Germans Open New Attack On Seventh Army Sector

Nazi Forces Linked Up In Northeast Alsace; British Capture More German Villages In The North; American First And Third Armies Forging Ahead.

By JAMES M. LONG

Paris, Jan. 19.—(AP)—The Germans burst out of the northern end of the Rhine bridgehead above Strasbourg today and linked up with other forces in northeast Alsace, forming a solid front against the U. S. Seventh army along 40 miles of the Maginot line as far west as Biltche.

The situation on the southern front was regarded at supreme headquarters as increasingly grave. Into this potential springboard for another big attack, the enemy was pouring a steady stream of reinforcements over ferries and pontoon bridges, thrown across the Rhine from Strasbourg to Karlsruhe. In northern Luxembourg, 1st Gen. George S. Patton's Third army was on the move again under fire of Siegfried line big guns after breaking the German Sure river line. The Americans were pressing the enemy back against the Our river bound within six miles of heavily fortified Trier. His latest advances ranged to two miles or better. The Third army men fought in white camouflage suits, blending with the deep snow.

British troops driving into Germany from the Dutch panhandle west of the Maas pushed the enemy back two more miles and captured six villages northeast of Sittard. These were Hogen, Havert and Schalbruck, all inside Germany; Stein, Lind and Heide. They battered into Isenbruch where bitter street fighting progressed. The towns are within 35 miles of the great Rhine city of Düsseldorf.

The American First army drove through wind lashed snows for substantial gains all along the curving 40-mile front contracting about St. Vith, last Belgian road center the Germans hold in the flattened Ardennes salient.

The first division gamed up to 2,000 yards and entered Schoppen eight miles northeast of St. Vith. Other troops entered Ebertange. (Continued on page four)

Owners Urged Keep Dogs In

Chief of Police Herbert Wooten today urged all dog owners to keep their animals in their yards or that his men would find it necessary to catch and impound them. Chief Wooten said that members of the force caught 10 dogs on the city streets yesterday and found it necessary to shoot two others.

The WAR TODAY AN ANALYSIS OF THE NEWS

By DEWITT MACKENZIE Associated Press War Analyst Today's special British Prime Minister Churchill told his House of Commons yesterday that he and Marshal Stalin had reached an agreement on dealing with the Balkans to prevent future wars, and that President Roosevelt had been kept "constantly informed." A reader of this column asks if this means that Messrs. Churchill and Stalin are trying to do Uncle Sam a favor by seeing that he doesn't get entangled in European affairs.

These are days when the blood of the crystal-gazer surges hot through his veins as he views the rush of the Red armies toward Berlin, but this isn't a good time for prophecy beyond recording that the Allies are moving admirably along the sure road to victory.

We shall be wise to take a tip from Premier Churchill's remark that he couldn't attempt to "set limits" to the superb and titanic events which we are now witnessing or upon their reaction in every theater. In his opinion "the wisest and most far sighted prophets will reserve their opinion until the results are known."

Upwards of 100 Giant Bombers Took Part In Today's Daylight Attacks On Jap Homeland.

Casualties

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, Paris, Jan. 19.—(AP)—The Germans suffered 120,000 casualties from Dec. 12 to Jan. 11 in their offensive to split the Allied front in the Ardennes. Supreme headquarters announced today. Allied casualties, predominantly American, were 55,421 during the same period. Of these, 18,416 were lost as prisoners. Supreme headquarters announced yesterday that American casualties during December were 74,788. This covered a different period, however, including the first 16 days of December in which fighting occurred in the Saar and on the Roer River before Cologne. It did not extend into the first 11 days of January when 30 American divisions were flattening out the German salient.

In addition to German losses in personnel, of which about two-thirds were killed or seriously wounded and the rest prisoners, the Allies destroyed a mass of enemy vehicles and other equipment including 600 tanks and assault guns in the Dec. 16-Jan. 11 period.

INAUGURATION TO BE BRIEF Ceremonies To Consume About 20 Minutes.

E. DAUGLAS B. CORNELL Washington, Jan. 19.—(AP)—President Roosevelt stressed Anglo-American cooperation in winning the war today as he jokingly told inaugural-minded reporters that the first twelve years in the White House are the hardest.

At his bi-weekly news conference the President. Praised the combined production and resources and the combining of raw materials and combined food boards as a "strikingly successful example of United Nations collaboration." Shortly before the United States, Britain and Canada jointly had announced the boards would be continued until Japan is whipped.

Fats And Oils On Ration List

Washington, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Housewives trying to stretch food rations are getting a first-aid kit of commodities requiring stamps had the added task today of budgeting for fats and oils.

They have three days to do the job for the OPA last night "froze" until Monday all retail sales of lard, other shortening and salad and cooking oils. When the ban is lifted at that time each of these products will be rationed at two red points a pound.

The sales halt was ordered, OPA said, to prevent runs on short supplies while the trade takes steps to put rationing into effect.

Red Forces Enter 'Pittsburg' Of Poland

Above is a panoramic view of Lodz, second largest city of Poland, with its great industrial plants. Lodz, 70 miles southwest of Warsaw, has been entered by the Russians in their latest drive, according to admission from Berlin. The loss of the city is another blow to Germany's war production efforts.

American Forces Smash Jap Defenses On Luzon

Important Highway Town Of Urdaneta Captured In 24-Hour Tank And Artillery Battle.

By C. YATES McDANIEL General MacArthur's headquarters, Luzon, Jan. 19.—(AP)—American mobile tanks, mortars and armor, smashing a cleverly concealed concentration of Japanese tanks and artillery in a 24-hour battle captured the highway 3 town of Urdaneta early yesterday in the first bitter fight of the Luzon invasion.

Seizure of the key town on Gen. Douglas MacArthur's left flank opened the northern section of the main Manila-Baguio highway to the Yanks. Meantime an American column 20 miles south along the same vital highway 3 captured the road and five-mile ram and pressed on toward the important city of Tarlac 20 miles from Manila. Another infantry force approached Tarlac obliquely down another road from Camiling.

All advances were supported directly by American warplanes operating off the Linxayan airbase. The Formosa domestic radio warned today that large scale enemy air raids "will be intensified hereafter." In a broadcast picked up by the Federal Communications Commission the Formosa announcer said "the ferocity of the war now being waged in the Pacific is unprecedented in the history of the world, and the Japanese Empire is really facing a crisis."

At Urdaneta, 27 road miles southwest of Lingayen Gulf, the Luzon Japanese made their first determined effort to stand and fight. The linked American column encountered Japanese artillery and camouflaged armored vehicles hidden amongst trees and shrubbery on the town's outskirts.

Russian Gains Depriving Germany Of Oil Supply

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER Washington, Jan. 19.—(AP)—The Red Army's advance in southwest Poland is rapidly depriving Germany of one of its last remaining sources of gasoline.

It now appears entirely possible to enemy warfare experts here that the enemy's synthetic plant and crude oil refinery losses in this area, coupled with bomb damage to plants in central and western Germany, may soon sharply limit his military activities.

The Silesian area and the adjoining section of Poland adjoining around Krakow are important to Germany because of the rich coal deposits found there. Coal is the source of synthetic gasoline on which the Germans have come to rely more and more in recent years to run their trucks and planes.

CHURCHILL WINS AGAIN

Upheld By Vote Of 340 To 7 In Commons Today.

London, Jan. 19.—(AP)—An attempt to express censure of Prime Minister Churchill's interventionist policy in liberated lands was beaten 340 to 7 today in the House of Commons.

Technically the vote was on a war appropriations bill. Some critical Laborites announced beforehand that although they opposed British policy in Greece and Italy, they would not vote against the bill on the grounds they might be accused of impeding the war effort.

Shortly before the vote, Eden told Commons that Britain would place before the forthcoming "big three" conference a demand for creation of machine with power to deal quickly and jointly with international political problems. He said Britain was ready to go to almost any length "in order that the machinery may function."

The British government, Eden said, was "not fully satisfied with the existing machinery for international cooperation on a political plane" and had been "rather troubled" for some time about the setup.

Smash Bridgehead On Italian Front

Rome, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Counter-attacking Eighth Army forces have smashed a small bridgehead which the Germans established on the south bank of the Senio River earlier this week and have driven the enemy back across the stream. Allied headquarters announced today.

Headquarters disclosed yesterday that the bridgehead had been established near Fuscignano, about 13 miles northeast of Faenza and 14 miles inland from the Adriatic coast.

STUDY PLAN TO DRAFT NURSES

Surgeon General Says Army Needs Are Great.

Washington, Jan. 19.—(AP)—The Army's Surgeon General said today inadequacy of nursing care, in the face of a 270 per cent increase in battle casualty patients, makes it imperative that nurses be drafted.

Since May, said Maj. Gen. Norman T. Kirk, "our patients have increased from 200,000 to 450,000," while the number of army nurses has risen only 2,000.

Appearing before the House Military Committee, the Surgeon General gave all-out support to the nurse draft proposal made by President Roosevelt two weeks ago in his "State of the Union" message to Congress.

"We are now receiving in army hospitals of this country," Kirk testified, "30,000 to 32,000 patients each month, as compared with 8,500 in the first half of 1944. This is an increase of 270 per cent."

Approximately 15,000 leave hospitals each month. Thus those who received double those relieved. "The increased battle casualties, added to those requiring hospitalization because of sickness and disease, has greatly enlarged the demand for nurses. It is to meet this demand that I now favor the application of Selective Service to fill immediately the shortage in the supply of nurses."

Kirk's testimony interrupted committee work on work-or-be-drafted legislation for men between 18 and 45. An anti-closed shop amendment to that measure is to be taken up by the committee at a later executive session.

Since last April, Kirk said, 27,000 (Continued on page four)

Stettinius Plans To Attend Meet

Washington, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Secretary of State Stettinius said today that he would accompany President Roosevelt to the approaching meeting with Prime Minister Churchill and Marshal Stalin.

Stettinius told his news conference he would also attend the meeting of the American Republics, (with the exception of Argentina) in Mexico City scheduled for February 15 but which may be delayed to February 21.

The secretary declined to go into any further detail on the timing of his trips, since the President's security is involved. He said that President Roosevelt had invited him to go along to the big three conference several weeks ago.

Prime Minister Churchill said yesterday he intended to take his foreign minister, Anthony Eden, to the meeting.

Stalin Announces Two New Offensives; Krakow Captured; Other Soviet Units Smash Into Lodz; Advance Of 50 Miles Scored In New Carpathian Drive.

London, Jan. 19.—(AP)—The Russians rolled through broken German defenses all along the eastern front today, capturing Krakow and driving into East Prussia to a depth of 30 miles in their greatest penetration of the Reich.

Marshal Stalin announced the losing of two more offensives in East Prussia and in the Carpathians of southern Poland. Developments were:

- 1. The Russians have captured Lodz, 70 miles west of Warsaw and 250 miles from Berlin. Stalin announced in his fifth order of the day.
- 2. Complete liberations of Budapest were foreshadowed by withdrawal of the German garrison to the west side of the Danube in the Hungarian capital.
- 3. Stalin, in an order of the day, disclosed that a new offensive, the fourth of the series of gigantic winter operations, had launched forward 50 miles on a front of 38 miles in the Carpathians. It seized Gorlice, 65 miles southeast of Krakow; Jaslo 75 miles northeast of Gorlice, and 400 other towns, and forced the Wisloka and Dunajec rivers.
- 4. Stalin's second order of the day announced the fall of Krakow, (population 200,000), ancient Polish capital in southwestern Poland, the former seat of the German government-general in Poland. It is 47 miles from German Silesia.
- 5. A third order of the day announced the opening of a fifth offensive in East Prussia.

In this latter operation, Stalin said, Gen. Ivan Chernikhovskiy's Third White Russian army broke through on a 36-mile front and advanced 27 miles. The Soviets crossed the Memel river, on the north side (Continued on Page Five)

Charge Dunn Man With Conspiracy

Raleigh, Jan. 19.—(AP)—District OPA Director J. S. Johnson said Marvin Wade, Jr., Dunn business man, was charged today with conspiracy to bribe an official of the U. S. government and with conspiracy to rob the safe of the Harnett County War Price and Rationing Board.

Johnson announced last night that two other Dunn men were being held in the Wilson County jail in connection with the case. Both of the men, Johnson said, were employed by Marvin Wade, Jr., against whom the charges will be pressed although he joined the Navy only last Tuesday.

Today On The Home Front

Washington, Jan. 19.—(AP)—The Germans' resistance — and their counter-offensive — have forced a swarm of changes on the American home front.

They dip into everyone's life, in one way or another: food, fuel, clothing, business. And a lot of men, who may have thought it never would happen to them, are army-bound.

You may not have noticed the changes, but they are piled up piece by piece, but here are some of the big ones. Food is as tight now as at any time in the war. Only 35 per cent of it is back on the list. So are major canned vegetables.

Instead of more and more civilian production of consumer goods, the War Production Board (WPB) has ordered no more to be produced in the next three months than was produced in 1944's last three months.

There have been innumerable cases where manufacturers were told by WPB they could not stop scheduled output of things ranging from shotgun shells to metal caskets.

Plans for building homes — just homes that people wanted — have been almost entirely shelved and building is back where it was; the only homes to be built are those for war workers.

All worsted yarns have been frozen for military use until June 1, 60

Fuel supplies have been cut. Civilians have been asked to keep the temperature in their homes at no higher than 68 degrees, and advertising signs and display windows have been ordered "browned out" to save fuel starting Feb. 1.

And the whip cracked over men and manpower: Draft boards had been taking only men under 26. Now they're sweeping into the group 26 to 30. They'll take men up to 35 who don't get into essential work.

Men up to 35 who leave essential work without draft board permission will be taken, too. Even 4-Fs (Continued on Page Four)

Vougeois-King. Mrs. James F. King announces the marriage of her daughter, Martha Stallings, to Pfc. Wilson J. Vougeois, USMC, on Wednesday, January seventeenth, nineteen hundred and forty-five, in Dillon, South Carolina.

Pfc. and Mrs. Vougeois left immediately after the ceremony for New Orleans, La., the groom's home, to visit relatives. Pfc. Vougeois is stationed at Camp Lejeune.

West Greenville P. T. A. Meets. The Parent-Teacher Association of West Greenville School met in the school auditorium Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 18, with Mrs. F. P. Hendrix, vice-president, presiding. The devotion was led by Mrs. Henry Barrow.

Letters were read by the acting secretary from Mrs. Maude Baynor Foy, retiring director, thanking the association for its part in the retirement gift to her; from Mrs. Sallie Hardee expressing her gratitude for the lovely dish garden; from Mrs. K. B. Pace commending the association for its share in sending Christmas cheer to the servicemen in nearby hospitals. Miss Hendrix, chairman of the War Committee, reported that a contribution was made to the Christmas cheer boxes to be sent to the area hospital and that a field ambulance had been purchased through the sale of bonds and stamps at school. Miss Fulllove reported that plans had been made with Mr. Miller for new shrubbery for the school grounds. She also asked the association to assume responsibility for the Christmas tree, a child, hurt by a falling branch. Miss Hendrix, chairman of the Junior Red Cross, reported that numbers of Christmas favors, baskets and place cards were sent to Camp Lejeune. Sincere thanks were given to Misses Foley, Rowlette, Purvis and Mrs. Batchelor for the splendid Christmas program on December 19. This was an adaptation of Dickens' Christmas Carol interspersed with the ever beautiful Christmas songs. Floyd H. Hork, as Scrooge, Willy Spain as Bob Cratchit, Doris Lou Taylor as Mrs. Cratchit, and all the little Cratchits with their bubbling enthusiasm made this a most delightful program.

The Social Hygiene Committee, of which Miss Laura Foley is chairman, has charge of the program for the afternoon. Mrs. Sallie Mae Davis Knight gave a most helpful talk to parents on the "Importance of Sex Education," stressing the necessity of the home, the school, the social and health agencies working together for a more wholesome relationship. The committee recommends the following books for study: "Strain, Frances B., 'New Patterns in Sex Teaching,'" Schweitzer, Karl, "Growing Up," Swift, Edith Hale, "Step by Step in Education," Strain, Frances B., "Sex Guidance in Family Life Education," Hohman, Leslie B., "As the Twig is Bent." Also these pamphlets: American Hygiene Association, 1790 Broadway, New York City: A-164, How Should You Tell Your Child About Sex? A-971, Sex Instruction in Public Schools; A-159, Integration of Sex Character with Biology; Dr. Funk, A-163, Sex Education for Parent Groups (Parker).

These pamphlets are sold for five and ten cents each and are recommended for purchase in parent-teacher groups to be circulated among the members. Mrs. L. A. Whitehurst, Mrs. R. V. Nichols and Mrs. Bill Adams were hostesses for the afternoon and served hot chocolate and cookies during the social hour. Miss Allian Purvis' fifth grade won the attendance prize.

Some talk has been heard in passing that there was considerable cost attached to stamping out the threatened smallpox epidemic here last fall. True it did cost both the town and the county considerable money, but who can look at the situation in its true light and say it was not money well spent? That another case has not since resulted shows the benefit of prompt action.

Chapter 16
Two men shook hands; there was a touch of restraint in Hugh's smile, and almost a twinkle of suspicion in Captain Gordon's eyes. "Before Dr. Nichols came hurrying across the platform, panting because of the speed with which he was traveling."
"Prather," he said in passing to Meredith, "Well, I see you back, Dr. Merry. This is Captain Gordon, of course. Damned to you, sir. My car is right this way."
Meredith said, "But I expected to see Captain Gordon at our place, Nichols."
"Oh, did you now? Heck, girl, he had him all the way from Chicago," snapped Dr. Nichols.
"I'm staying at the Blake place,
of course. I made arrangements with Matilda this afternoon. And I want to talk to him—fast! Come on, ain't you?"
Captain Gordon grinned at Meredith. "It seems that I have no voice in the matter," he said. "It's very nice knowing you, Dr.
Merry. Happy to have met you, Mr.
Prather! I'll see you tomorrow. I hope you'll be added to Meredith and me off across the platform in the car of Dr. Nichols."
Hugh stared after him, puzzled, with a growing resentment in his heart that Meredith had to admit quite justified under what must seem to him the odd circumstances. "What is this?" he demanded.
Meredith squeezed his arm and smiled. "It's a long story, darling. Can you imagine, Hugh, what an interesting and all get it'll be. Am I going to hear it?"
Of course, darling—later on, if you mind. I've been Dr. Merry long—I'd like just to be Mrs.
Prather for a while, if you don't mind. It hasn't been a pleasure trip, but—truly."
"Hasn't it?" asked Hugh, with a simulation of interest, his eyes bewildered and aery.
"Darling," Meredith leaned toward him and her husky voice was a little. "I went to abandon to a military hospital to sue with the authorities about condition in River Gap that consists of every single living creature I'm terribly tired—please let me tell you about it later!"
He tucked her into the car and headed towards the beloved lodge
the hill back of River Gap that never seemed so blessedly homely. The light that streamed in from the windows, their curtains pulled down, made the long, low look like an oasis of warmth in a world of darkness and cold and evil wind and rain.
Cooper had the door open almost as the car stopped, and Hugh saw Meredith across the threshold. The pleasant, luxurious interior unfolded her like loving arms. Mrs. Cooper was so glad to see her and Hugh was beaming at her so happily that she could have stayed in tears for the sheer joy of being home.
The dining table looked very festive, with its shining lace cloth, its blue-thin crystal glasses, its brass, beautifully polished silver, best china, and a bowl of hot-water roses in the center. From the kitchen, the conservatory, Meredith drew a long breath and said, "I've simply got to go up to this. Have I time for a word and a change, Mrs. Cooper?"
As she came down the stairs,
she came to meet her, and Cooper stood beaming in the dining room doorway. Dinner was ready, they ate, Hugh related her with of gossip about the town, things that had happened while she was away, deliberately searching his mind for those that would make her glad or that would lift her spirit.
When dinner was over, and Meredith and Hugh were alone in the big room, he turned towards her and she was smiling. "I'm glad to see you. She sat curled up in a little chair in a chair that was covered in a stunning contrast to the bright tones of her house-coat and said, "You look very pretty today. Like a portrait of a lady whose husband is bound to get sent. Mayor now, governor later, do you know? How'd you like to be the First Lady of the state?"
Meredith protested, laughing, for goodness sake, darling, back a little and begin again! I have the faintest idea what you're saying about!"
There was a mass meeting Friday night," Hugh said, "and it was a riot. There'd been a brawl one of the taverns, and a couple kids got hurt pretty badly. Two of them were arrested, and a package of marijuana cigarettes was found on one. He refuses to tell where he got 'em, and the townspeople are up in arms."
Meredith was listening, wide-eyed, trying to get the whole picture as he told it.
So there was a mass meeting at the town hall, and there were some speeches made, and finally, somebody suggested they'd like to hear from me. He went on after a moment, "And never being one to play modest, I promptly rose on my haunches and gave them
this."
I wish I had been here to hear it," said Meredith eagerly.
He made a little gesture of appreciation of that and grinned.
"Well, you should have been, an-celly, you tell me it was quite a speech, was pretty mad. I admit it. You are the father of the kid with the are they was Bill Wright—member? His son Jimmy and little Luella Carling once decided they'd die together, than live apart.
Bill, poor old Bill, was in quite a fix. Wanted me to advise him—all I could do was try to get the stubble devil to tell where he got cigarettes, but he wouldn't open chops. Because, of course, he was scared green. Merry, there's nothing unspeakably evil back of this business! Somebody higher River Gap," she said contentedly.

Hugh laughed. "Hey, not so fast;
I was only nominated! That doesn't mean I'll be elected!"
Meredith sat up straight and stared at him, shocked.
"Hugh Prather! Do you mean to tell me that somebody's going to run against you?" she demanded indignantly.
"Well, certainly somebody's going to run against me!" he assured her, grinning, his eyes bright with amusement. "I wasn't elected by a unanimous vote, there on the spot!
That would deprive River Gap of the wild excitement of a campaign!"
He sobered a little and said quickly, "And it's by no means certain that I'm going to be elected, either.
It's going to be a stiff fight—and that's the way it should be in a democratic country. Everybody should have a voice, and everybody should consider it his sacred duty to use it!"
Meredith said blankly, "But who in the world could they possibly run against you, Hugh, who'd have a chance of being able to do a good job?"
Hugh grinned warmly at her question and said cheerfully, "Well,
when Bill Wright nominated me,
and several seconded the nomination, Dan Lacey got up and today's amazement, made a damning good speech. I don't know why anybody should have been surprised, because he's a very clever shrewd
man. But he's always been so quiet and has spoken out so seldom that people stared at him, with their mouths open. He began by saying that while he thought I'd make a very good man for the job, that since we were going to have an election, and there would have to be some competition for me, he wanted to nominate a man to whom River Gap owed a great deal, a man who was a symbol of all the other men to whom River Gap and all of America owed a debt they could never repay, a man who had brought fame and glory to River Gap, and who, because he was young and aggressive and had gone through experiences that had aged him and had him appreciate the needs of our country—in short, he nominated Jerry Borer."
The name hit Meredith with a terrific impact. She was taken so completely by surprise that for a moment all of the shock did not register. She had been so happy at being home with Hugh, that it had been easy to shut the thought of Jerry and the "epidemic" into the back of her mind and to be worried about later. But now—
"Jerry Borer!" she whispered,
white and shaken.
Hugh misunderstood, said
quizzically, "Oh, of course I know how you feel, sweet! But after all, Jerry's a good guy. He'll do a good job. Oh, make no mistake about it.
I'm not going to step aside and let him win without a fight. But I think he's got a better chance of beating me than anybody else, the opposition could possibly dig up.
Just between ourselves, sweet, I hope he wins."
"No, no!" Meredith cried out, from such a depth of pain and shock that Hugh stared at her, startled. "He mustn't run! He can't! He mustn't be elected. He—couldn't possibly be!"
Hugh stared at her, bewildered, and even a little angry because of the bewilderment.
"Oh, for Pete's sake, darling, what's there to get so wrought up about?" he protested. "After all, no matter who is elected the town will benefit."
"He can't be elected, Hugh! He can't even run! He's been removed from River Gap tomorrow," she said stiffly.

Teachers Hold
Dinner Meeting
On Wednesday evening, January 17, the teachers of the Greenville city schools held a dinner meeting in the high school cafeteria. The program consisting of a panel discussion on professional ethics and teacher growth was sponsored by the professional relations committee of the Classroom Teachers organization.
In introducing the speakers, Mrs.
Luther Herring, chairman of the committee, emphasized the fact that in a period of war and political strife the school remains one of the few stable parts of society. Now, when the schools are receiving criticism for the failure of many men to qualify for military service, and when many teachers are leaving the profession it is necessary that each teacher examine and evaluate her work and to rate herself as to her professional ideals and growth.
In the ensuing discussion it was pointed out that teachers like members of all other professions, should have a clearly defined code of ethics. Such a standard is a code of behavior toward oneself and society.
It encourages fair-minded, conscientious, unselfish service. The

Strength FOR THE DAY

By EARL L. DOUGLAS

PEOPLE ARE A WORTH-WHILE INVESTMENT

There is nothing so marvelous as to see some consecrated individual throwing his life into an enterprise for the betterment of humanity. Think of John Wesley's long career of usefulness which transformed the spiritual life of the British Isles; or of Florence Nightingale's work in the Crimea, or of Clara Barton's labors in founding the Red Cross.

Ponder for a moment the courage which led Father Damien to betake himself to a leper colony in the South Sea Islands, conscious of the fact that it meant certain death. Recently I was reading of a Y. W. C. A. worker in London who at the close of the first World War became interested in a convict. This man had had an excellent record as a soldier but after his release from prison was unable to find a job. Through this discouraged chap the worker came in contact with a number of men who had had prison records. She gathered them together in what she called "The League of the Straight Road," which set up as its ideal the attempt on the part of unfortunate men to meet life honestly and to get back to the normal way of things after their tragic experience. Each member was expected to secure another member and stand surety for him. It was said that of the men who entered the league, only one was again guilty of stealing.

A consecrated life and an understanding heart had done their bit. A woman had gambled on ignoble human decency and had won. All Rights Reserved—Bateson Newspaper Syndicate

AMERICA IN WARTIME

By JACK STINNETT

Washington — As the stream of war veterans returning to civilian life rises to higher water levels, the Veterans Administration is discovering problems "by the thousands."

Asked to set forth some of the more important ones, VA officials came forth with more "don'ts" than there are in a Mother's Day with a rambunctious youngster. Here are a few, and if you're not a discharged veteran, clip them and give them to one who is. Most of them are elementary but all are sound. Don't carry your original discharge around with you. It will get dog-eared, dirty, and possibly unreadable. You may lose it. In either case the dog tag involved may result in you being a man that you'll lose benefits you deserve, or even worse. Get a photostatic or certified copy of your dog tag. It's a bad idea to get several of them if you're inclined to be careless. Either of these will serve in most cases. Put the original and every other sound official service data you have in a safety deposit box or in a fire-proof safe at home. You'll have use for it the rest of your life.

Don't procrastinate in finding what benefits you are entitled to as a veteran. Many of these benefits eventually expire depending on how many months or years you have been out of service. Once the statute of limitations has run, you are simply out of luck. Establish your rights as a veteran as soon as possible and then keep informed on the status of all these rights in which you are interested.

Don't toss off your readjustment allowance as if it were vacation money. You can get it up to any time until two years after the war. Jobs are easy to get now. It may be good insurance against a period when they don't come so easily.

The same holds true for any war bonds you have purchased while in the service. Don't, if you have the least uncertainty about what you want to do in life, neglect the opportunities offered under the G. I. Bill of Rights for further education or vocational training. There's a statute of limitations on these opportunities and they shouldn't be passed over for a job that is temporarily remunerative but will not equip you to take advantages in the future. Don't surrender your national service life insurance for cash. Even if you are pinched and feel that money on the barrel-head is more important now, the time may come when you can never get that kind of insurance coverage again. For the same reason, don't let it lapse.

Don't fail to notify VA immediately of dependency or marital status. Under many of those changes, you may deserve more benefits than you are receiving. If you deserve less, failure to notify will simply expose you to double-trouble when you are found out.

Don't be in a big hurry to borrow money for a home, farm, business, or anything else under the G. I. Bill of Rights loan stipulations. Remember that this is a loan and has to be paid back. You may be throwing your dough into a well.

who are deferred in essential work and leave without board approval will be drafted. Selective Service says. And draft boards have been told to hunt for deferred farmers who are under 26 because the army wants young men. A new list of essential and critical activities has been prepared for draft boards so they can comb through their registrants and send into the army those who are least essential in essential or critical work.

The War Manpower Commission, to spread out the thinning manpower supply for jobs needing it most, has stopped employment setting on about 200 different areas. The WPB, which started a program called "spot authorization," has virtually put it back on the shelf. This plan would have permitted plants—which could show they had men and machines not needed in

The War Today ...

(Continued From Page One) deed desperate and are being forced to emulate the old Kaiser in the last war in shutting troops back and forth between two fronts.

The Red offensive continues to tear into the Germans with terrifying force and speed. There is no doubt that the Hitlerites are in retreat at most points along the great battlefield, and the big question is whether they can keep it a "retreat" and prevent it from degenerating into a rout. We shouldn't jump to conclusions on this point, for the Germans are past-masters in the art of retreating under pressure, but they are suffering terrific losses in both men and material.

The Russians are reported to have thrust across the Silesian border into Germany already. At the moment this is the most important phase of the Red offensive. Silesia not only is of vast military importance since it provides a gateway into the Reich, but in it is centered much of the Nazi industrial strength, especially the manufacturing of oil and gasoline. So keep an eye on Silesia.

American Forces ...

Manila, 70 road miles to the south. The Japanese already have captured an additional striking power Wednesday when Far East air force fighter planes began operating off the Lingayen airfield, which was captured within a half hour of the January 9 invasion. Associated Press Correspondent

Fred Hampson said several hundred fighters, including lightnings of the "dirty dozen" squadron which has been knocking down the enemy all the way from Guadalcanal, were poised on the new airbase only 350 miles south of Formosa. On the north end of the 50-mile beachhead the Sixth army was moving northward from Damortis toward Agoo and was pressing eastward toward Rosario against stiffer opposition along a mountain road leading to Baguio, summer capital of the Philippines.

Today the Americans were reported on the outskirts of Rosario, around which the Japanese have battled stubbornly and skillfully for four days. Seventh fleet guns bombarded Japanese positions and installations in the town. American planes raked Japanese communications, supply areas and airbases throughout Luzon, and night reconnaissance bombers returned to Formosa to bomb the Okayama airdrome and Tokyo seaplane base on the southwest coast.

Talisay airfield in the Visayan Islands took a 96-ton bombing as U. S. bombers raged through the central Philippines, Celebes, the Moluccas, Borneo, New Guinea, and the Bismarck archipelago hammering the airdromes, shipping and waterfront facilities.

Churchill ...

ed that Prime Minister Churchill had distorted the facts and had the worst record of intervention in other people's affairs of any statesman. In one of the most bitter attacks ever made on the Prime Minister in Commons, a speech which drew protests from Bevan declared that "there is no single politician more capable of distorting the facts than the Prime Minister." He accused secret commitments by Churchill were a factor in "the Greek tragedy."

Harris said that some communists may have "cashied in" on the ELAS, but he contended that up to the liberation of Greece the ELAS was "a popular movement drawn from all sections in Greece and all parties." Cries of dissent arose from the House when he asserted his "our prestige in the United States is lower than for many years past." He quickly explained he meant only "political prestige."

Leslie Hore-Belisha, Britain's war minister at the outbreak of the war, brought cheers when he declared that to take the stand that "our interest ceases the moment the Germans have been driven out of a country is to maintain that we have merely... a negative mission—the beating of an enemy—and anybody who has sufficient weapons can come along and rob the fruits of our victory."

Superforts ...

(Continued from page one) stallions in Tokyo. Omura and Nagaya already have forced the Japanese to move some plants underground and to chart further large scale removal. In this offensive to neutralize Nippon's air power at its source, General Hausell's 21st bomber command is aided by the 20th bomber command based in China and India and commanded by Major General Curtis E. Lemay. Today's raid lent emphasis to a warning directed to the Japanese people by the Formosa radio that "the Japanese empire is really facing a crisis." Earlier the Tokyo radio said "single enemy B-29s are persistently carrying out separate raids on Japan." The broadcast reported single B-29s over Tokyo and Korea as well as the Osaka-Kobe area.

Germans Open ...

(Continued from page one) three miles farther south. Near Recht, the First army was four miles from the road center. Patton's new assault had surrounded and won a third of Diskrich, 18 miles north of Luxembourg city. It also won the border villages of Rosport and Wassenbillig. German positions in Alsace were strengthened despite Seventh army counterattacks.

The weight of the enemy attack shifted abruptly from north of Haguenau to the Rhine bank corridor. Fighting at Hatten, shell-ton batteries in the Magnot line for 10 days, suddenly became static except for artillery fire. The Germans now are west of the Rhine along 82 of its curving 114 miles from Switzerland to the Alsatian-German frontier. And it is west of the Rhine where Gen. Eisenhower and Field Marshal von Rundstedt both have said the war might be decided. When they started their offensive New Year's day, the Germans held 55 miles.

Allied troops hold 24 miles of the Rhine west bank from north of Strasbourg to Gertsheln, 14 miles north, plus a mile at Strasbourg itself. They hold another eight miles from Switzerland to Kembs. Above Strasbourg, however, the Germans were able to link up their cross-Rhine bridgehead with the Karlsruhe corner northeast of Haguenau by capturing Dalhunden, Statmaten and Dengelshelm, the U. S. Seventh army announced. This provided the attacking foe with a narrow Rhine corridor along which he could shift and reinforce his divisions. It was a short setback for the Americans. Rundstedt was trying to catch his balance between Luxembourg and Holland, where American and British attacks ground up to two miles forward in snow.

Any of the thrusts by the three Allied armies in the north and center might burst at any moment into a full force onslaught, endangering Germany from the west as the Russians endangered her from the east.

Study Plan To ...

(Continued From Page One) nurses have graduated, while only 2,500 additional nurses have joined the army medical force. The Surgeon General said the army has 42,000 nurses now and "must have 60,000 to meet present needs. "If the 18,000 are to be obtained," he declared, "it seems clear that Selective Service legislation is required."

Kirk told the committee that army hospitals in the United States are understaffed because of the large number of nurses required overseas. He said more than 60 percent of all army nurses now are assigned abroad. "This country has an obligation," he concluded, "to care for its wounded men. There is hardly an American family that does not have a son or an immediate relative in the armed forces who may some day require medical and nursing care."

The nurse-draft bill was introduced by Committee Chairman May (D-Ky) after President Roosevelt asked for it in his message to Congress on January 6. It would require the registration of every registered nurse between the ages of 18 and 45 and permit their induction as privates under regulations prescribed by Selective Service officials. The President also asked for the work-or-be-drafted bill the committee has under consideration, and May said he hoped the committee would approve it by nightfall. However, committee differences thwarted May's hope for approval tonight and the bill was expected to be drafted by the committee members who predicted agreement would not be reached before next week.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Jan. 19—(AP)—The food war news again made for a bad stock market today and, while scattered specialties exhibited a certain amount of strength, leading rails and industrials dropped 1 to 2 or more points.
 There were subsequent comebacks but activity waned and losers were widespread near the close. Transfers were around 1,600,000 shares.

New Russian ...

of East Prussia, and captured the fortified town of Ragnit, five miles southeast of the city of Tilsit, a city of 70,000.

Eight other fortified towns were captured, including Kraupischken, 30 miles inside East Prussia, and 15 miles northeast of Insterburg in the center of the one-time Junkers kingdom.

Schlossberg, 13 miles inside East Prussia, and Lasdahn, 25 miles southeast of Tilsit also were seized, Stalin said.

Altogether 600 places were captured in the East Prussian advance, including a number around the headwaters of the Inster river.

The drive, now five days old, had set a pace of six miles a day.

The fall of Krakow collapsed the strongest German position in southern Poland and released large Soviet forces for a descent on German industry.

In a second order of the day, Stalin said the capture of Krakow, seized after a fierce street battle, had uncovered the defenses of the huge Polish coal fields of the Donbrowa region to the southwest.

In the new offensive the Fourth Ukrainian army led by Gen. Ivan Petrov, hero of Odessa and Sevastopol, captured Gorlice, 65 miles southeast of Krakow; Jaslo, 15 miles northeast of Gorlice and 400 other towns, Stalin said.

His order of the day indicated, however, that the Russians in this drive south of Tarnow and west of Sanok, had advanced much closer to Krakow by forcing both the Wisloka and Dunajec rivers, north-south tributaries of the Vistula. The Dunajec is about 35 miles east of Krakow.

Berlin said the "garrison of Budapest withdrew to the western bank of the Danube," a confirmation of Moscow announcements that the entire German force in Pest on the east bank had been disposed of.

The language of the Berlin communique indicated, however, that the entire Budapest position had been written off in the high command's books.

With the German communique speaking of the "onpushing Russians" in that sector, it was evident that German forces in Buda, on the west bank, were resigned to Soviet occupation of all quarters of the city shortly.

Moscow dispatches said the roll of prisoners rose from about 60,000 last night to 65,000 this morning in Budapest. Less than three per cent of Budapest was in German hands Jan. 16, by Moscow account.

Budapest would be the 17th European capital to be freed from German domination by the Allies.

Berlin admitted that several key towns shielding the German border had been evacuated and hinted that a general withdrawal inside the German border was underway.

A mighty frontal drive on Berlin is beginning to take shape, said Moscow dispatches. Lodz is 250 miles from the German capital.

The troops of Marshals Gregory Zhukov and Konstantin Rokossovsky in the center and north were overrunning the snow-covered countryside in a fashion hardly matched in this war, with Cossacks and Siberian horsemen spearheading the advance.

The Red Air Force, out in the strength of 30,000 sorties in the last 72 hours, was reported master of the skies and was sweeping German airdromes just inside the Reich's border with massed raids.

The German high command said a battle of the "greatest ferocity" was raging all along the Polish line from Krakow and Czestochowa to Lodz, Kutno and the Vistula.

Moscow dispatches confirmed German reports that Heinrich Himmler's home guards, the Volksturm, had been encountered on the frontiers of Silesia but so far Berlin was the only source of reports that Marshal Ivan Konev's First Ukrainian Army had actually stormed to the Reich's border at the southern end of the Polish front.

Says Teachers To Leave Profession

Greensboro, Jan. 19—(AP)—Mrs. Evelyn Jackson, president of the Greensboro Classroom Teachers Association, said today that more than 200 teachers in Guilford county may quit teaching if the legislature does not fix salary schedules recommended by the joint forces of education.

The teachers at a meeting here yesterday decided to withdraw immediately from the teaching profession if the scale fails to provide $125 for beginners and $200 a month for teachers with 10 years experience, as recommended by the joint forces, Mrs. Jackson said.

Servicemen Used To Fill Labor Gaps

Washington, Jan. 19—(AP)—A high government official said today that the Army and Navy have lent some 16,000 men capable of combat duty to fill labor gaps in critical war production.

These men, adding up to more than a full division of troops, went from uniforms to overalls to work on such items as tires, copper and foundry products.

The official, who could not be quoted by name, characterized the present production situation as akin to that in 1942 when the nation was straining at every seam to boost the flow of munitions to the war zone.

There is contention in Congress that the need for war workers can be met on a voluntary rather than compulsory basis.

But a resurvey of manpower requirements was reported to have prompted President Roosevelt to ask Legislators Wednesday to speed enactment of a pending bill to make deferred draft registrants from 18 to 45 subject to penalties if they refuse to accept essential jobs.

Roosevelt had said previously he didn't think the voluntary methods would work.

The Army and Navy have estimated that 600,000 additional men are needed for overseas duty by June 30, while 1,000,000 replacements are trained.

Censors Conditions At Norfolk Yard

Washington, Jan. 19—(AP)—Senator Ferguson (R-Mich.) said today he was shocked by evidence uncovered during an investigation of manpower conditions at the Norfolk (Va.) Navy Yard.

"I was shocked both by the situation we found there and by conditions which led to it," Ferguson told a reporter on his return from Norfolk, where the Mead Committee held hearings for the past two days on the manpower problem.

He declined to discuss the situation in detail, saying he planned to study the evidence at some length in the next few days and would speak on the matter before the Senate next week—probably on Monday.

Ferguson said he understood other members of the Mead Committee would also speak.

5. Remarked that he was still disturbed by the Italian economic situation but said there was no news on it.

The President told reporters, with a grin, that they all would try to interpret his observation that the first 12 years are the hardest and said they all would guess wrong.

Rugs came out of the White House today, and the President who has served longest tolled over what may be his-ry's shortest inaugural address. In an ungrammatical, abbreviated ceremony at noon tomorrow, President Roosevelt will take the oath of office for an epochal fourth time, then deliver the speech. He is aiming at 600 words.

Thus he may lower the record of the last wartime chief executive, Abraham Lincoln, whose second inaugural address approximated 600 words.

Hundreds of feet will be tramping White House corridors tomorrow. So hard-to-replace rugs were rolled up and put in temporary storage. Some 1,500 guests, the top strata of American officialdom plus diplomats and a handful of outsiders, are expected at a buffet luncheon following the inauguration ceremony on the south portico. Another 1,000 persons are scheduled to attend a reception and tea later in the afternoon.

For the ceremony itself, only 5,000 or 6,000 persons have invitations—because this is wartime. That compares with 25,000 to 30,000 in peaceful years. Most of those on the invitation list will have to stand out in the yard to see what's going on. No seats are being provided.

Just plain spectators will have to stretch their necks from behind an iron fence—at least 200 yards away.

Half a dozen Roosevelts of the latest generation already are on hand to see Grandpa inaugurated for a fourth term, but some of them are too young to remember much about it in later years. One of the President's four sons is expected to see the ceremonies. Marine Col. James Roosevelt is enroute from Burbank, Calif.

The boys may hear a broadcast of the ceremony, as will millions of other people around the world. Radio has arranged short wave descriptions in English, French, Portuguese and Spanish.

While this year's inauguration accentuated simplicity and economy, in contrast with the gala affairs of other less critical times, plans required a final checking yesterday by a committee which has been meeting regularly at the White House for weeks. It pronounced Washington and the White House ready.

It has allotted twenty minutes for the inaugural—twenty minutes of the time of a nation at war. Once the ceremony is over, the Chief Executive will have moved beyond the final barrier to another conference with Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin, a meeting on which a world at war pegs much of its hopes for eventual lasting peace.

PHANTOMS GO TO KINSTON

Will Play Double-Header There Tonight.

After shellacking Rocky Mount Wednesday night, Coach Snag Clark's Phantoms travel to Kinston tonight to take on the Red Devils in a doubleheader. The Phantom Junior Varsity plays the Kinston J. V. in the opener, while the Greene Varsity tangles with the Kinston big boys in the afterpiece. The Phantoms are fresh from a great victory that extended their string to three straight triumphs and they will do their best to keep the Devils from breaking it.

Besides the Greenville boys have a debt to pay to Kinston for the two defeats handed them on the gridiron in the past season and they will be out to pay this one as they did Wednesday night.

Little is known of the strength of Kinston this season, but the Phantoms defeated them pretty handily last season. However, this does not mean much since a team can change a great deal in one year, or even in one season.

The Phantom Junior Varsity is favored to win their game because last year the Junior High squad, which was composed of almost the same boys as make up this year's Junior Varsity, beat Kinston's second string varsity in a thriller, 21-19.

The starting line-up for the Phantom varsity will probably be Billy Harrington and Mac Batchelor at ends, Jimmy Futrell and J. T. Williams at forwards, and Joe Lupton at center.

For the J. V.'s it will most likely be Ed Williams and "Cotton" Jordan at forwards, Sherod White and Moulty Massey at guards, and Henry Turner at center.

TEACHER BILL IS INTRODUCED

Legislators Score Conditions State Hospitals.

Raleigh, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Bills to fix a minimum salary schedule for public school teachers and to create a General Statutes Commission which would advise and cooperate with the division of legislative drafting and codification of statutes were introduced today in the legislature.

The teacher bill would pay non-standard teachers a starting salary of $75 a month and holders of masters' certificates, with 11 years experience, a top of $200 a month.

Class "A" certificate holders would be paid $125 a month to start, and $175 if they have 11 years experience.

The range, therefore, is higher than the recommendation of the Advisory Budget Commission, which embodied the teacher salary schedule in the general appropriations bill for the first time in the state's history. The recommended top was $179 for "G-11" certificate holders, of those with masters' degrees who have 11 years experience.

Senator Matthews estimated the additional cost under the bill would be $2,200,000 a year. Rep. Moseley of Guilford introduced the bill creating the General Statutes Commission. The commission, to be composed of nine members with terms staggered from one to two years, also would advise and cooperate in preparation of statutory supplements, carry on a continuing study of preparation and publication of modern codes of law, and submit reports of its work to the governor.

President of the State Bar and Bar Association would appoint one member each, the law school deans of Wake Forest, Duke and North Carolina one each, the speaker and president of the senate one each and the governor two.

The commission would be appointed by May 31, 1945, with future vacancies filled by the governor. Members would be paid $10 per diem and traveling expenses. Formal reports also would be submitted to each legislative session.

Moseley set up nine bills pertaining to revision of the general statutes, one of them would direct the clerk of Superior Courts to submit the names of justices of the peace in their counties to the secretary of state by Feb. 1 each year. Speaker Richardson appointed Reps. Baroet of Chatham, Burgin of Henderson and Graham of Robeson to a special commission to investigate the feasibility of separating the Division of Game and Inland Fisheries from the Department of Conservation and Development.

President Ballentine yesterday appointed Senators Eagles of Wilson and Currie of Durham to that body, which will report its findings by February 1, if possible.

Rep. Percall of Nash sent up a bill to combine the offices of commissioner and general business manager of the Board of Correction and Training.

As the state's lawmaker neared the end of the third week of their session, a week in which the legislative front revolved largely about committee activities some half hundred legislators who visited the State Hospital at Raleigh yesterday returned a vivid impression of conditions found there.

One of the group visiting the institution for the mentally ill, Senator Hugh Mitchell of Iredell, pictured conditions there as "the most disgraceful thing I have ever seen."

He was not alone in his sentiments apparently, for other members of the joint committee on mental institutions, expressed themselves as equally surprised by the conditions they found there.

N. E. Edgerton, chairman of the State Hospital's Board of Control, told the visiting legislators that "what is reflected here is reflected in the other three state mental institutions," adding that the state ranks 45th in the nation in the care of its mental patients.

Members of the committee will ask the joint Appropriations Committee to make a trip through Dix Hill before the committee takes final action on recommendations of the Budget Committee.

The Advisory Budget Commission has recommended total appropriations of $7,102,168 for the four institutions—Dix Hill, Morganton, the Negro Hospital at Goldsboro and the Caswell Training School at Kinston—for the 1945-47 biennium, but has made no provision for permanent building improvements.

Lost Flier's Wife Leaves For Home

Mrs. Robin C. Pennington, whose husband, Lt. Pennington, was lost in the swamps of Craven county in December when he was forced to bail from a plane, left today for her former home in Townsend, Mont., to be at the bedside of her father who is critically ill. Mrs. Pennington has been residing at 1507 Chestnut street in this city.

Filing Period To End February 15

February 15, 1945 is the last date that farmers may file 1944 performance reports as a basis for receiving payments earned under the 1944 AAA program, according to a statement made here today by J. V. Taylor, chairman, Pitt County AAA Committee.

"The Pitt County AAA Committee is very anxious that every farmer in the county receive the payment that he has earned by participating in the 1944 program. Only 1352 of the 2781 eligible farmers in the county have filed performance reports and signed application forms," he stated.

J. V. Taylor pointed out that the Pitt County AAA office is open each week day from 8:30 o'clock a. m. to 5:30 o'clock p. m., and that every farmer who has not filed performance report and signed application form is urged to call at the county office and do so at the earliest possible date.

Daniels Present For Inauguration

Washington, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Josephus Daniels, in Washington for the inauguration (he has seen all Democratic presidents sworn in in the last 60 years and few Republicans), says "I'll be happy to see my old associate take the oath as he faces with courage the hardest task ever assumed by an American president."

The Raleigh, N. C. publisher was secretary of the navy during the first World War when President Roosevelt was assistant secretary and Mr. Roosevelt still addresses him as the chief.

Reminiscing about the traditional foul weather that marks inaugurations, Daniels predicted it would be "Roosevelt's luck to have good weather."

Remarking about affairs at home, he said the current proposal for a liquor referendum in North Carolina "will come to nothing." He told a reporter too many members of the legislature use the excuse that no referendum should be held while thousands of men are fighting overseas.

Butte, Mont., is built over one of the world's richest mineral deposits.

Cherry Point shortly after the accident and visited the wrecked plane.

Before leaving Greenville today Mrs. Pennington expressed deepest appreciation to the people of this city for their many kindnesses during her sorrowful days in which she has waited hopefully for some word that her husband was safe.

Lt. Pennington became separated from other planes during a routine flight from the Cherry Point Marine Base on December 19 and was believed to have been forced to bail out when his plane developed motor trouble. The plane was located deep in a swamp sometime after the accident but no trace of Lt. Pennington has yet been found.

Mrs. Pennington was called to
