Allies Hammer Ahead In Move To Clear Antwerp

New Allied Landing On Nazi-Held Island Blocking Use Of Port Is Reported; Other Sectors Along Western Front Relatively Quiet Today.

By WILLIAM FRYE
London, Oct. 26.—(AP)—The German high command announced today that Allied forces striking to clear the last Nazi guns blocking Allied convoys from Antwerp, had landed on the south shore of Velleland island.
“Counter measures are in progress,” the communique said, indicating the amphibious forces already had made good a bridgehead on the north side of the Schelde estuary.
Earlier Berlin broadcasts that Walcheren, another island north of the estuary had been invaded by Allied land and sea forces were not borne out by the communique.
The landing apparently was made under the protection of a dense morning fog which swept in from the North Sea and came as Allied forces, fighting through hip-deep water, forged ahead to clear the sea approaches to Antwerp.
Field Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery’s pincers tightened relentlessly on Germans clinging to the water-logged deltas and islands of the two-mile wide 10-mile long neck to the connecting islands of South Beveland. They captured Rilland on the way.
The progress was along single roads raised over wastes of water left by the flooding of the islands.
South of the estuary the Canadians were fighting in the streets of Oostburg, four miles southeast of Cadzand where the enemy’s last guns block the estuary from the south. They also recaptured Port Frederik Hendrik and reached the outskirts of Groede, 4-12 miles northeast of Cadzand.
Behind the advance into South Beveland they captured the village of Dorp Op Pindorp, four miles east of the enemy coastal anchor of Bergen Op Zoom.
To the east Montgomery’s British Second army was breaking the back of German resistance in the Breda Box south of the Maas (Meuse) with its attack toward the west from the Nijmegen salient.
The British captured Fort Orten, a mile north of S’Hertogenbosch and cleared the Germans from all the latter hub except the southwest corner.
They were within a mile of Tilburg, in the middle of the Box, having captured Zorgen, 12 miles southwest of S’Hertogenbosch.
The flanking thrust by an armored column north of S’Hertogenbosch cut the Nazi escape route over one (Continued on Page Four)

Great New Battleship Bristles With Guns

The mighty new American battleship "Iowa" is shown in this deck view as it fired at a target during a shakedown cruise in the Pacific prior to joining Uncle Sam's ever growing fleet. In addition to the great main batteries, dozens of other smaller guns can be seen bristling about the superstructure. Such firepower as this on U. S. ships has dealt a smashing blow to Jap planes and ships in the Philippine area. This is an official navy picture. (AP Photo).

At the same time, the announcement said, troops landed from the British destroyer Teazer and the Greek destroyer Navarino have occupied the island of Skopelos in the northern Sporades group east of (Continued on Page Four)

Drive Bridgehead Across Vistula; Arctic Forces Advance In Norway; Transylvania Conquered.

By DANIEL DE LUCE
Moscow, Oct. 26.—(AP)—Russian troops drove deeper into Norway today beyond captured Kirkenes in Arctic storms which tumbled the temperature several degrees below zero. In a supreme effort to annihilate up to 135,000 Germans being herded before Red and Finnish forces.
In local engagements just north of ravaged Warsaw, the Kremlin at midnight announced the capture of a dozen Satellite towns on the east side of the wide and swift Vistula river which bends sharply west northwest just above the ravaged city.

British Moving Toward Bologna; Americans Meet Resistance.

Rome, Oct. 26.—(AP)—Eighth Army troops have cleared the Germans from the Savio River line to the eastern Po Valley and, thrusting from bridgeheads west and north of Cesena, have advanced northwestward to within five miles of Forlì along the highway to Bologna. Allied headquarters announced today.
The Eighth Army advanced at least 11 miles in a thrust that placed it only 27 miles from Bologna.
“The enemy having withdrawn, Eighth Army troops have advanced rapidly from their Cesena bridgehead, have driven in enemy rear guards and crossed the river Savio,” the communique said.
West of the Ravenna, the Allied forces captured the town of Portofino, directly on the Bologna highway, and reached the Ronco River, three miles beyond. The (Continued on Page Four)

Tough Going

London, Oct. 26.—(AP)—Trying to fixer when the war will end? Well, here's how General Eisenhower looks at it, on the authority of Rep. Hale (R-Mo.), who visited the Supreme Commander in France:
“War is like pushing a heavily-loaded wagon up a steep hill in a fog and never knowing when you are going to reach the top. You have to push like hell all the time.”

Archbishop Canterbury Died Today

Britain Also Mourns Death Today Of Princess Beatrice, Last Survivor Of Queen Victoria.

London, Oct. 26.—(AP)—The Archbishop of Canterbury, the most Rev. William Temple, died today after a heart attack. The Primate of All England was 68 and had been enthroned in the bomb-pocked old Canterbury Cathedral since April 23, 1943.
His death and that of Princess Beatrice, which occurred a few hours earlier, plunged England into mourning. Princess Beatrice, last surviving child of Queen Victoria, was 88 years old.
Dr. Temple was the son of an Archbishop of Canterbury and they were the only father and son ever to hold the highest office in the Church of England. The father was the late Dr. Frederick Temple, who was Archbishop during the reign of Edward VII.
Dr. William Temple succeeded Dr. Cosmo Gordon Lang, who resigned at 78 with the request that a younger man be placed in the office. In 1929, Dr. Temple had become Archbishop of York, second highest post in the Church of England, and before that he had been bishop of Manchester.
The Archbishop was confined to his bed in September with a gout attack. It was said then that he was suffering from an infection which was slow in responding to treatment.
The 36th Archbishop of Canterbury fervently supported the British war effort, declaring soon after his consecration that the British war effort was a great victory would mean abandonment of international fellowship under the leadership of our Lord, the Christian movement and all our hopes connected with it are to prevail, the Axis must be defeated.
When King Edward VIII, now the Duke of Windsor, awarded his love for Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, the American divorcee for whom he subsequently repudiated his throne, Dr. Temple caused a sensation by criticizing the monarch.

Yanks Push Forward In Philippines

MacArthur's Men Tighten Stranglehold On Communications And Begin Closing Death Trap On Southern Jap Forces.

By MURLIN SPENCER
General MacArthur's Headquarters, Leyte, Philippines, Oct. 26.—(AP)—Mud-slicked Yanks today slammed shut the southern door of strategic Leyte Valley, a potential Japanese death trap and lightened their stranglehold on Nipponese communications with adjacent islands.
As naval and air units beat off the Japanese fleet threat, the entire American land front moved forward through mud and rain, beneath the cover of supporting aircraft and growing artillery fire.
The southernmost of three columns driving into Leyte Valley, where Japanese defenders are being crowded, captured Buraian, a key road junction nine miles inland from Dulag. Armored infantrymen of the 24th Corps broke into the town, after taking nearby San Pablo and its cluster of airfields.
On the extreme northern front, the 10th Corps completed shore-to-shore movements which seized the southern coast of nearby Samar Island and shot American units to (Continued on Page Four)

Two Carriers, One Battleship And Five Cruisers Among Jap Ships Sent To Bottom; Americans Suffer Loss Of Two Escort Carriers In Three Way Battle.

By CHARLES H. MCMURPHY
U. S. Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, Oct. 2.—(AP)—More than 26 Japanese warships were sunk or heavily damaged in the three-pronged battle of the Philippines, incomplete reports on the most crushing defeat ever administered the modern Nipponese navy disclosed today.
Wreckage strewn waters marked the possible end of the Imperial fleet as a major obstacle in the path to the coasts of Japan and China, and probably shortened the Pacific war by months.
Combined reports of Adm. Chester W. Nimitz and Gen. Douglas MacArthur on the three major engagements involving the bulk of the Japanese fleet listed these known results:
Eight Japanese ships sunk—two carriers, one battleship, five cruisers.
Three probably sunk—two battleships, one carrier.
More than 15 damaged—seven battleships, four cruisers, four destroyers, and “several” more destroyers.
Both commanders made it clear that their final reports will show heavier Japanese losses, particularly in ships sunk. Today's combined total compared with Nimitz' first report of the three-way action listed one carrier sunk, two damaged, and five or six battleships and a cruiser torpedoed. All of these, with the possible exception of two battleships, are included in the combined total.
The crushing three-fold defeat stripped Emperor Hirohito's navy of the greater part of its known carrier, battleship, and cruiser power. Admiralty to engage the U. S. fleet in another major action or seriously check its further incursions into the western Pacific.
During the three-day battle, the fate of MacArthur's invasion hung in the balance. This was the toughest fight that brought the Japanese fleet out of hiding and precipitated one of the greatest sea battles in naval history, involving almost every type of warship from battleships to PT boats and submarines, and sea-borne and land-based planes.
By comparison, in the greatest previous Nipponese defeat since Pearl Harbor, 11 Japanese ships were sunk and 9 sunk or damaged in the battle of Midway in June 1942. Five of these were transporters, known American losses in the running battle around the Philippines were two small carriers and a number of PT boats sunk, plus an unannounced number damaged.
Nimitz' report today was limited to two engagements—an overwhelming (Continued on page six)

Says War Bonds Are Post-War Purchasing Power.

By CHESTER WALSH
“The best encouragement we can give the millions of men who are out on the battlefronts risking and giving their lives to help win the war is to buy War Bonds,” a returned veteran said to J. Herbert Waldrop, vice-president and cashier of the Guaranty Bank and Trust Company and War Finance Committee chairman for Pitt County. In commenting the Greenville banker wisely advised that War Bonds are the very best investment in the world. They pay substantial interest. (Continued on page four)

Air Fleet Pounds Nazi Industries

London, Oct. 26.—(AP)—An American air fleet of more than 1,200 heavy bombers and 650 fighters attacked industrial and rail objectives today at Hannover, Bielefeld, Munster and in other parts of western Germany.
Heavy clouds were encountered and bombing was by instrument. No interceptors were mentioned in first reports. A similar U. S. bomber force attacked western Germany yesterday.
Munster lies 78 miles northeast of Cologne and has six main roads fanning out in all directions. Hannover, a city of 472,000, is 60 miles south of Hamburg and Bielefeld is 120 miles southwest of the great port.

Today On The Home Front

By JAMES MARLOW
Washington, Oct. 26.—(AP)—You could knock me down with a slightly used war plant, I help me. But—You can't find out whether you can buy a war plant now.
Jesse Jones is boss of the government's Reconstruction Finance Corporation (RFC). Within RFC is the Defense Plant Corporation (DPC). So Jones is boss over both. DPC has built about 2,000 war plants and projects, costing billion of dollars. Uncle Sam owns them. Private companies operate them. The government may keep a few after the war. It will sell most.
Two weeks ago Jones sent out a catalogue—listing 879 of the plants—two banks RFC offices, chambers of commerce and railroads. The catalogue gave a description of each plant.
With the catalogue Jones sent a letter saying: “We will negotiate at this time for their sale (the plants), or lease, subject to contingencies of present contracts and length of time plants will continue in war use.”
Once the catalogue was distributed Jones says, some people misunderstood its meaning. They thought the 879 plants’ war contracts were to be cancelled and the plants declared surplus.
So Jones had to issue statement explaining the catalogue was meant to give businessmen advance information on DPC plants so that “when any of them are declared surplus and no longer necessary in the war effort, they can be converted with all possible speed and the least possible loss of employment.”
Several things have happened to get RFC mixed up on what it can do.
Some months ago President Roosevelt appointed Will Clayton Surplus War Property administrator. He designated RFC, among others, as a government agency qualified to sell surplus war property.
He laid down rules. But yesterday at RFC it was explained he didn't rule that RFC had to wait until a war plant was considered surplus to sell it.
So RFC took the position that a war plant, still doing war work, could be sold to a private company now, provided it was still kept in war work until declared surplus.
So RFC proceeded to negotiate with the Chevrolet Company for sale of a Buffalo DPC plant operated by Chevrolet. RFC says this plant will continue in war work for some time. These negotiations started some time ago.
Does RFC—since it can't give a (Continued on page four)

The WAR TODAY

AN ANALYSIS OF THE NEWS
By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst
It looks as though the Japanese had just about succeeded in commencing hara-kiri in the great sea battle off the Philippines.
They have suffered a major disaster. Indeed, it may prove to be a decisive defeat which has smashed the main-spring of Nippon's seapower and so will hasten the end of the Pacific war. However, we can't appraise the situation fully until the complete report is at hand. This is a moment for exultation but not for loose superlatives.
While details are lacking it's clear that the Allied force (an Australian squadron participated) has dealt a devastating blow to Japan's first-line ships. This may have crippled the Mikado's navy—a calamity for him.
This column yesterday called the developing battle of the Philippines the crisis of the war in the Orient. Clearly the magnitude of the Japanese naval effort is recognition of this. But the Japs aren't the only ones to see the emergency. There are signs on every hand that this thought of crisis is in the minds of the Allied high command. There's a gathering of the United Nations chiefs in the Orient for the talk. It isn't by coincidence that this comes as the great MacArthur strikes to redeem his pledge to free the Philippines. The method and concerted action are recognition that this is the crucial moment.
Australia is making big preparations to accommodate British forces. The vast Indian base is seeking Chi Pi Players To Present Play.

Emily Williams' intensely dramatic thriller "A Murder Has Been Arranged" is scheduled to be the first of three productions by the Chi Pi Players this year. It will be presented in the Austin Auditorium on the nights of November 24 and 25. Tickets will go on sale soon.

The Chi Pi Players, who have in the past given such suspenseful mysteries as "Ladies in Retirement" and "The Skull," have found in "A Murder Has Been Arranged" one of the clearest psychological dramas ever written for the modern stage. The play comes from the prolific pen of Emily Williams, author of such masterpieces as "Night Must Fall" and "The Corn is Green." It was his first success. The superbly drawn characterizations, "nerve tingling" situations, the mood of impending doom make this three-act presentation a night of chills and entertainment.

The scene of the drama takes place on the bare stage of the St. James Theatre in London, where recently a man was murdered in one of the dressing rooms. A party of people have been assembled on the dark stage to celebrate the birthday of Sir Charles Jasper, who has just inherited ten million dollars. Soon Sir Charles learns that his nephew, long unheard from, has paid him a visit. It happens that the nephew, Maurice Mullins, is the only heir to the uncle's legacy. From then on the play gathers momentum, leading up to a climax in the suspended packed third act, containing one of the most thrilling ghost scenes ever written. It is guaranteed to keep the audience on edge.

Production plans have begun already, and try-outs were held last Saturday. The mystery drama promises some unusual problems for the players to solve, and rare opportunities to create a unique and hand-some production.

It is particularly appropriate that the United Daughters of the Confederacy should observe Flag Day at this time.

The citizens of Pitt county will be delighted to cooperate in remembrance of those who are defending the cause today.

Flag Day can further remind us of Woodrow Wilson as he poured out his soul with these words: "I would rather fail in a cause that I know will some day triumph than to succeed in a cause that I know must some day fail."

Home Department Arranges Booth.

The American Home Department of the Junior Woman's Club of Greenville arranged one of the community booths set up last week for the Pitt County Fair. Mrs. John Blackman, chairman of the department, made arrangements for the exhibit and was assisted in the decorating and setting up of the booth by Mrs. Doris Duval, Mrs. M. T. Maclock, Mrs. G. M. Lamm, Mrs. Bill Shreve, Mrs. Stuart Page, Mrs. Laurence Tracey and Mrs. E. M. Gibbs.

The focal point of the booth was a large red, white and blue "V" for Victory, which was filled in with fruits and vegetables canned by various club members. The rest of the decorations carried out the patriotic motif in red, white and blue. On the left of the "V" were placed handwork articles and on the right, clothing and household articles made at home by club members.

A feature of the booth was four lovely oil paintings done by Miss Edla Taylor.

Props used in the display were loaned by the Blount-Harvey Co., and Bissette's Drug Store.

The department was well rewarded for the work and effort by being given a special award blue ribbon.

Mr. A. J. Gray, manager of the fair, expressed his appreciation for the cooperation and urged that the club make plans now for a bigger and better display for next year's fair.

Hallow'en Party At Grimesland.
For gaiety of the Hallow'en season a brilliant carnival will be in session for fun-lovers, both old and young, at the Grimesland School Friday night, beginning at 8 o'clock.

Wipe Out German Force
With U. S. Forces in France.—An Ordnance battalion under the command of Lt. Col. Robert A. Hudson of Macon, Ga., recently dropped their normal duties of repairing weapons for American combat forces to take on a company of crack German infantrymen near their ordnance depot. One hundred and six Germans were killed, wounded or captured during the engagement without the loss of a single American life.

Sgt. Ernest W. Wells, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Wells, 122 W. Seventh street, Greenville, took part in this engagement.

No Cognac
With the 30th Infantry Division in France.—First Lt. Russell D. Stewart, Atmore, Ala., Cpl. Charles A. Musselwhite, Greenville, N. C., and Cpl. Gordon L. Johnson, Long Beach, Calif., are members of a forward observation team.

Approaching a small French village, they found themselves in a "hot spot" with enemy mortar and machinegun fire all about them. Then a fire of their jeep went flat. Cpl. Musselwhite jumped out of the jeep to change the tire, working with all possible speed, while Lieut. Stewart and Cpl. Johnson stood guard.

Into this scene of activity came the inevitable Frenchman with two glass and a bottle of cognac.

With bullets flying all around and work to be done, the soldiers didn't feel in the mood to be sociable. They thought he would go away if they ignored him. But, oblivious to the fight he hung around repeating, "Cognac, messieurs?"

Finally the fire slackened and the tire was changed, and they gave a thought to the cognac. But since the excitement had died down the Frenchman, of course, had disappeared.

Women IN THE CHURCH

No "go-to-school" program is needed to encourage attendance at schools sponsored by the Methodist Woman's Society of Christian Service, according to Miss Muriel Day, one of the Bureau of Educational Institutions. Most schools report increased enrollment, with many students turned away. Enrollment at representative schools suggests the general upward trend. A 10 per cent increase is noted at Alvan Drew School, Pine Ridge, Kentucky. Freshman enrollment is 30 per cent greater at Wood Junior College, Mathiston, Miss. Holding Institute, Laredo, Texas, enrolled 200 students, turned 80 away. Allen High School, Asheville, N. C., registered 78 students, turned away or placed 68 on the waiting list. Pfeiffer Junior College, Misenheimer, N. C., reports "a good enrollment for war time." Six hundred students attending Gilbert Academy, in New Orleans, La., represents an increase of 105 students over last year.

A number of organizations of Chinese women in Chungking, China's wartime capital, have declared "open war on illiteracy among women," and have organized one hundred classes in various churches, schools, and homes to reduce the illiteracy percentage. Most of the teachers are young women who have been trained in Christian institutions. The sponsoring organizations are providing the funds for the classes and the materials necessary.

Miss Mary A. Burchard, M. D., of Jamestown, N. Y., medical superintendent of the Creighton-Freeman Methodist Hospital, Brindaban, Muttra, United Provinces, and Miss Wilhelmina Cracknell, C. B. M., of New York City, nursing superintendent of the Methodist Hospital, Nadiad, Gujarat, were among the missionary residents of India recently honored by King George of Great Britain. In recognition of their services to the women and children of India through years of association with these hospitals, they were awarded the coveted Kaiser-i-Hind Silver Medal.

Strength FOR THE DAY

By EARL L. DOUGLAS

LIVE IN THE PRESENT TENSE
Some people live their lives too much in the present tense. The situation at hand is the only thing they think about, the result being that they scarcely ever look ahead and plan a helpful and profitable future.

But while this may be a failing,
certainly an even greater failing is to dwell too much upon the past or to anticipate the future too vividly. There are some who live only in memory. There are others who never appreciate the present moment because they are either worried about the future or anticipating certain future satisfactions which, when they come, will not be quite so vivid as their anticipation promised. What these people need to do is to live their lives more in the present tense rather than in the past or the future tenses.

The well-balanced individual is one who gives himself wholeheartedly to the engagement of the present, but, when at times look back on his work and with real profit review what is past and speculate and plan with reference to the future.

The things that are past have been written into the irrevocable records of history. The future is yet to be realized. As someone has said, "It is the immediate need which must be supplied, the present temptation that must be overcome, today's task that must be performed, tomorrow's sorrow that must be borne."

AMERICA IN WARTIME

By JACK STINNETTE

Washington—Somewhere in the celebration of Navy Day this year, there should be a few hosannas for the Navy's great tanker fleet—one of the most unglorified but vital branches of the service.

Sometime about the attack on Pearl Harbor, Capt. J. S. Leelan, skipper of the Esso Annapolis, gave sailing orders in a South American port and remarked to his junior officer: "New York by Saturday night."

It was two years before the crew of the tanker Annapolis saw New York harbor. Instead, she went into the south Pacific to give hundreds of oil tankers to fuel thirsty battleships.

At one time, within range of Japanese planes, she refueled 40 vessels in a heaving sea—probably one of the most uncommon feats in naval annals.

Few landlubbers can appreciate the delicate maneuvering and seamanship necessary even in a quiet sea to keep fragile hoses connected with another ship while thousands of gallons of oil or gasoline are pumped through them. In a heavy sea, it's pure genius, and the kind of genius that has made possible our far-ranging attacks over the trackless Pacific, where our task forces must operate thousands of miles from established bases and must have enough fuel to fight for weeks before they come home again.

The size of our tanker fleet is a military secret, but one of which the enemy has become well aware.
Approximately 470 tankers have been added to the fleet since 1940.
By the end of next year the United States alone will have the equivalent of two-thirds of the prewar tanker tonnage of the whole world.

Without the tankers, instead of being far ahead of our schedule in the Pacific, we would have been island-hopping at a snail's pace, with necessary refueling stations set up as we went along.

Few persons know that tankers today are also doing double duty in carrying planes, PT boats, jeeps,
and even locomotives, pick-a-back,
as they go about their routine duties.

Since they are filled with oil or high test gasoline, tankers are one of the most vulnerable ships afloat.
That's true if the breaks off; but otherwise it's one of the most unsinkable ships.

The arrangement of tanks (the larger ones down the center of the

Not Tropical Fever, Please

hull, with smaller ones to port and starboard) is the answer. This design wasn't primarily one of safety, but to allow captains to shift cargo and add salt-water ballast so the ship could continue seaworthy.

The result, however, has been to make the tanker a collection of floating compartments. Some have been almost shot away by torpedoes with pipes and hose dazzling like a fork-full of spaghetti, but have limped into port and have been repaired to sail again.

The tanker is no glamor girl of the sea. Squatting so low on the water that her decks are sometimes awash in virtual calm, her topside a mess of pipes and hose, she would never appeal to any one with an eye for beauty. But she probably has contributed as much to making this war different from all others as any other single weapon.

All northern Transylvania was behind Russian lines in the Balkans and Romania was cleared of hostile Germans. In Czechoslovakia, the Russians virtually isolated the big highway town of Mukacevo, pushing within nine miles of the city.

Clearing of the towns on the northern flank of Warsaw increased the threat of capture of the Polish capital.

The Soviet communiqué described the Warsaw successes as "battles of local importance," but they seemed the first real sign of German weakness in central Poland since the summer Red army offensive faded out at the end of over stretched supply lines. (The Germans yesterday reported the Russians had launched a powerful offensive north of Warsaw.)

If Rokossovsky has built up a new punch in recent weeks—and there seems good reason to believe he has done just that—momentous operations may be developing that will overshadow anything else on the eastern front.

While the capture of Warsaw itself would have only psychological value now, a major breakthrough in the area would represent the double threat of an advance straight at Berlin as well as northward to East Prussia.

Meanwhile, the invasion of East Prussia ran into a storm of fanatical Nazi counterattacks around Gumbinnen and Goldap, and while the advance continued, it brought gains of less than two miles on a separated front.

The occupation of Transylvania was completed with the capture of the important city of Satu-Mare, the railway town of Carei and 200 other populated places. Romanian troops participated in these actions.

Seizure of Kirkenes, center of a rich iron mining district and naval base used by the Germans in preparing on the Murmansk shipping supply lanes, was credited to the Arctic army of Gen. K. A. Mereskov and the Red fleet. The Russians signified their intention of marching through Norway in pursuit of approximately 25,000 German troops who had been driven out of the Petamo district.

With northern Transylvania
cleansed of the last Germans, Mur-shad Isdon Y. Malinovsky was believed to have reinforced his vanguard in the area of Szolnok, less than 50 miles southeast of Budapest, but there has been no official news
from this battlefield in the last 24 hours.

communiqué.
The maneuver gave the Americans control of San Juanico Strait, the narrow, crooked waterway dividing Leyte and Samar. The main Japanese supply line for supplies and reinforcements from the north thus has been severed.

Liberation troops have swept 20 miles northward of Tacloban, the communique reported. Apparently they will curve around the northern tip of Leyte to drive a wedge in Japanese communications with Masbate, main island to the northwest.

Japanese forces in this sector "are disintegrating," the announcement added.

Carrier planes, turned back a large-scale Japanese daylight assault Tuesday on American shipping in Leyte Gulf. Fifty-three Japanese planes were shot down in dogfights, and antiaircraft fire destroyed three more.

Ground forces "easily repulsed" a Japanese night counterattack and have throttled local assaults and infiltration attempts.

The three-pronged drive on Leyte Valley is designed to pocket the Japanese without escape or to force them into the hills where,
Gen. Douglas MacArthur has said, their supply problems would become "acute."

Bureau, at the southern end of the squeeze, is the juncture for an east-west road from Dulag, followed by the Doughboys, and the main northward highway running through the valley.

Southwest of 'S Hertogenbosch,
"Allied troops reached Moergestel, less than four miles southeast of the rail and highway junction of Tilburg, and the communique reported "general progress northward" in the area east of the Antwerp-Breda road.

In addition to the enemy forces already cut off on South Beveland and Walcheren islands, as many as 50,000 German troops may be in the narrowing wedge of the mainland between the battle line and the Maas. Their mounting peril is fully recognized by the enemy, and a German radio report last night specu-lated that the Allied air attacks on Dordrecht were aimed at smashing
the great Moerdijk bridges.

These are a railroad bridge and parallel highway span, among the mainstays in Europe, carrying the main traffic stream between Breda and Rotterdam. Only one other bridge spans the river from the battle area at Geertruidenberg, 18 miles west of Hertogenbosch.

South of the Schelde estuary, the Canadians captured Fort Frederik-Hendrik, reached the outskirts of Oudegeest to the southwest, and gained ground west and northwest of Schoonheid. The Germans still are strongly entrenched at Cadzand, west of the fort.

The rest of the Allied front from the North sea to the Swiss Alps was relatively quiet. Americans advancing northeast of Epinal were slowed by stiffening resistance. German counterattacks in the Vosges mountains farther south were thrown back.

failed to buy the quota by $57,662.50.
"Now that the crops are har-

These bonds yield 2.5 per cent inter-present post-war purchasing power and should not be cashed in except Chairman Waldrop said. "We must lack of resistance indicated the ad-

Canadian troops striking out from their bridgehead across the Savoi

South of the Po Valley highway British, Indian and Polish troops were clearing mountainous terrain of Germans.

The Fifth Army meanwhile continued to batter away against stiff resistance on the southern approaches to Bologna. The Germans were reported digging trenches south and southeast of the stronghold, indicating a plan to defend the town to the bitter end. Heavy German artillery fire straddled highway 65 south of Bologna.

On the Fifth Army right flank
British and Indian troops made

Chapter 5

The Coromandel was anchored in the stream for the night, awaiting the dawn tide. The tugs had cast off and gone fussing back to their own berths. Though she was so close to the city, it was a dark night and there was nothing to be seen except the green and red buoy-lights of the channel and the brilliant mass of stars in the black velvet sky above.

Outside everything was still under the majestic calm of a summer night. Inside the closed ship the lights were bright and the people gay, with the sort of suppressed excitement of a theater before the curtain goes up. There was an unusual quality about this night; the sadness of farewell was beginning to wear off, and both crew and passengers were looking forward to being on their way. Yet here they were, close still to the land and the friends they had left behind, but hearing nothing, seeing nothing, as if Auckland no longer existed. There was no communication with the land.

To all intents and purposes the Coromandel had sailed—except for the last letters the pilot would take off tomorrow.

In the big lounge forward, the young airman were making their selves at home, some of them writing last-minute notes, some giving an impromptu concert that filled "A" with cheerful noise.

Rory, coming down the after-staircase on his way to visit the ship's surgeon, was thankful for the velvet darkness of the night. There would be moonlight enough, later on in the month, to show them to every rafter and submarine on the route. But it was always a comfort to sail when the moon was waning, or in cloudy weather. It gave them a sense of security, however absurd. Cherry, coming up from the galley with her own dinner tray, stood aside to let him pass.

To Rory, fresh from the outer darkness, her face was like a small bright beacon. He said suddenly, spontaneously, "You look happy! Not your family installed?"

"Yes, thank you," Cherry shook her head as he held out his hands for the tray. "There's a little boy—Terry—he hesitated, wondering why she wanted to tell Rory about the child, and allowed the words to drift away.

"Mrs. Scott-Price's nephew," Rory remembered the agent's mentioning the boy. He thought any nephew of that woman's would be pretty poisonous. But Cherry's face was soft and warm and eager. Rory said gently, "Then you will be happy. I'm glad." Then you will be happy. He said that, and meant it. The girl would think he was crazy. Both of them went on their way with a little glow, as if in the quickening life of the ship they had found a friend and passed on.

Cherry ate her meals in her own cabin. The stewards ate in the galley, standing at the counters, too rushed even to sit down.

She had hardly finished her dinner when the bell from "A" suite rang. Room One—that would be Julia, not Terry. She wondered why Mrs. Scott-Price was not taking coffee with the others in the lounge, but she was soon enlightened.

Julia was lying on the day couch reading and smoking. "Please get me some coffee, Miss Mayne. Those men in the lounge are making a frightful noise, and I have a headache. The smoke room is cold and empty as a morgue." Her husky, complaining voice faded away.

Cherry said, "I'll fetch your coffee." She gathered that by "empty," Julia meant the smoking room did not contain Sir Douglas Pennington. Probably, like a wise man, he had retreated to his own suite in the port alley. They had put all the women and children on this side, and given the other alley to the officers and civilian men. It was convenient for Cherry and she thought humorously, probably a godsend for the men.

As she passed Terry's cabin she noticed that the door was shut, and opened it, looking it back. Terry whispered, "Who's that?"

"It's me—Cherry. Why did you shut your door, darling?"

"I didn't. Aunt Julia came to say good night."

"Well, it's all right now."

"Will you tell her about the door?"

"I'll tell her. Good night, Terry."

She guessed that he had been scared to get out of bed and open the door again. His voice was heavy with sleep. What a thoughtless idiot the woman was, waking the boy as late as this and shutting him up in a strange place!

When she took the coffee back she said, "Would you mind leaving your door and Terry's hooked back at night, Mrs. Scott-Price? It's a safety regulation."

Julia frowned. "But we're not at sea yet."

"No, madam. But the chief steward asked me to tell all the passengers."

"Oh, very well. Will you finish unpacking for me now? I made a start on it, but my headache is really bad. Do you know they've played the 'Maori Farewell' five times in the last half hour?"

Cherry, lifting out crepe de chine underwear with handmade lace, raised her head and listened to the plaintive, haunting melody coming from the piano in the lounge and half a hundred strong young voices. A faint smile hovered at the corners of her mouth. "Perhaps they're trying to forget how homesick they are," she suggested.

"Rubbish. They have the time of their lives, these airmen. Be careful with those stockings, they run so easily."

Chapter 6

The Coromandel cleared Rangitoto Channel in a spanking breeze that filled the sails of the small yachts fluttering like an escort about her steep sides. Like an es-cooled knicker, made a charming picture to Sir Douglas Pennington's eyes as he noticed them.

"Good morning, Miss Mayne. Hello, youngster!" He smiled at them both but his eyes lingered on Cherry. "I'm afraid you've got a handful there. These only children—"

"Terry is Mrs. Scott-Price's nephew," Cherry said distinctly, though she knew quite well his words did not refer only to Terry, "and I'm used to coping with handfuls of children."

"Are you, by Jove! More than I'd take on."

"Good morning, Sir Douglas," Julia sauntered up, smiling, freshly groomed and fragrant. Not even the bulky lifebelt could alter her slim poise. Cherry stooped to adjust Terry's small lifebelt, and afterwards he stood at attention in front of her while Mr. Fuller walked along and inspected them, giving a little speech on what they had to do if the alarm bells rang.

Julia gave a shiver as the chief officer dismissed them, and slipped her hand inside Sir Douglas' arm. "Eugh! It all sounds horribly morbid, doesn't it? Do take me for a nice brisk walk and blow the bogies away."

He disengaged himself gently and put his hand on Terry's shoulder. "I'm sorry, Mrs. Scott-Price, but I promised this young rascal of yours a game of quots. It's a game for the very young and the ageing, like myself!"

Julia frowned. "Miss Mayne can amuse Terry."

"Miss Mayne has her own duties, I'm sure," he spoke with sudden severity, as if Julia were a spoiled child.

Julia turned impatiently to Rory, who had been talking with Mr. Fuller and was now making off towards his own cabin to continue his interrupted rest. He had been an amused spectator of the little scene, until he was suddenly attached himself.

"Good morning, Mr. King. I'm sure you'll take pity on a lonely female and show me around. It's such a long time since I was in the Coromandel I've forgotten where everything is!"

It was said charmingly, with a low, husky laugh that robbed the words of their inanity. Rory's face was expressionless. He said, "Of course," and turned towards Miss Baker, standing in the background like a disconsolate pudding in her lifebelt. "And perhaps you would like to see around the ship, too?"

"Oh—I'd love to!" Miss Baker's hollow face went quite pink with unexpected pleasure. "How very, very kind of you." He was such a good-looking young officer. Fancy his trobbing with her when he could have walked alone with that fascinating Mrs. Scott-Price—she had at her encouragingly.

And Julia, stepping daintily on his other side, noted that sudden smile and made up her mind that Rory, for all his bad manners, was likely to be a very interesting young man. She would have to teach him a lesson, though, before she let him know that he could be interesting.

Cherry, taking off the little boy's lifebelt so that he could play, glanced up to find Douglas Pennington looking down at her with a queer expression, almost as if he, too, were a small, lonely boy.

Primitivists Association Meets
The annual session of the Primitivists Association was held with the Great Swamp Church near Greenville, last Saturday and Sunday. Elder S. B. Denny was chosen Moderator; Elder P. E. Getzinger, Clerk and Brother G. B. Pearce, Assistant Clerk.

There were seven visiting preachers from different parts of the country—Virginia, Maryland, Georgia and western North Carolina, and all of them came preaching Jesus and His love to a large and appreciative congregation.

The introductory discourse was preached by Elder Denny from the 122nd Psalm, "I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord."

Elder J. R. Worrell from the Upper Mayo Association, and Elder C. W. Miller, Moderator, of the Keokuk Association, preached sweetly Saturday afternoon. Sunday morning Elder J. A. Fagg, moderator of the Upper Mayo Association, spoke comfortingly from the expression of David, "For His mercies endureth forever." He was followed by Elder R. K. Blackshear of Edison, Ga., who is the editor of Good Will, one of the leading church papers in the South.

Elder Blackshear was followed by Elder George Hill, from the Pulaski Association, who was blessed with the spirit to proclaim the unsearchable riches of God's kingdom.

Sunday afternoon Elder T. S. Dalton, of Cantonville, Md., editor and publisher of the Advocate and Messenger, delivered an instructive discourse and was followed by Elder J. Harvey Daily who closed the association with an inspiring message.

Thus ended one of the best sessions of the association with all hearts glad for the nice weather, large attendance and the privilege of again having the gospel preached to them in love, meekness, and in the fear of God, Elder Denny stated.

Grain Market

Chicago, Oct. 26—(AP)—A mid-session rally in grain futures failed to hold today and prices moved into a new low ground near the close. Liquidation was attributed to favoring war news and to profit taking following the recent substantial advances in all pits.

NO SHORTAGE OF TOBACCO

Growers Willing To Meet Any Increased Demands.

Raleigh, Oct. 26—(AP)—The pertinent facts with regard to the present shortage of manufactured tobacco products brought out at a conference of tobacco interests and representatives of farm organizations here Wednesday included:

1. That the shortage is due to war conditions.
2. There is no actual shortage of raw tobacco.
3. Growers are opposed to extra quotas, holding that there is no need for increased production, and that factories would be unable to handle excess production.
4. Growers would, however, accept an increased acreage in 1945 if manufacturers and exporters "can satisfy the U. S. Department of Agriculture that there is need for increased acreage x x x and will guarantee a fair price x x x."

The conference adopted a resolution favoring a continuation of the present quota system, and asserted that the present shortage of manufactured products is only temporary. The conference was presided over by J. Rens Edwards, of the National Association of Tobacco Distributors.

In another resolution adopted by the conference, it was urged that a committee be appointed to act in an advisory capacity with governmental authorities with regard to the future of tobacco production and a continuation of the quota system. The committee was instructed to make a study of the 1945 needs of production and submit its report to the proper government authorities not later than November 5, 1944.

The conference also went on record as favoring abolishment of undue trade barriers against tobacco and other products purchased from countries which receive similar products from the United States.

Jap Shipping Sunk
Chungking, Oct. 25—(AP)—The U. S. 14th Air Force sank, probably sank or damaged more than 130,000 tons of Japanese shipping from October, 1943 through Oct. 18, 1944. A communique said today that the force helped cause Japan's present tanker shortage.

Staggering Blow

ingly one-sided victory over the largest Japanese task force, trapped south of Formosa by U. S. carrier planes, warships and submarines; and a crucial air-sea engagement fought northeast of Leyte off Samar Island and in the Sibuyan Sea.

MacArthur previously reported on the third action at the southern entrance to Leyte Gulf.

Japanese naval communications admitted the loss of one battleship, two cruisers, 1 destroyer and substantial damage to another battleship.

Most of the destruction was inflicted on a Japanese task force caught south of Formosa. Nimitz said, "with no damage to our ships."

Previously Nimitz had reported the loss of the light carrier Princeton and General MacArthur announced the sinking of an escort carrier from the Seventh fleet covering his amphibious landings on Leyte.

The Imperial task force caught near Formosa in the Philippine sea "was attacked by a concentration of aircraft, surface ships and submarines" for a day and a night. Enemy aircraft flew out from the Philippines in a futile attempt to rescue the trapped Japanese task force. The Japanese finally escaped under cover of a black night.

Aboard Adm. Daniel Barbey's flagship, Leyte Gulf, Philippines, Oct. 25—(Delayed)—(AP)—Two battleships, one cruiser, and three destroyers were sunk by United States surface ships and aircraft when a Japanese force of eight warships tried to reach Leyte Gulf from the south through the Sulu Sea and the Surigao Strait.

Only a cruiser and a destroyer escaped and both were damaged heavily.

The battle was joined in darkness at 4 A. M. and this morning U. S. battleships, cruisers, destroyers and PT boats were engaged.

One Japanese battleship went down in the night action. When day came U. S. destroyers went in to finish off the crippled enemy warships which were still afloat.

It is believed that most of the Japanese vessels in this formation had come from Singapore.

Flaming 'Play at Chapel Hill

Chapel Hill, Oct. 26—(AP)—Students of the University of North Carolina donned 1914 period dresses or peg-leg pants with high collars to act as extras for the shooting of background material for the motion picture production of "Look Homeward Angel," the late Thomas Wolfe's first novel. The scenes were being shot today in the university's beautiful outdoor playhouse, the Forest Theatre. A review shot of the audience will show the costumed students singing "Hark the Sound." Chicago Gets Chance To See Both Candidates

Dewey Spoke In Windy City Last Night; Roosevelt To Speak Saturday Night.

By J. W. DAVIS

Associated Press Staff Writer

Chicago, the exuberant metropolis which saw them nominated for president, is taking turns again this week with demonstrations for Thomas E. Dewey and Franklin D. Roosevelt—demonstrations watched by politicians for midwest vote clues. More than 30,000 people tried to squeeze up to the rafters of the big Chicago stadium last night to hear and cheer—Republican Dewey as he tore into Mr. Roosevelt on "moral issues."

The President's turn will come Saturday, in the far bigger Soldier Field stadium. It will follow by 24 hours his major speech in Philadelphia tomorrow night.

Even those politicians who say that "minds are made up by now" will compare Mr. Roosevelt's reception with the one Chicagoans gave Dewey. Reporters with the Dewey party agreed it was the noisiest and most enthusiastic the governor has had in all his travels—and this in a city whose mayor is Democrat Edward J. Kelly.

Dewey based his attack last night on the charge that Mr. Roosevelt lent his name to a plan "to sell special privilege" and a "voice in the formulation of administration policies" for one thousand dollars on the barrelhead.

Robert E. Hannegan, Democratic chairman, replied in a statement at New York that he had never discussed the formation of such a group with the President "and any quotation contained in the letter x x x attributed to the President is wholly without substance and is unauthorized."

Hannegan said he understood such an organization has been set up to raise funds but denied that any contributors "will be the recipient of special favors."

At little Rock, Democratic Finance Director H. L. McAllister and Sam J. Watkins took "personal responsibility for the $1,000 club letter" and said Dewey placed a wrong interpretation on it.

Dewey's audience asked his mention of fourth term supporters Sidney Hillman, chairman of the CIO Political Action Committee, and Earl Browder, Communist leader. These men figured also in a speech by Governor John W. Bricker, U. S. P. vice presidential nominee, who said at Dallas that the Democratic party has been taken over by the Communists and the PAC and that President Roosevelt is "their political prisoner."

For the moment, Democratic campaign was at a lesser gear, but Senator Truman, the Democratic vice presidential nominee warmed up for a farm policy speech at Peoria, Ill., tonight and others sharpened their word weapons.

INDEPENDENTS CAUSE WORRY

Politics Uncertain About 'On-the-Fence' Voters.

By DOUGLAS E. CORNELL

Washington, Oct. 26.—(AP)—The running jump which landed Republican senator Joseph H. Ball of Minnesota on the Democratic side of the political fence has set the politicians to worrying anew about that mass of voters on top of the fence.

What the mass independent voters are going to do or the amount of influence Democratic dissidents and Republican rebels are wielding is hard to gauge.

In border-state states, where a relatively few votes may swing the election, these factors are important. Actually there have been few men high in the ranks of either party who have announced definitely that they will bolt. Some have indicated they may stay home on election day. Ball is one who has taken an unmistakable stand. He said he will vote for and support the reelection of President Roosevelt. He will give some of his reasons in a 15-minute radio address tonight.

The senator is discussing the foreign policy issue, since, he said, the stands of Mr. Roosevelt and Republican Nominee Thomas E. Dewey on it resulted in his switch to the Democratic candidate. But he will leave it to the voters to decide, as he did, on the basis of these issues, which man to back.

Ball isn't alone among Republicans endorsing the President's bid for another four years in the White House. Russell Davenport, who managed the 1940 GOP campaign of the late Wendell L. Willkie, has expressed a preference for the chief executive's foreign policy. And a "Republicans for Roosevelt" committee has been organized on the west coast.

Senator Ellison D. Smith, the 80-year-old South Carolinian who has served longer in the senate than any other man, also has been backing a fourth term just as he did a third. He was defeated for renomination this year by Gov. Olin D. Johnston.

"Cotton Ed" Smith has been active to the extent that he called a meeting of anti-Roosevelt Democrats here last month to plan a campaign against the President's reelection. Less than a dozen people showed up, but they adopted the name "National Agricultural Committee," named Smith chairman and called on farmers to join in defeating a fourth term.

But Smith's office here says he has not announced he will vote Republican.

Smith's North Carolina neighbor, Senator Robert R. Reynolds, who broke with the administration on foreign policies as early as 1937, has decided not to run again this year, also has battled the New Deal. But he says:

"I have not announced how I shall vote and do not expect to do so."

BRAISED SHORT RIBS
... A Specialty of Rector's

One of the most tempting aromas ever to come from the famed kitchens of Rector's was that of short ribs browning in their own juices. Good cooks for years have valued the delicious flavor and tenderness of short ribs. Right now, when short ribs are lean and hence more thrifty, this flavorful non-rationed cut is more popular than ever. Brown the ribs well, cook slowly in moist heat until the meat practically falls from the bones, and you have a dish such as our head chef specialized in.

Braised Short Ribs—Delicious and Tender

2 lbs. lean short ribs 1/2 tsp. salt
1 tsp. Wilson's B-V 4 tbsp. fat
1/4 cup flour Hot water

Cut ribs into pieces for serving; spread out surfaces with B-V, and dredge with flour mixed with salt. Brown well on all sides, add 1/2 cup hot water (or tomatoatoes), cover and cook over low heat or in a slow oven, 300° F., for 3 to 4 hours or until tender. Add more liquid as needed. Vegetables such as potatoes, carrots, celery and onions may be added during the last hour of cooking if desired. Serves 4.

MORE SERVINGS PER POUND

Yes, the lean short ribs you are able to buy today will go farther than the fat ones to which we have been accustomed. Instead of buying three pounds for four people, you now need only two pounds.

Browned potatoes, green beans, whole wheat muffins, head lettuce with Thousand Island Dressing and baked custard make up my favorite menu when serving short ribs. It certainly fills up those hollow spaces that seem to develop on these chilly days.

QUICK MEALS TO THE FORE

Do you get home only a half hour before dinner time? This nutritious meal, and many like it, can still be yours ... with no hustle or bustle. How? Cook the whole meal except the muffins the night before. Start it while doing the dinner dishes and let the meat cook slowly during the evening while you are "at leisure." Mix the muffins at night, transfer to the pans, cover with waxed

Phantoms To Play At Kinston Friday Night

Coach Snag Clark's Greenville High School Phantoms will go to Kinston tomorrow night for the second contest away from home this season. The game will get under way at the Kinston ball park at eight o'clock. A large number of local fans are expected to accompany the boys to Kinston.

In tomorrow night's game the Phantoms will be seeking revenge for the defeat administered by Kinston here three weeks ago when the visitors came out on the big end of a 20 to 7 score. The Phantoms have been working hard since that defeat and show much promise. Coach Clark said today the Phantoms would win if the team works together like it has in the past two games in which it defeated Tarboro and New Bern.

The starting line-up has not been announced but the local offensive against Kinston will be sparked by Dave Perkins' hard hitting and Billy Harrington's passing ability. Tomorrow night is the fifth game for the Phantoms. They have won from Scotland Neck, Tarboro and New Bern and lost to Kinston.

GRID TEAMS GO VISITING

Most Of Games Outside State This Week-end.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 26—(AP)—William and Mary returns to the Southern Conference was Saturday after a two year absence, meeting North Carolina State at Norfolk in a game which should serve as a test as to whether the Tar Heels can again produce the power and drive which carried it to the Conference championship in 1942.

Since it scored its triumph under the aegis of Carl Voyles the Indians have had many new braves in camp, a new coat of war paint in the form of a changed plan of offensive and defense strategy and a change in tribal councils.

R. M. McCray, who was Voyles' right-hand man, has taken over the line and while he has followed many of the plans and policies of his predecessor, he has shaped the tactics to conform to the changes which have marked the game in the last two years, and if the record is to be taken for aught, they have been effective.

It is true that the opposition has not all been of the calibre of the Wolfpack but the Indians have shown steady improvement. McCray and his associates are looking forward to a stiff engagement with the club that defeated Virginia, the club that tied North Carolina Navy Preflight, and which managed to stay out in front of the powerful Wake Forest Deacons for a time last Saturday.

In four games this year, the Indians have scored a total of 123 points with Jack Bruce leading the scoring for the Tribe with 48 points, enough to put him in a tie for Southern Conference scoring honors with Rock Brinkley, former Norfolk High School athlete, and now with the Deacons.

State today continued drilling for its meeting with the Tribe, strengthened its offensive game in a stiff scrimmage. End Arthur Beholts and Tallent Howard Turner, hurt in the game with Wake Forest, were still on the sidelines but are expected back in the lineup by Saturday.

Another member of the Southern Conference, Virginia Military Institute, also was putting finishing touches to preparations for its game Saturday at Lynchburg with the University of Virginia, a tilt which will have no bearing on Conference standings, but is of importance in the Old Dominion Collegiate race.

The Cadets are banking on the forward pass attack of Elmer Kozzora, tailback, whose versatility in chucking the ball has gained the fighting squadron much ground in games so far this season. Kozzora will be ably supported by Clyde Grimsen, his star receiver; Walter Vannoy, John McEliff and Harold Butterworth.

Other members of the Southern Conference also will engage in non-conference tilts.

Duke University travels to New York to take on Army, and Coach Eddie Cameron said yesterday that the Blue Devils must stop Army's offensive if it is to make a good showing. The squad will leave Friday morning for the battle scene.

Army has averaged better than 50 points in four games this season and says Cameron, "I don't see how we can do anything but mount a defense to try to prevent some of those touchdowns."

Wake Forest already is enroute to Miami for its Orange Bowl clash tomorrow night, while South Carolina put finishing touches to preparations for its game at the Orangeburg, S. C., fair tomorrow afternoon with the Charleston Coast Guard.

Head Coach Doc Newton said today that approximately 20 of his players, many of them key men, will be unable to play the Guardsmen due to Navy V-12 furloughs now in progress.

Clemson went through a light drill today in preparation for its clash Saturday at Knoxville with Tennessee, following a tough drill yesterday in which the varsity participated with the second team.

Maryland and Florida complete the program in a game at Gainesville, and reports from the respective camps indicate both clubs will be in top condition Saturday.
