

KU KLUX KLAN FIGURING IN GEORGIA RACE

Candidate Charges Opponents With Klan Sympathy In State Politics

Atlanta, May 31—(AP)—The resurgent Ku Klux Klan, faced with a fight to retain its charter and with a $700,000 bill from the tax collector, has become a primary issue in Georgia's torrid gubernatorial race.

Gov. Ellis Arnall, who announced he would seek through judicial and possibly legislative channels to "dehood" the order, contends the Klan's chief political preoccupation is the governor's contest.

For days the Arnall-backed candidate, James V. Carmichael, young business man and ex-legislator, has been attributing Klan sympathies to his opponents, ex-Governors Gene Talmadge and E. D. Rivers.

The admitted aim of the Klan is retention of the traditional "White Democratic Primary" of Georgia, which the U. S. Supreme Court has said must go.

Talmadge, who is campaigning on a program of "white supremacy," has said that he would welcome votes from the Klan or anyone else favoring circumvention of the Supreme Court's order through legislative act.

Rivers has not made negro voting an issue, and has had nothing to say about the Klan. Carmichael, however, has accused him of close affiliation with the Klan in his administrations.

At the time of the Klan's recent "rebirth," CIO leaders denounced it as anti-labor and anti-CIO. Klan officials denied this, saying it was only anti-Communist.

Developments, however, have put the professed anti-Klan candidate at loggerheads with the CIO. Carmichael accuses the CIO-PAC of trying to dominate Georgia politics and of smearing him as anti-labor.

Carmichael, manager of Bell Aircraft's vast bomber plant at Marietta in wartime, operates a small furniture factory at Marietta. It was closed recently, Carmichael says, for lack of materials. The CIO-affiliated union charged a lock-out.

Carmichael says the PAC is out to defeat him and is supporting his opponents.

Stettinius Turns In Resignation

Washington, May 31—(AP)—Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., has submitted his resignation as the government's representative on the United Nations Security Council, but President Truman said today he will refuse to accept it.

Mr. Truman told a news conference both he and Secretary of State Byrnes want Stettinius to remain as the United States delegate and he believed that Stettinius would agree to do so.

It was the third time Stettinius had advised Mr. Truman that he was ready to leave government service and return to private life.

This time, it is understood, he has informed the President that he considered his major work in the United Nations accomplished since the organization is now a going concern.

There have been persistent reports that Stettinius was not particularly pleased with the role of UN representative, after Mr. Truman and Secretary of State Byrnes made clear that policy was being shaped in Washington rather than by the UN delegate in New York. Byrnes also had twice moved in on United Nations meetings to handle the difficult Iranian and atomic control issues.

The NATION TODAY

By James Marlow

Washington, May 31—(AP)—The manner in which John L. Lewis conducted coal strike negotiations and the settlement he obtained may raise new problems for employers.

Now that the strike is over, they had better ask themselves:

1. What had he done to collective bargaining?

2. Had he set a pattern for a new kind of union demand; a welfare fund to be paid for by employers?

Lewis did not originate the idea of a welfare fund. A number of them are in operation and have been for several years.

But they were all arranged quietly, without any of the Lewis fanfare and drama. However, his welfare fund demands stand out for two reasons.

1. They received the blessing of the government. The government says a cent of every ton of coal mined, while the government holds the mines, will go to such a fund.

2. Lewis, by the publicity given his welfare demand, has brought the whole idea of such a fund up to the front in American thinking.

True, he had to strike and put the nation in sore straits for lack

Soviet Delegate Assails Proposal

Mrs. Roosevelt's Inclusion Of "Free Information" In Human Rights Report Called Superficial; Franco Evidence Completed Today; French Answer Siam Charge

By LARRY HAUCK

New York, May 31—(AP)—The United Nations Economic and Social Council took up the report of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's Commission on Human Rights today and the Russian delegate immediately objected to emphasis given freedom of information.

The commission report called for setting up a sub-commission of 12 members to study the free flow of information.

The commission report called for setting up a sub-commission of 12 members to study the free flow of information.

Nikolai J. Feonov, Soviet representative, said it appeared that "discrimination against minorities" and other questions were considered "less important than freedom of the press."

Feonov then brought up the controversial question of putting representatives of nations or individual experts on the various commissions. He reiterated the stand taken by Russians that all the members should directly represent their own governments.

He cited rights granted to citizens of Russia under the Soviet constitution and declared:

"I am happy to tell the council that the country I represent here not only mentions human rights in its constitution, but it actually follows through. Human rights are guaranteed by law."

He added that the citizens of the U.S.S.R. "have all the basic freedom."

Fernand Dehousse, Belgian delegate, said a convention should be adopted making it compulsory for all member nations to publish news supplied by the United Nations.

He declared the question of the press was an important one for the UN and said that the press in some instances had distorted news of the League of Nations.

TWO TEACHERS LEAVING ETC

Last Two Members of Original Faculty Retire At End Of Term

East Carolina Teachers College will lose the last two members of its original faculty when Miss Mamie E. Jenkins and Miss Kate W. Lewis retire as teachers at the end of the present school year.

Both came to Greenville in 1909, the year the East Carolina Teachers Training School opened its door to students, and have been faculty members for thirty-six years. They played a large part in developing the school from its small beginning to its place as one of the leading educational institutions of the state.

Miss Mamie E. Jenkins was one of the first three faculty members to be elected for service at the school and was chosen by Governor Thomas J. Jarvis, chairman of a committee to appoint a faculty for the East Carolina Teachers Training School. Miss Jenkins received her bachelor's degree at Trinity College, now Duke University, in 1896.

This spring, she and two of her classmates were honor guests at exercises celebrating the 50th anniversary of the school as a co-educational institution. Miss Jenkins received a master's degree at Columbia University, and has studied at the University of Wisconsin and other leading schools during her years as a teacher. She began her work in the Durham city schools and, before coming to Greenville, was at Martha Washington College, Abingdon, Va., and the Wilmington high school, and Grenada College in Mississippi.

Miss Kate W. Lewis, chairman of the Art Department, received her college training at Peace College in Raleigh, and taught in the public schools of Henderson, Goldsboro and Greenville, before joining the faculty here in October, 1909. She is a graduate of the Snow-Froehlich School of Industrial Art in Chicago, and the Boothbay Studios Summer School of Art at Boothbay Harbor, Maine; she attended the New York School of Fine and Applied Art, and the state universities of Virginia and Tennessee.

Miss Lewis has devoted her major efforts to training teachers for public school art work, especially in

Reynolds Files Divorce Charges

Miami, Fla., May 31—(AP)—Richard Joshua Reynolds, son of R. J. Reynolds, founder of the Reynolds tobacco interests, filed suit for divorce from Elizabeth Dillard Reynolds in Dade County Circuit Court today.

The charge was mental cruelty. They were married in January 1933, at Winston-Salem. They have four sons.

Reynolds asserted in his petition that he informed his wife he never intended to live with her again upon his discharge from the navy in September, 1945.

The petition declared that Mrs. Reynolds in 1941 "in a fit of un-governable temper" told him that he "had no sense, no education and stayed drunk all of the time."

He charged that when he was considering running for mayor in Winston-Salem in 1941 his wife refused to admit the former mayor and another prominent citizen to her home.

He subsequently ran for mayor in 1942, was elected and served until he resigned to enter the navy in May, 1942.

HOLIDAY TOLL AT NEW HIGH

Deaths Surpass Violent Fatalities Reported Last Memorial Day

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

At least 81 persons suffered violent deaths on Memorial Day as cities and communities across the nation joined in tribute to the country's war dead.

The total surpassed the number of violent fatalities reported on Memorial Day last year, when 74 were reported.

Traffic accidents resulted in the deaths of 45 persons, an increase of 16 over Memorial Day, 1945, but below the 57 estimated by the National Safety Council. Nineteen persons drowned while an unofficial tabulation showed 17 died from miscellaneous causes. Last Memorial Day there were 20 drownings and 26 in miscellaneous violence.

The council in its estimate, predicted that for the extended weekend holiday a total of 329 persons would be killed in traffic accidents. Pennsylvania, with a total of 13 fatalities, led the nation, reporting 8 traffic deaths, 3 drownings and 2 in the miscellaneous violence. California, Florida and Michigan each reported six deaths, while New York and Illinois, with the country's first and second largest cities, each reported one fatal traffic accident.

The fatality list by states (traffic, drownings, miscellaneous): California 3-2-1; Colorado 1-0-1; Connecticut 1-1-1; Florida 1-5-0; Illinois 1-0-1; Indiana 3-0-0; Iowa 1-0-0; Kentucky 1-1-3; Maine 1-0-0; Massachusetts 0-3-0; Michigan 3-1-2; Minnesota 3-1-1; Mississippi 1-0-0; New Jersey 0-3-2; New York

Goering Shows Signs Of Decline In Trial

Nuernberg, May 31—(AP)—Herman Goering has fallen into a fit of despondency, refusing to discuss his war crimes case any longer with defense attorneys and slowly declining in weight.

The number one defendant before the international military tribunal also has seized every opportunity lately to remain away from court. The reason given publicly has been recurrence of attacks of an old case of sciatica.

Goering has lost ten pounds in the past week and now is down to 190. He weighed 225 pounds when apprehended after the fall of the Reich.

TODAY IN CONGRESS

A Review Of Your Government In Action

Washington, May 31—(AP)—President Truman found himself today on a political hot spot.

He must decide whether to sign the Case labor-disputes bill at the risk of incurring labor's enmity—or to veto it and take the chance of getting no labor legislation at all from Congress despite fresh strike threats.

But what about the hue and cry if new strikes occur and the Senate meanwhile does nothing about the President's emergency program, which was passed overwhelmingly by the House?

So tough did his decision appear today that middle-of-the-road Senators, when asked what the President might do, simply retorted: "What would you do?"

But Senators who hold to rather extreme views on both sides of the labor question were not so unwilling to forecast the political consequences of a veto.

For example, Senator Ellender (D-La.), one of the 13 Democrats to vote Wednesday against striking out the President's draft-labor clause from the emergency bill, but nevertheless a supporter of the Sen-

BRITISH PLAN BREAD RATION IN EMERGENCY

Morrison Likens Food Situation to That Of Black Days Of Dunkerque

London, May 31—(AP)—Herbert Morrison, Lord President of the Council, told the House of Commons today that Britain was preparing a system of bread rationing for emergency use and likened the food situation to the black days of Dunkerque "when all the news was bad."

"The very blackness of the situation," he said during debate on Britain's food administration, "is calling forth forces which might make this the turning point in human history."

Winston Churchill, British wartime Prime Minister and now leader of the conservative opposition, chided the labor government for its food administration, which he called short-sighted, and asked for an explanation of the recent resignation of Food Minister Sir Ben Smith.

"The great feeding grounds which nourished Germany as a whole lie to the east of the iron curtain and food supplies have not been sent from there which belong to the population of Germany as a whole and should have been reserved for their nourishment," Churchill said opening a debate.

Morrison said bread rationing would be used only in case of necessity.

"The threat of famine is no passing crisis," Morrison said. "It is a continuing peril which will hang over us at the very least until the harvest of 1947 reaches the consumer."

He said since last autumn, Britain has diverted 490,500 tons of food grains to Germany and 104,000 tons to India.

It is utterly impossible for the United Kingdom alone to shoulder the responsibility for feeding 20,000,000 in the British zone in Germany and 400,000,000 hungry Indians," he said.

Morrison reported that when he (Continued on Page Eight)

Ships Will Be Kept Sailing Says Truman

Washington, May 31—(AP)—President Truman said today he will use every means in his power to keep the ships running in the event of a nationwide maritime strike.

The President told his news conference he would use the navy, the War Shipping Administration, the Coast Guard and the army as well—if necessary.

At the same time Mr. Truman said the labor controversy in the maritime field looks very dark.

The administration, he added, is making all necessary preparations to keep the ships going and nothing will be left undone.

Gen. Asks End To Division of Germany

Berlin, May 31—(AP)—Gen. Joseph T. McNarney demanded today fulfillment of the Potsdam agreement's provision to administer Germany as an economic unit as necessary to pull the country out of an economic crisis which has grown critical in the western zones.

Russia, a signatory of Potsdam and holder of an almost self-sufficient zone of Germany, has been blamed for this stalemate along with France, which was not at Potsdam but insists on fixing of Germany's western boundaries before economic unification.

The demand of the American military governor was contained in his monthly letter on occupation affairs.

Hirohito Makes Call On General

Tokyo, May 31—(AP)—Emperor Hirohito, a quiet little man in a plain business suit, made his secretly-arranged second call on General MacArthur at the U. S. Embassy today. The two reportedly talked of food, of reconstruction and of the vast changes in Japan since Hirohito had come hat in hand to MacArthur's door for the first time last Sept. 27.

Hidemasa Terasaki, of the imperial household ministry, acted as interpreter and was the only other person in the room. He told newsmen only that a variety of topics had been discussed. Other sources in the household ministry divulged the general subjects covered in the hour and a half meeting of emperor and conqueror.

The meeting came just three days ahead of the scheduled opening of "international war-crimes trials in Tokyo."

MacArthur declined to comment to the press; so did his staff.

Hirohito was accompanied to the embassy by imperial household minister Yoshitami Matsudaira. There were no guards, and the two cavalcaded late the palace so quietly that even Premier Shigenobu Yoshida's office said it was unaware of such a call.

Coal Production Problem Still In U.S. Spotlight

Presidential Advisers Counsel Against Seizure Of Hard Coal Mines; Officials Believe Operators Will Shortly Agree To Terms Similar To Bituminous Contract

Washington, May 31—(AP)—The costly soft coal strike settled. President Truman today tackled the problem presented by the tieup of the anthracite fields with his advisers counseling against seizure of these mines.

A high official who could not be quoted directly said the advice was based on the hope that the anthracite industry will shortly agree to terms similar to those in the government contract which ended the soft coal shutdown.

There was the feeling, too, that the government had more time leeway dealing with this dispute. Unlike soft coal, only about 20 per cent of the anthracite production goes to industrial use. The remainder is used for home heating and similar purposes, so production stoppage will not be felt widely before cold weather.

It was expected that some 76,000 hard coal miners in the Pennsylvania fields would be made idle by the hard coal tieup which started at midnight but meanwhile the van-guard of 400,000 bituminous miners were on their way back to the pits.

And John L. Lewis, United Mine Workers chief, predicted that volume production of soft coal can be expected by Monday.

In the anthracite dispute, top government officials expressed belief that agreement could be reached in a short time along the lines of the bituminous contract which Lewis signed with the government Wednesday to end the 59-day-old soft coal controversy.

Bituminous operators were keeping quiet about their reaction to the contract which gave their employees $1.75 increase per day and $39.25 pay for a five-day week, plus a welfare and retirement fund financed by a five-cent royalty on each ton of coal. Until the operators agree to a contract with Lewis, the mines will continue to be operated by the government.

The welfare fund, most spectacular of Lewis' demands for the bituminous miners, would yield $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 annually. It is to be administered by a board of trustees consisting of one member picked by Lewis, one picked by Secretary of Interior Krug, who is boss of the mines for the period of government operation, and a third chosen by the other two.

Krug has said he wants to select as his nominee a person of outstanding ability, whose name will stand something to the public, and who can add to the continuity of operations when the coal producers eventually take back their mines from the government.

The soft coal operators said $200,000,000 was a conservative estimate of the cost of the Krug-Lewis contract but they made no official comment on the agreement or its terms.

Government officials estimated that soft coal cost to consumers would rise 30 to 35 cents a ton as a result of the contract. Privately producers thought it might go to 60 or 75 cents in some operations.

Krug was said to feel that while some outcry from the operators could be expected at first, the contract had made no concessions which the mine owners had not accepted in principle weeks ago.

HIGH SCHOOL HAS CLOSING

Impressive Exercises At Greenville School Last Night

By CHESTER WALSH

Greenville High School commencement exercises held at Wright auditorium at the college last night were impressive. More than a thousand persons attended. The program was a grand climax to one of the most successful years in the school's history. The music was thrilling. The school spirit at Greenville High is a credit to officials and teachers, a great honor to the students and a source of gratification to parents and citizens generally and to the State of North Carolina.

June H. Rose, superintendent of Greenville schools, briefly reviewed the school's activities during the past year, pointed out a number of the speed-up projects carried on during the year, and paid fine tribute to the students, teachers and parents for cordial cooperation in the school work.

Jack Whichard was the commencement speaker. His message contained much that was original, comprehensive and worldly of serious meditation by all who are interested in education. His review of educational methods of long ago and now, was refreshingly interesting. He used as his subject, "Education for Citizenship." In conclusion he emphasized the point that "People must play fair with themselves and their fellow-man to be useful citizens, and that education covers one's entire span of life." William Mac Batchelor, president of the Senior Class, presented the speaker.

Joseph M. Taft, vice-chairman of the Board of Trustees, and Principal O. E. Dowd presented the diplomas to the graduates. Sixty-seven (Continued on Page Eight)

Strike Of 76,000 Anthracite Miners Officially Begins Today; Negotiations Break Up In Failure; Union Turns Down 30-Day Contract Extension Request

New York, May 31—(AP)—A strike of 76,000 Pennsylvania hard coal miners began officially at 12:01 a. m. EDT today, after union and operator negotiations failed to reach agreement on a new contract.

Since the miners did not work on the Memorial Day holiday, the walk out—the nation's second major coal strike of the year—technically started 24 hours before the expiration of the old pact at midnight last night.

The union had refused an operators' request for a 30-day contract extension on a retroactive pay basis and subsequent proposals for extension of 15 days and for one week.

The miners watched the deadline pass with no indication of returning to the collieries until a contract was signed. Traditionally no contract has meant no work for the miners.

In the centers of the anthracite regions at Hazleton, Scranton, Wilkes-Barre and Pottsville, Pa., the union's district officials, who declined use of their names, predicted, with but one exception, that the walkout would be 100 per cent effective.

One Scranton official predicted the miners would be back in the pits by Monday but would give no basis for his statement.

Maintenance work will continue as usual.

Yesterday's 11th-hour negotiating session broke up in failure.

John Boylan, secretary of the Anthracite Board of Conciliation, who sat in on the final scheduled talks before the expiration of the contract, said he was authorized to make no announcement. (Continued on Page Eight)

N. C. Retirement System Invoked

Raleigh, May 31—(AP)—North Carolina's first blanket application of its retirement system for state employees is expected to bring about pensioning of more than 500 veteran workers July 1.

According to Nathan Yelton, executive secretary of the Board of Trustees of the Teachers and State Employees Retirement System, approximately 250 over-age workers have already applied for pensions and the total is expected to exceed 500 by July 1.

The retirement act adopted by the state several years ago provides that all persons on the state payroll shall be pensioned after beginning 70 years of age.

Manpower shortages during the war years caused waiving of the provisions in many instances. Yelton said, but most state agencies have now indicated that they will ask no further exemptions.

Exemptions have been requested by only 37 teachers, clerks, prison officials and capital employes affected by the plan, Yelton added.

Future requests for continuation in service will be granted only where the over-70 employes is not immediately replaceable and then only when a medical examination shows physical ability to serve longer.

Many of those to retire in July have been on public payrolls since the 1880's some are 80 years of age or older, and most are credited with public service approximately half a century. (Continued on Page Eight)

The WORLD TODAY

An Analysis Of The News

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

The United Nations Security Council committee which is handling the evidence on the sins of Generalissimo Franco—they call him El Caudillo in Spain—has been burning midnight oil over a mountain of documents in preparation for its report to the parent council.

Upon the strength of this evidence the council will decide (1) whether Franco's government is a menace to international peace, and (2) if it is, what restraining action should be taken by the United Nations. The charge that the Franco regime threatens world peace is made by Poland, Russia, France and of course the Spanish Republic government in exile, America and Britain, while decidedly opposed to the Franco rule, thus far have held that it doesn't endanger global security.

It will be interesting to see what evidence is produced, because there are a good many aspects of the Generalissimo's government which are a mystery. For instance, one moot question is whether he still has great numbers of Republicans in prison. When I was in Spain in January I put the question to a government official and was told that all had been released excepting "blood prisoners," that is, those guilty of murder. However, no proof of this statement was offered and I know that foreign diplomats in Spain long had been trying unsuccessfully to get positive information on that point.

Still there are some things which we do know in advance of the council report. One is that El Caudillo isn't equipped militarily to wage a war of aggression against any major nation. I was reliably informed that he had a standing army of about 700,000—and that's a lot of men. However, while it is fairly well equipped with light arms, it hasn't much in the way of warplanes, tanks or artillery. Madrid and other strategic points are protected by redoubts and trenches, and the French-Spanish frontier undoubtedly is fortified. Still, Franco's whole military and naval setup is of a defensive nature.

It's long been clear that Franco is one of the alert for any possible rebellion. It is equally obvious that if another civil war is precipitated in Spain he is prepared to deal with it on a formidable scale.

A Delightful Day on The Banks of The Tar

A picnic is always looked forward to with eager delight by the young people and all the joy is not realized in the mere anticipation. Thursday the hearts of many Greenville boys and girls beat with thrilling rapture for the time had arrived for the glorious realization of the pleasure of which they had thought and dreamed for many days and nights.

At half past eight o'clock, forenoon, classes no. 11 and No. 12 of the Methodist Sunday School met at the Wiley Brown residence and went together to the boat landing. Their nimble feet keeping time to the rhythmic beat of their merry hearts.

At nine o'clock we boarded the Altiro and went about three miles down the river. At one o'clock dinner was served. My! what a dinner it was. At five o'clock we met on the river bank and with songs on our lips and melody in our hearts awaited the Altiro bound for the shores of the home land.—(Reported)

Stalin Declines Washington Visit

Washington, May 31.—(AP)—President Truman announced today he invited Marshall Stalin to visit Washington about 30 days ago, but Stalin declined because his doctors advised him against a long journey.

At a news conference, Mr. Truman said that he asked Stalin to make a social visit here while the Paris conference of foreign ministers was in progress. The conference ended two weeks ago.

It was his second invitation to Stalin to visit Washington, the President said. The first was made at the time of the Potsdam conference last summer and refused by Stalin for the same reasons of health.

Asked whether he had any plans for seeing Stalin elsewhere, Mr. Truman replied he had no immediate plans.

A newsman asked whether this was significant since the answer could mean that negotiations were under way for a Truman-Stalin conference, sometime in the future. Mr. Truman said however that his reference to no plans in the immediate future did not mean that there was a plan in the works.

Chapter 11

William had changed the place cards. After a fleeting sense of relief as she sat down at the long table in the dining room some time later, Whitney suddenly realized her maneuver to get away from any embarrassing questions Paul might ask was destined to failure. Paul sat directly opposite her and every time she looked up she saw the hurt, bewildered expression on his face. She could feel Polly's stifled annoyance enveloping her like an ominous smoke screen. The Count who sat on her left was strangely silent. Only the Senator on her right seemed happy. He boomed out his good humor to his wife, farther down the table.

"What do you think of my new secretary, Mother?" He patted Whitney's hand lying on the table beside him with an elephantine swoop of his big hand. "My troubles are over now. The prettiest secretary in Washington — and the smartest! That'll make 'em all sit up and take notice."

Paul, ignoring the Ambassador's wife beside him for the moment, did not hear what the Senator said. He was leaning over the table anxiously talking to Whitney.

"What about an early morning ride over the course Monday, Whitney? I will be here whenever you want to start. Sorry I missed the run today, but Spuds has told me of the new water hazard and a few of the jumps he has changed. I'd like to see them. Grey Goose's leg will be all right by Monday."

Whitney tried to make her voice sound casual.

"Sorry, Paul, but I won't be able to ride with you before Saturday. My new job starts Monday. I'll only be able to ride weekends this fall."

"A job! What in thunder are you talking about?" Whitney smiled up at the Senator who was beaming at her with a benign mixture of paternal pride and senatorial expansiveness.

"Yes, sir!" The big man happily exclaimed, aware of the commotion his announcement was making among the dinner guests. "Whitney starts punching the time clock next week in my office. From here on in she concentrates on her career."

"You mean, perhaps, on your career. But that is good," the Count observed. He looked at Paul with calculating eyes. "I am delighted with the news, Senator. It so happens that your office is just two blocks away from mine."

"And you will come to see me more often in the future than you have in the past," the Senator finished gaily. "I expect that." He looked across the table at Paul who was answering question Mne. L'Homme-medieu had asked him about Guam.

"I wouldn't be surprised if quite a few of my young friends will now be better able to remember their appointments."

"Meaning me, sir?" Paul asked quickly as he turned from the Ambassador's wife, in time to catch the end of what the Senator was saying. "I'm sorry I couldn't get to your office this morning, but it doesn't matter now. I'm not interested in the letter I asked for. I'm leaving Washington sooner than I expected."

"But, Paul," Polly protested from the end of the table where she had evidently been following their conversation. "Your leave was to extend for at least a month. I've planned so many things—"

Her voice trailed off dimly as William started serving the terrapin. Whitney saw the straight line of Paul's chin harden as he said quietly:

"My plans have been changed, Polly. A few days will be all I need here for the 'business' I came to finish."

His steady blue eyes were on Whitney as he spoke and something in his cool impersonal voice sent a little shiver up her spine. She had not counted on Paul's going away.

In fact that was the very last thing she wanted him to do just now. Suddenly she had a sense of impending catastrophe. Things were not going at all as she had planned they would. For the first time, old Sally's famous terrapin tasted like straw.

"Do not look so worried, darling," the Count broke in on her sudden silence. "I love your idea of work—right beside me in town. We will have a lively time. I am so good at cooking the spaghetti and gnoc-chi—you must try me in your kitchenette."

"Oh, Polly, why can't we play baccarat or roulette tonight?" Whitney cut in hastily, grasping at anything to break up the tension she could feel growing between the two men. "When the Offnuts get here with their house guests were going to have too many for bridge anyway."

"There's always gin rummy," Spuds called out from his end of the table. The Senator groaned.

"I was afraid of that. One night without gin rummy would etch itself on the tablets of my memory for all time! Personally, I'd like baccarat."

"That's because you know how to play it," his wife declared promptly. "I never heard of it."

"Easiest thing in the world to learn," her husband answered promptly. "And any number of people can play it."

"It certainly beats checkers for excitement," the Count drawled and the laugh that followed seemed to get the table back on an even keel again. After a little more discussion Polly agreed to the plan and gave William instructions for setting up a line of card tables in the drawing room for the game.

"We often play it here at Pandemonium," Whitney explained to the Senator a few minutes later. "I just asked Polly and she says she'd like you to act as banker."

"Be glad to. That'll give me a chance to show Mother and anyone who doesn't know the game how it's played. You ever played it?" he turned suddenly to the Count who was listening to their plans with a faintly amused smile on his face. The Count shook his head.

"I never play cards," he replied quickly.

Paul shot a glance at Spuds Wilson at the other end of the table. He had evidently heard what the Count had said and shook his head slightly, but William, suddenly appearing behind Paul's chair, stopped the comment he was about to make.

"Washington wants you on the telephone, Mr. Paul. You can take the call in the hall under the stairs."

Chapter 12
The men were in the dining room talking over their brandy and coffee when Paul finished his call. He hesitated at the door of the smoke-filled room. At that moment he wanted to talk to Polly. Whitney's unexpected announcement that she was taking a position in the Senator's office just at the beginning of his long-awaited leave, coming so soon after her refusal to wear his ring, could mean only one thing: Whitney no longer loved him.

He saw William down the hall, going toward a large closet near the pantry entrance.

SILESIA CELEBRATE—A group of young women in Silesian costumes, celebrating Prague's liberation day, stand by a memorial monument to Emperor, Franz Joseph.

"Where is Miss Polly?" he called out as the old man started to bring out slender gilt chairs which he placed in a huddle in the hall.

"Miss Polly is in the drawing room—a-foxin' de tables." The butler's muffled voice came from the depths of the closet.

Paul hurried across the hall and found Polly finishing the adjustment of a long row of card tables, placed end to end down the center of the room.

"Here, let me help you," Paul exclaimed as he caught hold of one end of a long strip of green baize Polly was throwing over the row of tables. "This really seems like getting home," he grinned at her with a flash of his old-careless good humor. "Saturday nights always were well at Random Polly. All the gang here and how we'd play baccarat or anything that would make a good game—and then sing until morning—oh, boy! I've never missed these Saturday nights!"

"We're going to have a regular soiree tonight, Paul," she said quickly. "Just like old times. The Fairchilds are coming, the Bryants and the Offnuts. Helen is bringing her weekend guests from Hope farm." She smoothed out a fold of the baize and stood looking affectionately at Paul on the other side of the table. "I guess half the County will be accounted for tonight and they are coming to welcome you home—Commander!"

Paul's sensitive face flushed with a quick surge of feeling that even his disciplined naval training could not conceal.

"Thanks, Polly," he murmured a trifle unsteadily. "I'll be glad to see the gang—especially as the one welcome I looked forward to has sort of misfired."

"I know," Polly pulled out a chair and sat down abruptly, a worried frown between her eyes. "I'm glad you came in so I could tell you what I know about this crazy plan of Whitney's. Heaven knows it isn't much. I can't make it out because she has been counting and planning on your return for the past six months. Then the day you come home she does a cockeyed thing like this... it doesn't make any sense."

"Oh, yes it does. She's fallen for Barbefini!"

"I certainly wouldn't have believed that until today," Polly said emphatically, holding out her hand to receive a cigarette. Paul, in as nervous as a deb at her first reception. Whitney's got me all off the beam tonight. I'm beginning to actually think there is something to her interest in this Count and I never figured him as anything but a date to fill in time until you returned. I don't know what's come over this sister of mine."

"Just that the count has decided that he's going to take my girl if he possibly can," Paul answered in a low voice as he lighted Polly's cigarette and then his own.

low voice as he lighted Polly's cigarette and then his own. "That's the way that guy works. When he found I was coming home, he started getting serious so that by the time I arrive he's put Whitney in a tailspin..."

"Funny you should say that," Polly answered slowly, "because it looks as if that's exactly what he has done. Certainly up to a few weeks ago, Whitney was only seeing him at long intervals and the whole thing was extremely casual. Why would he deliberately do a thing like that, Paul?"

"Because he hates me and always has—ever since we graduated from Yale..."

"But Whitney is engaged to you, Paul."

"You're damned right she is—begging your pardon, Polly. And I have no intention of letting that louse take her away from me. But I'm not going to stick around here and let Whitney turn my leave into a sparring match with that bunch of cancelled dates. I'm clearing out tomorrow."

"Oh, Paul, don't do that," Polly wailed. "Don't let that man have a chance like that. Whitney might make a terrible mistake. You've got to stay here—something might happen..."

"No," Paul shook his head decisively. "Whitney is half in love with him—his European gallantry his older point of view, his experience with women—all fascinate her. You can see that. And believe me he's playing it up for all it's worth. Anything which discredits me or puts me at a disadvantage—that's his dish—and I'm not taking it. I just talked to Jack Armstrong. I'm going home with him to Charlottesville and then start looking for a job 2,000 miles away from Washington."

A sudden sharp anxiety assailed Polly. She pushed back her chair and stood up as a shout from the hall announced the arrival of more guests.

"I don't like your going away, Paul. I don't trust that man. I have a feeling he's going to make trouble for all of us."

Paul shrugged his shoulders as he started walking with Polly toward the door.

"Well, Charlottesville isn't too far away, after all," Polly drew a quick breath. "But while you're there don't forget that you are the man Whitney really loves. She won't take too long to find that out."

Paul smiled his quick boyish smile.

"Okay, Polly. You're swell and I hope you're right. Maybe old no-account will help her at that. One of these days he'll pull a fast one—he always does—and then Whitney can judge for herself..."

There was a new ring of confidence in his voice as he followed Polly into the hall.

Strength FOR THE DAY By EARL L. DOUGLAS THE SOUL SEEKS HOME

One of the most amazing sights in the world is to watch the soaring of a homing pigeon. No matter how far away from home one takes these interesting creatures, they seem to find their way back again. Soaring up until they get their direction, the pigeons start on a straight line for home.

Scientists tell us that the homing pigeon has a mechanism in his ear which enables him to distinguish those waves in the ether that are characteristic of that region which he calls home. At a certain height in the air he will come upon these waves, and when he does, he follows them with unerring instinct until he lands back home again.

One wonders how the birds in their annual flights manage to get back to their familiar haunts. This sort of thing is called instinct, but behind it all stands the Creator of instinct.

The human soul has a home also and that home is the high and eternal destiny God has prepared for it. Somewhere along our earthly pilgrimage, we encounter something which, if we follow it, will lead us back to the security and peace and quiet of that dwelling place.

We are always unhappy until we fulfill the destiny God has appointed for us. When we find that destiny and head for home, we begin to experience a contentment and power we never knew before.

WASHINGTON DAYBOOK By JACK STINNETT (Second of Two Articles) Washington—Ask a dozen political leaders how many and which key districts will determine control of the House in the November elections and you'll get two dozen different answers.

The difference will be slight, but not unimportant. It's generally agreed that there are from 165 to 175 so-called key districts, where the vote will be close enough to make the outcome uncertain.

The Three Musketeers—'46 Version

REG-MANNING

You can be sure that you are one of those many, many thousands this November who will be casting a vote on whether the House turns up Republican or Democratic when it organizes next January.

The issues may be purely local to you in these 165-odd districts, but to the Democratic and Republican national committees the outcome may as vital as if it were a presidential year.

If the Republicans take over in November and precedent means anything at all, they can win with a straw man in 1948.

When it comes to umpires it is far better for a player to take it on the chin and stand up, than to go to the dugout arguing. An umpire has much more advantage behind him than a player in an inch.

They do not make any more wonderful sports in the world than they raise in Tarboro.

When I'm gone if anyone sees fit to place a marker at my resting place I'd feel honored if it just read: "Here lies a good sport."

U. S. MISSION IS HAMPERED

Russians Put Korea Investigators Under Restrictions

Seoul, May 31—(AP)—The U. S. Reparations Commission, seeking to determine if the Russians removed machinery from north Korea, is operating under such tight restrictions in the Soviet occupation zone that Edwin W. Pauley, reparations chief, has protested.

Pauley's assistant, Dr. Ernst L. Klein, disclosed the protest today and presented this version of the situation:

Col. Gen. I. M. Chistiakov, Russian military commander, has barred the 10-member commission from two of five industrial areas the commission had selected for inspection.

A fiber plant has been closed to the mission, on grounds that it housed Soviet troops.

The mission photographer has been forbidden to take photographs on official trips, thus rendering difficult the substantiation of any evidence the mission finds.

The mission is closely guarded. It can move about only by pre-arrangement and consent of the Russians. It must keep together.

The reason given for forbidding the mission entry to one important industrial area was that a large demobilization of Soviet troops is under way there.

The mission has been denied air travel to speed up its work, on grounds that north Korea lacks proper landing facilities.

Chistiakov was quoted in a press release as saying he had been instructed by Moscow not to remove machinery from north Korea plants.

Smuts Calls For Change In Policy

London, May 31—(AP)—Field Marshal Jan Christian Smuts, premier of South Africa and elder British statesman, urged tonight that Germany be decentralized to form a federal system which could not threaten world peace and which could join the United Nations some day.

He called for a revision and reversal of the Allied occupation policy in a union day broadcast.

Smuts declared that the United States and Russia have come to dominate the east and west of this globe, he added:

"It is unique, almost frightening situation of a world lapsing into dualism."

Drying German decentralization he said:

"But do not attempt to destroy a great historic people or their homeland for their means of livelihood. The attempt will not only be a crime but an error doomed to failure and the failure may be as great as the original offense of Germany. As a vast depressed area—human and economic—she may become a center of infection which may poison much of the continent."

Helicopter Mail Service Project

Washington, May 31—(AP)—The Postoffice Department today disclosed plans to use helicopters to shuttle air mail between suburban communities and a central airport in all large cities.

Second Assistant Postmaster General Gael Sullivan, who is in charge of all mail transportation said in an interview that "by using helicopters the department can guarantee 12-hour mail service between any two metropolitan areas in the country."

Sullivan said the project has been worked out in strict secrecy during the last four months. It will mark one of the greatest advances in postoffice history.

Sullivan said test runs are scheduled for two weeks in the Los Angeles area sometime before July 10.

Later this year or early in 1947 regular helicopter air mail service will start in the Chicago, New York, Los Angeles, Boston, Philadelphia and Detroit metropolitan areas, he said, adding:

"By the end of 1947 helicopter air mail service is certain to come to all metropolitan centers."

Sixty-Three Infants Sent Army Hospital

New York, May 31—(AP)—Three more GI babies were under treatment at the Fort Hamilton Army hospital today for intestinal disorders which have been blamed by Army medical authorities in the recent deaths of nine infants who arrived here from Europe aboard brideships.

The three babies, suffering from diarrhea, and another suffering from bronchitis, were rushed to the hospital yesterday after the Army transport John Ericsson arrived from Southampton with 552 war brides and 71 children.

In all, 63 children are being treated at Fort Hamilton for intestinal disorders.

Army officers ordered an autopsy in the death of Doris J. Dombeck, 10-week-old, whose body was removed from the John Ericsson. The baby died at sea last Sunday—the 10th victim among the infant arrivals in the last two weeks.

Capt. Kenneth Fletcher of Gloucester Falls, Mass., Army surgeon, said the death was believed caused by suffocation but the baby was suffering from diarrhea when taken aboard the vessel.

She was the daughter of Cpl. Marion A. Dombeck of Chicago, and his English bride.

Army Depends Upon Its Transportation

"Keep 'em moving" is the slogan of the Transportation Corps upon which the army leans heavily for supplies and transportation. Organized in 1942, this branch of the armed forces has already done very much to warrant praise and honor.

This organization handles most of the hauling and shipping of the armed forces. The amphibian truck companies have made history by charging through the heavy surf of the Pacific and upon the shores of Europe to deliver men and supplies. The highway traffic service organized and maintained heavy traffic routes all over the world. The inland waterway service opened the Rhine to shipping and maintained an inter-island service that kept men and supplies moving along the sea road to Tokyo.

Members of the transportation corps are trained in all modes of transportation from jeeps to ocean liners. They staff army ports of embarkation and debarkation. They supervise management of army troop transports. Because of the large scope, many types of skilled personnel are needed. Railroad trainmen, engineers and firemen, marine and longshore workers, cargo handlers, truck drivers and automotive mechanics are but a few of these.

Low Cost Shoes Get New Price Ceilings

Washington, May 31—(AP)—OPA today boosted 10 to 15 per cent on shoes selling generally at $5.50 or less.

The increase, effective immediately on new shipments by manufacturers, applies to standard types of men's, women's and children's shoes which were being made during 1942.

The purpose of the price hike is to encourage production of low and moderately priced footwear. Such shoes, especially women's, practically have disappeared from the market, OPA said, because manufacturers have found it more profitable to turn out higher priced merchandise.

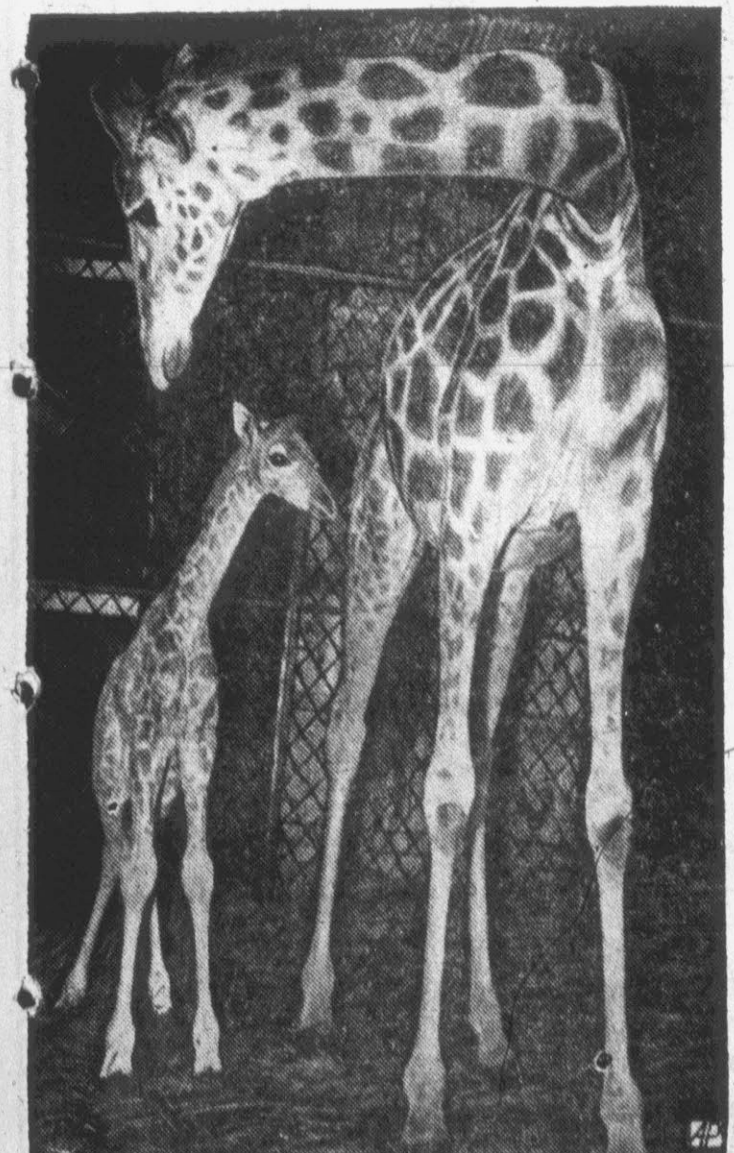

Poliomyelitis epidemics usually begin in June or in early July, reach their peak in September and taper off in October.

CLOSING AT EPPES HIGH

Negro School Commencement Exercises Tonight At 8 O'Clock

By CHESTER WALSH
Tonight marks the closing of the C. M. Eppes Negro High School and there will be an interesting program which will be of special interest to both the white and negro people of the city. There will be no graduates from the High school this year because of the transition from the 11-year program to the 12-year program. However, Supervising Principal W. H. Davenport and his teachers have prepared a program of peculiar interest to all those interested in educational achievement.

Of special interest in the program tonight will be the presentation of a gift to the C. M. Eppes High School. The nature of this gift will not be known until the exercises are held.

This school is noted for its good music and tonight those who attend will not be disappointed in what has been arranged.

The time for the exercises is 8 o'clock and school patrons of both races are cordially invited to attend. The year just closing at C. M. Eppes High School has been outstanding for progress and advancement, excellence in achievement by students and teachers, and wonderful cooperation by parents with the teachers and school officials. This school ranks high in North Carolina. Its achievements are gratifying. The personnel of the faculty is exceptionally high.

Grain Market
Chicago, May 31—(AP)—Oats advanced fractionally today under buying based mainly on gains in parity prices for all grains. Local traders provided much of the activity and a good part of the demand represented purchases by previous short sellers. Cash oats purchases totaled 85,000 bushels. Final prices were at the day's highs. New oats were 1 1/2-1 3/4 higher, August 84 1/2, and old oats were unchanged to 1/8 higher, September 80 1/2. March corn finished up 1/4 at $1.46 1/2. All other grains were unchanged.

New York Cotton
New York, May 31—(AP)—Cotton futures opened 10 to 40 cents a bale higher. Noon prices were 20 to 65 cents a bale higher. July 28.03, Oct. 29.34, and Dec. 28.49. Futures closed 15 to 70 cents a bale higher.

N. Y. Stock Market
New York, May 31—(AP)—Today's between-holiday stock market stumbled over profit taking after a succession of 15-year highs and eight consecutive sessions without an average loss. While scattered favorites made a certain amount of headway from the start, and most groups stiffened at the last with a pickup in activity, declines of fractions to 2 or more points predominated. Dealings were relatively slow the greater part of the time, transfers for the full proceedings being in the vicinity of 1,300,000 shares against 1,990,000 Wednesday.

LOCALS SPLIT WITH TARBORO

Greenies Make 6-4 Comeback After Dropping First Game 11-6

The Greenies' double header yesterday against Mike Kardash's Tarboro nine started off rather ominously when the Tars collected eleven runs off eleven hits in the afternoon game. The Greenies, with nine hits, clinched six runs.

In the first half of the fifth catcher Milt Narron belted out a home run and for a few short minutes the local team was leading 6-3; but their hopes were shattered when the Tars came back strong in their half of the same inning and brought their total to ten. They scored once again in the eighth and the game closed when the Greenville nine failed to catch up in their half of the ninth.

The evening game, played in the Guy Smith Stadium, was a different story. With Joe Alamo on the mound, the Greenies came through with a 6-4 victory.

The Tars equalled the Greenville nine's eight hits, but they were scattered, and Payne's steal to third their scoring when Saxon dropped a pop fly clinched the ball game.

Local Golfers Defeat Wilson

The Greenville Country Club Golf team swamped the Wilson Country Club team in their tournament meet at the Country Club here on Wednesday, 41 to 10. It was sweet revenge for the Greenville aggregation, for Wilson beat them at Wilson by one point in the first meet of the Eastern Carolina Golf Association tournament earlier in the year.

Dr. M. B. Massey, Fred Hussey and Cecil Perkins tied for medal honors with 75 each, and for the first time this season, no member of the Greenville team used up more than 88 strokes.

Following are the scores in strokes and points: Massey, 75-0; Hussey, 75-2; Perkins, 75-3; Brown, 76-3; Smoot, 79-3; Moore, 79-2; Moye, 79-3; Taylor, 80-1; Allen, 81-1; Herring, 81-3; Bilbro, 81-3; Keck, 82-3; Baker, 82-2; Harrington, 82-3; Barrett, 82-1; W. Taft, 83-2; Kilgo, 84-3; J. Taft, 86-2, and Morton, 88-1.

Greenville golfers play Rocky Mount here next Wednesday, June 3. Tarboro golfers come here to play Greenville the last game in the tournament to wind up the contest.

With the exception of Hurricane Hal Newhouser and Dave (Boo) Ferriss last year's select six of the big league hurling brigades—the 20-game winners—are finding it extremely difficult to regain their winning stride this year.

Four of the big six—the Chicago Cubs' Hank Wyse and Hank Borowy, St. Louis Cardinals' Charlie Barrett and Washington's Roger Wolff—strode to the hill in yesterday's Memorial Day double-headers, but only Wyse walked off with a victory under his belt. Not one of the other three succeeded in going the route.

Two other big winners of 1945, Cleveland's Steve Gromek (19-9) and the Cardinals' Ken Burkhardt (18-8) also continued to find the going rough. Gromek dropped his fourth decision in seven starts, while Burkhardt failed to improve on his 2-1 record when he was shelled from the mound.

Borowy, who won 21 games toiling for both loops last year, has now failed to finish in seven of his eight starts and owns a 1-3 won and lost record even though he was not charged with yesterday's Cub defeat.

Barrett, the senior circuit's biggest winner last year with 23 victories, has appeared in eight games for the Cards, half of them in start-line roles and has yet to come up with his initial triumph. Wolff, who won an even 20 games for the Senators last year, has been victorious in only three of his 10 starts.

Even Wyse, a 22-game winner last year, has a so-so 3-3 record with only two creditable performances this season including his four-hit 6-2 win over the Cincinnati Reds in the opening game of yesterday's twin bill.

Borowy attempted to give the Bruins a clean sweep of the two games which would have moved the Cubs past the Reds into third place in the National League. For eight innings it appeared he would be successful as the Cubs led 6-1, but the roof fell in on the former Fordham liner in the ninth, when the Reds banded across six runs to eke out a 7-6 triumph and an even split.

The Cardinals managed to divide their double-header with the Pittsburgh Pirates, winning the second encounter 12-11 after the Bucs had walked off with the opener 9-3.

The pace-setting Boston Red Sox continued to roll up one of the best early season records in American League history. When they captured both ends of a twin bill from Washington's Senators 6-5 and 7-2 for their 32nd triumph in 41 games.

The New York Yankees blasted out a double victory over the tail-end Philadelphia Athletics 6-1 and 6-3 to remain six and a half games behind the Red Sox.

TRUMAN BACKS STRIKE DRAFT

President Says Legislation Has Been Grossly Misrepresented

Washington, May 31 — (AP) — President Truman said today he is still wholeheartedly in favor of the emergency striker-draft legislation he has asked of Congress.

His proposal to induct men who strike against the government, the President told reporters, has been grossly misrepresented and misunderstood.

It was not intended as a provision to draft labor, he said but to draft citizens in an emergency.

(Already, the Senate has knocked out the striker-draft section of the emergency legislation Mr. Truman asked last Saturday. The bill came under fresh Senate attack today.)

Even a sheriff, the President remarked, can deputize any citizen to enforce the law.

He merely wanted authority to deputize experienced men to work for the industries seized by the government, Mr. Truman explained.

The President's assertion at his news conference came after he had declined to comment on a statement by A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Trainmen that he had signed his political death warrant in forcing an end to the railroad strike.

He was asked whether he had seen a report that Whitney had the transcript of one of the presidential strike conferences. He replied that he did not read Mr. Whitney.

Mr. Truman was emphatic in saying that the Senate's elimination of the revision permitting the drafting of strikers in industries seized by the government greatly weakened the pending emergency labor legislation.

But the President declined to say whether he planned to sign the labor-opposed Case bill setting up a Velloso said the report would include a summary of evidence collected and a brief analysis of the case which would set forth opinions of the five members. He said that no specific recommendations would be made to the Security Council.

The French, meanwhile indirectly answered a protest by Siam to Trygve Lie, United Nations secretary general, against "unjustified aggression" by French forces from Indo-China. The Siamese message to Lie has been circulated to Security Council delegates without result thus far.

The French high commission in Saigon, Indo-China, declared officially that French forces entered Siamese territory recently in pursuit of "Annamite and Laotian rebels" who raided French Indo-China.

The commission said these were the incidents "that seem to be the basis for the campaign carried out by the Siamese authorities to stir up world public opinion."

An agreement under which the International Labor Office, oldest inter-governmental body now in existence, would become a specialized agency of the United Nations was signed yesterday by I.L.O. and U.N. representatives. Meanwhile negotiating committees of the operators and the union were called into session again today amid reports that UMW President John L. Lewis would join the conferences. It was not known definitely, however, whether Lewis would take part in the talks.

As in the recently settled soft coal dispute, the principal issues involved are wage increases and a health and welfare fund, but the miners never have presented concrete demands on the issue.

The miners, through Thomas Kennedy, UMW secretary-treasurer, have declared that they expected the bituminous settlement to provide a pattern for a hard coal agreement. Both sides had marked time awaiting the soft coal terms.

Anthracite miners are seeking a reduction of their 42-hour six-day work week (it was a five-day, 35-hour week before the war), an increase in wage rates; establishment of the welfare fund; adjustment of vacation, holiday, overtime and severance compensation; observance of occupational disease laws, and UMW membership for mine supervisors.

Chief concessions gained by soft coal miners in their contract with the government were an 18-1/2 cent an hour increase and the health fund to be financed by a five-cent-a-ton royalty on all coal mined, expected to produce $25,000,000 yearly.

It was estimated that the average daily tonnage losses while the mines are closed will be 210,000.
