More Superfort Raids On Japan

Sizeable Force Of Saipan-Based Air Giants Pounded Jap Industrial Centers Today; 10 Members Of Crew Of Downed Plane Rescued At Sea.

Washington, Dec. 22—(AP)—Superfortresses resumed their attacks on Japan's home production centers today, attacking industrial targets on the island of Honshu.

The aerial task force was in sizeable force, indicating that up to 100 of the big planes participated. The attack was carried out by 29's of Brig. Gen. H. S. Hansell's 21st bomber command based on Saipan, a War Department communique said.

Additional details were not released.

By VERN HAUGLAND 21st Bomber Command, Saipan, Dec. 22—(AP)—(Via Navy Radio)—A sizeable force of B-29s bombed Nagoya for the third time in 10 days today.

Returning to the huge aircraft manufacturing center, the first Superfortresses over the city bombed through an overcast in the early afternoon.

Other formations kept coming over the target area for two hours and a half.

Brig. Gen. Emmett O'Donnell, Jr., commander of an operational organization, described today's raid as a "return engagement."

Since December 13th attack on the Saizudoki factory at the Mitsubishi aircraft works, more than 670,000 square feet of its roofage has been burned off. Today's raid may have been designed to finish off the target which Brig. Gen. Haywood Hansell, Jr., had earlier called "the Paterson, N. J. works and Hartford works combined."

This plant is instrumental in the production of Japanese bombers and fighters and is two and a half miles east of the famed Nagoya castle and eight miles north, inland, from the Kokuki waterfront plant which was bombed Dec. 18.

Gen. Hansell announced Dec. 18 that in addition to the heavy damage dealt Dec. 13 to four main assembly buildings, 22 smaller structures were destroyed or badly damaged within the Saizudoki plant.

The plant's takeoff was in clear weather but it is likely that some B-29s will not be able to bomb visually because of the frequently covered Honshu coastline and that they will have to employ precision instruments.

The fliers report their confidence is increasing and with experience gained from each mission they prefer.

NAZIS REPORT NEW RED DRIVE

Tell Of Russian Attack On Northern Front.

London, Dec. 22—(AP)—The Berlin radio said today the Russians in a new attack in the long-dormant northern sector, had hurled 27 divisions against the Germans on a 22-mile front south of the Latvian town of Saldaus (Frauenburg), about 60 miles southwest of Riga and approximately the same distance from the Baltic coast.

Assault divisions supported by tank formations and preceded by a terrific artillery bombardment of approximately 170,000 shells in 96 minutes opened the attack the Nazi military commentator said.

By DANIEL DE LUCE

Moscow, Dec. 22—(AP)—Russian shock troops wedged deeper into southern Slovakia today while new operations by two powerful Russian army groups threatened to seal off the important gateway into the Matru mountains and brought relief within sight for an isolated force of Slovak patriots estimated at 25,000.

The Germans admitted alarm over the resumption of Soviet pressure on the west side of the Danube in the vitally strategic zone between Budapest and Lake Balaton, where Marshal Fedor Tolbukhin's Third Ukrainian army passed early this month to build up greater striking power.

The new strike by Tolbukhin's forces, already linked with elements of the Second Ukrainian army, would be to blast through the German flank riveted on positions southwest of the Hungarian capital and on the fortress city of Szekesfehervar.

The Germans also confessed nervousness over Red army attacks in the vicinity of the great bend in the Danube northwest of Budapest.

New Success On Italian Front

Rome, Dec. 22—(AP)—Canadian troops, smashing forward to the Senio River against enemy resistance, have captured the town of Bagnocavallo on the road to Bologna, Allied headquarters announced today.

Bagnocavallo is eight miles north and slightly east of the captured Bologna-Rimini highway stronghold of Faenza, and is nine miles west of Ravenna on the main highway from that Adriatic city to Bologna.

Aided by tactical air force operations closely coordinated with the ground fighting, Eighth Army units had expanded their bridgehead over the Canale Naviglio on a broad front opposite Fagnacavallo, two miles north of Bagnocavallo.

Fifth Army operations south of Bologna and the Bologna-Rimini highway were confined to patrol activity.

SUPERFORT HEADS FOR JAPAN—Off for another raid at the heart of industrial Japan, this giant Superfortress leaves its base on Saipan as ground crewmen watch. Superfort bombings of Japan are becoming more frequent.

CLOSE TRAP ON JAPANESE

American Planes Now Using Mindoro Airfields.

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Philippines, Dec. 22—(AP)—Yank planes have snapped shut on the hapless Japanese on northwest Leyte, and pocketed Japanese troops are being destroyed while American planes range over the Philippines from a new base on Mindoro, less than 150 miles south of Manila, headquarters reported today.

The forthcoming offensive as it expands probably will involve up to six army groups and its route may well be across the broad Polish plain directly into Germany.

The Red Army high command has informed the United States and Britain of the offensive's starting date. Soviet sources in Washington said. This could not be confirmed in American military quarters but there is evidence that the Allies are counting on the upcoming winter drive.

Informal sources said the projected drive will disclose newly aligned Red Army forces. Since last summer, when the Leningrad front, three Baltic, three White Russian and four Ukrainian fronts were in action. The lineup of Russian armies has been a mystery.

Russian military activity in the Balkans has been confined to single fronts or army groups. Further advances from the White Russian, Baltic and Leningrad regions have been reforming.

A new Russian offensive aimed at taking Budapest, Hungarian capital, from the rear and opening the most direct invasion route to Vienna, Austrian capital, was announced yesterday by Berlin. Moscow did not confirm the new drive.

Though mounted to speed Germany's defeat, the promised Red Army drive probably will not affect immediately the Western front where the Wehrmacht in a slashing counteroffensive is advancing into Belgium.

The Russian offensive has been delayed, it was said, by the fact that the Polish plain freezes later than the Russian steppes.

Only yesterday War Secretary Stimson remarked at a news conference that "the German high command must be prepared to meet the Russian winter offensive, wherever it may strike."

And Prime Minister Churchill, addressing the House of Commons last Friday, said it "is obvious to any one who studies war maps, Russian armies will probably during the early part of next year traverse large areas of Poland."

Promise Relief From Cold Wave

Atlanta, Dec. 22—(AP)—Colder weather is moving southward but extremely low temperatures are not expected, the weather bureau reported today.

Mountain areas in Tennessee, Virginia and North Carolina may have snow flurries but a white Christmas is not on weather charts for the southeast.

Sections of Tennessee were blanketed with snow with Nashville measuring three inches. Memphis reported a light trace of snow late yesterday.

Somewhat colder weather was forecast tonight for the Carolinas and Georgia with minimums in South Carolina ranging from 20 to 24 degrees and lows of 28 to 32 predicted for Georgia.

The bureau said warmer weather was expected following tonight's drop. Minimums today included Little Rock 21; Memphis 18; Shreveport 27; Jackson, Miss., 34; Greenwood, Miss., 29; Atlanta, 32.

Sentenced to Prison

Rome, Dec. 22—(AP)—Italian Generals Pentimalli and Del Tetto, convicted for failing to defend Naples from the Germans in the days following the Italian armistice with the Allies, were sentenced today to 20 years imprisonment.

Allies Get Assurance Of New Red Offensive

Promised Winter Drive Expected To Be Across Polish Plains With Berlin As Its Goal.

Washington, Dec. 22—(AP)—Soviet Russia has promised to meet the rising Allied demand for Red Army action by hurling some three army groups against the Germans on the Eastern front.

The forthcoming offensive as it expands probably will involve up to six army groups and its route may well be across the broad Polish plain directly into Germany.

The Red Army high command has informed the United States and Britain of the offensive's starting date. Soviet sources in Washington said. This could not be confirmed in American military quarters but there is evidence that the Allies are counting on the upcoming winter drive.

Informal sources said the projected drive will disclose newly aligned Red Army forces. Since last summer, when the Leningrad front, three Baltic, three White Russian and four Ukrainian fronts were in action. The lineup of Russian armies has been a mystery.

German Gains Emphasize Prospect For Long War

Washington, Dec. 22—(AP)—The grinding fury of the German winter offensive resounded across the ocean today to drive home to Americans the grim prospect of a really long war.

American war workers who turned out the ammunition and other equipment being thrown against the drive of the Nazi hordes, it is clear now, have a whole lot of a job of replacement and addition.

And American civilians as a whole have now been told that they will have to continue to get along with a lot of things they have been missing.

Still another possibility—the extent depends in large part on casualties being suffered at the front—is that draft calls will grow in size. Chairman J. A. Krug of the War Production Board put it this way last night.

"If General Eisenhower had been able to break through the Westwall promptly, the equipment we had under procurement would have been sufficient."

"He hasn't been able to, and it looks as if it may take quite a long time. We must get ready to fight the kind of war we've been fighting in the last two months for the next year or so long as it takes."

General Courtney Hodges' First Army has been bearing the fiercest force of the German drive and Krug mentioned the possible necessity of re-equipping this whole army.

CONTROVERSY RUMOR DENIED

Brands Reported Difference With FDR Untrue.

Washington, Dec. 22—(AP)—Robert E. Hannegan, Democratic national chairman, said today a recent conference with President Roosevelt, involving "no controversies and the postmaster's generalship was never even mentioned."

His statement, issued by party headquarters, was in response to published reports that Hannegan and Mr. Roosevelt had a "none too friendly" talk during the President's recent vacation at Warm Springs, Ga.

Mr. Roosevelt, asked about the report at his news conference earlier in the day, said he did not think he wanted to comment on stories of that kind.

The news account said that Hannegan went to Warm Springs to discuss his own political future and that the three newsmen accompanying the President were prohibited from mentioning the visit since the chief executive was there "off the record."

It went on to say that Hannegan, after the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt, felt confidently that he would be rewarded with appointment as postmaster general. It added, however, that Postmaster General Frank C. Walker had decided to remain in the cabinet and that Hannegan would stay on as Democratic chairman.

Hannegan's statement: "The statement is patently and totally untrue. Our alleged conversation and the subsequent conference with the President were most cordial and friendly. There were no controversies and the postmaster generalship was never even mentioned in regard to public office and I understand his position. Without going into details, I may state that our talks apart from the usual holiday pleasantries were in relation to purely political matters."

"Another published story is to the effect that I was to open a Washington law office in partnership with William M. Boyle, Jr., executive assistant to the chairman. That likewise is a fabrication. I have no intention of opening a Washington law office either in partnership or individually, and never have."

Nazi Offensive Is Slowed Down

TRUMAN WILL STICK TO JOB

Not To Accept Executive Sideline Tasks.

By JACK BELL Washington, Dec. 22—(AP)—Senator Harry S. Truman plans to accept no executive sideline jobs after he becomes vice president on January 20.

The Missouri senator told friends before he left Washington today for a holiday vacation in his home state that President Roosevelt and he had agreed he would not be called upon for outside activities. Such things engaged some of the time of his predecessor, Henry A. Wallace, Wallace once headed the now defunct Board of Economic Warfare.

Truman's ambition, as reported by his intimates, is to become a direct pipeline for the exchange of information and ideas between the White House and the Senate.

Because he has been in the senate for 10 years, Truman feels that members will accept him as one of their own, not look upon him as an interloper. He hopes they will continue to tell him their troubles, advise with him about legislation.

Truman expects to see Mr. Roosevelt a couple of times a week and thus be in a position to communicate to the White House quickly the views of the senators about important matters. In return, he hopes to be able to tell members where the President stands on important questions that come before them.

He will have opportunity for personal contact with the President at cabinet meetings, besides attending the irregular conferences Mr. Roosevelt holds with his legislative leaders.

An exchange of views between the White House and Senate, Truman believes, will go a long way toward ironing out some of the difficulties with which the administration is beset in Congress. In the Senate Mr. Roosevelt's forces have only nominal control, can lose the ball quickly any time a dozen Democrats join forces with the Republicans. That has happened often in the past.

The vice president elect's contacts with the Senate may bear fruit in another direction, too. He is toying with the idea of making brief weekly broadcasts—a sort of radio report to the nation from his No. 2 mat in the official executive file.

Inquest Into Death Of Three Children

At an inquest at the city hall last night a jury found that Sarah Frances, Mary Louise and Caroline, children of George and Sarah F. Grimes, Negroes, 613 Ford Street, came to their death last Sunday morning as a result of a fire of unknown origin.

Coroner Griffin H. Rouse presided. Fifth Judicial District Solicitor Dave M. Clark conducted the examination of witnesses.

It was testified that a Negro fireman made an effort to rescue the children but the heat was so intense he had to give up. Witnesses testified that Lucy Vick, Negro, from whom the Grimes rented an apartment, moved her trunk from a rear room and escaped before the fire made much headway. The children's mother was away from the house a few minutes at the time of the fire. She said a pocketbook containing $60 was missing from under her mattress.

Masons And Others Remember Orphans

A check for $1,351.50 collected by the local Masonic bodies was sent to the Masonic Orphanage at Oxford today. Other money to be collected here will considerably increase this sum, the committee in charge stated. Donation of a substantial sum for the orphanage made each year by the Masonic groups and friends of the orphanage.

The Masonic Orphanage at Oxford, one of the best institutions of its kind, cares for children of non-Masons as well as Masons. Rev. Cressy K. Proctor is superintendent. The local committee expressed its appreciation to all contributors who helped to make this year's check one of the largest ever sent in from here.

Today On The Home Front

Washington, Dec. 22—(AP)—This story about the State Department is astonishing in itself. Nothing like it has happened before.

Secretary of State Stettinius, new in his job, has been trying to reorganize the department. It has been sticky with secrecy.

You can get information there, sometimes. Too often it is "off the record" or "not for attribution."

Which means: Mister, if you want to print it, it's your baby. I didn't tell it to you.

Stettinius is determined to humanize the place, loosen it up, warm it up, and wipe out unnecessary secrecy.

Yesterday he called 2,500 department employes from their desks to Constitution Hall. It was the first time they had been brought together.

He wanted to introduce to them his new top aides: Undersecretary Joseph C. Grew, and assistant secretaries Nelson Rockefeller, Will L. Clayton, James C. Dunn and Archibald MacLesh.

On the way over I could see with the mind's eye how some of the department's oldtimers would take all this; they'd gulp with dismay, as if someone had knocked their hats off.

And I thought too, that this thing might be a little on the phony side, that Stettinius, in his eagerness to loosen up the department, might be resorting to the kind of good-fellowship you'd find at a salesman's luncheon.

But after a U. S. Marine band had played briefly Stettinius and his aides walked out on the stage. He told the 2,500 some thing like this: "I'm reorganizing the department. These are my new aides. I wanted you to meet them early, so you'd have a lot of work to do. We'll have important work and we'll have to work together. We're going to expand the department. You'll have opportunities for promotion."

That was it. It was probably the most simple, direct, human thing I've seen among top officials in Washington. It certainly was one of the most sensible.

I think maybe most of the 2,500 felt that way, too. Maybe seeing it happen in the State Department makes it seem much more human than if it had happened anywhere else.

The WAR TODAY AN ANALYSIS OF THE NEWS

By DEWITT MACKENZIE Associated Press War Analyst

The great German counter-offensive hasn't yet reached its crisis but remains in that nerve-torturing, betwixt-and-between period of uncertainty which tries the morale of generals and anxious homefronts alike.

Probably the climax won't long be deferred, for Supreme Commander Eisenhower is pouring weight into the crucial sectors. However, the Nazis continue to hold the initiative, as would be expected at this stage of a drive of such magnitude, and the battle grows in intensity as it mushrooms out over a vast area of open country and becomes more fluid as it spreads.

As this is written the news arrived at my desk, a bulletin from the Western front reporting that the German offensive force appeared temporarily blunted and compelled to slow down. That's encouraging, but in assaying its significance we should take into account the fact that the drive has arrived at the point where it naturally would lose momentum somewhat.

The time has arrived for Nazi consolidation of position in some freshly acquired places, and the problem of making supplies keep pace with the advancing troops is becoming hourly more difficult for the Nazis.

German military commentators said the offensive has reached the phase which they characterize as the battle of materiel. That covers the situation fairly well. The element of big-scale surprise is past, and now comes the test of resources—manpower, weapons, supplies. Nazi Marshal Von Rundstedt struck with his full weight when he launched his great gamble, throwing his opponent off balance. However, the Allied superiority in all categories of resources is increasingly making itself felt, and even Berlin commentators are warning their public against over-optimism at this crucial moment.

British Increase Draft London, Dec. 22—(AP)—The British will draft 250,000 more men for the army in the "coming months" than was previously planned, Prime Minister Churchill's office announced tonight.

Pravda attacked Argentina today as an "asylum of Hitlerites," declaring its rulers continue to aid Germany against the United Nations.

"This aid can be seen in the incessant supplies of food and war materials sent via Spain to Germany, as well as the freedom of action given Hitlerite agents and spies in Argentina," said the article, spread over five columns on the Communist Party newspaper's foreign page.

Pravda said Argentina leaders persist "in following what once were Hitler's grandiose plans for German domination of Latin America."

"Hundreds of millions of dollars already have been transferred to Argentina by German criminals," Pravda declared.

It quoted American newspaper opinion as believing that Britain had not manifested solidarity with American actions against Argentina because of British financial interests in the South American country and Britain's need for meat.

The library, living rooms and drawing room were festive with mistletoe, ivy, holly and burning red candles.

In the dining room a scheme of red, white and green predominated. Over the dining table, the chandelier was decorated with pine boughs from which descended Santa in his little red sleigh driving small white and silver reindeer. The dining table covered with a white lace and embroidered linen cloth, was centered with a lovely white birthday cake embossed with ivory and sixteen red candles, and surrounded by small silver figurines of Santa's elves. Auxiliary appointments of the centerpiece were silver candleholders with red tapers, and silver composites holding salted nuts and Christmas mints. At either end of the table were silver trays of ices and Christmas cakes in red, green and white. Seated at either end of the table, Mrs. William Padgett and Mrs. Jesse Moyer II, served ices, assisted by Misses Marty Moyer Hadley, Jrne Dail Laughinghouse, Mary Ruth Carter, Carolyn Clark, Ella Frances Viola, Miss Jesse Moyer and Mrs. George F. Hadley.

Christmas carols were beautifully rendered on the piano during the evening and which added much to the enjoyment of those present.

THE DAILY REFLECTOR
December 22, 1904

Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Woodward left this morning for Rocky Mount.

Mrs. J. W. Higgs and children left this morning for Rocky Mount.

Remember the stockings child. We do not know whether there are any in Greenville or not, but we haven't done our duty if we don't find out.

The horn and the squeak are plentifully in evidence.

- CHRISTMAS
- A chandelier.
  - A mistletoe.
  - A lover near.
  - A maid below.
  - A kiss or so.
- And that is Christmas, don't you know?

Fisher sang "I Love You Truly" and "Because."

The bride, given in marriage by Mr. A. C. Fisher, wore a wedding gown of white satin and marquisette trimmed with lace. The full skirt extended into a train and her finger tip veil of illusion was caught to a taira of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses.

Miss Eva Gay Vincent of Greenville and Washington, D. C., was maid of honor. She wore a gown of pink net and carried an arm bouquet of carnations.

Miss Doris Briley of Greenville and Washington, and Miss Virginia Brunl of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Washington, were the bridesmaids. They wore gowns of blue net and carried bouquets of carnations.

The bridegroom had as his best man, Charles Gorman EM 3-c, USCG, of New York.

Mrs. Saperstein attended Greenville High School and for the past two and a half years has held a government position in Washington.

Mr. Saperstein attended McKinley Tech High School and Columbia Tech University in Washington.

Following the wedding, a reception was held at the home. A three-tiered wedding cake, topped with a sailor and bride ornament, was cut by the bridal couple.

Herschel Tyson Has Close Call
A Ninth A. F. Bomber Base, France—One of the most spectacular landings yet achieved by an American bomber was chalked up by the B-24 Marauder "Bombs for Boche" which used a narrow, asphalt highway in France for a landing strip, after the plane had exhausted its gas supply while returning from a bombing mission over Germany in a snow and sleet storm.

The difficulty of this feat may be seen by the fact that the landing gear of the medium bomber is approximately 15 feet wide and there was less than a 6-inch clearance on the winding road. (The width of the average runway is about 150 feet).

A runway of 4,000 feet is considered "safe" for Marauder landings, but the pilot of "Bombs for Boche" Second Lt. Thomas E. Mattax of Lenoke, Ark., used only 1,500 feet of the secondary road in bringing his ship down.

"We buzzed the road three or four times before we landed," explained the pilot.

"Brother, the Lord was certainly with us," declared the engineer-gunner, Sgt. Herschel M. Tyson of Greenville, N. C. "My pilot did a beautiful job of landing the ship and if we hadn't bounced off the road one time the plane would have been undamaged."

The plexiglass nose was broken and the props were dented when the Marauder hit some small saplings and wooded growth after bouncing off the road, but the damage was slight. "With some gas, we might have taken off and flown the ship home," said the pilot.

The bomber attacked an important enemy troop concentration facing Gen. Patton's Third Army and was returning when the gas supply ran out. Described as the "worst flying weather we've ever seen," the crew told of snow and sleet and heavy clouds. To add to their troubles, radio contact with friendly airfields was made impossible because of weather conditions.

Sgt. Tyson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Tyson, Route 4, Greenville, and attended East Carolina Teachers College prior to enlisting in the army in June, 1941. He has participated in six bombing missions and wears the Air Medal and the Distinguished Unit citation ribbon.

Island Song

Chapter 21

After Kumu, followed the other chiefs, some in cloaks of red, others in bright orange, decorated with half-moons and stars and crescents, all symbols of the all. Each man in the wedding procession carried the father's and wore about his neck the tell-tale bone-and-hair necktie.

With each party was the official character of that chief. It was his duty to recite in a sing-song voice the history of the family, tell of its great heroes and warriors, its triumphs and battles and victories.

The legends of the islands were handed down this way by mele chapters, from word of mouth to the next in line. The story of the Creation and of the great flood and the two sons of the god who fought until one was killed and the other banished from the islands. Loloa knew most of them by heart. She had heard them chanted by the Reverend Hama and Kilani and the old queen, Liloa.

The feather cloaks gleamed in the flashing torch light. Cloaks that had taken women ten and twenty years to make, each tiny, colored feather woven into the fish-net base of the garment, feathers taken from birds long ago extinct.

And the feathered helmets. Where had the ancient Hawaiians gotten that pattern? So like the Greek — like the steel head-piece of a Spanish soldier. One legend told of great bats, with white wings, which had landed on the shore of a hundred years ago. Spaniards, perhaps, which might explain the helmets and the story of the battle and to flood.

With the procession came a troop of hula girls, plump, brown-skinned, smiling, wearing only skirts of green leaves, with flower leis about their necks and ankles.

The palace guards stood at rigid attention, rifles at salute, as the procession swung past them. Here, in this line of marching men, were the great ones of Hawaii, sons of kings, chiefs whose word had been life or death in the old days, descendants of the great warriors of Kamehameha who had conquered all the island kingdoms and driven the forces of his enemies off cliffs into the sea to drown.

But the procession, for all its glittering splendor and flashing lights, meant only to Liloa that the time was drawing near when David would come to her. If it could only be Jason who could come to her tent! Ah, but that was impossible! Jason was far away in prison — dead even now, perhaps! She did not know.

She moved away from the opening, flung herself on the couch. She could tell by the noise outside that the chiefs were entering the palace. Crowds could be heard moving about the grounds, and once someone came near the tent and was challenged by the guards who surrounded it.

And then a new and strange noise penetrated into her consciousness. There was an angry buzz of talk. A roar, men began to shout and run up and down the paths. A shot banged out abruptly. Silence. Then another shot, and another.

Liloa sprang to her feet and listened breathlessly. What could it be? Riot? Revolution? And then a

They shouted and yelled. They stumbled over hedges and flower beds.

Other groups were gathered near the palace steps. White men. All armed. Grim, purposeful, led by a giant of a man waving a huge saber. Captain Callahan! This, then, was the beginning of the revolution!

As Jason watched, the Hawaiians broke into a wild mob and charged the revolutionists. A volley splashed in the night and natives went down in rows. They struggled and screamed on the ground under the feet of their friends. The crowd drew back, yelling threats and calling for help from the palace guards.

The princess! Where was she? He ran recklessly through the trees, dodging parties of natives, ducking under the dense foliage, leaping the gravel paths. Where was Liloa?

He rounded another corner and ran into a whirlwind of fighting. Men struggled, hand to hand. Clubs rose and fell, and men grunted and went down. Others sprang to take their places and heavy blows thundered home. Men swore and fought bare-handed or with clubs or splintered rifle stocks. Every so often a pistol would thunder, but most of the struggling men there fought furiously with whatever weapon came to their hands.

Jason swerved away and saw a tent looming through the dark. He ran to it, tore aside the flap and leaped in. Empty! A wreath of garlands lay on the couch, filling the tent with heady, fragrant perfume. But the princess was gone. Gone! What had happened to her? Had the revolutionists captured her? He rushed wildly from the tent and almost fell over the body of a man lying on the grass.

Jason bent and turned the man over on his back. One of the palace guards. He had been shot through the chest and now spat bloody foam.

"Where is she?" cried Jason. "Tell me the princess? What did they do with her?"

"Revolution," mumbled the guard. The body slumped in Jason's arms. Jason lowered him gently. This man had died in defense of the princess. The palace! The girl must have been hurried into the palace at the first sign of danger.

Fighting still raged everywhere. Jason noted that the natives, unarmed, had been driven back to the palace wall. The palace guards still resisted, firing from a barricade on the steps. The revolutionists seemed to have grown in numbers. Success had attracted recruits to the party. They swarmed in front of the palace, firing volley after volley into the shattered windows. As Jason watched, there were great cheers, and the crowd parted to make way for a small cannon on wheels—probably "borrowed" from some ship in the harbor.

He ran down a side path and saw men clustered about the back door of the palace. There was some confusion here, guards running in and out, others standing outside with her, it is better she disappear. Then you not get her, anyway. You are cause of all the trouble."

"Why, I'll—" Jason stopped suddenly.

Kilani had made a slight movement as if to signal with her hand. Before Jason could turn he felt a hard, round object pressed against the small of his back. The muzzle of a pistol. He turned slowly and found himself face to face with Melikal, captain of the palace guards!

Civil War In Greece Grows

By STEPHEN BARBER
Athens, Dec. 22—(AP)—An ELAS army 15,000 to 20,000 strong was reported today to be moving in on territory held by rightist guerrillas of Gen. Napoleon Zervas' EDES in strife-torn Greece.
Zervas informed British authorities that the leftist ELAS forces already had entered his territory in Epirus and were massing on Dhris-kos ridge, overlooking the town of Yanina, which has been high headquarters.
The British said Zervas charged that Albanians were among the force threatening the EDES' territory.
Evacuation of 3,000 ELAS prisoners by sea to an undisclosed destination was reported earlier by British headquarters while Lt. Gen. R. M. Scoobie's troops were mopping up the port of Piraeus.

Christmas Savings Club Popular Here

By CHESTER WALSH
Christmas savings checks totaling about $20,000 were mailed to more than 500 persons by the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Greenville the early part of December. This sum of money represented the weekly savings by individuals of from 25 cents a week and up during the past year. The Christmas Savings Club is popular. It was started seven years ago with a small number of weekly savers and the number is increasing each year. The distribution of $20,000 among more than 500 persons for Christmas spending money just before the holidays means a lot to the community.
The Christmas Savings Club for 1945 got under way today at the First Federal Savings and Loan Association offices. From the large number of enrollments in the club it now appears that the numbers of savers and the amount saved will be larger next year than ever before, said Secretary-Treasurer A. C. Tadlock today. A person who puts in 25c a week receives $12.50 next December; 50c saved each week draws $25; 75c a week means $37.50 at the end of the year, and $1 a week nets the saver a check for $50 next December.
Officers of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association are: Dick James, president; Guy V. Smith, vice-president; A. C. Tadlock, secretary-treasurer. Directors are: Dick James, Guy V. Smith, Alton Barrett, J. A. Collins, A. C. Tadlock, Dr. A. M. Schultz, Dr. S. M. Crisp, Dr. M. B. Massey and Marvin K. Blount.

Nazi Offensive . . .

A battle involving 10 tanks and two companies of infantry was fought at dusk last night on a newly active front some 20 miles south of the city, field reports said. The Germans were repulsed. (This would be in France, in the direction of the Third Army sector at Thionville.)
After six days of a slashing assault in which German forces had driven a wedge 32 miles deep into Allied lines by Tuesday noon, Field Marshal Karl Von Rundstedt's columns in Belgium have been turned aside in some sectors and forced to a slower pace in others, said a field report timed at 8:55 a. m. today.
Along the 32-mile German north flank veteran Allied forces had swung into action after speed marches across snow-topped mountains. Fierce tank battles had been fought in head-on collisions with German armor, and cool veterans of river crossings all the way from the Volturno in Italy to the Moselle in France had mowed down waves of Germans attempting to force the turbulent Ambleve. This flank was firm.
Along the southern flank of the bulge the Allied situation also was improved, but still confused.
However, the initiative still was in the hands of von Rundstedt and groups of 20 to 30 German tanks still made slashing penetrations here and there and roved behind Allied lines.
Both sides were pouring tens of thousands of men into the critical phase of the battle every few hours as the intensity of the conflict in the fog-shrouded cauldron mounted. Except for a few field dispatches, however, there was no new word as to the depth of the German penetration.
Not until 4 or 5 p. m., EWT. was Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters expected to make a new announcement of positions. This announcement was expected to cover the situation only up to Wednesday night under supreme headquarters security decisions.
(The German radio said the German high command also had adopted a policy of secrecy and called it a "battle of silence.")
St. Vith, four miles from the German border, with two German wedges driven far past it on either side, was still held by the Americans despite the frontal attack of a full German SS division.

Fighting through fog, snow and mud, American fighting men were cutting down Germans by the hundreds and taking heavy losses.

Fifty-five enemy tanks were destroyed along the northern flank of the German thrust yesterday, field dispatches said.

The tenor of front line dispatches suggested that the German foray south of Luxembourg was a roving mission. Third army dispatches, however, said 60 German planes were spotted north of Metz last night.

The main axis of the German thrust apparently was still westward, with the Germans vainly endeavoring to curl their armored spearhead northward.
Unless von Rundstedt succeeds in fanning out behind the main part of the First army to the north shortly it is possible he will be confronted with a great weight of men and material bearing down on his right flank.

(The Germans said the Allied front opposing the German push still was not "coherent" but suggested they already were feeling the effects of First army reinforcements rushed from the north, and the Third army action from the south.)
(One Berlin broadcast said the Third army bridgehead across the Saar at Ensdorf, near Saarbrücken, had been abandoned. This was without any Allied confirmation.)

Already one Allied counteraction in the Monschau area, northern hinge of the German line, had cut nine miles into the German salient, reducing its base to 46 miles.

This attack had cut across some of the German supply lines from the road center of Schleiden. But the lines to the likely main bases of the German drive, such as Stadkyll, Prum, Biltburg and Trier, were intact.

The British Canadian front remained quiet, as did the Saar river front of the Third army.

The Seventh army, fighting along the Wissembourg gap near the Rhine, was up against a 15 to 20-mile thick Siegfried belt and some of Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's men were fighting above the clouds in the Haardt mountains in efforts to reduce pillboxes with walls of six feet of concrete and one foot of armor.

More parachutists were dropped by the Germans, this time a few miles southwest of Habemont, westernmost point of penetration so far officially reported, the Allied communique said. This may have been near Werbomont, where dispatches said an enemy force had cut the Liege Bastogne highway.
One pocket of 500 parachutists was wiped out near a vital road junction after five days of fighting. The parachutists had expected to be reached by German armor in 24 hours.

This figure is about $6,000,000 less than the $17,394,000 realized during the 1943 season but is well above the ten-year average of $8,097,000, Willis said.
