Allied Forces Push Ahead On Both European Fronts

Swift Advances Made In Italy; Gains In France

Some Troops Gain As Much As 25 Miles In 24 Hours On Italian Front; Terni, Industrial Provincial Capital Above Rome Seized By Allied Forces

By SID FEDER Rome, June 16 (AP)—The Allies smashed forward from the Adriatic to the Tyrrhenian sea today, some troops advancing as much as 25 miles in 24 hours, and capturing such important highway towns as Acquafredda, Narni and Terni along the way.

Farthest advance came by the Eighth army in the capture of Todi, approximately 60 air-line miles northeast of Rome, and only 85 miles south of the Pisa-Rimini line, where the fleeing Germans may make a stand.

There has been no sign of any organized enemy defense in front of a line running from Pisa on the west coast through the city of Florence to Rimini on the Adriatic.

The Fifth army pushed above Lake Bolsena and captured Acquafredda, about seven miles north on highway No. 2.

The Eighth army captured the important industrial and communication center of Terni, 45 miles northwest of Rome, and the high way junction town of Narni, about seven miles southwest of Terni.

Other Eighth army troops advanced ten miles north of Orvieto, and in the Adriatic sector the Nazis have withdrawn so rapidly that the Allied troops have been able to maintain only a slender contact with the enemy.

Americans advancing up the Tyrrhenian coast against increasing artillery fire and demolitions pushed eight miles beyond Orbetello, near Scansano and approached Grosseto on Highway No. 1 almost 100 miles northwest of Rome.

Inland the drive past Lake Bolsena was carrying forward toward Proceno, three miles beyond Acquafredda.

East of the lake besides taking Narni, whose capture first was announced yesterday, Terni and Todi, the Eighth army sped on and reached Massa Martana, 16 miles north of Terni.

Just to the west of this area the Eighth army pushed up highway 71 to Piculle, 10 miles beyond Orvieto. With the break in their lines the Germans have been suffering considerable casualties the last three days. Some have been running away, throwing their equipment, and one Eighth army armored regiment took so many prisoners that help had to be sent.

Louis Tebeau Is Wounded In Action

T-Sgt. Louis Tebeau, of this city, was seriously wounded in action on the European front June 2 according to an official telegram received yesterday by his mother, Mrs. Ruth Tebeau. T-Sgt. Tebeau is a radio-sonner on a B-26 Marauder bomber.

The WAR TODAY

AN ANALYSIS OF THE NEWS

By DEWITT MACKENIE (Associated Press War Analyst) The significance of the sensational American bombing of Japan lies not in the mere fact that we've struck a terrifying blow at the Mikado's own domains, for we've done that before, but that at long last we are operating from land bases—not aircraft carriers.

This presumably marks the beginning of regular air assaults on the Japanese homeland, and by bombers so huge and powerful that the biggest machines previously employed (and they are monsters) are relegated to the position of mere "mediums." With the bombs from these Leviathans tearing at the bowels of General Tojo's industries, we shall achieve a great shortening of the war in the Orient.

Our high command is purposely withholding details of this historic raid so as not to give the enemy information. The Japanese have said that we have bombed industrial areas of Moji and Shimoneski,

Americans Carry War Closer To Jap Homeland

Official Navy Department reports late yesterday confirmed earlier Tokyo reports that American forces had landed on Saipan, in the Mariana Islands (1); today's Tokyo report said the 31st American aerial task force is attacking in the Bonin Islands, (2), less than 700 miles from Japan proper; yesterday B-29 superfortresses operating from the India-China-Burma theater, rained destruction on Japan (3); meanwhile heavy bombers from MacArthur's Southwest Pacific forces, dealt devastating blows to Jap bases on Yap, Truk and Palau, on the route to the Philippines.

Latest Actions In Pacific Point To Ultimate Devastation Of Japan

Yesterday's Bombing Of Japan Is But A Foretaste Of Fate In Store For The Nipponese

By C. YATES Mc DANIEL (Associated Press Chief of Bureau in Southwest Pacific) The explosion of American bombs on Japanese soil yesterday demonstrated to friend and foe alike that the Allies at long last have achieved two essentials to victory in the Pacific—planes with the range and bases from which they can operate against the heart of the Nipponese empire.

But neither the fulfillment of every American airman's dream since Pearl Harbor nor the daring amphibious assault which almost simultaneously swept veteran American beach-storming troops ashore on Saipan—1500 miles from Japan—spells the overnight destruction of Japan's wartime industry or the collapse of her armed resistance.

Taken together, however, the bombing of Japan and the landing in the Marianas do mean the beginning of the end for the Japanese, even though small and fraught with difficulties and perhaps setbacks, of a systematic aerial bombardment of the still formidable and until yesterday virtually undisturbed mainstays of Nipponese resistance.

Chiang Kai-Shek's armies—with American air support—may be able to foil the enemy's best efforts. But even if the Chinese fail to stop the Japanese the still unrevealed range of the enemy's costly efforts to land, gain control of central China's north-south railway would be one thing for the Japanese; sweeping westward to Tibet and the borders of India would be quite another.

The American landing on Saipan may well be causing the Tokyo command as much worry as the B-29 (Continued on page four)

Nazi Pilotless Planes Smash At England Today

By LEWIS HAWKINS London, June 16 (AP)—Flame-spitting pilotless planes dove into southern England today and last night in the Germans' first "secret weapon" reaction to the invasion of France.

These craft, exploding on the ground or close to it, caused deaths and considerable damage at scattered points and sent anti-aircraft guns barking extensively in daylight for the first time since the early blitz days of 1940.

Descriptions of the weapon varied considerably but all agreed that these self-destroying aircraft flew at terrific speed in a straight line, were marked by bright lights, and shot flames from their exhausts—suggesting they might be jet or rocket-propelled.

The lights presumably were to aid in radio control, probably from piloted planes at a great distance. The German command said only that southern England and the greater London area were attacked with novel weapons and "super heavy" explosives were dropped.

A special note broadcast after the communication of the high command and "there is hardly one German who will not receive this news with greatest satisfaction. The feelings of hatred and a burning wish for retaliation which dominate the German people have been kindled by our enemies in their terror crimes."

The British Ministry of Home Security ordered civilians to stay away from the pilotless aircraft, which explode five to 15 seconds after landing.

One correspondent telephoned this word picture of the pilotless craft: "The planes have a distinctive, rhythmic note, giving the effect of a pulsating, low throbb. They are much smaller than a Spitfire but their appearance is much the same. They really are midge planes. At night they show a distinct yellow glow at the rear and in the light of searchlights streams of thick smoke can be seen being ejected from them."

"Many of them have been observed in daylight and on several occasions RAF fighters, with total disregard of danger, have dived into the ack ack fire around them in attempts to make a kill."

As the day wore on alerts and all clear alternated over southern England and guns cracked intermittently, but the nation's business went on without interruption. Home Secretary Herbert S. Morrison told Commons today that a few of these radio-controlled planes were first used Tuesday night, and came over again last night and today in large numbers.

While he was speaking, southern England shook to light and heavy anti-aircraft guns and rockets barked out at these raiders coming over sporadically. More enemy raiders were seen crossing the southern English coast at intervals this morning, with an (Continued on Page Four)

Four B-29 Bombers Were Lost In Yesterday's Raid On Japan; Crew On One Bomber Known To Be Safe; Japanese Steel Industry At Yawata Was Main Target

(By The Associated Press) Washington, June 16.—(AP)—Four of America's mighty sky battleships were lost in yesterday's attack on Yawata, the "Pittsburgh of Japan."

The 20th bomber command, adding new details to earlier sketchy announcements of the historic raid, said two of the mammoth craft went down due to accidents, one was lost over the target and a fourth is missing.

An earlier communique reported that two B-29's were lost as the result of accidents. The later announcement indicated that the wreckage of one of the big bombers, built in secrecy, now may be in the hands of the enemy.

Washington, June 16.—(AP)—The night B-29's were lost in accidents but through enemy action yesterday as America's new super-bombers turned Japanese industrial targets into "glowing masses of wreckage."

The crew of one lost plane, however, is safe, the War Department reported. The number of participating aircraft was not made known as first details emerged on the historic attack which marked the beginning of an entirely new chapter of aerial warfare with the greatest bombers ever built.

Today's communique issued by headquarters of the new 20th air force, controlling the operations of the super-fortresses around the world, was based on preliminary and incomplete reports from the combat zone.

The formation was described as "a sizeable task force" operating from recently completed bases in China. (Continued on Page Four)

No Lower Taxes Until After War

Washington, June 16.—(AP)—Chairman Douglas (D-NC) of the Ways and Means Committee doesn't hold out much hope for a lowering of taxes until after victory is won, but he emphasizes that congress wants "to be ready" for speedy adjustments.

Yesterday an immediate study of postwar taxation was ordered by the joint senate-house committee on internal revenue. And the announcement by Rep. Reed (R-NY) that his special Republican congressional committee on taxation would hold public hearings on a postwar tax bill at the present time, has brought this comment from Douglas:

"It is utterly impractical to attempt the writing now of actual tax legislation to fit the postwar period."

Today On The Home

JAMES MARLOW and GEORGE Z...

Washington, June 16.—(AP)—Some congressmen, facing elections, ponder: Should I become a quilter?

The Republican congressman could turn off the campaign charm by five different places at the same time.

A Washington outfit called "Business Films," has sent congressmen a little printed pep-talk which says:

"How can you be quilters? The motion picture is the one way your personality can reach all your voting public."

It's very simple, the pep-talk says. A congressman pays $300 for a one-minute motion picture of himself in sound, talking. He gets five prints of the picture.

So the picture can be shown in five different theaters in his home district at the same time and may be made the rounds of all the theaters there.

Theaters showing the picture will do it supposedly, for free or friendship. The $300 pays for making the picture, not the cost of the film. But congressmen, other way of making their ears.

Every day for you, congressmen, the radio records to the radio records of this project is 1000.

For $5 congressmen 10-minute talks with and sent back to stations for broadcast. With elections near, recordings have climbed weekly and will go higher.

Women in the Church

Only twice in its more than one hundred years has the Northern Baptist Convention, the national body of some 1,539,000 Baptists in the United States, elected a woman as its president. The second time was when Mrs. Leslie E. Swain of Providence, R. I., was unanimously chosen for 1944-45. Mrs. Swain, wife of a retired Brown University professor, has long been active in church circles, president of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Missionary Society, vice-president of the Foreign Missions Conference of N. A., former vice-president, Woman's Home Missionary Society of her church, delegate to the Madras (India) Conference of the International Missionary Council. The only other woman president was the late Helen Barrett Montgomery in 1920-21.

The executive committee of the Women's Society of Christian Service of the Methodist Church, in recent session urged three measures upon officials of the U. S. Government and called upon Methodist groups to make known their desires in these matters to their congressmen. They called for support of a measure which would enable Asiatic Indians to enter the United States under the quota provision similar to that already enacted for the Chinese; they called upon President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull to aid in establishing a general international organization with membership open to all states, large and small, to work together for the welfare and security of the world as a whole; and they urged the same officials to have embodied in post-war plans "agreements and machinery" which will secure the political, social and economic advancement of African and other colonial peoples where they live, no matter what their nationality may be. The woman is Helen Hiett who has made intimate friendships with young people in England, France, Italy, Germany and Spain. Through her close association with them, she grew to understand the basis of real inter-nationalism—the common bond which unites the fighting generation everywhere in the world today.

Another forward-looking book is "How New Will the Better World Be?" by Carl L. Becker. As a lifelong student of history he discusses post-war reconstruction suggesting that the complex forces of our time, and that they cannot be gotten rid of by just wishing, or even good resolutions or treaties—there must be firmer, more lasting ties than these.

"America Unlimited" by the president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, Eric Johnson, is the summing up of his progressive ideas on labor, big business and what he has chosen to call "people's capitalism," representing his convictions regarding the economic future of this country.

Ladd Haystead in his book "Meet the Farmers," attempts the wholesale introduction of our land friends here in the United States. He tells the real truth about these thirty millions of our population on six million farms who produce the food, fiber and vegetable oil without which no war can be won and no peace endure.

"Japan's Islands of Mystery" by Willard Price, is quite possibly a prophetic work. Not only does it forecast what our boys will find on the islands; it outlines what may well be the future of this remarkable island world after responsibility for it has passed largely to the United States.

"Believe it or not" tomorrow housewives will fly to market in helicopters and bridge dates, maybe fifty miles from home," says C. B. F. Maculay in "The Helicopters are Coming," a book about the future that is exciting to read.

An altogether different sort of war book has been written by an altogether different sort of warrior. It is "Bengal Noel" by Captain Garrett Graham. It tells what the Japs on Guadalcanal did to him, together with sundry comments upon manners, morals, the allure or non-allure of South Sea maidens. Remarkable for its vigor, infectious high spirits and its utter honesty.

"Marching Home" by Richard Hart, fills a vital need of servicemen's families for advice regarding their problems and rights, and the rights of their men in service. It answers the many questions that confront funding financial and legal interests.

LADY IN A WHIRL

By Esther Valck-Georgins

Chapter 19

"Why, the count came from New York," Zelda answered innocently, and picked up her coat and started toward the stairs.

"Cora pushed her glasses into position. 'How did he know we were up here?'"

"He didn't know we were up here. He called Pete's apartment to ask Pete where I was, and the maid told him that Pete was up here. Then he had a hunch that maybe I was up here too."

"On," said Cora, a little bit let down. Then, "But even so, Zelda, I can't see how you can have forgotten the way he acted that night, leaving us flat during the raid on The Beantalk."

"Zelda stopped. Then she came back. 'Now see here, Cora, you may as well get used to the count and make up your mind to like him. He has explained everything to me satisfactorily. And besides he's noticed that you dislike him and it makes him unhappy.'"

"Good," sniffed Cora. "If a mere male is allowed a word, Pete said, 'how does he justify his actions that night at The Beantalk, Zelda?'"

"Zelda hesitated. 'I, really shouldn't tell you—but you're being so difficult I'll have to. The fact is, Teddy's in this country on a secret mission.'"

"What kind of a secret mission?" Cora asked.

"I don't know. If I knew it wouldn't be secret, would it? It's in connection with the war, that's all I know about it. Under the circumstances he didn't want to be questioned by the police. Naturally it is important that he doesn't attract any attention to himself."

"Naturally," commented Pete, his face expressionless.

"Anyway," said Zelda. "He's the man I'm going to marry, Cora."

"He'll certainly attract attention if he marries you," Cora observed.

"We don't have to advertise it, do we?"

"Goodness," said Cora, that'll make two secret missions. What a woman of mystery you'll be." She left the room.

"So," said Pete after a minute, "you're going to marry Teddy. I hope you're sure."

Zelda said: "Of course. When you're really in love, Pete, you know it."

"That's right."

"The tone startled Zelda and she gave him a quick look. 'Why, Pete—how do you know? You wouldn't be keeping something from me, would you?'"

"He knocked the ashes from his pipe. 'No, of course not. I have no secret mission,' he told her. 'I'm going to bed.'"

Zelda followed him upstairs. She was busy putting two and two together as she went. Could it be possible there was some girl in Pete's life that she didn't know about? Yes, she decided, it could be possible. He had been acting unlike himself for quite a while. She had thought it was his failure to get in the army that had depressed him. But now she wondered.

"Instead of going to her own room she knocked on Cora's door."

"Come in," the older woman was brushing her hair.

"Cora," Zelda said, "do you suppose Pete's in love?"

"What makes you ask that?"

"I just had a feeling—Could it be possible?"

"Of course it could be possible. You don't think you've got a monopoly on the emotion, do you?"

"But with whom?"

Cora made no answer.

"Do you know?" Zelda demanded.

"Sure."

"Cora! Who?"

"That," said Cora, "is my secret mission."

Zelda went out without saying goodnight, and slammed the door.

"He makes me think," Cora told Pete one afternoon a week or so later, "of one of those peaches you pay fifty cents for—and then when you bite into it, it's no good." She was speaking of the count of course.

Pete laughed. "You're just upset because you can't find anything wrong with him."

"I've an instinct about such things," Cora stated. "I don't feel to see things always. I can't help it."

"You're batty," Pete assured her. "I don't object to his lordship—but I'm getting damn tired of watching them moon about the place. I think I'll go back to New York."

The next morning when she awoke Zelda complained of a slight sore throat, and Cora insisted that she have her breakfast in bed and stay there until she felt better.

Cora hovered over her until finally Zelda said, "Go along, I'll sleep a while."

It was only the middle of the morning and still a couple of hours until lunch. Cora decided to take a walk.

She was sitting by the brook with his pipe and his notebooks. He refused her invitation to accompany her.

"Where's the count?" she asked as she started out.

"I haven't seen him since breakfast. I think he went for a walk too."

"He spends an awful lot of time in the woods," Cora remarked. "Too bad he doesn't fall off a cliff and break his neck."

"Gosh, you've got a sweet disposition."

"Well—not so sweet maybe, but frank," Cora grinned. "And don't try to fool me, Peter. You don't like him any better than I do."

Cora headed for the path that led up the mountain.

Chapter 20

It was a perfect day—the sky too blue to be real, and the brook dashing and dimpled in the sun. Cora couldn't help but be happy on such a day and she whistled softly as she hiked along. She was not built for climbing, however, and soon she ceased whistling in order to save her breath.

The path became narrower and the undergrowth more dense. She stopped for a minute to rest and admire the tall yellow flowers that grew beside the path, thinking it would be nice to take some back to Zelda. She gathered an enormous bunch of them. The handsomest ones had always seemed to be a little turner on, though, and when she finished Cora was much deeper in the woods than she had intended to go.

She stopped and tried to remember how she had got there, decided the path was to her left and struck out in that direction. But after a few minutes of bad going she had to admit she was wrong.

Now see here, she told herself don't get rattled. You can't get lost on a mountain. All you have to do is go down. If you go down you're bound to come to the bottom of it. But the going got worse, instead of better, and it was rough going through the bushes and small trees. She swerved from her course to avoid an especially heavy growth and came out into a comparatively clear spot.

Stopping to get her bearings, Cora spied an opening in the hillside. It was evidently a cave, and facing by the size of the entrance, a big one too. A thought of bears flashed through her mind but she dismissed it. She had never heard of any nearby.

He had, of all things, a brown paper parcel under his arm, and as he trotted opposite Cora's hiding place he stopped and shifted it from one side to the other. She crouched closer to the ground and waited for him to go on.

He did almost at once, and Cora snatched with relief.

Then she hiccoughed!

Grain Market
Chicago, June 16—(AP)—The market for wheat and rye futures was erratic today. Price trends changed frequently as traders marked time pending action of senate and house conferees on an amendment to the price control extension bill which is aimed at forcing processors of farm commodities to pay parity prices to producers. Trade in the wheat pit was largely speculative with buying faltering on the advances and support developing during the recession. The rye market had a nervous under tone with the only selling of any consequence coming from local operators. Wheat closed 1/4 to 1 1/2 lower than yesterday, July $1.59 1/2. Oats were unchanged to 1 lower. July 75c. Rye was off 1/4 to 1/2, July $1.08 1/2-$1.09. Barley was unchanged to 1/2 lower, July $1.19 1/2.

New York Cotton
New York, June 16—(AP)—Cotton futures opened 25 cents a bale higher to 5 cents a bale lower. Futures closed unchanged to 20 cents a bale lower.

N. Y. Stock Market
New York, June 16—(AP)—The post-invasion bull market in stocks moved along at full tempo today with volume at around 2,500,000 shares and industrial and rail leads up by fractions to about 2 points. The new buying rush was attributed by brokers to early victory ideas generated by the heavy air and naval attacks on Japanese positions and reports of more Allied progress in Normandy.

Americans Drive ...

Allies now hold for the reinforcement and supply of their invasion armies.

Despite the weather, however, the U. S. battleships Texas and Nevada and cruiser Augusta were reported arching their shells deep inland to support the troops driving across the peninsula.

A few miles south of the American spearhead pointed at St. Sauveur was another column pushing toward La Haye Du Puits, a road junction controlling all the remaining roads leading into Cherbourg. The Americans were last reported about six miles from this objective.

A late dispatch from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's advanced command post said it was estimated 300,000 German troops had been thrown against the Normandy beachhead.

This dispatch said the badly mauled divisions had been badly mauled in battle, including the 709th, 711th and 352nd.

The Germans acknowledged continued reverses on the American right flank and reported their engineers had wrecked the canal locks at Caen—an implication that they feared Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery may soon crack the stiff left hinge of the line.

Alive to the vital necessity of holding St. Sauveur and Le Haye Du Puits, the Germans rushed reserves into the battle and vigorous, fluid fighting was in progress.

West of newly captured Quineville, on the extreme right wing of the 100-mile beachhead front, American forces advanced a mile or more to reach the Senoape peninsula.

Furious armored fighting raged in the Tilly Sur Seules sector, while further east the battle of Caen settled into trench warfare with the British and Canadians holding on tenaciously. The nearest approach to a "line" was held around Troaen, at the extreme left flank of the bridgehead.

Following abated somewhat in the Caumont sector were Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery had made his deepest penetration into the forest part of the week. The Germans appeared to be gathering strength for a new counter-attack in this area.

For the first time since the battle of the beachhead started, conservative German reports from the sectors where fighting was taking place jibed generally with announcements of the Allied supreme command.

Field dispatches said mobile fighting in the spearheads of the American sector found generals in the front line with their troops, tossing hand grenades and firing rifles side by side with their privates.

American columns pushing forward sometimes were cut off and had to fight their way back into contact with the main forces.

Allied tactical air forces flew 3,000 sorties in 200 missions yesterday in support of the ground forces in Normandy. American and British heavy bombers brought their 24-hour total to more than 5,000 sorties. Weather hampered air operations somewhat, but unloading of troops and supplies on the beachhead continued at full blast, and Supreme Headquarters declared Montgomery's striking power "is growing daily."

Photographs of Le Havre after a raid by RAF Lancasters Wednesday night showed the German E-boats, which had been lurking there to attack the flanks and the ceaseless trans-channel convoys, had disappeared. Before the raid 10 E-boats and motor torpedo boats had been seen in the harbor.

After the air attack Allied battleships and cruisers gave the German-held port a brisk pounding.

UNDERGROUND ON THE MOVE

Outright Rebellion In Southern France Reported

London, June 16—(AP)—Outright rebellion by German mercenaries in southern France and audacious guerrillas masquerading in German battledress are complicating the Nazi task of controlling the turbulent area behind the Normandy front, Spanish dispatches indicated today.

Large numbers of Turkomans, Cossacks, Tartars, Croats, Armenians and Georgians were reported to turn soldiers and sent into southern France under German officers are deserting en masse, these reports said.

Spanish border reports said the first to desert was an entire battalion of Cossacks stationed in the Pam department. When they heard the invasion news, they killed their German officers, escaped into the mountains and established contact with French guerrillas, the dispatches said.

From the Franco-Spanish border also came word that Frenchmen reaching the frontier through underground routes declared "thousands" of guerrillas were now wearing Nazi battledress, apparently obtained in the seizure of German war material. Train service has been halted to Irun by guerrilla activity.

Earlier the French underground was said to have captured the Gascogne town of Tarbes on Sunday, then abandoned it Wednesday night, taking with them 300 German prisoners and leaving in ruins the arsenal, railway yards, the Hispano-Suiza airplane motor factory, and a truck factory.

The raid was accomplished by 500 poorly-armed men with cooperation of civil officials who were posing as Vichy men but had worked with the underground for more than a year.

Radio France in Algiers said German troops were disarming Vichy police and mobile guards because they were going over to patriot resistance units within France.

Pitt County Farm Labor News
On Monday, June 12 the Negro merchants of Greenville met at the Agriculture building for the purpose of discussing the Pitt county farm labor program. The program and the part they are to play was outlined to them. Each merchant present was given victory farm volunteer registration blanks on which he is to write the name and other necessary information of all who visit his store who will help do farm work this year.

Mr. F. F. Hendrix, Pitt county farm agent, appealed to this group to understand the farmers' situation and to understand his situation without the farmer. He had them to understand their cooperation is greatly needed, as is everyone else.

No Change in Gas Ration
Washington, June 16—(AP)—The OPA has decided that the east coast's drivers will have to do with their current gasoline rations for the next three months.

It was learned last night that the OPA has abandoned its plans for "boosting the B" ration in at least the eastern states.

NEW WEAPON IS DANGEROUS

Allied Leaders Worried Over Pilotless Plane

By ELTON C. FAY
Washington, June 16—(AP)—The pilotless planes the Nazis have launched against England are viewed by military men here as a definitely dangerous weapon.

Opening of the barrage on England gave part of the answer to a mystery that had caused concern among Allied leaders—the nature of the secret weapon of which the Germans had boasted.

For the moment, the immediate job is to locate exactly the positions from which the planes are launched and then attack those positions from the air. Meanwhile, scientists presumably are studying the devices with the view of developing methods for upsetting controls used to direct the pilotless craft and thereby deflect them from intended targets.

One thing puzzling observers here is why Hitler refrained from using the new weapon against the invasion forces. It is possible that Nazi strategists decided the first invasion landing would be in the Calais area and therefore mounted the weapons there later deciding to use them against England when Allied troops hit Normandy instead.

Dispatches received so far do not indicate whether the launching mechanism for the pilotless plane is a fixed or mobile mount. In the latter event it would be possible for the Nazis to transfer the launchers to the invasion theater or to any area where new landings threaten or develop.

On the basis of first reports for England, the weapon has a range of at least 90 miles (the distance from Calais to London). If the mounts are flexible it could, even without moving out of the Calais area, be directed well up and down the coast—as far south as Le Havre and north into the coastal areas of the lowlands.
