Allied Forces Threaten Flank Nazi Gustav Line

French Capture Important Hill Position North Of Cassino; Fifth Army Pushes Along Apennine Way To Assault Two Important Towns; Warships Aid Advance

By WES GALLAGHER Allied Headquarters, Agiers, Jan. 21.—(AP)—French troops, crossing the Rapido river in difficult mountain fighting, have captured the foot of Mt. El Lago, north of Cassino, and are threatening to outflank the German "Gustav line" of defense in Italy. Allied headquarters announced today.

British forces of the Fifth army, supported by the fire of cruisers and destroyers, smashed forward along the Apennine Way, capturing Minturno, 76 miles from Rome, and taking 300 prisoners. They are assembling the twin Nazi defense villages of Castellorot and Ventosa on the slopes of 1,000-foot Mt. Santi Cosma E Damiano, six miles inland from the Tyrrhenian.

In weather which German prisoners described as "worse than Leningrad," American patrol of Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth army slashed across the river below Cassino in probing expeditions and recaptured. Eighth army patrols likewise were active in weather that was growing colder.

Although the French push from captured Sant' Elia, north of Cassino, continued with heavy action to take Cassino from the rear, German prisoners said there was another German line of fortifications called the "Adolf Hitler line" six miles behind the Gustav belt which the Allies are now attacking.

For the first time in many weeks cruisers and destroyers of the British navy engaged in heavy action against Nazi shore defenses along the western end of the line, throwing several hundred rounds of steel ahead of the Fifth army attack last Tuesday and Wednesday. The heaviest shelling was concentrated on the Apennine way where the road runs close to the sea near the village of Terracina.

Minturno was taken by the British after "hard fighting," the communiqué said. The Germans already announced evacuation of it.

Allies Extend Gains In Burma

New Delhi, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Allied ground forces expanding their bridgehead on the Mayu peninsula of southwestern Burma have captured new Japanese positions near Rutherford in slashing hand-to-hand battles, an Allied East India communiqué announced today.

Mopping-up operations following the Thursday attacks are still in progress.

The Japanese pressed their counterattacks against the Allied hold, but two Wednesday night attacks were beaten off.

The announcement said bombers attacked enemy-occupied villages and troop concentrations in the upper Chindwin area Wednesday, and that Allied fighters had continued their sweeps against Chindwin river traffic and communication lines north from Mandalay.

On the northern land front, the American-trained Chinese forces continued with aerial support their eastward drive to oust Japanese forces from the south of the new Ledo road to China, wiping out a strong enemy patrol.

Heavy bombers of the American and RAF forces teamed up Wednesday night to deliver heavy assaults on Bangkok, capital and chief port of Thailand.

Expect Early Adoption Of Soldier Vote Bill

Washington, Jan. 21.—(AP)—The congressional log jam on soldier voting showed signs of breaking up today after the Senate Elections Committee came out with a compromise bill providing for a uniform federal ballot but leaving the voting authority under state control.

Several staunch Senate defenders of states' rights swung quickly behind the compromise measure, and its co-sponsor, Senator Lucas (D-Ill.), predicted it would be passed by the Senate, which earlier rejected another federal ballot plan and substituted a requirement that several personnel cast state absentee ballots or none at all.

As re-drafted, the bill omits controversial sections voiding state poll tax and registration requirements. In addition, it specifically provides that duly constituted state and local election officials shall have full authority to determine whether individual service men or women are qualified to vote.

Senator Tydings (D-Md.) hailed the latest provision as a "great victory" for states' rights advocates. He said the local control amend-

BRITISH SINK JAP CRUISER

Three Other Ships Sent to Bottom By British Sub

London, Jan. 21.—(AP)—A 31-year-old British submarine commander famed for his exploits in the Mediterranean was credited by the Admiralty today with sinking a Japanese cruiser in the Indian ocean at the northern approaches to narrow Malacca Strait which threads between Malaya and the Dutch East Indies island of Sumatra.

The submarine, skippered by Lt. Commander L. W. A. Bennington, approached to within the "suicide range" of one mile to score the first sinking of a Japanese cruiser by a British submarine in the Indian ocean.

The cruiser, identified as one of the 5,100-ton Kuma class, went down at about the same time that three large Japanese supply ships were sent to the bottom by the same submarine. Bennington formerly commanded the Porpoise which made naval history by carrying supplies to Malta during the darkest days of that British island stronghold in the Mediterranean. In one single attack the Porpoise survived more than 100 depth charges, one of the heaviest assaults ever made on a British submarine.

Jane's fighting ships lists five Japanese cruisers of the Kuma class—the Kuma, the Tama, the Oi, the Kitakami and the Kiso, all built in 1919 and 1920.

Second class cruisers, these vessels have a standard displacement of 5,100 tons and carry 139 officers and men. Each is equipped with 17 guns and at least eight torpedoes. Each also is equipped to carry one aircraft.

The Admiralty said the British submarine commander reported that the enemy cruiser was sighted in company with a destroyer.

"Proceeding at maximum speed His Majesty's submarine closed to within a mile of the enemy when a salvo of torpedoes was fired," the communiqué added.

"Two hits observed on the cruiser which sank. An ineffective counter-attack by the escorting Japanese was repulsed."

Russia Has Not Accepted Offer

Washington, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Secretary of State Hull said today the Soviet government has not yet accepted this country's offer to act in liaison capacity look to a resumption of diplomatic relations between Poland and Russia.

Hull made that reply when he was asked at his press conference whether Moscow had responded to the offer. He added that he was keeping in close touch with Ambassador W. Averell Harriman on the matter.

Hull announced a week ago that the American government had offered to use its good offices in bringing about a resumption of diplomatic relations between the Polish and Soviet governments.

The offer did not extend in any sense to mediation on the question of territorial claims.

There seems to be tacit recognition in London and this country that the Poles and Russians, one of them are on diplomatic speaking terms again, will be able to settle their boundary affairs.

The WAR TODAY

AN ANALYSIS OF THE NEWS

By DEWITT MACKENZIE Associated Press War Analyst

It's a long stretch of Italy's Apennine Way that has no turning and Uncle Sam's fifth army unit at last have found the way which will bring it within sight of Rome.

This vantage point has been reached by the breaching of the Hitlerite line north of the Gari-lano river—a difficult and dangerous operation which forced the enemy to abandon the city of Minturno, strategic communications center and stronghold on the Apennine Way. British troops in the fifth army achieved this by driving spearheads across this natural water barrier on both sides of Minturno in the face of fierce counterattacks.

Minturno is some 76 miles from Rome. That's about a 20-minute flight for a passenger plane, but it can be a mighty long distance for any army to fight its way. However, one of our toughest obstacles—winter weather—seems to be weakening. Experts say the worst probably is past.

RAF Batters Berlin In Heaviest Night Assault

Heavy American Bombers Renew Attacks On "Rocket Gun" Coast Of France Today

By GLADWIN HILL London, Jan. 21.—(AP)—The RAF's heavy Lancasters and Halifaxes smashed at Berlin with over 2,300 long tons (2,576 U. S. tons) of bombs in the greatest of the eleven blows at the Reich's capital city at dusk last night, and today American heavy bombers launched attacks on the mysterious targets of the Pas-De-Calais area of France.

The great Berlin raid, the first since the night of Jan. 2 on that objective, sent huge fires raging through the capital where three-fourths of the important facilities already are believed to have been destroyed. It proved to be another illustration of the RAF's remarkable bullseye bombardments through clouds.

The clouds blocked the defenders' searchlights, and blanketed a good portion of their fighters.

But Swedish reports said reinforced German anti-aircraft batteries put up an unprecedented barrage and the RAF suffered the second highest loss of the Berlin campaign.

The RAF's record bomb load of the war was 2,500 long tons dumped on Hannover Sept. 23 by 700 bombers.

A total of around 16,000 tons of explosives now has been hurled upon the city since the start of sustained bombing.

The massive eleventh blow in the two-month battle of Berlin was struck by a procession of four-engined bombers which took off almost in daylight and took three-quarters of an hour to cross the channel on the 600-mile flight to central Germany.

They began their thunderous hammering at their target at 7 p. m. and returned before midnight with 35 bombers missing from this and other operations.

Then, with daylight Allied air forces continued the parade of destruction as a big fleet of fourengined American bombers droned across the channel toward France, following waves of mediums, RAF fighters-bombers and soaring Spitfires.

The daylight assault was the first heavy attack since the big American raid on the Pas De Calais area Jan. 14.

TAX RESERVE RIDER KILLED

Senate Votes Down Post-War Reserve Proposal

Washington, Jan. 21.—(AP)—The Senate today rejected a proposed amendment to the $2,735,000,000 added tax bill which would have permitted corporations and individuals to lay aside up to 20 per cent of their taxes as a post-war reserve.

The amendment, offered by Senators Truman (D-Mo.) and Hrich (D-NM) was defeated by a standing vote.

Under the plan the taxpayer-beneficiary would have been required to invest the reserved moneys in non-negotiable, non-interest-bearing government bonds, redeemable after the war, and taxable as income at that time.

Finance Committee Chairman George (D-Ga.) and Senators Taft (R-Ohio) and Danaher (R-Conn.) expressed sympathy for the motive of the amendment, but declared it would erode actual tax collections in war years to drop too sharply.

George commented that present tax rates will have to be reduced materially after the war or "the country will be busted."

The Senate met an hour earlier than usual today in an effort to hammer a revised war contracts re-negotiation law finally into the new $2,735,000,000 revenue bill and have done with the whole business.

After fierce controversy, the revision was approved unanimously by the Finance Committee yesterday an action that gave it a powerful shove toward Senate adoption since the writing of tax laws has become such an involved process that most senators are willing to accept the recommendations of the Finance Committee.

Senator Truman (D-Mo.) however, said he still found objectionable provisions and would challenge them on the floor.

The Finance Committee finally abandoned a provision which would have required the exemption of contracts for standard commercial articles from renegotiation, another which would have exempted profits on articles which do not appear in the final contract product, and a third which would have left out agreements for articles furnished in obedience to a War Production Board order and under OPA ceiling.

Peace Feelers Are Numerous

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, Jan. 21.—(AP)—German peace feelers have been made to the British on several occasions and more are certain to be made in the future, diplomatic quarters here are convinced.

But the British government, in full agreement with the United States, Russia and other United Nations, has taken and will take none of the proposals seriously until the Germans get ready for unconditional surrender.

Sometimes, it is believed, the Germans put out feelers merely to gain general war information, sometimes they actually hope the way may be opened for a deal—perhaps a deal that would split the Allied camp.

It is not considered beyond the realm of possibility that British or American individuals, operating without the authority of their government, might on occasion have made direct contact with an enemy citizen. But such a meeting would be of no consequence except to lay the conferees open to grave charges of dealing with the enemy.

Whether any such occurrence lay behind Moscow's recent Pravda story of separate peace rumors is problematical, but the British government categorically denied that any officials had engaged in such activity.

Rome will be in Allied hands by spring, but there are tough obstacles to be unmounted before we reach that goal with land troops.

We shall be unexpectedly lucky if we are able to do much free-wheeling along the Apennine Way toward the capital until the long Allied line has advanced another half-hundred miles or so northward.

The American fifth army must occupy the high ground beyond Frosinone in order to get set for the final dash to Rome. At the same time the British eighth army on the right flank will have to capture the heights north of Pescara on the Adriatic. We must expect this to entail much hard fighting, for the Germans have the advantage of the strong mountain positions in the center of the Italian peninsula.

The further offensive may be speeded by amphibious operations along the coasts.

On the Allied machine has occupied those heights beyond Frosinone and Pescara it should be in a favorable position. Then our men will be traversing a road which has resounded to the tramping feet of armies for more than two thousand years.

JAP VESSELS SUNK BY SUBS

Navy Reports 12 More Cargo Ships Sent To Bottom

Washington, Jan. 21.—(AP)—American submarines have sunk 12 more Japanese merchant vessels, bringing to 558 the number of Japanese ships sunk or damaged by submarines since the war started.

The new report on damage inflicted by submarines ranging the distant waters of the Pacific was announced today by the navy. Of the 558 total, 408 ships have been definitely sent to the bottom. In addition, our submarines probably have sunk 36 Japanese vessels and have damaged 114 others.

The navy gave no indication of where the Japanese ships were sunk but the submarines have been operating in Japanese coastal waters.

The Jap ships listed in today's announcement were of the types used in moving materials and men. They included seven medium freighters, two small freighters, a large tanker, a medium cargo transport and one small transport.

The sinkings cut further into the badly depleted Japanese cargo fleet which has been reduced so severely that the enemy in many parts of the south Pacific has been forced to use barges in attempts to keep supplies moving.

More Than 40,000 Reported Killed On Leningrad Front In Past Six Days; Russian Baltic Fleet Freed; Quarter Million Nazis Threatened With Entrapment

London, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Russia's northern armies, engaged in two tremendous drives which in six days have lifted the two-year siege of Leningrad, captured the ancient bastion of Novgorod and slain 40,000 Germans, rolled on today in an effort to complete the encirclement of upwards of 250,000 other Germans remaining in the Leningrad sector.

The Red army's great surge to the south from Leningrad has virtually freed Russia's Baltic fleet.

Locked in port for two years or more, the Baltic fleet is now free to operate in the Bay of Kronstadt and possibly beyond.

To the south of the Baltic shore the Russians are driving deep into German positions, capturing thousands of Nazis cut off from their commands and communication lines and are speedily closing in on the railway and highway junctions that are the key to the entire Baltic front.

Dispatches from Moscow indicated the Germans were facing one of their worst disasters since Stalingrad. The Moscow radio declared jubilantly:

"The Germans have been driven far away from Leningrad. German forces are bleeding profusely. They are panic-stricken under the threatening tenacity of a mighty Soviet army of retribution."

Capture of Novgorod, 100 miles southeast of Leningrad, by troops of Gen. K. A. Meretskov's army opened the road to Lake Peipus and southern Estonia. Described by the Russian communiqué as a "skillful outflanking maneuver," the victory was hailed by Premier Stalin yesterday in an order to the day. The city had been in German hands since August, 1941.

Hopkins Heard By Grand Jury

Washington, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Harry Hopkins, White House confidante who has chafed that his name was forced to a letter relating to Wendell Wilkie's possible renomination for the presidency by the Republicans this year, today made a voluntary appearance before the grand jury investigating the letter.

Recently ill with influenza, Hopkins left his bed in Naval hospital to testify in connection with the mysterious letter, currently providing the capital with a prime topic of conversation and speculation. The witness looked far from well, but told reporters he felt "so-so."

Officials in charge of the investigation said he had not been subpoenaed.

Hopkins spent ten minutes in the grand jury room and as he departed he repeated to reporters his assertion that the letter is a forgery, adding:

"I think I know who the forger is."

Henry A. Schweinhaut, in charge of the investigation for the justice department, announced that Frank Phillips, Oklahoma oil executive, would testify before the grand jury later in the day. Phillips' name was brought into the case by Senator Lanier (R-ND), who, in asking a Senate investigation, said the oil man at one time had possession of the letter. Phillips has denied this.

The Greenville High students are striving to purchase $75,000 in war bonds this year to buy a Mustang pursuit plane. If the students reach their goal a plaque will be put on a plane stating that it was bought by our high school students.

GIRL SCOUT NEWS

Two of the features of the program at the annual banquet of the Greenville Girl Scout Council on Wednesday night at the Rotary Club was the troop meeting scene put on by Mrs. L. B. Ward's Troop 9, and the acrobatic stunts by Mrs. C. C. Skinner's and Mrs. J. T. Cheatham's Brownie Troop 6. The demonstrations made a good impression on the nearly 100 friends of girl scouting present. Miss Mae Joyner at the piano, contributed much to the success of the program.

Troop 30 Meets.
Our troop had a very good meeting Wednesday night. The meeting was called to order by our scoutmaster, Mr. Drum, and was opened by the scout oath, led by Joe Goodson. We then discussed old and new business, after which the meeting was closed by sending three boys through the belt line for misbehavior during the meeting.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE
By Dorothy Canfield Fisher

"Our Young People" by Dorothy Canfield Fisher deserves the attention of all thoughtful parents and public-spirited citizens. Mrs. Fisher deals not with conditions which temporarily confront young people in a world at war; but with the long range problems which they face before the war, and which they must inevitably face after the war is over. The picture which "Our Young People" presents is based upon the findings of the American Youth Commission of the American Council of Education, of which Mrs. Fisher was a member. The American Youth Commission was made up of citizens drawn from many walks of life—from those engaged in education, in the professional care of delinquent and criminals, in industrial production, in labor unions, in corporations supplying electricity and other needed services, and so on. For six years this group studied the problem of adjusting youth to industrialism.

As basic to her discussion, Mrs. Fisher points out the fact—which we are prone to forget or overlook—that different techniques are required to adjust young people to an industrial society from those which were required to adjust them to a pre-industrial society. In a handicraft society the labor of even a very young child was necessary to the welfare of the family. A young man's father taught him how to run a farm; his training began when the child was a mere toddler.

A young girl was taught by her mother how to do the multiplicity of tasks necessary to run a home and supply a family before the machine began doing household tasks. Outside the farm a boy was apprenticed at an early age to a master craftsman where by helping the master, the child gradually acquired mastery of the craft. The tasks a child used to perform while learning a trade are performed more efficiently and more cheaply by machines. In the early industrial era factories employed children who gradually learned how to handle more and more complicated machinery. Children are no longer employed in factories, not only because we do not approve of child labor, but also because machines, cheaper and more efficient than the children, perform the tasks which children used to perform.

During the period of the depression more than one-third of the unemployed were under 25 years, although only 22 per cent of the unemployed were under that age. The big majority of these young people were unemployed, not because they did not want to work, but because machines had taken their work away. These idle young people were not only failing to acquire a skill; they were failing to acquire the far more important habit of work. In our modern world, there are for the majority of young people only three means of escape from idleness: (1) war, (2) odd jobs and blind-alley work, (3) "somehow" to secure the specialized training through which alone they can enter into a maturity that will be useful to society and satisfactory to themselves. It is the inescapable duty of the adult population to provide such training and work experience for these young people who are unable to secure the training and experience for themselves.

Mrs. Fisher discusses the use of personality and aptitude tests—such as the tests our armed forces have used so successfully—in discovering the peace-time work for which our various young people are best adapted. She shows how C. C. C. camps and the N. Y. A. were established to give youth the training required for filling a useful place in life. Many people who have never taken the trouble to understand N. Y. A. have condemned it. Mrs. Fisher's discussion gives some pertinent facts about N. Y. A. which we all should know.

Mrs. Fisher also reviews the efforts of the high school to adapt youth to a changing world, with particular emphasis on vocational education, and the important role of the Home Economics teacher, who does far more than merely teach girls to cook and sew. Mrs. Fisher concludes with several chapters which emphasize the importance of education for the use of leisure time—the leisure time which the machine makes possible. The history of other cultures proves that, if our civilization is to survive and flourish, leisure time must be spent constructively—Sara O. Ross.

DEATH of a Saboteur

By Hubert Footner

Chapter 29
Lee returned to San Francisco and inquired for Count Deduchin at his hotel. There was no answer from the Count's suite. All the members of his party were out. From a doorman at the main entrance, he got a little additional information. After lunch the Count, with a lady and two servants, had gone out in a limousine hired through the hotel. The doorman supplied Lee with the address of the driver. He owned the car, and it was his sole means of support. A little earlier the young French secretary and the other two servants had left the hotel in a private car driven by a chauffeur. This car had called for them.

Lee then got in touch with the local office of the federal police and set in motion a quiet search for Raoul Duplessis. With the assistance of the local police, they were able to discover if the Count had rented a house, according to his custom.

At eight o'clock, as Lee was eating dinner, Linder called up from Berkeley to report that the Count with Mrs. Crispin and the two servants had just returned to Mrs. Crispin's apartment. The woman was in obvious distress. The car had been dismissed, and they all went in the house and remained there.

Lee proceeded to the address of the driver of the black limousine. He lived in the crowded Mission district. His name was Macklin. He appeared to be a decent, honest fellow, but he was reluctant to testify against the Count, and Lee guessed that he had been liberally paid for his afternoon's work, and expected further employment. That was what Lee wanted to know. Macklin could tell nothing new about the afternoon he had driven the party to Walnut Creek and waited two hours; he had then driven them back to Berkeley. He couldn't hear anything that his passengers said. When he was paid off he was told to stay at home until summoned by phone.

Lee returned to his hotel. Welby came to him about nine-thirty with a letter. "Scharipov kicked up a little rumpus at the airport. I'm afraid it will get into the papers. He had been demanding permission to write or telephone his wife. Driving to the airport, he was perfectly quiet, but waiting at the gates there, when he got a number of people around him, he suddenly began to shout. 'My name is Scharipov! I'm being railroaded! I demand my rights as a citizen!' Sergeant Boker showed his badge and hustled him aboard the plane.

Linder reported from Berkeley that Deduchin and his two servants had remained in the Crispin apartment all night, presumably in the hope that Scharipov would call her up again. Early in the morning, one of the servants had been sent out to buy a newspaper.

Half an hour later, Linder called up again to say the same limousine had driven up to the door of the apartment house and that Count Deduchin and his two servants had departed in it.

Men placed at the Mark Hopkins hotel to watch for Deduchin presently reported he and his two servants had returned in the black limousine and disappeared within their suite.

Meanwhile Lee was waiting in vain for news of Raoul's whereabouts. There were no clues. A general alarm for Raoul, which had been sent throughout California and the neighboring states, had produced no results. The local chief of the FBI wanted to arrest Count Deduchin.

"I am opposed to it," said Lee. "There is nothing to be gained. We have no evidence. He's not going to tell you what he has done with the young man, and unless you find Raoul by your own efforts, you will only have to release the Count again."

The guards were doubled at the pier where the Arcurus was discharging and loading freight, and a couple of coastguardsmen were placed aboard the ship. When she was ready to sail, she was held up until a final search could be made from stem to stern. She finally cast off at two o'clock.

After the ship had sailed, Lee called up Deduchin at the Mark Hopkins. Lee said:

"I suppose you have read the newspapers. Count Scharipov was arrested. I seem to have fallen down completely on my job. I'd like to come and express my regrets in person."

The Count's voice was over-joyfully. "Why, of course. Come right in."

The Count was waiting for him. While his pale eyes glittered with age, his face was wreathed in smiles. He said, laughing pleasantly:

"Mappin, I really feel for you, a man of your reputation having to come and confess failure. Yes, I do feel badly. Count. The reason Scharipov was pulled off without my knowledge, I'm afraid my friend, inspector Loosby, suspecting me of holding back on him. At my rate, he sent this sergeant Boker out here without telling me. I seem to have got myself in wrong with everybody."

"Well, forget it! Forget it!" said the Count, waving his hand. There's no one crying over spilled milk," said the Count. I understand the New York police have very little evidence that Scharipov was concerned in the murder. They may have to release him soon, and then it will be my turn. As it stands today, I think I had better cry quits. If I want you later, I'll send for you."

"Always at your service, sir."

They left amidst almost affectionate farewells.

According to reports which reached him later, the Count then sent for his car and spent the rest of the afternoon driving around town. He would know, of course, that he was followed. He was trying to persuade his watchers that he had nothing more important on his mind than sightseeing.

There is always a hazard in following a car through traffic, and at 35, in the press of the home-going crowd, the Count gave his trailers the slip. An alarm was immediately sent out for the car, but it was not reported. Lee was disappointed; still he supposed that Macklin, the chauffeur, must return home sooner or later and he expected to learn from him where he had driven the Count. Linder was sent down to Macklin's place in the mission district to wait for the chauffeur.

Three hours passed, Macklin had not come home and Lee's anxiety continued to grow.

Chapter 30
After it had grown dark, a letter bearing a special delivery stamp was brought to the hotel for Lee. It had been posted at the general postoffice an hour before. Lee's face became grim as he read it.

Dear Mr. Mappin:
Yesterday before lunch Count Deduchin told me a gentleman had lent him his residence and that we would move out there. I was to go on ahead with two of the servants and he would follow later in the day. I suspected nothing. A car came to the hotel for us. I cannot tell you where it took us. We drove first to the west, then to the south, about five miles I should say, part of the way through a park. It is a district of very fine houses. We drove through a gateway and stopped before a big house of rough gray stone.

The door was opened by an elderly woman servant. As soon as it closed behind me, I was somehow warned of danger, and I turned to escape, whereupon the two Russians jumped on me and beat me down. The woman stood looking on, I shouted for help but they told me it was useless. They carried me upstairs to a bedroom and handcuffed me by my left wrist to a steampipe. This permits me to sit on a chair or to lie down on the floor and sleep.

The woman brings me my meals. Yesterday she would not speak to me, but today she softened a little and at last she said she would carry a letter out of the house and post it for me if I would give her my ring. I have tried to persuade her to take the letter to you, but she says she wouldn't dare remain away so long; that she can only drop the letter in the nearest mailbox. She tells me this is the house of Wilmer Warren; it is called Warren and is on Argonne Drive.

Help me quickly, Mr. Mappin! I am convinced they mean to kill me! Raoul.

Welby was reading over Lee's shoulder. "It's a trap!" he said, instantly.

"No doubt," said Lee. "The woman told me she'd drop it in the nearest box. As a matter of fact, it

The tragic story of the recent epidemic of infantile paralysis when it hit Chicago is graphically illustrated in this photo of a little victim and the chart showing the rise and fall of polio cases. Much credit for lessening the toll of the epidemic—the third worst in the recorded history of the disease in the United States—goes to The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis which is supported by the dimes and dollars given by the American people. was brought into the city and posted. That was to make sure it reached me tonight.

"They are using him to entrap you!"

"But I still don't get it. They must know I'm not going out there without taking an adequate force. How do they expect to deal with that? Anyhow, such an appeal calls for instant action."

They went to the local FBI headquarters. In a quarter hour, a force of 10 was ready.

They set out in two cars. After pursuing separate routes, they came together ten minutes later in a handsome, tree-shaded avenue in the suburbs.

Drawing up alongside the curb, they left a man in each car, and proceeded on foot. Entering one by one through a pair of handsome gates, they separated inside, taking advantage of every bit of cover. Welby, gun in hand, stuck to Lee closer than a brother.

After entering the grounds, they neither saw nor heard more of the FBI men. Stealing around the edge of an open space, they moved cautiously from tree to tree. Welby continually glancing from side to side and behind.

They came to a stand in the shadow of a clump of bushes at the edge of another open space. Across a stretch of grass rose the mansion. Everl window was black.

They waited. In the soft glow that pervaded the air, they could see pretty well. They saw the chief mount the front steps with two of his men and pause to ring the bell. Time passed. Finally, at a sign from the chief, one of the men raised his arms and they heard the crash of an axe on the wooden door. The men disappeared inside. After a moment within the house, lights began to go on.

"Shall we follow them?" suggested Lee.

The words were scarcely off his lips when Welby yelled: "Look out!"

Lee whirled and saw a man aiming a gun at him. He had come around the other side of the bushes. At the same instant, his gun flashed and spoke. Welby fired simultaneously. Le caught the bullet along the edge of his arm. The man who had fired it dropped like a stone in the grass.

"Drop!" said Welby. "There may be others!"

Welby cautiously explored around the bush. There was nobody else.

The shots brought the FBI men running.

"Are you hurt?" demanded the chief.

"A mere scratch," said Lee. "There was only one of them," said Welby. "I got him!"

The chief issued crisp orders to his men, who then spread in every direction to intercept possible fugitives. Soon afterward in the distance they heard the cars start their engines.

When a light was thrown in the face of the fallen man, they saw that Welby's bullet had bored in the exact middle of his forehead. It was one of Deduchin's pretended Russians.

Lee was holding his burning arm. The chief, who had a first-aid kit in his pocket, made Lee remove his coat, a darter cutting away his shirt-sleeves applied a temporary dressing.

"Was there anybody in the house?" asked Lee.

"Not a soul,"

"Poor Raoul," murmured Lee. "He will think his cry for help only got me into trouble!"

A telephone message had been sent back to town to broadcast a new alarm for the black limousine bearing license plates with such and such a number. The FBI cars had returned.

"If the limousine couldn't be found in the daytime it won't be found now," grumbled the chief. "They may have a couple of hours start."

It was a grim group of men who returned to the city in the small hours. The FBI's were not accustomed to be balked in this manner. At headquarters there was no news. The surgeon who served the FBI reminded Lee's wound and lent him a topcoat to hide his bloody sleeve.

As Lee and Welby parted in their suite, Lee said:

"Poor lad! Poor lad! I cannot put this vivid young face out of my mind, Welby. There is a single chance—"

"What is that, Mr. Mappin?"

Lee shook his head. "Time will tell. I don't want to raise any false hopes."

DEEP WATERS

George Mathewson, a hymn writer of note, was one of the greatest preachers Scotland ever produced. While he was still a young man, he was informed by his physician that a serious eye trouble would soon result in blindness, and he must prepare himself for this grievous affliction. Mathewson was engaged to be married to a charming young woman, and feeling he should not involve her life with his handicap, he wrote her and offered to release her from her promise. She replied with almost unbecoming haste that she accepted his offer and left Mathewson to face darkness alone. That night he is said to have written the famous hymn which begins, "O love that will not let me go..." Mathewson never married. Later, although totally blind, he brought his generation under the spell of his eloquence and led thousands of people into the joy of a new life. "When through the deep waters I call thee to go, The rivers of woe shall not thee over-flow; For I will be with thee thy troubles to bless, An sanctuary to thee thy deepest distress." To the People of this Community YOU ARE IMPORTANT

There is no such thing as a "little" investment in the Fourth War Loan. Your $25 or $50 or $100 Extra War Bond may not have great importance in your mind in making up a $12 billion dollar total for individuals. But multiply yourself by 130,000,000 and then you see in real perspective how truly great each citizen becomes in massing national strength against the Nazis and the Japs.

Capt. Maurice Witherspoon, Navy chaplain aboard the Carrier Wasp when she sank, tells of a rescued wounded sailor, who, as he regained consciousness, asked: "Did I do my best?" That's the only question you, too, have to ask yourself when you decide the extent of your personal participation in the Fourth War Loan.

There undoubtedly will be large single purchases of War Bonds in this community, but yours—if it is "your best"—will deserve equally the red, white and blue shield you are privileged to display in the window of your home.

WASHINGTON IN WARTIME

By HOWARD FLIEGER

Washington—Sam Rayburn is a Texas Democrat who doesn't talk much. He's a Speaker of the House who spends most of his time listening. He holds a daily news conference that seldom produces more than half a dozen short sentences. You can count on one hand the speeches he's made in Congress since the war began. But one day Sam Rayburn, tired of listening, made a speech that quietly worked its way into a sensation. It was shortly before Congress went home for Christmas. He spoke only a few minutes, but all ready some of his colleagues have ticketed it as one of the great speeches of the war.

gerous trends," said the Speaker. He spoke about distrust among allies. He talked about complaints, about sacrifices, about those who want an edge on their neighbors or who complain that somebody else has something they can't get. "That is dangerous talk," Rayburn told the quiet House. "Anything calculated to bring about unity and wrong thinking in our country or disunity among us and those allied with us is dangerous talk. "Some people are complaining who have improved their position during this war. I hate to think of it, but as I do think I must say it: I think some groups in this country, at the expense of our unity in the war effort, are thinking more of their position after the war than they are of winning the war now. It is a sad commentary upon some human beings. "It is going to take the might and brain of every patriot under the flag to do this job. Our hands are in the war effort, are thinking more of their position after the war than they are of winning the war now. It is a sad commentary upon some human beings. "It is going to take the might and brain of every patriot under the flag to do this job. Our hands are in the war effort, are thinking more of their position after the war than they are of winning the war now. It is a sad commentary upon some human beings.

It caught the eye of editors, however. Soon it started showing up on editorial pages. Senator Truman (D-Mo.) put it in the Senate record. Twice before the recess Rayburn was asked to repeat the speech on the radio. Later he went through it again for the newscasts. The more time that passes, the more attention it attracts. As members headed back to their home districts at the year-end close of Congress, Rayburn probably wondered how many of them remembered the job he cut out for them. He told them to take heed of loose talk, disunity and carping. "When these strange things are talked and printed and blared over the radio," he said, "I hope that we will go back and try to stamp out some of these things among our people."

tained effort to eliminate the German capital. The RAF's first reports of the raid echoed with a grim refrain. The Air Ministry communique said "large fires were left burning, smoke rising to a great height." Indefatigable twin-engined Mosquitos at the same time laid down a feint bombardment of targets in northwestern Germany, and fleets of minelayers again visited German waters. It was the 106th attack of the war on Berlin.

In another of the night's forays, Canadian Albatrosses of the coastal command swooped down on two Nazi destroyers in the channel and set one ablaze. One Canadian plane was lost.

Frozen Assets Lost
New York, Jan. 21—(AP)—Two gunmen who handicapped him by smashing his eye-glasses held him up and rifled his ice cream freezer. Robert Frank, Brooklyn confectioner, reported to police today. Apparently, Frank said, the hold-up men had been tipped that in the chamber of the freezer containing the vanilla ice cream Frank had concealed $320. For they passed up the chocolate and strawberry ice cream.

meeting today of the midwestern Democratic conference. This group, which Quigley heads, is composed of the committee members and state chairmen of 13 midwestern states. Quigley, personally exercised over patronage matters, told a reporter that any grievances that might develop probably would be carried directly to the White House, rather than to the national committee.

More, who is secretary of the conference, said the group would open its session to any complaints that midwestern state members had, but he predicted the President, who lost Iowa to Wendell L. Willkie in 1940, would carry it this year. Iowa Democrats, he said, want Henry Wallace.

King, who is scheduled to head the American committee of the national group, said he hoped the midwestern conference "doesn't do anything that will keep the President from running again."

Argument About Gun In Recorder's Court

In Police Court today W. H. Warren of Stokesport, charged with disorderly conduct and carrying a concealed weapon, was acquitted of the disorderly conduct charge and convicted of carrying a concealed weapon (a pistol). Judge Roberts fined Warren $50 and costs for carrying the concealed weapon and ordered the pistol confiscated. Warren made strenuous objection and stated that he had a permit from the clerk of Superior Court to own a pistol. After a tense argument by Warren the court returned the gun to him.

Patrolman J. R. Mobley testified that Warren was disorderly at Ninth Street and Dickinson Avenue Wednesday night about 9 o'clock; that he told him to be quiet and set along and that Warren replied that he wasn't going anywhere. The policeman had to arrest him by force and found the pistol concealed in his pocket, he said. The State law provides that when a person is convicted of carrying a concealed weapon the officiating judge shall condemn the weapon and order it confiscated.

William Tucker, colored, larceny, 12 months on the roads. Edward Jenkins, colored, assault, prosecuting witness failed to appear and was taxed with the court costs.

BASKET BALL HERE TONIGHT

Phantoms To Play Elizabeth City Yellow Jackets

Tonight at 8 o'clock in the Greenville High School gym the Green Phantoms will meet the Elizabeth City Yellow Jackets in the second game of the season. In the first game, in the Yellow Jackets' home town, the Phantoms won an easy 30-17 victory. The Elizabeth City quint is expected to be out for revenge of the defeat but the Greens will be shooting for their sixth victory of the season.

Coch Chariton has been drilling the locals against the zone and modified zone defenses which the Yellow Jackets used against the Phantoms in the previous meeting and the Greens should be in top physical shape for the tilt.

The Phantoms won over the Kingston Red Devils last Friday night and won from the Farmville High School team Tuesday night and a victory tonight will give them their third straight win.

Greene Coach Chariton is expected to star Billy Harrington and Dennis Fleming at the guards, Amos Leggett at center and Jimmy Puttrell and Neil Posey at forwards.

ONE-LEGGED SKATER—Steve Zabolney, Waterbury, Conn., war plant worker, demonstrates his skill on an ice skate. Zabolney, who once managed a crippled boys' basketball team at Passaic, N. J., also is an expert roller skater.

NEW AIR BLOW AGAINST JAPS

Twelve Enemy Planes Shot Down Over Wewak

Advanced Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, Jan. 21-(AP)-(AP)-American heavy bomber and fighter plane raids on the Japanese air force nest at Wewak, New Guinea destroyed at least 12 enemy planes and churned the area with 133 tons of bombs.

The Allied high command reported today more than 100 Lightning, Thunderbolt and Kittyhawk fighters swept over the coastal base Tuesday to flush out Japanese planes which have been reluctant to fight far from home. Returning pilots said the Japanese fliers were "smart and aggressive," but the Americans bagged 12 planes for sure and two more probably, against the loss of three raiders. Gen. Douglas MacArthur's communique stated. Fifty Liberator heavy bombers struck there the next day, laying the 133 tons of explosives mostly on local trades. The continued dry weather over most of the midwest, coupled with government demand for flour, was the major factor in the strength. At the close wheat was 1/2 lower to 3/4 higher, May $1.70 3/4-1/2, oats were 1/4 lower to 1/2 higher, May 78 1/2, rye was down 1/4-1/2. May $1.29 1/2-1/4, and barley was unchanged to 1/4 lower, May $1.21 1/4.

Meretskov's Troops Pushing Westward

Meretskov's troops were pushing westward from Novgorod in pursuit of the fleeing garrison and latest reports placed them more than 10 miles along the roads to Estonia. Of this victory, the Moscow radio said: "Falling back hastily they (the Germans) cannot hope to stem the onslaught of our troops, nor stand up to the deluge of artillery fire rained upon their heads." In addition to the 40,000 Germans which the Russians said they had slain, 4,000 more were reported captured. Govorov's men accounted for 25,000 of the slain enemy troops, the other 15,000 dying in the storming of Novgorod by Meretskov's troops on the Volkhov front. The Russians reported the capture of 265 guns on the Leningrad sector since Jan. 14, when their offensive was launched, including 85 heavy siege guns which had been shelling the city. Other material taken included 30 tanks, 159 mortars, 274 machineguns and 18 ammunition dumps. During the same period Meretskov's troops on the Volkhov front captured 182 guns, 120 mortars, 635 machineguns, 263 tanks, 21 tractors and 25 dumps. They destroyed 178 tanks, 15 tanks, 110 mortars, 365 machineguns and 350 trucks, the communique asserted. Far to the south on the 1,200-mile front, Gen. Nikolai Vatutin's first Ukrainian army hurled back German attacks north of Khrystinivka, where the Russians have been stalled in their drive toward the Odessa-Warsaw railway and Rumania. Two thousand Germans were killed and 36 tanks destroyed in the day's fighting on this salient, the Moscow communique reported.

Leonid A. Govorov was reported to have encircled large units of enemy troops caught in the 50-square-mile Strelina corridor, running north from the Krasnoye Selo sector to the Gulf of Finland. These troops face certain capture or annihilation, Moscow dispatches said. Govorov's armies, these dispatches indicated, were shaping a trap for approximately 250,000 Germans fighting southeast of Leningrad. The Soviet war bulletin said spearheads of Govorov's forces were less than nine miles from Krasnogorodsk. That junction directly south of Leningrad, through which most of the threatened enemy troops would be forced to withdraw toward Estonia in order to escape capture. Govorov sealed off the Strelina corridor at a point 20 miles southwest of Leningrad after seizing the town of Strelina itself, five miles southeast of Peterhof and 10 miles from the Gulf of Finland.

A small fruit store and a storage warehouse in the block were also destroyed.

Firemen managed to save the Willis Wright Motor Company, on the other end of the block from the studio, but there was considerable damage from smoke and water.

FIRE SWEEPS CITY BLOCK

Heavy Damage In Elizabeth City Business District

Elizabeth City, Jan. 21-(AP)-Fire swept most of a block in the Elizabeth City business district early today, causing damage estimated by an insurance representative at approximately $125,000.

The blaze broke out at 4:40 a. m. and raged for almost three hours before it was brought under control by firemen of the Elizabeth City fire department and firefighting units here, the Naval Air station and the Harvey's Point Navy Auxiliary station at Hertford. The city was without electric power from the time the fire started until shortly before 8 a. m.

Origin of the fire was thought to be either a short circuit or chemical combustion in the photographic studio of Charles Sharrro, at Water street and Colonial avenue. The inflammable nature of the film caused the fire to spread rapidly. Sherreo and Charles Jones, who was also in the studio, barely escaped from the blazing building. They were rescued by Walter K. Jennette, who discovered the fire and broke into the building.

The three-story Aydet building, which housed the studio, was burned to the ground, and the entire stock of the E. M. Sawyer Company, and the Toxey Wholesale Grocery Company were completely demolished.

Included in the loss at the wholesale grocery store were 4,000 pounds of coffee and 20,000 pounds of sugar. A small fruit store and a storage warehouse in the block were also destroyed.

The British attack on Castellote and Ventosa was in a sector approximately two miles beyond the Garigliano and about six miles inland. It was around Castellote that the Germans apparently had built their most formidable defenses in the coastal sector. They launched several strong counterattacks in this sector but all were repulsed. (The German communique said German positions were breached southwest of Castellote.) One potential counterattack, after Minturno was captured, was crushed before it could get started when Allied artillery and planes

Heavy and medium bombers again concentrated their full power on German airfields and communications in central Italy, striking damaging blows at airfields near Rome for the second day in succession.

Invader dive-bombers and Marauders teamed up to attack the airfield and railroad yards at Viterbo, 40 miles northwest of Rome, while fighter-bombers and light bombers, escorted by hundreds of fighters supported the Fifth army attack.

RAF Wellingtons bombed the rail line at Leghorn heavily at night. American Mitchells raided the railway and highway near Caroli, 31 miles east of Rome. Over the Adriatic RAF Kittyhawks left two German ships ablaze off the Yugoslav coast. The lack of enemy fighter opposition was illustrated by the fact that Capt. Harold L. Busenbanger of Osborn, O., operations officer for an A-36 Invader squadron, was credited with shooting down the only German plane seen during 90 minutes of attacks on military targets in the Rome area.

Two Allied and five enemy planes were lost yesterday. The navy communique said little opposition was encountered in the shelling of Applan Way objectives although one of the warships was damaged slightly. Allied destroyers also shelled a harbor off the Yugoslav coast on the night of January 18-19.
