on Page Six)

U. S. Fifth Army Continues Advance Against Germans

Plans Under Way Enlarge Airport

City and County Asked To Provide Land To Lengthen Runways

The city-county airport just north of this city, now under construction by the Civil Aeronautics Administration for use as a Marine flying base, will likely be expanded, with the present 4,000 feet of runways lengthened to 5,000, it was made known here today.

Mayor B. B. Sugg is in receipt of a telegram from the CAA conveying the Navy Department's request that the city and county acquire an additional 60 acres of land to permit the contemplated enlargement of the field. While no official action has yet been taken on the request, sentiment indicated that the city and county boards would take favorable action on the request and begin proceedings at once to acquire the necessary land.

It was pointed out that the extension of the runways would increase the capacity of the field and would change its status into a higher bracket, both for military as well as post-war civilian use.

The original contract provided for three 4,000-foot paved runways with necessary taxiways and parking strips. This portion of the work is now nearing completion and the field is expected to be ready to turn over to the Marines on October 5, the date the construction contract expires. It was believed here today that the proposed enlargement of the field would not interfere with use of that portion completed under the present contract, while work on the enlargement is being carried on, and that there will be no change in the date of occupancy by the Marines. Realizing the part aviation will play in post-war transportation, local citizens today were well pleased the prospects for enlargement of the airport and there appeared no doubt that city-county officials would comply with the government's request for the additional land.

Corey Estate Sues For 55 Thousand

Administrators of the estate of James Henry Corey and his wife, Ella Harrington Corey, who were killed last February 22 when their car and a Carolina Trailways passenger bus collided on Fifth street near the eastern limits of Greenville, have instituted suit against the company for $55,000—$30,000 in one case and $25,000 in the other. Lewis G. Cooper is counsel for the administrators; Judge Dink James for the company. The suit will be tried during a civil term of Superior Court to be held here next week. Judge J. Paul Frizzelle of Snow Hill will preside. Mr. and Mrs. Corey left their home on the evening of February 22 to take supper with a son, Levy Corey. While crossing Fifth street their car and the passenger bus collided. They were fatally injured, both dying shortly after arrival at Pitt General hospital.

Three Collisions; Several Are Hurt

Three automobile wrecks were reported by state patrolmen and city police yesterday. John W. Bunch of Greenville temporarily lost control of his car on the highway several miles this side of Ayden yesterday afternoon and the car went onto the shoulder of the road. In righting the machine it turned around. A car and trailer driven by Hosea Gannis of Transboro, collided with the rear of Bunch's car, wrecking it. Augustus Scott, a passenger, was painfully injured. Beyond a shaking up Bunch and Scott were not injured, state patrolmen stated. A car driven by Frank Stancill, colored, of Greenville, collided with a car driven by J. C. Wynne, Jr., of Bethel, on the Bethel-Greenville highway near the junction of the Stokes highway yesterday afternoon, seriously injuring Wynne. Van Taylor of Bethel and Eddie Lee Stancill, colored, were painfully hurt. Wynne suffered cuts on his head and back which required more than a dozen stitches. State patrolmen arrested Stancill and charged him with careless and reckless driving and without a license. Cars driven by Dupree Taylor and Mrs. L. F. Walters collided at Fifth and Elizabeth streets yesterday afternoon. The cars were slightly damaged. No arrest was made, police reported.

'Invaded' Rome

Col. William Tudor Gardner (above), a former governor of Maine, and Brig. Gen. Maxwell Taylor, formerly of Kansas City, Mo., made a daring visit to Rome to confer with Marshal Pietro Badoglio a few hours before American troops invaded Italy at Salerno. They wore American uniforms, minus caps.

BRITISH LAND IN DODECANESE

RAF Now Operating From Airbase On Coo Island

Cairo, Sept. 21.—(AP)—British forces have landed on the Aegean islands of Coo, Lero and Samos off the coast of Turkey, it was announced officially today. At the same time it was disclosed that American four-engine Liberator bombers from the Middle East bombed Venice, Italy, for the first time yesterday. The confirmation of the reported occupation of Coo and Lero in the Italian Dodecanese group and the Greek island of Samos immediately to the north, which has been current for several days, followed an RAF communique announcing that the RAF had seized the Coo air-drome and is now operating from there. Coo is 53 miles northwest of German-occupied Rhodes, largest island capital of the Dodecanese group in the Aegean sea. It is about five miles from Turkey. The Italian personnel of Coo is cooperating in the occupation, the communique said. "During the past few days, several enemy air attacks have been beaten off," the communique continued, adding that in the last few days a Heinkel 111 and a JU-88 were shot down, "while attempting to attack the island." It gives the Allies an airbase in the very center of the Dodecanese group and on the north side of the Nazi Mediterranean outpost of Crete. A few days ago, it was announced that the Italians had taken over the island of Lero, some distance north of Coo. The Allied announcement did not say when the Coo air-drome was taken over by the RAF.

Americans Blast French Airfields

London, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Striking into France in daylight with a protecting escort of RAF Spitfires, American medium bombers gave the Nazis' Beauvais-Tille airbase, halfway between Paris and the coast, its second hammering in four days today. The attack was made soon after the German radio reported a night "nuisance" foray by RAF bombers into Germany. Allied heavy bombers have not been out since Thursday when the Fortresses hit the Nantes area and the RAF bombed the Alpine tunnel at Modane.

Marshall Declares Big Drives About To Begin

Omaha, Neb., Sept. 21.—(AP)—Great offensives in which the full strength of America's armed forces will be hurled against the enemy in Asia and in Europe are "just about to begin," Gen. George C. Marshall said today. Addressing the American Legion convention, Marshall said there appeared to be some public misunderstanding of the recent Allied successes, a tendency to believe that the final steps of the war were being taken. On the contrary, he said in a prepared speech, the last year and a half has been spent largely in preparation for operations of the large forces still to go into action, in establishing bases for future campaigns. "Now at last we are ready to carry the war to the enemy," said Marshall, "all overseas, thank God, with a power and force that we hope will bring this conflict to an early conclusion. "But please remember that this phase is just about to begin, a point which seems not to be understood by our people here at home, possibly because they are far removed from the agonies of war except for those whose sons or husbands have been engaged in the fighting." Marshall said he found himself "in a curious state of mind" over suggestions that perhaps the army had acquired more than it needed of some types of war goods. "For three years or more," he said, "it has been a daily struggle of striving to meet the demands without the available means. There has been the constant problem of (Continued on Page Six)

Communications Center of Eboli, 16 Miles Inland From Salerno Captured; French Troops Mopping Up In Corsica; Allied Planes Smash Historic Venice

By NOLAN NORGAARD Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Sept. 21.—(AP)—American Liberators threw new weight into the conquest of Italy by bombarding the historic port of Venice as French troops and native guerillas proceeded today to mopping up German resistance on Corsica and the U. S. Fifth Army registered new gains in the Salerno beachhead.

Slowly and steadily pressing the Germans backward, the Fifth Army stormed and took the key town of Eboli, 16 miles inland, which had served the enemy as a communications center during last week's heavy fighting about Salerno.

General Mark W. Clark's soldiers also battered their way to Montecarvino, nine miles inland, in a sustained push, an official source disclosed.

A military spokesman also announced that the Germans are swinging the lower end of a line which formerly enclosed the Salerno bridgehead to the north and east to avoid being trapped by the continued rapid advance of the British Eighth Army.

This retreat already has taken the bulk of the German forces north of the river. The Germans are using infantry supported by small groups of tanks to fight a delaying action in the Eboli area and the Fifth Army also was reported encountering elaborate minefields and demolitions in its slow but continued advance north of Salerno.

The enemy possesses excellent defensive positions in the hill country north and northeast of Salerno, the spokesman said, and the progress of Allied troops is slow.

German prisoners were quoted in official reports from the front as giving eloquent testimony of the devastating effect of incessant Allied air attacks on retreating German columns.

Cairo headquarters, reporting the bombing of Venice, said one explosion caused there was followed by a column of smoke 5,000 feet high but the full results of the attack were obscured by clouds. Liberators based on the Middle East air fields also hit railway yards and bridge approaches at the Adriatic port of Fenestrà.

Most of Corsica's Italian garrison of about 40,000 men has joined native guerillas and French troops landed from fast French warships in a fight to wipe out the German forces on the island, an official announcement said today.

A French communique announced tonight that "the whole western side of Corsica is now liberated" from the Germans, and that advance troops are in possession of St. Floris. (Continued on Page Three)

Junior Red Cross News

Through the kindness of Mr. D. H. Conley, county superintendent of schools, the Junior Red Cross will launch its program of activities for the coming year at the county-wide teachers' meeting which will be held at the Pitt Theatre next Saturday morning at 10 o'clock.

The Junior Red Cross is bringing an outstanding man from headquarters at Alexandria, Va. He will speak at 11:30.

School officers, city and county principals and teachers are extended an invitation to attend.

By your presence you will back up the boys and girls in this wonderful work. They are partners with you to know what the Junior Red Cross has to do.

Albert Whiting, graduate of the University of Colorado, now doing Junior Red Cross field work in North Carolina, southern Virginia and West Virginia, formerly Junior P. G. H. school principal in Colorado, will speak.

Immediately following Mr. Whiting's talk the Junior Red Cross will hold its first fall meeting. Every city and county sponsor and home economics teacher and chairman of planning committees, are requested to be present.

Christmas boxes to be filled for overseas and enrollment supplies will be distributed. Mrs. James will have on display samples of production to demonstrate the high quality of workmanship the Junior Red Cross sends to camps and hospitals.

The chairman of the Camp and Hospital Council will present the needs of the boys in North Carolina hospitals.

Mr. Whiting will arrive Thursday evening. Friday morning, with Mr. Conley, he will visit some of the county schools. Friday at 2 p. m., he will lecture to the group of women taking the course on staff assistance. Friday evening at 8 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. J. B. James, he will meet with the Junior Red Cross committee and sponsors.

Christian Science Service. "Matter" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches and societies on Sunday, Sept. 19.

The golden text was from Isaiah 42:8. "I am the Lord; that is my name, and my glory will I not give to another, neither my praise to graven images."

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon were the following from the Bible: "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever." (I John 2:15-17).

The lesson-sermon also included the following from the Christian Science textbook: "What is termed matter manifests nothing but a material mentality. Neither the substance nor the manifestation of Spirit is obtainable through matter. Matter is not the vestible of Spirit. Jesus reasoned on this subject practically. Understanding the nothingness of material things, he spoke of the flesh and Spirit as two opposites—as error and Truth, not contributing in any way to each other's happiness and existence. Jesus knew, 'It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing.'"

Rural Libraries There is no more important question relating to education and indeed, the future greatness of the state, than that of rural libraries.

These rural libraries will mean new and higher life in every home into which their influence enters. They will broaden the soul plunged too low by isolation and penury. They will write their legend plain upon the brows of those who seek them. They will educate a boy or girl's heart as no school can ever do.

For the honor and glory of the state and the coming race, let no one lift a hand to oppose rural libraries.

Art of Living in Wartime There is always something new to be learned. And today probably the most difficult thing to learn is how to live in wartime.

For soldiers are not the only ones who have to orientate themselves to these new conditions. Almost everyone more or less has to make some adjustment to wartime living. Many have great personal problems because war with its many tentacles pulls human beings out of line morally and spiritually as well as physically.

And though the last named ought to be easiest to solve oftentimes it isn't. Even doing without material things irritates when great sacrifices that demand courage and stamina are taken in their stride and are conducive to more courage and stamina.

Realizing all this Marjorie Greenbie, wife of a psychologist and author of "Fine Arts of Leisure" has turned her attention to these problems and come forward with a very helpful book "Art of Living in Wartime."

All the different situations that one meets in this state of difficult living are handled admirably from the gallant art of facing it to the thankless art of doing one's bit.

First of all the author pleads for escape from oneself, saying that it is the greatest and most beneficial of all escapes. "Just to get away from yourself is the most profound rest for the soul."

She also begs for some beauty to be brought into each life each day, for a nurture of faith, no matter how little in the beginning, and for an abiding trust in God's wisdom over all, which it seems our nearsightedness causes us not to behold. She believes that even though war takes health, money and a way of life, yet we can be happy.

Mrs. Greenbie's book is in the Sheppard Memorial Library as are also these books of a like nature: "You, Your Children, and War," by Dorothy Baruch. Many are realizing that no courageous parents and a courageous child somehow go together. Many are realizing that deepened understanding can lead parents to achieve greater courage. Many are wanting, therefore, to approach their present questions with tools that can help them build life. This important book by a noted psychologist shows what these tools are.

COLLEGE FALL TERM BEGINS

Freshman Class is the Largest in School's History

At the opening assembly of the Freshman Orientation Week at East Carolina Teachers' College this morning, President Leon R. Meador spoke the first words of welcome to what he described as the largest freshman class in the history of the college.

"Thousands and thousands of young people today," he said in welcoming the group, "would give us the honor of being in your shoes if they had your opportunity unhindered to think better."

The morning session was devoted to talks by staff members and student officers bringing out the relationship of the student to various offices and activities on the campus, with Miss Annie L. Morton speaking of the relationship to the women, Dr. Herbert R. Barber, to the dean of men, F. D. Dunbar, to the treasurer, and Dr. H. J. Ginnis, to the registrar. Dr. Carl Adams talked on choice of a curriculum; Dorothy Lewis, of Farmville, acting head of the Student Cooperative Government Association, suggested some things to seek in college experience; and Helene Stone of Reidsville, president of the Y. W. C. A. explained the Big Sister Program.

This afternoon there was a short program on choice of curriculum when students had opportunity to ask questions about possible courses they might follow for their first year in college. This was followed by group conferences by department counsellors meeting those students interested in their particular fields of informal discussion and advice. Faculty and student leaders will be in the new students in the college dining hall this evening for dinner at 5:55.

Introduction of major student officers and dormitory officers, and a luncheon by the Y. W. C. A. and M. C. A. are scheduled for tonight.

Tomorrow morning the freshmen and transfers will register, and on Thursday upperclassmen will register.

Ormond Speaks To Rotary Club

By WYATT BROWN

H. L. Ormond gave last night the first of a series of vocational talks to be presented by the members before the local Rotary club. Each speaker spoke of his own vocation. Mr. Ormond spoke about the food industry with particular emphasis on the role of the wholesaler for his business is that of wholesaler grocer.

First he told that the name grocer was first applied to a business in 1345 and it meant one who sold to the wholesaler—seller of gross margins. At first grocers were primarily importers of goods. Now the grocer is applied to retailers of food as well as wholesalers of food.

Mr. Ormond called the wholesaler the middle-man and commented that this was the man the Communists want to get rid of. In Mr. Ormond's opinion as long as food is sold there will be a middle-man for it is he who buys in large quantities far ahead relieving the retailer of involving larger capital and having large storage facilities.

In referring to OPA, Mr. Ormond pointed out that the government's speculative feature out of business and as a whole are a good thing. He reported grocers find dealing with rationing coupons difficult. Manufacturers allow wholesalers a week's credit for the coupons and the wholesalers allow the retailers a week's credit. Mr. Ormond predicted consumer would soon be leaving their ration books at the grocers and trade them out.

Guests of the club last night were: W. A. Allen and N. L. Ridenour of Raleigh; J. C. Gaskins, Jr. and Hugh Winslow. Dr. W. I. Woodson was greeted as a new member last night. Mary Belle Robertson is serving as temporary pianist for the Rotary club.

The Rotary club has been divided into two teams for the bond selling drive. The Commandos are led by Colonel L. M. Buchanan and the Paratroopers are led by Ollie Van-

Farmers Urged To Place Orders Now

Farmers of Pitt county who plan to obtain ground limestone, phosphate, and winter cover crop seed as conservation materials in lieu of AAA payments this year should place orders immediately to insure delivery in time for seeding, according to J. V. Taylor, chairman of the County AAA Committee.

"The time for seeding winter cover crops is here, and the sooner we get these orders the sooner the seed will be shipped," Mr. Taylor said. "This year, perhaps more than ever before, farmers should give their land all possible protection against erosion and do everything in their power to increase fertility of the soil we must depend upon for food production in 1944."

In an effort to encourage seeding of more winter cover crops and legumes this fall, the AAA recently announced a supplemental production practice allowance which is available to producers participating in the AAA program to be used for obtaining additional conservation materials. Costs of materials obtained by farmers through the AAA are deducted from payments due them under the Agricultural Conservation program. Complete details of the supplemental allowance, he said, may be obtained at the county AAA office.

Pointing to the value of cover crops in halting erosion, Mr. Taylor said tests made at the Statesville Experiment Station show that land left bare lost 65.43 tons of soil per acre in one year while the same type of land seeded to winter cover crops lost only 49 tons per acre during the same period of time. Similar tests have shown that cover crops prevent loss of nitrogen through leaching in approximately the same proportion.

"Use of ground limestone and phosphate is recommended by soil specialists both to increase fertility through promoting heavier growths of legumes and also to provide additional pasture for livestock needed in the food production program. The state recently received an additional allocation of phosphate for the month of September which brings the total amount for this month to almost three times the amount we expected to have. This will enable the AAA to fill all phosphate orders this month and increase the number of orders we can expect to fill in subsequent months."

All orders for seed are handled through local seed dealers, but must be approved by the county AAA committee and should be placed at the county AAA office.

While the whole German front appeared to be crumbling under the terrific battering by the Red army legions, the Nazi situation in the Smolensk theater verged on the precarious, Soviet front line reports indicated. Here the Russians apparently were hurling in immense concentrations of artillery, infantry, sappers, and tanks to clear the swamps and mine-filled forests around that bastion. Yesterday's advance carried them within 30 miles of the stronghold.

The Berlin radio admitted the Smolensk battle was rising to a climax, with Russian parachute troops dropping behind the German lines above the northern arm of the Dnieper river bend.

The fall of Velich not only flanked Smolensk but placed Red army spearheads within 10 miles of the White Russian border and only 45 miles northeast of Vitebsk on the rail line from Smolensk to Latvia. Below Smolensk and west of fall-

The announcement, issued by the Allied Naval Command, declared that French destroyers of the latest design, which are among the world's fastest warcraft, had dashed into Ajaccio harbor with troops and supplies after a first visit was paid by a French submarine. This submarine joined the French navy after a daring flight from a French port last November.

Some nights later the same warships made a second fast trip to Ajaccio with more men, guns and other equipment. At the time, the naval announcement said, "there were believed to be some 12,000 Germans on the island east of a line drawn from Bastia to Bonifacio. With them had joined an Italian Fascist regiment."

The Corsican patriots were already waging an effective guerrilla campaign in the mountains, with one group capturing 126 Germans in a single day.

On both the first and second swift runs which brought them into Ajaccio in the middle of the night, the French warships were spotted by enemy reconnaissance aircraft, but they succeeded in escaping attack.

When the ships arrived and the wildly enthusiastic Corsicans gathered on the docks to stage a celebration as French Moroccan troops disembarked, fires were still blazing on the hillsides. They were started by German planes which on the preceding day sought to fire Italian ammunition dumps.

The first French invasion move went through without a hitch. Official sources failed to disclose immediately whether the Germans on the island, among whom were members of the Nazi garrison who fled from Sardinia to escape the pursuing Italians, were still resisting the French troops and patriots.

Roosevelt-Churchill-Stalin conference, the Prime Minister said: "No meeting during this war could carry with it so much significance for the future of the world as a meeting between the heads of the three governments for without close, cordial and lasting association between Soviet Russia and their great allies we might find ourselves at the end of the war only to have entered upon a period of deepening confusion."

Churchill's speech, longest in his career as prime minister, lasted two hours and seven minutes. He spoke for an hour and 15 minutes, stopped for lunch, and then picked up where he left off.

The Prime Minister, appearing before Commons in his first full-scale report on the course of the world wide struggle since his historic conference with President Roosevelt at Quebec, spoke out sharply against those who had accused the Allied leadership of bungling in Italy.

The date on which the Italian invasion had originally been planned, he told the House, was Sept. 15, but it was moved up "as the result of decisions taken before the fall of Mussolini, and what has taken place in any case would have happened in Italy at the earliest possible moment."

"The Italian surrender was a windfall," he said, "but it had nothing to do with the date of harvesting the orchard."

Churchill told Commons that the Mediterranean campaign is not "a substitute for a direct attack across the channel on the Germans in France and the low countries" — that he has never regarded it as such.

"On the contrary," he said in a lengthy statement on the tide of the war, "the opening of this new front in the Mediterranean was always intended to be an essential preliminary to the main attack upon Germany and her ring of subjected and satellite states."

Turning to the air war, the Prime Minister announced that the weight of bombs dropped on Germany in the past year was three times that of the preceding 12 months and that the United States and British aircraft supply now exceeds that of Germany by more than four to one.

Saying that the almost total destruction of German war centers was continuing on a great scale, Churchill disclosed that the per-

Strength FOR THE DAY

By EARL S. COUGHLIN

SET UP LARGE OBJECTIVES
A baseball magnate in this country has described what he calls a dangerous baseball team as one that wins games but doesn't win pennants.

Some people throughout their lives insist on winning a series of minor victories and thereby losing the great triumphs. The man who is unreliable in business may go for years chattering a little here and there and making some money thereby. But almost invariably he misses the opportunity for real financial success. Some people insist always on having their rights, and generally they get them — but that is all they get. They miss the friendship and regard which comes from taking a big view of life. Hannibal won many battles, but Scipio won the war. The same was true of England that it loses all the battles and wins all the wars.

An individual life characterized by a series of little objectives is something pathetic to contemplate. The same is true in the life of nations. Little men and little nations win battles, big men and big nations win wars. A dangerous baseball team is one that wins games but loses pennants. A small-sized man is one who gets practically everything he wants in life except the one thing he wants most.

FIGHTING DOLLARS

"The long, hard march to Berlin and Tokyo has just begun. If you think it will be easy, if you think we can win this fight with one hand ... then you are wrong, dangerously wrong."

These words from Secretary Morgenthau of the Treasury Department we believe, are timely and are true. The victories so far are only the beginning. We can make of these victories the occasion of a celebration in buying more War Bonds, or we can take the dangerous position of complacency, a position so dangerous it can easily lose this war for us.

Our men on the battle lines in Italy and the South Pacific are not resting—they are face-to-face with the grim killers of our cruel, implacable enemies. And we cannot have that fighting front without a supporting front here at home. The people of this community are in the service of their country as much as though they were called into battle. That service consists of doing the jobs we must do in production and to support with every cent of our surplus earnings the Third War Loan drive which is now underway.

What sacrifice have we made, comparable to those boys who have lost their legs, their arms—their lives in the living hell of the battle fields? We are thousands of miles from the danger zone, yet our dollars will be as deadly to the enemy as bullets fired on the front lines. These dollars of ours must be fighting dollars in the form of War Bonds if we do our patriotic duty in this Third War Loan.

WASHINGTON IN WARTIME

By JACE STURM

Washington — Not since the pre-war Harbor sessions of Congress joined hands to row over land-lease sending our soldiers overseas, etc., has a session been so full of dynamic as the one just opened.

In the first place about 90 per cent of the members have been out of the cracker barrels and talking things over with the home folks for the first time since we got into this war. What most of them heard, I don't know, but whatever it was must have been an ultimatum for action.

Don't think that politics won't rear its ugly head. A lot of oldtimers are voting they never saw, the gentlemen come back from the home-front with teeth grinding harder or chins stuck out more firmly.

In view of that, it might be worth while to give a quick scan to what's in the offing.

Unless I've guessed wrong, the first big blow-off will come over the draft of fathers. In the forefront of this scrap in the Senate, will be Montana's Burton K. Wheeler.

Also in this pitching in the upper chamber will be Sen. Warren R. Austin (R-Vermont) who, with Rep. James W. Wadsworth (R-NY) has co-authored a nationwide manpower draft bill that is certain to come in for attention.

Then there will be the ruckus over new taxes. It will start with hearings in the House Ways and Means Committee, but that won't even be the beginning of the last you will hear of it.

Before the problems of simplification of tax returns, increases of income taxes, the sales tax, forced savings, etc., have been disposed of, there will be a lot of stormy water under the bridge and a lot of frayed tempers in and out of Congress.

Probably sooner finished than that will be Congressional action on either a United States or United Nations post-war peace policy.

With the "Mackinac Charter," the bulk of the Republican party in Congress has put itself on record as favoring post-war world collaboration to preserve the peace—but with reservations. The followers of William D. Dewey, Governor Warren of California, Governor Baldwin of Connecticut, to mention only a few of the GOP leaders, have other ideas. To some degree, they are far closer to or even ahead of Vice President Wallace, Secretary of State Hull, the Hatch-Hill-Ball-Burton declaration in the Senate, and the Fulbright resolution in the House. That promises to be a most confusing intra and inter party struggle.

Not much later will come the scrap on extension of social security and veterans' legislation. Both parties already have their bids in for the votes that these will bring. There's no doubt that the veterans' legislation will go through almost unscathed. There's considerable doubt that the administration will get all it will ask in the way of extending social security.

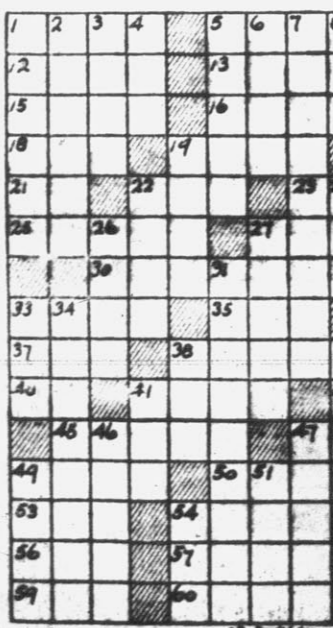

Besides these big battles, there will be the wars over appropriations, farm legislation, the bureaucracies and several other less important, but maybe bigger, headline struggles.

If the Congressmen got any rest, they'll need it.

All snakes are capable of swallowing prey many times larger than themselves.

In the Wake of an ORDER

By ADELINE McELFRESH

Chapter 4
Twenty minutes later Jane and Brad were humming down the hall to Billingsley's office. The hall shuffled after them, mumbling under his breath.

Jane had called Brad, her words tumbling one over another in her excitement, and he had driven from his apartment on the other side of town to meet her. Now as they reached the open door, he pushed her behind him.

Both offices were dark. He fumbled along the wall for the light switch.

"It's here, Brad, right by the door," Jane offered.

Then he found it. The big fluorescent lights blinked on, their white rays disclosing what once had been an immaculate room.

Jane gasped. "Brad!"

"But Brad was already at the door of Billingsley's private office. He stood there a long moment, staring. Then he turned—and Jane knew.

"Call the police, Cyrus," he instructed the old man who had been staring pop-eyed in the doorway. Then, when Jane started toward the other room, "don't think you'd better, Janey."

There was a sick look in his eyes. He ran one hand broad brown through his hair. Vaguely, Jane could hear Cyrus talking in the room beyond the door. She felt sorry for Brad. He looked so forlorn standing there, a tired slump to his usually trim shoulders.

"Can't we do something, Brad?" she asked then, more to snap him out of it than anything else.

"Right." Action seemed to be what was needed. "Send Cyrus down stairs to wait for Thompson, then come back here. We'll have a little look-see of our own."

Brad already was entering Billingsley's office when Jane hurried into the hall to meet the night watchman, who had just finished telephoning. She repeated Brad's instructions. Cyrus nodded. "Yes'm," he said and shuffled off.

Billingsley's office was, if possible, in more of a mess than her own. The filing cabinets had been searched, their drawers upset on the floor. Contents of the desk were scattered. The law books had been tumbled from their shelves and flung aside. And Chester Billingsley lay amid the shambles, his throat neatly slit from ear to ear.

Jane closed her eyes to shut out the whole bloody picture.

"You poor kid!" Brad was beside her now. "I should have kept you out."

She shook her head dumbly, not trusting herself to speak, and let him lead her across the hall to another office.

The police came then, headed by big, burly Jim Thompson. Brad went out to meet them. Jane listened to their voices. Brad's, Thompson's. Others. She heard Thompson's muffled "My God" and knew that he had seen the body. Tiny butterflies hovered wildly in the pit of her stomach until she thought she was going to be sick.

"Come on, Miss Carter, I'll take you home."

Jane jumped. She hadn't heard him come in, but Mack Reilly was staring beside her. Brad but for his uniform starting at her.

"I'll wait for Brad," she said.

The officer gave her a sympathetic smile. "All right," he said. "Your uncle's coming over. The chief called him. He—oh, here he is now."

Ed Black came in then, hatless, wearing his overcoat. It was plain that he had left the Chronicle in a hurry. He caught her hand, and "Darling," he comforted, squeezing her fingers. "What an awful experience for you."

Jane managed a faint smile. "I'm all right now." She wished the butterflies would go away.

Uncle Ed nodded. He left her with brass-buttoned Reilly and crossed the hall. Jane didn't know what happened then, for Reilly closed the door.

You've had enough of that for one evening," he grunted.

Brad came for her finally, after what seemed like a few years, at least. His face was a gray mask.

Black went downstairs with them. "Take care of her, Brad," he said when he left them on the sidewalk to go to his own car.

"Well, Brad?" Jane asked after they had pulled away from the curb.

"Jane, I don't know."

Something in his tone made Jane glance at him quickly, but his face was just a pale blur in the darkness. She waited for him to go on. When he didn't, she, too, remained silent.

"Want some coffee?" he suggested after a while.

"Maybe. I do feel all weak and queasy."

He curbed the car before a tiny restaurant. They took a table in the corner away from the counter and gave their orders. The waitress whispered something to the counter girl who turned to stare in their direction.

"Do I look that bad?" Jane asked.

"We both do, I guess," was Brad's reply. "That just about floored me, Janey."

Janey. Even in her shocked state of mind, Jane noticed that. The tight knot that was her heart relaxed a little.

"Peer Mr. Billingsley," she said.

"Brad didn't say anything. He didn't even look at me."

The waitress slid mugs of coffee before them and retreated with one quick glance over her shoulder.

"Goodnight," Brad said when a little later, she slid out of the car in front of her apartment house.

"I'll call you tomorrow."

"All right," Jane said. "I'll call you tomorrow."

She went to the car, conscious of the steady purr of his car as he drove off. With him went all sense of safety. The night closed in around her. Only in the seclusion of her apartment could she relax.

She hurried upstairs. The shaded lamp on the night stand cast a soft light over the upper hall. She opened her door, smiling a little at her fears.

Then something hit her. Lights danced in dizzy circles until a horrible darkness blinded them out.

Chapter 5
Brad drove slowly, thinking he must get to the police station and talk to Jim Thompson. There was no point in his returning to Billingsley's office, for Thompson had had a fingerprint man on the job all day, besides, he was sure there would be no evidence—either fingerprints or otherwise.

This was too big for that. The men he was after would be top cautious to invite arrest by leaving their prints all over the place.

Two blocks down the street from Jane's apartment house, he slowed to a crawl. A detour sign beside the street directing traffic around the block. One way. Brad thought, and swerving the car about, for no particular reason, he drove back toward Jane's home.

At first he was only vaguely aware that something was wrong. He didn't know what but—yes, he did, too. Not a light was visible through any of the windows. Jane should have seen it. She had not had time to get ready for bed.

He slowed down, conscious of a tiny fear tugging at his heart. Was it some sixth sense trying to warn him? He wondered, then scoffed at the thought. Hadn't he learned that intuition could not be trusted to save before he had been a girl like Jane Carter mixed up in his life.

But it wasn't intuition that made him catch his breath a split second later. It was the man who sprang from the apartment house. Brad stepped hard on the accelerator. The car lurched forward but the man had disappeared into the alley by the time it stopped in front of the building. Brad heard the man's feet pounding the pavement, getting fainter and fainter. No use trying to catch him, he realized. Besides, there was Jane.

She had told him her apartment was 3-E. Now he dashed up the stairs, afraid of what he would find at the top.

The dim light in the hall showed one open door and he headed for it. That was 3-E. It had to be! He felt for a light switch, clicked it on.

"Jane!"

She didn't answer. Her limp form, sprawled face down before the fireplace, looked as helpless amid her usual possessions. A few minutes it took to replace the studio couch cushions, vary "ave" them, and call the doctor. Some hours to Brad. She was so white and still—God, was she dead? The thought flitted through his mind like a flame, leaving all in its path withered and seared. He rushed to the medicine cabinet in the bathroom, found ammonia, and, plopping Jane's head against his shoulder, held the bottle to her nose. After a few uneven breaths, she stirred.

"Jane?"

She opened her eyes then. Brad lowered her head to the pillows.

"You gave me a scare," he whispered.

Jane tried to sit up but the room started to move in wide circles so she lay back. She wished Brad would sit still. He seemed to be hopping up and down and going in circles like everything else.

"What happened, Jane?"

She shook her head. She didn't know what happened. Just that the world exploded in her face. Brad said, "This room looks like a cyclone had hit it."

Jane turned her head, wincing a little at the sudden pain. Brad was right. The room was a mess. It looked like Billingsley's office had looked. The drawers of her writing desk were spilling their papers on to the floor. Her blue vase, the one article of value she possessed, was shattered in the corner. She shut her eyes, hiding the rest of it.

"Look in the other rooms," he said.

"They're the same," he said a moment later. "Your friend knew his way around."

"Yes," Jane gave a short laugh. "My friend, like Mr. Billingsley."

Brad didn't say anything. Jane wondered what was going on behind those steady gray eyes. That was one thing about Brad Forrester, those eyes were like ice-cold curtains, hiding his thoughts. But Jane had an idea that they could mirror warmth—and love—too.

The doctor came then, opening the door without so much as a tap. He took in the scene at one quick glance and became very professional. Jane relaxed.

"Have you notified the police?" He was talking to Brad now.

Brad nodded. "Just a prowl, in all probability."

Jane caught her breath sharply but neither of the men paid any attention. The doctor was going away. Brad accompanied him to the door.

"Take it easy for a while, Miss Carter," the doctor warned, returning the little card he had filled out to his vest pocket.

Jane nodded. When Brad closed the door and came to sit beside her, she sat up.

Brad chuckled. "Oh, that," he said. "Well, Janey, we can't have everyone in town on this. I couldn't very well have told him about Billingsley and that letter, could I?"

"Of course not. I'm sorry, Brad."

Jane stared at the remains of the Ming vase. Damn, she thought, suddenly wanting to try. Her father had brought her that vase from one of his expeditions. He didn't come back from the next one.

"As for you, Janey," Brad was saying again. "Where can you go for the rest of the night? You can't stay here, that's a cinch."

"Why not? He won't come back. I can lock my door."

Brad snorted. "You women," he chided. "Of all the foolish ideas of crazy ideas! What good would a lock do, if they wanted to get in? I've seen those birds operate before."

A tiny smile tugged at Jane's lips. He was so earnest, so afraid for her.

"Well, there's Lucinda," she might—

"Lucinda it is," he agreed. "I'll call her while you get your things."

"Right," Jane went into the bedroom, surprised that she was so steady.

Brad was waiting for her. She handed him the small overnight case.

"This is big, Janey," he said as he helped her into her coat. "Bigger than you think. And I can't tell you the truth—yet."

See Hard Fight Ahead In Italy

Charlotte, Sept. 21—(AP)—Richard C. Masson, chief of the Associated Press' Rome Bureau until the outbreak of war between this country and the Axis, expects a bitter battle before the Germans are expelled from Italy but says the Italian surrender is a "great Allied gain of the highest military, political and economic significance."

He made these statements in an address last night before the Charlotte Executives club.

Masson said Benito Mussolini was "washed up" and that the royal family of Italy had appeared to be behind the right ball but that whether its position would weaken or strengthen with the Italian people would be made known only by developments.

New Rules For Liquor Book

Raleigh, Sept. 21—(AP)—A new civilian can obtain new liquor ration books to be issued in October. The first present his war ration book, probably number three, the registrar who will punch the thus preventing one person from obtaining more than one book. State Board of Alcohol Control announced today.

Chairman Carl Williamson of the board had obtained federal permission to punch the war ration book. The state board of alcohol had received reports that so individuals had several books in their possession.

To further prevent the illegal taking of whiskey, the new liquor ration books will each bear the number printed on the face of the book.

Members of the armed forces register with their commanding officers, and, of course, do not have to present their federal ration books.

British Exchequer Died Early Today

London, Sept. 21—(AP)—Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of Exchequer, died today.

The man who was credited largely with keeping Great Britain's wartime finance on an even keel on the eve of the anticipated announcement of his pay-as-you-plan for workers' income tax.

He was 62 years old.

Mr. Kingsley has served as Chancellor of the Exchequer under Prime Minister Churchill since May, 1940, when he received the post a cabinet shakeup.

He previously had served as Privy Seal and Air Minister.

Nazis Make Naples City Of Horrors

With the Fifth Army in Italy, Sept. 21—(AP)—The Germans have turned Naples into a city of horror, killing thousands of Italian civilians and looting, burning, destroying. It was reported today by battle lines into Allied-held territory.

Civilians said the town already was without water or any means of lighting the houses.

Since the armistice the Germans have turned on them like enemies they said, and are beating them and treating them worse than in any occupied country in Europe.

After All, It's A Guess Who'll Do What To Whom

World Series May Be Battle of Southpaws Versus Right-Handers

By SID FEDER
New York, Sept. 21.—(AP)—For a number of years now, the most famous last word in the American League has been to start shouting about what you're going to do to the Yankees on any given occasion. The roof has a funny habit of falling in when you try to make it stick.

So it might be a good idea to tip off the National Leagueers that they're looking for a leak in the gas meter with a lit match when they holler that (1) the Yankees can't do a thing against left-handers and (2) that the three top St. Louis Cardinal southpaws figure to do fearful things to the Bombers in the forthcoming World Series.

The chief thing wrong with that picture is that no one seems to be thinking about what the Yanks might do to the Redbird portenders. So far this season, the uptown thumpers have gone to the mat with an assortment of 16 American League left-handed elbowers. And they've won 20 games and lost 12 in these which went to a decision. What's more, the Yanks haven't done too bad with a number of lefties in their six World Series since 1936—guys like Carl Hubbell.

They way things shape up, however, Billy Southworth practically has to depend on his southpaws to turn the trick. As a matter of fact, the tossing on both sides is strictly out of the grab bag, because Marce Joe McCarthy's Yankee staff, aside from Georgia Spud Chandler, is mostly hot-and-cold, like boarding house coffee.

Right-hander Mort Cooper, a 20-game winner again, is the ace of the Cards' deck but he has clubbed out of there twice in last year's fall fuss and has been whacked with abandon—as well as ball bats—in two all-star appearances. In spite of that, he'll probably get the call to lead off the first game.

But after Mort, Billy the Kid must come in with St. Louis lefties, because the only other worthwhile righty—Harry Gumbert—is laid up with the miseries. Lanier, with a record of 13-7 this season and boasting a win in the '42 classic—in a relief role—is the likely second-gamers choice.

Like Cooper, Chandler, the bell-crow of the Yanks' soupbone society, has been largely a series of flop-ola. He's had two cracks at series rivals—and each time wound up with a cold shower and the morning newspapers.

With 19 wins already this year, Spud is a cinch to hit 20 and become the Yanks' starter in the first game.

But with his uncertain series record, McCarthy, too, is going to have to come up with something out of the hat, and of his '11 tossers the one the boys like most as the dark horse is Hank Borowy, the one-time Fordham flinger whose 12-9 for the season doesn't tip you off that he's won four in a row the last month. For southpawing purposes, McCarthy has Marce Russo, but the chances are he'll go along with Tiny Bonham.

Out in the Yankee bull-pen, ready for the fire alarm to go off, is still the best relief man in baseball—Fireman Johnny Murphy, the guy with the plow chin, the cute curve and the dot-an-I control.

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Say what you like about the quality of football this season, at least its producing a lot more laughs than in years when the game was good enough to be taken seriously. In place of solemn discussions of single wing, double wing, "Notre Dame" or "T" formations, coaches now are sold for the V-12 formation. . . . and Pfc. Jim Rees, who can't forget football even though he's in the army, suggests: "First down is what this season's 17-year-old quarter-backs will be shaving off their chins." . . . Tub Thumper Harold Klith reports that when Oklahoma's new junior varsity team lost 6-0 to Norman high school, one Sooner end just stood by and watched when the high schoolers ran around him for 40 yards on a fake reverse. Jayvee Coach Herb Heisman told the youngster: "Why, son, that pay is as old as the hills." . . . "Yes Coach," came the reply, "but I'm not as old as the hills."

Charley Keller, Yankees—They call him King Kong; if he can't scare the opposing pitchers into submission, he clubs 'em. . . . Has hit 28 home runs and has drawn over 100 walks this season—all on a .271 batting average. . . . Made only four hits in the '42 world series but two were homers, accounting for five runs. . . . Appearing in fourth world series in five years of major league ball.

Danny Litwhiler, Cardinals—Danny played in 151 games for the Phillies last year without making an error, and apparently it wasn't an error when he hurt his leg in a race on opening day last spring. . . . That led to his being traded to the Cards and to the brand new experience of collecting a world series check. . . . Hitting an undistinguished 266.

Wind-up Of Season Near In Big Leagues

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

The major leagues will swing into their last inter-sectional round robin of the season tomorrow. Attention will be centered on the New York Yankees' games with the Detroit Tigers.

In the last couple of years a September series between the Cards and Dodgers always has meant thunder and lightning and a pennant waving in the balance. But this is all changed now. The three games with the Dodgers this week only mean to the Cardinals a chance to bump Brooklyn out of second place.

However, the controversy over second place in the senior circuit will be in eclipse until the New

Sinkwich's Successor Returns Punt As Georgia Wins

Johnny Cook, (15, on ground) 160-pound University of Georgia freshman halfback from Rome, Ga., is stopped by Presbyterian College tacklers after returning a punt 35 yards as the Georgia eleven opened its grid schedule at Athens Friday night with a 25-7 victory. Cook, leading a crop of other 17-year-old grid-ders, scored one of the touchdowns. He is being hailed as the successor of All-America Frank Sinkwich.

York Yankees complete the business of winning the American league flag.

They had a chance to do it at Washington last week-end, but were set down surprisingly in three consecutive games.

As a result the Yankees still need a combination of five victories of their own or defeats for Washington to eliminate the Senators. The Yankees take on Detroit for four games in New York, the Senators will be host to the St. Louis Browns for three night tussles.

NOTICE OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE

North Carolina—Pitt County.
In The Superior Court
City of Greenville
-vs-
The Society of Christ Our King, Inc., et al.

Under and by virtue of an interlocutory judgment of the Superior Court of Pitt County signed and entered in the above entitled cause by Honorable J. F. Harrington, Clerk of said County, on the 6th day of September, 1942, the undersigned Commissioner of the Court, will offer for sale and sell to the highest bidder for cash before the court house door in Greenville, N. C., at 12:00 o'clock Noon, on Monday, the 18th day of Oct., 1942, the following described real property, to-wit:

Lying and being situated in Greenville, N. C., on the North side of Fourth Street, and beginning at a point in the North line of Fourth Street located 264 feet westwardly from Pitt Street, and running thence westwardly with the North line of Fourth Street 330 feet to a stake; thence northwardly 165 feet to a stake, a corner; thence eastwardly and parallel with Fourth Street 325 feet, more or less, to a stake, a corner; thence southwardly with the line of Lottie S. Cooper 165 feet to the point of beginning on Fourth Street, the above property being the same as the 2nd, 3rd and 4th parcels described in deed of record in Book L-19, at page 2 in the office of the Register of Deeds of Pitt County, to which deed reference is hereby made.

This sale is being made for the purpose of foreclosing tax liens held by the plaintiff against said property and is subject to confirmation by the Court. The proposed purchaser at said sale will be required to make a cash deposit in the amount of 10 per cent of his bid with the commissioner at the time of the sale and pending confirmation by the Court. The sale will remain open for twenty days for raised bids.

Worn Out? No Pep?

Try medicinal Iron plus Vitamin B.
People have often been positively amazed at how a little peping up with Ostret could do for them. Their worn-out, business condition was due to a need for medicinal Iron plus Vitamin B. You may need them, too, for pep, vim, vitality. Try the Ostret Tonic Tablets each day. Or 50¢ 10-15¢ regular $1.00 size 30-day supply. For larger savings ask to see new, big "Ostret" 40-day supply at all first class drug stores.

Grain Market
Chicago, Sept. 21—(AP)—Oats led a fractional rise in grain futures today on the board of trade where the market was bolstered by strength in cash markets and in Winnipeg wheat which was up about 2 cent. The price for September oats rose above 78 cents for the first time since 1920, and although there was some profit-taking on the uptrend, the advance was well maintained. Due to the high prices being paid in the cash market September oats was sold and December bought at a 4 cent differential.
September wheat closed at 1.48 1/2; oats 78, rye 105 1/2.

Servicemen Asking For Electric Irons

Servicemen who spend weekends at the Servicemen's Club at the Vines House need one or two electric irons. Capt. Elizabeth Speers, head of the Salvation Army here, will be willing to buy them or she will accept new or old irons for the club last weekend. They have to line up Sunday mornings awaiting their turn with the electric iron to press their clothes before going to church.

Any person with an electric iron to sell or present to the Servicemen's Club should telephone Captain Speers.

Fulbright put it this way: This, he said, is the "first small step" in building a foreign policy. He added: "In proper foreign policy, together with the machinery to keep the peace, is continuing in its nature; it does not consist of sporadic instances of emotional altruism or narrowly selfishness. It will require the assiduous daily attention of the best brains of our country. It is brains and leadership that we must supply, and not gifts of bread and milk and money and oil. . . . If we contribute leadership and our fair share of the force found necessary to make an international system of control effective, that is all the world can or should expect."
Majority Leader McCormick (D-Mass.) called it a "golden opportunity" to outlaw war, but Rep. Hoffman (R-Mich.) described it as a repudiation of long standing national policy. Rep. Jesse Sumner (R-Ill.) contended it would give the President power to enter this nation into any alliance "even to making the United States another dominion of the British empire."
