Promises Overwhelming Blow Against Japanese

President Truman Says American Forces Preparing To Achieve Victory Over Jap Empire; Praises Infantrymen In Congressional Medal Presentation Address

Washington, May 21 (AP)—President Truman told Congress today that American forces were preparing to strike the Japanese with "overwhelming" power.

Speaking at ceremonies at which he awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor to Tech. Sgt. Jake W. Lindsey of Lucedale, Miss., the President asserted:

"This is a proud and moving occasion for every American. It follows the complete victory of the Allied forces over a powerful enemy in Europe. It finds us striking devastating blows in the Pacific. We are preparing to strike them later in overwhelming force."

"Before the battle against Japan is won, we shall have other men to honor—men whose deeds, like those we celebrate today, will have brought closer our inevitable victory."

Lindsey is the 100th infantryman to receive the nation's highest award for valor in battle and the President, in making the presentation personally before a joint session of Congress set a precedent for such ceremonies.

Through him (Lindsey) we pay a grateful nation's tribute to the courage of all our fighting men," the President said.

The history of this war is filled with countless acts of valor by our soldiers and sailors and marines under fire.

The President pointed out that no officer ordered Lindsey, when wounded, to engage eight Germans in hand-to-hand combat.

"These decisions came from his own heart," the President asserted. "They were a flash of the nobility which we like to think is a part of every American. They were the unselfish valor which can triumph over terrible odds. They were the very essence of victory."

Since the war started, he said. (Continued on page six)

General Killed By Jap Sniper

Manila, May 21 (AP)—Brig. Gen. James L. Dalton, 35, one of the youngest generals in the army, was killed by a Japanese sniper near Balaiton Pass on northern Luzon last night, Gen. Douglas MacArthur said today.

Dalton, whom MacArthur referred to as "distinguished and intrepid," was killed May 18. MacArthur announced the young officer's death with "great sorrow."

Dalton, whose widow and two daughters live in Kennepunkport, Me., was assistant 25th division commander. His body was buried yesterday in the Santa Barbara army cemetery near Binloanan, 100 miles north of Manila.

Dalton commander the 161st regiment, formerly part of the Washington State National Guard, through the Guadalcanal and New Georgia campaigns, in the Solomons, and on Luzon in the battle of San Manuel where the main Japanese tank strength was smashed.

He was killed while inspecting a front line ravine which formerly sheltered the enemy command on that front.

Dalton was the second general to be killed on the front lines of Luzon, principal island of the Philippines. Maj. Gen. Edwin D. Patrick, commander of the sixth division, was killed March 15.

The WAR TODAY AN ANALYSIS OF THE NEWS

By DEWITT MACKENZIE (AP Foreign News Analyst)

The unit of the big three is likely to get a sharp and revealing test in the explosive situation created by Yugoslavia's territorial claims against Italy and Austria—and the Anglo-American order to their diplomatic representatives and nationals in Yugoslavia to prepare for possible evacuation indicates a showdown is near.

This crisis revolves about dynamic Marshal Tito, Yugoslavia's Red politico-military chief, and the position in a nutshell is this: Tito is claiming Italian territory around Trieste and Gorizia, and east of the Isonzo river. He also claims Austrian territory in the Allach-Kleg-enfurt zone. His troops occupied these areas.

Freight Rate Ruling Will Benefit South

Heroic Chaplain Broughton Hails Decision as Greatest Victory Since Reconstruction Days

Lt. Comdr. Joseph O'Callahan of Boston, Navy chaplain aboard the U. S. S. Franklin, smiles happily in New York as he recounts his experiences aboard the aircraft carrier which survived a terrific Jap bombing attack off the Japanese coast. He risked his own life many times in fighting fire and ammunition explosions that swept the carrier. (AP Wirephoto).

Raleigh, May 21 (AP)—Long an advocate of freight rate equalization in the south, former Governor J. M. Broughton declared that the action of the Interstate Commerce Commission Saturday had "lifted the barrier to the industrial and agricultural re-development of the south."

Broughton was chairman of the freight rate committee of the southern governors' conference when the south's rate case was prepared and submitted to the ICC.

His statement following the announcement of the ICC ruling declared:

"This is probably the greatest victory won by the south since the days of reconstruction. It is the culmination of a long-felt and established principle that freight rate discrimination is a barrier to industrial development and diversification of economy."

"It also vindicates our position that the case should be brought and pursued through proper tribunals. The southern governors' conference never was a party to the Georgia case in the supreme court."

By J. FRANK TRAGLE Washington, May 21 (AP)—The nation's railroad freight bill is being refigured.

In a move widely significant to the south and west, the Interstate Commerce Commission:

1. Ordered basic freight rates of those sections—except for the far west—equalized with eastern rail charges.

2. Directed that the nation's carriers simplify rate-making by setting up a uniform system of freight classification for the entire nation.

The long-awaited order, universally conceded to be the most important in the commission's 58-year history, was released late Saturday without an advance hint.

"The decision, however, was quickly acclaimed by southern leaders. Gov. Ellis Arnall of Georgia declared: "America may well take notice—the south is on its way."

Arnall added that the ICC ruling will not deter Georgia from pressing its supreme court suit against a majority of railroads on charges of conspiring against the south in establishing railroad freight rates.

Elmer R. Olive, vice president in charge of operations for the southern railway, said he expected a study committee to begin meetings in about a week to determine what will be required by the order.

The ruling covered these general categories:

1. A nationwide uniform classification. (Continued on Page Six)

Scrap Paper Drive Here Next Sunday

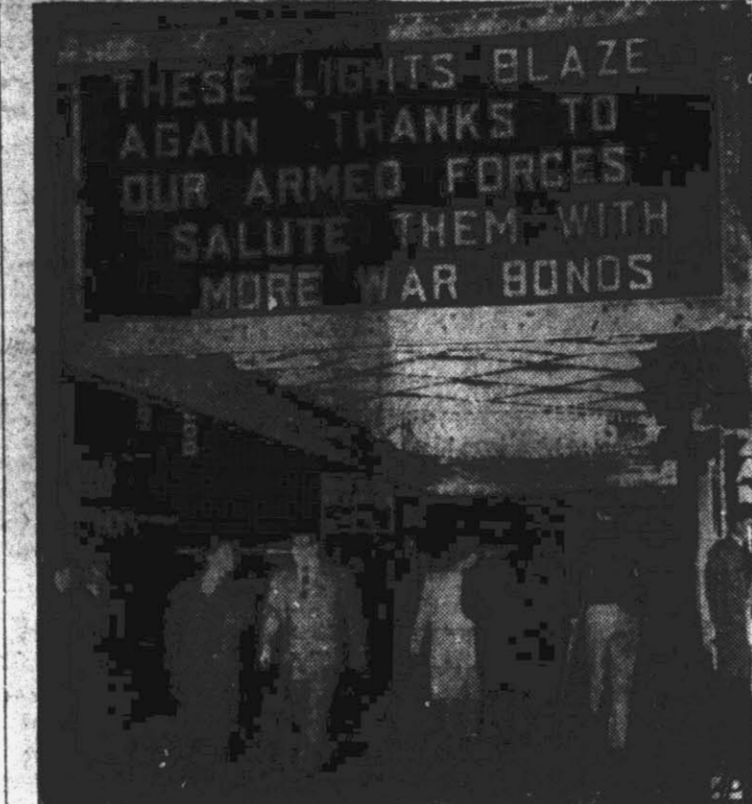

Greenville's Junior Chamber of Commerce will hold its monthly house to house scrap paper drive this coming Sunday afternoon.

The Jaceys, as usual, will split up into groups, and will use trucks furnished by local patriotic citizens to collect the paper.

The collection will begin at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Chairman Barrett urged today that all paper be securely tied or held down by a weight so that it would not blow about.

All sorts of paper is wanted but emphasis was placed on carboard and magazines again by Chairman Barrett.

Agreement Reached On Regional Defense Plan

Final Agreement On Issue Puts Security Conference Past The Biggest Stumbling Block

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER San Francisco, May 21 (AP)—Agreement among the big-five and Latin American nations on plans for regional self defense systems within a world organization today put the United Nations conference safely past its biggest stumbling block.

Russian acceptance of the regional plan with only minor changes in wording was followed by signs that a smooth and early solution of Soviet-American differences over a system of international trusteeships is close at hand.

Furthermore, satisfaction of the Latin American republics that the regional defense system in this hemisphere will be preserved melted their opposition to decisive action on other major conference issues, mainly, a veto-voting system for the big powers in the proposed world security council.

As the fourth full week of the conference opened, many United Nations leaders were hopeful that the job of charting the new international league could be finished June 2. Proposals for speeding up the work to meet that deadline were ready for a steering committee session today.

American military authorities were understood to feel that the security arrangements already on or in the making offer full protection to the United States regardless of how the projected league works out.

Much of the maneuvering to date has been due to the efforts of all the nations, but particularly the big powers, to set up as many safeguards as they can for their own future protection.

United States policy, on strictly security questions, is concerned with three main objectives:

1. To chart the world organization in such a way as to minimize war-breeding friction among the big powers and provide protections against aggression wherever it may occur in the future.

2. To preserve the inter-American defense system as a means to western hemisphere security and unity against attack from within or without. United States officials say the regional defense plan now agreed on provides for this.

3. To prepare the way for development of American land, sea and air bases on Pacific islands wrested from Japan. The problem here arises in connection with international trusteeships. The United States has put forward a plan which would allow the security council to approve—but not prevent—the development of such bases.

Russia proposed to alter this plan in such a way that the council itself would designate the bases to be developed. Under the veto voting formula this would mean that any one of the big powers could block the schedule set by the union.

Now, however, it is expected that Russia may not insist on its proposal and that the United States idea will prevail.

To Print Series On Veterans' Benefits

For the benefit and information of the civilian citizens of Pitt county, the Daily Reflector, in cooperation with several state, county and local agencies, intends to publish a regular series of articles concerning the rights, benefits and assured advantages which are to be offered or made available to the returning veterans of World War II. Since a great many of these advantages will effect the general public, from the standpoint of the employer as well as the family, these short articles will cover the picture to the fullest extent that is possible at this time.

We urge you, not only as patriotic Americans, but also as citizens who will be interested and directly affected, to follow this series of articles as closely as possible so that you will have the information needed at whatever time in the future a question arises concerning your returning sons and daughters.

On Poppy Day the women of the auxiliary will offer poppies to everyone in Greenville. There is no fixed price for a poppy—whatever is given is welcome. The little boy's pennies and the business man's dollar are equally acceptable. It is hoped that every citizen will be wearing the crimson badge by nightfall of May 26.

Every cent that is given for a poppy goes toward the rehabilitation of disabled fighting men and to the aid of the children of the dead and disabled. These victims of war's disaster will be glad to see the poppies blooming on lapels again this year.

Which Generals Will Get Chance At Japs?

By GRAHAM HOVEY Washington, May 21 (AP)—Will future war dispatches from the Pacific carry the names of Mark W. Clark or pistol-packer George S. Patton? How about British Field Marshals Alexander and Montgomery? French General Juin?

Undersecretary of War Patterson, returning from a tour of the European and Pacific theaters last week, said virtually every American commander in Europe wanted to go to the Pacific to fight the Japanese but gave no indication what generals would be selected there.

There are a few straws in the wind, however.

For example: Among ground force commanders in Europe, it seems a good bet that Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch, slim, quiet, intense leader of the U. S. Seventh Army soon will be fighting the Japs again.

That's right, again, "Sandy" Patch commanded the Army forces which finished the job the Marines started on Guadalcanal nearly three years ago.

Military men have high praise for the way he handled the Seventh Army all the way from the French Riviera beaches to Munich and beyond. That record and his Guadalcanal job seem certain to merit "Sandy" another crack at the Japs.

In somewhat the same category on the air force side is Lt. Gen. James H. Doolittle who already has been separated from the European command. "Jimmy" thrilled the Allied world by leading the famous B-25 raid on Tokyo April 18, 1942. Since that time he has commanded the U. S. 12th Air Force and the Allied Strategic Air Force in the Mediterranean theater, and the U. S. Eighth Air Force during the final stages of the war against Germany.

Doolittle thus has a tremendous background of planning and executing the large scale heavy bomber raids against strategic targets which are sure to play such a great part in bringing Japan to her knees.

But if Doolittle goes to the Pacific, will his boss go along, too? General Carl A. Spaatz was director of all strategic bombing operations against Germany and occupied Europe.

It is a good bet that Spaatz will show up in the Pacific—and soon.

Another commander in Europe who previously fought the Japs is British Field Marshal Sir Harold Alexander. The trim dapper Alexander directed a skillful withdrawal of outnumbered, ill-equipped British forces from Burma in 1942.

Then he directed the campaign which sent Field Marshal Sir Bernard Montgomery's Eighth Army rolling across the desert from Egypt to Tunisia in pursuit of Rommel's beaten Afrika Korps.

Alexander commanded the Allied armies in Italy through the liberation of Rome.

Desperate Okinawa Battle Entering Decisive Stage

Anthracite Miners Back On The Job

Lewis Orders Men Back To Work After New Wage Agreement Is Reached

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., May 21 (AP)—Most of Pennsylvania's 72,000 hard coal miners, on the basis of early reports, returned to work today.

All anthracite mines in district seven, United Mine Workers, around Hazleton, resumed work and all mines checked in district one around Wilkes-Barre were reported in operation. District one employs 38,000 miners, district seven 15,000.

Daily production of the anthracite mines is approximately 190,000 tons, shut off since May 1 when the miners' union contract expired.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine workers, ordered the workers to return, officers of local unions being notified by telegram.

Operators and UMW representatives reached a contract agreement late Saturday to raise the miners' pay $1.37 a day. Federal agencies will review the contract in the light of the wage stabilization policy, and the OPA will decide on awarding price increases on coal to cover added costs.

Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the UMW, said details of the new contract probably will not be announced until it goes before the board.

Telegrams to officers of local unions explained that the wage boost was distributed among "travel" time, increased vacation payments, premium rates on the second and third shifts, punitive overtime after seven hours a day and 35 hours a week with proper and adequate coverage for every employee in the industry."

The miners have been under government seizure since May 9 but the miners would need no orders to return to work until a contract agreement was reached. Production was cut by an estimated 3,500,000 to 4,000,000 tons of coal.

In the Pittsville, Pa., area, many independent coal miners returned to work yesterday, 24 hours ahead of the schedule set by the union.

Truckers who supply coal to Philadelphia consumers direct from the miners also returned to work and were scheduled to be on the road by the time general mining operations started today.

Next Saturday Is "Poppy Day" Here

Once again on Poppy Day, May 26, the members of the American Legion auxiliary will dedicate their best efforts to the distribution of memorial poppies to the citizens of Greenville, the Poppy Day chairman announced. It is one of the ways in which they pay tribute to and keep faith with those who died in the nation's service.

Mrs. Dick Bundy is chairman.

On Poppy Day the women of the auxiliary will offer poppies to everyone in Greenville. There is no fixed price for a poppy—whatever is given is welcome. The little boy's pennies and the business man's dollar are equally acceptable. It is hoped that every citizen will be wearing the crimson badge by nightfall of May 26.

Discharges For Men Over Forty

Washington, May 21 (AP)—The army today fixed at 40 years the age at which enlisted men may apply for discharge.

The army only last month had lowered the discharge age to 42 years. An estimated 30,000 enlisted men in the army are in the 40 and 41-year age groups.

At the same time, the War Department announced that WACs 40 years of age or over who have served the required period on active duty, will be eligible for discharge. It estimated that 8,000 enlisted WACs will be eligible under this provision.

The new order provided that in the case of men 40 or 41 years of age, commanders will be permitted to retain for not more than 90 days any man for whom a replacement is not available at the time he requests discharge.

The War Department said that "when the military situation permits" a further reduction in the age limit will be made.

He Headed A Plot

Lt. Col. Otto Skorzeny (above), 35-year-old Austrian hatchet man for Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler, has been disclosed as the leader of a plot to assassinate Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, the Allied supreme commander, last winter. The plot was disclosed with the capture of Skorzeny by the U. S. 7th army. (AP Wirephoto).

James Paulos, commander of a company which seized one ridge overlooking the ancient capital of Ryukyuan monarchs, told Associated Press Correspondent Vern Haugland his men had been subjected to heavy mortar fire all the way up the ridge.

Meantime, the 77th Infantry Division advanced doggedly to within 900 yards of Shuri on the northeast, throwing back three counterattacks, and elements of the 96th Infantry Division moved within 1,600 yards of the walled, moated city on the east.

The Sixth Marine Division sent elements eastward toward Shuri from its positions in suburbs of Naha, present capital of Okinawa.

Despite continued fierce Japanese resistance, Maj. Gen. John R. Hodge said there "was some indication that the Japanese are disintegrating their general fighting unit."

Hodge told newsmen the enemy was firing 1,000 heavy artillery and mortar shells a night on formerly.

Chinese Begin New Offensive

Chungking, May 21 (AP)—Chinese troops in a sudden offensive in Kwankin province have recaptured Hochih, important Japanese bastion on the Kwankin-Kweichow railroad, 95 miles west of the rail junction city of Luechow, the Chinese high command announced today.

On the east China coast, Chinese troops hammering eastward from the captured city of Foochow—possible American port—have occupied Mamoi, eight miles distant, and other Chinese reached the vicinity of Lienkong, 20 miles northeast of Foochow, the high command said. The coastal successes were scored in yesterday's fighting.

Hochim was one of the Japanese strong points screening the enemy corridor to Indo-China. Repeated Chinese attacks had failed to dislodge the strongly entrenched Japanese there during the winter campaign.

Chinese forces on the east coast also seized another port in the Foochow area, and rumors persisted that enemy troops were evacuating numerous China coast positions which they feared would be turned into death traps in the event of an American invasion.

Authorities are investigating.

Robbers Loot Scott Recapping Station

Robbers some time Friday night broke into Scott's Service Station recapping department and carried away seven large truck tires and 10 new passenger car tires and a large quantity of rubber composition used for recapping tires. The robbery was discovered Saturday morning.

The robbers took the tires from a car and let the machine down on the ground. Whoever stole the stuff required a long time to remove it and must have used a truck, Scott said.

Americans Register Slow Advance In Face Of Fanatical Resistance; General Says Japanese Disintegrating as Fighting Unit; Hill Overlooking Shuri Seized

By JAMES LINDLSEY Guam, May 21 (AP)—First Marine Division troops have driven to the crest of the last ridge before the Okinawa fortress city of Shuri in a tank-led drive through 800 yards of ferociously defended ravines and draws.

Elaborate Japanese hillside defenses were cleared by flame-throwing tanks and weary riflemen as they climbed the steep inclines until the tanks could go no farther and the battle turned into a hand to hand, cave-by-cave struggle.

Shuri, lying below the hilltop position of the Marines, was a pile of rubble from the incessant bombardment and bombing to which it has been subjected.

Today On The Home Front

By JAMES MARLOW

San Francisco, May 21 (AP)—The problem of international cooperation on education has been buried here under the more sensational developments of the United Nations conference.

But there are swarms of educators here, important ones, and they are fighting vigorously for a place for education in the new world organization.

Among the consultants to the United States delegation are representatives of the National Education Association, the American Council on Education, the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, and the American Association of University Women.

The conference is at least 10 ministers of education. And about 30 per cent of the delegates and observers hold some kind of academic post in their own countries.

What these people want, and what they're talking about, may not seem exciting. But it is far-reaching and important. Here's the story: Under the old League of Nations there was an institute of intel-tual cooperation in Paris.

It dealt largely with problems in the high altitudes of scholarship, not with the every-day problems of teaching and education.

What the educators here want is for the new league to set up an international office of education.

The American State Department has already drawn up a plan for such an office. And in the fall educators from all over the world will have a conference to establish this office.

American educators want it to have power to go into a country and make investigations—if necessary—into the kind of education a country is giving its children and young people.

The guests were Dorothy Lewis of Farmville, Bessie Council of Durham, Jesse Eary of Raleigh, Ellis Bedsworth of Marshallburg, and Sam Strickland of Rich Square, all senior members of the old council. They were invited to attend a council meeting. The president, Rosa Alice Lancaster, mentioned a few business matters and called on Eleanor Harrison to make the announcements. The main announcement was that they were going to have a party. The surprised seniors began smiling, for they knew for whom the party was being given. Caroline Andrews, Doris Bizzell, Rosa Alice Lancaster and Emily Roberson led the group in several very lively folk dances. Later they decided to do something not quite so strenuous. Amateur students got the highest number of votes.

They divided into groups of five. The seniors were first and presented what they called "The Prettiest Girl on Broadway." They sang "The Prettiest Girl I Ever Saw" and demonstrated the lines of the song. One group gave "The Death of Napoleon's Grandmother" Characters were the grandmother, Napoleon, his two sisters, and a messenger. Others presented an orchestra with which Gordon Davis as Frank Sinatra sang a solo. Of course the girls began to swoon, as most girls do, when "Frankie" sings. The last group gave extremely good characteristic imitations of the senior guests.

Frances Banks presented each of the seniors with an attractively wrapped gift. With each gift was a rhyme that proved to be distinctive of each of the guests. The refreshments, consisting of lime sherbet, cookies and roasted pecans, were served by Frances Lewis, Eleanor Both and Evelyn Grant.

The unpleasant thought that the evening had slipped away began to dawn on everyone. They joined hands in a friendship circle and sang "Jacob's Ladder." Afterwards Rosa Alice led them effectively and gratefully in prayer, and they started homeward regretting only that an evening of wonderful fellowship was at an end.—Reported.

MRS. FISHER ADDRESSES GARDEN CLUB MEETING

Garden Club members and their guests completely filled the auditorium in the New Classroom building at East Carolina Teachers College on Friday afternoon and listened with interest to Mrs. J. R. Fisher of Williamsburg, Va., guest speaker. Mrs. Fisher said she had been with Colonial Williamsburg, Inc., since its formal opening. First as a hostess and later when it was decided that flower arrangements in the exhibition buildings must be authentic Eighteenth Century arrangements she was asked to direct that work. She told of the amount of study and research necessary to get an idea of the kinds of flowers to use and how to arrange them. She has her own cutting gardens where she directs the growing of flowers as well as cutting and arranging them. After describing briefly her work, Mrs. Fisher showed slides of many of the gardens, the cutting and also the formal gardens, some of the buildings and many arrangements made by her for different occasions at Williamsburg.

Her arrangements covered a wide variety of materials and were given under three different classifications: fresh cut flowers, dried flowers and leaves and evergreens and fruits. As she showed the slides, the colors of which were beautiful, she told many interesting details about the arrangements, how she dried the leaves and flowers, what she did to the fruits when she cut the flowers and other bits of information that were helpful to members of her audience and would guide them in making arrangements for themselves.

Mrs. Fisher was introduced by Mrs. J. H. B. Moore, chairman of the Garden Club. After Mrs. Fisher's talk, Mrs. Moore told briefly about the annual convention of the State Garden Club which she attended in New Bern the first week in May. She stated that the chief project of the State Garden Club for the past year had been the restoration of Tryon's Palace in New Bern. With several substantial gifts and the aid of the building General Assembly the restoration of the palace is now assured. Mr. William Graves Perry, architect of Boston, Mass., has been employed to direct the restoration. Mr. Perry directed the restoration of Colonial Williamsburg. He was the featured speaker for the convention.

After the program the club members and their guests were invited to see the annual students' art exhibit which was on display in the foyer and halls of the building. Misses Kate Lewis and Jean Lane, art instructors, were present to guide the visitors about and answer any questions concerning art work which was greatly admired.

In the lovely drawing and dining rooms the hostesses, Mesdames R. M. Garrett, J. Key Brown, J. Vance Perkins, N. T. Ennett, S. T. White, E. W. Harvey and W. L. Wooten served punch. The many beautiful flower arrangements made by the hostesses and placed in these rooms received much favorable comment and added to the pleasure and enjoyment of all.

The club was delighted to have as visitors for the afternoon Mrs. J. M. Tyler of Kinston and her sister, Mrs. Tyler recently spent the day with the local club and gave instructions and demonstrations in flower arrangements.

The Garden Club program committee, Mesdames J. T. Little, S. M. Crisp and R. C. Rankin, have been greatly aided in their work this year by the cooperation of Miss Katherine Holtzclaw and the Home Economics Department of the college in allowing the use of the auditorium for illustrated programs and the dining room and equipment for social purposes. The entire club extends its thanks.—Reported.

Capture of Cities The word "General" on the burgomeister's notebook caught the eye of Pvt. Hans M. Matten of South Elgin, Ill., and as a result the 40th Infantry regiment caught a German brigadier general, a lieutenant general, a major and 12 other officers. Matten had arrived at Brem, Germany and as he issued instructions to the burgomeister on curfew and other laws, he noticed the word "General" on a list, and picked it up. He saw that it was a list of high ranking officers. He questioned the burgomeister and learned that the staff of officers was in a group of houses three kilometers away.

The doughboy relayed his information to headquarters and two jeeps raced to the scene. There was no resistance. The officers surrendered.

CONCERNING BOOKS

The Sheppard Memorial Library announces the addition of the following books to its collection:

Yellow Magic, by John D. Ratcliff. Dramatic story of the precious bio-chemical substance that has saved the lives of millions—its accidental discovery, the painstaking work of extracting the first minute grams of penicillin, clinic trials, the heroic efforts to get the magic yellow powder into mass production.

This Man From Lebanon, by Barbara Young. An interpretation of the Lebanese-American poet and painter, author of The Prophet. The author is Gibran's literary executor.

The Ballad and the Source, by Rosamond Lehmann. A psychological novel, written with finesse and skillful detail, in which the character of a beautiful woman is revealed bit by bit.

Rolling Stone, by Fred Stone. Autobiography of the famous American dancer and comedian. His story begins with his early efforts to learn tightrope walking and continues through his career in vaudeville, musical comedy, movies and the stage. Broader in scope than most theatrical memoirs because of his breadth of interests outside the theatre.

Some of These Days, by Sophie Tucker. Autobiography of the famous Jewish-American actress-singer. More detail on the actual work of making a success in the show business than in the Stone book.

G. I. Joe, by David Berger. Army life as pictured in cartoons which have appeared in Yank and Stars and Stripes.

At His Side, by George G. Korson. The work of the American Red Cross with the U. S. armed forces in all theaters of war from Dec. 7, 1941, to mid-1944. Much of it is told through individual cases and experiences in operating service clubs and rest homes, and in ministering to personal needs of the sick and wounded.

Bolts of Melody, by Emily Dickinson. Several hundred hitherto unpublished poems which were in the possession of Emily Dickinson's first editor who, after long bickering with the Dickinson family kept them secret for more than forty years. This collection has been sorted and edited by the daughter of the first editor.

What To Do With Japan, by Wilfred Fleisher. A well-informed and experienced journalist in the Far East suggests a definite pattern to guide relations between Japan and the rest of the world into channels which would insure security for Asia and stability for the world.

Belle, Boyd, Confederate Spy, by Louise A. Sigaud. Historical account of the glamorous Virginian and rebel agent who carried messages to the Confederates about the Union army's movements during the American Civil War.

The Wide House, by Taylor Caldwell. The story concerns Stuart Coleman, who starts a department store in upstate New York in 1850. It centers around his business, the three women in his life and his children.

Christian Science Service. "Mortals and Immortals" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches and societies on Sunday, May 20.

The golden text was from Rom. 8:5. "They that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit the things of the Spirit."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon were the following from the Bible: "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently; Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever. For all flesh is as grass, and the glory of man as the flower of the grass. The grass withereth, the flower thereof falleth away; but the word of the Lord endureth for ever." (1 Peter 1:22-25).

The lesson-sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy. "The science of being reveals man and immortality as based on Spirit. Mortals must gravitate Godward, their affections and aims grow spiritual—they must near the broader interpretations of being, and gain some proper sense of the infinite in order that sin and mortality may be put off."

A SLIGHT CASE OF Theft

Chapter 31—Francine's white blouse and her very full, very short Kelly green skirt made her look like a young-stun in her teens. Her platinum blonde hair hung on her shoulders in a long page-boy bob that completed the picture of a little hepcat ready to finish anything Christopher might start. She was nothing for a man to bother with if he didn't want to be scratched!

Christopher had spent the early part of the evening getting a few facts concerning this brittle bit of femininity and her friends. He decided on the instant that casualness was in this case the better part of valor.

"Sit down, Miss Norman," he said pleasantly. "And keep your voice down—or people will say—"

"We're in love!" She mimicked his voice with a smirk which made Christopher want to spank her—hard. "All right, Big Boy. You asked for it." Francine started edging toward the bar. Then she stood still, her face a stiff mask under her rouge.

"I wouldn't start anything if I were you," Christopher sat down on the bench and his voice was not too interested. "I have something you lost in Tom Blair's apartment Tuesday evening. I'll give it back to you, if you will sit down and stop making a silly scene. Otherwise I'm going to give it to a man named Donohue. Know him?"

Without a word, Francine slid on to the bench, facing Christopher across the long narrow table. "Let's not kid around any more, Mr. Humbert," she said in a low voice. "Have you got my compact?"

Christopher held it out on the palm of his hand just beyond her reach. "I have your compact, and I very nearly have your exact time schedule for Tuesday evening, ending about 8:40." He observed evenly. He saw the fear in the girl's eyes as the color drained from her face.

"Now, if you're a good girl—you'll get this back, and I'm going to buy some champagne, just to show there's no hard feelings."

"All right. Maybe you're not such a bad guy, after all," Francine said slowly, relaxing in the far corner of the bench, but her eyes were still wary. "No harm in having a quickie my boy friend is late."

Christopher nodded. "There's nothing better than cold champagne on a hot night." He signaled the waiter, then added briskly, "Pete Rizzo might join us if he gets here in time."

Francine gave a little start of surprise. "Yes, know him?" she exclaimed. "I don't know that."

Christopher grinned at her. "Oh, lots of people know Pete—the fellow who never takes his hat off!" He spoke with the assurance of a man who knew the habits of the Club Boulevard intimately. Francine looked at him a moment in silence, then she said in a low, amused voice:

"You do get around, don't you, Big Boy?" Christopher had a quick suspicion she might be laughing at him, but the next instant her voice slipped back to its normal pitch. "And you're right about Pete. In all the time I've known him, I've never seen him with his hat off. We all kid about it."

The waiter brought the champagne and winked at Francine as Christopher asked him to serve it. He had brought the most expensive wine in the house—a game he'd worked with her before. Francine began to have a good time. This was something! Commissions like this weren't picked up very often these nights.

Time passed and as she talked Francine began to give Christopher an idea of how his trio worked in and out of the Club every night—Francine, Willie and Pete Rizzo. Willie, with a calculating eye watched the two from a distance and only once intruded. That was when she sauntered over to tell Francine that Pete was not coming in after all that evening.

Christopher raised his glass and smiled at her as Willie disappeared. "For my money that's good news," he ejaculated. "Here's to crime." "And how!" Francine answered with a happy little giggle. "Big Boy you don't know the half of it!"

For a second time that evening Christopher had a feeling Francine was getting a lot of amusement out of something he had just said. This time he did not let her jibe pass unnoticed.

"No?" He raised his eyebrows, then said slowly, "Well, we'll see! It won't be long now!"

"Oddly enough that cryptic remark had a distinctly sobering effect on his companion.

"Listen, Mr. Humbert," she shook her head as Christopher started to refill her glass once more. "I'm having a very swell time, but I have to go. I'm supposed to run the game over there until closing time. Now, a bargain is a bargain. When do I get my compact?" She jumped hurriedly to her feet.

"Tomorrow, without fail. Only you haven't told me how you ever came to select a Dalmation for a design for your vanity case. It's stunning but very unusual."

"Oh, that's my calico dog," Francine laughed. "I hear so much about these dogs all the time, I call them 'calico dogs' because they remind me of black and white calico—always have. My boy friend is crazy about them. He raises them."

"Breeds them?"

"He sure does. He's nuts about them. Just imagine. We're flying to New York tomorrow to get another dog. Dictator, his best dog died this week."

"That should rate a priority, all right!" Christopher muttered under his breath, but Francine did not hear him. Her one concern was just how she'd get through the rest of her night's work with all the champagne she had on board.

Chapter 32

"Give me your address. I'll send the compact to you by messenger tomorrow afternoon," Christopher promised.

"Better take my telephone number too," Francine giggled, scriawling it down on the paper he gave her. "Donohue's crazy if he thinks he can pin anything on me—just because I stay too long in some places—but don't tell him I said so." She was not very coherent but she was having a wonderful time.

Christopher did not wait until he got back to his own apartment. He telephoned Donohue from the nearest drug store. Donohue was asleep and decidedly peevish when he called him. He said so in no uncertain language.

"Lieutenant," Christopher's voice was excited. "There's a man—Pete Rizzo—at the Club Boulevard."

"Rizzo—my God! Is that why you called me? We're watching that guy."

"Well, you'll have to do more than watch him," Christopher flashed back, nettled at Donohue's reply. "He and Francine Norman are taking a four o'clock plane for New York tomorrow afternoon—and he's crazy about Dalmations."

"Hey, what's that?" The Lieutenant barked over the wires. "That's a country."

"Well, it happens to be a dog! We call 'em coach dogs. Rizzo breeds them—in case you're interested."

"Jeez. Can you tie that one!" There was nothing irritated or sleepy about the Lieutenant's voice now. Christopher waited a moment as there was a sudden silence at the other end of the line. Then to his surprise the Lieutenant spoke in a voice so respectful that at first he thought he was kidding him.

"Mr. Humbert, I'm much obliged to you. If you'll stay in your office tomorrow morning I promise you that before noon, I'll break this case. And by the way—have Mrs. Blair there too, please. It's very important that she should be in your office when I get there."

Panic swept over the man in the telephone booth.

"But Donohue, this man Rizzo may be the answer. Francine Norman is his stooge—so is that man Friday of his—Willie—it's a set up, I tell you. You don't want Mrs. Blair, you're kidding me."

"Not a damn bit. Don't do what I do—do what I say!"

The Lieutenant's voice crackled over the wire and then the line was dead. Donohue had hung up on him.

It was hard for Christopher to settle down in his office the next morning. He knew Donohue would crack down on the time limit he had set and that Brenda was practically helpless in establishing more of an alibi than she had already. It might take days to find the taxi driver who had taken her to the Club Tuesday evening. By making an issue of that one point Donohue might arrest her on suspicion with all the rest of the evidence he had piled up against her. Tom Blair must have died some time during the 45 minutes Brenda spent in that taxi.

Nervously he lighted one cigarette after another. As he went through the motions of clearing up his mail, Donohue telephoned him.

"Don't predicted last night, Mr. Humbert, I have broken this case. I spoke in his usual crisp official voice. "I am sending several men from our headquarters to your office at once. It is imperative that Mrs. Blair be there."

Christopher's head holding the receiver suddenly whitened at the knuckles.

"But Lieutenant," he protested trying to fight down a swift sense of danger. "Can't you let her skip this particular conference? The funeral services are this morning—"

"I know that. She can make it by 11:30. Cora Smith will see that she gets there. Of course you must be present."

A police matron as a bodyguard at the funeral Christopher groaned as he hung up the receiver. Donohue had no business to handle Brenda this way. Damn the fellow! He was going too far and Christopher seemed powerless to stop him. It was his insistence on Brenda's being in the office this morning that worried him the most. He felt Donohue was deliberately laying his plans for one of his sly, unpredictable traps that he would spring with no advance warning.

Perhaps he was even preparing to arrest Brenda that very morning. He rang for his secretary, "Miss Johnson," he said quickly. "Tell Bill Hanson I want him in this office by 11:30 without fail. Several Headquarters men from the police department are to be here and I may want his help in checking on the store angle in this robbery case. He knows the section so much better than I do."

"Very good, Mr. Humbert," she answered firmly. "I'll attend to it at once." As she started toward her own office he called after her: "See that more chairs are brought in."

"Very good, Mr. Humbert."

"Very good—very good—what's so damn good about anything," he muttered irritably. The whole thing was a mess. Men like Donohue should never be entrusted with important cases like this. If he arrested Brenda in his office this morning, her whole business career in the store would be ruined—He could just imagine the effect it would have on the men upstairs—

Strength FOR THE DAY

By EARL L. DOUGLAS

BUT DON'T LET IT WORRY YOU
Have you ever heard people say, "Our family is a funny family?"

Every family is a funny family. There is just as much difference between families as there is between individuals. Every family has something about it which causes certain of its members to regard it as peculiar and queer. Young people especially are inclined to maintain that the standards set up by their parents are unprecedented. No other parents in the community make such demands upon their children—at least, so the children say.

The Lord set us in families for the purpose of maturing us. We need the support of those round about us. We need their good cheer, their encouragement, their love. But one of the things which makes us grow strong is the discipline we get from living with people whose ideas do not always accord with ours.

We usually consider people queer because they differ from us. We might just as well get used to the fact that we live in a queer world. We will find thousands of people who hold ideas quite contradictory to ours. We had better get ready in the home to live amicably with people unlike ourselves. We only waste time quarreling about things we can never change.

And then, who ever told us that we are always right? Who has given us the privilege of sitting in judgment over others?

AMERICA IN WARTIME

By JACK STINNETT

By JACKSON S. ELLIOTT
(Substituting for Jack Stinnett)

Washington—Experiments of an Ohio research firm may turn out a cascade of "ten-egg" sapphires and blue, yellow or pink rubies—at about a dollar a carat.

At the same time, the experiments may result in continuing in the United States an industry which was war-born to supplant the shattered gem sources of Europe.

The Battelle Memorial Institute of Columbus, Ohio, under a six-month contract with the Office of Production Resources and Development of the War Production Board, will tinker with synthetic gems, concocted of powder and flame.

"Boules," or the original masses from which a gem or gems may be fashioned, have been produced thus far to a size of 300 to 400 carats, or about three-quarters of an inch diameter with a length of about two inches.

Such artificial gems defy detection, except under the expert eye of the jeweler; even then a microscope may be needed. As for beauty, clarity, cut—they surpass the mined gem because they are flawless. Preference of miltary for either the real or the synthetic will be determined by whether she loves the cost or loves the look.

For synthetic sapphires and rubies, according to the Union Carbide and Carbon Corp., one of the leading manufacturers of the stones, aluminum oxide is purified and pigment added for color.

The aluminum oxide or "alumina" is fed into an oxy-acetylene flame and the fused material is deposited on a fireclay pedestal in the form of a carrot-shaped mass, the boule.

Or the gem material may be developed in the shape of a rod, from which many individual stones can be sliced.

Before the war, the synthetic gem trade was centered in Switzerland. There was a demand for industrial jewels to be used as bearings on precision instruments, such as watches. Families would augment their meagre income by sitting through the long winter days, and nights cutting and polishing the rough stones.

American labor could not compete. When the war struck, American industry was caught with scarcely enough industrial jewels to complete its precision instruments, of which there were thousands.

So the industry was reborn in the United States under the expert guidance of two European workmen who were brought over to teach the secrets of the trade. Advances were made in the technique and all sorts of uses were found for the products of the fire-formed gems—for instance, plug gauges, hole gauges furnace nozzles, and many others.

Most of the gems now are going into bearings and other war uses, but with the war-end diminishing the factory need, there may be opportunity to develop in the United States an industry the possibilities of which have barely been uncovered.

This is the question into which the Battelle Institute is prying. It may revolutionize the jewel industry and re-dress American women.

The War Today ...

That Tito had agreed to withdraw from Austrian territory.

That's the way things stand at this writing—a tense and dangerous situation. Small wonder that the British press is urging an early meeting of President Truman, Marshal Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill to iron out this and other pressing imbroglios.

Marshal Tito long has stood high with Moscow. His leadership in Yugoslavia has been so efficient and strong that Britain and America also have given him moral and material support in this fight against the Axis forces. There never has been any question but that he was orienting his program with his eyes on Russia.

The big question now is what attitude Moscow will take towards Tito's stand regarding the Italian and Austrian territory. Logic frequently doesn't work in situations like this where passions run high, but the logical outcome would be for Tito to withdraw his troops, since this wouldn't prejudice his claims at the peace table. Therefore one would expect the Soviet government to agree with its Anglo-American Allies.

In considering the implications of this dispute, it's important to note that Yugoslavia falls within Russia's new sphere of influence in the Balkan peninsula. This also is Britain's pre-war zone of influence.

Yugoslavia is swinging hard towards the "left" and may abolish her monarchy. In any event she bids fair to become another of the nations which, like Poland, will become part of the security barrier which Russia is creating in eastern Europe and the Balkans.

educators could exchange information and ideas, thus benefitting by the improvements and advances of one another.

The office also might be a clearing house for such things as aid to scholars or financial help for students going into foreign countries to study.

Which Generals ...
The British could choose a supreme commander for the war against Japan, they unquestionably would name Gen. Dwight D. "Ike" Eisenhower, for whom they have a greater affection than any other American with the exception of the late President Roosevelt.

Chances are, however, that Eisenhower will be kept busy at his present job with the Allied Control Commission in Germany.

More likely to show up in the Pacific are Generals Omar Bradley, the mild-mannered Missourian, whose European command included the U. S. First, Third and Ninth Armies; Mark Wayne Clark, who lost his pants on a pre-invasion mission for Eisenhower in North Africa, and later liberated Rome; and Jacob L. Devers, Sixth Army group commander and one-time leader of the armored force.

When you get down to the Army commander level, most people immediately will ask: "What about Patton?"

Armored force officers long have anticipated major tank battles on the flat plains of China. They point to General Joseph W. Stilwell's prediction that the Allies will have to destroy the bulk of the Japanese army in China. Hence, they say it will not be long until Sherman and Pershing tanks will be lumbering up the Yangtze Valley.

If that develops, you probably will be reading once again about "Old Blood and Guts," who picked up where the Germans left off in "blitz" warfare.

Tank campaigns also would be up Jake Devers' alley. Another name likely to show up in such a situation is Maj. Gen. Ernest N. Harmon, "Old Gravel Voice," to whom the Germans surrendered in Tunisia.

Four-Star General Courtney H. Hodges and Lt. Gen. William H. Simpson, who conducted such outstanding campaigns in Europe with the U. S. First and Ninth Armies, respectively, also are Pacific possibilities.

And so is Lt. Gen. Lucian K. Truscott, who led the 6th U. S. Corps in the Riviera invasion, then returned to Italy to lead the U. S. Fifth Army to its final victory.

Tito's Forces ...
Eighth Army entered, and at Klagenfurt seized the local newspaper plant, before a guard could be placed over it.

An Allied military government had been placed in operation throughout the zone of Austria occupied by the British despite the Yugoslav action.

One high Allied officer expressed optimism that an agreement would be reached with Tito on Italy as well.

The Yugoslav-controlled newspaper II Nostro Avvenire published the text of Marshal Alexander's message to his troops, giving Trieste citizens and Marshal Tito's troops here what probably was their first news of the gravity of the situation.

"The maintenance of peace is the task of everybody," said the editorial.

"Now less than ever must we yield to the intrigues of our enemies who always have tried in vain to spread discord among the Allies.

"Tito's Yugoslavia does not wish—now that the people have reached the peace they longed for so long to be the cause of perturbation, that she must have the right to validate her dignity and respect and while one can discuss everything and find a pacific solution to satisfy various parties there can be no negotiation on rights and dignity."

Partisan patrols meanwhile still moved through the streets of the city and there was no indication of any relinquishing of Yugoslav military administration of the city.

Il Nostro Avvenire declared Yugoslavia's reply had been "firm and dignified" and did not withdraw from the previous position that the occupation and administration of Trieste was proper and "in line with the practice followed everywhere by the Soviet Union and the Anglo-Americans."

It declared Yugoslavia was willing to leave the ultimate disposition of Trieste and surrounding areas to a peace conference.

There was no explanation of previous declarations that Trieste, Istria and part of Carinthia and Styria in Austria had become part of a "greater Yugoslavia," nor of the substitution of Yugoslav names for the previous Italian names of villages east of the Isonzo.

The Allied military government, headed by Lt. Col. Joseph Schultz of Louisville, Ky., remained outside the city. There was little prospect of Allied food being sent in so long as the Yugoslav administration continued.

Bread stores and vegetable markets were open during morning hours in an attempt to alleviate the situation, but authorities were aghast unless some way was found to move in food stocks.

Yugoslav overtures for permission to bring food from the Padua area seemed doomed to fail, since thousands of displaced persons, refugees and prisoners are streaming toward Italy, making it likely that there would be no surplus.

Was Double For Gen. Eisenhower

By GEORGE TUCKER
Paris, May 21 - (AP) - A Chicago lieutenant colonel was used as a double for Gen. Eisenhower last December after the Germans voiced threats against the supreme commander's life. It was disclosed today.

Supreme headquarters said, however, that the plot was a hoax - a story the Germans spread to help their own propaganda.

The double Lt. Col. Baldwin B. Smith was placed in Eisenhower's four-star automobile on his journey between St. Germain and Versailles.

Smith volunteered for the role of decoy when the army claimed an iron-tight cordon on the Paris area and set in the most elaborate manning of the war to prevent possible destruction of supreme allied headquarters and assassination of the commanding general.

Lt. Col. Otto Skorzeny, aide to Gestapo chief Heinrich Himmler, and reported to be leader of the picked assassins directed to kill Eisenhower was captured by the U. S. 7th Army last Thursday. Censors then permitted release of the plot story, one of the top military secrets of the European theater.

Smith, the Eisenhower double is now commander of the 3rd Battalion, 756th Infantry, in Germany.

FIGHT LOOMS ON CONTROLS

OPA Facing Bitter Congressional Struggle

By WILLIAM T. PEACOCK
Washington, May 21 — (AP) — A bitter congressional struggle is shaping up over the future of price control.

For the last three months OPA has been a storm center of controversy over meat prices and distribution. But while this held public attention a deeper, more fundamental issue has been developing.

Soon to reach the Senate floor, this, in essence, is the question of when and how price controls are to be relaxed. The end of the European war has pushed it to the forefront.

One group, led by Senator Taft (R-Ohio), holds that a start must be made soon on easing price restrictions, else the nation's economy will be strangled.

Taft contends that the groundwork for a major depression will be laid if price ceilings are held narrow and regulations kept tight in the reconversion period. He says it will deter the creation of new businesses and the expansion of existing ones with consequent unemployment as war plants are shut down.

On the other side—the administration viewpoint—is the argument that inflation dangers still are great and any easing of controls would be dangerous.

Senator Ellender (D-La.) who has that view, likens it to a Mississippi River flood. "Price control is a pretty flimsy levee holding back a great big flood. You bore a few holes in it and pretty soon your levee will be gone."

North Carolina Court Is Upheld

Washington, May 21—(AP)—The Supreme Court today upheld a North Carolina Supreme Court finding that a Nevada six-week divorce was invalid because a bona-fide residence was not established there.

Justice Frankfurter delivered the court's 6-3 opinion. Justice Black wrote a dissent in which Justices Douglas and Rutledge concurred.

The court in another decision upheld Pennsylvania courts in a similar finding that a Nevada six-week divorce was "legally insufficient."

Raleigh, May 21—(AP)—Attorney General Harry McMullan said today action of the U. S. Supreme court in upholding the North Carolina Supreme court in invalidating a Nevada six-week divorce would have to serve prison sentences.

The case involved Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Williams of Pineola, in Avery county. They were convicted in Caldwell county, where they formerly lived. Superior Court Judge Sam J. Ervin, Jr. sentenced the man to one to three years imprisonment, and the woman to eight to 24 months.

Williams is a merchant. Execution of the sentences, if no legal stay is granted, will begin after a certified copy of the U. S. Supreme Court's decision is received by the court in Caldwell county.

Impressive Sermon Methodist Church

By WYATT BROWN
"The word is true from the beginning" from the 169th verse of the 119th Psalm was the text chosen by Rev. Robert W. Bradshaw in his sermon yesterday morning at Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church.

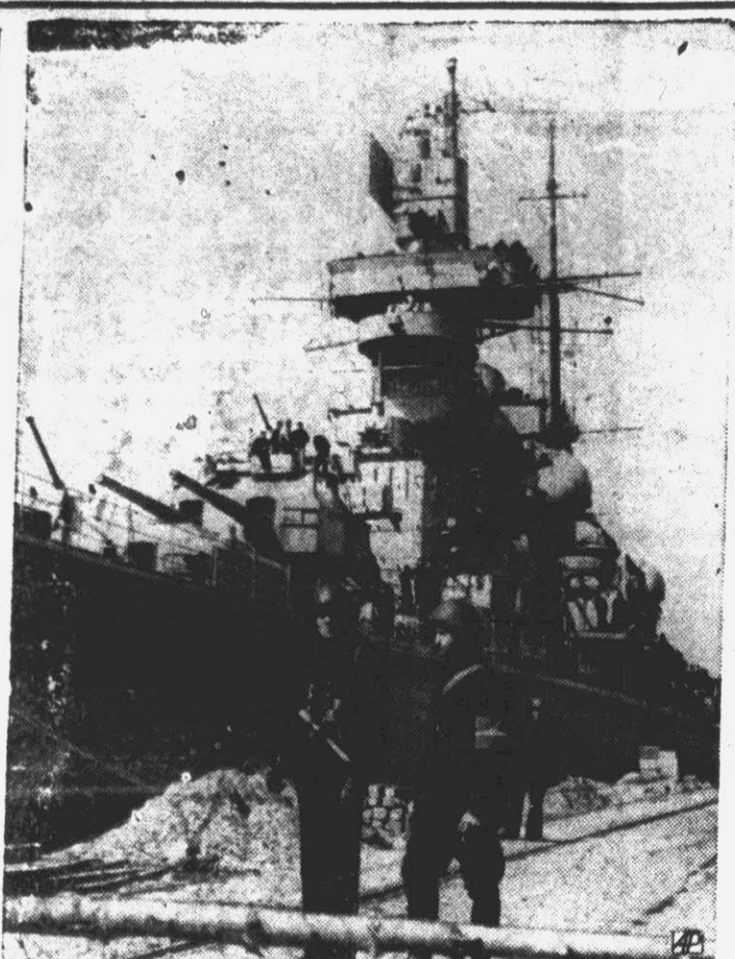

"Our labor, hope and faith are in vain unless that simple statement is true," declared Mr. Bradshaw in commenting upon the text.

"In the beginning God" quoted the minister from the first four words in the Bible. "If we accept the first four words, we can go on and benefit and enjoy the rest. If not, the rest is of no consequence."

There are four simple things about this God—not all we need to know about this God, but they are the heart of what we need to know," Mr. Bradshaw said. Then he took up each of the following four attributes: God creates, operates, judges and loves.

"Man may use and manufacture but only God creates. Would that as individuals, families and nations, we could understand that God operates in our minds when we open ourselves in that direction. It is hard to really believe in our easy living day that our God of love will judge when the judgment stings comes. You will one day stand before that bar of judgment. There is nothing God without that would add to our pleasures and saving—even to his only begotten son," he said in conclusion.

Freezer Plant Is Started In Bethel

By CHESTER WALSH
The Harris Freezer Locker Service, with 300 storage lockers for meat, vegetables and fruit, has been opened in Bethel in a modern and sanitary building. The equipment was supplied by the York Refrigerating Company of Pennsylvania. In addition to the lockers (rented to individuals and firms by the year) the freezer plant has a quick freezing room in which the temperature averages 20 degrees below zero.

Food freezes in from four to six hours and then is transferred to lockers with owners' names stamped on the wrapped packages. Another storage room provides for storing dressed beef and hogs and another room provides for storing and curing and salting pork. The plant's capacity for this meat is 85,000 pounds every five or six weeks.

The large building housing the freezer plant is near the railroad. It was built on definite plans for refrigeration. Electric motors run the refrigerating machinery. Plans are being made to process meat, vegetables and fruit for individuals.

Rev. J. P. Harris and Mrs. Harris own the plant. They conceived the idea about a year ago and made extensive investigation. The Bethel Rotary Club endorsed the project after seeing a motion picture of a freezer plant. Mr. and Mrs. Harris invite the public to visit the plant and see for themselves how food can be saved.

Japanese survivors of Okinawa's original garrison of 80,000 or more troops yielded, hand by hand, only in death.

Fleet Adm. Chester W. Nimitz reported 48,103 Japanese had been killed on Okinawa through Thursday. He gave no prisoner figures. U. S. casualties were announced as 30,526 Army, Navy and Marine, including pre-invasion fleet carrier attacks on the Ryukyus and Japan. Yanks were killing Japanese at the rate of 11 to one American lost in ground fighting. Nimitz's figures were 4,332 soldiers and marines killed and missing; 18,258 wounded. Added to these were 3,978 killed and missing naval personnel; 3,958 wounded.

Paulcs, from Tooele, Utah, said Shuri had been reduced to rubble and debris. All that stands is the wall of an Oriental palace which rises above the city.

Shuri, second largest city on Okinawa, is not expected to fall easily, however. Japanese still command ridges and hills from which they can pour artillery and mortar fire into it. One is Sugar Loaf Hill. Sixth Division Marines captured its crest four times, lost it as many, and finally occupied the top the fifth time they seized it. Nipponese, however, remained entrenched in the southern slopes, from where their guns commanded both Naha and Shuri. These guns must be silenced before either Shuri or Naha will be tenable for Yanks.

Because of bad weather, there was little enemy aerial activity.

Thunderbolts of the Army's 318th Fighter Group, veterans of the Marianas and Iwo Jima campaigns, attacked targets in the northern Ryukyus and Navy bombers ranged to Korea, sinking one medium and two small freighters. They damaged a number of landing crafts.

Navy bombers and Army Liberators attacked the Kuriles.

Still mopping up in captured territory, Yanks killed 141 Japanese and made 167 prisoners in the Marianas, Palau, and on Iwo Jima in the week ended May 12.

223 Medals of Honor have been awarded to members of the armed forces, 122 in the Army, 33 in the Navy, 27 in the Marine Corps and one to the Coast Guard.

Of the 100 infantrymen so honored, 50 died in performing the acts for which they were cited.

"It seems fitting that in this symbolic ceremony we should honor an infantryman," Mr. Truman stated. "There is little glamor in his service. He faces not only the enemy before him, but the cold and heat, the rain and snow, the dust and mud, which so often make his life miserable. These things he endures, and arises above them to such valorous deeds as those we celebrate today."

The President expressed hope that every man and woman in the nation "will reverently thank God that we have produced such sons as these."

Many of the medals have been presented at White House ceremonies, but this was the first at the capitol with Congress present.

Closing in, he slashed and stabbed, killing three and capturing three. During the entire action he accounted personally for 20 killed, and untold number of wounded; and three captured. He also knocked out two machine guns and captured two others.

Lindsey arrived in New York by plane yesterday from Czechoslovakia. Told of the plans for today's ceremony, he said:
