SOVIET FORCES DRIVING AHEAD AGAINST NAZIS

Thrust Into Kovel, In Old Poland, Drive Within Sight Of Black Sea Naval Base Of Nikolaev And Into Hills Of Bessarabia

London, March 23—(AP)—Spearheads of the Red army have driven to within 25 miles of the Prut river border of Rumania below the fallen German bastion of Mogilev. Podolski, Moscow dispatches indicated today, and Berlin reported the opening of a new Soviet offensive from the Tarnopol-Proskurov sector apparently aimed at trapping large Nazi forces in the Vinnitsa area.

An increased threat to Rumania developed as Marshal Ivan S. Konev's Second Ukrainian army widened its Dniester river bridgehead below Mogilev Podolski in a smashing drive which the Russians said carried the town of Radushita, 18 miles north of the important rail junction of Byelsti and 20 miles west of the Dniester river.

Other Soviet forces meanwhile, Moscow announced, captured Yaroslavl and Kurlovskiy-Murovany, respectively 10 and 24 miles northwest of Mogilev Podolski, while Marshal Gregorovitch's Zhukov's First Ukrainian army continued its slow but steady push southwest of Kremets toward the large industrial center of Lwow. More than 1,000 Germans were killed, many prisoners and much booty captured in a single battle in this area, a Soviet bulletin asserted.

On the southeastern front of the 500-mile-long Ukrainian front, Gen Rodion Y. Malinovsky's forces captured the important fortified railway junction of Pervomaisk, driving to the approaches of Vosnesensk, 65 miles northwest of Odessa, and reaching a point eight miles from Nikolaev on the Bug river estuary, Moscow announced.

Hundreds of German soldiers were said to have drowned in the swirling waters of the Bug river as they fled Pervomaisk when Malinovsky's forces stormed the city's defenses after a two-day battle. Huge stocks of war material and (Continued on page six)

Red Cross Drive Is On Way To Success

Yesterday's contributions to Pitt county's Red Cross war fund amounted to $5,740, bringing the total amount received to $130,275, well beyond the half way mark, and leaving only $13,675 to go before the county quota is reached.

Figures released today by County Chairman J. Nat Harrison show that Pactolus and Belvoir sectors that passed their quotas Tuesday, are still sending in contributions. Their totals as of last night are as follows: Pactolus, $145; Belvoir, $127; Stokes, the only other sector to pass its quota, sent in $600 yesterday afternoon. J. B. Congleton is chairman for the Stokes sector.

In Greenville proper the Greenville regiment had a total of $4,596 to its credit collected as follows: Coast Guard Battalion under Major (Mrs.) W. F. Young, $1,118; Navy Battalion, under Major (Mrs.) Lyman Ormond, $999; Marine Battalion under Major J. B. Cummings, $922; Army Battalion, under Major Ernest Willard, $1,128; Rangers, under Lt. Col. W. F. Young, $198; Bomber Command, $5,100 and the Negro Battalion, under Major (Dr.) J. A. Battle, $150.

The WAR TODAY AN ANALYSIS OF THE NEWS

By DEWITT MACKENZIE Associated Press War Analyst British Prime Minister Churchill is used to world-wide audiences, but keen attention will be paid his statement in Parliament that there will be renewed consultation between the principal Allies on the application of the Atlantic Charter. Need of clarification of this historic Allied pledge to mankind long has been apparent. If proof of that were necessary we should find it in the adult manner in which Mr. Churchill sidestepped any commitment regarding specific application of the document.

However, we don't need further proof than we've long had in the demands from many countries for enlightenment. Self-determination is the big issue.

Have already reported in this column how I was bombarded with anxious inquiries in the Middle East and Far East on my last trip abroad. Not only anxiety but tears exist both in the Orient and in the Western world.

Churchill declined to be more specific than to say that "the Atlantic Charter stands as a declaration of the spirit and purpose in which its signatories are waging this war—not without success—and that it implies no pact or bargain with our enemies." He left it to those new consultations among the

Allies Fight Doggedly In Area Around Cassino

Heavy Allied Bombers Attack Enemy Communications In Northern Italy

By RICHARD G. MASSOCK Allied Headquarters, Naples, Mar. 23—(AP)—Fifth army forces doggedly flung back German attacks yesterday on their Cassino positions while in the air war Allied bombers struck sharply at enemy supply lines in northern Italy, Allied headquarters announced today.

In the southern section of the town of Cassino, New Zealanders still were engaging the enemy at close quarters. Allied artillery knocked out a German tank emplaced in one wrecked building, raising to five the total destroyed in the week of fighting for possession of the town.

Westward along the lower slopes of Monastery hill Allied forces kept up their attacks along a north-south axis. The Germans counter-attacked against Hill 193, a key height just northwest of the town early yesterday, but were thrown back leaving 30 prisoners in Allied hands.

The Germans also lunged forward in two strong attacks in a new sector—near Monte Castellone, three miles northwest of Cassino, but French troops broke up and repulsed their formations with artillery fire.

Rail lines in northern Italy were hit heavily yesterday and last night, both heavy and lighter bombers participating. American Flying Fortresses and Liberators hit Verona and Bologna, on the route south from the Brenner Pass, as well as Rimini, important junction point on the Adriatic midway between Venice and Ancona. Padua, west of Venice, was attacked by night-flying RAF Liberators and Wellingtons.

Medium and light bombers also joined in the railway attacks with (Continued on page six)

TIGHTEN GRIP ON BALKANS Bulgaria and Rumania Next On Hitler's List

By ERNEST AGNEW London, March 23—(AP)—Adolf Hitler was reported tightening his grip on every nation of southeastern Europe today after installing a puppet regime in Hungary, a step that Berlin propagandists sought to justify as counteracting Allied "intrigues" and "the Bolshevik menace."

In the first official Nazi announcement since German armed forces crossed Hungary's borders early Monday, the Berlin radio said yesterday a new government had been formed in Budapest under a Quisling premier and a German Gauleiter.

The fate of Hungary was an example for countries failing to fall in line as Hitler strove to build up an eastern wall of defense against the fast-moving Russians.

Dispatches from neutral capitals continued to refer to Bulgaria and Rumania as possibly next on Hitler's list for full military occupation and added another—Slovakia, created from the carved-up state of Czechoslovakia.

A Daily Mail dispatch from Madrid said German airborne troops were seizing Bulgaria's railways and communication systems and had detained the Soviet ambassador and occupied the embassy in Sofia. Bulgaria and Russia have remained at peace although on opposite sides in the world conflict.

Most informed quarters in London viewed Rumania as too weak to be other than docile particularly since the advancing Russians are knocking against her Prut river border. London dispatches from Ankara quoted rumors there that Hitler had promised Premier Ion Antonescu immediate return of Transylvania from Hungary as one inducement for full collaboration.

A Vichy broadcast heard by the Associated Press said Antonescu had gone to Hitler's headquarters for "important discussions."

The German-controlled Budapest radio told the Hungarian people that Rezent Nicholas Horthy, widely reported a prisoner when the Germans moved into his homeland, had sworn in the new pro-Nazi cabinet late yesterday.

Doeme Sztotjay, a former Hungarian army officer who has been Hungarian minister to Berlin, was named premier in the new puppet government. DNE announced that Hitler had appointed Dr. Edmund Veelschmayer as "minister and trustee of the greater German Reich in Hungary"—a job obviously designed to keep the quislings in line.

College Case May Be Aired In Court

Student Mass Meeting Demands Action By Governor Or Courts; Trustees Flayed; Meadows Still Silent

That the affairs of East Carolina Teachers College, as they pertain to Dr. L. R. Meadows' alleged mishandling of college funds in the amount of $18,636.34, might finally be aired in the courts was indicated today as a result of a resolution adopted by the student body of the college in mass meeting last night, in which the Governor was petitioned to direct a full investigation by referring the matter to "state officials, higher in rank than the Board of Trustees, and if necessary, to the state courts for just decision."

Another indication that court action was anticipated were reports that Judge Albion Dunn had been retained by Dr. Meadows as legal counsel. No statement of any kind has been issued by Dr. Meadows since the board rendered its decision late Tuesday.

A campus rumor this morning was to the effect that three of the teachers alleged to be on Dr. Meadows' side, held a conference at which a counter-resolution to that adopted by the student body was drawn up and would be sent to Raleigh to the Governor by one of the students who likewise favored Dr. Meadows.

Governor Broughton at his press conference in Raleigh this morning withheld any official statement on the students' resolution pending receipt of an official copy. At the same time Attorney General Harry McMillan ruled that on complaint of the board chairman, the Governor, with approval of the Council of State, has authority to remove the board. Under such action, the trustees would be entitled to a hearing if they so desired.

The student body resolution was adopted at a mass meeting last night in which the Meadows matter was discussed for more than three hours. The meeting was called upon a petition signed by far more than the 25 students necessary for the calling of such a meeting. Petitioners declared that the meeting was necessary "because of the dissatisfaction among students and the spirit of unrest on the campus because of the manner in which the Meadows matter has been handled."

The meeting was presided over by Miss Dorothy Lewis of Farmville, president of the Student council. Every student had the opportunity of having his or her say on the subject of discussion and the extent to which this discussion went was indicated by the length of the meeting. Only one faculty member, Miss Lois Grigsby, alleged by many students to have been pro-Meadows from the beginning, and with certain other teachers, to have given over much classroom time to presenting Dr. Meadows' side of the question, spoke at the mass meeting. At her request, the students voted that she be heard, and she urged them to drop the whole matter lest their action do injury to

Time For Action (An Editorial)

Let us say first that we endorse one hundred per cent the action taken by the student body of East Carolina Teachers College last night in placing the whole matter of the college investigation squarely in the Governor's lap. The students, after all, are the college. It is their parents who pay the tuition fees and likewise the state taxes that operate the college, and if they do not have the right to speak, there is no one who does. We do not believe that the students acted because of instigation by any enemies of Dr. Meadows, although they may be so charged. They acted, we feel, because they have the interests of the college at heart and felt that they had been betrayed by the eight members of the Board of Trustees who, conscientiously or otherwise, voted Dr. Meadows a clean bill and retained him as head of the institution. Based on the student's action, they apparently felt that charges against Dr. Meadows had been denied but not satisfactorily explained, and in this belief they are not alone, judging by public opinion here in Greenville and other sections of the state.

Following the first hearing in Raleigh, we stated in our columns that we felt Dr. Meadows' usefulness as head of the college was at an end, and that regardless of the outcome of the hearing, he should be removed. Knowing the apparent attitude of a number of members of the Board, we were not surprised when the eight-to-four decision in Dr. Meadows' favor was rendered last Tuesday, but we were surprised that the announcement was not accompanied by Dr. Meadows' resignation. Asked at that time if he had any public statement to make, Dr. Meadows replied that he had no statement, and until now he is still silent.

We remained silent in this column yesterday, hoping that our next utterance would be that of congratulating him upon being big enough to put the interests of the college and the state above his own by handing in his resignation. At the time this is written he has, to our knowledge, taken no such action, and his continued silence obscures any intentions he might have in mind regarding the whole matter.

In view of these facts there is but one course to be followed and that is that such legal steps as are available to state authorities be used immediately to bring about his removal. This action should be followed by full investigation, by the Governor or the Board of Trustees and removal of the entire board, if findings warrant, or such (Continued in Editorial Column)

'Bud' Harrington Had Narrow Escape

By CHESTER WALSH Vance S. (Buddy) Harrington, 21, son of Mrs. R. D. Harrington, 416 East Fourth street, was seriously injured yesterday afternoon when a farm tractor he was using to tow a stalled log truck on his mother's farm on the Falkland highway turned over backwards pinning him beneath it on the ground.

The Negro driver of the log truck, unable to extricate Harrington, went to Graham Flanagan's home for help. Flanagan sent his auto wrecker and called an ambulance. A tractor from York Joyce's farm was used to release him. He was taken to Pitt General hospital in an ambulance. Physicians there stated he had a broken pelvis bone and possibly internal injuries.

Harrington was conscious all the time he was beneath the heavy machine. He manifested great courage and fortitude, his rescuers stated. When the tractor reared back it struck the log truck and bounced, probably saving his life.

The full weight of the heavy machine was resting on the lower part of Harrington's body for nearly an hour. A chain from the wrecker was attached to the overturned tractor to steady it while another tractor moved it slightly to remove Harrington, after digging some dirt from beneath him. His rescuers did heroic work.

Harrington's body was badly disfigured by leaking gasoline while he was pinned under the tractor. Attendants removed some of his gasoline saturated clothing in the ambulance on the way to the hospital.

No Delinquents. Washington, March 23—(AP)—The War Production Board, army and navy do not plan to recommend men under 26 for industrial deferments unless the items they are working on are rated as "critical" and urgently required to meet immediate war objectives, it was learned today.

Japanese Being Cut Off By Leap-Frog Landings And Left To Starve

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, March 23—(AP)—Leap-frog landings in the Bismarck archipelago and the steady attrition of Japan's merchant fleet, vital to the supply of her scattered, diluted Pacific garrisons, are underscoring Gen. Douglas MacArthur's "cut them off and let them starve" strategy of how to fight Japan.

Since the first of the year 227 Japanese cargo ships have been sunk in the central and southwest Pacific, aside from nearly 600 barges, many of them loaded with troops and supplies. These ships were links in lifelines to wide-flung defense outposts.

Particularly off the northwest coast of New Guinea have Japan's sealanes come increasingly under Allied bombings. Last week-end an entire five-ship enemy convoy was sunk between Hollandia and Wewak, and General MacArthur announced today that Allied bombers sank a Japanese destroyer and two small merchantmen in that same general area.

Under MacArthur's strategy of by-passing certain enemy strong-points to cut off their supply lines, uncounted thousands of Nipponese troops are left starving or facing starvation in the Solomons, on New Britain and New Ireland.

The same may be in store for New Guinea. The latest Bismarck archipelago landings in the St. Matthias islands, invaded Monday, were securely in hand today as Marines from Solomon bases "cleaned up" the slight opposition found on Ili-Ili island and neighboring Eiomu-sao. This completed a circle of Allied holdings around the Bismarck Sea, trapping Nipponese troops at Rabaul and Kavieng.

Rabaul, the New Britain base which MacArthur has termed isolated in view of the latest landings, was pounded with 133 tons of explosives Monday.

Today On The Home Front JAMES MARLOW and GEORGE ZIELKE

Washington, March 23—(AP)—Housewives will get just about as much sugar this year as last and there is no prospect sugar will go off the ration list by year's end. Military needs have increased. More sugar has to be diverted to making industrial alcohol for synthetic rubber. But the total sugar supply in 1944 will be about the same as in 1943.

All this adds up to less sugar for the American home front as a whole. But housewives are not expected to feel the pinch. The government is making up the shortage by cutting down on some industrial users, like makers of ice cream.

Shipping is still a prime bottleneck. That is a main reason why sugar is likely to stay rationed through 1944 unless there is a great—and fairly quick—improvement in our military fortunes, like the surrender of Germany.

Ships are needed to take military supplies abroad as the European war moves toward a climax. That means fewer ships for bringing sugar into this country, which imports much of its supply. The War Food Administration, which allocates our sugar, has based its calculations for the year on arrangements it has worked out with the military authorities—the

U. S. BOMBERS RAID GERMANY AGAIN TODAY

Second Successive Raid Smashes At Brunswick And Other Points In Western Germany Following RAF Massive Night Assault On Frankfurt

By GLADWIN HILL London, March 23—(AP)—Striking the second day in a row in the wake of a 1,000-plane RAF night raid aimed chiefly at Frankfurt, approximately 1,500 American bombers and fighters bombed (the German air force on its home bases in Western Germany today.

The American raiding force included upwards of 500 Fortresses and Liberators, bombed the Brunswick district, the aircraft park at Werl, 40 miles east of Essen, Achmer air force station in Odenburg to the south and the German bomber base at Handorf, a U. S. army air force announcement said.

Twenty-seven bombers and six fighters were missing from today's operation, involving probably 500 fighting planes.

The German air force, which avoided battle when 600 or more Fortresses and Liberators blasted Berlin in daylight yesterday, apparently roge to the bait of the bold attack today for the German radio said "violent" air combats were fought with the extraordinary large number of fighters which accompanied the bombers.

The U. S. headquarters announcement said the Thunderbolts, Mustangs and Lightnings doing escort duty were in "very great strength."

Fire still burned in Berlin from yesterday's attack and Stockholm dispatches said telephone communication with the Nazi capital was still cut 24 hours after the attack. Mosquito bombers, making a foray over Berlin last night, reported the results of their attack.

While the heavies were rained over Germany in one of their best far-flung operations yet, American medium Marauders bombed the Creil railroad center in France the third time in a week, and two airfields.

In opposing the Fortresses and Liberators the German fighters tried a new system. Returning Mustang pilots reported, and concentrated their passes on a small part of the attacking formations.

As a result, other Mustang pilots said, "we went almost to Russia without being able to find anyone to fight."

Other tactics of the Germans included adoption of the tight fortress-like formation, but that did not prevent their suffering heavy casualties.

"Thirty or forty German fighters stacked four deep and six across jumped from out of a cloud—they were in perfect formation," said Sgt. George Waters, Los Angeles, a ball turret gunner on the (Continued on page six) number of ships it can count on in 1944 for bringing sugar from places like Puerto Rico, Cuba, Hawaii.

Therefore, although more sugar might be obtained if more ships were available, WFA is counting on a total of 5,529,096 tons obtained at home and abroad. This is about as much sugar as we handled in 1943. In 1943, however, 5,400,000 tons were turned over to the home front. (As explained above, to keep the housewives from feeling this cut, some industrial users will get less sugar.)

The remaining 1,454,192 tons of the total supply will go to the armed forces, lend-lease and the alcohol makers.

The reason the alcohol makers get more.

Last year much grain had been used in making alcohol for synthetic rubber. The government found it would have to reduce the amount of grain diverted to that use. So sugar was picked to fill the gap.

Forty Years Ago Today

THE DAILY REFLECTOR March 23, 1904

Everybody knows that it takes a great amount of money to run this government, and the sum grows larger each year. Even if affairs were honestly and economically administered the amount would be considerable but the era of corruption, favoritism, graft and extravagance almost staggering to comprehend. The 43rd Congress spent $595,597,632—the 57th Congress $1,568,212,637. With the burden upon the people increasing so rapidly, it is no wonder that they complain of being taxed to meet the gross extravagance in public affairs. Nor need it occasion any surprise if at no far distant day the people rise in their might and refuse longer to submit to such outrages.

Senior Class Play Saturday

"Twin Beds," the laugh festival by Salisbury Field and Margaret Mayo, will be presented by the senior class of East Carolina Teachers College Saturday and Monday nights, March 25 and 27, at 8:30 in Austin auditorium. The play is a jovious, rollicking farce, clean as a high wind, swift-moving in its action, brilliantly slangy and vivid in its dialogue and adroit and sure in its characterization. The story is built around the difficulties of three couples living in a fashionable apartment house, with most of the neighbors, desirable and undesirable, always underfoot. They first achieve neighborliness and then have it thrust upon them; finally they move to escape it, but without remarkable success. Members of the cast are Virginia Rouse, Day Owens, James Warren, Maribelle Robertson, Joe Laster, Margaret Pugh Harden and Elizabeth Kittrell. "Twin Beds" is under the direction of Clifton Britton; Ophelia Hooks is assistant director. Hubert Bergeron is stage manager. The scenery and lighting effects are being designed by the C. H. P. Players.

Council Meets

The regular meeting of the Greenville Girl Scout Council was held at the Scout office Tuesday afternoon, with the following members present: Mesdames E. L. Henderson, T. M. Watson, W. P. Moore, Paul Batchelor, Frank Bendall, J. B. Kittrell, R. C. Rankin, George Snyder, R. W. Stark, Sam Underwood, Jr., O. R. Waters, Cleve Hardee and Miss Cleo Rainwater. The commissioner, Mrs. Henderson, called the meeting to order and in the absence of the secretary, Mrs. Rankin substituted. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved and the treasurer, Mrs. Moore gave her report. Each standing committee chairman made her report, and the special committee on the Little House gave the interesting news that we hope to begin actual building by the first of April.

It was reported by Mrs. Uzzle that there will be a cookie sale this year, as well as a day camp. She also stated that a leadership course will begin for any interested persons, particularly in leadership of troops at our Leaders' Club on April 3. Please plan to attend these classes. There will be possibly four in all. Mrs. Sam Underwood will be in charge of the course.

There was a final report on the Juliette Low Fund collected for the war orphans in war-torn areas, which amounted to $23.98. This will be sent to national headquarters to be distributed abroad.

Principals' Club Meets

The Pitt County Principals' Club held its meeting on Monday, March 20, at the office of the County Board of Education. A program was given by Miss Reba Alice Proctor of Falgout, and J. H. Moore of Farmville.

Miss Proctor spoke on "Post-war Planning for Schools." She stressed the importance of planning a program to make up physical and educational deficiencies evident among people today. Regular physical examinations are needed for all pupils as the basis for an adequate health program. Better use should be made of intelligence and aptitude tests as a guide to the educational program.

Mr. Moore talked on the "Duties of Principals of Schools." He urged that principals so organize their schools that teachers know their specific duties and that pupils carry a reasonable load of academic work. He also pointed out the need for careful supervision by the principal of school buses and school plant.

WILSON'S WEEKLY Bulletin By George Rector Food and Nutrition Consultant to Wilson & Co. NO-POINT LOW-POINT FOODS CAN MAKE COOKING AN INTERESTING GAME

Everywhere we look these days we see placards suggesting we use No-Point Low-Point foods. I've been trying it, folks, and have had myself a most enjoyable time—good eating as well. Try the recipe below and you'll see what I mean.

B-V Chop Suey—Good Eating and No Points Required

6 tsp Wilson's B-V 1 cup sliced onions 1 can mushrooms (optional) 1 green pepper sliced 2 tbsp. cornstarch 4 1/2 cups hot water or 1/2 cup flour. Brown the onion lightly in the fat (drippings from Wilson's Certified Bacon are deliciously mild and sweet).

add celery and water and simmer, covered, 20 minutes. Add Wilson's B-V, which has been dissolved in a small amount of the hot liquid. Add mushrooms and green pepper which has been sliced fine and cut into one-inch lengths and simmer 5 minutes longer. Thicken with cornstarch or flour and serve hot in a rice ring as pictured or over rice. Serves six

NO-POINT MEAT FLAVOR You'll marvel at the delicious true-meat flavor Wilson's B-V gives this chop-suey. Unless you're actually looking for a piece of meat, you wouldn't even miss it. It's that good. And Wilson's B-V is point free. Of course, if you have a little pork or veal to add, you do increase the nutritive value of the dish. If you use meat, select boneless, low-point cuts or left-over meat, browning the meat before adding the onions. Among the low-point meats suitable for this dish are boneless veal stew bones.

Use Plantiful Foods Eggs are plentiful now and can be used often since they are a no-point food—and mighty good eating as well. For cooking in the shell as for the deviled eggs pictured—and for all cooking in which eggs play a prominent part—use eggs of highest quality Wilson's Clear Brook Eggs.

The following recipe for egg salad is delicious and helps add valuable food nutrients to the diet. It is equally good served as a salad or as a sandwich filling.

8 hard cooked 2 slices crisp Clear Brook Eggs Certified Bacon 1/4 cup green pepper 1 tsp. salt 1/2 sliced thin 1/2 tsp grated onion 1/4 cup pimiento 1/2 cup salad dressing 1 cup celery diced (ing about)

Take out eggs, cover with warm water and simmer (do not boil) about 15 minutes. Drain and cover with cold water at once to prevent discoloration. Chop and combine with remaining ingredients. Chill well after mixing—half an hour at least—so flavors will blend. Serves 6.

You'll enjoy these no-point recipes I have given you today. I'm sure, and will be looking for other no-point low-point recipes. By cooperating with this new phase of the Food Fight for Freedom program you will be making an important contribution to the war effort. And while you are experimenting, don't forget that Wilson's B-V adds delicious meat flavor to many dishes. Perhaps you will "discover" a new favorite dish using B-V. If so, remember to enter it in my B-V recipe contest mentioned below.

Cordially yours, George Rector

ESCAPE FROM PARIS

by Marion McClure Stewart

Chapter 2

The stranger sat smoking until the cafe patrons left, one by one. He observed from a cursory glance over his shoulder that the Nazi agent was still there. Suddenly the latter arose from his seat, and appearing in front of the young man, addressed him in French, speaking with a guttural accent.

"Pardon Monsieur. Could you oblige me with a match?"

The stranger replied in French, "Mais certainement, M'sieu," and produced a small box of matches from his pocket.

"I see you have had an accident, Monsieur," the agent observed, lighting his cigarette and returning the matches.

The stranger smiled. "Oh that is unusual with munition workers."

"Ach, you work in munitions then—what plant may I ask?"

"Your interest in a stranger is very kind, M'sieu. My work is at the Renault plant. I am Henri Delisle at your service." He smiled blandly. "And to whom am I speaking, M'sieu, may I ask?"

The agent shot a keen glance at him and a smile crossed his face. There was an arrogant assurance in his tones.

"I am Heinrich Schafer, Monsieur—representative of Gestapo headquarters, Berlin, and chief of the investigation Bureau in Paris, Herr Hitler!"

He saluted, bowed stiffly, and left the cafe.

Almost instantly Pierre Dussault touched the young man on the shoulder.

"Come quickly, this way M'sieu. There is no time to lose. He may return."

"How can I thank you, M'sieu?"

The new comer arose at once and followed M. Dussault to the kitchen quarters with the limp that had been formerly apparent. At a gesture from her uncle, Adrienne accompanied them leading the way through the store room opening off the kitchen.

Pierre Dussault immediately pressed a spring in a panel on the inside wall of this room, which opened to disclose a steep stairway descending to the cellar.

"This is our refuge in time of stress. M. Dussault indicated the cellar with a suggestion of a smile. "Be careful with that hurt foot of yours, M'sieu."

One by one they descended. M. Dussault closed the door and securing it with an inside bolt. They found themselves in a roomy cellar with a vaulted stone ceiling, originally built as a wine cellar, but now serving as one of the headquarters of the anti-Nazi Underground movement in Paris.

The main portion of the space was furnished with benches and chairs facing a table containing a shaded night lamp, a portable wireless set with ear phones, and writing materials. A small printing press stood nearby, and stacked along side of it a pile of leaflets lay ready for distribution.

On one side were camp beds furnished with blankets and pillows, and a chest of drawers with a first outfit. Supplies of tinned food and huge cases of wine filled a small store room at the rear.

When Pierre Dussault had led the young man in a comfortable chair with a cushion to support his injured ankle, the latter revealed he was an American flyer, John Farrell, from Richmond, Virginia. Also that he was attached to the Eagle Squadron of the RAF Fighter Command.

At dawn that morning, returning in his Spitfire from a sortie over the Nazi occupied coastal area, an encounter with a Messerschmitt had left him with a damaged engine and forced him to bail out. In landing with his parachute in a vacant lot on the outskirts of Montmartre he had struck his head on a heavy protruding branch of a tree, leaving him slightly dizzy. In landing he caught his ankle and twisted it.

"So altogether," he finished with an attempt at a smile. "I would have been in a bad way except for the kindness of some people living nearby."

In desperation he had gone to the door of a small neighboring house which had been opened by a friendly pleasant looking woman to whom he appealed for help. Seeing that he was an RAF flyer, she had instantly welcomed him. She told him her husband was employed in a munition plant; but that he had not yet left for work and would do all he could to help him.

When she had disinfected his head wound and bound it up with adhesive tape, the man of the house appearing on the scene had advised him to take off his flying kit, and had given him the suit, even the boots that he now wore. They had also shared their breakfast with him, and insisted on his accepting a little money to provide for his needs, but thought it would be unwise for him to go into the city.

"However, he'd had a keen desire to see Paris, and hoped he would find friends there in the anti-Nazi movement. Fate seemed to have sent him to the Cafe Dragon Rouge.

"I was attracted by the archway with the red dragon, and then I saw this cafe. He paused suddenly, as a spasm of pain crossed his face.

"You are in pain," exclaimed Adrienne, "Uncle Pierre, do you see how white and ill he looks, Monsieur, we must look at your foot."

"We should have done that before we let him talk," said M. Dussault. As he lifted the airman's foot, Farrell winced a little. "I think my ankle is sprained," he said.

M. Dussault finally had to cut the boot off. Suddenly Farrell lurched and fell back in the chair, unconscious.

"Some brandy from the wine press, quickly," Dussault ordered. When Adrienne brought it he forced a little through Farrell's lips. After a brief interval, he regained consciousness.

"Where am I?" he asked in bewilderment. "Oh yes, I remember now—"

"You had a weak turn for a minute," Dussault said. "How do you feel now?"

"All right," Farrell tried to summon a smile, "except for a pain in my head and that infernal ankle."

"Concussion, I imagine," murmured Dussault to Adrienne who was applying a wet compress to the swollen ankle. "We'll keep him quiet for the rest of the day and tonight. Raoul must see him tomorrow so we can be sure we are giving him the right treatment."

Chapter 3

There was much contrast in the French Underground. Raoul de Lamothé was slim, dark, dapper and good-looking. Antoine Castonway was fair in complexion with strong rugged features. He had a lean sinewy build, and was roughly dressed. His work in a Nazi controlled French munition plant afforded him plenty of opportunities for sabotage.

Raoul's job as dispenser in a chemist's shop left him but little leisure; but he often worked far into the night running the small printing press in Pierre Dussault's cellar, running off leaflets composed by Pierre Dussault and himself.

Receiving reports of sabotage in German controlled munition plants and shipyards from the multitude of workers also occupied his time. This work was carried on faithfully as well by Dussault and the head-waiter at the Cafe, Gabord Benoit. The Nazi invasion had put an abrupt end to Raoul's course in medicine at the Sorbonne and his dream of a medical career.

"You see, Mon Ami," Antoine shook his head ominously. "The arrival of this airman has been unfortunate for us all and for the work we are doing, especially as Herr Schafer happened to see him. Now that his suspicions have become aroused, undoubtedly the cafe will be watched vigilantly. You say Dussault proposes to keep him hiding in the cellar?"

"You should know Pierre by this time, Antoine. When he makes up his mind it is useless to argue." Raoul's brows were drawn in an anxious frown.

"You have seen the flier, Raoul?" Raoul nodded gloomily.

"On receiving word through Gabord, I went immediately to the cafe. Gabord served me some dinner; then when the other diners had departed I went below with Dussault and saw the airman. He unfortunately has a sprained ankle and can't walk at present. In addition, there has been a slight concussion which will, I hope, soon clear up. Personally, I don't see how we can move him for the present."

Inwardly resentful of the fact of Adrienne being brought in daily contact with John Farrell, Raoul's face clouded.

Antoine looked at his watch. "It is time for the B. C. hour." He turned on the radio.

Raoul's train of thought was abruptly cut short by an agitated knocking on the door. Antoine threw it open instantly to disclose the figure of a thin, elderly woman carrying a market basket.

"Turn it off quickly," she cried, her face contorted with fear. "As I came down the street I saw them—those two Gestapo men, who arrested poor Madame Vanter the other day. They took her away and we have no word of her since." Tears rose to the woman's eyes.

Antoine had barely turned off the radio when heavy footsteps resounded overhead and the clamor of voices both French and German issued down the stairway from the upper hall, heavy guttural voices questioning the patronne, her shrill protests rising on the air.

A moment later Raoul and Antoine, their eyes meeting anxiously heard the key turn in the lock. Both were silent as the voices suddenly ceased. The footsteps were heard again, then appeared to be retreating. A moment later Raoul, rising to glance through the window above their heads saw the shadows of two figures passing down the street.

It was with a fatigued air that Pierre Dussault entered the restaurant the next morning. He and Adrienne had taken turns in sitting with the American flier. Covered warmly with blankets, with a cold compress on his head, John had slept fitfully, moaning and talking in his sleep. Towards morning he said he felt better and drank some fruit juice and hot coffee.

Dussault was having crisp rolls and butter and apricot jam, when he looked up to see Herr Schafer entering the cafe.

With a foreboding of danger in the air, he went on sipping his coffee. Possibly the agent had come for his breakfast, merely a pretext for gathering news.

However, Schafer made no pretense of desiring breakfast. He approached the proprietor's table and addressed Dussault in his customary brusque manner.

"Bonjour Monsieur. Will you kindly inform me what became of the man who sat near me yesterday in the cafe? He gave his name as Henri Delisle, and said he was a munition worker."

"Henri Delisle," echoed M. Dussault, a perplexed frown gathering between his brows. "I don't know the man. Are you alluding to the one whose head was bandaged? I must admit I never saw him before."

Herr Schafer fixed his cold blue eyes on Pierre. "Yes, that is the man. You will admit, Monsieur, it is very strange that he should have left the cafe without being observed by our man who was stationed outside."

"M'sieu! you speak in riddles," retorted Dussault in amazement. "How can I possibly know the exact moment of departure of our many patrons? You must realize I am a busy man—too busy to take note of such trivialities."

"Then perhaps Mademoiselle Girard could throw some light on the subject?" Schafer's scrutiny had shifted towards Adrienne who entered at that moment with a breakfast order for a customer.

"Frau! it is possible you noticed the departure yesterday afternoon of the young man with the bandaged head, who claimed to be Henri Delisle, a munition worker. In answer to our enquiries at the plant to which he referred, we have discovered there is no such person employed there."

"M'sieu evidently credits me with a power of mind reading I do not possess," Adrienne spoke pertly as she put the dishes down on a nearby table; then she turned towards him with a provocative smile. "I exchanged few words with the young man in question. I had never seen him before. Later when I returned from the kitchen with an order, he had gone."

Herr Schafer, though temporarily baffled, left the cafe shortly afterwards with the light of battle in his eye.

Strength FOR THE DAY

By EARL L. DOUGLAS

THESE REQUIRE FIRM HANDLING

A man told me the other day that his oculist had said to him recently, "You're back here every three months asking for stronger glasses, and I suppose I can give them to you. But what you need most is to have something done for your eyes. They need attention, perhaps an operation. You are wasting your time and money trying to better a bad situation with stronger glasses. You had better take steps to try to restore your vision."

There was nothing particularly unusual about the attitude of the man seeking relief. Some generations ago Thomas Carlyle wrote a book called "Past and Present," and he has a great chapter there on Morrison's Pills. It appears that there was a quick remedy in those days widely sought after in England by almost everyone who had a pain. It was high-powered dope which made people insensible for the time being to the real cause of their trouble.

The people who took Morrison's Pills in the old days and the man today who paid no attention to the cause of his failing vision but cried out for stronger glasses, adhere to the same philosophy of life. They are willing to do practically anything except get at the source of their trouble. But most matters of real importance in life require firm handling—sometimes surgery.

TIME FOR ACTION

(Continued from page one) members as the investigation reveals are a detriment to the future progress of the college in view of what has transpired. We say this because we, like the college students, feel that some of the board members were derelict in their duties by letting blind adoration for Dr. Meadows cause them to completely ignore any facts brought out at the hearings detrimental to Dr. Meadows, cheer any minor detail that tended to be in his favor, and attempt in every possible way to brand as undependable, and a liar, every witness who offered detrimental testimony and to place the State Auditing Department and State Bureau of Investigation in disrepute by referring to the audit as a "so-called audit and report of investigation." One of the women members of the board (from outside Greenville) told us that the word "ugly" did not describe our previous editorial in this matter and she added that she was tired of papers throughout the state trying to tell the board how to run the college. Our reply to her was that if one was of the mind to place the interests of the college in first place it was time somebody was telling the board something. We mention this regarding the one particular member of the board with no desire to be smart or to bring personalities in this matter, but merely to bear out our statement regarding the attitude of certain members before, throughout, and after the hearings.

Not only should there be a

full investigation of the fitness of board members to serve, but the investigation should continue throughout the college from top to bottom. No member of the faculty should be penalized solely because of his or her stand for or against Dr. Meadows in this matter, but on the basis of whether he or she is doing a good job of training our young people and whether or not his or her presence tends to bring harmony or dissention on the college campus.

The future of East Carolina Teachers College means too much to the state and nation to let one person or a group of persons hinder or impede its progress, and for this reason we repeat, we believe the students took the right action in placing this matter in the hands of the highest state official for attention and proper action.

WASHINGTON IN WARTIME

By JACK STINNETT

Washington—A visiting editor asked me the other day: "Can't you clarify the manpower shortage and all this talk about drafting fathers?"

"I can't. The very term 'manpower shortage' is an anomaly. There isn't really any 'manpower shortage' in this country. There is an unequal distribution of manpower (and womanpower) that has some industries and industrial centers screaming. Seasonal industries (fishing and agriculture during harvest) have been the hardest hit."

Now, suddenly, for the first time since preparation for this war started, the military forces are running behind schedule.

The Army and Navy set their mid-1944 sights at approximately 11,500,000 men. Some months ago, the draft boards began to drop behind until now they are around three-quarters of a million short. In addition, there will have to be at least a half-million service replacements by July 1. That means that without disrupting vital industries or agriculture, the armed forces are going to have to find 1,250,000 men quickly.

From the military and war production standpoint, the easiest out would be a national service act to permit the efficient shifting of man and womanpower. Such a proposal has met with so many objections that it's almost safe to say it won't happen here—at least until after the election, and probably not even then.

The alternative is reclassification of deferments and a considerable

Dixie Lunch Gives Receipts Red Cross

By CHESTER WALSH

The Greek-American owners of the Dixie Lunch, at Five Points, gave the restaurant's entire cash receipts from 10 o'clock yesterday morning until 10 o'clock last night to the American Red Cross—$170.60. The women of the Service League took over the cashier's desk yesterday morning and handled the money. They worked in relays and welcomed the patrons who came to the popular eating place on Red Cross Day. This was the third year the patriotic owners gave a day's receipts to the Red Cross.

President's Power Would Be Limited

Washington, March 23.—(AP)—The House Foreign Affairs Committee voted today to give Congress, rather than the President, the final say-so in the settlement of lend-lease contracts.

An amendment with this effect was written into the legislation extending lend-lease for another year beyond June 30. It was offered by Rep. Wadsworth (R-N.Y.) and adopted unanimously before the entire bill was reported out for action by the House.

Concerning Books in the SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

A Window Toward China
Forsencing the vital need of mutual understanding among peoples in setting up a durable peace after this war, the libraries all over our country are featuring next week as "China Book Week." There will be on display literally thousands of books on our close neighbor to the west, our confederate-at-arms. Since the earth has gone in for reducing China has become our next door neighbor, even though one she was so far away and fabulous that most of us thought of her as a land on another planet.

On the American Library Association list are more than fifty books on China. The Sheppard Memorial Library has probably one-half of them. Among the authors are names we know: Chiang Kai-Shek, Mtns. Chiang Kai-Shek, Lin Yu-tong, Pearl Buck, Halleck Abelfeld and Nathaniel Peffer.

Such books are necessary for us to know, if we are to play our part in human affairs. They open a window looking out upon a scene that fills a quarter of our world.

The first lady of China has been taken to the hearts of the American people. But even before she left our shores, she had spoken and written eloquently of the past of China, and especially Chinese women, in the new world. Her speeches are put together in "We Chinese Women."

Hallett Abend's memoirs, "My Life in China," make the most vivid and enlightening history yet written of the rise of China as a great power. This brilliant account of sixteen years of strenuous life in China will make us alive to the reality of our Oriental ally.

Undoubtedly the greatest and most interesting family of modern times are the Soongs of whom Cornelia Spencer writes in "Three Sisters." It is the story of a man whose dream was that his children should do something to change and improve China. He never could have dreamed that they would change it so greatly.

Nathaniel Peffer believes that given victory in the war and foresight in the making of the peace, we can save ourselves from a fate in the Far East such as hung over Europe for centuries. His book, "Basis for Peace in the Far East," is succinct, compelling, discerning, informed.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek and his wife, Stillwell, Anna Strong and Agnes Smedley are only a few of the celebrities that Iona Hoff Sues knew or worked with during her seven years in China. Her book "Sharp's Fins and Millet," tells of these people, the Flying Tigers and the Eighth Route army in action.

"The Battle Hymn of China" is a book by an American correspondent Agnes Smedley, to whom the problems and weaknesses of China seem to be those of the whole world. It holds up before us the spectacle of China's agony and isolation, her courage and her hope. Generals and peasant soldiers, medical pioneers, silk spinners, v enial diplomats, captured Japanese, abject traitors, unsung heroes—all are here!

That Loosen FALSE TEETH

Need Not Embarrass

Many wearers of false teeth have suffered real embarrassment because their plate dropped, slipped or wobbled at just the wrong time. Do not live in fear of this happening to you. Just sprinkle a little PASTEREETH, the alkaline (non-acid) powder, on your plates. Holds false teeth more firmly, so they feel more comfortable. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). Get PASTEREETH at any drug store.

past centuries," said the Times. "The division of Europe today into w or ally or thirty sovereign independent units, owing no allegiance to any higher authority, is incompatible with the military security and economic well-being of the European peoples. This is a hard, irrefutable fact. To attempt to override it on the grounds of any general theory of self-determination would be an act not of high political principle but of political madness."

We are as I see it on the verge of a period of hard-boiled and sometimes harsh realities. What the big three—America, Britain and Russia—have to iron out is whether there is hence the broad general principles of the original declarations.

However, nothing has happened either to alter the trend towards division of the world into spheres of influence over which will preside the dominant nations.

N. Y. Stock Market
New York, March 23—(AP)—Selected stocks took a little recovery nourishment in today's market under leadership of rails, liquors, aircrafts and specialties.
While many industrials were hesitant at the opening, and later failed to attract worthwhile bids, narrowing gains of fractions to a point or more were fairly well distributed. Losers of as much, at the same time, were plentiful. It was one of the lightest sessions of the past two weeks, however, transfers falling to around 1,000,000 shares.

Chaplains Play Important Part

Washington, March 23—(AP)—Chaplains don't fight, but they do get killed in battle.
Only the air forces and the infantry have suffered a higher proportion of casualties among their officers than the chaplain corps, the army reported today.
From the start of the war to the end of last year, 19 chaplains were killed in battle, 19 wounded, 33 were prisoners, one was missing in an action, and 31 had died of accidents or illness.
The decorations in the corps were evidence too, that failure to shoot had nothing to do with heroism—85 chaplains having received a total of three Distinguished Service Crosses, three Croix De Guerre, 26 Silver Stars, 15 Legion of Merit, 39 Purple Hearts and four Soldiers Medals, or 90 decorations in all.

Planes Attack Convoy
London, March 23—(AP)—Beaufighters attacked two small enemy ships off Norway and left one afire, the Air Ministry announced today, and one Beaufighter is missing.
The Berlin radio earlier declared three British torpedo-carrying planes were shot down in an attack on a German convoy near Stadlandet.

New Guinea, where Allied bombers unloaded better than 1,600 tons of bombs in little more than a week. Wewak was plastered with 160 tons which caused considerable damage to supply dumps and barges in the harbor. The entire area was left under a pall of smoke which rose 4,000 feet. The latest enemy destroyer sunk was spotted by a Liberator 22 miles east of Tadjib in the Aitape area of New Guinea Monday night. A 1,000-pound bomb badly crippled the ship, and the next morning the Liberator finished it off with 2,000 pounds of explosives.
In the painfully slow ground campaign on New Guinea, an Australian patrol following the Kabe-ma river made contact with an American force moving up the shoreline from Saidor. They joined in a drive on Bogadjim, main defense outpost for Japan's big base of Madang. This combined force which reported small skirmishes with the enemy is now about seven miles south of Bogadjim.

blows against bridges at Pogglion and Arezzo, south of Florence, and Popoli, in front of the Eighth army line.
German planes swept low over the Cassino area, shooting up Allied positions.
German artillery tried repeatedly to knock out bridges across the Rapido river below the town, but all their attempts failed.

Nazi aircraft attacked Allied shipping off the Anzio beachhead, but it was announced that they caused no damage. On the beachhead German artillery pumped a heavy concentration into Allied lines near the village of Padiglione.
In the heavy bomber mission against Verona, a formation of 20 enemy planes, including rocket-firing ships, attempted to intercept, but escorting Lightnings beat them off and shot down two. Returning crewmen said railway crossings and freight yards were smothered by bombs.
The British bombers touched off violent explosions apparently in ammunition stores, in the night attack on Padua. The fliers described the target area as "one sea of fire."
Marauders destroyed two bridges north of Pogribsoni and a headquarters spokesman said this interrupted the last unimpeded railroad from the north to Rome. Other formations hit a viaduct on the main double track line west of Arrezzo.
Seven enemy aircraft were destroyed during the day, five of them falling to Spitfires in sweeps over the Anzio and Cassino sectors.
The loss of four Allied planes was announced.

U. S. Bombers . . .

great numbers of prisoners fell to the red army forces, the Soviet communiqué declared.
Pervomaisk and Vosnesensk, 40 miles to the south, had been blocking the Russian advance on Nikolaev and Odessa. Fall of Vosnesensk, which appeared imminent, would clear the path to both Black Sea ports.
Pushing on from Pervomaisk, the Russians crossed the river to storm the town of Ivanovka, 10 miles to the southeast and swept down the Bug to take Alexandrovka, nine miles north of Vosnesensk, Moscow said. Scores of other towns and hamlets were reported liberated by Malinovsky's army, including Balabanovka, eight miles from Nikolaev.
Moscow, often silent when an important Soviet movement is in progress, made no mention of the German-reported drive from the Turbopol sector, but Berlin described it as "a great flanking attack" in support of the Russian forces operating further south. The Nazi announcement said German forces were falling back under strong pressure by infantry and tanks.
