UNRRA Talks Now Arguments

Political Considerations Enter Into Picture Of Originally-Intended Altruistic Gathering; Wartime Rationing Of Food Expected To Be Shelved

By ALEX SINGLETON
Atlantic City, N. J., March 26.—(AP)—United States Delegate C. Tyler Wood bluntly and openly protested today that a Ukrainian-Russian move to sidetrack an UNRRA argument because it had political implications would be "the course of cowardice."

After A. M. Baranovsky, the Ukrainian delegate, arose to argue against an American plan to limit the practice of Allied armies "living off the land" during periods of occupations.

The proposal was first advanced yesterday by the United States, which argued specifically that the Soviet was acquiring large tracts of land in Austria which could be used for production of food.

Baranovsky, speaking in his native tongue, argued that acceptance of the proposal would draw UNRRA into political talks, and contended that it would set a bad precedent.

Acknowledging that there may be political considerations involved, Wood declared sharply that avoidance of the discussion because of that reason would be "the course of cowardice."

S. V. Pajarsky, speaking for Russia, declared that the question exceeds UNRRA's authority, adding that it only involves the UNRRA council in a discussion on matters which are subject to consideration by the Allied Control Council on the ex-enemy territories, but also places the UNRRA Council in a position as arbiter of these authorities.

Meanwhile, sources close to the British and American delegations reported that the UNRRA would not recommend universal return to wartime rationing of food.

The decision was reached, these sources said, within the council's committee on supplies which has been meeting almost continuously behind closed doors since this 48-nation conference got together.

UAW REVIEWS GMC STRIKE SETTLEMENT

Union Drops Politics To Warn GM Of Support To Piece Work Dispute

By MAX HALL
Atlantic City, N. J., March 26.—(AP)—The CIO United Auto Workers convention, temporarily desisted from its hot political battle, deliberated today a proposal to assess the union's membership in support of remaining General Motors strikers.

The convention served notice on General Motors of "united and determined" support of the comparatively few strikers whose piece work dispute is holding up a full return to work of 175,000 men and ordered a committee to examine the assessment proposal.

With the GM strike on the floor, the convention paused from its race down the home stretch of the political fight.

The issue, however, will be settled tomorrow when 2,000 delegates vote on whether to keep R. J. Thomas as president or to replace him with Walter Reuther.

More fireworks were expected today on the convention floor, where (Continued on Page Two)

COAL STRIKE OPENS MONDAY

Operators' Proposals Turned Down By Union Head

Washington, March 26.—(AP)—John L. Lewis today notified bituminous coal operators he will end their present contract this Sunday at midnight and 400,000 miners will "stay home with their families" next week.

Lewis, at a news conference, said "there will be no miners' blood spilled" next week and that lives will be saved and injuries averted.

The United Mine Workers' president said there will be no extension of the current contract, making it clear he will insist on a new agreement before the soft coal miners return to work.

Lewis said the action is being taken "at a time when it will be least inconvenient to the public." There are close to 47,000,000 tons of coal in storage, he added.

He estimated that for the last couple of weeks the weekly output has averaged 13,000,000 tons, a record for the industry.

Lewis said negotiations with the soft coal operators will continue and that "anytime we reach agreement we will try to make it effective at the earliest possible moment."

Lewis told reporters that the counter proposals submitted by the operators yesterday were a "mumble jumble of something entirely unsatisfactory and not responsive to the necessities of the occasion."

The miners traditionally follow a "no contract, no work" policy.

As the day arrived on which the United Mine Workers leader may (Continued on Page Four)

International War Tribunal Sits Through Long Tirade On Old Treaty

By RICHARD KASISCHKE
Nuremberg, March 26.—(AP)—Defense attorneys launched a five-point attack before the international military tribunal today upon the Treaty of Versailles and the prosecution's charge that the Nazis conspired to break the treaty with the aim of waging aggressive war.

Dr. Alfred Seidl, counsel for Rudolph Hess, touched off a long, involved tirade when he sought to introduce excerpts from speeches and writings of scores of foreign statesmen, economists and journalists which he contended showed that Germany had justification and considerable support abroad for violating the treaty.

With prosecutors interjecting frequent counter arguments, counsel for Joachim von Ribbentrop and Hjalmar Schacht supported Seidl. The defense made these allegations:

- 1.—That Germany signed the Versailles Treaty "under duress."
- 2.—That the treaty was made obsolete by the British-German naval agreement of 1935.
- 3.—That the treaty was not in accord with President Wilson's 14 points.
- 4.—That failure of other signatory powers to fulfill the treaty abrogated it.
- 5.—That the German abrogation was "in accord with views widely held even in some victory countries."

In support of these arguments Seidl sought to introduce as evidence quotations from decades-old utterances of such figures as the late Senator Borah (R-Ida), Lord Keynes, the late David Lloyd George, Robert Lansing, John Foster Dulles and Gustav Cassel, Swedish journalist.

Government Orders Curb On Building

Drastic Restrictions Forbid Start Of Any New Commercial Or Industrial Construction Without Approval

By MARVIN L. ARROWSMITH
Washington, March 26.—(AP)—The government, acting to speed construction of homes for veterans, today clamped drastic restrictions on building or repair of virtually all other structures.

The Civilian Production Administration issued a far-reaching order, effective at once, forbidding the start of any new commercial or industrial construction unless specifically authorized.

The objective is to make more scarce building materials available for the 2,700,000 new homes the government is aiming at during the next two years.

The measure was announced by National Housing Expediter Wilson W. Wyatt and CPA Administrator John B. Small.

It permits completion of any construction already begun, provided "any of the materials which are to be an integral part of the structure have been incorporated in it on the site" before today, and if work is being carried on at present.

The order does not apply to construction, repair, alteration or installation jobs on which the cost does not exceed these allowances:

1. Houses designed for five or fewer families, also farmhouses or other structures, such as a garage, on residential property—$400 a job.
2. Hotel, resort, apartment house or other residential building designed for occupancy by more than five families—$1,000 a job.
3. Commercial or service establishment, such as office, store, garage, theater, warehouse, radio station, gas service station—$1,000 a job.
4. Farm buildings excluding farmhouses—$1,000 a job.
5. Church, hospital, school, public building, charitable institution—$1,000 a job.
6. Factory, plant or other industrial building—$1,000 a job.

MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT GO TO IRAN

Fly To Middle East For Unofficial Inspection Of Activities

London, March 26.—(AP)—Two members of Britain's Parliament undertook today a trip by plane to the Middle East to make an unofficial inspection of Iran and to verify reports from Moscow and Tehran that Red army troops were withdrawing from that country.

The two—Brigadier A. H. Head, Conservative, and Michael Foot, Labor party member and writer for the Daily Herald—will be gone for two or three weeks.

Foreign Undersecretary Hector McNeill said "necessary arrangements" had been made for the visit, and added that he did not believe any "unreasonable barriers" would be encountered.

Prime Minister Stalin asserted today that so far as the Soviet Union is concerned, the question of the withdrawal of Red army troops "has already been solved" by an agreement between Russia and Iran.

Stalin's statement was made in answer to a cablegram sent from New York by Hugh Baillie, president of the United Press, who asked the prime minister whether he wished to "reply to Churchill's argument in favor of the necessity for rapid action by the Security Council of the United Nations Organization on the question of Iran."

Stalin's reply, as broadcast by the Moscow radio, read:

"I thank you for your amiable proposition. I should not find Churchill's arguments convincing."

Gromyko Asserts Iranian Crisis Is Past, And Proposes Case Be Left Off Agenda; Byrnes States Both Russia And Iran Must Report On Whatever Agreement Has Been Reached

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
New York, March 26.—(AP)—The United States and Britain insisted today that both Russia and Iran should report to the UNO Security Council the details of whatever agreement they have made—as reported last night by Prime Minister Stalin—for withdrawal of Red army forces from Iran.

Russia opposed having the council take up the Iranian case, at least in so far as it was presented by complaints lodged with the peace enforcement agency by Iranian Ambassador Hossein Ala. In sharp opposition, Secretary of State Byrnes for the United States and Sir Alexander Cadogan for Britain, declared the case must be heard.

Gromyko said there was no need even to place the Iranian case on the council agenda for further discussion because it has been settled by an agreement between Moscow and Tehran.

Byrnes replied that if Russia had made such an agreement it should have informed the Security Council, and certainly he argued, the council would not wish to deny Iran an opportunity to be heard.

Sir Alexander endorsed the Byrnes declaration. He cited a resolution adopted in London by the Council two months ago saying that Iran and Russia should try to settle their troubles directly but that the council might ask them to report what they were doing.

"Then there is the other question—the maintenance of Soviet troops in Iran" beyond the March 2 deadline for their withdrawal.

Instead of merely asking for a delay in taking up the appeal filed last week by Ambassador Hossein Ala of Iran, Gromyko said Prime Minister Stalin had announced the agreement for withdrawal of the troops. They began getting out last Sunday, he added, and thus the Iranian crisis was being handled in accord with a Security Council admonition to the two nations at London to settle their differences by direct negotiations.

"For these reasons, Mr. Chairman," Gromyko said to presiding officer Dr. Quenell-Chi of China, (Continued on Page Six)

Sharing Of The Atomic Secret Soon Possible

"Denaturing" Process Can Render Plutonium Useless For Bomb-Making; Commercial Use Of Atomic Energy Now Open

By JACK BELL
Washington, March 26.—(AP)—Scientists have learned how to "denature" both plutonium and U-235. These are the substances which furnish the atoms that are split to release vast power.

One Senator, who declined to be quoted by name, said the problem of sharing atomic energy secrets with the rest of the world may be "very much simplified" if the process is provided in practical operations.

He pointed out that if a way can be found to control tightly the world's supply of fissionable material and if it can be treated to make it useless for explosive purposes, then there need be little fear of the secret manufacture of A-bombs.

But he added that there still is a long way to go—even if the element can be so "poisoned"—to make certain that it could not be manufactured. (Continued on Page Four)

TRUSTEES TO DISCUSS GIFT

Several Million Dollars Involved In Reynolds Proposal

Wake Forest, March 26.—(AP)—Trustees of Wake Forest College, meeting here today, are expected to discuss a "conditional gift" involving the income from several million dollars of the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation of Winston-Salem.

Principal "condition" of the gift, it was said by authoritative sources, would be the removal of the Baptist college from its present location here to Winston-Salem, possibly to the 300-acre estate of the late R. J. Reynolds, "Reynolds." The college's name, it was said, would not necessarily be changed.

John A. Oats of Fayetteville, chairman of the Board of Trustees, said today's board meeting was scheduled for 11 a. m. He would not comment further regarding the reported Reynolds Foundation offer.

However, sources in both Raleigh and Winston-Salem confirmed the fact that the proposal has been under informal consideration.

Under terms of the proposal, it was said, an ultimate endowment (Continued on Page Four)

Threat Of A-Bomb Still Haunting U. S.

San Francisco, March 26.—(AP)—Dr. Irving Langmuir, one of 16 American scientists who visited the Soviet Union last year for the Russian Academy of Sciences meeting, says this country and the Soviets probably will have enough atomic bombs in six to ten years to wipe each other out.

He told an interviewer he estimated the Russians would have their first atomic bombs in 3 or 4 years and urged constructive steps toward world government to avert disaster.

Langmuir, winner of the Nobel prize in chemistry and director of the General Electric Research Laboratory, will begin a series of lectures at the University of California at Berkeley Monday.

They say this is so because the United States is the only country rich enough to do the job.

But you are entitled to ask: "Are we going to get stuck with a lot of worthless I. O. U.'s when the lending is all over?"

Not if the World Bank works. This country may be the fountain for most of the money which the Bank pours into foreign lands, but the whole world—not just the U. S.—shares the risk if any borrower fails to pay off his debt.

The "whole world" in this sense means the 37 nations which now are members of the Bank, plus any which may come in later.

That's one reason why the United States will be plunging hard for admission of Italy, a former enemy and a questionable credit risk.

Almost without exception the United States delegates to the international monetary conference, which closed last week at Savannah, Ga., favored Italy's bid. It would be good business, they felt, to have others besides the United States sharing the burden of helping Italy get back on her feet.

The World Bank—the State Department likes to call it that instead of its right name, the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development—was organized at Savannah. It probably will start lending next fall.

Its assets, as planned at Bretton Woods, N. H., in 1944, will be $9,100,000,000. If Russia and all the other Bretton Woods signers enter and put up their share of money, each country's subscription is based on its national income, gold reserves, foreign trade and such factors. Voting strength is based on money subscribed, so the United States speaks with a powerful voice.

The Bank will lend to member countries for "productive" purposes. Thus, China might borrow pounds (Continued on Page Four)

Canadian Jailed For Refusal To Testify

Montreal, March 26.—(AP)—Gordon Lunan, former Canadian army captain accused of supplying Russia with war-time secrets, was cited for contempt and sentenced to jail late yesterday upon his refusal to testify at a preliminary hearing for a Red spy case.

Summoned as a witness for the crown in the case of Rose, also charged with communicating secret information to the U. S. S. R., Lunan testified he knew Rose and denied knowing Lt. Col. Rogov, an assistant Soviet military attaché in Ottawa or "Jan," Rogov's code name.

Then he refused to answer any other questions, although assured by the court that any information supplied could not be used against him.

"I feel that I cannot answer questions that have a bearing on my own case," Lunan said.

Baby Sees With Another's Eyes

New York, March 26.—(AP)—A 14-month-old baby, blind from birth, now is seeing through 59-year-old eyes which were bequeathed to science by Miss Eve Tobey when she died last September, a hospital spokesman said today.

Miss Tobey's eyes were removed and shipped to the Eye Institute of the Presbyterian Hospital where an operation was performed to transfer the corneas to the eyes of the baby, then eight months old.

The spokesman said:

"The operation is considered successful; the baby can see, although he must return for observation for several more months before final judgment is made."

The name of the baby was not disclosed.

Miss Tobey's action was prompted by the suffering of a nephew who was the victim of an eye affliction for years.

In her will, the Stamford, Conn., woman said:

"When life leaves my body, I want to provide a happier life for someone living by donating my eyes to science."

The WORLD TODAY

AP World Traveler

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Paris, March 26.—A distinguished Frenchman remarked to me during a dinner conversation that his country is very ill and that he believes the other western allies should treat her accordingly—that is, with firmness when she is unreasonable, and with material aid when she needs it.

This line has kept running through my mind so persistently that I finally decided to incorporate it here. Probably it has stuck with me because I'm sure from my own observations that my friend's diagnosis is correct. Whether his prescription is right is something to be determined by the allied governments.

Approps of this, one notes that former Governor Harold Stassen in his New York speech asked Americans that they "promptly extend credits under proper terms to those who seriously need them, which includes England, France, Greece and Russia."

I've stressed the point of France's illness in previous articles, but her position is so serious that it can't be over-emphasized. It's grave, not only for her but for the world at large, because this important country is vital to global well-being as is your arm to your body.

France's case is rendered especially grave by complications. As this column previously has reported, she is ill economically, politically and spiritually. She is sickening when Hitler loosed his blitzkrieg and the shock of her frightful defeat, coupled with the hell of the Nazi occupation, led to the present crisis—for crisis it is.

My French friend of the dinner conversation is right when he says his country needs moral as well as material help. She isn't the France of old. The general public is bewildered and is increasingly inclined to experiment with political nostrums in the hope of finding relief.

Then there's another element into the situation, and that is injured pride. What else could be expected in the case of a nation which so long was one of the world's dominant powers? France finds it hard to accept the change brought by the Hitlerian conquest, and this has been responsible for many of her international political moves which haven't found favor in the eyes of all the allies. She is fighting to relieve her former position.

Jarvis Forensic Club
The Jarvis Forensic Club of East Carolina Teachers College has announced plans for several debates which will take place during April. Dr. M. N. Posey of the College has been chosen to preside over the debates. The club has organized a full program for next month. A college debate squad which will engage in intercollegiate contests will be chosen on Thursday evening, March 28, in a series of special try-outs. The debaters chosen will meet a team from Wake Forest here on April 6. The topic will be the national collegiate debate subject, "Resolved: That the United States should direct its foreign policy toward the establishment of Free Trade among the nations of the world." The debaters from East Carolina Teachers College will support the affirmative side of the question.

Two teams from the college here, accompanied by Dr. Posey, will go to Mary Washington College at Fredericksburg, Va., to take part on April 19-20 in the Grand National Tournament under the auspices of the Strawberry Leaf Society. Again the argument will center around the national collegiate debate topic.

Contest Judges
Dr. Karl V. Gilbert of the music department at East Carolina Teachers College acted as judge in the amateur contest for North Carolina Composers, sponsored by state music clubs. Winners were announced on March 23 by Prof. Earl Slocum of the University of North Carolina. In Dr. Gilbert's division the District Merit Award for the best composition entered by an amateur was won by Celeste Horne of Greensboro with her piano solo "Suite in C Minor."

There will be an important meeting of the German club Thursday morning at 10:30 in Sheppard Memorial Library.
All members are urged to be present.

American Troubadours At College
The American Troubadours, who will appear in the Wright Auditorium at East Carolina Teachers College on Wednesday evening, March 27, at 8 o'clock, will present a program of American music beginning with early colonial songs and including the work of modern composers such as George Gershwin. The program for the evening includes old favorites and many songs seldom heard on the concert stage.

The four singers and the pianist making up the group are young, talented, and good-looking. John D. Merriam, baritone, the director of the American Troubadours, has sung on the concert stage, in opera, in oratorio, and on the radio. With such diverse musical organizations as Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians and the NBC symphony under Leopold Stokowski, he has been heard on radio programs. The idea of giving a program devoted to American music from its beginnings to the present was his. The American Troubadours carry out his original idea.

Mary Edwards, soprano; Jimmie John Howard, mezzo soprano; and John Merriam, baritone, are all young.

A. A. U. W. Hears Mr. Underwood
Sam B. Underwood, Greenville attorney, speaking to the American Association of University Women last night on the legal status of women in North Carolina, said that most laws pertaining especially to women protected rather than discriminated against them.

Because women are an integral part of society, said Mr. Underwood, the whole body of law concerns them. Of special laws applying to their sex, the most complicated are those concerning the status and rights of married women. Formerly a married woman's wages were the property of her husband; this is no longer true, and there is in the law no discrimination against women in regard to their wages. Not so long ago, continued Mr. Underwood, every husband was responsible for the torts and crimes of his wife; he, not she, could be punished for them; but he had the right to chastise his wife.

As late as 1867 the state's courts upheld the right of a man to beat his wife with a switch "not bigger than a man's thumb," but from 1873 the courts denied that a man had any right to chastise his wife under any circumstances.

There are many acts on the books, Mr. Underwood said, concerning the married woman, and all of them are to protect her from possible injustice from her husband. This is true of laws concerning divorce and separation. Whereas such laws, especially those regarding the causes of divorce, formerly discriminated against women, they now are in her favor.

Labor laws in North Carolina also are for the protection of women workers and regulate hours, working conditions, and participation in hazardous employment.

The Martin Act of 1911 is the Marna Act of women, said Mr. Underwood. It established many rights, such as that of a woman to contract in her own name.

Concerning the amendment to the state constitution permitting women to serve on juries, which is to be voted on in the fall, Mr. Underwood stated that he considers it a privilege of "the other field is greener" type. Women may want the right but probably will not enjoy exercising it.

According to Mr. Underwood, of the present state laws that discriminate against women to some extent, most concern a widow's inheritance of property from a husband who died intestate.

Miss Emma Hooper, president of the A. A. U. W., presided over the meeting, which was held in the auditorium of the Sheppard Memorial Library. The program was presented by the Legislative Committee, the chairman of which, Mrs. J. E. Winslow, introduced the speaker. After the program a business session was held.

Two announcements of interest were that the state convention will be held in Durham on April 12-13 and that the amount collected for the fellowship fund was $52. In April the local association will have a business-dinner meeting.

All 4-H Club members in Pitt County and their parents were invited by the Pitt County 4-H Council to attend the March Council meeting on Friday evening, March 22.

The meeting was held in the Armory in Greenville, with Belvoir School Club having the largest number attending. Approximately 175 parents and club members were present. Ruth Moore, president of the 4-H County Council, presided. Allen Parker acted as secretary in the absence of Margaret Williams, secretary of the Council.

The meeting was begun by the group singing "America" after which they repeated together the Pledge to the Flag and the 4-H Club pledge. Parents and club members were given a hearty welcome by the president, Beth Briley of the Sweet Gum Grove Club gave the devotion.

During the business hour W. H. Pruden, assistant Farm Agent, told the group how they can secure homing pigeons free that served with the Army Signal Corps during the war. Miss Ruth Blizell, assistant Home Demonstration Agent, gave the highlights of the Pitt County program for this club year and discussed prizes and awards available to club members.

"The Objectives and Meaning of 4-H Club Work" was the topic discussed by Mr. Pruden. In his talk Mr. Pruden gave a brief history of club work in the state, the objectives of club work and discussed the new guide post that has been set up to serve as a guide for all club work during this club year.

Mr. Pruden also discussed the part of the parent in 4-H Club work, stressing the fact that club work can not go forward without their full cooperation.

The meeting was then turned over to Mrs. B. L. Tyson of the Red Oak Community, who is county recreational leader of the Home Demonstration clubs. Both young and old joined in the fun and frolic and enjoyed the song, games, and stunts led by Mrs. Tyson. At the completion of the recreational hour the group was served ice cream sandwiches.

The proposal that the Rotary Club become sponsors of the Girl Scout's camp was presented to the local club last night by Mrs. W. P. Moore, Girl Scout commissioner. First thing Mrs. Moore expressed appreciation of the Girl Scouts for the use of the Rotary Club building for their troops to meet in each week.

Mrs. Moore said that the Girl Scout Council would like for a Rotarian to be chairman of their Camp Committee and another Rotarian to be chairman of the Girl Scout Camp Hardee Maintenance Committee. She reported that 216 girls had attended Camp Hardee last summer.

An invitation was extended to the Rotarians to come down below Washington and see what a nice camp the girls have. The commissioner told the Rotarians that the Girl Scouts would like for the Rotarians to cooperate in order to show H. M. Hardee, donor of the buildings at the camp, that Greenville citizens appreciate his gift. "Scouting builds character; character builds the world," Mrs. Moore said in concluding her remarks. She was introduced by J. B. Kittrell.

The Rotarians voted to look further into the matter. President John Proctor appointed a committee to make recommendations on the proposals of the Girl Scouts and to report back next week. On the committee were appointed J. B. Kittrell, chairman, Charles Bisette, and Herbert Waldrop.

Next on the motion of Carl Adams and with the second of Joe Moyer the Rotarians voted the adoption of amendments to their constitution and by-laws to change the methods of the election of officers, and to increase the term and number of the Board of Directors. In making the proposal Dr. Adams said the change was sought in line with obtaining a method of election more in the democratic spirit. Up to now the Rotarians have elected a Board of Directors of six who then elected the officers; now, the officers will be elected by the membership.

Visiting Rotarians last night were: Dr. Grady Dixon of Ayden, Troy Ferguson of Raleigh, George Davis of Farmville, Frank Dupree of Farmville, Bill Dukes of Farmville, F. P. Young of Ayden, Robert Dail of Ayden, Joe Swearingen of Monroe, and J. K. Wooster, president of the Kinston Rotary Club. Dr. B. McK. Johnson was greeted as a Baby Rotarian.

Club Considers Scout Proposal

The Fall Guy

BY JOE BARRY

Chapter 212

The assistant district attorney's office was that of an ambitious man. Not a paper sullied the highly polished desk top. A pair of pens stood waiting to leap into the executive hand. The assistant D. A. himself sat with his back to the desk gazing out of the wide windows. He was the picture of concentration. Seconds passed, then the man turned briskly, made a quick note on a desk calendar and looked up, tapping his pencil point on the desk top with a businesslike rhythm.

"Ah, Carnahan, and Henry. Sit down, gentlemen." He pushed a button. "I'm sure you won't mind having notes made of our conversation, Henry."

Rush waved a nonchalant hand. "Not at all, Bryant. Write a book. As a matter of fact, I'd like to have a transcript of our conversation if you don't mind. For my files, you know."

Bryant looked at him suspiciously. "Rush smiled amiably. Bryant decided Rush was not kidding. "Of course, Henry, glad to send you one."

A door opened and a girl walked in with a businesslike stride. Everything was businesslike in this office. Rush decided.

"Okay, Bryant. We're all here, now let's get on with it. What's on your mind?"

"I am at a loss to understand you, Henry."

Rush looked hurt. "I'm certainly sorry about that, Mr. Bryant," he said. "What have I done?"

Bryant smiled a businesslike smile. "I'm afraid, Henry, that your sins are those of omission rather than commission. It's what you haven't done that concerns me."

"Is that so? What have I forgotten to do now?"

"I think you are quite aware of what you haven't done, Henry. In the matter of the murder of Paul Germaine, Jr., he opened a drawer and extracted a sheaf of papers, "my information is that you are withholding several vital facts that are necessary to the police investigation of the crime."

Rush nodded. "That's bad, isn't it?"

"I told you in the beginning that you were withholding information necessary to the solution of the crime."

"Is that interfering? The police can find out everything I have. I'm not holding them back."

Bryant sputtered. "I can hold you as a material witness, Henry. Perhaps a few days in a cell will teach you respect for law and order. Do you think you are better equipped than the Chicago police to solve this crime? Do you think for one moment—"

"Yes," said Rush.

"Yes, what? stammered Bryant. "You asked me if I thought I was better equipped to solve this case than the Chicago police. I said yes. Carnahan colored slightly. "Sorry, Sam. That's no reflection on you. The difference is that in this case I can do things that the police can't do. My hands aren't tied by legal procedure. I can blast ahead on my own and blow things open. The police can't do that. This is not routine. Bryant. There are cross-purposes involved that it would take the police six months to run down. I can get them in tenth of the time."

"Surely, Henry, you must see the wisdom in cooperating with the police?"

"I am cooperating with them," Rush said. "I'm cooperating so damn hard that in a few days I'll hand them the murderer all tied up in a neat little package. It'll be so neat that even you can get a conviction. Then you can run for governor."

"That's enough, Henry," Bryant's voice was sharp, imperative. "I've stood your impertinence as long as I intend to. He reached for a phone on his desk. "I'm swearing out a warrant. I intend to hold you as a material witness."

Rush smiled a slow smile. "You'd better let me use the phone before you do," he said.

Bryant looked at him for a moment, then shoved the phone across the desk with a vicious push.

Rush dialed a number and waited. "Mr. Germaine, please," he said. "Hello, Mr. Germaine. This is Henry. I'm running into a little trouble. A man named Bryant wants to put me in jail. Yes, he accuses me of withholding valuable information. Yes, I am. I'm withholding it all right, but he'll throw a wrench as big as a house into the machinery if I give it to him. Yes, okay. He wants to talk to you, Bryant." Rush pushed the phone back across the desk. Bryant took it gingerly as if expecting it to grow teeth.

"Hello, Mr. Germaine," he said in a voice that was silky yet managed to carry an undertone of business-like. He listened a moment. "But, Mr. Germaine we can't—Yes, of course, yes, Mr. Germaine. He listened for a long moment, a sickly smile on his face. "Yes, of course, Mr. Germaine. You can count on me. Good-bye. The good-bye was an idle gesture. Everyone in the room heard the bang of Germaine's phone on its cradle. Bryant turned to Rush. He swallowed deep in his throat. He was, Rush thought, the perfect picture of a man eating crow. He felt suddenly sorry for the deflated figure before him.

"I seem to have missed several points, Henry," said Bryant in a mere approximation of his usually vibrant voice. "Mr. Germaine suggested several things that had not occurred to me." He swallowed again. "I think you can count on complete cooperation from this office from here on out."

Rush's thank-you was genuine. He had no desire to twist the knife he had plunged into his balloon.

"Is there anything we can do for you now?" asked Bryant.

"Not that I can think of," said Rush and turned to leave.

In the hall outside Carnahan stopped Rush.

"This is where I leave you," he said, and smiled. "There was very little that this was Big Mick, and nice. Bryant will have indignation for a week over this afternoon. He hasn't eaten a luncheon like that in years."

Chapter 22

Barney's was cool when Rush returned to the dinness of a booth. He ordered ham on rye with his beer and sat deep in thought as he ate. He was so immersed in introspection that it was seconds before he realized that the seat opposite him was no longer vacant.

"That's a neat trick, chum," he said. "What's on your mind?"

Otho Brin regarded him from hollow eyes. His voice, when he spoke, was funeral as always.

"There are several things I wish to discuss with you," he said.

"This must be my day to discuss things with people," said Rush. "Go right ahead and discuss."

"I should like to make a pact with you, Mr. Henry."

"So," said Rush around a mouthful of ham.

"In all my life I have never felt it necessary to call upon another for help. In this particular case too many complications have arisen. The stakes are too large to risk them because I dislike working in partnership. There is enough involved to satisfy two people. Hence, I ask you to share and share alike with me."

"Share what?" asked Rush.

Brin stared at him in surprise. "I assume there is nothing illegal in your suggestion," he said.

Brin looked at him coldly. "Of course not," he said. "My hands are clean. No man can accuse me of any crime."

"That's strange," said Rush. "In these parts we have always had the archaic idea that murder is illegal. It says so in the laws."

"What has murder to do with me?" asked Brin in a tight voice.

"Now you're asking my questions," said Rush. "You tell me. What has murder to do with you?"

"Nothing," he repeated. "My hands are clean."

"You said that," Rush said. "I can't care about your hands. What I'm interested in is who killed Paul Germaine. You were within fifty feet of his body when it was found, by your own admission. You had opportunity. You had motive. You are a neat a fall guy for that killing as I ever saw."

Brin seemed to grow larger in his seat. He stretched to his full length and peered down at Rush.

"Those are dangerous words, my friend." His voice was deep and sonorous with menace heavy in every word. "I am Otho Brin. I fear no man. I make my own laws. My mission requires the emeralds. Let no man stand in my quizzicality."

Rush eyed him quizzically. "Calm down, Otho," he said. "Nobody's putting the arm on you yet. Sit still and tell me some things."

"What is it you wish to know?" he asked.

"What you were doing at the mouth of that alley whes Germaine was killed?"

"I was waiting for Germaine. He had promised to meet me there."

"He promised to meet you? How in hell did you get in touch with him?" Rush was honestly surprised.

It was Otho's turn to be surprised. "I called him up. I was following Miss O'Hara and saw her strike up an acquaintance with young Germaine. I asked who he was, a bartender knew. I called him up and made an appointment."

"As simple as that," said Rush wonderingly. Was he willing to meet you?"

"He was anxious to meet me. I felt that he was in over his head and welcomed any outside assistance in disposing of the gems."

Brin returned to his original purpose. "Let the dead rest. Our concern is with the living. You have not answered my original proposition. Will you join me in my search for the emeralds?"

"No, Otho," said Rush. "I won't. I'm not primarily interested in the emeralds. I'm interested in the murderer. He's my job. You go get your emeralds, if you can," he added.

Otho took that as a challenge. "If you are not with me you are against me and no man shall stand in my path." He then stalked majestically out of Barney's.

The shadows on the east side of State Street were long, as Rush left Barney's. At the corner he paused for the lights to change, then moved out to cross the intersection. A flash in the corner of his eyes saved him. A car, which had left the curb in front of Barney's suddenly gathered speed and shot around the corner. Rush jumped back a fraction of a second too late to miss it entirely. A fender caught him and threw him bodily to the pavement. But as the car disappeared around the far corner he memorized its license plates. It all happened in the space of ten seconds.

He shoved his way through the crowd that had collected and made his way across the street. Halfway up in the next block he turned into his building and took the elevator to his office. There he dialed police headquarters and asked for Carnahan.

"Sam," he said when he had the homicide head, "get me the owner of a Buick, license number 132-846B. Don't ask questions, just get it for me quick."

"Where'd you get that number, Rush?" Carnahan asked.

"That's my business. Who owns it?"

"A maiden lady on the North Side. She reported it missing this morning."

Rush smiled. That was his answer. "Okay, Thanks, Sam."

Rush lowered the phone to its cradle. So Big Mick wanted him out of the way bad enough to risk a knock-over in the Loop. Big Mick was the only party involved who could lay his hands on someone to handle a stolen car, on a moment's notice. Jago would have been more than willing to handle it.

"This is where I leave you," he said, and smiled. "There was very little that this was Big Mick, and he had an urgent reason for wishing Rush knocked off. Rush smiled again. Maybe he'd better call on Big Mick again. The lesson needed repeating.

Strength FOR THE DAY

By KARL L. DOUGLAS

NATURE OF THE SOUL

"What is the soul?" One of my readers has written me asking this question. It is not an easy question to answer. The Bible speaks a great deal about the soul but does not define it. The word in both Hebrew and Greek means "life." The Greek word is "psyche" from which we get the English word "psyche" meaning "mind" or "soul." The Bible speaks of the inner springs of action, or "the spiritual being as distinct from the body."

The Bible teaches that in addition to the visible physical order with which we can come in contact through the five senses, there is an invisible spiritual order through which we come in contact only by faith. Our souls partake of the nature of this spiritual order and are not of the nature of the physical order. God created the soul upon man alone among all his creatures when He made man in His image and after His likeness.

Life on earth is a school in which, by the exercise of our wills and the employment of religious faith, we prepare the spiritual part of our nature, known as the soul, for eternal fellowship with God. God has provided Christ as his ambassador, that through him our souls might be led into an experience which the Bible calls "everlasting life."

WASHINGTON DAYBOOK

By JACK STINNETT

(Second of Two Articles)

Washington—A few days ago, a national weekly magazine (Collier's) carried a cartoon. It showed a bungalow being blasted out here and there.

The caption, a quote from the tenant to a fireman, read: "Boy, just wait until that 155-mm. table lamp blows up."

This is supposed to be that class of humor some one called "sublimation of the ridiculous."

The idea isn't either ridiculous or sublime. According to the best authorities, the armed forces themselves, hundreds of thousands of dangerous souvenirs of war are already loose in the land and, in spite of all efforts to stop them, still are coming in.

The Marine Corps magazine, Leatherneck, lists some of these as hand grenades, bombs, land and anti-personnel mines, daisy cutters, booby traps, butterfly bombs and innumerable weapons with live shells in the chambers.

In 1938, I think it was, a youngster leaned out of a third floor tenement in Brooklyn, yelled to his playmates in the cemented court below, "Look out, I'm going to bomb 'em!" He let fly a World War I hand grenade that had been lying around the house for 10 years before he was born. The result: two dead, three injured children.

It is impossible to estimate how many men gave their lives in the war to souvenir hunting. Leatherneck has this to say:

"The average American is the most persistent and ingenious curio collector. Putting him in uniform and taking him out of his home community stimulated this collecting mania to the point where it has become an international phenomenon."

That's where the trail of death started among our souvenir hunters of World War II. That's not where it will end.

Legal obstacles at source and port of entry aren't the only ones being brought to bear in an effort to forestall the deadly effects of these souvenirs.

Not only servicemen but "innocent" recipients already have been prosecuted for possession or attempting to pass along these weapons. So far, existing laws and regulations are inadequate to cope with the situation.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover and numerous police agencies want the federal, state and city firearms laws strengthened. On the honest civilian side, there will not be any solution until collectors realize that they may be harboring the instruments of tomorrow's murders and accidental deaths.

The Nation . . .

sterling to buy English machinery whose output would pay off the loan. Or a private company in Brazil might borrow dollars, if the Brazilian government approved, to buy U. S. equipment to build a new industry.

The World Bank could make the loans directly, or it might simply guarantee payment in order to help Brazil or China borrow from private lenders. Foreign bonds issues offered to Americans might be so guaranteed.

In any such case, the risk would be shared all around. If a country failed to repay, every member of the Bank would ante up its share of the loss in direct proportion to its original subscription.

The Bank thus has set the stage for increasing exports, fostering economic cooperation.

But an element of American hard-headedness showed up at Savannah which indicated the United States was protecting its own interests as well.

It showed up in Chairman Fred M. Vinson's flat insistence on Washington as permanent home of the Bank, although most foreign delegations were at first opposed.

It showed up again in the U. S. decision to install an American as president of the Bank.

But it showed up most plainly in this country's evident willingness to welcome Italy into Bank membership, even though this might be an affront to good friends, Greece; for instance, which was trampled by Italy-German aggression, believes it would be unfair if she, the victim, should be called on to guarantee a share of the defaults, if any, of Italy, the erstwhile bully.

The decision cannot be made before next September, when the Bank's board of governors next meets, but one American delegate said: "I'd bet my last dollar there'll be no change in our position."

Boiled down, this was the reason he gave: As long as Italy stays on the bill, if Italy is to get off relief, she'll need loans. If she gets loans it is good business to see that this country doesn't carry all the risk.

Sharing Of . . .

factured in the original form in which it was used in the Nagasaki bomb. The understanding of all concerned, he said, is that once the plutonium is "denatured," it is extremely difficult to return to its original qualities.

There was a feeling among Senators, also, that the reported denaturing discovery may open the way for commercial use of atomic energy. Dr. Edward U. Condon, director of the government's bureau of standards and scientific adviser to the atomic committee, acknowledged that this was the "implication" of the discovery.

Condon said ways have been found to harness nuclear fission for industrial purposes. But the danger has been, he added, that a plant thus turning out atomic power might at the same time be making bombs as a by-product.

Hence, the physicist told a reporter, the big problem the new process will solve is that of "traffic in plutonium rather than its engineering use."

UNRRA . . .

man had told the UNRRA that a return to "the war-time controls" would save the lives of countless thousands.

As an alternative to his plea, the committee was understood to be planning a recommendation under which supplying countries—those with food available for relief elsewhere—would take over the responsibility of meeting UNRRA requirements.

This, in the case of the United States for example, might mean an indirect rationing—that this country, in collecting its share of UNRRA's requirements, would obtain the food from producers before it reached the public.

Coal Strike . . .

move to cancel the present year-old agreement, effective at midnight Sunday, the operators and a committee of UMW representatives reached a critical phase in negotiations toward a new pact.

The operators presented to Lewis yesterday a summation of their position on the nine general proposals he submitted. This in effect amounted to a declaration of counter-offers—without getting too specific.

Lewis did not throw out the proposition immediately, so the operators decided to remain silent until the UMW leader makes clear his reaction. The fact that the miners' negotiating committee still had it under study was taken to be slightly encouraging. At least it was keeping the negotiations alive another day.

This was the 15th day provided in the contract for negotiations, and nobody in or out of the conferences would say he could detect even slight progress.

Lewis, however, seemed in good spirits yesterday as he entered the contract negotiations. And he came out whistling.

UAW Reviews . . .

yesterday's session was thrown into an uproar by a sudden, but futile attempt on the part of the Reuther supporters to force a debate between the two candidates.

Thomas issued a folder which made a further assault on Reuther's leadership of the General Motors strike. Thomas praised the "guts" of the strikers but said Reuther showed "unscrupulous irresponsibility." He said Reuther's wage demand on General Motors threw a "bombshell" into the whole CIO postwar strategy, which, he added, was to "apply the pressure" through steel rather than the auto industry.

Reuther, UAW vice-president, addressing a rally last night, replied that Thomas lacked courage because he refused a challenge to debate with him.

Reuther then accused his opponents of mud-slinging and character assassination, said he did not want to be president if he had to resort to such tactics, and devoted most of his speech outlining a program for the union.

In so doing he got in a resounding whack at AFL leaders, declaring that "I think some day we are going to free the AFL rank and file from those bureaucrats."

trial structure used for manufacturing, processing or assembling; logging and lumber camp; pier structure for a commercial airport or carrier terminal; railway or street car building; research laboratory; pilot plant; motion picture set; utility structure, including telephone and telegraph; gas or petroleum refining or distribution, except service stations and garages—$15,000 a job.

Other structures—$200 a job. Under the order, no job which ordinarily would be done as a single piece of work may be subdivided for the purpose of coming within the cost allowances. However, a CPA official explained, there is no limit on the number of separate jobs which may be undertaken while the order is in effect.

Technically the order requires formal authorization before even homes for veterans can be built. The National Housing Administration expects to give these homes the green light, however, under its emergency housing program for veterans.

Congress Today...

President Truman's nomination of W. Averell Harriman to be ambassador to Great Britain, and of John G. Winant to be U. S. representative on the United Nations Economic and Social Council, reached the Senate.

Congress heard today that scientists have tamed the atom for industrial use and perhaps thus simplified the sharing of atomic energy secrets with other nations.

Members of the Senate Special Atomic Committee were told that both plutonium and U-235, the substances which go into the atom bomb, can be "denatured" to prevent their use for explosives without impairing their value for industrial atomic power.

One Senator suggested that atomic energy know-how could be shared safely now by devising a tight control of all fissionable materials and treating them so they would be good for industrial purposes only.

Housing Expediter Wilson W. Wyatt, still fighting for President Truman's entire emergency housing program, was called before a Senate Banking subcommittee to explain why he wants a $600,000,000 subsidy fund.

The House turned down the proposal that Wyatt be provided with the money to spur building material output.

Representatives of 20 women organizations, who declare they are determined to have OPA's continued protection from higher rents and store prices, were granted a hearing by the House Banking Committee. The House group is considering legislation to extend OPA's life beyond the June 30 expiration date.

Senator Austin (R-Vt.), ranking Republican of the Senate Military Committee, said he had drawn a bill to continue the draft act for a year beyond May 15 and to limit service of inductees to 18 months.

withdrawal of Soviet troops from Iran is concerned, as is known this question has already been solved in a positive means by agreement between the Soviet government and the government of Iran.

Meanwhile, a dispatch from Tehran quoted Prince Pirouz, minister of state and propaganda, as saying that the Russian withdrawal began last Sunday night and was continuing.

Informed foreign quarters in Moscow, commenting on a Soviet announcement that all Red army troops would be out of Iran within five or six weeks if nothing "unforeseen" developed, said they believed Iran had promised that no such development would occur.

These informants said among the "unforeseen" occurrences that might halt the Soviet withdrawal would be disturbances and anti-Soviet demonstrations near the Russian security frontier; violation of the 1921 Russian-Iranian agreement; subversive actions against withdrawing Red army units; moves by Iran to grant oil concessions to foreign powers in areas adjoining the Soviet frontier; hostile acts or propaganda by groups considered reactionary by Russia, which could be interpreted as endangering Russian security.

Additional light on the Iranian situation was expected to be cast shortly by a report from the British ambassador to that country.

mayor of Charlotte, Baxter is ill in a Charlotte hospital. George E. Garand, district engineer of the Civil Aeronautics Administration; Congressman Herbert C. Bonner, Jack Spain, secretary to U. S. Sen. Clyde R. Hoey, and county and city officials from numerous eastern cities were present. Mayor Jack Boyd welcomed the visitors to the city.

Consistent with their policy of recommending no handicaps for aviation in the state, such as added rules and regulations beyond those prescribed by the Civil Aeronautics Administration, and added aviation taxation, the commission reaffirmed its stand on this matter. Going further, the body cited the need for local, state and national cooperation in airport construction, maintenance and operation in North Carolina.

"This commission," Senator Rowe said, "was created by an act which grew out of a study made by the previous commission. There are two well known successful aviation operators of this commission who hold the respect and admiration of those who fly in this and other states. All of us," Rowe said, "are encouraged by the unanimity of thought regarding the far reaching, unselfish and unhampered program of aviation development in this state. At this time we urge every community to air-mark some outstanding building, pointing the way to the nearest airport. The CAA in Washington will gladly furnish without cost plans and specification for these signs."

"It is a mark of progress and a beacon of safety for those who fly to have access to these highway markers of the air. The commission was gratified with facilities available at the Greenville airport and was delighted to see the runways turned over by the Navy in such excellent condition. In comparison with other situations, Greenville is in an enviable position because it has the airport at the outset and is ready to welcome the airlines, private pilots, students to start operations immediately. Such installations mean much to this and other communities," Rowe said.

The commission gave stress to the safety factor of flying. George Franklin of Raleigh, secretary of the commission, advised that "the League of Municipalities," of which he is the director of information, "will be glad to supply all officials with information regarding the safety regulations of CAA. Every law enforcement officer should familiarize himself with the regulations and enforce them strictly in the interest of public safety. The greatest hazard to aviation today is low and dangerous flying. It must be stopped if aviation is to make progress."

The commission discussed federal aid for airports and minimum requirements for landing fields. The safety factor, maintenance and operation were discussed in detail. Members of the commission left this afternoon for Wilmington.

where a similar district meeting will be held tonight.

of from $25,000,000 to $40,000,000 might be established for the college. The same sources said that trustees of the college are not empowered to take any final action in the matter, but that the board may make a recommendation after its meeting today. Any recommendation would be subject to approval of the North Carolina Baptist Convention, which will meet next November in Asheville.

Recommendations also may be made by the State Education Council of the denomination, which has a meeting scheduled here next month.

In addition, the denomination's general board, meeting in Winston-Salem in June, may make recommendations on the proposed gift and transfer of the college.

Removal of the college to Winston-Salem would bring within one area all the facilities of the present Baptist college. The Bowman Gray Medical School of Wake Forest and Baptist State Hospital already are located in Winston-Salem. The medical school, established eight years ago with $2,500,000 given by heirs of the late Bowman Gray, graduated its first four-year class in 1944.

MEAT SHIPMENTS READY

Buenos Aires, March 26—(AP)—Fifty thousand workers returned to their jobs at Argentine meat packing plants today, ending a 25-day strike which paralyzed the industry. Plant officials said they expected shipments of meat to Europe would be resumed tomorrow.

Seventy-seven thousand tons of meat—42,000 canned and 35,000 frozen—were reported ready for immediate shipment.

Sports

New York, March 26—(AP)—Seven-foot Bob Kurland, who developed from an awkward player four years ago into one of the game's most polished performers, winds up his college basketball career tonight as the Oklahoma Aggies battle North Carolina for the NCAA championship.

Principally because of Kurland, the nation's leading scorer at 620 points, the Aggies have been installed eight-point favorites over the Tarheels in this fitting climax to the first post-war campaign. Another sellout crowd of 16,400 is certain to pack Madison Square Garden.

The cowboys, winner of 30 of 32 games and with most of last year's championship quintet back, seem confident about their chances of becoming the first team to win the national crown two straight years. Their current winning streak has reached 14.

"My boys are great competitors," explained Coach Hank Iba of the Stillwater, Okla. aggregation. "I look for a tremendous game with the winning team the one which will hit on its outside shots."

"Kurland has improved 50 percent in the last month," Iba went on. "Until then he was a very poor tipper-in of rebounds and lacked confidence in his spin shots. Now he has mastered both. Then, too, Weldon Kern's ankle is okay again. He hurt it against Arkansas on Feb. 15 and didn't play again until the Oklahoma game on March 13."

North Carolina, winner of 29 of 33 games, defeated New York University and Ohio State to win the eastern NCAA crown while the Aggies swept aside Baylor and California to take western honors at Kansas City. The Tarheels concede the Aggies are the logical favorite, but that's about all.

"I believe if our players play their normal game," asserted Coach Ben Carnevale of the Tarheels, "that we will have a decent chance to win."

Hercie "Bones" McKinney, six-foot six-inch center, has been assigned the task of trying to stop Kurland. If he succeeds and John Dillon gets "hot" with his famed hook shot, followers figure North Carolina will be "in."

The game is scheduled to start around 10:15 p. m. (EST) after California and Ohio State clash in a preliminary to determine third and fourth place.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 26—(AP)—Bill Dickey's chances of catching a full quota of games for the Yankees this year, despite his 38 years and his long seige in the Navy, do not appear quite so bright as they did up to a week ago. He is having difficulty getting his legs in shape.

That is about the last thing anyone would have picked to happen to the man many regard as the greatest catcher of them all. Before the war Dickey's long legs were one of the wonders of the game.

One of the big reasons for their excellence was the fact that Bill devoted a large part of his winters to bird hunting, his greatest love next to baseball. Tramping up and down the hills kept his legs toned up. He is learning now that the somewhat sedentary job he had in the Navy did him no good.

After doing his first four-inning stint behind the plate the other day he reported that he was one large ache and pain from the waist down. He asked for a chance to work it out, however, and Manager Joseph V. McCarthy obliged by naming him to start yesterday's game with Cleveland. Dickey then hit himself on the toe with a batted ball during the pre-game practice, forcing him to withdraw, and that might prove an additional setback.

New York, March 26—(AP)—Having received reports and suggestions from various basketball associations, the case sport's national rules committee will get to work today and decide what changes will be made for the 1946-7 season.

The committee will act on three suggestions made by the National Basketball Coaches Association at its meeting here last weekend.

1. Redefine the phrase, "in the act of shooting," in the rule covering a foul committed against a player trying for a field goal, in order to give the shooter more leeway and thus prevent so many goals being disallowed.

2. Allow an offensive team to retain possession of the ball after a free throw attempt when a player is fouled in the last two minutes of a game.
3. Amend the rules to permit substitutions in the last four minutes of a game only when time has been taken out.

New Ambassador Will See Stalin

Frankfurt, Germany, March 26—(AP)—Lt. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, the United States' new ambassador to Russia now en route to Moscow, told reporters here today he would tell Prime Minister Stalin "that the American people wanted a reassurance of the Soviet Union's motives."

Arriving at Eschborn Airport near Frankfurt, Smith said that the strain in relations with Russia "definitely eased today" as a result of new developments in Iran.

He said he had no specific questions to take up with Stalin, but that he wanted "to make clear the change in the American attitude."

Smith said he would tell the Soviet leader that there was "a great amount of doubt as to just what Russia wants and what her motives are."

"The American people want to be reassured that the Russians are determined, as we are, to make the United Nations Organization a potent agency for world peace," he said. "There has to be a certain amount of give and take on both sides."

Truce Teams Will Go Into Troubled Zones

Peiping, March 26—(AP)—Sources close to executive headquarters said today that truce-enforcement teams would enter southern Manchuria, probably Thursday, and thus apparently break a Chinese government-Communist deadlock which has threatened civil war.

These sources said four truce teams, which succeeded in halting the fighting elsewhere in China, probably would go to such trouble zones as Fushun, east of Mukden; Szejingka, north of Mukden; and the southern part of Yingkow—all scenes of local clashes.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, March 26—(AP)—Some stocks showed strength in today's stock market although many leaders fell by the wayside.
Some profit cashing was inspired by the realization that the 60-stock average had regained about 70 percent of the February slump.

While individual gains ran to around 5 points near the close, losers of as much were plentiful.
Transfers were in the neighborhood of 1,500,000 shares.

State Commissioners Praise Airport At Banquet Here

By CHESTER WALSH
As a result of the meeting of the North Carolina Aeronautics Commission's meeting here today Greenville, North Carolina, will become better fixed in the minds of the public, Mayor Jack Boyd said last night at a banquet for the visitors at the Woman's Club given by the Pitt County-City of Greenville Airport Commission.

Leave its equipment at the airport when it surrenders its lease. He said Greenville will do well to arrange for Semi-Central Airlines to make this a stopping point.

Roy Rowe of Burgaw, chairman of the state commission, was tremendously impressed with the three, 5,000-foot paved runways, and said the state commission would assist the local commission in placing the air port in good hands. He paid tribute to former Mayor Bruce Suggs, the Junior Chamber of Commerce and Congressman Bonner for their good work in persuading the Navy Department to develop the airport.

William J. Bray, assistant to the president of Penn-Central Air Lines, was accorded the finest welcome he ever received when he spoke favorably of the airport facilities here. Bray said he and Congressman Bonner grew up together in Washington, and he recalled the first district congressman's untiring activities in securing the airport for Greenville. He thanked the congressman for sending him here to look over the airport facilities for Penn-Central.

W. C. Olsen, nationally known civil engineer, a pilot for 15 years and the designer of the Cherry Point Marine Base, said Greenville was the nearly perfect airport.

Other members of the state commission who spoke were Paul McMurray of Asheville, Tom Davis of Winston-Salem and George C. Franklin of Raleigh, executive secretary. Mayor H. H. Baxter of Charlotte was ill and did not attend. Other speakers were Jack Spain, Truman Miller, president of Serv-Air at the Raleigh airport; former Mayor B. B. Suggs; G. H. Pittman, L. M. Buchanan, J. Noah Williams, N. C. Brooks, Willard T. Kyzer, Maj. Charles J. Parker, former newspaperman, J. B. Kittrell, J. A. Watson, Clint Bowen, Ed E. Rawl, John Proctor, Tom Wilson, George Garafalo of Charlotte, of the CAA; Walter L. Harrington, N. O. Van-Nortwick, Jr., J. Knott Proctor, Henry L. Rivers, Martin Swartz, Jasper L. Smith, Brown Hodges, Maj. G. H. Pittman, Jr., and Chester Walsh.

The members of the North Carolina Aeronautics Commission flew to Greenville yesterday afternoon. The pilots took county and city and local airport commission officials for rides some of them flying for the first time. This morning Truman Miller of Raleigh took up several including a newspaperman, in his twin-engine Cessna. Greenville looks good any way you look at it.

Tojo Showing Signs Of Growing Amnesia

Tokyo, March 26—(AP)—Former Premier Hideko Tojo, awaiting trials as Japan's number one war criminal and fearing the worst, has begun to lose his memory, authoritative Japanese sources said today.

The Japanese added that American officials were "very dissatisfied" with this development and had expressed belief Tojo was "feigning."

The reliable sources said that during questioning by American prosecutors, the former premier found he was no longer able to recall dates and other important details of momentous events of his reign.

They reported Tojo said his "amnesia" was caused by his attempted suicide, when he shot himself in the chest with a small caliber revolver.

The Japanese added that Tojo was in good health and "quite calm." In contrast to his former "depressed attitude." He is convinced, they said, that he will never leave prison alive.

erations against income tax evaders.

During the first six months of the current fiscal year, assistant revenue commissioner William T. Sherwood told the committee, additional tax assessments which are "practically 100 per cent collectible" were $172,587,000 in excess of assessments for the corresponding period of the preceding year.

Approximately 40,000 leads on attempted evasions have been given the bureau, Sherwood said, and many more tips are expected.

The leads have been furnished he said, by "public-spirited citizens, x x x disgruntled former employees, x x x jealous neighbors" and in some cases have grown out of family disagreements.

In requesting the additional fund, Sherwood said he was confident the new personnel it would provide would enable the bureau to recover "hundreds of millions of dollars of unreported taxes."

The committee said the additional money would permit an increase in revenue bureau personnel from 56,310 to approximately 63,726 and gives the bureau current year funds of $176,650,000. The House recently voted $184,700,000 for the bureau's work for the fiscal year starting next July 1, but the Senate has not yet acted.

Of the overall total in the bill, $181,269,469 was for the cost of recently-enacted pay-rise legislation affecting departmental employees, and $11,416,526 was earmarked for payment of judgments and authorized claims against the government.

Britain And U. S. . . .

"I propose that the case not be placed on the agenda."

Byrnes said that if an agreement had been reached Russia should have filed a statement of this before the council.

"The Iranian government hasn't withdrawn its complaint," he said. "All that is now contemplated," Byrnes argued, "is the adoption of an agenda which would give to the Iranian government an opportunity to present its case. Surely the United Nations cannot deny to any government the opportunity to present the facts."

Gromyko said Iran's letter of appeal for council help contained subject matter not "fit to be placed on the agenda" of the council.

He spoke after council President Quo Tai Shi of China had swept aside as unready for action technical items on the agenda today's council session, second in America, and plunged the peace enforcement agency into discussion of the tangled Iranian issue.

Both American and British representatives had made it plain before the meeting that they intended to insist on a full and immediate report from the Soviet Union and Iran on what they have agreed to about getting Red Army troops out of the middle eastern nation. Gromyko had let it be known that, barring new instructions from Moscow, he would seek to block any immediate consideration.

The great powers went into today's meeting split along the usual line, but split much less seriously than if Russian troops had not been at the time already withdrawing from Iran.

The Soviet Council member got around to describing Iranian charges as unfit for council consideration after citing Associated Press Correspondent Eddy Gilmore's letter from Prime Minister Stalin last Friday as evidence that Stalin fully backs the United Nations and its Security Council.

Elks To Eat Chicken And Enjoy Program

The Greenville Elks Lodge will be host to the members Thursday evening at a barbecued chicken supper and a special program of music and singing. The musical program will begin at 6:30. The supper will be served at 7:30, and the regular lodge meeting will begin at 8 o'clock. Herman L. Norris, house manager, stated.

The entertainers have an exceptionally good program—tuneful music and sparkling songs.

Following the period of fellowship and feasting, the lodge will elect officers for the coming year. The Nominating Committee, Bill White, Dr. P. W. Pickelsimer and Guy V. Smith, will submit its report. Four officers are to be elected. Other officers are appointed by the exalted ruler.

Acting President Of College In Memphis

Dr. Howard J. McGinnis, acting president of East Carolina Teachers College, is in Memphis, Tenn., attending the annual meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, which began today and ends Thursday.

While in Memphis, Dr. McGinnis will attend meetings of several committees of the Higher Commission of the Association, of which he has been a member the past eight years. He was formerly a member of the Committee on Standards and is now serving on the committee on reports, which determines the eligibility to membership of colleges that have not met one or more standards of the association.

Experienced Men Needed By Army

Lt. James B. Pagett, commanding officer of the Army recruiting station, City Hall Building, Greenville, announced today that he had just received information that men who served in armored forces and were honorably discharged can now re-enlist for the Second Armored Division at Camp Hood, Texas. This opportunity will only be open until April 7th, 1946. Grades in which enlistments are accomplished will be governed by current regulations. Qualified veterans can be assigned to this division regardless of period of enlistment. Interested men can get full details at the Army recruiting office daily from 8 to 5.
