Fall Of Important Rail City Of Gomel Imminent

Russians Push Forward Toward Old Polish Border After Capturing Rechitsa And Korosten; Nazi Counterattacks Are Brought To Standstill

By HENRY C. CASSIDY Moscow, Nov. 19.—(AP) Russian armies pushed forward toward old Poland today from their newly captured bases of Korosten and Rechitsa and brought German counterattacks to a standstill on the lower flank of the great Kiev bulge in the western Ukraine.

Capture of Gomel, White Russian rail center 25 miles east of Rechitsa, appeared near. The army newspaper Red Star said German forces which attacked three times in the Korosten sector, 20 miles east of Russian-held Zhitomir, with superior numbers of troops and tanks had retreated under a hail of Russian artillery shells. Counterattacks in the Zhitomir sector also were repulsed. There were the areas where the Red army drew back Wednesday in its first retreat since mounting its summer offensive beyond Belgorod.

(The German communique said Russian attacks were on a reduced scale in the Dnieper bend and that German counterattacks broke stiff resistance in the Kiev area, turning the Red army out of a number of localities. The Germans said bitter fighting continued in the Korosten and Rechitsa areas and their Paris radio asserted that the Kiev-Zhitomir railway had been cut by the Nazis.)

Red Star said the possession of Korosten and Zhitomir gave the Russians a wedge deep in the German lines with full rail facilities for moving reserves and supplies.

At Korosten, the Russians were within 60 miles of the old Polish frontier and 190 miles from the 1941 border.

It was just a year ago today that the Red army launched its counter-offensive from Stalingrad. (In that year, the Russians had advanced 70 miles from Stalingrad to Korosten—more than half the distance to Berlin.)

The new winter campaign began with indications that the tactical situation is favorable for striking new Russian successes.

The Red army offensive, which started slowly through stiff German defenses in this sector, gathered momentum as the main enemy lines crumpled.

The newspaper Izvestia reported that the drive which gained two and a half miles on the first day (Continued on Page Six)

Three-Power Group Planned For London

London, Nov. 19.—(AP)—The three-power European Advisory Commission which the American, Russian and British governments agreed upon at Moscow probably will be established shortly in London.

Names of the three representatives, each with ambassadorial rank, are expected to be announced in a few days. Ambassador John G. Winant is likely to be the American choice with Stalin sending Andrei Y. Vishinsky, vice foreign commissar.

Airmen Hammer Japs In Marshall And Gilberts

Pearl Harbor, T. H., Nov. 19.—(AP)—For five days in a row American airmen have raided Japanese bases in the Marshall and Gilbert islands—perhaps as a "softening up" for sea and land fighting. Admiral Chester W. Nimitz says the United States now is ready to wage the Central Pacific.

Liberators from Maj. Gen. Willis H. Hale's 7th air force began bombing these outposts one day after the commander-in-chief of the Pacific fleet in an Armistice Day address spoke of an early offensive, and they have kept it up ever since.

Christmas Mail To Be Sent November

"Delivery of the annual flood of Christmas gifts and cards always a problem is more than a problem this year as a result of the war," said Postmaster J. Knott Proctor today. "Unless mailings are made largely during November many persons will be disappointed. We are asking the public to cooperate with the Postoffice Department in this. The average volume of regular mail is burdened to the limit with war material, and 31,000 postal employees have gone to war," the postmaster said.

The Postoffice Department is not telling the public what to do. It is warning the public of what will happen if they mail Christmas packages and cards too late.

Humber To Speak On Sunday Night

Robert Lee Humber will deliver an address on World Peace at the Christian Church Sunday evening, Nov. 21, at 8 o'clock. Mr. Humber is appearing under the auspices of the Greenville Council of International Relations, an organization recently formed and which is operating as an auxiliary of the Southern Council of International Relations with headquarters at Chapel Hill.

The Greenville council is made up of the various church, civic, study and patriotic groups of the city and its purpose is to promote educational cooperation and kindred subjects for the membership of the groups represented and for the public at large.

Increased Ground Activity Backed By Naval Guns And Bombing Planes

Southwest Pacific Allied Headquarters, Nov. 19.—(AP)—The Allied drive toward Rabaul has broken out in fierce jungle fighting on the Solomon and New Guinea flanks, with guns of American warships roaring defiantly less than 200 miles from Japan's pivotal base and bombers dumping explosives all along the 600-mile battle arc.

Swinging from east to west across the war zone, these were the developments reported today: On Bougainville in the northern Solomons—American marines and soldiers at Empress Augusta Bay, 260 miles southeast of Rabaul, are bloodily pushing the Japanese deeper into the jungles and have killed more than 800 of the enemy against losses of slightly more than 100 since the invasion there on the west-central coast opened Nov. 1; bombers and strafing fighters are roaming without air opposition, along the east and west coasts.

On Bouka—air bases of that island on Bougainville's north tip, less than 200 miles across open sea from Rabaul's naval base, have been shelled for the second time this month by American warships which moved more than 100 miles along the Bougainville coastline Wednesday, driving off Japanese planes on the way. (This daring task force supplies a fiery retort to jubilant Tokyo radio claims, all denied, of terrific warship losses inflicted on the Allies in the Bougainville area.)

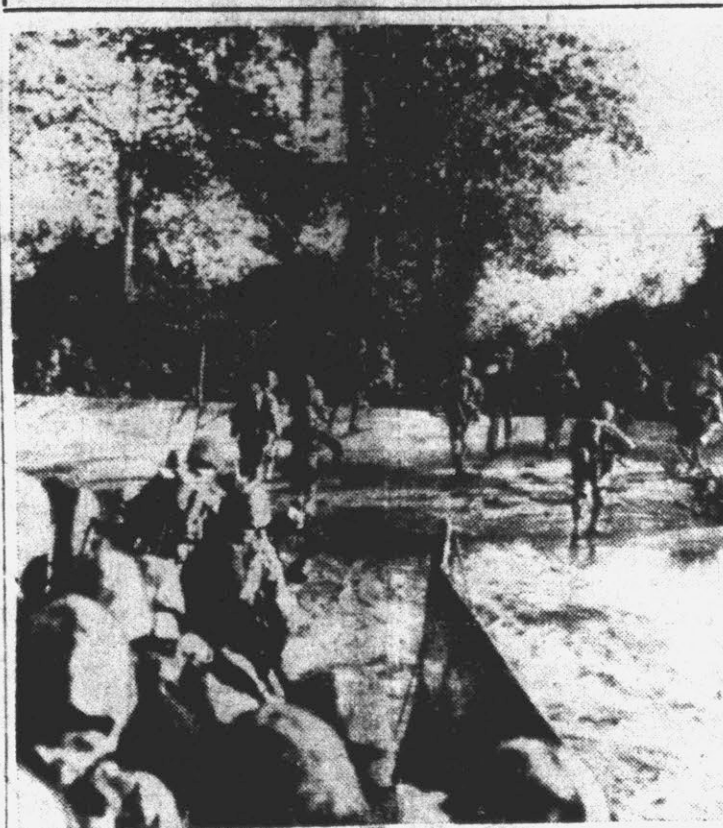

On New Britain—Rabaul kept constantly on the move by Allied planes which have sunk 15 warships, more than a score of cargo ships and destroyed more than 200 planes there during the period covered by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's November communique, was pounded anew by Mitchell medium bombers which struck at the Lakunai airfield.

On New Guinea—Australian troops who have won MacArthur an invasion springboard on the Hun Peninsula only 70 miles from western New Britain, are lashing out at Japanese whose presence menaces extended control of the adjacent narrow waters; from Allied-held Finschhafen, the toughened Aussies since Wednesday have been lunging northwestward toward enemy forces entrenched 15 miles away in the inland jungle area of Sattelberg, on to the northwest.

Japan's New Guinea air power is based around Wewak, the Allied airforce is carrying the fight to the enemy, although often greatly outnumbered in the sky battles.

Refund By Army Sets Off New Slant On War Effort

Return Of $13,000,000 Brings Demands To Halt Father Draft, Cut Taxes And Economize

By The Associated Press Washington, Nov. 19.—(AP)—The army's disclosure that it has more money than it needs touched off today a series of developments and comments that gave an entirely new complexion to the nation's war production effort to date, and what's needed in the future.

Out of the announcement that the War Department is turning back $13,000,000,000 to the budget bureau, came these significant turns: 1—The army was pictured as considering the mighty production effort at its expansion peak. Some drastic cutbacks, notably in small arms ammunition, already have been made because enough material is on hand or because little experience has dictated shifts.

2—The army's manpower needs have been revised downward by more than half a million men and so opponents of the father draft in Congress promptly seized upon this as another argument for their point.

3—It was disclosed that preliminary steps already are under consideration for government and industry to work out tentative plans to reconvert war factories to peacetime production. Some officials said this would have been done before but there was a fear of giving the impression the war was won and thus endangering a letdown.

Announcement of the giant refund was made by chairman Snyder (D-Pa.) of an appropriations subcommittee that handles army finances. It immediately brought demands on Capitol Hill for lower taxes, closer scrutiny of federal expenditures and a stop to the father draft.

While the Pennsylvania observer that the "welcome news to all of us who are distressed over the mounting public debt X X X has no immediate bearing upon the need to raise additional revenue," Senator Downey (D-Calif.) declared that increased taxation might be partially avoided by the army curtailment.

Chairman May (D-Ky.) of the House Military committee construed the Snyder disclosure as "additional evidence that there no longer is a need for drafting pre-war fathers."

The original army appropriation for this year was based on estimates of total manpower of 8,200,000. May said in an interview, "The admission that a reduction in funds is now in order because of downward revisions in manpower needs indicates to me that we don't need pre-war fathers."

May said he intended to call before the committee (Continued on Page Four)

Allies Continue Raids On Greece

Flooded Rivers Retard Ground Activity In Fighting In Italy

By NOLAND NORGARD Allied Headquarters, Athens, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Striking for the fourth successive day at German planes massed for a continued attack in the Aegean, American heavy and medium bombers virtually completed destruction of Eleusis airfield at Athens yesterday and bombed another enemy air base at Larissa on the Greek east coast.

While a slight improvement of the weather permitted lively patrol activity and some artillery duelling on the Italian land front, flooded rivers still prevented large-scale action and deep mud still bogged down most of the heavy equipment of the Fifth and Eighth armies.

The fourth devastating attack on Eleusis airfield in as many days was made by Flying Fortresses, whose bombs were shown in photographs to have destroyed or damaged more than a dozen enemy planes on the ground and left many fires burning.

The Fortresses encountered heavy anti-aircraft fire but only half a dozen fighters in the vicinity, and these were driven off by the P-38 escort.

Mitchell medium bombers, meanwhile assailed the Larissa airfield on an important rail link between Athens and Salonika, and dumped tons of explosives on the Gossato and Terni railroad yards north of Rome in Italy.

While Warhawks hammered shipping along the Yugoslav coast, bombers took advantage of the improved weather to sweep along the front to attack motor convoys.

Eighth army units, feeling their way through rough country toward the Suveto river on the Adriatic flank, managed to gain some high ground north of the village of Archi northwest of Atezza despite stout resistance. The gain permitted better observation of the enemy's strong defense lines across the river.

Major movements were curtailed except along paved highways however, and temporary bridges flung by engineers across swollen streams. The Trigno had risen seven feet above its normal level at this time of the year.

Fight fires blazed on Larissa airfield, another center of German air concentration, after the Mitchell raid, and heavy loads of explosives fell among parked planes, runways (Continued on Page Six)

Girl Scouts Seeking Building Materials

The Girl Scout Council is getting ready to build a "little house" on a lot in the ravine on East Third street which was recently deeded to Girl Scouts, Inc. for recreational purposes. A number of public-spirited citizens and firms have donated materials for building the house and some of the tobacco companies have sent their workers to the lot to clear away the brush.

War restrictions make it impossible to secure all of the materials needed. The Girl Scouts are appealing to the people of the community to search their premises and farms for building materials and phone Mrs. T. M. Watson, 2328, who is chairman of the building project. They need cement, lumber, rough and dressed, roofers' thick but shingles, wire nails, siding, etc. All donations of building materials will be gratefully acknowledged.

Quail Season Opens On Thanksgiving Day

By CHESTER WALSH The open season for hunting quail and rabbits will begin Thanksgiving day, November 25. The daily bag limit is 10 birds. A state law provides a fine of not less than $50 or imprisonment for not more than 60 days for any person convicted of buying or selling or offering to buy or sell quail. The law also provides that a hunter convicted of violating game regulations will have his license revoked.

There are law (no hunting) days for quail in some counties including Craven, Edgecomb, Greene, Lenoir, Pitt, Martin, Washington and others. Hunting of quail in these counties is permitted only on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

There is no bag limit on rabbits. The wild turkey season opens November 25 in the east. The bag limit is one bird—three during the season.

Administration Hopes To Save Subsidy Plan

Washington, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Outnumbered in Congress, backers of the administration's food subsidy idea hope now to get the public so steamed up over the issue that President Roosevelt will win his point because of pressure from back home.

This strategem of prolonged debate in both the House and Senate was described today by those who conceived it as calculated to bring out all the points of the bustling controversy. Thus they believe, the consumer will be moved to raise his voice in time to save the subsidy program before it is abolished by law.

As the House entered the second day of debate on the bill outlawing such government-financed price controls, the administration's forces rested their case squarely on the argument that abolition of subsidies means inflation. Foes, such as Rep. Halleck (R-Ind.), countered that subsidies never would have been necessary if a "really effective" system of price control had been adopted in the first place.

Sticking by their guns meantime, the economic stabilization authorities went ahead with a new $9,000,000 a month subsidy to hold bread prices at the same current levels while permitting millers to pay higher prices for wheat.

Whether the administration can get enough grass roots backing to sustain President Roosevelt's expected veto of the subsidy prohibition was a matter of conjecture. The anti-subsidy group indicated interest in the same strategy however when Rep. Moran (R-Wash.) in a radio speech last night also hit for public support. He said continued subsidization would mean government control of agriculture and eventually "all phases of our national life."

Chinese Harrassing Japs Burma Section

Chungking, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Japanese reinforcements are driving southward in China's central "Rice Bowl" area but along the Salween river in the Burma border region the Chinese have scored strategic successes, an army spokesman declared today.

Maj. Gen. C. C. Teng told a press conference that J. panese forces operating in the pocket between the Yangtze river and Tungting lake had been increased from 60,000 to 80,000 and that this new power had enabled them to cross the Li river in considerable strength.

Will Condemn Land For Marine Air Base

Condemnation proceedings were yesterday instituted in Superior court to acquire three and seven-tenths acres of land owned by J. A. Pollard, needed to extend one of the runways at the county-city airport to 5,000 feet. Pollard asked $300 an acre for the land. The county and city jointly bought about 13 acres of adjoining land from J. H. Blount and Guy V. Smith for $175 an acre and declined to pay Pollard $300 an acre.

The airport, nearly 700 acres, is leased by the Navy as a flying base for the Marines. The contractor has extended two runways to 5,000 feet. The condemnation proceedings will hold up the work about 10 or 15 days, it was stated. A contingent of Marines from Cherry Point took over the airport some weeks ago.

Nearly Thousand Bombers Took Part In Night Attacks; Flying Fortresses Accompanied By Fighters Attack Western Germany Today

By ROBERT N. STURDEVANT London, Nov. 19.—(AP) The greatest armada of RAF heavy bombers ever dispatched to Germany blasted Berlin and Ludwigshafen last night, and today U. S. Flying Fortresses with fighter support attacked western Germany.

The fortress targets were not specified in the first announcement. At least 700 heavy bombers and perhaps a full thousand took part in the night RAF attacks.

Two and four-ton blockbusters were among the explosives hurled on Berlin and Ludwigshafen. Incendiary bombs and high explosives dumped on the German capital started large fires whose red cloud formations prevented immediate observation of the results of the first heavy raid there since September 3.

The exact number of bombers participating in the tremendous dual blow was not made known; but between 700 and 800 heavy bombers participated in each of the raids that leveled Hamburg and the Air Ministry's announcement said last night's total topped all previous assaults.

The announcement indicated that the main strength of the night formations struck Berlin with a great weight of high explosives and incendiary bombs. Clearer weather prevailed over Ludwigshafen—home of the world's largest chemical works—and the second night night assault on that industrial city resulted in very large explosions.

Charles Collingwood, brilliant young CBS reporter, who will appear at the Wright auditorium of the college tonight at 8 o'clock, has returned to the United States to bring American audiences the vivid and thrilling eye-witness story of the turning point of the war—the dramatic victory of the American Seventh and British Eighth armies in North Africa.

Winner of the George Foster Peabody Award for outstanding news reporting in 1942. Collingwood, this year added to his laurels with a news beat on the fall of Tunis, when he was the first reporter to enter that city with the Allied troops. His radio report of Admiral Darlan's assassination tops his impressive score of scoops... helped win him the National Headliner's Club award for 1943.

'The World of Tomorrow.'
The world of today is in a terrible plight. Science has made it a great community, a sort of whispering gallery. But it has been plunged into a most devastating war because it lacked the necessary technique with which to cope with certain disruptive influences in international life. Now the Allied armies are engaged in the gigantic task of blasting out the wreckage of totalitarianism.

What about the world of tomorrow? Will it differ very much from the world of today? By what sort of technique will its life be regulated? These are some of the questions which millions of people are asking today. And there are few people in public life who are as well qualified to attempt to give an answer to those questions as Mr. Robert Lee Humber, Jr., who will speak at the morning Service in Memorial Baptist Church Sunday on "The World of Tomorrow." The public is cordially invited to hear his message.

TOWARDS AN ABIDING PEACE
By R. M. MacIver
New York, Macmillan, 1943, pp. 195

This book is a different type from most works on international co-operation. It deals very largely with sociological and philosophical aspects of international questions.

The author argues strongly for the education both of our own people and our enemies after the victory has been won. In his arguments, he shows that he is a student of social psychology. We should educate the people of the earth in the ways of enduring peace and international co-operation.

Practically all men dread war, but in our present order of sovereign national states they can not prevent war. Since war is a political institution, we must create an order in which the causes of war are brought under international control. We can not have an enduring peace without paying for it by joining other nations in placing national sovereignty to some extent under international control. Governments are passing institutions, but peoples live forever. Therefore, in our education for the future we must curb revenge and hate, and must base peace on the equality of all peoples before the law and on a genuine respect for all peoples. An abiding peace must be a people's peace, not a general's peace. The new order of internationalism must be based on law, and it must have an international police force strong enough to enforce the law. We can not depend on balances of power, alliances, or confederations to keep the peace. The difficulties of the new international organization will be many. The problems of government can never be solved, but we can not make heroic advances towards an abiding peace without striving for the whole.

The author thinks that the United States has a peculiar role to play in the coming peace. We have a very great opportunity and a responsive ability. We should assume the leadership in the creation of an international organization that will keep peace. If we fail, all peoples will suffer.

This book challenges many widely held views. It flatly contradicts the opinions of many of our best known writers. Those facts make it interesting reading and a valuable contribution to the literature on the subject of international co-operation.

FINAL ASSEMBLY

By E. H. LEFTWICH

Chapter 6
A myriad of conflicting noises rang in Pete's ears as he stood near a half-finished ship, waiting for the foreman to bring the man with whom he was to work.

He laid a hand on the steel tubing of the ship. The staccato pounding of the riveters, working on the same ship, sent tiny vibrations through the stainless-steel framework. He could feel these as his hand came in contact with the tubing and it sent a pleasant new thrill through his veins.

In a few moments, he was going to begin helping to design and build a fighting ship—a good fighting ship!

For the first ten moments, the terrific explosions of the big drop hammers on the other side of the plant, followed almost immediately by the locomotive-like exhausts of each stroke, caused him to duck his head, instinctively. But now he enjoyed this master noise of them all, along with all the other sounds which sang of the tremendous power which man had harnessed. Long rows of wingless fuselages stretched out far behind him were shining in the sunlight of late afternoon.

Tim Brandon came up and introduced him to Ralph Barker, the lead-man, who seemed to be a perfectly swell sort of person. Pete asked about the designing engineer, but Barker had received no instructions in this connection.

"All I know is that you're to work as a general rigger—that's what Tim told me," Barker explained.

Pete was crestfallen. He wondered why they hadn't sent the engineer. Maybe they'd send him later. A pair of girls walked past carrying drill motors. One said, "I told him I had to have another nickel. I ain't had a raise in three months. Better make it while you can." I told him, "This place will make a swell skating rink—after the war."

A middle-aged man with stooped shoulders and dirty overalls several sizes too small leaned over, dropped his rivet-gun on the concrete floor and tied his shoe-laces. A tall girl in bright green slacks and yellow blouse slouched past whistling. "My mamma done told me—" with a broken drill bit in each hand. A vibrant gust of wind swept through the high rolling doors at the head of the line loosing a strong whiff of fresh dope from the paint shop. "I'll put you with 'Old Man Mose,'" Barker said.

"Old Man Mose" proved to be a lean man of some 60 years with a friendly but toothless grin. "I'm doing a little dog-chasing," he told Pete and handed him a piece of steel wool. "There ain't no screws to be had for this ship and we got to kill time until they turn some loose. Lots of parts are scarce as hell around here, pretty often, and in the meantime, we got to chase the dog, which is what we call killing time. They call me 'lead-man of the dog-chasers.'"

He burst forth with a cackling laugh. "So, now," he continued, "We grab ourselves a piece of steel wool and polish tubing, so they won't think we're not doing anything. Looks bad, not to be doing anything when the big shots come by, especially the general manager, Ernest Kahl." He drew a deep breath, the foul air from the paint shop wheezing into his lungs. "One thing you got to learn is to look like you're busy as hell—when you ain't."

He instructed Pete as to the procedure used in polishing tubing. "Don't rub too hard," he cautioned. "The stuff's pretty thin, and you might get it too thin. It's best to get a worn-out piece of steel wool."

Now, Pete was working alongside Alf Mason, alias, "Old Man Mose," polishing tubing, and he didn't like it. Surely they thought he was capable of more than this. Any fool could polish tubing. He was a mechanic. He didn't like wasting the company's time.

"Listen, Alf," he protested, "do I have to do this 'dog-chasing'? I'm a mechanic. Why can't I work on engines?"

The old man laughed. He moved forward to the engine-mount and began rubbing a different piece of tubing near the engine. "There ain't no work to be done on the engines," he stated. "We get 'em complete and ready to go. All we have to do is hang 'em on the mount in the ships and hook 'em up."

"But the man who hired me said that he'd put me to work with an engine!"

All dropped his steel wool and turned to stare at Pete. "So you're the guy!" he choked, jaw sagging.

"What do you mean, I'm the guy?"

"You're the guy that H. C. thought was an engineer and who turned out to be an auto mechanic!"

"Well, he might have thought so, but it wasn't my fault. He wouldn't give me a chance to explain." Pete grabbed the old man by the arm.

"How do you know so much about it?"

Alf laughed. "If you want to know anything about anything around here, just ask Alf. 'Grapevine,' 'Buddy,' 'grapevine.' All the working men know all about it, but it ain't got to the foreman and lead-men yet."

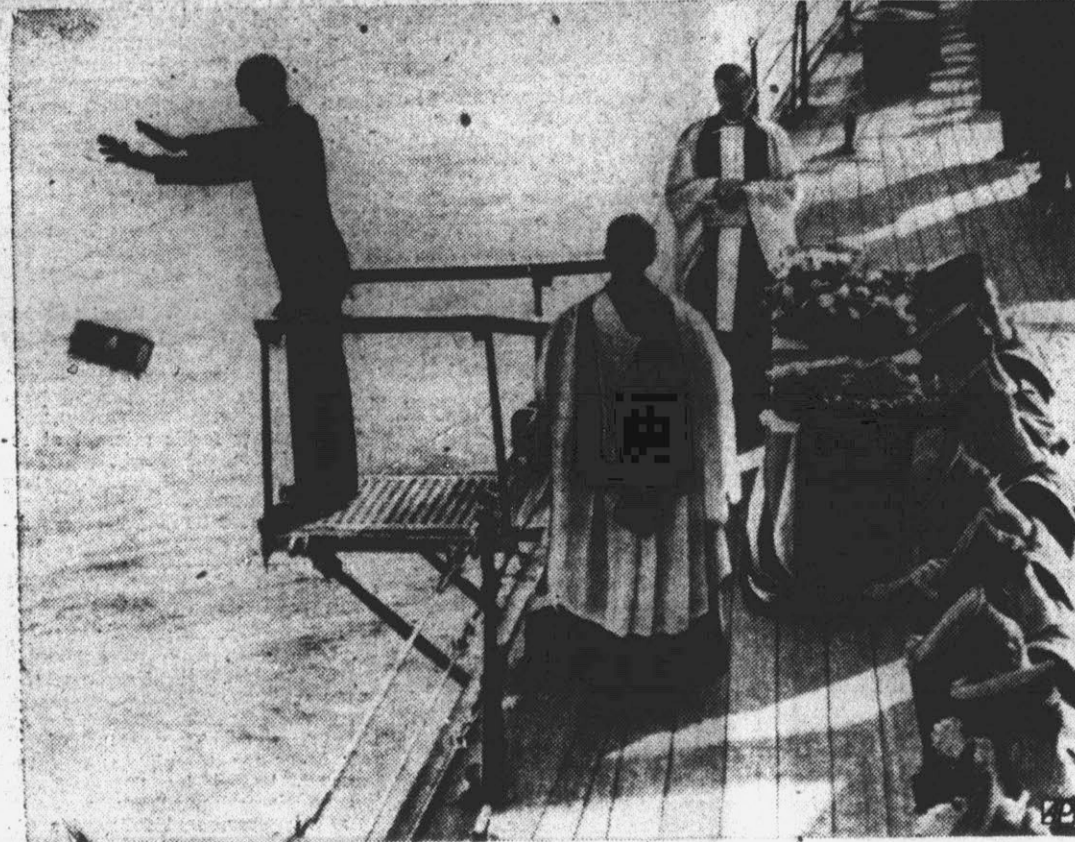

For a moment Pete was stunned. "Okay," he said, finally, "and if you know so much about it, then maybe you can tell me why they put me on this job of dog-chasing, instead of with the engineer."

"Sure, I'll tell you. H. C. should have looked up your record before he hired you. He made a mistake, so he's taking it out on you, giving you a tough break, thinking you can't take it—he'll fire you."

"I see."

So the personnel manager was going to take it out on him, was he? Made a mistake and now he was going to take it out on him—make it hot for him. Rollins thought he couldn't take it, did he?

He faced Alf, eyes blazing. "Listen, Alf, you pass the word back to

INTO THE SEA—The ashes of Admiral of the Fleet Sir Dudley Pound are cast into the sea in a ceremony aboard a British warship. Pound was First British Sea Lord.

RECOVERY UNIT—Designed to salvage tanks damaged in battle, this 80-ton tank recovery unit carries a 30-ton tank near the Renton, Wash., plant where it was made.

Mr. Rollins that if he thinks I can't take it, he's badly mistaken. He hasn't got anything so tough that I can't take it. Tell him I said that, will you?"

"Sure—sure, I'll pass the word back, buddy—and say, I believe you really mean it, too. You're all right, buddy."

Chapter 7
The time passed slowly. Pete rubbed and polished tubing first with one hand and then the other, until both arms ached. From time to time he would stop and stretch before going on with his monotonous task.

Occasionally, Barker came around and passed a friendly word and once Tim Brandon walked by and stopped long enough to ask how he was getting along.

"Say, Alf," Pete asked suddenly, "you say we're out of screws for this ship? Do you mean to tell me that they can't buy screws?"

"Well, no," Alf answered. "Some parts are slow coming in, but screws can still be had. Somebody in the purchasing department fell down on the job and didn't order enough. You see, they didn't figure on any screws being lost or ruined."

"Do you mean to tell me they ordered just enough screws for the ship to be built on the contract?"

"Yep, that's what they did. Figured it down to the exact number. Some of Mr. Kahl's efficiency methods."

"How long have you been out of screws?"

Alf pondered for a moment. "Off-hand, I'd say about six weeks."

"Then, for six weeks the company has been paying a bunch of men to do nothing but 'chase the dog'?"

"Yep."

"How many screws could have been bought for the money they paid the men to chase the dog for six weeks?"

Alf scratched his head with his idle hand. This new guy was apparently okay, but he asked too many questions. "You got me, buddy," he said, "how many screws could they have bought?"

"How many men are there in the rigging department?"

"About sixty, I'd say, on two shifts."

"Then, figuring sixty men's pay, at an average of say sixty cents per hour for six weeks—"

Pete reached down and picked up an old personal pass from the floor. He did some quick figuring on the back of it with his pencil. "Total, over $8,000 in pay for these men. If screws cost a dollar a gross, which they don't, they could have bought 8,000 gross of screws!"

"Whew!" The old man exploded. "That's a lot of screws."

"You bet, it's a lot of screws. And if they had ruined or lost half that many screws, they'd still have made money by putting these men on jobs where they'd have earned their pay, and incidentally turned out more airplanes. Dog-chasing! Disgust was in Pete's tone. "Have you always had dog-chasing?"

"Well, yes—more or less, from time to time, when we run out of certain parts. If it ain't screws, it's nuts—and if it ain't nuts, it's washers; and if it ain't washers it's spacers, and if—say! You ain't one of them saboteurs, or a fifth column guy, are you? You ask so many questions—"

Pete laughed and started rubbing a different length of tubing which curved gracefully around the generator and terminated in the top of an aluminum electrical box. "Of course not, Alf. I'm just as good an American as you are. That's why I don't like the idea of wasting time while we're having a war. It's because these ships are so very important. It's just not right, that's all. There's no excuse for running out of screws or nuts or washers."

A relieved look flooded Alf's face. "For a minute," he confessed, "I thought you was one of them saboteurs. We got to look out for 'em all the time. Every once in a while, the F. B. I. snatches one out of here. Now, that Charles Brackmyde it don't make no difference who he is, either. That's why it burns us. He's a dirty saboteur. her—"

"After all," Petet mused, "she has the right to choose her own friends."

"But that guy ain't no friend to nobody—he's poison!"

At that moment there was a sudden stoppage of activity in and around the section where Pete was working. Men stirred restlessly and there was a general turning of heads in the direction of the Paint Shop. Pete looked and saw the trim figure of a girl in blue slacks hurrying out of the doorway. She was holding the wrist of her left hand in her right hand.

"It's Kitty," the old man cried. "She's hurt herself again. She's going to First Aid."

Petet dropped his piece of steel wool, shoved the lod man aside with a quick motion and hurried toward her.

one—always snooping around where he ain't got no right to be and watching a feller work."

"Who's Charles Brackmyde?"

"Oh, he's a buzzard who's supposed to work here in Final, only he don't do no more work than he can get out of. Never seen him hit an honest lick of work yet."

"But, Alf, you mustn't get so down on people. Brackmyde is probably all right. You see, you almost believed that I wasn't."

"That's different. You're okay. You look a feller right in the eye, but Brackmyde, he can't do that. You watch what I say; they'll snatch him out of here any day now, and besides, he's been running around with Kitty—"

"Kitty? You mean the pretty girl?"

"You're darn right I mean the pretty girl, and the finest girl who ever slapped an insignia on an outrigger panel. I guess you know who Kitty is."

"Well, yes, I've met her."

"I saw her going toward the doctor's office last night. Got hurt again, I guess. She's always getting hurt, but she's the sweetest little queen who ever lived. Why did you know that the Cost and Accounting Department has figured that it costs the Company $69.80 every time she goes to the water fountain for a drink?"

"No!"

"Yep. In time lost, tools dropped and stuff ruined and scratched by the men. You see, all their heads turn to watch her when she goes by. They been giving us hell about it—but we can't help it. She's so pretty. They'd fire her in a minute if they didn't know that all the men would walk out if they did!"

"She must be some girl."

"She is, buddy—and as nice as they come. There ain't nothing she wouldn't do to help a guy out and feller, for instance. I can't see why he's stayed here as long as he has, is either. That's why it burns us. He's a dirty saboteur. If I ever seen up to see Brackmyde chasing after

THE FAMILY STICKS One of the greatest blessings God has given us is family life. The Creator might in the beginning have ordained that people live in solitary isolation.

Probably the most satisfying aspect of family relationships is the fact that our families can almost always be depended upon to stick by us, even though all the rest of the world turns against us.

Carolina And Duke Play Second Game At Chapel Hill

Chapel Hill, N. C., Nov. 19—(AP)—Statistics, comparisons, past performances and the like are just so much waste of breath (or clean white paper) when you bring up this North Carolina Carolina-Duke game.

This year, everything seems to favor Duke. But an examination of the records in this ancient football rivalry shows that anything can and often does, happen. Take the year 1940, for instance. Things stacked up then pretty much as they do now.

That year the Dukes had amassed the grand total of 3,108 yards rushing, and were the second highest scoring team in the country. And that year the unimpressive Tar Heels edged out the Dukes 6-3, just when Wallace Wade's boys were thinking of a repeat performance in the Rose Bowl.

Or take the years 1935. The Tar Heels went into the game undefeated, and with one of the nation's best records. But, as it often does in the game of the two neighbors, the inevitable happened, and Duke triumphed—not by just a touchdown, but 25-0.

The war has brought on not a few innovations in football this year, and tomorrow's game is the second between the schools in a single season. Duke won the first, 14-7.

Another thing: It won't be the teams playing. The encores is almost like a new test between two new teams. Both are unbeaten since their mid-season reorganization, brought on by naval transfers.

So, you see, the statistics can't count for a lot in the series. But, to get down to a few, the Blue Devils have run up 308 points in eight games for an average of 38.5 a game. This is second only to Notre Dame's 312, and if Duke scores five points more than Notre Dame does tomorrow, it'll lead the pack.

As for the series standings, the teams have never been able to get together. Both claim that 1939 came by a forfeit. So the Carolina annuals show 14 wins, 12 losses, and three ties, while the Duke books show 13 wins, 13 losses and three ties.

The Duke-Carolina game is just about the whole show this week in the southern conference. Clemson's youthful Tigers will be an especially powerful opponent in Atlanta, and Mississippi plays Lakehurst Navy at Lakehurst.

Milner Has Had Great Season

Bill Milner, rugged Duke guard who has turned in one of the outstanding individual performances of any Blue Devil this season, broke into the scoring column last Saturday against Virginia when he sped 30 yards for a touchdown after snagging three-way pass. And "speed" is the word for Milner is a 10.5 second man despite his 197 pounds. Last Spring he won the Southern Conference broad jump with a leap of 22 feet three inches, and it takes both speed and power to span so much earth. Milner was captain-elect of the University of South Carolina's football team when the Marines sent him to Duke. His home is at Waynesville, N. C., and as a lad Milner was a great admirer of Duke's "Freddie Crawford.

Sports Roundup

New York, Nov. 19—(AP)—Drum beater Harry Markson is beginning to wonder if the 135-pound boxing division wasn't misnamed "lightweight" when it should have been "welterweight". Because he says "the lightweight title always is in a welter of confusion". That leads right up to the fact that Bobbat Bob Montgomery and Beau Jack will fight for the New York-Pennsylvania version of the title tonight and ten days later Sammy Angott who regained the NBA championship by whipping Slugger White will appear merely as a "leading contender" when he fights Rocky Ruffin in the same ring. The lightweight and bantamweight titles are the only ones that haven't been frozen for the duration, which explains the concentration of chins.

Lightweight Thinking
Stretching a few points, if Beau Jack wins tonight's brawl, he'll be only the second 135-pound champion to regain the crown from the same man who took it from him.

The other was Lou Ambers, when he beat Henry Armstrong. And in this case Montgomery can thank a toothache for saving him from becoming the shortest-reigned 135-pound boss in ring history.

Adding a few more items on the same subject, besides two world champions and one ex-champion, the next two Garden cards will present the lightweight championships of Louisiana (Ruffin) and of Texas (Mike Delia) who fights in a prelim tonight.

lie Calohan sends words from Peterson Field, Colo., that he figures Colorado College can be ranked with any team in the country except the Irish Hillsboro, Ohio, hitherto noted only for turning out Joe Hipstand, the trapshooter, and this columnist's old man, had three representatives on an army baseball team which piled up a year-old string of 27 victories, starting on Fiji and ending on Guadalcanal with a single loss to a marine outfit. The C. O. of the unit, Col. DeForest R. Roush, First Sgt. Howard Duckwald, shortstop, and Corp. Kenneth Johnson, outfielder all hail from Hillsboro. Leland "Bunky" Morrison, the 142-pounder who played a lot of good football at Syracuse U., has been discharged from the army because of a "bust knee" received playing touch football at camp.

FOOTBALL SELECTIONS

New York, Nov. 19—(AP)—With the hopes that Lady Luck continues to enjoy our company for the last big Saturday of the 1943 football season we give you:

Iowa Pre Flight-Notre Dame—Until three days ago we were tempted to pick the Seahawks, but now that Maznicki is injured and three other regulars have been transferred, we give you the Irish and their ninth successive triumph.

Ohio State-Michigan—There was a day when this one would have been the talk of the nation. But the Buckeyes are not in the class of the Wolverines this season so it's Michigan in a romp.

North Carolina-Duke—The Tar Heels surprised by whipping one of the north's best, Penn., last week but that doesn't mean they're going to square matters for the season with the Blue Devils. Duke in a close shave.

Purdue-Indiana—The Old Oaken Bucket and at least a share in the Big Ten title goes to unbeaten Purdue.

Louisiana State-Tulane—Tulane hasn't got what it takes to stop Steve Van Buren. L. S. U.

Missouri-Kansas—The Tigers are not going to let a weak Jayhawk outfit ruin their slim chance of repeating as Big Six king. Missouri.

Wisconsin-Minnesota—The Gophers in a battle of Western Conference odds.

Colorado College-Colorado—The unofficial Rocky Mountain championships goes with this one and it'll be Colorado College over the University for the second time this season.

Dartmouth-Princeton—No contest although the Tigers promise to show up. Dartmouth.

Brown-Army—If Doc Savage is right look for a free-scoring battle with the Cadets on the long end.

Colgate-Columbia—The Lions haven't won a game this season. Colgate.

Clemson-Georgia Tech—Eddie Prokon and the Engineers by themselves. Georgia Tech.

Daniel Field-Camp Davis—Camp Davis on power.

Ft. Riley-Camp Grant—Camp Grant.

Harvard-Boston College—A couple of "informals" with Doherty of BC the difference. Boston College.

Marquette-Great Lakes—A good workout for the Sailors before meeting Notre Dame next week.

Still holding the rabbit's foot tightly, Penn State over Pittsburgh; Pacific over San Francisco; Rutgers over Lafayette; Rice over Texas Christian; UCLA over St. Mary's; Samson NTS over Muhlenberg; Villanova over Temple; Texas Tech over Southern Methodist.

The twin victories were proclaimed last night by Premier Joseph Stalin in orders of the day which eulogized Gen. Nikolai Vatutin, commander of the first Ukraine army, for the storming of Korosten and Gen. Constantin Gokossovsky for his success at Rechitsa.

Occupation of Korosten followed a two-day battle in which the Red army troops forged the Uzh river to blast the Germans from that important rail junction on the Leningrad-Odessa and Kiev-Warsaw railroads, a Russian communique said. Whole trainloads of German war stores were captured inside the city, which lies on the southern edge of the Pripiet marshes. An entire German regiment was reported annihilated in the battle.

In addition to cutting the last German north-south railway short at the Polish border by the capture of Korosten, Vatutin appeared to have anchored his right flank securely against the Pripiet marshes. He was thus able to concentrate strong forces on his left flank to meet the vicious German counterattacks in the area between Zhitomir and Fastov to the south.
