Nazi Holdouts Flying Toward American Lines

Fanatics Who Continued Fight In Czechoslovakia In Defiance Of Surrender Order Are Striving To Keep From Falling Into Hands Of The Russians

By The Associated Press London, May 11—(AP)—Die-hard Nazi fanatics who fought on in Czechoslovakia in defiance of German unconditional surrender were reported in headlong flight toward American lines today as a vast platoon of three Soviet armies threatened momentarily to envelope them.

The First, Second and Fourth Ukrainian armies opened the assault on broad fronts from the northwest, east and southeast when forces under Field Marshal Ferdinand Schoerner, himself wanted as a war criminal, and Col. Gen. Woehler, ignored the surrender.

It was the only reported fighting by German troops in all Europe. Elsewhere the Germans were giving up docilely. The Soviet high command announced capture of 209,000 German officers and men in preliminary checks along the front. There were 26 Nazi generals in the lot.

Remnants of the beaten German surface and underwater fleet were in Allied hands, including the cruisers Prinz Eugen and Nuernberg, which had shelled Copenhagen over the weekend. These were under the sentinel guns of the Royal Navy in Copenhagen Harbor, along with three destroyers, two torpedo boats, ten minesweepers, 13 flag ships, 19 armed trawlers and two armed merchantmen.

A report for the French press agency said French sailors in La Rochelle, Atlantic port which surrendered Wednesday, officially had taken over the German Atlantic fleet units anchored there. The number of vessels was not announced.

Grand Admiral Karl Doenitz' submarine fleet—the wolf packs which for so long had preyed on Allied shipping—was surrendering and putting in to British ports.

Dunkirk, scene of the British defeat in 1940, had surrendered. The channel islands of Sark, Jersey and Guernsey, which had been taken by the Nazis shortly after the fall of France, capitulated to a British task force. They were the only part of the United Kingdom to have been occupied by the Germans.

The disarming of some 120,000 Germans in Holland was under way. Premier Marshal Stalin, in messages to President Truman and Prime Minister Churchill, congratulated them on the unconditional surrender of Nazi Germany, declaring that "The joint struggle of Soviet, American and British armies against the German invader x x x will go down in history as an example of fighting collaboration of our peoples."

The Germans in Czechoslovakia still fighting milled about in a great 4,000-square mile pocket. One German group, threatened with encirclement by Marshal Ivan S. Konev's First Ukrainian Army, already had begun to surrender. Some 75,000 were taken Wednesday and Thursday.

The WAR TODAY AN ANALYSIS OF THE NEWS

By DEWITT MACKENZIE Associated Press War Analyst The Allies have had a great stroke of luck in getting their hands on Reichsmarshal Herman Goering, because the fat and outwardly amiable ex-deputy fuhrer is one of the most dangerous Nazis left alive—and it's good to hear from responsible sources in London that he soon will be tried as a war criminal. We safely can award the gorgeously uniformed and bemuddled Goering second place on the list of men to be feared. He is outranked only by Franz Von Papen, the unmatched Prussian plotter of two world conflicts, whom the Allies also have in custody along with a large and growing log of Axis warmongers.

There's a third Hitlerite whom the world wants even more than Goering and Von Papen—not because of his power as a leader but because of his barbarities. That is Himmler the hangman who, as head of the terrible Gestapo, has carried out massacres and tortures which have few parallels in history. Himmler is in hiding, but the globe isn't big enough to conceal

Announce Plans To Eliminate Nazism

War Criminals

London, May 11—(AP)—Rudolf Hess, Heinrich Himmler and Hermann Goering all have been listed by the United Nations as war criminals and there is strong possibility that Grand Adm. Karl Doenitz will also have to face trial for his life.

The information about the ranking luminaries of the fallen Nazi hierarchy and Hitler's successor in the surrendered Reich came today from a highly reliable source. This informant estimated that between 4,000,000 and 6,000,000 Germans might be forced to atone for their nation's atrocities if the proposed plan of pool punishment is adopted by the victorious powers.

Hess and Goering, both are prisoners and both were Hitler deputies. Himmler, the hangman head of the Gestapo, is a fugitive.

PRICES WILL BE HELD DOWN

Reconversion Goods To Sell At 1942 Levels

Washington, May 11—(AP)—Price Administrator Chester Bowles today pledged 1942 retail prices for most reconversion commodities.

Outlining OPA's pricing policies for long-scarce consumer goods, he told a news conference.

"Everything we do in OPA must be directed toward making it possible for American enterprise and skills to produce a record volume of high quality goods at low prices and high wages."

"Nothing will more surely smother the fires of inflation than an avalanche of civilian goods and services."

Bowles said it is his belief that there will be "few instances in which increases in retail prices above 1942 levels will be necessary, and in such instances the size of the increases will be relatively small."

"We must keep prices from getting out of control, and we must make certain that we avoid the kind of inflation and collapse that took place after the last war."

Bowles acknowledged that "important changes have taken place in the factors affecting production costs."

Declaring that in fixing price ceilings for these items it will be necessary to weigh increases in costs of raw materials and parts and in labor costs. He said:

"If substantial increases of this kind were to be disregarded and reconverting manufacturers compelled to shoulder burdens they could not bear, the program for full employment and rapid reconversion would be hindered."

"Our job is to help this program, not to hinder it. We are not going to disregard such cost increases even temporarily."

May Furnishes Freak Weather

By The Associated Press The merry month of May went off with a bang today over a wide section of the country.

Snow fell in copious amounts in New England and in upper New York state, temperatures dropped to below freezing over the midwest area, and rain damped the enthusiasm which spring normally engenders.

The snow which fell in some sections of the midwest yesterday blanketed a large section of the New England coast and inland and in northern New York today. Northern New England had its most severe snowstorm in 25 years, with falls measuring up to six inches, while the five inch fall at Albany, N. Y., was the heaviest May snowfall on record.

Only one major league baseball game was played, while several minor league contests were postponed by rain and cold weather. The Chicago weather bureau said six inches of snow fell at Montpelier, Vt., the heaviest amount reported, while at Augusta, Me., the fall measured five inches, equalling the fall at Albany and Fort Plain, N. Y. Snow continued falling along the New England coast but it changed to rain in upper New York state.

One person was killed, two others were injured and a number of buildings, including two schools, were damaged when a tornado struck near Starr, S. C., yesterday. (Continued on Page Four)

Underground Movement In Germany Will Be Ruthlessly Suppressed By Occupation Forces

By ELTON C. FAY Washington, May 11—(AP)—A special intelligence section to detect and "ruthlessly" suppress any Nazi underground activities will be part of the United States military government in the American occupation zone of Germany.

This was disclosed today in a War Department announcement of plans for the United States group which will form part of the Allied four-power control council for Germany. The American unit will be divided into 12 major divisions, corresponding generally to the ministries of the German central government.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower will be the United States representative on the council as agreed upon at the Yalta big three meeting. Lt. Gen. Lucius Clay will serve as deputy to Eisenhower and also will be "deputy military governor for Germany," the department said without amplifying this latter reference.

The announcement said the United States army, navy and air forces had perfected over a period of many months and in coordination with the British, Russians and French a "coordinated program to impose a stern military government over all of Germany and to carry out the policies agreed upon at Yalta." It did not, however, officially define the area of American occupation.

The creation of the intelligence section was a sample of this decision for stern control. Each of the 12 divisions will share (Continued on Page Six)

TRUMAN VIEWS TAX OUTLOOK

Discusses Five-Point Program With Leaders

Washington, May 11—(AP)—President Truman reviewed the postwar tax outlook today with top congressional revenue authorities.

He talked with Chairman George C. D. Go of the Senate Finance Committee and Chairman Doughton "D-N-C" of the House Ways and Means Committee for 30 minutes. Senator George said the President was in agreement with a five point tax revision proposal put forward yesterday by Treasury and congressional experts.

"We gave the President the best information we had about the general tax program and policies under discussion," George said.

"We discussed the five point program in general terms but not in detail. We didn't discuss individual taxes."

Legislative tax revision machinery began to turn today to aid business and industry in converting to civilian production.

Conference Works Hard On Charter Provisions

Committees Hold Day And Night Sessions To Prepare Peace-Keeping Document For Formal Action

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER Associated Press San Francisco, May 11—(AP)—The United Nations Conference appeared today to be developing a "strong bloc of small nations determined to win themselves greater authority over the proposed use of force to prevent future wars."

The issue is coming sharply to the fore in conference committees considering amendments to the Dumbarton Oaks plan for world peace organization as it was drawn up by Britain, China, Russia and the United States in Washington last fall. Here are current top developments:

1. Prime Minister MacKenzie King of Canada told a committee on functions of the security council, which is the exclusive, powerful core of the proposed organization, that "any nation whose troops were to be used against an aggressor should be permitted a voice in the council's decision to take forceful action." Mexico and New Zealand endorsed his idea and Australia and several others are backing the principle.

2. New Zealand suggested that the proposed world assembly of nations—to which the Dumbarton Oaks plan would assign little authority—should have the right to approve or reject any security council action. This is bluntly opposed by the big powers.

3. A Cuban proposition that the security council be enlarged from 11 member nations, provided under Dumbarton Oaks, to 14 or 15, was debated in the committee on the council yesterday but a decision was delayed pending further study.

The same general issue of the council's powers was tied into the behind-the-scenes dispute over regional security arrangements which has split the United States delegation down the middle.

Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) promised the regional arrangements committee last night that an American plan would be drawn up as soon as possible.

On the other big conference issue—how to govern the ex-enemy territories of both world wars—the Big-Five powers appeared to be steadily approaching an agreement. Russia and China yesterday submitted trusteeship plans. These, like that of the United States, would provide for creating strategic trusteeships over Pacific islands and other places having military importance.

Russia was reported to have tossed a potentially explosive proposition into the committee on trusteeships last night. This would commit the United Nations to the principle that colonial peoples should be assured of eventual independence—which could become a hot point of (Continued on Page Four)

German Troops Taste Bitterness Of Defeat

By HAL BOYLE Pilsen, Czechoslovakia May 11—(AP)—Two years ago this week thousands of Field Marshal Rommel's famed Afrika Korps troops rode the dusty trail to defeat and a vast war prisoner camp in the wheat fields outside Bizerte.

They came in proud and arrogant, still very much a fighting army and unconvinced that they were beaten. They had backtracked 1,100 miles from El Alamein in one of the superb marches of military history. But at last the British and American forces had pushed them to the sea. That sea was controlled by Allied ships. With their supply lines cut and no way for them to "let food and ammunition, the Nazis had to yield.

Africa was lost. But these young Nazis—hardened by desert marches and still in top physical condition—regarded Africa as only a small gamble.

"What is Africa to us?" they asked when you talked to them. "We still have Europe. We shall always have it. You will never be able to break into Europe through our Fuehrer's West Wall."

When one lanky American ventured to suggest that not only Europe would be invaded but that Germany herself would be fought through and occupied, Rommel's fan-clad desert warriors laughed at him in complete incredulity.

"No Allied soldier ever will set foot in the Fatherland," one said insistively. "It is impossible—unthinkable. You do not know the power of our army."

Doolittle Predicts Huge Air Assaults On Japan

Superforts Pound Japan Again Today

Three Separate Raids Today Followed Yesterday's 400 Bomber Attack On Jap Oil Supply

By LEIF ERICKSON Guam, May 11—(AP)—Superfortresses bombed Japan's homeland three times today, striking at three industrial centers and three airfields on Kyushu Island in a swift follow-up to yesterday's 400-plane B-29 raid.

In the heaviest attack 100 to 150 Superfortresses attacked the big Kawanishi seaplane plant on Honshu, between Kobe and Osaka as a smaller fleet blasted the Oita and Sakai air fields on Kyushu. The latest attack was aimed at the important cities of Miyakonojo and Mizushima, and at the Miyakasaki airfield, Kyushu airfields, home bases of enemy planes used in Okinawa fighting, have been opened in time after time by the big bomb carriers.

No immediate reports of damage wrought by the third raid were made, and the bombing was done through undercast by precision instruments.

Japan's oil reserves were hammered for the first time in yesterday's 400-plane attack which included the Tokuyama, and Otake and Oshima oil storage areas. Not a plane was lost, and Japanese opposition was weak.

Description of the strike on oil targets, Col. Wiley D. Ganey of Andalusia, Ala., said the sky "looked like a B-29 training school. Superfortresses were everywhere. I saw a column of smoke 15,000 feet high (Continued on page six)

NEW GAINS IN PHILIPPINES

Japs Offer Bitter Resistance On Mindanao

Manila, May 11—(AP)—Infantrymen of Maj. Gen. Roscoe Woodruff's veteran 24th division were reported today making steady gains against stiff resistance in a mountain battle with Japan's Mindanao island garrison near the captured port city of Davao.

The battleground was a triangular area between the Talomo and Davao rivers, due northwest of Davao city. The Yankis, who crossed the Talomo Tuesday, were faced with the tough job of rooting the enemy out of elaborate cave defenses.

A strong force of marine divers, bombers closely supported the ground fight.

A headquarters spokesman said perhaps 18,000 Japanese civilians had evacuated Davao city. Davao and newly-invaded Samar island offshore are firmly in American hands. The port is one of the best in the Philippines.

On Tarakan island, Borneo, Australian and Dutch troops reached the edge of the Djocata oil field, second largest on the oil-rich little island, against slight opposition.

Head For Pacific

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, Paris, May 11—(AP)—Some American troop units already are on their way to French ports and headed for the Pacific under the redeployment program, it was disclosed here today.

The first combat troops from Europe, however, are not likely to reach the Pacific theater in much under six months.

The first to go are service troops for they are needed to prepare the way for the flow of combat veterans who helped defeat Germany.

Beside the service units already on the move, others have been alerted, Brig. Gen. G. S. Eyster, acting deputy chief of staff, said.

SINGAPORE IS NEXT TARGET

British Look Southward After Taking Rangoon

By PRESTON GROVER Calcutta, May 11—(AP)—With Rangoon captured and the campaign in Burma virtually ended, troops of Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's Southeast Asia Command turned their eyes toward Singapore today as their next likely objective.

While some of Mountbatten's men have been in the jungles for a year or more and are badly in need of rest, others are comparatively fresh and could be quickly made ready for a new campaign.

The latter include the forces which took Rangoon in a combined sea and air operation—just such troops as would be needed for a landing on the Malay Peninsula north of Singapore or on the island of Sumatra, across Malacca Strait from Malaya.

This special group of paratroopers and amphibious troops is backed (Continued on Page Six)

Today On The Home Front

By JAMES MARLOW San Francisco, May 11—(AP)—Small nations—at the United Nations conference — are unhappy about this and some are deeply worried.

About the tremendous power the big five nations — United States, United Kingdom, Soviet Russia, China and France—want and undoubtedly will have.

It's called veto power. And this story will attempt to show without going into too much detail what could happen if the big five have their way.

And what it shows may well be the shape and color of the world to come.

The United Nations have come here to set up a league of nations to prevent future wars. This is how they want it done:

There would be in that league a body called the security council. It would have 11 members. Five of them would be permanent members.

Yes, the permanent ones would be the big five. They'd always sit on the security council.

The remaining six would be elected to the council for two years each by the membership of the league.

Leader Of First Attack On Tokyo Says Fleets Of As Many As 2,000 Planes Would Pound Jap Homeland; Eighth Air Force To Be Transferred To Pacific Area

By HENRY B. JAMESON London, May 11—(AP)—Lt. Gen. James H. Doolittle, commander of the U. S. Eighth Air Force, who led the first air raid on Tokyo predicted today that 2,000-plane raids would be made upon Japan.

The size of the American Air Force operating against Japan will continue to be increased as airfields become available and supply routes and communications bases are established, Doolittle said at a conference.

He disclosed that the personnel of the Eighth Air Force in England now numbered approximately 200,000 men and women, and that another 100,000 had served on a rotating basis.

Doolittle said part of the Eighth Air Force's manpower and equipment would be moved directly to the Pacific and the rest would be sent back to the United States or would be kept here indefinitely as part of the Allied occupation air force.

He indicated that large numbers of Flying Fortresses and Liberators used in bombing Germany would be shifted to the Pacific where they would be used in the role of "medium bombers," augmenting operations of the ever-increasing fleet of Superfortresses.

Doolittle referred to the Superfortress as "the heavy bomber of the future," but in speaking of prospective 2,000-plane raids on Japan he did not state specifically that he meant all 2,000 would be Superfortresses.

Doolittle disclosed that the personnel of the Eighth Air Force in England now numbered 200,000 men and women, and that another 100,000 had served on a rotating basis.

"That number of operational planes on airfields today does not include a large number of others in repair depots, and new planes in reserve pools," he said.

The largest number of heavier Doolittle ever dispatched in one attack was approximately 2,000 last Christmas Eve.

"For every bomber we have at least two full crews," he said. "That is the only way we could have kept up the large-scale, nonstop raids over Germany."

Doolittle was asked what part he expected to play in the final phase of the war against the Japanese. Laughing he replied:

"I only wish I knew. He reviewed the history of the air war in Europe, stating that at one time "losses approaching a prohibitive rate" on the deep penetration raids into the heart of Germany threatened to bring into question the ability of the air force to make its D-Day deadline.

The situation was saved, he said, by the introduction of long range American Mustang fighters.

"In the fall and winter of 1943-44 improved German tactics and more lethal armament increased the Luftwaffe's toll of our bombers until we 'aced a very grave crisis,' Doolittle said.

"The neutralization of the Luftwaffe was not only a campaign (Continued on Page Six)

Hannegan To Speak Raleigh, May 11—(AP)—A Jefferson Day dinner to be held here June 2 will be featured by an address by Robert E. Hannegan, National Democratic chairman.

On routine matters a majority of any seven members of the council is all that would be necessary.

When it came to voting to take action against an aggressor nation — by using the armed forces of the league—the vote would still have to be seven but with this difference:

In this case all five of the big five would have to vote "yes" plus any two of the other six members of the council.

If any one of the big five voted "no" then no action could be taken and the league would be helpless to stop an aggressor. See how it works:

Suppose Russia attacked Rumania. If the council wanted to take any action to stop Russia, Russia would have to vote and it (Continued on Page Four)

Christian Church Revival Continues

"The Conversion of a High up Churchman" was the theme of the sermon at Eighth Street Christian Church Thursday evening, delivered by the guest evangelist, Dr. F. H. Crossfield, and the service was attended by a large congregation, according to the pastor, Dr. H. G. Haney.

"Not many high and mighty became followers of Jesus, for it was the common people who heard him gladly," said Dr. Crossfield. "Here, in the case of the conversion of Nicodemus, is an exception, for this man had evident wealth, high social and an dreignous position, and was one of the members of the Sanhedrim, the civil and ecclesiastical court of the Jews."

"Why did Nicodemus come to Jesus by night? Was it because of fear or timidity? Perhaps prudential reasons prompted him. At that time there were many false messiahs passing their claims to leadership, and this ruler of the Jews wished to make sure that he was not being misguided," according to Dr. Crossfield.

This man wanted to know more about the kingdom of God, a subject that filled the minds of all Palestine, and sought Jesus to discover his relation to the kingdom, should Jesus prove to be the verifiable king. "A new birth was required, Jesus told him, for his Abrahamic ancestry was outmoded and obsolete, and required orientation to a new source of salvation—must be born of the spirit," said the evangelist. Dr. Crossfield will discuss this ev-

Joseph Saad in Germany
Cpl. Joseph Saad, with General Patch's Seventh army in Germany, on April 18, wrote an interesting letter to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. G. Saad, and his brother, George Saad, with the Reflector. The Greenville soldier described a raid by liberated prisoners on a railroad box cars of clothing on a sidetrack. He said the slave laborers

A SLIGHT CASE OF

The apartment stifled her. She had a hysterical feeling she'd have to get out of it for a while before she went to bed or she would never be able to sleep. She had to get better control of herself. Tom had his back to the door, dialing a number on the telephone when she returned to the living room. His voice was low and furtive and Brenda quickly realized he was steering the conversation so that the person on the other end of the line would pick up his cues and do the talking.

"Why all this subtlety," Brenda thought wearily, as she started to clean up the room. It was all so dirty—so sordid. This silly air of intrigue and mystery Tom was pulling around everything he did these days irritated and harassed her. The sooner there was an end to the mockery of their living together, the better it would be for both of them. This sort of thing could not go on.

But she found she was too tired to even attempt to straighten up the living room. A short walk might clear her head, which was now aching so she knew she could not sleep. As she went into the bedroom she picked up the bundle of old newspapers lying on the desk and threw it in the laundry hamper in the bathroom. Tom was still talking on the telephone. While she was in the kitchen he had thrown his soiled bathing suit on the floor. Leaning over she knew she could pick it up and roll it into a bundle with a disreputable beach robe lying on a bathroom chair. She threw them both on top of the package of old newspapers and then, without a word, walked out of the apartment.

Christopher was in a chair beside Brenda's desk as the closing time gong sounded in the store the next afternoon. The tall young man with his well-brushed brown hair and his meticulously tailored brown suit, had a surge of energy and driving power about him commensurate with his official position. He waited for Brenda to finish a telephone call, he was thinking of those days in the store when he never heard a closing gong. Then any excuse was a good reason to be out of the store as much as possible, and yesterday he had checked off nine hours at his desk!

Something new had surely been added, he decided. As Brenda dropped the receiver back on its cradle, long rays of the western sun slanted through the smoky office window and made a lambent flame of her red-gold hair. There was the faintest suggestion of a smile on Christopher's face as he held out his cigarette case with one hand and pointed to her desk clock with the other.

"It's after working hours, so you can smoke—one minute and a half past closing time. I need a smoke myself," he added ruminatingly. "I just had a run-in with Donohue. He got so mad I thought he'd hold me as a special witness—or something."

He leaned over and held his lighter for Brenda's cigarette.

"What burns him up is that you were right about Dan and he was murdered. Brenda said slowly, watching the smoke of her cigarette drift through the close lifeless air of the office. She had never seen the night watchman, but his death had cast its shadow over her work and the sinister outline of that shadow was touching everything that had happened since the night he died.

"That's right. It was the rope that finally proved Dan had been murdered. The laboratory did a good job on that. They found the fibers of the rope were lying in the opposite direction to that of the pulling."

"What does that mean?"

"As I understand it, just this. If a person slides down a rope, the fibers of that rope will all point downward. But if a body has been pulled up by someone, the fibers will point up on that part of the rope pulled by the murderer, because of the contact of the rope with the beam or whatever it is the body hangs on."

"In this case that is what happened. The fibers on the rope were pointing in two opposite directions showing that the rope had been pulled up by the murderer. They chloroformed Dan, strangled him, and then tried to make his death look like suicide."

Suddenly Christopher leaned forward and pounded the desk with his fist.

"That's it—exactly! I never thought of it before!" He exclaimed. "They got the poor fellow right outside of his office. It must have been chloroform I smell when I waked up that canvas cover. There was a funny sickish smell. I remember—and those footsteps—we both kept hearing them. Someone came back to see what we were doing." He stopped abruptly and there was a grim, set expression around his mouth.

"Dan was coming to tell me he had seen that fur shipment taken off on the fifth floor," Brenda continued where he left off. "He telephoned me when the furs arrived—then he saw the man on the fifth floor taking them off the freight elevator—and he was coming to report the theft to me—or at least to this office."

"You've got it. That's what happened. That's why he was killed. He knew the man!"

Christopher jumped to his feet and began to pace back and forth in the narrow space in front of Brenda's desk. His hands thrust in his coat pockets.

"Donohue better get wise to himself or he'll land behind the eight balls—two robberies and a murder in one week in this store. No so good. Headquarters has already turned the heat on him. That's why he's after you. He's trying everything."

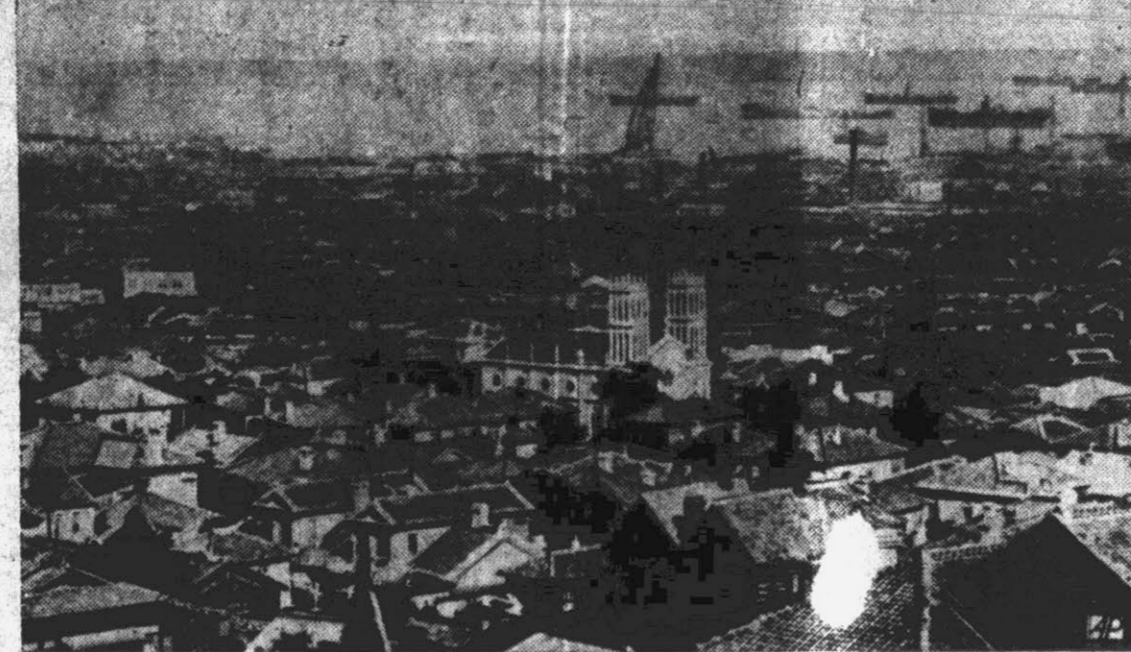

"I can take it," Brenda smiled briefly. "If he'll just leave me alone during business hours. I want this sale to be a success, and he sat in this office nearly two mortal hours this morning. I can't work while he watches every move I make."

Chapter 20
"It is perfectly assinine," Christopher agreed indignantly. "Donohue will have to stop riding you about that cash box. How did things go today? You satisfied?"

Brenda nodded, her anxiety vanishing in a quick smile at his question.

As she opened the door to her apartment Brenda heard Francine Norman's voice. She recognized it instantly. Once before she had come home unexpectedly and heard the same high-pitched querulous voice shouting at her from behind the closed doors of the living room. Then as now they were quarreling.

Brenda had never seen the girl, but she knew she ran the "25" game at the Club Boulevard and JAPANESE PORT—A section of the city near the waterfront appears in this peacetime view of Kobe, important Japanese shipping center attacked several times by E-25s.

"I'm surprised and pretty happy over the sale so far. I haven't the totals yet, but I heard a few minutes ago we'd almost equalled yesterday's figures."

"Well, there were certainly crowds of people on the floor today."

"At first I was afraid that didn't mean customers. There were so many sight-seers talking about the hold-up."

"And the police were parked over the place. That's all right by me if they get anywhere."

Brenda sighed. "They found my finger prints on the cash box with Irene's. There were evidently no other prints on the box. The lock was wrecked. That's a complete set-up for Donohue. I seem to have assumed a terrific responsibility when I told Irene she could go down to the cashier with that box! I guess my guardian angel has been taking a vacation since I came to Humbert's!"

Christopher laughed. "Oh, I wouldn't let it get me down. There are always certain things you have to take for granted in a store. Robberies for instance. They are bound to happen in every store from time to time, human nature being what it is. But this kind of dishonesty doesn't touch you personally, just because you happen to be the head of the department when it occurs. But the kind of things that never change—in store and out of stores—you have to accept that fact. For instance—"

He was standing very close to her desk, grinning down at her, and suddenly as she looked up at him, Brenda felt her vague, formless fears slipping away. After all, it wouldn't hurt to relax a little now and then. She had been on a tension for days.

"That's better," he nodded his approval as she leaned back in her chair and smiled at him. "Face it, now as I was saying—there are certain things that never change, like this—there are always pigeons in Grant Park. All park benches are green—always, never any other color—and about this time every afternoon I begin to be hungry and think about my dinner."

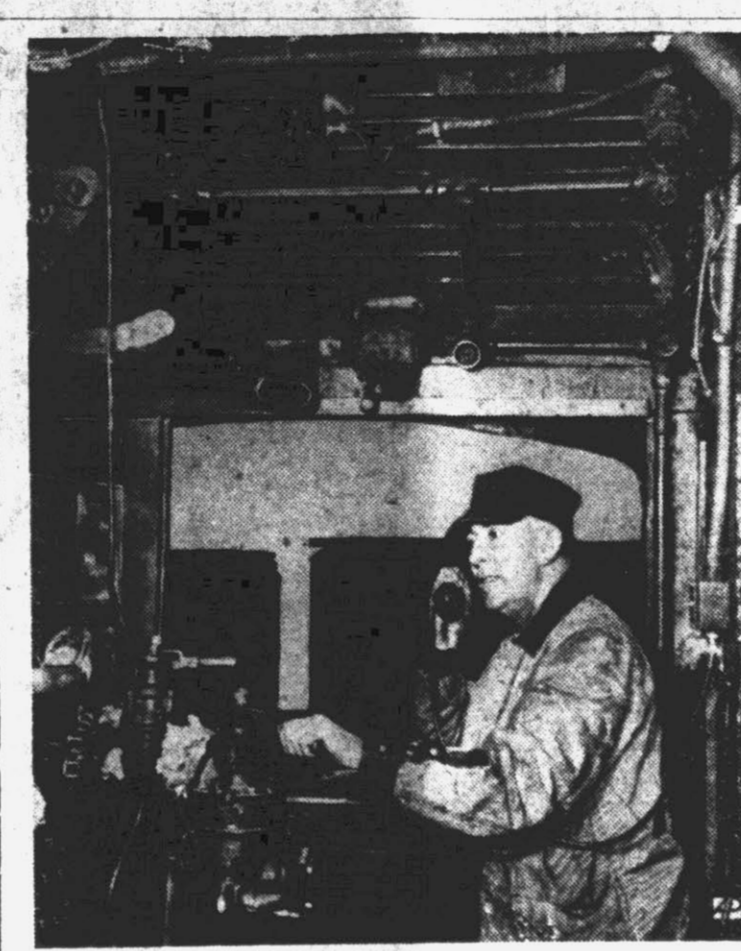

"Every night," she continued solemnly. "It's the same thing—I never change. I always have dinner. Tonight I want you to have dinner with me. Will you?"

His voice vibrated with a softer inflexion as he asked the question. Brenda, who had been following him with amused attention, leaned forward abruptly and her wide gray eyes darkened as she thought of the work she had scheduled for herself that evening. She thought of Tom and the dinner Hannah was cooking for them—all valid reasons for declining his invitation. Then having faced the facts, with true feminine logic, she promptly said she would have dinner with Christopher! After all, life had been a pretty grim business for her this last month.

Quickly they made their plans. Christopher would order dinner at his club where they would dine on a terrace high above the city, and Brenda would meet him there later after she had attended to a few things at home.

As she opened the door to her apartment Brenda heard Francine Norman's voice. She recognized it instantly. Once before she had come home unexpectedly and heard the same high-pitched querulous voice shouting at her from behind the closed doors of the living room. Then as now they were quarreling.

Brenda had never seen the girl, but she knew she ran the "25" game at the Club Boulevard and when a man called Rizzo, Pete Rizzo, wasn't there. Francine was the keeper of the handbook and a part-time butler. Now something seemed to have gone wrong. She heard their voices rising in a crescendo of anger, easily audible through the thin walls of the apartment.

Walking swiftly past the closed doors she went directly to the kitchenette to tell Hannah she would not be home for dinner that evening. But the maid was not there. Late as usual, Brenda thought grimly. That means the marketing had been left until the last minute.

Well, for one night at any rate, she would not have to face this dreary domestic scene, which each day slipped deeper into chaos. Soon it would all be only a cold, dreary memory. Hastily scribbling a note for Hannah on the back of an old grocery bill, she propped it up on the shelf over the sink and almost ran to the bedroom.

She had a panic urge to get out of the apartment before the two in the living room knew she had been there. As she dressed, a vague sense of loneliness, almost of sadness swept over her as she realized that this miserable background was all that was left of her home. Rushing through a lightning change, within a very few minutes she was back again in the darkened hall. She was stepping softly and swiftly toward the door when suddenly she heard Tom's voice, and there was something in the way he spoke that made her stiffen with a strange premonition of danger.

Strength FOR THE DAY

By EARL L. DOUGLAS

STRIVING FOR PEACE
The great St. Augustine once wrote to a soldier of his day. "Often in thy warfare thou must be of peace-making spirit."

This is hard to understand. How can a man wage war in a spirit of peace-making? Augustine undoubtedly means that bad as war is, there are some things in the world even worse, and these things brave men in uniform are called to bring to go forth and destroy. The rule of brute force can be met only by counter measures of force, and people who abuse their fellows understand only the language of the club. Our Lord warns us not to cast pearls before swine. One has to be firm in dealing with a wild boar. Pearls will not appease him; he will trample them and then turn and rend the person who has tried to purchase safety in this way.

Our prayers are going up at this time that peace will come out of this dreadful struggle. No one can believe that war itself will ever produce peace. The man who fights the battles clears the ground; he expects his government to make such arrangements with nations that peace will result. Neither the fighting men of this war nor those of the last war failed in any particular, but diplomats failed in 1918 to establish peace. Let us pray God that they will make no fatal mistakes at this serious juncture of world affairs.

AMERICA IN WARTIME

By JACK STINNETT

(First of Two Articles)
Washington — The new White House "inner circle" is beginning to take shape.

For 12 years and in many other administrations it has been customary for White House opponents to refer contemptuously to "the palace guard" or "the inner circle" and to blame one or all of them for many of the ills that government is heir to.

There are no good reasons why this should be so invariably. No President, even if he were accorded or assumed the powers of a total dictator, could run the administrative branch of a government of this magnitude without advisers, key executives, or men who are willing to carry the ball and take the blame for all losses as well as very little credit for gains, while the chief is taking a breathing spell or attending to more vital matters.

If this "inner circle" — which means simply the men or women closely associated with the President and implicitly entrusted to perform the duties he assigns them — justifies that trust in the eyes of the Chief Executive, then the responsibility is his, not theirs. If they justify that trust in the eyes of the public and the persons with whom they have to deal, then there is no reason for applying to them derogatory group or individual epithets.

Roosevelt's "inner circle" came in for a great deal of adverse criticism, even from persons who for one reason or another, didn't attack the President personally. In 12 years, President Roosevelt made many changes, but the changes really were remarkable in that they were so few. One of the criticisms often leveled at Roosevelt was that he clung to old loyalties and friendships long after his appointees had appeared incompetent.

Many of the original "brain trusters" were shaken off in the more than three terms Roosevelt served. Some of them even became his severest critics. But men like Harry L. Hopkins, Judge Sam I. Rosenman, Stephen Early, Henry Morgenthau, Henry Wallace, Harold L. Ickes and many others were in there all the way, regardless of the coats heaped on their heads. The same could be said of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, of Aubrey Williams, who was dropped only when opponents in the Senate refused to permit his confirmation as director of rural electrification; of Leon Henderson, who still was running errands when the President died, in spite of the fact that he had been booted out of OPA, and of Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter, who was always supposed to carry much weight at the White House.

All of these, strictly speaking, weren't members of the "inner circle" by any means, but they were appointees to whom the President gave his trust, regardless of how much heat was turned on by the opposition. Many of them were friends and intimates before Roosevelt came to Washington in 1933.

Let's look tomorrow at President Truman's "inner circle" pattern and see how much of it is the same, how much different.

wearily for naps under the blazing May sun or merely sitting on the grass staring blankly in tired indecision. Some had collapsed from the heat of the 56-mile march and were being treated under an open tent by American medics.

From all parts of the field came the querulous cries of fretful babies and children. They were German children crying for food and attention—children who knew something was wrong and with the quick perception of childhood caught up their mothers' fright and uncertainty.

One Czech mother who saw this crowded field of anxious German women wasn't very sympathetic.

"It is bad that any children have to cry," she said. "But if some children must cry it is the fault of the German children. They will be hungry at most for only a few hours. But our Czech children have had to do without proper food for six years. There were oranges for German children in Czechoslovakia, but none for Czech children. Now it is our turn to feed oranges to our babies."

American officials had hoped to avoid discussion of colonial question here and to limit the whole problem of dependencies to that of setting up machinery for controlling former enemy territories.
The conference committees which only this week had buckled down to work on amendments to the Dumbarton Oaks plan are working swiftly over the 22 changes submitted jointly by the United States, Britain, China and Russia. One adopted yesterday fixed advisory qualifications for nations to be elected by a general assembly of all United Nations to the security council.

Guam, May 10 (AP)—A determined U. S. offensive against Naha, Okinawa's capital city, was shaping up today after the 6th Marine division, newly committed to the island's southern front, bridged the Asa river estuary despite efforts of two Japanese human bombs to blow up the span.
Still another wide, winding river—the Asato—stands before Naha as a natural barrier to American troops. Maj. Gen. Lemuel C. Shepherd, Jr.'s 8th Marine division, the third fresh division thrown into the craggy, cave-infested southern front in a week, forced the crossing of the Asa in darkness early yesterday.
Two Japanese attempted to blow up the span by covering themselves with explosives and detonating the charges as they plunged onto it. Their act served only to damage the span and delay the crossing.
Elsewhere along the southern front, marines and doughboys made "limited gains yesterday, fleet Adm. Chester W. Nimitz's communique reported today. He announced these other developments:
Japanese casualties through Wednesday total 38,857 killed, an increase of 2,322 in two days' fighting. American casualties through Monday were 16,425, including 2,648 dead, in ground fighting.
Sixty-nine Japanese were killed on Iwo Jima in the week of April 29-May 5 and 57 captured. Total casualties there of 23,244 killed and 1,038 captured. Iwo was invaded February 19 and secured March 16.
A light naval force evacuated 494 Marshallese natives from Jalut atoll in the Marshall islands in a daring rescue effected while Japanese counterattacked with machine guns and other light weapons. The natives, who presumably had slipped out a messenger with word they wanted to be freed, were taken to U. S.-controlled Marshall islands.
Under clearing skies, Japanese aircraft resumed their attacks on America's Okinawa forces late Wednesday and early yesterday, damaging two fleet auxiliaries. Six attackers were destroyed.

Grimesland Farmer Harvests Fall Crop

J. A. Buck, Grimesland farmer, today harvested the first fall crop of 1945 when he gathered some cocklebur plants with the thorny burrs fully developed. The plants are small, about four inches tall. The burrs are as large as any ever observed in October. Buck said it is well known among farmers that cockleburs always mature just before the first frost. Their ripening is an infallible indication that frost may be expected. He said the early maturing at this time resulted from unusually warm weather during March. One of the plants is in the Reflector window.
Incidentally, the Grimesland farmer said that tobacco, bean and watermelon vine leaves appear to be flopping as a result of the unusually prolonged cool weather.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, May 11—(AP)—Selective bidding in today's stock market stemmed the retreat of the past week and, while many leaders failed to attract customers, favored rails, aviation and industrials managed to come back fractions to a point or more. Extreme advances were reduced in the majority of cases near the close and losers were plentiful. A bullish symptom was seen in the fact that dealings on the comeback were among the slowest of the past month. Transfers were around 1,000,000 shares.

Red Devils Defeat Phantoms By Score Of 12 To 2

By DAVE CLARK

The GHS Phantoms once again went down in defeat before the powerful Kinston Red Devils 12-2 in a seven inning ball game last night in the Kinston park. Kenneth Dail's home run smash to center field in the last of the seventh with a mate aboard saved the Greensies from a shut out.

The Kinstonians started with a bang by taking advantage of Greenie hurler Dick Flye's wildness and scoring three runs in the first inning and five in the second. From then on Flye managed to settle down somewhat, but base hits gave the Red Devils four more runs before the contest ended.

One comforting thought to the Phantoms was that they committed very few errors and had Flye been regularly very few of the Kinston runs would have been earned. However, the Greensies still showed an inability to hit good pitching and could collect only three hits off of Red Devil hurler Jones.

In the last hit of the sixth inning Coach Clark put in his second string. They held the Kinston boys scoreless during the last of the sixth and in the top of the seventh they scored two runs.

The first two batters in the seventh struck out, then Eilers walked. The next man up was 210 pound Kenneth "Tiny" Dail. He smashed a line drive that rolled to the 400 foot center field fence and beat the throw home with time to spare. The next man up struck out.

Asks Lifting Of Conventions Ban

Washington, May 11—(AP)—The Army is insisting that every German prisoner held in this country see the motion pictures depicting the horrors of the murders perpetrated by their former Nazi masters.

The War Department disclosed today that the more than 343,000 German prisoners in the country "have been ordered to see" films made both by the Army and by commercial companies. In order that there be no chance for misunderstanding, the commentary for the films have been translated into German.

The Army is backing up this program with a second plan to send into each prison camp booklets of still pictures, with captions in German, also showing details of the Nazi mass murder assembly lines.

At the same time the War Department said that German prisoners will find no more beer, cigarettes, candy and other similar items in the prison canteens after the existing stocks are exhausted.

against a powerful enemy force, but a race against time. It had to be done in time to permit the land invasion during favorable summer weather of 1944.

"Then early in 1944 long-range fighters which had been continuously in development came into the air battle of Germany in sufficient numbers to win for us in this period of our greatest crisis. The effect of all this was manifest on D-Day when the Luftwaffe did not seriously contest the invasion."

In order to destroy the German air force, Doolittle said, "We deliberately intended to precipitate large-scale air battles."

One of the highlights in the history of the Eighth Air Force was its campaign against German oil production, which Doolittle described as "a continuing contest between bombardiers and German reconstruction battalions."

"Unless the Germans were willing to end all resistance, they could not afford to stop repairing and rebuilding plants which made resistance possible," the commander said.

"At Leuna, west of Leipzig, the enemy's largest synthetic oil plant had to be attacked 18 times by the Eighth and three times by the RAF. It was the most heavily defended single industrial plant in all Germany. Each attack bomber was the target of at least 437 88 mm. and larger rapid fire heavy anti-aircraft and artillery cannon. A smoke-screen 20 miles in perimeter covered the area."

He said the bombers halted all production there five times, but each time the Germans applied thousands of repair men to the job of putting it back into partial production.

"The manager of the Leuna works told one of our intelligence officers that in addition to the 11,000 people employed in operating the plant, 4,000 men were assigned solely for the repair of bomb damage."

Nazi Holdouts ...

Fourth 1942 divisions, driving into Dobruha from the east against the fleeing enemy, captured more than 20,000 in the early stages of the offensive, threatening to snap shut the trap, and Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's Second Ukrainians attacked Woehlers' troops, apparently trying to hold a corridor south of Prague for the escape of Germans toward American lines. His troops took 8,000 by early reports.

A large group of Germans was in flight, apparently trying to reach Third Army lines before giving up, scurrying through a narrowing escape gap between Prague and Caslav, 42 miles to the east.

Essential German pilots in Czechoslovakia were reported to have used their last fuel to bomb a concentration camp where Jews were interned.

Eduard Benes, president of Czechoslovakia, returned to Prague as the total liberation of his country drew near.

In Austria, Marshal Feodor I. Tolbunhin's Third Ukrainian mop-up squads linked with the British Eighth Army west of Graz. More than 23,000 Germans from Woehlers' army group surrendered to him, Moscow said.

In Latvia the prisoner bag by early today rose to 68,578 men, 1,982 officers and 13 generals as the Courland Peninsula Nazis capitulated. In the Danzig area the Second and Third, White Russian armies took 95,000 Nazi prisoners, including the commander of the German Second Army.

by a fleet growing in size week by week.

A drive to oust the Japanese from Malaya would compare with other operations in the Pacific which have been launched from bases 400 to 600 miles away from the objectives.

Triconalee, the British naval base in Ceylon, 600 miles across the Bay of Bengal from Sumatra, is the only suitable harbor on the eastern coast of India where the major elements of an amphibious expedition could be assembled.

There is the genuine prospect, however, that operations elsewhere in the Pacific may advance so fast that British forces will be able to walk into Singapore unopposed.

The Japanese forces facing the Southeast Asia Command have neither air force nor navy to aid them. It is estimated that there are between 200 and 300 Japanese planes to defend the entire Sumatra and Malaya area, while no portion of the Japanese surface fleet has dared venture so far south of Japanese home waters. A few Jap submarines continue to operate in the Bay of Bengal but their job is increasingly difficult, as their facilities are limited and they are under constant Allied air attack.

The two tax leaders disclosed that the Senate-House Committee is making further studies looking toward other tax revisions. The present recommendations, they said, were designed to cover "the period between the defeat of Germany and the defeat of Japan."

It added: "This intelligence section will also maintain surveillance over all German agencies and provide assurance that activities by Nazi underground, 'werewolves' and the like will be ruthlessly suppressed."

Also directly under Clay will be two other sections, public information and public relations. The former section, said the department, "will control all forms of public expression in Germany, including newspapers, radio, magazines and other publications and motion pictures." It likewise "will deal with the dissolution of the propaganda ministry of the notorious Gobbels and the establishment of an unbiased and truthful press and radio system."

Public relations will be concerned with issuing communities, accreditation of correspondents and press censorship. Regarding the latter, the department said: "Censorship in the American zone will be solely on the basis of military security."

The demobilization of German armed forces and disarmament will be attended to by three military divisions—army, naval and air.

"Tremendous tasks lie ahead of the economic division, which will deal with such problems as food, agriculture and forestry, and fuel and mining, price control and rationing," the department declared.

An internal affairs and communications division will include among other duties supervision of public safety and control of civil police forces. This unit, said the announcement, "will concern itself with elimination of the dreaded secret police."
