U. S. Bombers Resume Daylight Raids With Smash At Targets In Western Germany And French 'Rocket Gun' Coast; RAF Blasts Four Aircraft Factories

By GLADWIN HILL
London, March 11—(AP)—American Fortresses and Liberators resumed their record bombing mission after a full of one day and struck a heavy blow at western Germany and the Pas-de-Calais coast of France today a few hours after the RAF's Lancasters made a decision night attack on four factories in France.

The new assault on the French coast where Prime Minister Churchill has said the Nazis were readying rockets and robot planes to bombard England was the 15th attack there by American heavy bombers since the day before Christmas.

These targets on the nearby northern French coast have now been hammered by Allied planes on 11 days out of the last three months.

The American bombers thundered out after only a day's interval in the campaign which has now taken them on a scorching tour of German targets, including Berlin, on 10 of the last 13 days—an unprecedented streak of activity for this theater. Eight of these attacks were against Germany itself.

Neither the targets on the coast nor in western Germany was specifically identified.

The American attack on western Germany was the second quick dose of bombs for that section of the Reich, the RAF's Mosquitos having made another of their incursions there during the night.

The Air Ministry said three aircraft factories and a small bearing factory in central and southern France were hit in a "bomber's moon" operation in the continuing campaign to knock out Germany's aircraft production facilities. The specific objectives were not named.

The Air Ministry said one aircraft was lost.

It was the RAF's fourth sizable mission this week and the fifth in a new campaign in which seven air-plant plants and two big railroad centers have been bombed.

These raids are capitalizing on a period of bright nights which are excellent for pinpointing targets but which are not good for the concealment required for deep penetrations of the continent.

On the night before the four-engined Lancasters hit an aircraft factory near Marseille in southern France.

American fighters again escorted the fortresses and Liberators in today's strikes.

Says Neutrals Must Take Sides

Stockholm, March 11—(AP)—The Stockholm Tidningen, commenting on the U. S. request to Elie to remove German and Japanese consular and diplomatic representatives, declared editorially today that sooner or later "western neutrals" must align themselves with the Allies whether they like it or not.

"As the war draws nearer to its end and the political pressure of the Allies is going to take place, that's the key—barring a long drawn out war or a collapse of German morale. However, the Red army's sensational successes in the Ukraine have created some mighty interesting possibilities.

The Germans themselves have indicated worry over one contingency. This is a cross-channel invasion while the whole Nazi right wing in Russia, totaling nearly half a million men, is in dire jeopardy.

Hitler, has been figuring on withdrawing troops from Russia to defend France. But supposing the western Allies should strike soon—April? The Fuehrer would be hard pushed to get help from his eastern battle line.

One argument against such an

SOVIET ARMIES PUSH FORWARD

Offensives Shatter German Lines On Three Sectors

London, March 11—(AP)—Three great Soviet armies, rolling forward through the mud and water of the southern Ukraine, have shattered German lines over a 500-mile front in a mammoth drive to clear the enemy from all southern Russia, Moscow dispatches reported today.

The drive was brought into sharp focus by yesterday's announcement that a third offensive had been launched in that area—by Marshal Ivan S. Konev's second Ukrainian army.

Moscow said his forces had broken through enemy defenses on a 100-mile line southwest of Cherkassy, killing 20,000 Germans, capturing 2,500 more and liberating more than 300 towns and villages, including pivotal stronghold of Uman less than 30 miles northwest of the Bug river.

Fourteen German divisions—approximately 150,000 men were routed in this five-day drive, the Russian communiqué said.

"The true scale of this German defeat can be judged from the huge quantities of trophies captured by our troops," the Soviet bulletin said.

"Weapons, equipment and military supplies were strewn on the whole course of the road from the Gulioi Tik river to the town of Uman. All the roads were packed with enemy tanks, self-propelled guns, armored troop carriers and trucks.

Konev's tremendous southern lunge, covering from 25 to 50 miles since last Monday, possibly spelled the doom of the enemy's Danube bend forces. Spearheads of his army, exploiting their success, were already driving the Germans back upon the Bug river line, further to the west, and clearing out German positions to the southeast in the direction of Kirovograd.

Yugoslav King Reaches London

London, March 11—(AP)—Yugoslavia's King Peter, it was officially announced, reached England today and Britain speculated as to whether Prime Minister Churchill or Dan Cudip was responsible for his coming.

Although Peter's arrival had been variously reported during the past 24 hours, the official announcement said he came by air, arriving here at 9 o'clock this morning. It was understood that plane difficulty enroute caused his arrival to be delayed.

His appearance in London strengthened indications of a mounting British determination to bring about unity among Yugoslav factions—probably under the fighting banners of Marshal Tito (Josip Broz) with King Peter remaining as head of the government.

However, there's another angle. Princess Alexandra of Greece, Peter's fiancée, is also in London, and upon the outcome of the king's visit may depend the answer as to whether the royal couple will marry in exile or wait for a post-war ceremony.

Red Marshal Zhukov's amazing drive, which threatens to destroy part of Nazi Marshal Von Manstein's army and drive the rest of it into Rumania, may give the Anglo-American Allies a chance to choose whether they will strike early, or wait until Russia's spring is past and the steppes are again suitable for all-out operations. Indeed, the Russian successes may so disrupt the Fuehrer's organization in Russia that he will be indefinitely prevented from moving many troops to France.

As a matter of fact, the Nazi dictator will be lucky if he doesn't suffer a huge disaster in the Ukraine. Still, we mustn't take a Nazi catastrophe for granted.

As the battle is now developing it wouldn't be surprising to see Von Manstein compelled to abandon defense of the southern Polish border and devote his energy to defending the gateway to the Balkans. This presumably would force the Nazis to shorten their entire line by pulling it back to central Poland.

This is one of the decisive engagements of the war.

Americans Take Up Positions On Los Negros Island

After their dash ashore from landing craft during the invasion of Los Negros island in the Admiralty group in the Pacific on February 23, American troops take up a position in the ruins of a Jap coconut shed hit during a pre-invasion naval gun bombardment. Occupation of Memoete air field on Los Negros put many important Jap bases within easy bombing range, such as Truk and Rabaul. (AP Wirephoto via official corps radio).

NEW GAINS IN SOUTH PACIFIC

Marines Capture Talamoa Airfield On New Britain

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, March 11—(AP)—Allied troops are advancing all around the Bismarck sea while the Japanese, withdrawing any luck, finally are trying to choke off at the source the daily air attacks on their dying base of Rabaul, New Britain.

The main Allied victory reported today by General Douglas MacArthur was the capture by U. S. Marines of the Talamoa airfield, and village, 170 miles from Rabaul, on the north New Britain coast.

U. S. soldiers were disclosed to have pushed ahead three and one-half more miles against Japanese opposition on Los Negros island in the strategic Admiralty group. Other advances along the northeast New Guinea coast above Sador put Allied forces nearer than ever to Madang.

Less strategically important than the Talamoa fighting, but more striking, was the Japanese effort to this late date to knock out the airfields used by Allied planes attacking Rabaul.

These airdromes, inside the Allied perimeter at Empress Augusta bay on Bougainville island in the northern Solomons, were shelled by Japanese artillery. Some shells hit the south end of the Piva fighter strip just as a formation of planes was landing. All planes escaped damage.

One Japanese shell, however, damaged an American field hospital but failed to hit any of its occupants.

The shelling brought a violent reaction against the Japanese. Allied planes blasted suspected gun positions with 50 tons of bombs.

There was no indication that the Bougainville fighting would have the slightest effect on the Rabaul air offensive.

Seek To Simplify Income Tax Returns

By FRANCIS J. KELLY
Washington, March 11—(AP)—Real hope that this year's income tax return headaches will be the last for 30,000,000 taxpayers was held out today by the treasury and heads of Congress' tax-writing committees.

Under a proposal outlined by Chairman George of the Senate Finance Committee, persons with annual incomes of $5,000 or less would not have to file returns at all. Wage and salary deductions would take care of all their tax.

George and Chairman Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee declared in a joint statement that every effort will be made to limit the new legislation to removing the complexities of the present laws.

Their Duty Is Clear

An Editorial

After many months of undercover rumors regarding the operation of East Carolina Teachers College here, the facts were brought to light yesterday when the Board of Trustees met in Raleigh to give attention to a report of State Auditors and members of the State Bureau of Investigation revealing that of $26,066.42 handled by Dr. Meadows, no satisfactory explanation had been given regarding $18,636.34 of the funds. After a hearing, described by impartial observers as a "Field Day for Dr. Meadows," the Board recessed until Tuesday morning, when it will meet here to give Dr. Meadows the opportunity to make good his assertion that he will explain the entire matter satisfactorily and clarify the whole thing.

It is not our intention to endeavor to acquit or convict Dr. Meadows in this column, but in the face of the facts revealed in the audit, despite organized support for Dr. Meadows mustered among the alumni of the college throughout the state even before the facts were revealed, as evidenced by yesterday's meeting, the members of the Board of Trustees, in the interest of the future of the college, must ask for Dr. Meadows' resignation.

We realize that there has been talk of friction at the college for some time, and it is apparent that every effort is to be made to blame all the present trouble on this friction and uncooperative attitude between the faculty and the college president. As we see it, the Board should do everything in its power to remove any friction and get the college organization on a smooth working basis, but to our way of thinking, the situation as it regards Dr. Meadows does not enter into this part of the picture.

Eire's Attitude Calls For Drastic Measures

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
Washington, March 11—(AP)—Drastic measures to safeguard Allied invasion preparations in Britain from Axis espionage were expected today to follow Prime Minister De Valera's refusal of an American request that Ireland oust German and Japanese diplomats accused of heading a spy ring.

The need for early, decisive action to keep enemy agents from further enlarging their knowledge of Allied plans for the second front assault on Europe was emphasized by an official statement that because of spy activities based on Ireland "not only the success of the operations but the lives of thousands of United Nations' soldiers are at stake."

The American case was set forth in a note made public by Secretary of State Hull last night in which De Valera was urged to expel all Axis diplomats and consular officials from his country.

At the same time the Irish leader here released the text of De Valera's reply, turning down the appeal. De Valera claimed Ireland's counter-spy methods were effective and asserted that no American lives would be lost "through any indifference or neglect of its duty" on the part of his country.

He also made two other main points: That expulsion of German and Japanese officers would be a first step toward going to war with the Axis, which his country is determined not to do; and that he had received assurances from the United States that it did not intend invading Ireland.

Thus for the first time it was officially revealed how gravely the Dublin government had viewed events of the past few weeks, during which the world knew only that Ireland had been swept by waves of invasion jitters.

Several further measures appear to be open to the United States and Britain, which had backed the American request to the limit.

1. Closing and fully guarding the border between Eire and Northern Ireland as an emergency military measure.

2. Breaking diplomatic relations with the Dublin government. This appeared to be the most improbable step of all since it usually creates more problems than it solves.

3. Clamping down on economic collaboration with Ireland. The country is an integral part of the British economic system and dependent entirely on British and American shipping.

SIX KILLED IN RICHMOND FIRE

Greenville Man Escapes From Burning Hotel

Richmond, Va., March 11—(AP)—Mrs. James Hubert Price, widow of the late governor of Virginia, was identified today as one of six victims of the disastrous fire in the Hotel Jefferson last night which also claimed the life of State Senator Aubrey G. Weaver, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

The identification was made by her son, James H. Price, Jr., at her funeral home. The former first lady of Virginia, who has lived in the hotel since shortly after the governor's death, wore a wedding ring with an inscription from her husband.

The room occupied by Mrs. Price was just down the hall from that occupied by Senator Weaver and adjutant of the Senator and Mrs. S. Floyd Landreth, of Galax, Va., who had a narrow escape when flames drove them to their bathroom until firemen could extinguish flames in the hallway.

The four other persons who met death in the fire were: Dorothy Gann, 24, Newark, N. J.; Jean Manfredi, about 24, Irvington, N. J.; J. W. Ross, sailor, Camp Peary, Va.

One unidentified woman. Nearly a score of guests were hospitalized and others treated at the scene for shock and smoke inhalation.

The hotel, crowded with members of the Virginia General Assembly was a scene of confusion as men and women rushed from their rooms or called for help when flames enveloped the fifth and sixth floors. Of undetermined cause, it apparently began in a linen closet. Damage was confined to the two floors.

Weaver, who was 62, was from Front Royal, Va., and was chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and a leading political figure in the state for many years.

Among those injured were Senator S. Floyd Landreth, of Galax. Landreth was driven to an adjoining bathroom by the flames and despite severe burns, succeeded in opening a window and directing attention of the firemen to flames on the sixth floor.

Two of the unidentified women victims were found in a bathroom and apparently had drawn a tub of water in some attempt to protect themselves from the intense heat.

Also injured in the fire were Delegate Edmund DeJarnette, of Hanover, face burner; Senator Harry Stuart, of Russell county, smoke.

Governor Colgate W. Darden, Jr., Lieutenant Governor William M. Tuck, Mayor Gordon B. Ambler of Richmond and other notables rushed to the hotel upon receiving word of the tragedy.

William F. Hutchison, of this city was among the guests, on the fifth floor of the hotel, who narrowly escaped death or serious injury. Mr. Hutchison escaped in his pajamas with only minor injuries consisting of singed hair and a cut foot.

Local Twins To Get Commissions

Leonard and James Briley, identical twins, graduates of Greenville High, class of 1942, will receive their commissions as second lieutenants and wings as pilots in the Army Air Forces at Spence Field, Moultrie, Ga. tomorrow morning. This pair of twins are exceedingly popular in Greenville being known by all for their sunny dispositions and unlimited energy. In high school they both made fine scholastic records, and in addition to their scholastic work found time to become members of the football, basketball and track teams, as well as dramatics and Student Council work. They always worked on Saturdays and during the summer months in order to have money for necessary expenses. At one time both of them worked in the same grocery store and what a time the customers had trying to keep straight which one was waiting on them. Some of the teachers in the high school never were able to tell them apart. Superintendent Rose said today that he was exceedingly proud of "the twins" and they represented the very best in the traditions of Greenville High and that they are typical of the fine patriotic spirit which has characterized Greenville High since the war started. They are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Briley of Greenville, Route 4.

Officers Return From New York

Patrolmen M. M. Ayscue and John R. Mobley have returned from New York City, where they were called as witnesses at a court martial trial of William David Lupton of Beaufort as an alleged deserter from the U. S. Army. Lupton was arrested on a farm near the city.

Made A Mistake

Lt. Mario Cornell of Cleveland, Ohio, piloted a U. S. fortress over Paris by mistake, but 'scotched' safely back to England upon learning his position. Last while on a Berlin raid, Cornell's craft finally came out of a cloud and he spotted the Eiffel Tower, much to his surprise — and relief. (AP Wirephoto).

NAZIS MOVE FROM BERLIN

German Government Reported Moved To Breslau

Naples, March 11—(AP)—Unofficial but trustworthy reports said today that Allied bombers had forced the Germans to move their capital from Berlin to Breslau, 175 miles to the southeast.

The move from bomb-battered Berlin began quietly several weeks ago and now most of the government functions are carried out at the new Silesian headquarters, it was said.

While a more difficult target than Berlin, Breslau itself is not out of reach of American and British long-range bombers, lying approximately 80 miles from Britain's coast and 670 miles from Poggia, airport in Italy. This is within range of flying fortresses, Liberators, Stirs. (Continued On Page Four)

Finland Awaits New Developments

Stockholm, March 11—(AP)—Several prominent members of the Finnish government are remaining in Helsinki for the week-end rather than taking their usual holiday in the country, it was learned today, leading some observers to believe that a development as to what the Finnish crisis was imminent.

The Aftonbladets Helsinki correspondent was able to report through a tight censorship that there were "several signs that Russia was trying to keep the way open for negotiations," but his dispatch gave no indications as to what the signs were. He reported, however, increased optimism among some Finns over the possibility of a peaceful solution.

Einstein Got Help On Income Report

Princeton, N. J., March 11—(AP)—He is world famous as a mathematician, but Professor Albert Einstein says he was forced to call in a tax expert to help him work out the complex income tax form.

Of his reaction to the income tax form he said last night, "this is a question too difficult for a mathematician. It should be asked of a philosopher." Einstein's theory of relativity is supposedly understood by only seven persons in the world.

Stock Market Awaits Invasion

Babson Park, Fla., March 11—Since the slight rise during the first part of January the stock market has moved within a close range. How soon will the market get out of its present rut? Will stocks have a tendency to move sideways, slide off, or can investors expect a decided advance? I am definitely bullish for the long-term. At the moment, however, the market is hesitatingly awaiting the invasion of the continent.

Invasion Summary

The "second front" is more apt to consist of four invasion spearheads, namely, at the Balkans, at southern France, at northern France and at Norway. Here, again, we run into uncertainties. The on-again, off-again invasion is a question which will take place. To all intent, the accelerated bombing of Germany is an invasion. In the end, however, it will be the man with the gun who will do the job. How many of these spearheads will be thrown back is unknown. The time factor is also unknown. This last may not even be settled upon by our high command.

However, the necessary troops and equipment are being rapidly massed. The day will surely come when orders will be given for the advance. We can expect more action in the stock market one way or another when this takes place. The enthusiasm generated by the news of a successful land invasion should move stock prices ahead. This first move must then be digested. The following course of the market for some little time may then be quite markedly affected by the success or failure of Allied progress in the various invasion theaters.

Current Factors Favorable For Rise

Prevalent good news would normally make stocks act well. For the most part, the tax bill favors investors. Results of the recent bond drive are gratifying. Some leading corporations have increased dividends. Annual reports show satisfactory results. Renegotiation is not unduly reducing previously reported profits. Money in circulation has reached astronomical heights. Loans on life insurance policies are extremely low. Household mortgages have been greatly reduced. Employment has been well maintained. Salaries and wages have continued high. Brokers loans are very low. (Continued on Page Two)

Bombers Smash At German Communication Of Florence For First Time; British Warships Shell Nazi-Held Island In Adriatic; Clark Says "All's Well"

By EDWARD KENNEDY
Allied Headquarters, Naples, Mar. 11—(AP)—Allied bombers, attacking Florence for the first time, smashed at rail targets in that city today, headquarters announced, after British warships operating in support of the Yugoslav guerrillas bombed towns on Korcula island.

These new blows were disclosed by Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark, back from inspection of his Fifth army beachhead, asserted "things are in good shape up there; we have declared open season on the Boche and have killed many thousands of them."

Freight yards in Florence, used by the Germans to feed troops south, were hammered by medium bomber crews specially briefed to avoid hitting the city's cultural, religious and historical landmarks, headquarters announced. This attack was staged because the Germans, in Florence as in Rome, "made deliberate use of our obvious reluctance to risk damage to cultural objects."

British destroyers shelled targets on Korcula island Wednesday in a sharp blow against Germans on the 28-mile-long island that nearly touches the jutting Jellish peninsula on the Dalmatian coast.

Korcula is one of a chain of stepping-stone islands below Split. Most are large-sized and excellent as bases. Korcula is a little northeast of Pescara.

(Berlin radio declared yesterday that Allied Commandos had landed on Lissa island, west of Korcula and about 40 miles from the Dalmatian coast. Associated Press Correspondent Daniel E. Hall, who delayed dispatch from Bari, quoted officers of Marshal Tito as saying the Nazis now had elements of 20 divisions in Yugoslavia.)

In the shelling of Korcula, headquarters said, "in spite of accurate fire from enemy shore batteries our ships sustained neither casualties nor damage."

British light coastal forces attacked a small vessel farther inshore, between the eastern end of Hvar and the mainland, leaving it abandoned and in flames, the bulletin added.

The ground bulletin said Eighth army patrols clashed with the Germans at many points in Italy and (Continued on Page Four)

GET AT THE ROOT OF THE MATTER

What makes a nation of sensible and literate people like the Germans follow such blackguards as Hitler and his Nazi gang? Or why do the Japanese common people follow their military overlords? Because these common people are poor, and the Junkers in Germany and the militarists in Japan have persuaded them that their dire state is due to England, France, Russia, the Jews, etc., who are supposed to have despoiled them. As a matter of fact, these higher-ups have for generations and centuries been skimming off the cream, living in luxury, and letting the common people subsist on a few teaspoons of thin milk.

The people of Germany and Japan have low standards of living not because of anything their neighbors do against them but because their leaders have been plundering them for centuries. The people allow themselves to be driven into battle in the hope of bettering their state.

Any peace treaty, therefore, which does not go to the root of the matter and deal with those who drive their brothers into the cannon's mouth will be only a truce. We will get peace by destroying in Germany and Japan the power of those overlords who for their own benefit have persuaded the common people that war is the best way out of their difficulties.

expressed by Gov. Broughton in a letter to the Chairman of the Board:

"...the view that in any aspect of the matter as revealed by this audit, the manner in which these funds have been handled has been shockingly unbusinesslike and highly irregular...."

The Governor in those few words expressed the idea we are trying herewith to impress upon the trustees of the college. Dr. Meadows is in his present dilemma, either through intentional mishandling of funds, or through careless and improper business methods, that do not bespeak the qualifications of a person who heads such an important institution.

The fact that during all the months that the audit was being made, Dr. Meadows failed to make satisfactory explanation regarding the funds leaves the question in the minds of many as to whether he can now clarify the matter. And even if he now makes satisfactory explanation to the Board, his usefulness as head of the college is over, for the harm has been done and his retention will continue a stumbling block in the path of the institution's progress.

We realize the high esteem in which Dr. Meadows is held and we regret that this thing has happened, but it is now up to the trustees to look the matter squarely in the face, realize their responsibility to the State and let common sense rather than sentiment guide them in the action they take.

Isn't It Remarkable

WASHINGTON IN WARTIME

By JACK STINNETT

Washington—In coming months you are going to hear a good deal more about the Baruch-Hancock conversion report.

In spite of criticisms from James G. Patton, president of the National Farmers Union, and other quarters and a good deal of grumbling from the still rebellious Congress, the general feeling here is that it is a good blue-print for preparation for peace on the home front.

According to Bernard Baruch, failure to prepare for peace might even be more catastrophic than failure to prepare for an inevitable war. There isn't much disagreement here on that score. The problems are already with us. Thousands of men in the military forces are being discharged monthly. Many of them are partially disabled and all of them have to have jobs or otherwise be reintegrated into normal civilian life. Scores of plants producing military supplies are being closed down—not because of any anticipation of early victory, but because war needs have changed or stocks on hand have exceeded the wildest estimates of future needs.

When the war ends, about $35,000,000,000 in contracts will have to be cancelled immediately. On hand there may be 20 or 30 billion dollars of surplus supplies to dispose of. In less than a year, five or six million men will be dumped on the labor market.

The argument now—and it's going to get pretty stormy as time goes on—is over the methods of settling all these problems.

The principal controversy, as it generally is, is between Congress and the White House. Baruch and John M. Hancock were appointed by the President to make their report. War Mobilizer James F. Byrnes, acting on the report, appointed William L. Clayton, Texas cotton exporter, generally considered "a Jesse James man," as coordinator of surplus property disposals, and Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, head of the Veterans' Administration, as coordinator of reemployment and retraining.

Congress immediately got its back up. Legislation to handle the whole reconversion program already was on file. Most important was the bill proposed by Sen. Walter F. George of Georgia, chairman of the Senate committee on postwar planning. They considered the Baruch-Hancock report and Byrnes' quick action on it as another usurpation of legislative powers by the Administration.

One thing that has caused many Washington observers to snicker is that the Baruch-Hancock report suggests that all reconversion and reemployment be handled by existing agencies, merely with coordinating wings the work together; while congressional plans call for the establishment of new agencies—in other words, a spread of bureaucracy, which has been the main target of anti-New Dealers for years.

BABSON

People have been getting out of debt. They are buying their quota of government bonds and at the same time piling up excess cash. Ultimately, the bulk of this money will go into the stock market. A deferred demand for stocks is accumulating just as is a deferred demand for all sorts of consumer goods. When the majority of investors decide that the time is right to fulfill their desire to own stocks, we may have a boom that will make prices exceed those of 1928-1929.

Most Investors Are Fickle

Investors are full of hope one day and in the lower ranges of despair the next. Peace stocks have been so touted that many investors became convinced that the European phase of the war would be over in a very short time. They sold their "war babies" and went into peace issues. The establishment of a "second front" did not come when expected. We also experienced some hard fighting in the south Pacific. These same investors then decided that after all World War II was not quite ready to fold up. Hence, they stampeded back again into war stocks.

I stick to my forecast that the European phase of the war will not be over until after the November elections. It will then be a long hard road to Tokyo. Consequently, never went overboard on peace stocks. I have maintained that the war goes, is a diversified list of war-peace stocks. These are bound to benefit whatever may happen.

Best Policy For the Investor
Investors should not be bullheaded. It is sensible at times to take losses in order to free capital headed in the wrong direction. Moreover, remember no one ever went broke taking a profit. Hence, the successful investor must be a good seller as well as a good buyer. Generalship and intelligent staff work are as essential to the management of an investment portfolio as to the success of an army.

Investors should have a definite program based upon the broad trend. This may point upward. When this trend will get under way, however, is closely linked to the invasion time. Even a set program of this nature must be looked at broadly. The investor should have his funds in stock groups behind the averages rather than in those groups ahead of the averages.

Pharmacist's Mate W. L. Stockbridge, Fourth Medical Corps, U. S. Marines, who was a frequent visitor in Greenville as a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Willard T. Kyser, and who is now in the battle zone in the South Pacific, wrote an interesting letter of his experiences in battle. "Seeing our own boys shot up and dying has changed my outlook on the war," Stockbridge wrote. "Thank God not many were wounded considering the size of the engagements on Roi and Namur islands, but there were enough to cause sober thought. I learned to have a lot of respect for blood plasma because it actually saves lives. It's different being told of the marvelous use of blood plasma and actually seeing the color and life return to a wounded American through its use. Any person who gives his blood can do so with the assurance that he is helping to save a human life."

"It's too bad that some of the people who operate or patronize black markets, etc., could not have stood by as I helped our doctors save American lives. I did not go ashore with the first attackers. We were kept on the ship to care for returning wounded. We cared for casualties on the transport until a hospital ship relieved us on the third day. I saw marvelous things done by American doctors. I am proud to know that our boys are getting the best medical and hospital treatment and that I helped in a small way."

The Marine graphically described the destruction and utter desolation on the islands caused by the American attack. Stockbridge went ashore after the battles. He was glad to get back to the ship, he said, and leave behind that terrible stink (no other word will describe it) of the dead Jap soldiers.

"I will never forget it. Luckily, our transport did not hang around Kwajalein long after the battle. We lived for a time in a huge tent city, not unlike that at Camp Lejeune. After a few days we were sent to an army hospital for detached duty and that means I have been on duty in all three branches of the armed forces. That should make me unprejudiced. I like it fine here and am getting fat on good chow. I often think of the good old times we had in Greenville and hope to re-peak them. Best wishes for Greenville people," the Marine's letter concluded.

FLIGHT FROM LOVE

by JOHN C. FLEMING and LOIS EBY

Chapter 29
Marek and the man from the Reporter made their way through the doorway and started in the direction of the bar. It was slow going. They both knew too many people along the way.

Eventually they got together again in the commodious semi-darkness of the barroom and picked a leather booth lining the wall. The newspaperman chattered on effortlessly. Marek only half listened. He sat drinking with growing irritation. He was fumed all right when it came to love. He'd always prided himself on understanding women. Even that hadn't done him much good. His domestic crackups had never bothered him too much. They'd been a natural part of his restless, amiable career. But now suddenly he was tired of emotional drifting. He wanted a home and stability.

He and Julie could build that kind of home. He knew now he had sensed that when he first saw her. He hadn't known what it was at first. Just a certain reserve, pride, a self-sufficiency in her manner—an integrity. He had married beautiful opportunists before. Women to whom love was only oil for the wheels of barter. But Julie's hunger was those of the heart. He had seen her throw away her chance for fame and security on a long shot that wasn't even planning out. That's the kind of woman he wanted.

But that's the kind of love it was hard to transplant. The newspaperman was leaving. Had to write his story. Nice to have had this chat. Marek said goodnight to him, and signalled the waiter for another whiskey. He still had a couple more rounds to go with himself.

The waiter started over to him and bumped into a uniformed man passing through. The man was Dave.

Marek hailed him. "On your way somewhere?"

Dave paused at his table. His grin looked tired. "Looking for a cup of coffee and a sandwich," he said. "We landed just in time to come over here. And I never could eat at banquets where I had to talk afterwards. Wasn't meant for a public speaker."

"You're not bad at it, though," Marek said. He found himself abruptly curious and interested in this young man with the nice smile who was beating him, and who didn't even know he was in the race. "Sit down," he said.

"Fine," Dave dropped onto the leather seat beside him. Marek added his order to his own.

"Handshaking over?" he asked. "Not quite," Dave admitted. "To tell the truth I kind of eased out. Tried to call Julie. But she's out or else she's sleeping too hard to hear the phone."

"It's after twelve, isn't it?" Marek glanced at his watch. She's at work."

"Oh." The same strange mixture of relief and disappointment again crossed Dave's face. "I remember now, Cinderella had to get in by twelve when I was down before. What do you do? Shoot night scenes at night?"

"But—" Marek caught himself sharply and shot Dave a guarded look. There was no question or suspicion in Dave's keen eyes.

So Julie hadn't told him about her working in a defense plant. He switched his answer. Began describing the art of making pictures at night.

Dave's sandwich and coffee came and he ate hungrily. Marek sipped his whiskey and watched him. He felt a little awed himself now before this boy's reserve. What was behind that nice grin, that quiet eagerness? He looked like the kind of chap that would be moved down by the beauty and worth of a girl like Julie. What was standing between them?

He asked him questions about the battles he'd mentioned in his banquet talk. Dave answered readily but did not enlarge on the encounters. He was an expert fighter. Marek decided, but the technique was all mechanics with him. It wasn't love of combat that was firing him then. What was it?

Unexpectedly Dave gave him the key.

They had been talking of a war picture Marek was making. Marek said there was a conference war picture over the happy ending. Seemed illogical in a time like this. "Why?" Dave demanded in sudden heat. "If we don't believe in happy endings, why in God's name are we fighting?"

He began to talk in a rush then, pushing back his coffee cup to make room for the gestures of his lean, tanned hands. His shyness was gone. His quiet reserve broken through by his flood of eager eloquence.

He told Marek of his bitterness first over a senseless war. Of his being tossed into a world from which he'd always been shielded. Of the strangeness of the first feelings of actually being a part of the struggles.

"Don't you see the tremendous adventure of it?" he cried, the keen blue of his eyes looking electric now. "Once you get the surge of it—" His booming voice broke abruptly as he noticed the attention he was attracting. He gave Marek a sheepish grin. "Didn't mean to climb a soapbox," he muttered.

Dave moved his knife in nervous drawings over the table top. "I suppose," he said slowly, "most folks have this feeling all their lives. But I grew up in a small town where there were so many little artificial blinders. Where all your ideas were chopped up and locked up."

"Your identity was bounded on four sides by the family social position and beliefs," Marek nodded. "That's something like it," Dave admitted.

"And now," Marek smiled, "you're a citizen of the world and the agent. Tell me. Was that the little town where you knew Julie?"

Dave was startled but said yes. Marek's black eyes held his with determined force.

"So that's why you're not marrying her. You couldn't go back to her artificial world."

Dave answered with quick resentment. "Julie's Julie. Nobody on earth would want her to change." He motioned the waiter and pulled out his wallet. Marek put out a hand to shove it back. In so doing, he had a quick glimpse of the picture in it—a torn and faded snapshot of Julie.

Forty Years Ago Today

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The president has sent a letter to the secretary of the Jamestown Exposition endorsing the centennial to be held at Hampton Roads, near Norfolk, in 1907.

The treasury department estimates that it will cost $605,287,000 to run the government for 1904.

It is getting to look like Russia will have to do a little fighting with Great Britain, too.

Changing up the golden hair is the song of our farmer friends now as they bring cotton to market.

Mr. and Mrs. Roebuck Entertain. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Roebuck entertained Thursday night at their home in Stokes, the following guests at a bingo party: Medames L. T. Cherry, Cora Page, G. H. Roebuck, J. B. Congleton, B. F. Fleming, W. L. Latham, W. F. Stokes, H. Fleming, L. H. Robertson, R. O. Congleton, J. A. Tyson, T. G. Baughnigh, Caddie Cherry, Norine Simmons, A. L. Woolard, C. A. James, Jr., Ethel Clark, W. B. Roebuck, J. F. Clark, Jr., Misses Cordelia Perkins, Kat Roebuck, Edna Melton, Beatrice Cherry.

Each guest had donated a gift for a surprise shower to the guest of honor, Mrs. Clark, who is the bride of Staff Sergeant John F. Clark, Jr., who is serving in the South Pacific with the air force.

Among the beautiful gifts were those sent by the following guests, who were unable to attend: Medames Jerome Perkins, P. E. Andrews, W. G. Stokes and Mrs. Cherry. A pleasant evening ended with Mrs. Gordon Roebuck serving hot chocolate, sandwiches and cookies in rooms which were filled with vases of beautiful daffodils, white spirea and pink hawthorne.

Training School P. T. A. With the Third Street School P. T. A. and the county P. T. A. as guests, the Training School P. T. A. met Wednesday afternoon. The president, Mrs. Hugh Ross, presided. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The treasurer's report showed a balance of $67.31. The amount of $38.09, which was profit from the stationery store, was turned over to the school to be used as desired.

Mrs. C. E. Oakley of the Welfare committee read a copy of a letter which had been sent to Dr. Meadows asking for a cafeteria in the Training school building. The necessity of this for the health of the children was forcefully brought out.

The nominating committee gave the following report for officers for next year: Mrs. W. E. Padgett, president; Mrs. M. K. Blount, vice-president; Mrs. W. G. Carmichael, secretary; and Mrs. Leslie Jones, treasurer. The slate was accepted as read.

Mrs. W. S. Bost of the Recreation committee gave plans for that group. She said that heretofore the Board of Aldermen have always cooperated with what the people really wanted and that if they wanted a year-round recreation program they hoped to get the same.

operation this time. The plans included summer and after school recreation for all children. Guy Smith stadium, Cotanche street park and some school grounds were planned as centers. Indoor recreation plans included crafts, singing and dramatics. Trained leadership will be necessary for a successful program. With 1,675 white children the cost would be less than 50 cents a month. Each parent would be back to back program if it is to be available to lessen delinquency and provide wholesome use of leisure.

Mrs. W. H. Taft introduced Mr. Spencer of the Health Service, now working in Pitt county. Mr. Spencer spoke in an interesting and helpful way of what the P. T. A. can do for health. He told of how the P. T. A. can be a strong factor in the battle against public ignorance and indifference about the health of children.

North Carolina has been a pioneer in Public Health work. The first Public Health Department in the United States was in Guilford county. Mr. Spencer spoke of how the P. T. A. could help in the essentials of health. He mentioned protection against disease, prevention of disease and correction of physical defects. Every child needs adequate sanitation, heat and light. Regular physical examinations and immunization against diseases is necessary in the prevention program. Parents, schools and civic organizations cooperate to correct physical defects. Mr. Spencer's last point was to show the necessity of physical education in the health of the child. Not only does this provide exercise that means good physical development but it means less nervous strain and healthier mental development.

Dr. Jacobs, who is in charge of the Health Service, told briefly of its organization in 1939 and in fact that it has worked in 15 counties of North Carolina. The Service is in cooperation with the State Health Department, the State Department of Public Instruction and the Rockefeller Foundation. Dr. Jacobs showed an interesting film entitled "Bobby Goes to School."

The parents realized from the picture the necessity of a thorough physical examination for each child. Everyone present felt benefited by these two excellent talks and will be more health conscious as the group of workers continue their activities in the county and city.

Mrs. Taft presented Miss Brown's fourth grade a lovely basket of flowers for having the most mothers present.

Eighth Street Christian Church. Chaplain Calhoun who is located here at the air base, will speak on the various religious activities carried on by the chaplains of the army and the responses by the men in the service at the Eighth Street Christian Church Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. Lt. Ward Butler will sing "The Lord's Prayer."

This is the first of a series of Sunday evening services at the Eighth Street Church. During March and April through Easter and beyond, there will be a number of informal services, rich in Christian fellowship, and featured by the singing of old hymns.

At the morning service Sunday, Dr. Hane will speak on the theme "Witnesses—Past and Present" and the choir will sing the anthem "Give Unto My Prayer," by Arcadict.

Two new deacons have been selected to serve on the board of church officers, namely, Mrs. Annie Washington and Mrs. Milo Smith.

During the coming week the church will have a number of community meetings for fellowship and planning as follows: Monday night with Mr. and Mrs. Claude Allgood; Tuesday night, with Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Carrington; Wednesday evening, Bible study at the parsonage; Thursday night, with Mr. and Mrs. David Evans; Friday evening, with Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Fleming.

Those living in the various communities where these homes are located are urged to attend the meeting in their community on the night mentioned. The young people of the C. Y. F. will meet at the church Sunday evening at 8:30.

Britain May Take Over Coal Mines

London, March 10.—(AP)—The British war cabinet let it be known today that the firm action will be taken to halt the coal strike, which has virtually paralyzed the rich south Wales minefields, unless the 90,000 or more miners now idle return at once to the pits.

There was no official indication what the action would be, but labor leaders said the government was prepared to take over the mines as it did during the general strike of 1926.

N. Y. Stock Market
New York, March 11—(AP)—Led by rails and rubbers, selected stocks negotiated another swing today that put favorites at best levels since the bull market top of last July with gains of fractions to more than two points.

Dealings slowed after the opening but picked up as bidding became more insistent and transfers of approximately 600,000 shares were among the largest for Saturday in several months. Gains were well maintained in most cases near the close. Steels, motors, aircrafts, utilities and coppers were relatively narrow.

Creditable Display Manning Named GOP District Delegate

Lexington, March 11—(AP)—Sim A. Delapp, Republican state chairman, announced today that Worth D. Henderson, Greensboro attorney and organizer of Young Republican Clubs in North Carolina, had been selected as temporary chairman for the Republican state convention in Charlotte next Thursday.

Delapp also stated that he understood that Lt. Gov. Joe Hanley of New York, the keynote speaker, would speak at the afternoon session at about 2:30.

The chairman said he also had been informed that Republicans of the second congressional district had nominated J. Clarence Dozier of Elizabeth City as their candidate for congress and elected W. J. Manning of Greenville their delegate to the National Convention, with Dozier as alternate.

Kiwanis Rehearses For Next Minstrel

The Kiwanis Club's weekly supper session at the Proctor hotel last night was devoted to rehearsing for the annual Kiwanis minstrel to be given at the college two nights, April 12 and 13. Ed Bloom, producing the show, lists "Tee" (Sweet-pea) Gardner and the Kiwanis quartet as stars.

Ed Raul, general chairman of the minstrel committee, reported that the other chairmen are making good progress, that reserved seat tickets are now on sale by the members and the proceeds of the minstrel will be for the benefit of underprivileged children.

President Dick Bundy functioned like an Elgin during the supper hour, praised the minstrel committeemen and cast and said the show will be better this year.

Used Rolling Pin
Omaha, Neb., March 11—(AP)—Municipal Judge Perry Wheeler complimented a 15-year-old girl for hitting her former step-father over the head with a rolling pin. "For years I've been recommending this old-fashioned treatment for drunken men who abused their families," Judge Wheeler told the girl. "You're the first one who's taken my advice."

These planes might have to strike without fighter protection on the last leg of such a long hop, however, and also would have to contend with concentrations of German fighters in the Berlin area both coming and going.

Breslau is about 970 miles from the nearest point on the Russian front.

The industrial communications center for about 20,000 square miles of Silesia, Breslau has big railroad yards, textile mills, an important aircraft factory, and a power plant on which many other towns in that section depend.

It ranks with Berlin and Hamburg as one of the three most densely populated cities in Germany.

Nearly 50 per cent of its 630,000 residents are packed into tenements in a section which is of circular shape with a radius of two miles. The industrial area is wedged into the tenement sections.

H. D. Club Women Participate in Fourth War Loan Drive

At the January Home Demonstration County Council, Mrs. James S. Ficklen, regional chairman woman's division solicited the help of club women in the Fourth War Loan drive. The council pledged their support and voted to make a house to house canvass of club members. The results were splendid and the women reported that they purchased $56,465 in bonds. Club members worked only during the last ten days and before their canvass started they purchased $25,490. This makes a total of $81,955 invested in bonds by Home Demonstration Club women in the Fourth War Loan drive.

Mrs. John E. Whichard, war service leader of the Sweet Gum Grove Home Demonstration Club reported that she had visited 25 homes in the community and sold $7,550 in bonds in Series E. The Sweet Gum Grove Club was organized in January and Mrs. Whichard had only attended one club meeting. She is making a wonderful start in Home Demonstration work.

Club Members Salvage Fats
Home Demonstration Club women used a new method this month for salvaging fats. Each lady brought hers to the club meeting and turned it over to the war service chairman who was responsible for getting all fat collected at her club meeting to a dealer. Approximately 300 pounds were collected by the club women.

Leader School
Approximately 30 nutrition leaders and hostesses for the March meetings met at the Agricultural building on Friday afternoon, February 25, for a leader school. "Dishes Using Little or No Meat," Mrs.

Howard Moyer, county nutrition leader assisted Miss Joyner with the demonstration. Mrs. Moyer opened the meeting with a song. Miss Joyner started the demonstration by emphasizing the importance of "making the most of meat," the value meat has in the diet, and some foods to replace meat. She prepared scalloped peanuts and creamed eggs and fish. Mrs. Moyer prepared Spanish rice. These attractive delicious new dishes were served with soy cracks and chilled tomato juice. Cookies made from soy flour were passed. Mrs. Moyer gave the recipe she used. Leaders and hostesses in the various clubs will be responsible for getting demonstration materials together and assisting at the club meetings. Each leader will make cookies or some product from soy flour to serve at her meeting.

Sweet Gum Grove H. D. Meeting
The Sweet Gum Grove Demonstration Club met Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Barnhill and Mrs. A. C. Barnhill as hostesses. The meeting was started with the singing of "We're on the Upward Trail," then the repeating of the motto of the club by all. The minutes of the last meeting were read and then the roll called with 23 members out of 27 answering. We had two new members present at the meeting along with five visitors who were: Mrs. J. W. James, Jr., Mrs. J. W. James, Mrs. A. P. Catton, Mrs. Clinton Briley and Mrs. Linwood Gurganus, Jr. "Gardening" was our subject for this meeting with Mrs. J. C. Meeks, leader, giving the demonstration along with Miss Joyner. The club voted to sell 50 boxes of assorted cards to help put money in our treasury. We voted to serve supper for the service men at the U. S. O. one Sunday night in the near future. After our business meeting, another song business meeting was sung. Then Mrs. Clarence Barnhill gave us a book report on "The Shining Trail" by Iola Fuller which we enjoyed. The hostess served a very delicious dessert with tea and salted nuts. — Reported by Mrs. Charlie Worthington.

This Is Your War
To every farm boy and girl that you and future generations may enjoy freedom and justice we are fighting this war. While men give their lives on the battlefield, those of us on the farm must see to it that they have the necessary food to fight the war; to defend and preserve the America we enjoy.

During 1944 the 4-H program will stress those activities which will aid most in the war effort. Every farm boy and girl in North Carolina should join in the "Feed a Fighter for Freedom" program in forty-four. Here's how you can help:

1. Join a 4-H Club.
2. Take an active part in 4-H Club meetings.
3. Consult neighborhood leader for help.
4. Participate in special 4-H activities, such as—church Sunday, 4-H Achievement Day, 4-H Camp, Health program.
5. Maintain morale on the home front. Preserve for our soldiers when they return something of the kind of an America they left to defend.
6. Produce and conserve food:
 1. Select a project you can and will carry through to completion.
 2. Select your project early and begin work on it.
 3. Increase the size of projects.
 4. Conserve all the food possible.
 5. Keep accurate records to determine best methods.
 6. Secure new members.
7. Contribute to the war effort:
 1. Do your part in salvage collection.
 2. Put all your cash profits in war bonds and stamps—more if possible.
 3. Cooperate with Red Cross, Civilian Defense and other war agencies.
 4. Write letters to friends in the armed service.
 5. Participate in all worthy community activities.
