Fifth Army ...

(Continued from Page One) The Alban hills begin to rise from the Poine plain. "Despite several sharp German counterattacks, the Americans are advancing slowly in the direction of Rome," a battlefront dispatch from Associated Press Correspondent Edward Kennedy declared. Meanwhile the Eighth army in the Liri and Sacco valleys to the south pushed ahead, breaking down German rear guard positions. As the sound of the great battle rolled into Rome, the enemy in the mountain southeast of Valmontone was driven out of the towns of Sermoneta and Bassiano, below Norma, which was overwhelmed yesterday. Snipers still were active in the hills beyond this area and Fifth army patrols were mopping them up. In the northward drive the Fifth army slashed across two of the bitterest battlegrounds of the beachhead fights of last February. French forces meantime followed up their seizure of Villa Santo Stefano by taking off northward through the hills toward the Liri valley, and the battle moved westward to the Caserta plain. On the heels of the capture yesterday of the important town of Ceperano, on highway six and the Liri river, the Eighth army pushed west and north, throwing bridges rapidly across the Liri and Sacco rivers, where the enemy had blown up crossings. Lt. Gen. Sir Oliver Lesse's troops swept westward six miles from Ceperano to Pofi. To the north, in the area of Arce at the junction of highways six and 82, they surrounded the towering Monte Orso dominating Arce and surrounding Santo Padre, four and a half miles northeast. From the beachhead Fifth army troops met stubborn resistance every inch of the way in their drive to crack the Anzio-Albano highway, down which the Germans poured vicious attacks last February and past the April highway, railroad and factory areas of north of the beachhead was established. Allied forces pounding to within a mile and a half of Lanuvio, southwest of Veicetri, ran into some of the most determined counterattacks the enemy has launched thus far. The Germans threw everything they had into these counter-thrusts, including flame-throwers. A prisoner of war said the Germans had used tanks as artillery in recent fighting, digging them in where they were offered the best protection in culverts and buildings. Further Nazi reinforcements appeared, in addition to elements of the Hermann Goering 92nd division which until recently had been in a rest area north of Rome.

Cherry To Be ... (Continued from Page One) Morrison and Hesse are 100 per cent members of the administration's foreign policy. Both are party "regulars," and have been in North Carolina's public life for several decades. Cherry, the state's new governor, is a veteran of many legislative sessions and in the last decade has played a big part in fiscal affairs of the state. He has served seven successive terms in the legislature—five in the house and two in the senate. He was a member of the Finance committee in both chambers and was chairman of the House committee in 1935. He is also a former speaker of the house.

Nazis Watching ...

(Continued from Page One) tons and speculations in connection with the next date that Germany cannot possibly be taken by surprise. The Swiss newspaper, Gazette de Lausanne, gave a new clue to the defense problem of the west, complicated by the roads tangled and snarled by profusions of Allied bombs. The newspaper said there was increasing fear of a general D-day strike of French railroad workers and that the Nazis were sending in more key transportation officials and workers for key posts. Nazi propaganda broadcasts also said "Gen. Eisenhower is waiting for fresh troops from America" before giving the go-ahead for the western assault. "The Allied high command has allowed the past week—most favorable both from the point of view of tides and weather—so by because it has discovered flaws in armament and preparations of the invasion forces," proclaimed the German-controlled Brussels radio. Amid much speculation in this capital, Allied authorities said they failed to see how a Berlin-announced meeting between Hitler and the Japanese ambassador to Berlin, Gen. Hiroshi Oshima, fitted into the picture. The meeting at Hitler's headquarters, with Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop present, was for consideration of "acute questions of German-Japanese collaboration." It was hard to see how Japan, Gen. Oshima taking a military beating in the Pacific, could do much "collaborating." There was invasion tenseness in this armed island over the sunny Whitsun week-end. The people re-

Fortress Europe ... (Continued from Page One) more struck from Italy, chiefly at the Italian battle area. Kreising is five miles southeast of Poznan where the heavy bombers have battered aircraft factories before. Tutov also has been bombed before. Leipzig, Cottbus and Sorau all are in the very heart of central Germany between 100 and 130 miles south of Berlin. Poznan is 50 miles inside the Polish border. Seven heavy bombers were forced to land in Sweden, Stockholm dispatches said. Germany was on the alert almost continuously throughout the "day." The "Achtung" warnings started clattering the enemy air waves a couple of hours after dawn and it was not until 4 p. m. that the enemy could assert that the Reich was "clear of enemy planes." Then an hour later the networks warned of "single enemy raiders over southwest Germany." The Germans declared heavy air battles were fought, with Nazi fighters striking through Allied escort screens into the bomber formations. "The daylight assaults capped a night in which the RAF kept the snow-balling air offensive rolling unchecked by assaults on the northern French railroad center of Angers, the German chemical city of Ludwigshafen, and other targets on the French coast. "The largest American aerial armada yet dispatched delivered fiery and explosive blows to a dozen targets Sunday including five urgent-needed synthetic oil plants around Leipzig, Dresden and Magdeburg in the very heart of the central Reich, a United States communiqué said. Extensive fires and explosions were recorded in fuel factories at Ruhland, Lutzendorf, Merseburg, Magdeburg and Zeitz. The German army tank and armored vehicle plants at Kassel and Brunswick suffered "heavy and extensive damage" with all principal buildings hit, the communiqué said. Other damage was done by the 1,000 bombers and 1,200 convoying fighters at a Junkers aircraft engine factory at Leipzig-Taucha; at Zwickau where rail yards and the airframe were bombed; at Brandenburg airdrome near Leipzig; and at the railroad yards east of Berlin at Frankfurt and at Cologne. In the first reported tactical operation of the day, a big force of American Mustang and Marauder medium bombers and A-20 Havoc light bombers attacked four bridges in northern France and Belgium, also the Achet airfield north of Paris. One bridge was over the Meuse at Liege-Val-Benoit. Thunderbolts escorted the bombers. The RAF operations last night which also included mine laying in enemy waters, cost one British plane. The railway center at Angers—a new objective—was the main target of the British nightbombers. The attack was reported here, although the Air Ministry indicated the force was not unusually large. It probably consisted of several hundred bombers. Since dawn Saturday, exclusive of the late night attack by British planes about 14,500 tons of bombs have been tossed by Allied planes on countless continental objectives by some 12,000 aerial sorties (individual plane flights) flown from both Britain and Italy. This tempest of fire and steel was the greatest American special raid since the beachhead on Sicily. A fleet of about 2,200 bombers and fighters—smash at synthetic oil plants and other installations in central and western Germany Sunday. The American raiders delivered the heaviest single day in the western European air war. In all more than 6,000 planes roared out from British bases and rained more than 8,500 tons of bombs on targets ranging all the way from the channel coast to Leipzig. American losses were 34 heavy bombers and 13 fighters while 93 German fighters were shot down, a U. S. communiqué said. American fighters accounted for 61 enemy planes and bomber gunners got the rest. More than 1,200 Lightnings Mustangs and Thunderbolts escorted the Flying Fortresses and Liberators, 1,000 strong, while RAF and Dominion fighters provided withdrawal cover.

Americans ...

(Continued from Page One) Americans also took two enemy six-inch guns, four five-inch and two three-inch pieces, MacArthur reported. These guns participated in the exchange of shells with American and Australian naval vessels which covered Saturday's landing.

The ships suffered some damage. The Americans also liberated 200 Japanese held as laborers by the Japanese. Nine enemy planes, five of them bombers, were downed by Allied fighters and surface vessels' anti-aircraft guns. One of the four Japanese bombers accounted for by the fleets' ack-ack crashed on an escort vessel, damaging the ship and causing casualties. MacArthur described the Bjak landings as virtually concluding the Allied campaign for New Guinea. The thrust was 200 miles west of Wakde island, which had fallen under the Yankee invasion wave May 18. In the Sarmi area on the New Guinea mainland near Wakde island, American infantrymen battling for the Maffin airdrome captured nearby Hill 225, one mile southeast of the field, thereby winning an excellent artillery position to hammer the enemy. Disintegration of Japanese forces in the neighborhood of Hollandia, 110 miles east of the Wakde-Sarmi area, continued with the trapped soldiers of the enemy's 18th army deprived of supplies or reinforcements by the American invasion there April 22. MacArthur said American patrols and natives daily reported finding Japanese dead and dying in the jungle backlands.

Strength FOR THE DAY

IT'S UP TO US It is said of James Addams that night after night as a little girl she had a dream that she alone remained alive in a deserted world and that upon her rested the sole responsibility for making a wheel which would somehow start again the world's affairs. Often in that dream she stood in a blacksmith shop, "darkly pondering, just how to begin, and never knowing how." Prophets and great leaders are usually people overwhelmed with a sense of mission. They feel that something has to be done which they alone can do. Their enterprise can be left to no one else. Such conviction on this matter does not arise from the fact that they are conceited, but from a deep moral pressure within their hearts which convinces them that unless they bestir themselves, certain advances for human betterment will never be made. We all need to have something of this feeling. We can't leave the bettering of the world to preachers, reformers, and politicians. If we can only be more neighborly and try to make things more pleasant in our block, more livable in our section of the city, more decent in the community at large, more just in the country and the world, we can make a contribution far in excess of anything we think possible. More depends upon us as individuals than we sometimes suspect. All Rights Reserved. Babson Newspaper Syndicate.

(Continued from page one) He considers a veterans' claims just, will fight for him in the U. S. courts without charge, win or lose. But the boss who fights a case will have to pay his own attorney and, if he loses, court costs, too. Additionally, he will be liable for that back pay for the veteran because of time lost in the court contest. Any employer, seeking to show that a veteran before going into the service had waived re-employment rights, must be prepared to prove it. An employer is not required to re-employ a veteran, if his circumstances have changed as to make it "unreasonable or impossible to do so." But what is "unreasonable or impossible?" SS says that must be decided by circumstances in each case. The convenience of an employer, SS adds, must be distinguished from "impossible" or "unreasonable." SS says: "The fact that the non-veteran to be replaced is receiving less pay than the employer would be required to pay the veteran should not be considered as a condition "unreasonable or impossible."

THE WAR TODAY

(Continued from Page One) mentone decidedly was a point worth watching as a key to Allied progress. Via Casilina isn't, of course, the only avenue of escape for Nazi Field Marshal Kesselring's retreating troops. About 25 miles along this highway to the southeast lies the big and also strategic town of Frosinone and from there another highway, and also a railroad, run a bit northward and then turn towards Rome above Via Casilina. This Frosinone thoroughfare also divides after a bit, providing still another avenue which, ultimately winds in towards Rome. Thus the wily Kesselring won't be cut off even if he loses Via Casilina. However, that is his chief avenue for withdrawal not only of troops but of masses of equipment. So while he may be able to save many of his soldiers, he already has lost heavily through death and capture, and his losses in materiel already are grave. Kesselring's problem is to disengage and retreat in face of strong enemy pressure without catastrophe. Thus far he appears to have done a business-like job. However, neither his undoubted skill nor that of any other man could evade the havoc being caused in his retreating columns by the Allied airforce which controls the sky and is constantly hammering the roadways.

Mrs. Whedbee referred to customs in social usage, in name, words and phrases, in clothes, in furniture and buildings, in the observance of days, in weddings, in superstitions and in mourning.

Wave Enlistment Drive Under Way

Backed by civic and fraternal organizations throughout the state as "a movement worthy of the consideration of every eligible young woman," a campaign for enlistments in the Women's Naval Reserve has been launched in North Carolina.

Reason for the campaign, it was explained by Lt. Cmdr. C. B. Neely of Raleigh, officer in charge of recruiting and induction for North Carolina, is the urgent need for men in combat duty, one more of whom can be released for such duty with every WAVE enlistment.

"As the critical hours of this world-wide war approach, it obviously is necessary that every available man be on the front lines," Commander Neely said. "Where are thousands now who necessarily must be confined to shore stations because of lack of replacements. That is where the WAVES already are playing an important role in this vast war picture."

"But there is a critical need for more young women to take over the tasks ashore so that qualified men may be sent to sea."

"It is difficult for the average person to realize the scope of this war, but the Navy is fully cognizant of the importance of its Women's Reserve and exhorts every young woman to at least inquire as to the possibilities open to her in the WAVES."

"The majority of WAVES now in service are working in the same fields they followed in civil life. Thousands have found new work and new skills they will be able to use after the war."

Recruiter H. S. Lee of the Greenville station, will be in Greenville each Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday to interview young women interested in applying for enlistment in the WAVES.

Reflector Election Party Was Big Event
By CHESTER WALSH

"Happy Days Were Here Again" for the hundreds of Pitt Countians who assembled in front of the Reflector office Saturday night to learn the first and only unofficial local election returns as rapidly as the ballots were totaled at the 20 voting precincts in the county.

It was a good-natured crowd and was representative of every phase of the community life and leadership in the various townships.

The Reflector block was roped off for the occasion.

A large delegation watched the Reflector bulletin board from the Proctor Hotel, cajoled the crowd in the street and contributed some "harmony" from the balcony.

The unofficial returns, compiled exclusively by the Reflector after Saturday's election, has been the custom of the paper for the nearly half a century it has been a daily paper.

Partisan groups were in islands

Reflector Election Party Was Big Event

All in all, it was a good-natured crowd and out there to find out particularly who was to be the next Governor of North Carolina.

The election returns came in promptly as a result of well-regulated machinery set up by the Reflector for assembling authentic official results.

"It's an old Southern custom to attend the Reflector's election parties," said a prominent leader from the lower end of Pitt County.

The paper's tie-in with Greenville's radio station, WGTC, to broadcast the state and local returns was a distinctive public service.

The statewide hookup with the Tobacco Network for 15 minutes, with Charles Whedbee at the radio station and "diminutive" Carl McKinney at the microphone in the Reflector office to broadcast the election results was a feature.

Several hundred people spent some time at the election party and then went home to hear returns from the same source over the radio.

The Reflector had representatives at every one of the 20 voting places who reported to the office promptly as soon as the ballots were totaled. This exclusive public news service, given this year in cooperation with WGTC, is one of a numerous public services the paper provides.

Incidentally, returns were in early. The crowd began to dwindle by 11 o'clock. At midnight the street was deserted. The bulletin board with its returns remained out
