

Russians Narrow Ring Around Nazis Trapped In Deep Bend Area

Soviet Forces Capture Korsun Killing 3,000 Germans. Fierce Nazi Attempt To Break Encirclement Repulsed. Other Red Units Drive on Pskov And Vitebsk

London, Feb. 15.—(AP)—Tens of thousands of weary, hungry Germans, remnants of ten crack divisions trapped in the Cherkassy death ring 12 days ago, fought desperately today to escape annihilation as Russian forces closed in relentlessly after seizing Korsun, core of the enemy's resistance.

German relief forces made a desperate attempt to sunder their encircled comrades, but apparently were stopped with severe losses after driving a "slight wedge" into the Soviet cordon.

A Russian communiqué said that at least 2,000 Nazis were killed and 73 tanks and 23 self-propelled guns destroyed or captured in the abortive attack, which was launched from enemy lines northwest of Zvenigorodka, a town 25 miles southwest of Korsun.

In storming Korsun, the Russians said they killed 1,000 Nazis, isolated another enemy unit, and reduced the German position to an area of about 64 square miles on both sides of the Dnieper river between Korsun and the town of Stalav, eight miles to the west. The drive on Korsun netted the attackers the additional towns of Samorodnya, five miles to the northwest; Lastyva, three miles to the south; and Petruski and Turkeny, five and six miles, respectively, to the southwest.

On the Baltic front other Red army forces were within 40 miles of Pskov, key to the Baltic states and a major center of a German salient extending to Staraya Russa, 110 miles to the east. The Russians were sweeping south on a 70-mile wide front between Lake and Lake Pskov, Moscow said, and captured several more towns yesterday to add to the 2,000 square miles of territory already liberated in their six-day drive.

Capture of Pskov would cut off from retreat those German forces still operating in the Lake Ilmen-Staraya Russa sector and would give the Russians a base from which to clear the Germans from the Baltic states could be launched. A drive to the west would virtually seal off Estonia from Germany, while Riga, Latvian capital on the Baltic coast, is just 175 miles from Pskov.

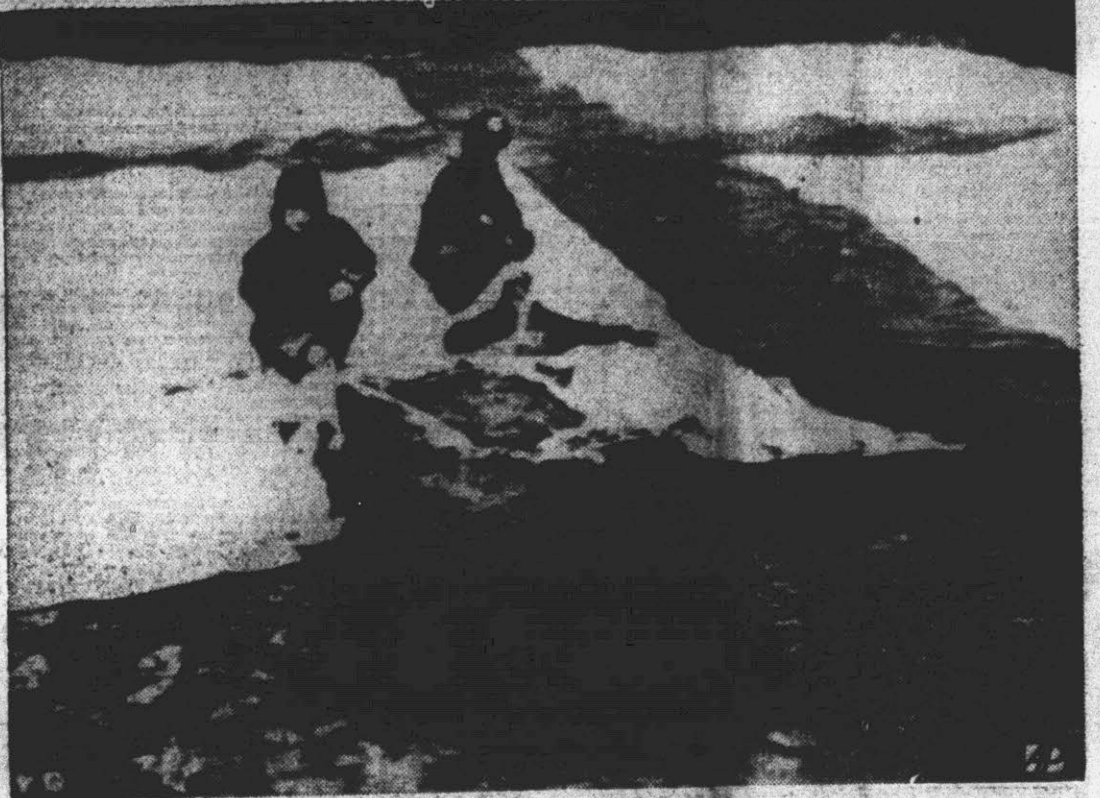

Moscow dispatches said the Germans evidently intended to hold Pskov at all costs and were fortifying all villages, blowing up bridges and mining the roads in the path of the advancing Red army troops.

SAYS POLITICS BEHIND FIGHT

Lucas Says GOP Is Playing Politics with Ballot Bill

Washington, Feb. 15.—(AP)—Senator Lucas (D-Mt.) co-author of the administration's federal ballot bill, today accused a "group of northern Republicans" of playing politics with the issue of votes for the armed forces.

Lucas' remarks were prompted by a statement by Joseph W. Martin, Jr., Republican leader of the House, that the GOP is ready to fight if President Roosevelt makes service legislation an issue in the coming campaign.

"The Republicans already have made it an issue," snapped Lucas. "They're the ones who've played politics with this thing from beginning to end. It's obvious by the tactics they've used in the Senate and the House."

Most Republicans in both branches of Congress fought against the administration's Green-Lucas bill to send uniform federal absentee ballots to voters overseas. The Republicans teamed with southern "states' rights" Democrats in support of legislation giving the states the job of handling absentee ballots for the armed forces. Senate and House conferees will go to work this week on a compromise.

"We are not afraid of that as a campaign issue," Martin said yesterday. "We want to give the boys a ballot as a matter of course, and we know that transportation can be arranged for state ballots."

"As an individual I'm not concerned with talk about how the soldier vote will go. I've said from the beginning—and I still say—this question is not a constitutional issue. It's the issue of giving Americans their constitutional rights."

"But the Republicans have made it a political issue from the outset. That became apparent early from the speeches of Senators Taft and Holman."

Senator Taft (R-Ohio) at one point accused the secretaries of War and Navy of favoring a federal ballot because the were fourth-term backers. He and other Republicans claimed the federal ballot, in its original form, would have given the Democrats the best of the service voting.

Senator Holman (R-Ore.) had told the Senate's administrationists they'd had no trouble getting their federal ballot bill adopted if President Roosevelt would eliminate himself from this year's campaign.

WILLKIE PLANS FOR CAMPAIGN

Former GOP Standard Bearer Formally Announces

Portland, Ore., Feb. 15.—(AP)—Wendell Willkie last night formally announced his candidacy for the Republican presidential nomination and selected Ralph H. Calkins, Oregon's GOP national committeeman, as his pre-convention campaign manager.

The 1940 party nominee said at a press conference the Republicans can win the 1944 presidential election only by offering proof to the electorate through his candidate and its platform that:

1. The United States can more effectively fight the war with a Republican instead of a Democrat as its chief executive.
2. The Republican party has a more comprehensive understanding than the Democrats of America's post-war social and economic adjustments and responsibilities.
3. The GOP's interest in the understanding of the United States' role in world cooperation is stronger and deeper than that of the Democrats.

Willkie added that such a three-point program "must not be a mere cloak put on for political and campaign purposes but a deep and abiding belief" which must be carried by the party's presidential candidate.

"The Republican party, since it is out of power, is entitled to make legitimate criticism of and take advantage of errors of the party in power," Willkie said at Mefford, Ore., en route to Portland from Sacramento, Calif., where he had visited Governor Earl Warren.

"But it cannot win, or be entitled to win, by presenting nothing but a bill of errors and complaints." He reiterated that his role was to bring about party unity.

Willkie told newsmen here he would wage active campaigns in states where he enters primaries. Calkins, scheduled to leave last night for New York City to establish national campaign headquarters, said Willkie's campaign in the Wisconsin primary was already under way and had been initiated in Nebraska.

Willkie announced Saturday he will enter the Oregon primary. Calkins said "we have decided to enter the primaries in some states," but he declined to name them immediately.

Mrs. Frank Reynolds of Cambridge City, Ind., will head the women's division of the Willkie campaign. Calkins announced. Mrs. Reynolds is an Indiana Republican national committeewoman and former Indiana state treasurer.

Calkins, a native Oregonian and lifelong Republican, is a practicing attorney here.

Declaring the appointment of Calkins as campaign manager constituted his formal declaration of candidacy, Willkie added, "if there is anyone who didn't already know I was going to run."

Infantrymen Engage In House-To-House Battle For Possession Of Vital City Of Cassino; Airmen Exert Pressure On Germans On Anzio Bridgehead Front

By EDWARD KENNEDY

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Feb. 15.—(AP)—U. S. Flying Fortresses today bombed Mt. Cassino and its historic monastery, transformed by the Nazis into a fortress, beginning an all-out offensive to crack the German line while ground troops maintained pressure both in the Cassino and Anzio invasion bridgehead areas.

The bombs, some hitting the Benedictine abbey founded in 529 A. D., rained down in support of American infantry crawling up the hill against machine-gun and artillery fire, and followed a warning to monks and citizen refugees to vacate the abbey.

As the smoke of the aerial bombardment died down, Allied big guns started shelling the abbey.

The first aerial attack came about 9:30 a. m. and sent 30 to 40 hundred uniformed German soldiers running from the monastery, ground observers reported to Allied headquarters.

Once they appeared in the open, Allied artillerymen opened up with a barrage of shells that covered the terrain over which the Nazis were fleeing.

A second wave of bombers followed, sending an estimated 200 more Germans out of the monastery. They likewise were engaged by artillery.

(Max Hill of NBC radioed an estimate that the monastery received about 50 direct hits and said it was in partial ruins. "The outer walls of the ancient monastery are still standing, but the blue dome with its cross is gone, and there are gaping holes in the walls.")

Doughboy troops battling in Cassino below were said unofficially to have occupied one-third of that bastion town in bitter house-to-house fighting.

On the invasion bridgehead to the west, Allied troops threw back a small German attack in the Caroceto (Aprilia) area, and repulsed a Nazi patrol in the Cisterna area northeast of Anzio. Artillerymen broke up a German attempt to bridge a stream 10 miles above Anzio at Vellemaida. Allied headquarters announced.

Liberators and Flying Fortresses struck powerfully yesterday at enemy rail and highway communications in northern Italy pouring troops and supplies southward for battle. They concentrated on a triangular area between Arezzo south of Florence to Verona, southern (Continued on Page Six)

The WAR TODAY

AN ANALYSIS OF THE NEWS

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

Russia's reported indication that she has no harsh designs on Finnish territory in the making of peace terms fits the Soviet attitude at the time of the conference of the big three at Teheran.

However, the Muscovite temper towards Helsinki hasn't improved. Terms now aren't likely to be as easy as they would have been then, and protraction of the war will add to their severity.

Probably one of the greatest barriers to mild conditions from Moscow is an individual—Field Marshal Baron Gustaf Mannerheim, who is a grand old man to the Finns but a bete noire to the Communists. This 65-year-old bemoaned aristocrat is not only commander-in-chief but the most powerful influence in his country.

The once dashing baron has been the bitter foe of Communism from birth. It was he who led the Finns in successful revolt against the Bolsheviks in 1918. Then he led through Helsinki to assume dictatorship until a president was elected. Since then he has been the man behind the gun.

The marshal led the Finns against Russia in 1939-40, and has headed the show since Finland ranged herself alongside Germany in the present conflict. He got the credit for this alliance and now Moscow is going to have difficulty in seeing past the shiny Hitlerian medals on Mannerheim's chest.

A blunt man is Lt. Gen. Joseph (Uncle Joe) W. Stilwell, commander-in-chief of United States forces in China, Burma and India, and has given speedy reply to the statement by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander-in-chief of the United States Pacific fleet, that the latter's aim is to get the forces under his command moving across the Pacific and setting up bases in China. Says the general:

"To accomplish such a mission, naval action must be supported heavily by an aggressive land and air offensive projected from the interior. This we intend to do in spite of the existing blockade. At present, however, China is totally dependent on air transport, and the need is immediate for a continued increase of supplies. Vital China-based air operations cannot wait for penetration of the blockade by land or sea."

Some observers interpret the general's statement as indicating fear that he may suffer for equipment because of the naval effort. Be that as it may, Uncle Joe knows what he wants and goes after it.

China's military effort and home-front maintenance are almost entirely dependent on Stilwell's air planes for foreign supplies. And since the Japs occupy most of the manufacturing area, virtually all the war material must come from the outside world.

Just think of one of the big four nations being mainly dependent on a few transport planes to enable her to defend herself, to say nothing of making offensives! China's position is serious. She needs supplies, and needs them fast. But for General Stilwell's transports and Major General Claire L. Chennault's air force, she likely would have been knocked out of the war before this.

Russia And Finland May Reach Peace Terms Soon

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, Feb. 15.—(AP)—American officials are more hopeful now of Finland's getting out of the war than they have been for almost a year.

The presence of several Finnish leaders in Stockholm, a logical spot for preliminary peace negotiations, has brought a reappraisal of the chances for a Russo-Finnish settlement—and they are pronounced fairly good.

There is little belief that Russian demands at this time would be too severe for the Helsinki government in view of the military situation in which the northern nation now finds itself.

Principally it is believed that the Russians would be willing to make an armistice based on the boundaries set up in March, 1940, after the last Russo-Finnish war, which deprived the Finns of 16,000 square miles of territory, including the city of Viipuri and the naval base of Hangoe, on the Baltic sea.

The Finns might not like the Russian armistice terms but there is nothing they can do about it except keep fighting in the certain knowledge that eventually they will face overwhelming assault. The Russians want the territory, as part of their Karelo-Finnish republic, presumably to afford greater protection to the city of Leningrad, and to improve their naval position in the Baltic.

Another problem the Finns face in any peace move is what to do about German troops now in their country. Estimated at three to six divisions, these are threatened with loss of their supply lines through the Baltic as Russian armies advance into Estonia.

Still a third problem has to do with supplies for the Finns themselves. Finland must import a large part of its food as well as its oil. This probably could be solved with help from Sweden, although Russian assistance also would be necessary—and the aid of the United States and Great Britain might be required.

The Allies would win two great advantages in getting Finland out of the war. Russia would be relieved of military commitments on that front and Germany would be deprived of a co-belligerent, giving the German people one more warning of their own eventual defeat.

The present Russo-Finnish war began in June 1941, little more than a year after the previous one ended. The Finns were not then and have not since become so much allies of Germany as enemies of Russia and of Britain, which also declared war on them.

Stockholm, Feb. 15.—(AP)—The Finnish leader Juhani Kusti Paasikivi has conferred with the Russian minister to Sweden, Mme. Alexandra Kollontay and expects to meet with her again, a Finnish legation source said today.

Paasikivi, a former Finnish cabinet minister, has been a leader in the faction seeking peace with Soviet Russia.

There were rumors that Russian terms for an armistice were being sent to Helsinki today, but no confirmation of these reports could be found.

More Air Attacks On France Today

London, Feb. 15.—(AP)—American Liberators today attacked German fortifications in northern France for the fourth time in five days, after earlier smashes against targets in the same area by American Marauders and RAF medium fighter bombers.

The assault followed a night in which no Allied operations were reported and Britain enjoyed its first raid-free night since February 10.

Today On The Home Front

JAMES MARLOW and GEORGE ZIELKE

Washington, Feb. 15.—(AP)—If you're against the income tax forms and wonder how they got that way, here's the story.

The Internal Revenue Department has two men, a lawyer and a clerk, who ever since the last war have had a full time job making up tax forms.

They watch tax developments in Congress and as soon as a bill is finished they pitch in to whip up a tax form to comply with it.

Then they take it into what the department calls its "forms committee," which is composed of division heads dealing with income tax.

They work it over and finally send it up to the brass hats—like the head of the department's income tax units, the assistant secretary of the treasury and even Secretary Morgenthau himself.

The brass hats have to give it a final okay but the real work is finished before it ever reaches them.

Is that all? That's all it took five months to shape up the present forms which are giving the population the screaming meemies.

Is there anything wrong with this way of doing it? Some people think so, and here are some of the reasons they give:

First, the forms are made up by these men who are so familiar with taxes that they are far removed from the puzzle that besets the average citizen.

Being experts, their thinking and language is almost certain to be not too simple.

Second, they take no scientific sampling with a group of average taxpayers.

If they had worked out a number of forms and then tested an average taxpayer group they could find that some of the things which seem simple to them are difficult to others.

(We understand that this year a test between two forms was made with a small group in New York.)

The kind of forms issued 30 years ago and now, for instance:

In 1913, the first year of income taxes, only 337,596 persons had to make out forms. They were the richest of the rich, who could turn the problem over to their lawyers. They paid that year $28,254,000 in taxes.

By 1939 the number of taxpayers had grown to 7,600,000. They paid $228,000,000. By 1942 the number climbed to 50 million, paying $18,500,000,000.

That increase since 1939 means that now even the least-schooled and least intelligent have to make out returns. But through all the growth since 1913 the method of making up the forms has remained about the same.

There is another side to the story, of course. Congress itself has scrambled the tax law so that work of making up the forms is a vastly complicated procedure. Nobody but experts could figure what Congress had done.

Our Farm Folks

VERONA LEE JOYNER, H. D. A.
EDNA KIRBY, Assistant

Neighborhood leaders of Belvoir, Black Jack, and Grimesland met last week. These neighborhood leaders made plans as to how the farm families in their respective communities can increase food and speed production in 1944. Emphasis was placed on increased yield of crops and more efficient production of poultry and livestock.

A series of similar meetings will be held in the other communities of the county during the month.

Red Banks Club Meets
The regular meeting of the Red Banks Home Demonstration Club was held at the home of Mrs. Sam Edwards on Tuesday afternoon, February 1. Twenty-four members and ten visitors were present and it was voted, one of the most hospitable and enthusiastic meetings yet held.

Mrs. J. T. Braxton and Mrs. Tucker Mills were assistant hostesses.

Mrs. L. W. Cherry, president, called the meeting to order and several items of business were dispensed with. Each member present paid 35 cents for yearly club dues. Plans were made for the Valentine party and club members were urged to be present with their families. An appropriate poem, in connection with our work, was read by Mrs. Bob Starling. Members who took part in the sale of War Bonds and collection for March of Dimes, were personally thanked. In the absence of Mrs. L. S. Hardee, food conservation leader, a report was read by the secretary, Mrs. Boyd. Miss Helen Brooks, garden leader gave the demonstration, "The early seed bed" and other phases necessary to growth. The construction and use of the frame garden were also stressed and each member was urged to plant small fruits. An evening social period then followed. In a quiz contest, which required the names of club members as answers. Mrs. J. Brooks Tucker was prize winner. Mrs. Bob Starling directed two games which produced much fun and laughter. Delicious refreshments, fruit cocktail, with whipped cream and cherries, lemonade, cakes and roasted nuts were served. Then a George Washington hatchet was presented to each one as a favor.

Ballard's H. D. Club Meets
The Ballards Home Demonstration Club held its regular monthly meeting on Tuesday, February 8 at the home of Mrs. L. R. Jones.

The meeting was called to order by Mrs. A. C. Turnage. "Upward Trail" was sung as the opening song followed by the club collect repeated in unison. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The roll was called. Mrs. L. E. Jones gave a beautiful and inspiring devotional. The members present made a contribution to the "North Carolina Field Army" for cancer control. Following this Mrs. A. C. Turnage made a very interesting book report. Mrs. L. E. Jones, garden leader for 1944, gave an interesting and beneficial demonstration on "Gardening." She included in the demonstration growing your plants, frame garden and growing special crops such as celery, lettuce, onions for storage, asparagus and small fruits. The club members adopted as their slogan "Better Gardens in 1944."

Pactolus H. D. Club Meets
The Pactolus Home Demonstration Club met with Mrs. John Overton, February 7 at 2:30 p. m., with 19 members present, two new members and two visitors.

Mrs. Paul Davenport, president, called the meeting to order, and the club song "Upward Trail." In the business session, the club set as its goal increasing its membership, reading more good books, and giving more time to the war effort.

The club voted to serve a supper each month to the Pactolus Fellowship club—the proceeds to go alternately to the Pactolus church and the Home Demonstration Club.

An instructive demonstration on "Gardening" was given by Mrs. C. R. Fleming. After this a social period followed.—Reported by Mrs. William Tripp.

Red Oak H. D. Club
The Red Oak Home Demonstration club met on Wednesday, February 2, at the home of Mrs. B. L. Tyson with Mrs. L. W. Edwards as assistant hostess. The meeting was called to order by the president Mrs. C. W. Bright, after singing "Upward Trail," the members repeated the Collect of the Club Women of America. Mrs. F. L. Allen gave an interesting demonstration on "Gardening." She demonstrated preparation of seed boxes for the planting of seed, and how to transplant them. She also included in the demonstration other valuable information to assist club members in having "Better Gardens in 1944."

After the demonstration a game was enjoyed. Much merriment was enjoyed. The hostesses served delicious chicken salad sandwiches with iced tea. Following the adjournment of the meeting Mrs. Tyson invited the club members to see her home which had recently been remodeled. All present complimented Mrs. Tyson on her excellent taste in the selection of her color schemes, new slip covers, furnishings, etc.

Chicod H. D. Club
The Chicod Home Demonstration Club met Friday, February 4, in the Home Economics building, the president in the chair, with 23 members and five visitors present.

"We're On The Upward Trail" was sung, followed by the club Collect. Miss Annie Carroll led our devotional ending it with the song, "Onward Christian Soldiers." Minutes and treasury report were read and approved. Mr. Ned Hawks, Chicod Agricultural teacher gave our club a very interesting and instructive talk on gardens and preparing the bed soil for hot beds.

Mrs. Clark presented to the club for approval, several by-laws decided upon by the executive committee at a call meeting. The following were voted on and approved:

1. Each member of the club to be responsible for the sale of two bottles of flavoring. Proceeds from ten bottles to go to the county council.

2. That each member give one cent for the control of cancer.

3. Educational leader to encourage reading of books among our members.

4. That we have a recreation period at each meeting. Prizes are to be home products from the homes of our members. The hostesses for each month are to be responsible for these prizes.

5. The following were appointed for the Fourth War Bond drive and assigned to their respective neighborhoods: Mrs. E. G. Hardee; Mrs. Roy Gaskins and Mrs. W. L. Haddock; Miss Reba Smith and Miss Bernice Harper; Mrs. T. S. Tyson and Mrs. Z. Williams; Mrs. James Mills and Mrs. Melvin Porter.

6. Mrs. Z. L. Williams was appointed War Service leader for our club.

Mrs. T. S. Tyson, garden leader, gave our demonstration. She showed us how to prepare a hotbed for early plants. We also held a very interesting "general discussion" on the success of our gardens in 1943.

"It's a Good Time to Get Together" was sung and our hostesses, Mrs. Roy Gaskins and Mrs. Dennis Ainsley served iced cakes and coffee, carrying out the Valentine motif. Mrs. Newman Lewis led our recreation and a good laugh was enjoyed by all. We adjourned to meet again in March.—Reported by Mrs. W. F. Carroll.

The Bethel, Farmville, and Littlefield Home Demonstration clubs held their regular February meeting during the past week.

Strength FOR THE DAY

By EARL L. DOUGLAS

MY ENEMY—THE CLOCK

The doctor passed sentence upon me recently. He bade me go out from my native haunts, forego all about churches, congregations, baptisms, marriages, newspaper editors and readers and stretch out my legs in the warm southern sunshine.

It was a hard pill to swallow, but now that it's down, it isn't half bad. I look at my watch and it appears to be eleven o'clock. A pleasant chat, a light lunch, a brief nap, and it's five in the afternoon. For years I have been convinced that indolence is the most devastating of all vices and that it is quite as bad to break into one's schedule as it is to break any or all of the Ten Commandments. So today I have the delightful feeling of having committed a great sin without having to assume any moral responsibility for the dereliction. The doctor's to blame, and parties to the crime are my friends and relatives.

Also, I have escaped the clutches of my greatest enemy—the clock.

I have a friend who is paid very highly for his work and who therefore works on such a close schedule he can tell you the time of day to the minute any time you ask him. As I think back over the past few years, I remember that I, too, was the willing slave of the clock—twelve minutes for this, six to catch the train, nine and a half for an errand with the other half for a phone call. And so it went.

Now my enemy is dead, or perhaps he's only sleeping. I recall hearing a few years ago of a "phony war" which later blossomed into considerable of a scrap. And I suppose that my enemy will have me by the nape of the neck pretty soon. But at least until that time I can call myself a free man.

"I LIKE YOUR TOWN"

Note—The fact that visitors to your city like it, as is emphasized in the following comments handed us by one who has had the opportunity to spend several months here, should be gratifying to our people and cause us to strive even harder at all times to make visitors realize that we really live up to our city's slogan of "Our Greenville, Yours If You Come."

There have been folks who came to Greenville, stayed briefly and made their departure without a proper appreciation of the town. It is their loss that they did not stay longer. A visitor is writing this. A visitor who has been here before, all too briefly. But this time he is grateful that he had the opportunity to stay long enough to find out what made Greenville tick.

First, there is the Tar River, winding in its banks, on its way to the sea. Then the gracious undercurrent of hospitality that only Eastern Carolina knows how to express. The Park following the boundaries of E. C. T. C., provides just enough contour to make a mountaineer feel at home. And Sheppard Memorial Library gives real evidence of the spirit of Greenville. "Seek and ye shall find" has been always a good admonition. Greenville and Sheppard Memorial are good places to start seeking, not for a moment forgetting the Churches that bless the town with their active presence. Greenville is a good place to live and if

This Isn't What I Ordered

Cherry Hill is any index, it is a good place to die. Comment has been made of the lack of crosses in North Carolina cemeteries. No criticism of this sort can be made of Cherry Hill. The naturally beautiful site has been dignified and glorified by the love of those left behind to carry on. And how they carry on welcoming newcomers, making them feel at home, military and civilian alike. Accepting the challenge that war has forced upon them without qualm, bearing public and private burdens and in some instances tragic grief without complaint.

This visitor has found out not only what motivates Greenville citizens to be the gracious folks they are but in his all too brief stay has found out what it takes to make a town.

WASHINGTON IN WARTIME

By JACK STINNETT

Washington—Well, it's happened again. The capital of the United States is changing "mayors" or perhaps I should say "co-mayors."

Sen. Pat McCarran, of Nevada, is quitting his job as chairman of the Senate district committee cold to take over the chairmanship of the Senate Judiciary committee, vacated by the death of Sen. Frederick Van Nuys.

This is, of course, in line with the Congressional policy of no member ever holding chairmanships of two committees. The members of both chambers hasten to throw off the burden of helping to manage the national capital. I'm waiting for the day when some senator says he can't take the District committee chairmanship because he's chairman of the library committee, or some House member turns it down for chairmanship of the committee on disposition of executive papers.

The point is that there are no votes in the District of Columbia, and no member of Congress can win an iota on polling day by citing his record as chairman of the district committee. Don't blame the members of Congress. The fault is the voting public's, which apparently doesn't give even one of those two whoops how its capital is run.

As a result a few disinterested members succeed to the job because they have nothing better to do and except for a few half-hearted gestures are willing to let the three presidentially-appointed commissioners go on mismanaging district affairs. It has been going on now for 70 or 80 years, as a result of which Washington is a beautiful example of how a city should not be run.

The next "mayor" on the Senate side probably will be Sen. Theodore G. "That Man" Bilbo, of Mississippi, but don't expect him to show any of his old Mississippi zip in straightening out the district's tangled affairs. Unless he gets stuck with the job he won't stick around any longer than McCarran did, or Sen. Robert R. Reynolds (now chairman of the military affairs committee), or Sen. William H.

King before him, to mention only the last three-year crop.

On the other hand, a lot should be said for Rep. Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia. In spite of the fact that he serves on four other important committees, he has strung along with his chairmanship of the House district committee for four years.

Of the Washington stories I have heard lately, I like the one about the dashing young capital widow, who was stopped by a cabinet member in the crush of a wartime tea. "Well," said the C. M., "I see you have been getting plenty of diplomatic attention."

"What do you mean?" asked the young lady.

"Every time I have seen you this afternoon, you have been talking to six ambassadors and two ministers," he explained.

The young woman looked honestly puzzled. "Six ambassadors and two ministers. I don't remember them. Who were they?"

"Tony Biddle," said the C. M. and walked off snickering at his own wit, because Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, U. S. representative to most of the governments in exile, is just exactly that.

gress had in mind. Thus the very complication of the law is a cinch to make the forms complicated. But critics think they might be less complicated if the Internal Revenue Department experts got closer to a down-to-earth, scientific basis.

Congress is talking now about simplifying the tax laws and this should be a tremendous help to the internal revenue experts in making up the forms. Those laws are so involved that in 1940 the treasury put out an 850-page book of regulations to guide the deputy collectors when they got stuck.

But the laws changed so much between 1940 and 1943 that the treasury had to revise completely its regulations and issue another guide book, this time with more than 1,200 pages.

This year between 10,000 and 15,000 deputy collectors will help Americans make out their income tax forms at the various internal revenue offices around the country. But probably only a small percentage of them will be experts.

The rest will be persons who have had 3 or 4 days' drilling in making out income tax forms. The rest of the year—outside this tax-rush season—they have various collecting jobs for the Revenue Department.

If they make a mistake in helping you, you can't use that for an alibi if, later you are called upon to make an adjustment. The Internal Revenue Department doesn't have to delegate anyone to help you. That's your job and your responsibility—filling out your tax forms.

The help you get is a courtesy from the department. Many of those deputy collectors are new in the service—the department has lost 4,500 men to the armed services—and are doing the best they can.

Americans Seize . . .

from positions they still hold in the Marshalls. American bombing has ruined their air fields.

While planes were smashing Eniwetok, other American aircraft heavily bombed the airfield on Engebis islet, the hangar area on Parry islet, Ujelang atoll, and other enemy installations.

To reach Ujelang, the navy planes had to reach out almost to the Caroline islands. Ujelang is midway between Eniwetok and Ponape and can be classified in either the Marshalls or the Carolines.

At the same time, the navy said the Ujae and Utrik atolls in the Marshalls, not previously reported raided, had been hit by navy planes last Saturday.

District Governor Felicitates Lions

District Governor Sam Alford of Hendersonville at the weekly supper meeting of the Lions' Club at the high school cafeteria last night praised the Greenville club for outstanding increase in membership since he assumed office and securing more than its quota of members during the Melvin Jones membership drive in January. He installed and presented Lion emblems to three new members, Leon Willis, Sam Winchester and A. C. Lochman. President Godfrey Oakley presided.

Wither Harvey introduced District Governor Alford and deputies Jesse A. Jones of Kinston, H. A. Dupree of Raleigh and Secretary E. L. Irvin of Hendersonville. Other guests of the club were Jack W. Teel, Jr. and Dennis Fleming, junior Lion.

The meeting was one of the best of the year, with fun and good fellowship prevailing. Tail Twister Zack VanDyke functioned efficiently and contributed much to the pleasure of the meeting.

Ruritan Club Will Meet Winterville

By CHESTER WALSH

The Ruritan Club will hold a regular supper meeting at the Community building in Winterville tonight at 7:30. President Pete Hummick will preside. A special program has been arranged. Program chairman J. H. Mobley's offer to forward to the persons telling the name of "goat meat" is still open. If deer is venison, sheep is mutton and calf is veal, what's the name of goat meat?" he asked. The membership of the Winterville Ruritan Club is made up of farmers, business and professional men. It is one of the outstanding clubs in the Virginia-Carolina Ruritan district. At the recent Ruritan national convention in Richmond, Va., the club received considerable publicity in the newspapers for its activities. T. Ray Oglesby of Winterville, widely known tobacco auctioneer and a former president of the club, was elected district governor of North Carolina Ruritan clubs.

Rev. T. M. Grant Speaks Rotarians

Rev. T. M. Grant of Rocky Mount, a former pastor of Jarvis Memorial Methodist church, guest speaker at the Rotary club's weekly supper session at the Rotary building last night, gave an interesting and informative compendium of history concerning events since World War I and the beginning of the present conflict. He paid tribute to the lamented President Woodrow Wilson and his vision of a better world during the arrangement of a lasting peace that was made temporary by the activities of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge and others in the United States Congress.

"We will have to win this war, but we are in one world and we should keep hatred out of our souls," Mr. Grant said. "The Good Samaritan who set such a good example in the long ago acted not as a Greek, or Roman or any other nationality, but simply as a man who loved his fellow-man and cherished his welfare," the speaker said.

Out-of-town guests were Chaplain Calhoun of the Greenville Marine Air Training station, Capt. Howard Wilson of Walter Reed hospital, Washington, Lieut. Judson H. Blount, Jr., Frank Wooten of this city and Rev. E. L. Moser of Rocky Mount.

Farmville Rotarians present were J. J. Morgan, Dr. Paul Jones, W. A. McAdams, Edwin Coates, Lewis Creech and Curtis Flanagan.

Bride of Saturday

Mrs. Harold Gray Sugg of Key West, Fla., who before her marriage to L. Sugg on Saturday, February 12, in the First Presbyterian Church, Miami Beach, Fla., was Miss Mary Jane Nesbitt of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Miami Beach.

Lopacinski-Porter.
The wedding of Miss Little Hazel Porter and Leo Joseph Lopacinski was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents near Ayden, Sunday afternoon, February sixth at five o'clock. The home was decorated throughout with winter greens, white gladioli and carnations. In the living room, where the vows were spoken, tall baskets of fern and gladioli stood at either end of the altar, which was improvised before a decoration of twenty-one candles.

Preceding the ceremony, Mrs. William Calvin Stokes, wearing a dress of beige crepe and a shoulder corsage of red rosebuds, rendered a program of piano music. Miss Mimi Tripp, soloist, sang "Indian Love Call" and "I Love You Truly." The traditional wedding marches were used.

The candles were lighted by Maynard and Robert Porter, brothers of the bride.

The bride entered from the hallway with her father and was met at the altar by the groom, Rev. C. B. Mansburn, pastor of the First Christian Church of Farmville, officiating, using the impressive ring ceremony, during which Schuman's "Trauerzeit" was softly played. The bride chose for her wedding costume an eye-catching model of brown wool with accessories of the same color. Her corsage was an orchid.

The bride's mother wore a dress of black crepe and her flowers were red roses.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Dewey Porter of near Ayden. She received her education in the Pitt county schools. She has been employed for the past several months by Saslow's in Greenville.

Mr. Lopacinski is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Lopacinski of Chicago, Ill. He received his education in the Chicago schools and before volunteering for service with the United States Marine Corps in 1940, was employed by the Argo Corn Products Refining Company. A former member of the first paratroop battalion, he received his training at New River. He now holds a Purple Heart for wounds received in the South Pacific. The President's citation for meritorious service in the same area. He was medically discharged in July, 1943.

Following the ceremony, the bride's parents entertained informally in the dining room. Here, candlelight and an open log fire furnished soft radiance for the occasion. Miss Mary Rouse assisted the bride in cutting the cake, while Miss Little Lee Venters and Pauline McLawhorn served punch. Miss Eloise Porter, only sister of the bride, served salted nuts and mints. Later in the evening the bride and groom left for a short wedding trip. They will leave February 15 to make their in Chicago.

Wolf-Quinn.
Mr. and Mrs. John H. Quinn of 1302 Washington street, announce the marriage of their daughter, Irma Louise, to Private Charles H. Wolf of the Marine Corps, in the Eighth Street Christian Church, at 8 p. m., on Saturday, February 12, Rev. H. G. Haney officiating.

Fvt. Wolf is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur M. Wolf of Baltimore, Md., and is now stationed at the Greenville air base.

The couple are residing at the home of Mrs. Ward Moore Tripp on West Eighth street.

At Roswell Air Field.
Roswell Army Air Field, Roswell, N. M., Feb. 15.—Second Lieutenant Thomas E. Dall is now taking bombardier training at this Army Air Forces Training Command station, having recently completed a course in navigation at Selman Field, La.

He is the son of Mr. Titus Dall, Lake Forest, Wilmington, N. C., and is a former student of the Greenville High School.

American Home Department.
One of the most outstanding meetings of the American Home Department of the Woman's Club was held on Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. B. F. Bullard.

The chairman, Mrs. Arthur B. Corey, presided. She opened the meeting with the poem, "So Long as There are Homes," which was followed by "The Housewife's Prayer" by Florence Reddaway.

Thirty-five members answered to roll call. The department was delighted to have Mrs. H. R. Goodall and Mrs. Burr Patchell as guests.

A report from Mrs. John Warner urged club women to continue to work for the sale of "E" bonds in order to complete the $400,000 for the bomber which they hope to name "Miss Greenville."

Mrs. C. C. Hilton reminded those present that only a few paid-up memberships were needed for the American Home Department to become 100 per cent.

Mrs. L. E. Bell introduced Mrs. Robert Humber, who spoke in a most charming manner on the subject "The French Home." Mrs. Humber took her listeners on a day's routine in a French home. She said that, although women in France do not vote, they exercise a great influence through their homes.

She brought out the fact that there are no feminine clubs in France and the women enjoy concerts, lectures and opera instead. It was indeed a treat to hear Mrs. Humber as she noted the contrast between American and French homes.

Hostesses for the afternoon were Mesdames D. M. Clark, Guy Evans, G. C. Honeycutt and Edward Ricks. They served tea with sandwiches, salted nuts and cookies.—Reported.

The snowshoe rabbit got its name because it has extra large hind legs and feet which leave tracks like snowshoes.

Women in the Church

by Mary Fowler

Students of Wellesley College, which has long had a "big sister" relationship to the missionary institution, Yenching College for Women in Feiping, China, recently made a special gift of $5,000 to the sister that has suffered because of the war conditions in China. This gift will be used by the Yenching authorities to give medical and dental care to the low-paid junior members of the staff, for emergency hospitalization for the students, and for extra milk and eggs for a large group of the students who are under normal because of the soaring of prices of all foodstuffs.

Church women throughout the United States are being urged by Miss Amy Ogden Welcher, president of the United Council of Church Women, 156 Fifth Ave., New York 10, to support the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration and to write their Congressmen immediately, urging that funds be made available for this united undertaking.

"The compassion of Christ compels his followers today to meet the staggering needs of suffering humanity," says Miss Welcher. "Christian forces have had much to do with the establishment of UNRRA for the purpose of feeding the needy thousands throughout the world. Selfishness and distrust can even yet withhold the loaves and fishes from the hungry people of the earth."

The average earnings of 2,080,883 male wage earners in Canada in the census year of 1941 was $998, as compared with $927 for the 1931 census.

Card of Thanks.

"Hats off to Studebaker for cars that stand up in wartime"

SAYS W. M. Byrd, engineer on a U. S. Navy job at Bay City, Michigan: "My hat's off to Studebaker. You're certainly right when you say the Studebaker Champion is engineered to save an owner money and built to withstand hard punishment."

"I know. I've owned three Champions. The one I'm now driving, a 1941 model, has 31,000 miles on it and its tires look good for 30,000 miles more."

"My two previous Champions gave me remarkable mileage over rugged West Virginia mountain roads."

"On the three Champions, my total maintenance bills, outside of proper servicing, did not exceed $40."

Mr. Byrd's experience, after two years of war, is matched by that of many other Studebaker owners.

Phantoms To Meet New Bern Bears In High School Gym

By DAVID WHICHAIR
Playing their next to the last game of the season tonight the Greenville High School Phantoms will meet the New Bern Bears in the local gym at 8 o'clock.

The Greens walloped the Bears 29-22 in a rough and tumble tilt played in New Bern Friday night and will be out for another win tonight. Players on the local squad stated that the game was the roughest one they had played this season and there should be plenty of excitement in store for the tilt tonight.

In yesterday's practice Coach Charlton scrimmaged his first stringer against the second team who used the kind of defense and type of play that the New Berners set before the Phantoms in their last meeting and the Greens are expected to be in top shape when the evening whistle blows tonight.

Phantoms starters will be Fleming and Harrington at guards, Posey and Furell at forwards and Leggett at center. The Greens enter their basketball season Friday when they meet the Marine team of the local airport.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

New York, Feb. 15.—(AP)—If it's free, what good is it? ... That's a question raised by Paul Krichell, veteran Yankee scout, who argues that baseball clubs have hurt themselves by admitting too many wits to games without charge.

His theory is that the kids grow up to regard baseball as something they see free and they just won't pay for it. "Branch Rickey thought he had a good idea when he started the 'knothole gangs' in St. Louis," says Krichell, "but I can remember when he used to draw good crowds there and they don't draw them now."

Marine Bill Veck, the Milwaukee Brewers' president, led his platoon over the obstacle course at San Diego, Calif. ... Obviously the obstacles weren't set up by Minor League Boss W. G. Bramham, who stopped Bill cold last December.

All-Around Guy
The football players have just signed J. D. Langley, a tall 215-pound tackle from Chattanooga university who has been coaching at Bremen, Ga. ... Langley looks like a wrestler, teaches art, writes poetry and has had one of his songs published. ... "Now if he can just play football," adds Coach Pete Cawthon, "we will have a colorful player."

One-Minute Sports Page
Add Richmond, Va. to the list of clubs with which the Giants will have working agreements this season. ... Hank Armstrong has located a fresh opponent for his February 29 outing at Des Moines—Jackie Byrd, who comes from Elytheville, Ark., and now lives in Los Angeles. ... Jimmy Garrison, who'll face Armstrong at Kansas City February 23, and Ralph Zannelli, whose turn comes at Boston March 24, both were knockout victims of Hank when he really was "Henry the Hammer." ... Colleague Bill King reports that American Hockey league owners are urging Al Stuphin to file a Stanley cup challenge on behalf of his Cleveland club. ... The Barons hardly figure to beat the Canadiens or Red Wings, but the National leaguers would find it hard to brush them off completely.

Service Dept.
Bob Herick, who played end on Greeley (Col.) State College football team six or eight years ago and later coached at Paonia, Colo.

was a chief specialist in the navy's "Gene Tunney" physical training setup at the time of the North African landings. Bob was awarded the Navy Cross for heroism during those operations and now, as an ensign, is an instructor in scout and reconnaissance raid operations at the Fort Pierce, Fla., Amphibious Training base. ... Soldiers in Iceland soon will get a look at the Georgia Tech-Tulsa Sugar Bowl movie, which won't make them a bit warmer. ... The 25-mile travel limit for army air forces technical training command athletes was lifted to permit five star boxers from Keesler Field, Miss., Pvt. Jim Mercer of Savannah, Corp. Val White of Tiltonville, O., Pvt. Claude Epps of Philadelphia, Pvt. William Davis of Newark, N. J., and Pvt. Jesse Dean of Detroit to fight in the St. Louis Golden Gloves tourney this week.

Jimmy Dempsey Is Now A Major

With his promotion to major this past week, James C. Dempsey, Jr., of Wilson, a former student at the college here, became one of the youngest majors in the United States Army, according to a news report sent out yesterday from his home town.

Major Dempsey, who served abroad as a Flying Fortress pilot, began his foreign service about a year and a half ago as a second lieutenant. He has won not only rapid promotion, but also the DFC and Air Medal.

At present he is an air inspector with the Second Air Command with headquarters in Colorado.

Dan Worthington Died Early Today

Dan Worthington, 74, died early this morning at the home of his son, Milton Worthington, near Rountree's.

Funeral services will be held at the home Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. W. H. Brunson, of Rev. R. L. Wilson of Ayden, will officiate. Burial will be in the Jackson family cemetery near Ayden.

Car And Truck In Collision In City

A car driven by F. L. Keck of New Tazewell, Tenn., was considerably damaged when it collided with a Marine Airport truck driven by Pfc. J. O. Higgins, Keck was considerably shaken up. The front end of his car was wrecked. Lee Hawkins of this city owns the car Keck was driving.

Authorities ordered the drivers to appear in Police Court Friday morning unless they can adjust their differences. The collision occurred in the center of the intersection, officers stated.

terminus for rail lines from Germany through the Brenner Pass.

The Fortress bombs sent great plumes of gray and black smoke spiraling above the Benedictine monastery, blotting it from sight, with some of the explosives hitting the abbey itself, and others crashing upon German positions nearby on the top of the hill.

Indicative of the bloody fighting in the Cassino sector, 240 German dead were found in the Mt. Castellone area north of Cassino. The Germans yesterday asked for a three-hour truce in order to bury their dead.

Patriotic activity and artillery exchanges still marked this main Fifth army front. Snowdrifts restricted activity on the Legnina army front.

In the invasion area, a relative lull in the fighting continued with mainly patrol actions, three days after a major German effort to pinch off the beachhead had ended in what a headquarters officer termed a costly failure.

The Nazis still clung tenaciously to factory buildings in the Carro-ceto area above Anzio, buildings which have changed hands four times.

Eight German planes attempted to strafe troops in the bridgehead, but were driven off by anti-aircraft fire that downed two of them.

Four-engine American bombers hit six rail yards while medium bombers attacked the Prugia rail yards, and port facilities in Leghorn.

In all the Allies flew 1,500 sorties yesterday, and destroyed 21 enemy planes, while losing one. The Germans put 60 sorties into the air.

Russians Narrow ...

Russian pressure against Pskov was "increasing hourly," that Vitebsk in upper White Russia, was under constant Russian artillery fire and that Red army troops were attacking southwest of Krivoli Rog, from city 150 miles below the Cherkasy pocket.

Berlin also asserted that Luga, which fell into Russian hands on Sunday, was abandoned without a fight in order to shorten Axis lines. Moscow, however, declared it was taken by storm and the Russian communiqué said enormous war stocks were captured from the fleeing enemy.

Postponed
J. T. Welch, city sanitarian, stated today that due to laborers disappointing him at the last moment, it has been necessary to postpone the rat campaign, stating that the campaign will be put on just as soon as he is able to secure sufficient labor.

He expressed regret that the campaign could not be carried out according to the first plan. He requested that all citizens make proper disposal of their garbage in order that the campaign, when put on, may meet with the fullest success.

FLIGHT FROM LOVE

by JOHN C. FLEMING LOIS EBY

Chapter 11

Julie began throwing off her evening clothes with swift, ecstatic gestures. She caught them and hung them up as Julie slid into the rough denim and shirt.

"The home town flame, eh?" she said.

Julie nodded. "He was looking for me," she said softly. "Ran into us tonight at Earl Carroll's. He's at Brady Field."

Suddenly she whirled about and caught Kay around the waist to dance a wild jig around the small bedroom.

Kay finally pulled to a stop, laughing and gasping. "You do have it bad, sister!" she cried, shaking her blonde head wisely. "Better come out and get a cup of cocoa before we start. I'll bet you didn't eat anything tonight."

Julie shook her head. "I couldn't eat, anything now," she declared. She gave a dismayed scream as she slipped on her watch.

"I've made you late! You shouldn't have waited."

Kay came in from the kitchen with their packed lunch boxes. "I called Jack Parker," she said. "A pal from engineering. He's stopping by."

They were slipping into their Absently she listened to Jack Parker talk of his work. Nothing definite, of course. Engineers were always in a hurry to get on with any information. But he was in a glow of enthusiasm over the blueprints of the new bomber.

"Going to be the next thing with wings attached!" The way we've shaved off wind resistance—like a rocket—and handles!"

Kay laughed at Julie's puzzled face. "Never mind," she murmured. "You'll get used to him. After a while your mind just automatically throws enough extra words in the slots to make sense of it."

"Haven't—time to talk—for years," Jack threw the car around the corner and in the gate, slid in place in the twentieth row and switched off the ignition.

He started toward the door of engineering at a dog trot, waving back at the girls.

"Take you home?"

"No!" called Kay. She laughed as she and Julie started toward their workroom. "There's a man who loves his work. Darn good engineer too."

"What department is he in?" Julie asked.

"Aerodynamics," Kay told her. "Wouldn't you just go if he could talk. You just can't understand the stuff. He graduated from Dartmouth and—"

"He did?"

Julie's blank surprise amused Kay. "I think," she teased, "you still believe everyone around here is a reformed ditchdigger."

Julie laughed as they stopped to show their badges. "Well, people in glass houses—" she murmured.

For once she didn't mind the thought—or the horde of workers she was caught up in as they made their way into the high-ceilinged factory.

She hung up her coat in the long line of coats that stretched halfway across the building and put her lunchpail on its place.

She went to the tool crib for her rivet-gun and bucket of rivets. Her teammate, who bucked rivets was waiting at their jug. Julie plugged in the rivet-gun and started to work, but her mind was a warm pool of memories.

She and Dave coming back to Melbridge on the same college train at Christmas—eight rides and club dances—the New Year's party. Dave kissing her under the mistletoe—And Summers—long, lazy hot days at the lake, speedboat riding between dances on the moonlit pavilion—riding—swimming—laughing—

"That's not good,"

The voice jarred her out of the warm picture. The lead girl was examining her work, her face tight with disapproval. "You'll have to do it over again. And this time—"

For one instant, Julie was ready to throw down the exasperating piece of work. What did the slight change matter anyhow? This was ridiculous—her sitting here trying to please this stranger with the deep-wrinkled brow.

Then a warm content swept through her irritation. She listened obediently to instructions. What did it matter for a night or so?

Chapter 12

Julie was crying and she didn't know quite why. For the last three days all the joy and hope seemed to be squeezed out of her. She went through the routine of everyday living with a certain vague detachment. Nothing seemed to matter. Only yesterday when the telephone had rung and for a breathless instant she had thought it might be David, did her spirits lift momentarily and then fall again when she heard the voice of a woman. It was Marek's secretary. He had been called back to Washington suddenly on business. Would phone her the end of the week.

"We'll be back by eleven," Kay had said.

"Better change your mind and come along," Jack had called cheerily from the hall.

"No thanks," Julie had answered. "I've some letters to write."

They'd gone then and the apartment had seemed so miserably quiet. Julie had gotten out her stationery and written "Dear Mother,"—and that was all. She crossed the room then and dropped into a chair. Bit by bit she pieced together every scrap of conversation she'd caught with David. She tried desperately to remember every shading in his voice, every expression that had crossed his face. She had it then. He'd heard from home about losing his money. It was pity that brought him to look her up.

And she'd been a fool to even think he still cared for her. Now she would probably never hear from him again. He'd seen her with Marek—heard the plans for her future.

It was warm outside and the door to the balcony stood open. A faint breeze moved the curtains and a symphony of crickets came from the vacant lot next door. Julie moved back to the table and tried to go on with her letter but the words wouldn't come. For an instant she dropped off to sleep. She didn't hear the key turn in the lock.

"I thought only people in their dotage slept in their chairs," Kay laughed.

Jack was bright eyed and cheerful.

"You missed a great show," he said. "Boy, the Lana Turner might not have everything but what she doesn't have she'll never need."

"Get your letters written?" Kay asked looking at the pen and ink still on the table.

"No," Julie could feel her face redden. "Somehow I just couldn't think of anything tonight."

"You should have gone to the show with us," Jack said.

"Maybe I should have," Julie admitted.

Kay sat down on the ottoman directly in front of Julie and took her hands in her own.

"Listen, honey, Jack and I have been talking about you all the way home. You've simply got to get out and have more fun. This factory work is hard and tiring and you have to have some diversion."

"I—I don't know what's been the matter with me lately. I haven't felt like myself."

"You need some fun, that's all," Jack said. "And we're taking you out tache at the time.

"I lived in Japan until I was 18 months old and later returned when I was eleven and lived there about two years," Commander Cotten said. "Japan's beautiful, but I didn't like the people. I've enjoyed this return visit, however, and I expect to enjoy more of them soon."

Lt. Commander Cotten is the grandson of the late Col. and Mrs. Robert R. Cotten of Pitt county.

Dr. Hildrup Speaks At Vesper Service

Carrying out the theme of February, "Brotherhood Month," Dr. R. L. Hildrup, of the history faculty of the College spoke Sunday night at the Y. W. C. A.-Y. M. C. vesper service on "Christian Brotherhood in the United States."

Saturday Lewis of Farmville conducted the devotional and introduced Dr. Hildrup, who began with the question: "Is the spirit of Christian brotherhood growing stronger in this country?"

In his preliminary explanation of what Christian brotherhood is, Dr. Hildrup first pointed out certain misconceptions of the term which are common. It does not mean necessarily equality of man, he said. Indeed, much of our science and education grows out of recognition of the wide differences among individuals in physical, mental, and spiritual capacity. The Bible recognizes the fact that there is no such equality, he said, citing the parable of the talents.

Pointing out further that not much can be found in the Bible against slavery and against monarchy, he commented, the people who say equality is not an essential of brotherhood have good grounds for saying so.

Nor is Christian brotherhood a paternalistic social order dealing out work and food and freedom from struggle and effort. Christians throughout the centuries have felt called by God not to a life of safety and comfort, but to dare to risk their lives for a master greater than they, said the speaker.

"The Christian religion is a challenging religion," he said, "and great and strong personalities are made by living lives of trial and conflict to burn out the dross and make their children of God."

Then turning to what Christian brotherhood is, Dr. Hildrup said that it is a recognition that all men are of infinite value in the eyes of God and can become the children of God. It is, also, he declared a spirit of good will—a willingness to help another bear his burden so long as he needs help, but not long enough to weaken him, a willingness to give up anything to bring another into fuller realization of the love and goodness of God.

He then discussed the tendencies that seem to him to be working against brotherhood. One of the evidences that Christian brotherhood is not growing as it should, he declared, is development of a class consciousness, as is evidenced in the bitterness between labor and capital, in the high taxing of people of ability and initiative to take care of hangers-on, and in the making of laws favoring those who shout the loudest and bring the most pressure to bear.

Other hatreds stirred up, such as race hatreds, war hatreds, he characterized as opposed also to brotherhood.

"How can we expect to establish a world brotherhood if we do not have the spirit of Christian brotherhood in ourselves," he asked in closing.

Pearl Arnold of Dover was pianist.

Concerning Books

in the SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

Sidelights on Newer Books.

A number of the newer books are making the headlines a second time because of interesting sidelights concerning them. Two rated very special write-ups in every magazine in which they were reviewed. They were "Good Night, Sweet Prince" by Gene Fowler, and "Persons and Places" by George Santayana. Both strange to say are non-fiction, one being biography, the other autobiography. The title, "Good Night, Sweet Prince" is the salutation that was placed on John Barrymore's tomb by his devoted brother. Santayana's memoirs is the biography of a spirit even though it is written about "Persons and Places."

It is predicted that John Roy Carlson, author of "Under Cover," will be one of the key witnesses when Prosecutor Rogge goes to work on a new round of indictments against American seditionists. His findings as a secret Anti-Pactist agent were considerable and promise to provide an important piece of evidence.

Both authors of that side-splitting book, "Love at First Flight," are flying high. Charles Spalding is flight officer at Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., while Otis Carney is a lieutenant in the service group, attached to the Marine wing Pacific fleet.

Daniel A. Poling, editor of Christian Herald, has selected "The Apostle, a Novel Based on the Life of St. Paul," by Shalom Asch, to head the list of the first nine books of 1943.

"Taps for Private Tussie," by Jesse Stewart, is receiving top honors for a top book, some of them being the Thomas Jefferson Southern Award, selected by the Book-of-the-Month Club. Digest rights sold to Ladies Home Journal, and picture rights bought by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Gwen Bristow's greatest success and her fourth novel, "Tomorrow is Forever" is soon to be made into a feature motion picture.

Last year's most significant best-seller was Lloyd C. Douglas' "The Robe," a story of Christ's impression on earth.

Enjoys Return Visit To Japan

By NORMAN BELL

Aboard U. S. Destroyer, North Pacific, February 4—(Delayed)—(AP)—Looking back toward fading hills of Paramushiro, just after the navy bombardment, the executive officer of this ship remarked:

"I was born in Japan. It's the first time I've been back in a long time, but I expect it won't be the last."

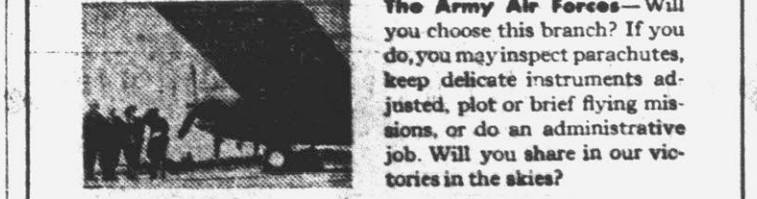

The officer was Lt. Comdr. John H. Cotten of Chapel Hill, N. C.

He said he was born at Karuzawa, a summer resort near Tokyo, in 1913. His father, Capt. Lyman Cotten, for whom one of the navy's destroyers is named, was naval att-

Broughton Says GOP Making Gains

Philadelphia, Feb. 15—(AP)—North Carolina may line up behind Wendell Willkie if President Roosevelt does not run for a fourth term, says J. Melville Broughton, Democratic governor of the southern state.

"The Republicans have made gains and they are the beneficiaries of the political backswing today," Broughton told fellow alumni of Wake Forest College.

It would not surprise him, he added, if Willkie and New York Governor Thomas E. Dewey were stalemated and Governor John W. Bricker of Ohio finally received the nomination.
