Allied Armies Overrunning All Of Southern Germany

American Troops, Driving beyond Captured Munich, Push Toward North Entrance Of Brenner Pass; Others Drive Toward Berchtesgaden; French Take Friedrichshafen

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR Paris, May 1—(AP)—The Third Army crashed southward to within 50 miles of Berchtesgaden today as Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch sent his Seventh Army from captured Munich against Innsbruck and the Brenner Pass.

The Third Army entered Griesbach in its closest approach to Hitler's roost in the Alpine redoubt. The town near the Austrian border is 16 miles from Hitler's birthplace at Braunau and 47 from Salzburg, eastern rampart of the final Nazi hideaway.

Allied armies had overrun all Southern Germany except the southeast corner of Bavaria and now were sending their tanks and infantry into Austria and Czechoslovakia.

Far to the north American airborne troops and the British Second Army linked up beyond the Elbe in a solid bridgehead 20 miles wide and 12 miles deep which threatened imminently to cut off Schleswig-Holstein and Denmark. This could carve the northern redoubt in two.

In the center the corridor between Germans in the South and North was widened steadily by additional contacts between the Russians and American armies.

Seventh Army infantry crossed the Austrian frontier and captured Schramitz, ten miles from Innsbruck and 15 from the Brenner Pass.

No sooner had the Third Army cleared Munich than the Germans began shelling the city.

The Seventh Army's advance on the French coast, and its chief of staff, Col. Koenig. Yesterday, it seized two field marshals. The French took two more generals in an advance in the Alpine redoubt east of the cleared shores of Lake Constance to Lindenberg and Oberstaufen.

Far back from the main front, French commandos made a new landing behind enemy lines on the Ile Dolorin, near the mouth of the Gironde. The French also attacked the 19,000 German troops holed up in the Atlantic submarine base of La Rochelle.

The 44th Division of the Seventh Army captured Ehrwald, 15 miles southeast of Fussen. The 12th Armored Division moved down both sides of Lake Kochel, to the town of Kochel. The Fourth Division reached Baierbrunn, five miles southwest.

Report Shakeup In Jap Naval Command

San Francisco, May 1—(AP)—Tokyo radio today reported a drastic shakeup in Japan's naval command with Admiral Toyoda, commander-in-chief of the Japanese combined fleet, heading a new overall naval command.

New commanders were named for the two main naval stations at Yokosuka and Kure on Honshu, principal Japanese home island, and eight other key administrative posts were involved in the reshuffle, the Domei news agency said in the broadcast heard by the FCC.

Toyoda also to be commander-in-chief of the naval escort command, relieving Adm. Naokuni Nomura, elevated to the supreme war council.

The WAR TODAY AN ANALYSIS OF THE NEWS

By DEWITT MACKENZIE Associated Press War Analyst German atrocities — and more German atrocities

Every hour adds to the record of Nazi infamy as that unbooby inn sinks in defeat. Small wonder then that much of my reader mail has to do with Hitlerite savagery, which has sent Allied tempers over the boiling point, and among the letters is one from an editor on a southern newspaper, who writes:

"During my long service I have never read of anything to compare with the inhuman things being done to the poor victims that have fallen into these bastards' hands. It might be an unchristian way to look at it, but I believe one of the most just punishments for the German race would be to sterilize every male and female left so there would be no more Germans to rise up in 25 or 30 years to start another world war."

Another editor proposes that a large number of substantial citizens of Germany, with their families, be uprooted and be distributed around the world in countries needing immigrants. He would substitute for

Americans Drive On Capital Of Okinawa

Guam, May 1—(AP)—Tanks of the 96th infantry division today were within 800 yards of Shuri, Okinawa's former capital and second largest city.

They dropped 75 to 80 rounds into buildings on the outskirts, the first direct fire on Shuri, said Associated Press Correspondent Vern Haugland. Lt. Robert B. Lyons, Orday, Colo., commands the tank platoon.

Headquarters of Maj. Gen. James L. Bradley's 96th division reported 1,500 Japanese killed in the past 72 hours.

Doughboys of Maj. Gen. George D. Griner's 27th infantry division captured Machinato airfield on the west coast, but were forced to call upon medium tanks to wipe out heavy Japanese opposition from cave positions on their left (east) flank.

Capture of Machinato—less than two miles north of the capital city, Naha, and Naha's big airfield—gave Lt. Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner's 10th army its fourth airfield of the Okinawa campaign.

Katena and Yontan, a few miles north, were captured on invasion day, April 1, and the island's four-runway drome was seized April 16 by elements of Maj. Gen. Andrew Bruce's 77th infantry division.

Katena, Yontan and Ie fields all are in use.

Capture of a fifth airfield, Yonabaru, on the east coast, seemed imminent, Maj. Gen. Archibald V. Arnold's 7th infantry division reached the northern edge of that field and heights overlooking it—but still faced the problem of sieging other hills from which Japanese could pour gunfire onto the runways.

The enemy counterattacked at several points yesterday, but without success. American advances averaged 500 yards. The 96th division killed 280 Japanese in one infiltration, 200 in another.

Associated Press Correspondent James Lindsey said four American tanks landed ahead of the Seventh division line. They were fired and destroyed in the night by Japanese soldiers.

Carrier planes and ships' guns destroyed 25 Japanese aircraft in a Sunday attack on American forces off Okinawa. Carrier air patrols shot down 25 more before they could reach the naval units on Sunday and Monday. A carrier attack on northern Ryukyus islands added five.

Borneo Invaded

San Francisco May 1—(AP)—Tokyo radio today reported Allied assault forces have landed on Borneo.

The broadcast recorded by the Federal Communications Commission said troops hit the east coast in the Tarakan area last night and were engaged by defending garrisons in "fierce combat."

An usual in reporting such landings the Japanese broadcaster claimed that the assaults were repulsed.

American troops reconquering the Philippines have been steadily closing in on Borneo and bombed the oil rich island every day of April.

Tarakan is a small island off the northwest coast of Borneo and an easy jump from American-held Tawitawi in the Sulu Archipelago.

The report was entirely without American confirmation, but all recent invasions of Pacific islands have been first announced by Tokyo radio.

DRIVE TOWARD BRENNER PASS

New Allied Advances In Northern Italy

Rome, May 1—(AP)—Unconditional surrender of the Fascist Ligurian army in Italy was ordered Sunday by Marshal Rodolfo Graziani after his capture by the Allies, headquarters announced tonight.

He ordered troops of this Italian army holding the Ligurian coast in northwest Italy to lay down their arms.

The Italian Fascist army has been holding the Ligurian coast in northwestern Italy.

In northeastern Italy, the British Sixth Army's division entered Udine, 60 miles northeast of Venice, and 29 and 33 miles from the Yugoslav and Austrian borders. Udine is 42 miles northwest of Trieste, which the Yugoslavs declared they had entered.

New Zealand troops striking through northeast Italy joined today with Yugoslav partisans at the head of the Adriatic sea.

American advance along the Gulf of Genoa meanwhile occupied Savona, Spigno and Novi.

The only fighting reported officially in the north of Lake Garda, where the Nazis were attempting to hold back an American drive toward the Brenner Pass, gateway to Austria.

A headquarters spokesman said the enemy apparently was attempting to "reassemble his disjointed force at a point on this route in order to attempt the long and tortuous march up into the Alps."

These reports underscored last night's statement by Gen. Mark W. Clark, commander of the 15th Army group, that the German armies in Italy have been "virtually eliminated." (Continued on page four)

Hundred American Pilots Liberated

Near Pegu, Southern Burma, April 30—(Delayed)—(AP)—Approximately 100 American pilots were liberated today by British 14th Army troops attacking Pegu. They were flown immediately to hospitals in India.

The Americans had been taken prisoner by Japanese when they were shot down over Burma.

Further Civilian Belt Tightening Is Forecast

Washington, May 1—(AP)—Americans were told today a "decent diet" will be maintained despite a 25 per cent slash in sugar rations and the prospect of higher point values for other foodstuffs.

Further civilian belt tightening was forecast when: 1. Samuel I. Rosenman, presidential food scout, recommended that the United States should supply a "substantial share" of civilian needs in northwest Europe. He acknowledged this probably would cut into homefront food supplies.

2. The inter-agency committee on foreign shipments said "we shall have to make some adjustments in particular foods" and hinted at higher ration points for fats and oils.

At the same time mounting sentiment was evidenced in congress for one-man control of all food matters, now divided among the OPA, the War Food Administration and other agencies.

Predicting a five to 10 per cent slump this year in the nation's food production, the inter-agency committee headed by Foreign Economic Administrator Leo T. Crowley termed the cut in sugar rations "a real sacrifice" but said:

"The sacrifice will be small in comparison with the contribution it will make to the undernourished, if not actually starving, peoples of the liberated countries."

Of the American outlook, this committee, which allocates food and

Russians Raise Red Flag Of Victory Over Berlin

London, May 1—(AP)—Victory-flushed Soviet troops made a supreme bid to deal the death blow to flaming Berlin on this May Day. In the words of Marshal Stalin it was the "final assault."

A Red victory banner hoisted over the smoking ruins of the Reichstag, where Hitler rose to power from the ashes of the Reichstag fire of 1933. Heinrich Himmler's Ministry of the Interior was in Russian hands. Red Army troops laid siege to the fuhrer's underground fortress in the Tiergarten. The Russians were at the Brandenburg Gate, Berlin's triumphal arch, and across the Spree River from Berlin's cathedral.

Die-hard German remnants were compressed in the center of the blazing inferno that is Berlin, stubbornly keeping street crossings under a murderous cross fire and "killing in the process the civilian population of the city," a supplementary Moscow communique declared.

As a German broadcast conceded that the 11-day battle for the gutted capital was as good as lost, Marshal Stalin in a special order of the day said the Russian people were celebrating May Day "under conditions of the victorious termination of the great patriotic war."

His triumphant announcement, declaring that Soviet troops had "hoisted the banner of victory over Berlin," said the Germans had lost 1,000,000 men killed and 800,000 captured on the Eastern Front in the last three or four months. He said the Nazis also lost 6,000 planes, 12,000 tanks and 23,000 cannons.

"The last assault is on," the Russian leader said, as Soviet troops (Continued on page four)

Other supplies for overseas needs said: "A decent American diet will be maintained. Our food supply is adequate to keep America healthy and vigorous even though we shall have to make some adjustments in particular foods."

As the sharp slash in sugar rations went into effect today, the government said no increase in the total supply can be expected for more than a year.

As a result, the average American who last year consumed 89 pounds of sugar, will receive only 72.1 pounds this year. Sugar stamps 36 which became valid today for five pounds, must last until September 1.

The OPA also directed local boards to issue only up to 70 per cent as much sugar for home canning as they did last year and reduced the maximum per person to 15 pounds instead of 20. The limit to any family for home canning was pared from 180 to 120 pounds.

The Office of War Information said the reductions were necessary because of a decline in world sugar production and in an increase in military and export demands as a result of Europe's liberation and intensification of the Pacific war.

Crowley said the amount of sugar going to liberated areas would be "very modest."

Rosenman, in a report to President Truman, said the immediate and long-range economic situations of northwest Europe's liberated countries are "extremely serious."

Despite the lessening of Army needs for planes, Navy requirements are expected to continue at present or even higher levels.

Will Produce Fewer Planes

By KARL R. BAUMAN Washington, May 1—(AP)—A "one-front" airplane production schedule which may cut monthly output by as many as 2,000 planes by the end of this year has been drafted by the Army air forces. About 7,000 craft now are being turned out each month.

Tells Commons He May Have Important Announcement Within Next Few Days; Says Proclamation May Not Await Surrender Of All Minor Pockets Of Nazi Forces

By LEWIS HAWKINS London, May 1—(AP)—Prime Minister Churchill hinted today that announcement of peace in Europe might come before Saturday, but told a packed House of Commons that he had no statement at this time.

He answered questions in the House as Swedish Count Folke Bernadotte conferred in Stockholm with Erik Boheman, Undersecretary of State in the Swedish foreign office, after a quick flight from Copenhagen.

(The Swedish Foreign Office said in a statement tonight that Count Folke Bernadotte "did not bring with him any new message to be handed over through the foreign office to the Allies.")

Replying to a member's question, Churchill declared "I have no special statement to make on the war position in Europe except that it is definitely more satisfactory than it was at this time five years ago."

Then he added he might make a brief announcement later this week, but "only if information of exceptional importance reaches us."

"Should information of importance reach His Majesty's government during the four days of our sittings this week—as it might do—I will ask Mr. Speaker's permission to ask the indulgence of the House to interrupt business and make a brief announcement."

"The implication that peace might be declared in the near future for the week on Friday evening was the nearest to a prediction that Churchill ever permitted himself."

"Of course," he said, "I shall make no statement here that is not in accord with the statement which will be made by our Allies," explaining such announcements would be made only after consulting military commanders in different theaters.

The Prime Minister said he did not consider that the information in "a major message" reaching the government should be withheld "until the exact occupation of all the particular zones was achieved, the movement of troops and the surrender of enemy troops may both take an appreciable period of time."

"Good news will not be delayed," he said in answer to Lady Astor's question whether, if peace news came while the House was adjourned, he would hold it until Commons sat, or would release it through the BBC.

Churchill said frankly that he expected two-day celebrations to begin immediately that a "Cease Fire" order is given, and that the reason instructions were being issued tonight was to insure that sufficient preparations were made for "minimum staffs" in every department, including stores and government (Continued on Page Six)

AGREEMENT ON NEW CONTRACT

Soft Coal Wage Dispute Finally Is Settled

Washington, May 1—(AP)—John L. Lewis cleared the last government hurdle confronting his new soft coal contract today, but negotiations for an anthracite agreement skidded into the War Labor Board as a dispute.

Economic Stabilizer William H. Davis stamped a final okay on the bituminous wage agreement and in addition authorized an average 16-cent-a-ton price increase to offset its costs to the operators.

The hard coal contract expired last midnight, and work stoppages in the anthracite pits were prepared for despite a W.L.B. order to continue production under terms of the expired agreement. The board promised any wage agreements would be made retroactive to today.

An 11th hour effort by Labor Secretary Perkins to persuade the miners and anthracite operators, meeting in New York, to agree to a contract she proposed failed.

Lewis later said his scale committee had voted unanimously to "advise anthracite workers to resume work when the anthracite operators accept Secretary of Labor Perkins' recommendation for a new contract."

He declined further comment after Miss Perkins hurried back to Washington and certified the case (Continued on page four)

British Planes To Serve In Pacific

Axis Holdings At The Peak Of Their Conquest

Chapter 11

Christopher saw the president of the store early the next morning. He talked to members of the board of directors, each insisting on his own panegyric of his father and grandfather—each adding his personal conviction that Christopher's success in the store was already assured.

"I'm sorry you start with this bad situation in furs," the president had said as he was leaving his office. "Dan's suicide is a shock to all of us. I guess you know how much your father thought of him."

"I certainly do," Christopher replied in a low voice. "The robbery in that department and Dan's death will stand a very thorough investigation."

Sudden interest flickered in the older man's eyes. "I'm glad to see you appreciate the seriousness of the situation. Keep me informed, Christopher."

"Yes, sir, I will."

Then Christopher had gone back to his office and asked his new secretary to get the floor manager of the fifth floor up to see him as quickly as possible.

Christopher had seen a good deal of Bill Hanson the short time he had been stationed in furs. Bill was the floor manager of furs and yard goods. He was always popping up in unexpected places on the floor, picking up bits of gossip and scraps of back-of-the-counter politics. His bright, small eyes, close set under an entirely bald head, never missed a thing that went on in the sections. He covered the entire floor like a tent. Nothing ever slipped by Bill.

Christopher looked up from a letter he was reading to see the floor manager inside the door of his office. Bill was like that. He always seemed to materialize out of nowhere. It was his one distinguishing characteristic. Otherwise, Bill Hanson was a man without a single line of individual character in his face. He was bald and he was fat and he looked like every other bald fat man anywhere in the world. He was smiling as he came over to Christopher's desk.

"Congratulations, Mr. Humbert. I see they caught up with the good old family tradition at last—and this time it makes sense."

"Thanks, Bill," Christopher said briefly as he shook his hand, and then stepped toward a chair in front of his desk. "No one is more surprised than I am over sitting at this desk this morning. But now that I am here, I'd like to have you bring me up to date on a few things in the fur department."

"Meaning?"

"Miss Young, principally. She let it be understood very unexpectedly."

"Nothing trivial, I hope," Bill was still smiling but Christopher was aware that his small bright eyes were closely watching him.

"Marriage—you can figure that anyway you like. But did Miss Young tell you or anyone in the department that she was going away?"

"She did not," Bill's voice was emphatic. "No one had the foggiest idea she was going to New York. And that goes for her new assistant, Mrs. Blair. For my money, that wasn't poker—get an assistant—and then walk out on her just before the big annual sale."

Christopher nodded. "I've been thinking the same thing. Why do you suppose she did it? Has she ever done a thing like this before?"

"No, she hasn't as far as I can find out," Bill stopped for a moment, then went on more slowly. "You see, Mr. Humbert, I think there's something funny going on in furs, and I think it ties right in with Dan's death."

"Dan!" He exclaimed sharply. He looked at Bill thoughtfully for a moment and then said in a low voice, "Give, Bill. What's on your mind?"

"Pretty. But this is strictly off the record. Just before she left her room Monday evening, I heard Miss Young giving Dan instructions about that milk shipment. She asked him to go down to the receiving platform when the furs were unloaded. And that isn't all."

Bill paused long enough to light a cigarette, and then said deliberately, "I believe Miss Young had something on her mind that Dan knew about because I heard her tell him that she wanted the furs sent to the fifth floor instead of the fourteenth. She said something about her office checking them before they were sent up to the workroom on the 14th floor."

"Did Mrs. Blair know the furs were coming to the fifth floor first?"

"I don't know. But Dan never handled freight. He was a night watchman. That was out of his line."

"I'll say it was," Christopher's voice was worried. "Did Dan say he would do what Miss Young asked him to?"

"Yes. And he did. He was the one who telephoned Mrs. Blair that the furs had arrived. She notified the 14th floor they were coming and filled the bill of lading. It wasn't until the workroom upstairs telephoned her an hour later that the furs had not been delivered that things began to happen." "Did you see Dan last night before you left the store?" Christopher thought Bill hesitated over the question for a fraction of a second, but he answered readily enough. "Yes. I saw him walking through the section as I started for home and he seemed to be headed for Mrs. Blair's office."

Chapter 12

"And Dan never got there," Christopher reflected. "Mrs. Blair never saw him. I walked for him in her office until nearly ten o'clock." He stood up abruptly, pushing back his desk chair impatiently.

"How do you figure this, Bill?" he asked as he walked slowly around the end of his desk.

"Just the way you do, Mr. Humbert," Bill answered promptly. "Dan was involved with someone who had promised him a good slice of jack if he would help them get that shipment of milk out of the store. Best time in the world to try a thing like that—when the buyer was away—anyhow, I guess Dan just went sort of nuts—all of a sudden."

"His wife is sick and needs an operation. The poor old fellow had to have money. You can see it was partly an inside job. That was the only possible way anyone on the outside would know when that extensive shipment was coming in. Miss Young's hotfoot is to New York—why it's a natural—"

Christopher started to say something. Then stopped suddenly, changing his mind. He walked to the door of the office with Bill.

"Thanks for coming in to see me, Bill," Christopher hesitated in the doorway as the floor manager turned to leave. "You must keep me posted."

"I'll be glad to, Mr. Humbert." The round fat face suddenly clouded with a look of concern. "Rotten shame, old Dan killed himself. He probably slipped into this thing before he realized what he was up against. Then the poor devil couldn't see it through. Fifty years is a long time to work for one company. He must have felt like a dog—turning on the store—this way."

"Looks bad," Christopher's voice was non-committal. "I'll be down on your floor this afternoon, but in the meantime, Bill, don't discuss this with anyone until Donohue gets here. He's in charge of the case."

"Okay by me," Bill acquiesced as Christopher turned back to his office, far from satisfied with the way events were developing that morning. Everyone, from the President of the store down to the office boy, spoke of Dan as a suicide, "because of his remorse over the robbery."

"I never knew it to fall," he thought grimly, as he rang for his secretary. "It's always so easy to blame the wreck on the dead engine—only in this case it won't do. Dan didn't kill himself nor did he have a hand in the robbery."

Christopher told the secretary he would be out of his office for an hour and then left at once for the fifth floor. He went directly to the yard-goods section where he borrowed a tape measure. A few minutes later he was out by the freight elevators watching the porters bringing in cases of merchandise and carting out empty crates and boxes. From where he stood he could see the heavy beam where they had found Dan the night before. He measured with his eye the distance from this beam to the place where he and Donohue had found the empty crate. Donohue said Dan had used when he hung himself. The night before Christopher had marked the spot where the box stood with the dab of black paint used to label incoming freight.

Now he carefully measured the distance from the beam to this blotch of paint he had put on the cement floor while Donohue was giving his report to the coroner's office. The box with the rope in it, he knew was now in the hands of the experts of the Crime Detection Laboratory.

"Nine and a half feet Dan couldn't kick a box that far with a rope around his neck," Christopher muttered to himself, as he slowly wound the tape measure back on the little metal spool.

"The rope will tell the real story and that crate will prove it."

Slipping the tape measure into his pocket, he walked quickly through the fur section to the office of the new assistant buyer.

Visits the Marine Air Base Tuesday afternoon the sixth and seventh grades of Third St. School went to the Greenville Marine Air Base. At the officers' of the Day Building, they were met by Major Ullman, commanding officer of Squadron 25. He took them first to the main field where they saw a few planes take off and where some Hellcats were being fixed. These planes were very interesting and were thrilling to see. The class then went to the Intelligence Department where Captain Frost told them different things about the maps of Okinawa in the Rhykyu chain and the Pacific theater of war. There was also a discussion of the European warfare. Hanging from the ceiling in this room were tiny models of almost every plane in the world. On one side was a yellow life-raft with hand paddles and a poncho. There were also medicines, dyes and other useful articles which any airman on being shot down over the ocean could use.

The classes were then directed to the Recognition Building where they were shown a war newspaper. From there they went to the Photography Department where there were two film machines. There a Marine showed them how to piece pictures together and get a whole picture after a mission is completed. On leaving this building a Marine took pictures of the children, teachers and grade mothers.

Last but not least the children went to the mess hall where they were given a delicious doughnut. This ended a very happy and interesting afternoon.

KIWANIS CLUB ACTIVE GROUP

Farmville Now Has 45 Members; Ed Rawl Speaker

By CHESTER WALSH

"Nothing exists in this world that does not have to be sold—religion, good health; yourself, to your wife or employer or business associate, and so on," said Greenville Vice-President Ed Rawl in an unusually practical and entertaining talk on "Salesmanship" at the Farmville Kiwanis Club's supper meeting in Farmville last night.

No sale of importance is made without confidence and a thorough knowledge of what you sell, whether it is religion, foodstuff or furniture," he said. The speaker used a blackboard and a claw hammer to illustrate his unique after-dinner speech, which was brimful of common-sense suggestions for getting the best out of life in all of its walks. "All you get out of life is what you put into it," Rawl said in conclusion. At the conclusion of his speech President "Rod" Williams called Rawl to the presiding officer's place where Vice President Charley Hotchkiss, describing the prominent Greenville businessman and civic leader as the "granddaddy" of the Farmville Club, presented him with a handsome Kiwanis emblem ring as a token of appreciation for his services in helping to organize the club in Farmville. The members gave him a rising vote of thanks. The club was organized last January with 35 charter members. It now has 45, is growing and cooperating with other local agencies for the advancement of the community. The officers gave publicity much of the credit for the club's success.

Guests present were George and "Cutter" Allen of Farmville, and Marshall Clark, Glasgow Smith, V. A. Merritt, Bill Aycock and Chester Walsh of Greenville. Elbert Holmes led the singing of Kiwanis songs with Mrs. Elspeth Joyner accompanying at the piano. Announcement was made that the recent United National Clothing collection in Farmville was a success. The program for the next meeting will be an "open forum" on Kiwanis affairs.

Here's how the Farmville club happened to be organized: Charley Hotchkiss and several other men from Farmville were guests at a meeting of the Greenville club. After President J. M. Barrett had announced plans for organizing at least one new club while Sam O. Bundy of Williamston is district governor, he asked the guests to stand and be recognized. Hotchkiss, when called on to stand up, did more than that. He made an eloquent after-dinner speech that appealed to Ed Rawl and Arthur Tripp. All Hotchkiss said was, "If you folks are going to organize new clubs, come over to Farmville and we'll organize a club as good as you have in Greenville."

Rawl and Tripp went to Farmville. After a week of hobnobbing in a friendly way they had a Kiwanis International field representative down here, and in no time Farmville had a Kiwanis club.

Since then Ed Rawl has piloted the new club on its course, and last night's program was the 13th the Greenville Kiwanians had provided.

Mrs. J. R. Turnage Died This Morning

Ayden, May 1—Mrs. J. R. Turnage died at her home here at nine o'clock this morning following an illness of five weeks. Death was the result of heart trouble.

Funeral services will be conducted at the home at four o'clock Thursday afternoon followed by interment in Ayden cemetery. Services will be in charge of Rev. W. H. Brunson, pastor of the Christian church of which Mrs. Turnage was a member assisted by Rev. A. L. Chaplin, pastor of the Methodist church.

Mrs. Turnage was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Moseley of Kinston. She was a faithful and loving wife, a beautiful and devoted mother; sincerity in living was her strength, patience her chief virtue; simplicity was her nobility, and her deep religious faith the guide of her life.

Survivors include her husband, J. R. Turnage; two daughters, Mrs. Hal W. Stafford, Greensboro, and Miss Frances Turnage, of Ayden and Williamston; two grandchildren, Mary Hale Stafford and Frances Moseley Stafford, Greensboro; one sister, Mrs. H. F. Laws, Kinston, and a brother, Laurie Moseley, St. Petersburg, Fla.

President Enjoyed Eastertide Sermon

The Presbyterian Journal, March issue, carried the text of the last sermon President Roosevelt heard before he died. It was "God Incarnate for Suffering Men," by Dr. William Childs Robinson of Decatur, Ga., Columbia Theological Seminary professor, who preached the Easter sermon at Warm Springs Chapel—probably the last church service attended by the chief executive, who wrote the minister a letter (dated the day of his death), thanking him for the sermon, especially that part embodying the following poem:

"God has given me a guiding light, A star called Faith, That substance of things hoped for, That evidence of things unseen. And now within me peace and joy are born, For some day there shall come a resurrection morn! And I shall see again and know my son."

Rev. Hayes Clark, pastor of Hollywood Presbyterian Church, called the editor's attention to the above

Army Officers Say Guard Fine Outfit

Greenville Company 4, N. C. State Guard, is one of the best equipped and drilled in the State, an inspection by Army and State Guard officers last night revealed. Lt. Col. W. C. Frances and Lt. Charles E. Bailey of the Fourth Service Command, Fort Bragg, and Maj. Scott Berkeley of Goldsboro, State Guard battalion commander, made the inspection.

The Greenville company, under command of Capt. Jasper L. Jones, made a creditable showing. The visiting officers were frank in their praise of the soldiers and said the company is a credit to Greenville and the State and country. Other officers are Lieuts. W. H. Woolard, Jr. and Burt Greene and Top. Sgt. Godfrey P. Oakley.

Incidentally, Burt Greene, who worked his way up from a buck private in the company to second lieutenant, was last night promoted to first lieutenant and made battalion adjutant. Top Sgt. Godfrey P. Oakley was recommended for promotion to second lieutenant.

John Proctor New Rotary President

John Proctor was elected president of the Greenville Rotary Club last night. Roy Martin was elected vice president and Johnny Overton, secretary and treasurer.

The new board of directors is composed of the following: Ollie Van Nortwick, Jr., Roy Martin, John Proctor, J. Knot Proctor, Charley White, E. L. Willard and Joe Moye—the last name by virtue of being retiring president.

The Rotarians voted last night to engage in improvements to their kitchen facilities to afford the most modern arrangements. Lloyd Turnage of Ayden was a visiting Rotarian last night. J. B. Kittrell appealed for help from the Rotarians in connection with the canning sugar rationing and secured the desired number of volunteers. Joe Moye, club president, presided.

The fact that he made no mention of Himmler's first surrender offer to the United States and Britain, or of a second one which the Gestapo chief is widely believed to have submitted, suggested the government is planning now only to advise the House on the outcome of negotiations, and not upon the course of negotiations.

The House was jammed with one of the largest attendances of the war, in hopes Churchill might clarify many rumors concerning German peace bids.

Outside on the streets were newspapers with big banner lines. The Evening News declared "Himmler Decides—Surrender Papers Are All Ready for Signing."

A highly responsible source in London said no word had been received of the result of the Swedish Red Cross representative's reported second conversations with Himmler or his representatives.

British authorities, far less optimistic than the London press over the possibility that peace can come through negotiations rather than a piecemeal breakup of Germany, guardedly considered the negotiations in the light of this single question:

"What has Himmler to gain?" Unofficial British reports have served a useful purpose in demoralizing Germany's resistance and hastening her downfall, even if they produce no concrete results.

In authoritative circles in London it was regarded as only a 50-50 possibility that Himmler could deliver on a promise that pockets of resistance would surrender at his orders or that he was sincere in his surrender offer and not merely resorting to desperate last ditch tactics to aid the flight of influential Nazi leaders.

Bernadotte refused to say in Stockholm whether he had any answer from Himmler to the Allied ultimatum that Germany must surrender unconditionally to all three major Allied powers. The Stockholm newspaper Dagens Nyheter said the count had already forwarded Himmler's answer to an Allied legation in Stockholm.

The Tokyo radio said an important announcement could be expected within a few days in connection with the negotiations between Himmler and Count Bernadotte.

From free Danish underground sources in Malmoe on the southern coast of Sweden, meanwhile, came a report that German forces already had begun moving out of Copenhagen with the apparent intention of abandoning Denmark.

These same sources said a conference between Swedes, Danes and Germans was held all through last night at King Christian's Amalienborg castle in Copenhagen, pointing toward a possible German surrender of Denmark. They believed an official announcement from the king might be forthcoming soon.

The Stockholm Tidningen had reported previously a German plan to evacuate Denmark today, permitting King Christian to resume power. The Dagens-Nyheter, in its story reporting Bernadotte's plans, had commented that the situation in Denmark is "very favorable for peaceful liquidation" of German occupation troops.

Bernadotte was reported to have met Himmler yesterday near the Danish-German border with a British-American reply to Himmler's offer to surrender only to the western powers.

Dagens-Nyheter said that Himmler's reply had been relayed through the Swedish foreign office, but that a few days lapse might be expected before "a definite decision" is reached.
