Club Zam-Zam Had Reception By CHESTER WALSH The Club Zam-Zam, a mile north of Wilson, on the Tobacco Trail, at the intersection of the Rocky Mount-Tarboro highway, one of the finest supper clubs in the South, had its formal opening Tuesday night with an "open house" program that drew more than 1,500 guests. Club Zam-Zam was incorporated under the leadership of Paul Bisette, Tom Woodard and Dr. M. A. Pittman and other influential men of Wilson. Bill Stanley is manager. It has more than 2,000 members, representative of Eastern Carolina social life.

Club Zam-Zam Had Reception

The club was named for an Egyptian ship sunk during the war. It is more of a family affair than a business venture and has nearly as many women as men in the membership. A professional chef directs the cuisine. Bob Machat, his electric organ and orchestra, provide the music. Admission is to members only. Machat was at the Fort Bragg Officers Club for five years. At Tuesday night's "house warming" and public reception an elaborate program was presented and guests were from all parts of Eastern and Central Carolina. Ed Heard of Greenville, who attended, said:

At a meeting of the Girl Scout Council at City Hall last night, with Mrs. W. P. Moore, commissioner for Girl Scouts, Inc., presiding, reports showed that the summer camp at Camp Hardee on Pamlico River this year was the most successful ever held. There were 109 campers there during the six-week period and they were from 21 towns and cities—some from as far away as Richmond and Norfolk, Va., and Elizabeth City. Mrs. James T. Uzzie, Girl Scout executive secretary was camp director and had an especially efficient staff of 11 counselors. Despite rainy weather the camp was filled to capacity throughout the season. During the four years the camp has been used there have been no serious accident or illness among the campers.

Girl Scout Camp Was Fine Success

Reports of the year's activities showed that exceptionally capable leaders are directing the various troops and that the Girl Scouts are really learning and doing "wonderful things." The Brownies (younger girls) are giving a good account of themselves. Votes of appreciation were extended to Mrs. Charles E. Felt, registered nurse, for fine service at the camp; to Dr. S. M. Crisp and H. L. Ormond, head of the Ormond Wholesale Co. members of the camp staff and others who contributed so much to the success of Camp Hardee. Camp Hardee is located on a high bluff overlooking Pamlico River, below Chowan county. Girl Scouts, Inc. own the 10 acre site. Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Hardee of Norfolk, Va., several years ago donated $10,000 for buildings at the camp. Five thousand of this fund was used for

May Continue Food Rationing

Washington, Sept. 18—(AP)—The days of food shortages and rationing may not be as near an end as many—including some in government—had expected.

President Truman so cautioned Americans in a White House statement late yesterday. In it the President reiterated a pledge made after his return from the Potsdam conference that this country would help feed the hungry in war-torn areas to the "limits of our strength."

He added that in meeting minimum foreign food needs, it might be necessary to return to rationing some items freed of government controls since Japan surrendered. Mr. Truman disclosed that arrangements have been made for fulfilling main food requests of Europe between now and January 1. But shipments after that date will be determined, he said, on arrangements made in the meantime for financing them.

To Confine Efforts

The Big Five Council of Foreign Ministers, meanwhile, turned to the matter of the Italian-Yugoslav frontier, weighing a mass of evidence presented by both sides, which must be sifted before a draft of the Italian peace treaty is drawn up.

The border suggested by former President Wilson and reportedly favored by the United States and Britain, runs about 15 miles from the eastern tip of the Istrian Peninsula and almost due north. More than half the peninsula and the part of Trieste would remain Italian.

Three British dominions, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa, testifying in the matter last night, were understood to have emphasized their share in the fighting against the Italians and to have inclined more to the Yugoslav point of view than either the Americans or British. They were understood to have favored an ethnic frontier. The decision apparently rests upon the Russian attitude, which Molotov declined to outline specifically yesterday.

Heightening speculation was Molotov's statement, that the Dodecanese Islands should not be returned to Italy. This could indicate that Russia might seek control over the strategic islands.

The big question was: "Has Russia colonial or trusteeship ambitions?" A study of the map draws into focus the power Russia would have should she gain control of Eritrea, Tripolitania and the Dodecanese. Bases at Tripoli, Rhodes and Massawa would be at strategic points along Britain's empire lifeline on through Suez to Gibraltar.

he likes old Senate friends best. While he was in the Senate, the President worked closely with Burton, a member of the War Investigating Committee which Mr. Truman headed.

It was Mr. Truman who arranged the luncheon at which Senators Ball (R-Minn.), Burton, Hatch (D-NM) and Hill (D-Ala) got together on the so-called BEHZ legislation. This was the forerunner of the Senate's pledge committing the United States to participate in postwar world peace efforts.

The President's choice of Patterson as war secretary indicated to legislators that the War Department's policies will undergo little change.

Patterson has borne much of the brunt of congressional exchanges for his aged predecessor. He had several clashes with the War Investigating Committee when Mr. Truman was its chairman, and the impression got around then that the President was no rooster for the undersecretary.

Most legislators thought Mr. Truman must have changed his mind.

Chapter 21
Mark Sheridan failed to improve and his doctor sent out a call for Jane.

Sheridan's day special met Jane, who was accompanied by Evelyn, on the fifth floor.
"I'm so glad you're here. Mr. Sheridan has been running such a temperature we've feared there might be an infection starting. But he insisted upon seeing you. . . . If you'll come now, please. Of course Miss James can come too; I don't believe—"

Jane entered the hospital room. She caught one glimpse of Mark Sheridan and hurried to his bedside. He was in a most uncomfortable position, half raised, bracing himself on his elbows, and his cheeks were scarlet.

"Miss Grey—"
"Mr. Sheridan, what a position," scolded Jane. "Do lie down. There, that's better. Now, what's troubling you?"

"Miss Grey, the bids on that field project are to be opened tomorrow morning. I have to have someone there to represent the Sheridan Company."

"Oh, what fun," Jane managed, groping for understanding. "May I be the one?"

"Will you?"
"Definitely."
"But listen, if we win, what in the devil are we going to do for material, and how are we going to estimate the time of the job without the material on hand?"

"I know where there is a reserve stock of cast iron," she began, "and if this is a government job we can be assured of priorities on copper. What's more, I've an idea I can take over our quota of the iron on a six months from delivery payment. And with six months to go—well, Mr. Sheridan, if we can't hold Lisle Carter to our ways by then, I'll go out and hold up a bank."

"How do you happen to know about this reserve stock? Sheridan demanded bluntly.

"Guffery has it. They'll sell."
"You're sure?"

"Because I really liked Guffery. I wrote him the full story of what was going on here. I knew he had started out as you have, bucking the men who controlled the capital. I told him the whole story. Mr. Sheridan, because I felt that we might need him some day. Now is that so today?"

"You believe he might allow us a chance at that reserve because he is sympathetic?"

She laughed. "Oh, no, he's a business man first. However, as I am one of the few who know of this reserve, and as that commodity is stabilized and he can't receive a higher price from anyone else, and can't lie out of having it with me knowing the truth, the sympathy will influence him to make a quicker release."

"They talked over a few pertinent problems which would arise at the office within the next week, and then Sheridan frowned. "It looks as though we can't miss," he said.

"Only one thing's holding us back," Jane answered. "You," she told him frankly. "You and your letters. You lie there and think up windmills and then you try to fight them with one foot tied to the ceiling. That isn't the way—"

"Show me the way," he ordered. Jane chose a swift moving mystery from the stack on the table. "Escape. Lose your mind in this and allow your natural physical healing to take place. Let me worry for you, if there is to be worry. I give you my word of honor I'll bring any problem to you."

Sheridan held the book and looked from Jane to Evelyn. "How many mystery stories to a mended foot?"

"Unblock" your DIGESTIVE TRACT
And Stop Dosing Your Stomach With Soda and Alkalizers

Don't expect to get real relief from headache, sour stomach, gas and bad breath by taking soda and other alkalizers if the true cause of your trouble is constipation.
In this case, your real trouble is not in the stomach at all. But in the intestinal tract where 80% of your food is digested. And where it gets blocked when it fails to pass properly.

That you want for real relief is not soda or an alkalizer—but something to "unblock" your intestinal tract. Something to clean it out thoroughly—help Nature get back on her feet.
Get Carter's Pills right now. Take them as directed. They gently and thoroughly "unblock" your digestive tract. This permits your food to move along normally. Nature's own digestive juices can then reach it. You get genuine relief that makes you feel really good again.

Get Carter's Pills at any drugstore—25¢. "Unblock" your intestinal tract for real relief from indigestion.

The Tar River was reported rising rapidly, with a crest of 22 feet—nine feet above flood level—expected by Sunday at Tarboro.

At Lumberton, the Lumber River was reported out of its banks, with many houses isolated and general property damage mounting.

At Wadesboro, Rocky and Pee Dee rivers were reported out of bounds, with the Crump Mill bridge over the former stream already a flood casualty.

Heavy traffic over the Morrison bridge on the Pee Dee has been banned. Electric service to all textile plants of the Wadesboro section was stopped as the power plant at Blewett Falls was reported flooded.

He asked.
They spent the early part of the evening in the kitchen, Jane striding back and forth dictating a letter Evelyn took down.

"Washington has recognized the value of the Sheridan pump," she dictated, "and, given even a sub-normal break, there is no limit to what this Sheridan Pump Company can produce for both war and peacetime industry. I sincerely believe, Mr. Guffery, that if you assist Mr. Sheridan in this present emergency, he will not forget it when materials may be obtained from any corner drug store, but will remain loyal to you and consider the Guffery Foundations."

Jane spent a wild hour with Jim Burdick the next morning. Together they went over a copy of the bid Mark Sheridan had submitted on the pump system for the new military field in the high valley.

"If we can get that cast iron," Burdick said, "we're safe. If you go through with the bid, and accept the offer without getting the iron—sister, we're not only sunk; we're due for a nice long vacation in Leavenworth or way points."

Jane haunted the telephone. Evelyn sat outside at the wheel of the car. When the call finally came she was limp with relief.

"You crazy kid," said L. T. Guffery findly; and later, "If you didn't have me so damnably wrapped up in this crusade of yours, I'd say no, so long you could hear it out there—"

"So you're saying yes—L. T. I have to fly to the Arsenal. Bye now; I'll wire if we get the bid."

A most efficient appearing young woman in black tweed flecked with white met an amused military officer. The amusement changed to admiration as she discussed ways, means and time with him.

"Tell Sheridan," Jane said as she dropped Evelyn at the hospital, "that we eat. We have the bid."

Much Damage . . .

deed, 15-A south of Raeford and at McColl, S. C., 39 between Raleigh and Smithfield, and 501 south of South Boston, Va.

Expected out tomorrow are No. 1 at the steel bridge in Vance county; 301 at Weldon; 17 at Williamson; and 258 at Scotland Neck.

Traffic from Raleigh to Wilmington was being routed by Garner, Newton Grove and Clinton. The Elizabeth City area can be traversed with little difficulty.

Three rivers have already reached record stages—the Cape Fear at Fayetteville, the Dan river at Danville, and the Haw at Moncure.

At Fayetteville the Cape Fear had reached 64.1 feet this morning and was still rising with no rainfall. The flood stage at Fayetteville is 35 feet.

At 35 feet at Elizabethtown, a crest of 34.8 was reached with a normal flood stage of 26 feet.

Neuse river was reported to have reached 25 feet at Smithfield, where the river already was reported well out of its banks, and was still rising. At Neuse a crest of 23.8 was reached, and at Goldsboro 15.1.

The Roanoke River, originating in Virginia, had reached a crest of 42.7 feet at Weldon, compared with a flood stage of 31 feet. It was expected to reach 48 by tomorrow.

Danville, Va. recorded a record reading of 21.3 feet.
The Highway Patrol reported a considerable record in inundated bridges.

Transportation and communications have been disrupted, many families made homeless and thousands of acres of farmland already inundated and one water level, in some instances, still is rising. Record peaks appeared certain for some of the rampaging streams and rivers, swollen with water which fell in record or near-record quantities throughout the two states.

No lives have been reported lost because of flood conditions, but property damage already is high in the thousands of dollars and will mount higher.

Motor traffic on many highways in the flooded country is paralyzed. On many others, volume of traffic was greatly reduced. Railroad and bus schedules to many points were far beyond normal as a result of the floods.

In South Carolina, flood conditions in the Wateree and Congaree rivers are so serious that spillways at the Big Santee-Copper hydroelectric project have been opened and residents of swamplands below the dam alerted for possible danger. At least eight major highways in that section were closed to traffic late yesterday.

RECONVERSION—Employees at the Hudson plant in Detroit seal up remaining airplane part as foremen (in rear) check motors for new auto models.

Swollen South Carolina rivers caused the Charleston Weather Bureau to issue flood warnings that the Pee Dee, Waccamaw, Black and Lanes rivers would reach record stages by tonight and Thursday.

The Yadkin in North Carolina was forced over its banks, covering fertile acres of the valley from Patterson in Caldwell county on down through Wilkes and by Yadkin and Surry counties.

The corn crop in the vicinity of North Wilkesboro, almost ready for harvest, was reported to be heavily damaged in the area's highest flood since August, 1940.

Sanford's concrete dam at the pumping station broke on both sides late in the afternoon. The reservoir was entirely emptied and the dam swept away. A concrete culvert, recently built also has been destroyed. The armory, a new storage building and a dairy have been flooded, along with houses in low areas. Telephone lines are also down.

At Monroe it was reported that Union County's crops had been damaged to the extent of at least a half million dollars. Bearskin Creek in the western part of the town overflowed and the highway to Charlotte was under several feet of water.

Seaboard trains from Charlotte and Atlanta were turned back at Monroeville, while no trains arrived from the east.

Neuse River's rise caused concern at Goldsboro, Smithfield and Kinston, while Mount Airy reported receding waters.

Dunn reported east-west traffic halted in Hargett county late in the afternoon when the last of two bridges across the Cape Fear river was closed. The new Lillington bridge was closed and flood waters extended 300 yards on each side of the Erwin bridge, swamping rich farm and grazing land. More than a dozen families were evacuated from the immediate vicinity.

Cumberland county Sheriff H. M. McCreary said that highways out of Fayetteville were under water and that traffic was halted.

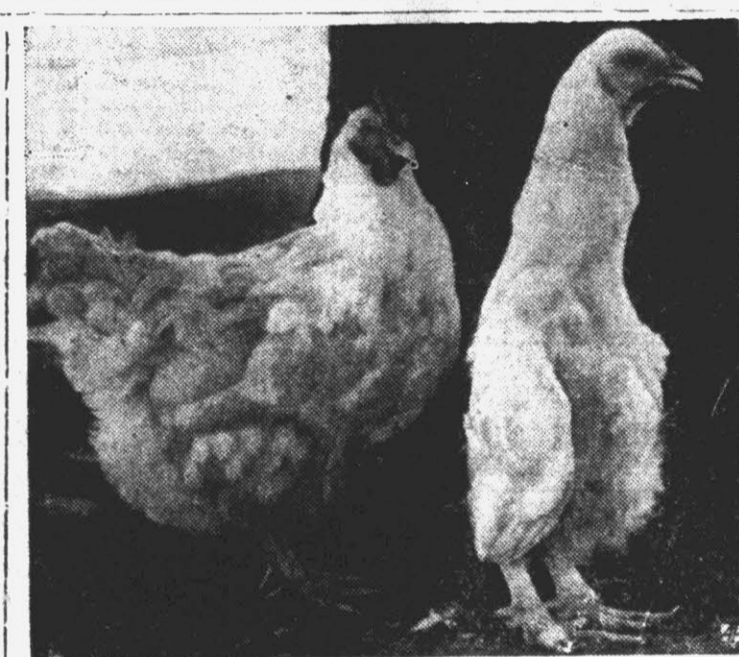

At Elizabethtown, the Cape Fear was swollen to 32 feet. S. C. Faulkner, official at the U. S. locks, said the greatest threat was to cattle in the lowlands.

Rockingham reported today that flood waters had dropped a foot to 13 feet, eight inches, easing the threat of collapse at the Blewett Falls Dam, seven miles from Rockingham. Three hundred feet of Seaboard Air Line Railroad track was washed out four miles west of the town.

It appeared today that the most critical traffic bottleneck in North Carolina had been overcome when the Haw River near Reidsville subsided a few feet, enabling the Southern Railway to secure its threatened double tracked trestles.

The southbound track was out yesterday on this trestle because of flood damage but the northbound track's trestle held and trains operated over it through six to eight inches of water.

Meanwhile, the Southern handled

STRANGE BIRD—A strange bird, "Chuck" (right), with feathers and head of a chicken, but an upright carriage, curled tail, five toes on each foot, has been found in the Fort Meade, Md., flock. Chuck's mother was a hen.

Seaboard trains detouring from the breaks between Selma and Raleigh and between Charlotte, Monroe, Hamlet and Raleigh. Southern's Danville, Va. tracks on the Danville-Norfolk run were covered when the Dan River overflowed, necessitating detours.

Seaboard was reported experiencing some difficulty in South Carolina near the Columbia area. The Columbia-Hamlet, N. C. line was closed by a "serious" washout near McBee.

Strength FOR THE DAY

By EARL L. DOUGLAS

ELEMENTS OF TRUE CHARACTER

Emerson once said that character is like an acrostic or an Alexandrian stanza—read it forward, backward, or across, it spells the same thing. Also this seer in his essay on self-reliance declares that while it is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion and easy in solitude to live after our own, nevertheless the truly great man is the one who in the midst of the crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.

We are accustomed to put a great deal of stock in personal charm and intelligence. Many would rate these factors at the top or close to the top in appraising possibility of success. But after the years have passed and storms have blown themselves out, and the sun of more cheerful days is shining again, we always find that moral character has been the strongest factor in the life of a truly successful man. Few things are more melancholy than the excuses we have to conjure up to explain the weaknesses of the great or near-great. A simple man whose life, like the acrostic, always means the same thing whether we read it forward, backward, or across can stand on the side-lines of life's highway satisfied and at peace with himself while the gaudy show plunges by.

The sincere Christian believer is willing to have missed everything, including worldly fortune, if at the end of his life he can hear the Lord say unto him, "Well done, good and faithful servant."

WASHINGTON DAYBOOK

By JACK STINNETT

Washington—Manufacturers and distributors of items burdened with wartime's federal excise tax on so-called luxury merchandise are screaming.

A portion of the public, they say, is refusing to buy fur, jewelry, toilet preparations, luggage and several other things in anticipation of immediate reduction or elimination of the tax which now is as high as 20 per cent on many articles.

The non-buyers may be right. If they are, it would be all right with the manufacturers and merchants. The tax is certainly no money in their pockets. What they are screaming for is some definite date for the reduction or elimination, so they can scale production and inventories according. Or lacking that, a statement that the tax isn't going to be reduced or eliminated so the public will plunk down its war dollars for the taxed articles.

So far, however, they have made most of their complaints to the U. S. Treasury Department, which is laying their problem on the wrong door step. The Treasury hasn't anything to do with the tax—except, of course, to collect it.

The excise taxes, whether on a mug of suds, a GI's first call home, or Mrs. Rich's spread of snark are strictly the affair of Congress. And it's strictly your affair if you want to gamble Congress will or won't do something.

Many of those excise taxes are automatically due for reduction (none automatically for abolition) six months after the official "termination of hostilities." If anyone here knows when that will be, he isn't hinting. There's no use connecting anything in this war with World War I but it might be noted that World War I wasn't over officially until 1921, nearly three years after the signing of the armistice.

This doesn't mean, of course, that the excise taxes slipped on in wartime—or the full income tax rates—for that matter—are going to stick indefinitely. No one in the government or out has predicted that.

Congress could do one of several things about the excise taxes: (1) resolve that, for this purpose, the "end of hostilities" was Sept. 1, when the Japanese signed the surrender, and allow the taxes to revert to former schedules (a reduction ranging up to 50 per cent) under the present law on March 1,

Low Point Of Human Deviltion

1946; (2) name a new effective date for reductions, perhaps the first of next or some other near month; (3) rewrite the schedules completely; or (4) abolish many or most of the excise altogether—which is unlikely.

Some of these days, but not soon. Congress is going to revise the whole federal tax structure. The pressure for that is considerable and growing daily. There are now a dozen or more national tax plans before Congress, laid there by organizations, like the Committee for Economic Development, or by individuals, like Beardsley Ruml. It is interesting to note that through nearly all of them runs the thread of abolition of excise taxes entirely—except on liquor, tobacco, and gasoline.

The alliance which led them to victory. Therefore it would be foolish of observers to create a bugbear out of the Mediterranean situation, although we needn't overlook the potential dangers.

One hears it suggested speculatively that Russia may be raising the question of trusteeships in order to create bargaining points for settlement of differences among the big three in eastern Europe. Specifically, Russia doesn't like the government of Greece (sponsored by Britain), but does support the regimes of Bulgaria, Hungary and Romania (which the U. S. A. and England refuse to recognize). Russia also is backing Yugoslav demands for Italian territory.

Of course there's a lot of horse-trading going on, but the signs long have been that Russia is bent on establishing herself as one of the Mediterranean powers. She is looking to break out of the blockade.

But Schwellenbach stopped referring cases to the board. (Now he can tell the board to take cases.) The board didn't take on cases. Now Schwellenbach takes over. You'll note he has told the conciliation service to step into the Detroit disputes. This is wartime power he's using here.

Six months after the war is officially ended—under the labor disputes act—the conciliation service must wait to be invited to step into a dispute. It's possible that after the November conference of labor and management—called by Mr. Truman—some new agency will be set up to succeed WLB.

Plant seizure is not likely to be part of the power of such a new agency.

Schwellenbach

Along with his news conference announcement of the Labor Department revamping Mr. Truman also disclosed that he is folding up the Office of Economic Stabilization and turning over Director William H. Davis' duties to reconversion Director John W. Snyder. Davis himself had proposed this step but was taken by surprise at the timing.

Mr. Truman and Schwellenbach both indicated to newsmen that a statement recently attributed to Davis had embarrassed the administration.

Davis had been quoted as saying the government was behind a program to increase wages 50 per cent while sitting on prices. Davis took the position privately that the remark attributed to him was a misinterpretation on what he had said at a news seminar, but he issued no public denial. Although he collects little new power under the reorganization, Schwellenbach gains in prestige as the government's spokesman in future labor-management contention. His new power consists only of that which he inherits from the an-

Superforts In

"pulling baby shoes and snapshots from their pockets and wondering what their children, who they had never seen, will be like." At another point he reported that airmen in the three crews had accounted for the destruction of 30 enemy aircraft, probable destruction of 24 and damage of 19 during the war.
The Superfortresses, which took off from the Japanese mainland beginning at 4:01 p. m. (ETW) yesterday, passed over Fairbanks, Alaska, at 6:10 a. m. (EWT). They were about 555 miles from White Horse, Canada, halfway point.

Giles said that the three planes flew individually from Japan to home but met for their first rendezvous there at one minute intervals.

The flight is scheduled to enter the United States near Duluth, Minn. From there the route follows a course near Green Bay, Wis.; Lansing and Detroit, Mich.; Cleveland and Pittsburgh.

A top-notch Army Air Force general commanded each of the B-29 Superfortresses. They lifted from the huge Mizutani airport near Sapporo, capital of Hokkaido, beginning at 4:01 p. m. (EWT) yesterday for the expected 25 1-2 hour flight.

The take-off was described a good one. It was made in clear, cool weather. Forecasts indicated favorable flying conditions all the way to Washington.
The first radio contact with the planes from the American side of the Pacific showed them near the southeast tip of Russian Kamchatka, six hours after the take-off. Some three hours later they were about 800 miles west of Nome, Alaska.

After about 12 hours in the air—at 4:11 a. m. (EWT)—the planes reported they were 58 miles east of Nome. They were right on schedule. The Army had estimated their arrival over Nome at 4 a. m. The B-29s were averaging 236 miles an hour.

The giant bombers were stripped of armament and armor to lighten them for the terrific gas load and also to provide for the slightly over-sized crews. Each plane had 12 men aboard to permit a rotation of duties during the long flight.

The Army apparently was not attempting an official nonstop alpine distance record. So far as could be learned there were no arrangements for official checkers from either the National Aeronautic Association or the Federation Aeronautique Internationale.

Baseball

By JACK HAND (AP Sports Writer)
Billy Southworth's tattered Cardinals continue to act like they own the Chicago Cubs whose first place dignity they have ruffled in 14 of 18 meetings.
With 10 games to play, four against their "cousins" from the Windy City, St. Louis has a good fighting chance to make the grade to a fourth straight flag despite their two-game disadvantage in the west and lost columns.
Baseball followers regard the Red Birds a better bet to catch Chicago than Washington is to close the gap on Detroit even though the Tigers' lead is only a game and a half after yesterday's 12-5 loss to the Nats. The Senators are running out of games with only five to go and no more with the Bengals.
Southworth has either George Dockins or Art Lopatka ready to go after the Cubs tonight as the after-dark series continues.
Charley (Red) Barrett hung up his 22nd victory in last night's 3-2 shade of the Bruins' Claude Passeau.
Sportsman's Park housed its largest night turnout of the Cardinals' season, 22,174, to watch the Birds make their big bid for the flag. They weren't disappointed as Southworth's gang overcame a two-run advantage the Cubs punched through the makeshift infield in the first inning and came on to win. Whitey Kurowski drove home all three runs.
The Detroit-Washington series finale was a nightmarish ball game played on the muddy turf of Griffith Stadium.
Dizzy Trout was driven to cover in the first inning when the Senators scored four runs but, after they had added another in the third, the Tigers flattened Walt Masterson with five to tie in the sixth. The Nats then opened up on George Caster, Hal Newhouser and Zeb Eaton for bundles of four in the seventh and three in the eighth to lose it. Caster was charged with his first loss since joining Detroit and Dutch Leonard, the third of four Washington tossers, picked up the winning check.
Washington is idle today but Detroit is down to face Bobby Feller in the opener of a two-day stand at Cleveland.
Cincinnati split a doubleheader with Boston in the only other National League games, coming back to grab the second, 6-2 after losing the opener, 3-1.
Yesterday's results:
American League
Washington 12, Detroit 5.
Cleveland at Philadelphia, p.p.d. rain.
St. Louis at New York, p.p.d. rain.

Only games scheduled.
National League
St. Louis 3, Chicago 2.

Phantoms To Meet Old Rivals On Friday Night

Will Play New Bern Bears At Guy Smith Stadium

By DAVE CLARK

An old rival in the form of the New Bern Bears comes to Guy Smith Stadium Friday night to meet the G.H.S. Phantoms in what is promised to be a hard fought grid battle.

The Phantoms held a fairly hard workout yesterday in preparation for the contest. The passing phase of the Greene attack was stressed, since it has been weak this year, especially against the Goldsboro club.

The return of former Coach Bo Parley to the Phantom coaching staff is welcomed by all concerned. He and Coach Snag Clark should have a smooth working, powerful aggregation if all indications are true.

The Greenies downed New Bern twice quite easily last year and will be out to repeat that performance this season.

Injuries are again riding the Phantoms this week as they did last. Fullback Jimmy Putrell and Xenophon Sideris are both still out and it is still uncertain as to whether they will play Friday night. However, Bobby Clark and Jack Whitehead should be back in action by Friday. Graham Leggett, substitute end, is also back after being injured.

VTs Speak Twice

Raleigh, Sept. 18—(AP)—President Truman will make two speeches in North Carolina during his tour of the state early in November. Senator Josiah W. Bailey has informed Governor Cherry.

Senator Bailey said Mr. Truman would speak in Raleigh during the afternoon of Nov. 2, following a speech in the early forenoon at Statesville to a session of the State Senate.

lost a political bomb in their direction.

The general's announcement in Tokyo that perhaps 200,000 soldiers would be enough to police Japan increased pressure here for:

1. Speedy release of millions from the Armed Services and.
2. A quick end to the draft.

Critics of the War and Navy department's present demobilization plans were gleeful. Republicans contended privately that the supreme Allied commander's announcement had put the armed services directly on the spot.

Senator Bridges (R-NH) told a reporter the MacArthur statement would force the War Department to "revise its entire program."

A Democratic senator, Edwin C. Johnson (Colo) agreed that this "is bound to make them turn the soldiers out much faster."

BUSY TIMES IN CONGRESS

Lawmakers Face Multiplicity Of Problems

By MAX HALL

Washington, Sept. 19—(AP)—Postwar "D's"—defense and demobilization—kept congressional halls humming today.

The House Naval Committee heard Secretary of Navy James V. Forrestal urge that this country attain "control of the seas and of the skies above them."

The Senate Military Committee heard a 37-year-old Army buck private testify he was "being railroaded" by Army officers because he encouraged other soldiers to contact congressmen regarding speedy release from the service.

There was a new approach to the subject of jobs, employment and unemployment pay. Rep Norton (D-NJ), chairman of the House Labor Committee, visited President Truman to inform him she was offering legislation providing a basic 65-cent hourly minimum wage for those covered by the Federal Wage-Hour Act. She said she "left with the impression that he is agreeable to it."

Forrestal testified on legislation to fix the size of the peacetime Navy. He recommended:

- 1. An active fleet, ready for battle, of approximately 300 combat vessels; a laid-up reserve of over 500 combat ships; a "ready reserve" of 100 additional major ships, in commission but manned by nucleus crews.
- 2. The Army private was George L. Mark of Cleveland, O., who said he was being "railroaded" from nearby Fort Belvoir, Va., to Camp Shelby, Miss., because he had told reporters of cutting grass by bayonets and about lack of morale at Fort Belvoir.

President Truman again entered the demobilization discussion with a White House statement that there will be "no padding in our armed forces" and that "no one is going to be held in the service a day longer than is necessary."

The President's supporters meanwhile fought in the Senate to save two links in his peacetime program. The argued in favor of more dollars a week for the unemployed—and against immediate return of the U. S. Employment Service to the states.

Those were the major points up for decisions as the Senate's debate over unemployment pay moved toward a climax.

There seemed a strong chance that the Truman forces would be defeated in Senate voting on both questions. The House hasn't debated the unemployment pay bill yet.

Aside from unemployment, Congress bustled itself with these subjects:

1. Demobilization. The uproar continued. Critics of Army-Navy efforts to bring the boys back home said gleefully that General MacArthur has put the army on the spot.

The general said in Tokyo that the occupation army might be cut to 200,000 in six months. Officials in Washington had estimated the figure much higher.

Yesterday the House passed a bill to attract more recruits for the Army and Navy by making military life more appealing. Today a similar proposal was taken up by the Senate Naval Committee.

2. Pearl Harbor. The committee to investigate the 1941 disaster was looking for a lawyer today. The group held its first meeting yesterday and elected Senator Barkley (-Ky) as chairman.

3. Hirohito. A proposal by Senator Russell (-Ga) that the Japanese emperor be arrested and tried as a war criminal was received with some reserve in the Senate.

4. Appointments. Speedy Senate approval was expected for three major appointments by President Truman—Robert Patterson as Secretary of War, Senator Harold Burton (R-Ohio) for the Supreme Court, and W. Stuart Symington as the one-man Surplus Property board.

Symington will replace the three-man Surplus Property Board, which has been abolished.

5. Peacetime Navy. The House Naval Committee met to hear Navy leaders justify their plans for a postwar fleet of 1,079 combat ships and 558,000 men.

On the subject of the U. S. Employment Service:

President Truman, in his message of two weeks ago, urged Congress not to turn the service back to the states until at least June 30, 1947.

The thousands of local employment offices have been under federal control during the war.

Yesterday, Senator Lucas (-Ill), introduced an amendment to the unemployment pay bill, to do exactly what President Truman urged against—that is, turn the Employment Service back to the state right away. Senator Barkley spoke against it, then asked that the vote be postponed until today.

On the unemployment pay bill itself, the picture is this:

The bill authorizes the use of federal cash to give jobless people more help than they now get from the states.

The Senate Finance Committee last week approved portions of the measure, but knocked out the Truman-backed provision to increase weekly payments up to a top of $25.

SEEK TO HOLD PRICES DOWN

Increased Costs Cannot Be Passed To Consumer

By STERLING F. GREEN

Washington, Sept. 19—(AP)—The government set up some peacetime barriers against inflation today, after knocking down some wartime barriers to a free economy.

OPA prepared to limit rigidly the costs entering into new home building—which opens up October 15—although it cannot put a ceiling on the final price of the house.

These developments marked the further march of reconversion, in business and government:

1. OPA told retailers that wartime increases in manufacturing costs are not to be passed on to the public in the form of higher prices for new washers, refrigerators and similar long-awaited products.

2. To speed the sale of vast war surpluses, President Truman signed a bill creating a single administrator of the surplus property board.

3. Another war agency—the Office of Economic Stabilization—was killed off.

4. The Brookings Institution held that "a powerful movement for higher wage rates" is the greatest potential inflation force.

5. Builders estimated that 500,000 new homes would be started next year, with building climbing to 1,000,000 houses annually by 1948.

Price Administrator Chester Bowles reportedly was ready to announce stricter price controls on lumber, hardware, plumbing and other building materials.

His plan is to impose dollars-and-cents ceilings, which would be uniform in every city just as are OPA's ceilings on grocery store items.

For people who want to buy new houses, this leaves two notable gaps in price controls: the price of the lot and the price of the completed dwelling.

However, construction of "an unprecedented number of low-cost dwellings for low-income families" was predicted by Joseph E. Merriam, president of the National Association of Home Builders.

Merriam acclaimed yesterday's action by Reconversion Director John W. Snyder in ordering all controls off construction October 15. It will mean "record-breaking" new home construction, the builders' executive said in a statement. He added: "Fully 500,000 new homes should be started during 1946. Seven hundred fifty thousand can be built in 1947, and the goal of 1,000,000 or more homes a year should be reached by 1948, if not earlier."

The National Association of Real Estate Boards pledged the assistance of its member companies in Snyder's plan for voluntary cooperation in holding down home prices.

Bowles kept a firm grip on the prices that retail stores may charge for new goods now trickling off production lines. He rejected a retailers' plea for a change in policy.

OPA wants the goods to reach the public at or near their 1942 prices. But OPA does grant higher prices to the manufacturers whose costs of labor and materials have risen since 1942. OPA says that wholesalers and retailers must absorb that increase—that is, they must pay more for the goods at cannot charge more.

The retail reconversion price committee, an advisory committee of 40 big and little merchants named by OPA, assailed the policy last month.

Bowles, after three weeks' study gave his answer last night. It was "No." Profit margins are higher than in peacetime, he said, and the stores are not suffering a squeeze.

Simultaneously, the Brookings Institution announced its finding that continued price control is "impracticable."

"Without wage stabilization and without rationing," a Brookings study said, "the government is not in a position to hold the price line."

Oil Strikes . . .

With approximately 80,000 workers idled in the Detroit area by strikes and related shutdowns, it was reported in industry circles today that some 25,000 General Motors workers might have to be laid off if a continuing strike at the Packard Electrical Company, Warren, O., is not ended before the week.

The company is the chief supplier of electrical systems for the Chevrolet, Buick and Oldsmobile divisions of General Motors. At the General Motors offices here it was said no statement concerning the possible effects of the electrical company strike had been authorized.

There were no new developments today in the threat of the United Automobile Workers (CIO) to seek strike votes among the half million workers of the Ford Motor Co. and General Motors and Chrysler corporations to enforce demands for an industry-wide 30 per cent wage increase.
