JAPS REPORT INVASION OF CHINA COAST

Action Believed Counter Move To Anticipated American Landings; Chinese Predict Successful Defense Of Kweilin.

By SPENCER MOOSA Chungking, Oct. 3—(AP)—A Tokyo communiqué announced today an invasion of Fukien province on China's east coast...

The handful of missionaries and other foreigners living in Foochow are believed already to have been evacuated, but unless they obtain air passage to a point farther inland, they may have difficulty in getting to Free China.

Foochow once did a thriving trade with the famous New England Tea Clippers and until the war with Japan, was one of the most important Chinese coast ports.

The Japanese, who already have occupied the city in the past, expect to take it without much difficulty.

Private reports reaching Chungking said there were signs the Japanese were preparing for a drive on Sian from bases in Honan and Shansi provinces.

By CLYDE A. FARNSWORTH Kweilin, China, Oct. 1—(Delayed)—AP—Chinese commanders preparing the defenses of this strategic Kwangsi province city...

Whether Kweilin lives or dies her defenders are expected to exact a tremendous tax of blood, time and material from the Japanese now reported only 14 miles away.

Kweilin is ringed by strange conical hills. The city's natural defenses probably are the toughest the Japanese have ever tackled.

The Chinese defenders, well supplied with American ammunition and weapons, are healthy and well.

Officials Apprehensive Of Postwar Cooperation

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER Washington, Oct. 3—(AP)—American officials are becoming mildly apprehensive lest there should be a general weakening of Allied cooperation...

At the moment the highest aim of American diplomacy may be described as designed to preserve this unity during the critical period now beginning...

On the shaping of these policies, it is believed, depends the ultimate success of whatever world peace league may be set up.

The core of the diplomatic problem is regarded as being the mutual suspicions and misunderstandings which cloud the dealings between Russia and the rest of the world.

Such a move was taken up in the Russian security talks with British and American delegates at Dumbarton Oaks here on questions of political and press freedom.

Second Major Break In German West Wall Scored North Of Aachen Threatening That City With Encirclement; Third Army Assaulting Main Fort Guarding Metz.

By JAMES M. LONG London, Oct. 3—(AP)—American troops broke through the Siegfried Line above Aachen today, the First Army announced, scoring a second major breach in the German West Wall.

"We are definitely through the old Siegfried Line and we have a second major breach," an officer told AP correspondent Don Whitehead at the front.

The German towns of Ubach and Palenberg were captured, along with Rimbarg Castle. Thirty-nine pillboxes were knocked out, and from 400 to 500 prisoners were taken.

Simultaneously, in the battle for Holland, RAF heavy bombers breached the sea wall guarding the Dutch island of Walcheren, sending water over German installations.

Most of the front was in action. American armor was knocking the Germans out of Overloon, southwest of Nijmegen.

The U. S. Third Army was assaulting Metz, British and Canadian armies fought against stubborn German resistance in Holland and Belgium.

Ubach, defended by troops ordered to hold on or be shot, is nine miles north of Aachen, and three miles inside Germany.

The new advances followed gains of two miles in depth along a six-mile sector yesterday in the opening.

The fire and water now at the disposal of the Dutch islands in the Schelde came less than a day after German installations denying the Allies use of the great Belgian port of Antwerp...

The "earthquake" bombs of 12,000 pounds tore gaps in the dike near the village of west Capelle, on the southwestern tip of Walcheren.

German Forces On Islands Off Greece Reported In Hopeless Situation.

London, Oct. 3—(AP)—Strong Allied forces have landed on the northwest part of Crete, the Morocco radio asserted today.

The German garrison at Crete, however, appeared in a hopeless position in view of the Allied occupation earlier of Kythera, which is between Crete and the mainland of Greece.

The Germans have been reported to be withdrawing their forces from islands ringing the southern tip of Greece, but there have been no indications that they had evacuated Crete...

Allied headquarters in Rome recently announced that Crete had been blockaded by Allied naval forces and reported continuing air attacks on Nazi installations on the island.

Washington, Oct. 3—(AP)—The government will pay for at least a year's schooling for almost any veteran of this war, man or woman, commissioned officer or buck private.

Today On The Home Front

They get paid while they're going to school and some of them can get as much as four years' education at Uncle Sam's expense.

The requirements are simple: A veteran must have had at least 90 days military service since Sept. 16, 1940 and been honorably discharged.

But the government does pay the student veteran $50 a month if he has no dependents and $75 a month if he has dependents.

After Sept. 15, 1940 still has until two years after the war's end to apply; a man held in service a year after the war's end would have three years after his discharge...

Chapter 14

The Midvale Courier was officially off the press at five Thursday. Sorry never could wait. At two o'clock he always went down to the drug store for cigarettes and happened to drop into the newspaper office on his way back. He had grown used to holding papers carefully so as not to smudge the wet ink.

This afternoon he came into Susan's office. "Read that!" Furiouly he poked the paper down on her desk. Susan caught her breath as her eyes skimmed the article. It was in a box on the front page. "Town Council calls community meeting to discuss the advisability of advertising outside Midvale for factory workers. It is felt by the Council that the outcome of such advertising may lead to many problems of serious civic concern."

"Of all the tommyrot!" Susan cried indignantly. "That business is it of the Town Council's if the Scarbroughs advertise for workers outside Midvale?" "Looks like they were gonna make it their business," Thorny pulled a chair up to Susan's desk and tilted back in it, his feet on the edge of her desk. "You know, Susan, the blow smoke rings thoughtfully toward the light bulb. 'I've been against this damn factory myself right from the start.'"

Susan cried, frightened, "You're not throwing up the Scarbrough account?" "He paid no attention to her, went on squinting up through his smoke rings. 'Always thought Julie Scarbrough was fuller of notions than a dog of fleas. Couldn't see any use to start up all this fuss and fury again over the factory. But now since that dog-headed Council's actin' like a bunch of hayseed klucks, I'll be damned if I don't think they need someone like Julie with enough spunk to shake 'em up. It's going to be a tough fight, though.'"

Aunt Sarah was in a nervous flutter when she heard of the Council meeting. Nothing would do but she get out of bed to go. "You're not well enough," Susan protested.

"Be a sight worse for me trying to lay in bed while it was going on!" Susan called Merrill. He dismissed it mercilessly. "Curiosity. Have to let her go, I suppose. Won't do her any more harm than lying in bed stewing over it. I'll drop by and take you kind of curious myself."

Merrill wasn't alone. The whole town was curious. The high school auditorium was jammed to the doors. Aunt Sarah insisted on a seat close to the front and made a real entrance clinging to Susan's arm.

The council met on the platform. Jockhart presided before the open forum. Whispers swept through the audience. No one was quite sure just what the "problem" was. But it was known that it was some method of fighting the factory and the Scarbroughs.

Briefly, with the fire and pomp he always displayed in his public speeches, Jockhart "reviewed the situation." The Countess LeFavre, known to many of them as Julie Scarbrough, was, together with her son, reopening her father's paint factory. He didn't mention the Council's thwarted efforts to block this. Not able, he said, for various reasons, to find workers in Midvale, the Scarbroughs were considering advertising in surrounding newspapers, even in the city. The results of such advertising would be disastrous, Midvale was not large. It would be overrun by such an influx of factory hands, and the filth that follows transient labor—cheap amusement places, dives of every kind—! If the townspeople permitted such a migration, their homes, their community would be swallowed up, buried under the muck and squalor of a factory's backwash!

That would be the fate of Midvale, the home of their fathers and some of their father's fathers if they didn't fight this tidal wave of destruction, and fight it with everything they had!

Merrill whispered, "Regular rabble rouser, isn't he?"

Susan nodded. She was appalled at the feeling on every side. The waves of indignation and emotion sweeping the room were almost physical. Shouts of "That's right!" "Fight! That's what we've got to do!" were backing Jockhart more and more strongly. As the feeling ran higher, boos were heard at mention of the name of Scarbrough. Suddenly Susan found herself on her feet shouting too. "May I say something?"

She could feel Aunt Sarah's frantic tugging at her sleeve, hear her whispered commands for her to sit down. She couldn't. She was trem-

Strength FOR THE DAY

By EARL L. DOUGLAS

AWAY WITH BIGNESS

People are easily fooled by bigness. We are inclined to believe that a big city means a prosperous city, a big nation a prosperous nation, a big bank account a happy life. We are prone to believe that big political units means better government, that big industrial combinations means huge profits.

There are few things more misleading than an uncritical regard for bigness. In this country we take great pride in our large cities, but the heart of our nation is to be found in the small communities. It would be a fine thing if the Christian churches could get together, but the mere union of the denominations would not necessarily improve in the slightest degree the religious life of this or any other country. One recalls the words of the late William James, philosopher and psychologist: "I am done," wrote James, "with great things and big things, great organizations and big successes. And I am for those tiny, invisible, molecular moral forces which work from individual to individual, creeping in through the cracks of the world. . . . If you give them time, they will render the hardest monuments of man's pride."

A little display of genuineness will put a whole army of falseness to flight. God has wrought His greatest work through insignificant individuals standing valiantly for what is right. We can believe that God smiles disdainfully at the pretensions of bigness.

AMERICA IN WARTIME

By JACK STINNETT

(The first of four articles on presidential press conferences.)
Washington—No matter who is elected the next chief executive, the presidential news conference is here to stay.

In the nearly 12 years of his administration, President Roosevelt has made the bi-weekly conference a permanent fixture. There have been some complaints since we entered the war about the declining number of regular conferences. There have been other complaints about the lack of real news that comes out of some of them, even when momentous events need elucidation.

But there isn't any real indication that President Roosevelt is abandoning regular meetings with the press and radio representatives or that he has adopted a policy of making those meetings fruitless by disregarding direct questions and releasing his important news through other channels.

On the other hand, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey is rapidly becoming as much a news conference fan as the man he has been nominated to oppose. Both as governor in Albany and in his campaign, he has demonstrated that he believes in it as a method of contact with the people. I don't know that he has made an "iffy" promise that he will continue the system should he succeed to the White House, but I do know that he has adopted the pattern so wholeheartedly that he would cause consternation if he did an about-face.

The presidential news conference, as we know it today, is purely a child of the 20th century. Actually it is almost as much an innovation of the New Deal as NRA, PWA, SEC and the National Labor Relations act. It had been thought of before in some measure. It had been tried out before, but never in the same way and with the consistency that it is today.

Direct contact with a toiler in the journalistic vineyard dates back to the days of John Quincy Adams, when that fabulous lady, Ann Royall, was supposed to have obtained a first hand interview, just as President Adams emerged from a swim in the Potomac.

Several generations of journalistic poobahs did have access to the White House but they were invariably publishers or editors and were almost as much a part of the party set-up as the campaign manager of today.

According to old times here, President Theodore Roosevelt was about the first to inaugurate something that faintly resembles the news conference of today. He generally held them while he was in the barber shop, which might be any time of the day or night. President Taft and Wilson made some effort to follow this strange custom in a little more dignified manner. But when war threatened, Wilson closed the White House door on the press altogether.

President Harding opened it again for a while, but, after an early faux pas, reverted to answering only submitted questions; a policy which Coolidge and Hoover also pursued. It was during the short-lived Harding administration that the attribution of stories to "sources close to the White House" or a "White House spokesman" came into full play. Then there is a refresher or retraining course. It is limited strictly to one year. But any veteran can take it, regardless of age or previous schooling. All he has to do is prove he served 90 days or was discharged before that time for service-incurred disability.

And finally there is the program which gives a veteran at least one year's schooling and provides up to 4 years. This program works as follows:
If a veteran was under 25 years of age when he entered the service, it is taken for granted that his education was interrupted. He gets one year's schooling, automatically. He can get up to 4, depending upon the length of his military service, and upon his doing the school work satisfactorily.
If a veteran was over 25 when he entered the service, he must show that his schooling was interrupted by the war. He gets one year and up to 4, depending upon his length of service and satisfactory school work.

As the opposing forces line up for the show-down on the western front we get fresh encouragement from the Russian theater. The official Moscow newspaper, Pravda says that the "hour of liberation is near for Riga" and that "the battle of the Soviet Baltic is entering its last conclusive stage."
We are entitled to hope that the conclusion of the important Baltic campaign will release large numbers of Red troops for use against the German Vistula line where the Hitlerites have been holding strongly. Increased pressure on Warsaw and other points in this powerful front would complement the coming offensive in the west.

British and Canadian naval units carried the commandos to the tiny island from Italy. Located 120 miles south of Athens and six miles from the southernmost tip of the Frigonnesis, it was the first Greek territory liberated by the British.

AGENCIES ASK MORE MONEY

Advisory Budget Commission Began Hearings Today

Raleigh, Oct. 3—(AP)—The state Advisory Budget commission began formal hearings today on 1945-47 biennium requests that will considerably exceed the $172,834,981 which North Carolina appropriated for 1943-45.

During the hearings, which continue through October 12, departments and institutions were generally expected to base their pleas for increased appropriations on post-war problems that would entail heavier spending. Many indicated they would outline greater activity for their agencies, with resultant increased personnel.

The commission, composed of Clarence Stone, H. P. Taylor, Thomas O'Berry, F. E. Wallace, Thomas J. Pearsall, and James H. Clark, will weigh the requests and make its recommendations in time for legislative consideration in January.
Among the first to appear today was the governor's office, which asked $66,733 for 1945-47, compared with $74,409 for the current biennium. A total of $6,378 was spent in 1943-44 for the council of state governments, the legislative council and for the letterbook of former Governor Clyde R. Hoey, none of which was reflected in the request for the next biennium.

As in all requests, the governor's 1944-45 spending figure was estimated, since the fiscal year does not end until next June 30.
Other requests with the 1945-47 figures first and those for the current biennium second were:
Budget Bureau, $92,620 and $75,116; purchase and contract $93,904 and $60,789; Secretary of State, $73,994 and $69,631; State treasurer, $129,875 and $107,687; retirement system, $114,459 and $90,608; local government commission, $56,040 and $40,405; state auditor (asking nine more auditors) $196,628 and $116,703; confederate pensions (723 soldiers and widows) $480,000 and $446,721.

Superior court solicitors, who now draw a $4,500 salary and $500 for expenses, asked a 15 per cent increase.
Among the first scheduled to appear at the afternoon session were the attorney general and the state bureau of investigation. The attorney general asked for one more asstant, making the office's request $96,936 and $88,149, where as the SBI requested 14 new agents, bringing the bureau's request for 1945-47 to $220,000, compared with $103,040 during the current biennium. Director Tom Creekmore predicted an increase in crime after the war and more requests to his department for help throughout the state. He said he would like to have agents residing in places where they would be in easy reach of solicitors, sheriffs, police officers and others who might need their help. He would pay the new agents $2,400 a year.

Boldly and unhesitatingly in waters where many of her sister warships fought a losing battle with the German air force more than three years ago, the British cruiser Black Prince shelled the Maleme airfield on Crete last Saturday night.
The shelling was intended to knock out the field from which big Junkers-52 transports have been evacuating Nazi personnel.
Despite bad weather, Balkan air force planes attacked Nazi troop concentrations, gun positions and shipping in the port of Zara on the Dalmatian coast.

Force struck at Iwo Jima, in the Volcano Islands, and tangled with eight "aggressive" Nipponese interceptors. One Liberator was shot down and several others were damaged.
The Japanese also showed increased but still ineffective aerial aggression in the southwest Pacific. Five planes rose to intercept an escorted heavy bomber raid on airfields clustered around Kendari, southern Celebes. Three were shot down and a fourth probably was destroyed. A Nipponese bomber also was downed.
Several enemy planes attempted to raid shipping off American held Morotai Island. They were driven off and at least one was downed by ack-ack. A single Japanese plane twice bombed American positions at Sempator, western Dutch New Guinea, but caused no damage.

Heavy clouds again covered that section of Germany and most bombing was done by means of the mechanical eye.
It was the seventh time in nine days that 1,000 or more Flying Fortresses and Liberators have bombed the Reich. Each time the great fleet split into three formations to attack different targets.
Front reports indicated French-based fighterbombers were having another big day against enemy communications, which were messed up considerably during the night by the RAF's train-busting Mosquitos.
Besides shooting up 51 freight trains, nine barges and five motor transports the Mosquitos also ran a Nazi trawler ashore off the Dutch coast and bombed a small factory in western Germany. None of the fleet bombers was lost.
Other small forces of Mosquitos attacked Brunswick and Nazi airfields in western Germany, following up the daylight attack in which more than 2,500 Allied planes roamed the sky over the Reich virtually unchallenged.
Most of the train-smashing was in the Ruhr valley, through which the bulk of supplies are fed to the German army at the front. Eight trains were caught on the main line between Emmerich and Gladbach, four north of Coblenz and seven near Onsnabruck.
Ninth air force medium bombers and fighters, which staggered German defenses along the Siegfried line yesterday as a harbinger to the First Army drive near Aachen, continued their close-support activities today.

The Germans tried a "Little Stalingrad" stand at Begendorf, two miles beyond Ubach. Whitehead said, and U. S. artillery poured 500 shells into the town in 60 minutes.
Supreme headquarters said the Germans launched three counterattacks yesterday at Hurtgen, 13 miles southeast of Aachen, but all were repulsed. Farther south, other Americans cleared the woods at Echtermach, Reich frontier town 11 miles northwest of Trier.
The U. S. Third army assaulted a key fortress in the Metz chain, and captured Maizieres Les Metz, on the Moselle's west bank seven miles above Metz.
Opposite Groenstraat in Holland the Monday assault caught the enemy by surprise, and struck through the heavy crust of the Siegfried defenses, which run back as deep as nine miles.
Berlin declared "so far the Allies have nowhere pierced really deep into Germany."
Far to the south in France U. S. Third army infantry assaulted Fort Driant, key Metz fortress on the west bank of the Moselle, after an all-night artillery barrage. The attack opened at 10 a. m., and a good start was reported by Third army headquarters.
Fort Driant, the most heavily fortified bastion between the Americans and Metz, was attacked last week by doughboys who reached the bridge across its moat, but were driven back. Planes today bombed other forts in the Metz chain.
The First army attack north of Aachen was meeting strong resistance. Americans fought through pillbox defenses curtained by artillery and mortar fire.
American mobile artillery drummed out so heavily that in many places, Germans fled their suicide pillboxes and centered their defense in thicker-walled concrete field

Agree To Raise Pay Of Coaches

Raleigh, Oct. 3 — (AP) — The trustees of the greater University of North Carolina, in executive session here yesterday, authorized a salary not exceeding $12,000 for the hiring of coaches at the University of North Carolina and State College.

The long-established policy of paying coaches an amount not exceeding that paid department heads on the faculty of the two institutions came under fire several months ago when there was a movement to have Carl Snively, of Cornell and former coach at UNC, return to the University as head coach. Snively is said to have asked a salary of $12,000, but Dr. Frank Graham, president of the Greater University, reportedly would not sanction a deviation from the policy in regard to payment of coaches. The matter came to the attention of the Board of Trustees yesterday when several members voiced their opinion that a big-name coach must be hired if the schools are to continue to play big-time schedules.

By JACK HAND

St. Louis, Oct. 3—(AP)—Twenty-five hungry Browns who never cashed a world series check and 22 Cardinals who've won three successive National League pennants today split this bulging old river city wide open on the even of the first all-St. Louis world series.

Street car operators, bell hops and bartenders chewed your car with retakes of Chet Laabs' two pennant-winning homers and Sig Jakucki was boomed for "mayor," but the boys who say it with cash made the National Leaguers 1 to 2 favorites for the best four-out-of-seven series opening tomorrow at Sportsman's park.

Rainy weather took away some of the enthusiasm yesterday as Billy Southworth and his boys came home for the first time since clinching the flag to be greeted only by their wives, children and ticket-hunting relatives. The town, however, buzzed with baseball talk and both clubs reported a complete sell-out of reserved seats. Mayor Kaufmann issued a proclamation designating this as "baseball week."

At least 35,000 fans are expected to turn out for the opener with the weatherman promising "fair and cooler."

Luke Sewell had his Browns out for a short drill between the rain drops yesterday and planned a lengthy dress rehearsal this morning with the National Leaguers taking the field in the afternoon. Neither manager has named his first game starter but Mort Cooper (22-7) appears to be the natural for the Cardinals. Nelson Potter is the likely Brownie opener with his 19-7 record and his highly-trained screw ball.

Consistently good pitching was the most important factor in the success of the Sewell crew all season and could be the turning point in this series which will be played on an every day basis with the only off day between the sixth and seventh games.

Southworth can call on Lefty Max Lanier, Harry Brecheen and Ted Wilks to back up Cooper, but Lanier is a doubtful factor because of recent arm trouble. He is said to be ready but only an actual start will give the answer.

Sewell can back up Potter with Jack Kramer, Denny Galehouse, Bob Mumcrief and Jakucki although Mumcrief is also on the sore-arm list. The Browns' staff is deeper than the Cards and in good physical condition despite the gruelling stretch drive.

The only ailing Cardinal is left fielder Danny Litwhaler who is bothered by a right knee injury. He told Southworth he was ready but it is possible the skipper might use rookie Augie Bergamo in left to give the club more left-handed hitting power against the American Leaguers' right handers. Sewell's only southpaws are Al Hollingsworth who hasn't started since July 27 and Sam Zoldak who never has started a game.

For the first time since 1922 when the Yankees and Giants met in the Polo Grounds all the series games are scheduled for the same park, eliminating all conjecture on the advantage of playing in familiar surroundings.

The Red Birds will be the home team the first two games, and the Browns the next three and the Nationals again if it goes into a sixth and seventh game.

Although the teams met in a spring city series won by Southworth's champs four games to one, these figures can be tossed into the ash can because the Browns were missing many key men and both club s were in the experimental stage.

Despite talk about St. Louis attendance the Browns were last and the Cards Fifth in the regular season in unofficial figures) tickets are so hard to get that speculators are reportedly asking $60 to $75 for a three-game strip and $30 for a single on Wednesday.

For the first time since Commissioner Kennesaw Mountain Landis took charge of baseball in 1920, the white-haired Bear will miss the classic, remaining in Chicago under doctors' orders.

The commissioner, who will be 78 in November, is in a Chicago hospital where his condition is described as "very satisfactory."

He will be represented at the series by Ford Frick, president of the National League; William Hendricks, president of the American League; and Leslie M. O'Connor, his secretary.

NEW AIR WAR IN PROSPECT

Air Power To Carry Assault This Winter.

By WES GALLAGHER
London, Oct. 3—(AP)—Air power appears likely to return to the forefront this winter as the main Allied victory weapon if supply difficulties, weather hazards and rampant German resistance result in a stalemate on the ground front.

The American strategic air forces and the RAF bomber command, which paved the way for successful invasion of the continent, once again may take over the main offensive burden.

The Allies now can throw as many as 2,000 heavy bombers against Germany at one time. In addition thousands of fighters and smaller bombers based near the borders now can strike into the Reich.

No part of Germany is out of reach. It is apparent the Germans realize the danger and are making preparations.

They have been conserving their air force and are believed to have concentrated thousands of fighters in the Reich. They have been massing anti-aircraft guns around many cities. They have been trying out jet-propelled planes—fighters of great speed.

All this strongly suggests a new and bloody air battle over Germany. That the Allies will win seems inevitable. It then would remain to see how long the German people can endure a ceaseless air attack.

Polish Patriots . . .

way from Warsaw across to the east bank of the Vistula river, where the Red army is entrenched.

Earlier a bulletin broadcast from Warsaw told of skirmishes yesterday at the heart of the capital.

Komorowski's communique, released by the Polish forces press bureau in London, said:

"During the day (yesterday, Oct. 2) fighting was confined to minor skirmishes in the center of Warsaw. Pursuant to an agreement between the German military authorities and the Polish Red Cross in Warsaw, a mass evacuation of the civilian population is taking place. We are faced with an extreme shortage of medical supplies. Our food supplies are completely exhausted."

While even Polish military men acknowledged the struggle in Warsaw could not continue much longer, the dispute between the London government and the Polish committee in Moscow over internal affairs increased in intensity.

The Moscow group, which has been denouncing Komorowski and some members of the London government as "criminals," declared that those responsible for the Warsaw uprising began it "without any coordination with the command of the Polish army or the Red army, considering only their own selfish interests."

The official Russian communique meanwhile reported that no noteworthy action occurred yesterday anywhere on the eastern front, but Berlin declared this morning that Red army troops had landed on the island of Hiu (Dago) off the coast of Estonia.

The landings on Hiu, northernmost of two Estonian islands guarding the approaches to both the Gulf of Finland and the Gulf of Riga, were reported in a broadcast by the German international information bureau heard by the Associated Press.

Berlin said German resistance was aided by Nazi naval craft which attempted to interfere with crossings from the Estonian mainland, a bare six miles distant, where Red army troops had been massing for a week. Berlin said nothing about the island of Saare (Osel) directly to the south across the mouth of the Gulf of Riga.

A dispatch last night from Bari, Italy, said Marshal Tito's headquarters had announced that units of the Yugoslav 14th partisan corps teamed with Russian troops in a converging drive on Belgrade.

The combined forces were said to be fighting on the approaches to the German stronghold of Donji Milanovac, Danube river village 80 miles southeast of the Yugoslav capital. Other partisan units were reported battling German and puppet troops within 18 miles of Belgrade on the south and 55 miles on the southwest.

The United Russian and Yugoslav troops were threatening reconquest of big German-worked copper and coal mines in a 40-mile area between Donji Milanovac and Zajecar to the south.

Jet Planes May See Action Soon

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN

London, Oct. 3—(AP)—Opportunities for exhaustive tests under combat conditions may well prepare the revolutionary jet-propelled plane for an immediate place in peace-time aviation, in the opinion of many air experts.

The Allies and Nazis now have jet planes in operation. Before the war with Germany ends it is conceivable that great dogfights may take place between these propellerless ships, driven at incredible speeds.

British jet-planes already have been in action against the German flying bombs and have proved highly effective. There has been no official announcement, however, that the Allies have been using jet planes on escort duty with their heavy bombers.

Germany's use of the jet principle in the robot bombs and in some types of fighters now on combat service indicates her development of jet propulsion.

The first such engine produced in Britain was in 1937. America has been experimenting with jet planes for at least a year and now is reported ready for mass production of the comparatively simple engines.

Allied fighter and bomber pilots tell of encountering two types of German jet planes in increasing numbers—in groups as large as 20 and 30.

Public Aids Negro Church To Pay Debt

Members of the congregation of York Memorial A. M. E. Zion Negro church have received donations from friends of the church to pay off about half of the church debt. Pastor S. P. League reported today. The church, on Albemarle avenue, is one of the oldest churches and has an influential part in the community life. It is believed to be the only church in Greenville with a mortgage on it. The pastor and congregation and white friends are striving to secure enough money to redeem the mortgage and to make some necessary repairs.

Mayor Bruce Sugg praised the church's good work and the community activity of individual members and expressed a hope that friends would send in donations and encourage the good work being done.

Donations may be sent to Rev. S. P. League, pastor of the church, or a card or phone message will bring an authorized representative.

The first public coffee house was opened at Oxford, England, in 1650.
