Early Agreement On OPA Possible

Senate - House Committee Leaders Expect Compromise Before Nightfall; House Members Insist Dropping Bans Against Price Controls On Meat And Other Food Items

Washington, July 17.—(AP)—Optimism that the price control deadlock may be broken before nightfall was voiced by Senate Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky today after a Senate-House committee canvassed the possibilities of compromise.

Senator Downey (D-Calif.), another member of the 14-man committee, told reporters "there is a possibility" an agreement can be worked out "before the day ends."

They talked to reporters when the committee recessed its deliberations for lunch.

It was learned that at the meeting House members insisted that the Senate drop the bans in its new bill against price controls of meats, butter, eggs and a long list of other items of the housewife's market basket.

Word circulated that President Truman likely would veto any measure which came to him with these exemptions.

While the conference committee was at work, the White House made public a declaration from the war reconversion advisory board that abandonment of price controls will leave the nation unprotected against a dangerous rise in prices during the interval before the normal economic forces are working.

"Proper provision should be made to extend the life of OPA for a period of not to exceed one year," the board said in a report to President Truman.

At the capitol, there were reports that President Truman's stand was this: He would sign the new OPA bill, overlooking other objections, if Congress knocks out the exemptions of meat and other foods from price controls.

House members of the conference committee were reported urging that as a basis for compromise.

Downey told newsmen that "if Senators Tobey (R-NH) and Radcliffe (D-Md.) will agree" to the House members' proposal, "this conference can end quickly."

The Californian added that Senators Barkley and Wagner (D-NY) would go along with such a compromise.

"That would not be a good bill even then," the Californian said, "but I believe the President would sign it."

The reconversion advisory board endorsed continued price control last April and its new report was a reaffirmation of that stand.

It advised that this was the unanimous sentiment of the board as embodied in a resolution adopted yesterday. The board includes representatives of business, agriculture and labor.

The White House made the reconversion report public today.

Last Stamps In FDR Collection Are Sold

New York, July 17.—(AP)—The third and final section of the stamp collection of the late President Roosevelt was sold at auction yesterday for an aggregate of $17,200.

Bringing to $228,000 the income his estate has realized, minus taxes and commissions, on the collection started in boyhood.

The final section consisted of stamps which the President never had time to classify for his albums.

POLICE SEEK EARLY BREAK IN SLAYINGS

Heirens Said Confessed Under "Truth Serum"; Bargaining For Life

Chicago, July 17.—(AP)—Police seek and state's attorney's officials today were seeking a showdown in their nearly three weeks long investigation of William Heirens' connection with the kidnap-slaying of Suzanne Degnan and the slaying of two Chicago women.

The Chicago Tribune said today that Heirens' counsel in the next few days expects to take a full and written confession from the 17-year-old college student that he was the slayer of the Degnan child and also of Frances Brown, 33, a former Wave, and Mrs. Josephine Ross, 43.

In a copyright story yesterday the Tribune said it had learned from unimpeachable sources that Heirens has told of kidnaping and killing the Degnan child and also of slaying Miss Brown and Mrs. Ross. Today, the Tribune said that both the prosecution and defense attorneys had stated that Heirens did not tell of the murders while under "truth serum"; bargaining for life.

AMBUSH KILLS U. S. SOLDIER

Others Wounded While Patrolling In Yugoslavia

Trieste, July 17.—(AP)—Unknown machine gunners ambushed an American army jeep before midnight, killing a soldier and wounding two others, headquarters of the U. S. 88th division announced today.

The Americans were attacked four days after a United States patrol killed two Yugoslav soldiers in a brief skirmish near the Morgan demarcation line, which divides the occupation troops of Yugoslavia to the east from American and British forces in the west.

Yugoslavia, with strong Russian backing, has been claiming Trieste and the Venezia Giulia district of Italy, a claim opposed by the United States and the United Kingdom.

While the Americans were being ambushed, Belgrade dispatches told of a crowd of 50,000 persons marching in the Yugoslav capital, chanting the names of Russian Premier Stalin and Yugoslav Premier Tito.

The crowd shouted, "We ask for a revision of the Paris decision on Trieste," "Trieste to Yugoslavia" and "Yugoslavia as an ally demands justice from the allies," and:

"Soviet Russia was the only one in our favor at the Paris conference. The rest of the allies sought to dismember our country and give it to defeated Italy."

Foreign Ministers of the United States, Russia, Britain and France decided at Paris this month to place Trieste in an international zone.

Civil Aeronautics Administration And The Civil Aeronautics Board Supervises Airways To Assure Safety Measures; Agencies Are Correlated In Activities

Washington, July 17.—(AP)—When all Constellation planes were grounded last week—after one of the big airliners crashed in Pennsylvania, killing five crewmen—the grounding was done by CAA.

Then the CAB—which is the Civil Aeronautics Administration—started an investigation. At the same time the CAB—which is the Civil Aeronautics Board—also started an investigation.

The CAA and CAB are both government agencies. But they're separate, although their work ties in. Here's an explanation of the difference between them, what they are, what they do:

CAB (the Civil Aeronautics Board)—The CAB is a five-man board, all members appointed by the President. The chairman is James M. Lendis, former Harvard law school dean and holder of other government jobs before this one.

OUTLAWS SLAY RED SOLDIERS

Polish Bands Terrorize Wide Sections Of Country

Warsaw, July 17.—(AP)—Twenty-five Russian soldiers were reported today to have been killed during the last month by the same outlawed bands of irregulars (NSZ) which are accused of systematically slaying Jews throughout Poland.

The newspaper Glos Ludu said that the latest NSZ attack was on a passenger train near Lublin, and that six Russians were taken captive and later brutally slain.

Meanwhile, mystery clogged the fate of nine Jews reportedly held prisoner by the NSZ near Kielce scene of a pogrom in which 41 persons were killed. Witnesses from Kielce said the Jews were hostages for nine Poles sentenced to death for participating in the pogrom.

The nine Poles were executed Sunday by a firing squad, but it was not known if retaliatory measures had been taken against the hostages.

The Jews were said to have been threatened with death if the executions were carried out. However, news of the executions was not widespread in Kielce, since newspapers there did not publish an account of them.

Redin Acquitted

Seattle, July 17.—(AP)—Russian Naval Lt. Nicolai G. Redin was acquitted by a federal court jury today on espionage and conspiracy charges.

The 30-year-old former Soviet purchasing commission representative here was found innocent on government charges that he purchased secrets about the U. S. S. Yellowstone, a new type destroyer tender, from Herbert G. Kennedy, shipyard engineer.

The jury of seven men and five women brought in the verdict on the 22nd day of the trial.

Indictments against Redin accused him on four counts of espionage and on one count of conspiring with "unknown persons" to obtain secret information.

After the verdict, defense attorney Irvin Goodman told the court Redin would like to say a few words. The Russian officer stepped forward and in a low voice, smiling slightly, said:

"Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, your honor I'd like to thank you for this fair trial in these United States of America."

UN DRAFTING ATOM CONTROL

Committee Told To make Plan For World Atomic Agency

New York, July 17.—(AP)—A 12-nation atomic committee, including among its membership the Soviet Union which opposed its formation last week, set to work today under instructions to draft a plan for a world atomic control agency.

It is the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission's "Committee No. 2" whose designated task is: "To examine questions associated with the control of atomic energy activities, including all measures designed to insure the prevention of the use of atomic energy for purposes of destruction, and other ways of mass destruction, and also including subject to make specific recommendations on said subjects."

Committee No. 2 was scheduled to meet today in secret session to launch the second phase of negotiations started by Subcommittee No. 1, which completed a preliminary exploration of the various nations' views on atomic control last week.

Eight other men who were co-leaders were executed at the same time.

The executions were carried out in a private military cemetery.

The others executed were: Radoslav-Rade Radic, 36, former chief of police; Milos Glesch, 36, Chetnik leader; Oskar Pavlovic, 54, former Zagreb chief of police.

Palestine Scene Of Wide Protest

Jerusalem, July 17.—(AP)—Jews throughout Palestine quit work today in a one-day general strike called to protest the continued detention of Zionist leaders arrested by British military authorities in a roundup June 29.

Every Jewish operated enterprise—with the exception of hospitals, newspapers and the most essential services—shut down.

The strike was called by Vaad Leumi, the National Jewish Council, in sympathy with 2,000 detainees reported staging hunger strikes at the Rafa and Latrun detention camps.

British officials said delays in the release of men and women who were arrested in the search for persons suspected of inciting recent disorders in Palestine were largely the fault of the detainees themselves. Many of the latter were said to be giving false names, submitting to questioning twice under different aliases and otherwise confusing operations intended to bring about the release of innocent persons as far as possible.

High Ranking Legislators Named In Profits Inquiry

Firm U.S. Policy Is Declared Necessary

Sen. Austin Backs Vandenberg In Stand Against Coercive Tactics Among Powers; Course Taken By Byrnes Applauded

Washington, July 17.—(AP)—Senator Austin (R-Vt) today joined Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) in declaring that the U. S. will not be coerced into international decisions.

"The sooner the world learns that the better," added Austin, "who has been named by President Truman to represent this country on the United Nations Security Council."

Sen. Austin forecast the same sort of firm U. S. stand in the U. N. Council that Vandenberg said Secretary of State Byrnes took at the Paris Foreign Ministers Conference.

Senator Vandenberg in a formal report to his colleagues yesterday said the Soviets must learn that the Americans cannot be driven coerced or pressured into decisions and will not bargain in human rights and fundamental liberties anywhere on earth.

Endorsing this, Senator Austin told a reporter he believes a candid discussion of the difficulties the American delegation encountered in Paris will help solidify public opinion.

Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D-Colo) said he thought the Byrnes and Vandenberg reports had gone a long way to line up the Senate solidly behind the course the secretary of state has pursued thus far and to give him added backing in the 21-nation peace conference that opens July 29.

Senator Pepper (D-Fla), who was critical of a previous post-conference report by Vandenberg earlier in the year, said he regarded the Michigan senator's new statement as moderate.

Secretary Of Munitions Combine Testifies Handling Numerous Phone Calls From Rep. May; Sen. Barkley And Four Other Prominent Congressmen Named In Surprise Testimony

By JOHN W. HENDERSON

Washington, July 17.—(AP)—Pretty, red-haired Jean Bates testified today that as a secretary for a munitions combine now under war profits investigation she handled frequent telephone calls from Rep. May (D-Ky) and "on several occasions" from the office of Senator Barkley (D-Ky).

Mrs. Bates told her story in the Senate War Investigating Committee in its inquiry of the wartime operations of a group of companies in which the Garsson brothers were active. She said that "three or four times" a week the Washington offices of the combine got calls from Rep. May, chairman of the House Military Committee.

The calls from Barkley's office, Mrs. Bates added, came from a woman she believed to be the secretary of the Senate majority leader. Mrs. Bates did not know, she said, whether Barkley himself took part in the telephone conversations.

Today's mention was the first time that Barkley's name has come into the committee's public hearings.

Mrs. Bates named six congressional offices which she said either had called or had been called by Joseph Freeman, sales agent for the munitions makers.

She named the offices as those of Senator Barkley, House Majority Leader McCormack (D-Mass.), Rep. May, Rep. Sabath (D-Ill.) chairman of the House Rules Committee, former Rep. Rickstein (D-NY), then chairman of the House Immigration Committee, and Senator Caphart (R-Ind.).

Mrs. Bates told the committee that Freeman would call Sabath "maybe once a week," and that Sabath called Freeman "a couple of times." She said she had called Sabath's office as well as May's in searching for Freeman by telephone.

She testified she had called Senator Caphart for Freeman and telephoned Dickstein "quite frequently—maybe twice a month." She added that Dickstein called her office several times.

In saying she had answered telephone calls from the office of Barkley quite a few times, Mrs. Bates testified she believed the caller was a Mrs. Chance whom she believed was Barkley's secretary.

(One of the companies in the combine is the Batavia Metal Products Co. On July 3, David M. Barkley, son of the senator, said, at Batavia, Ill., he had been with this company in sales work since December and planned to resign soon.)

(Young Barkley, formerly a major in the Army Air Forces, said he took the job as a straight business proposition and his resignation had nothing to do with the Senate investigation.)

Mrs. Bates testified that among army officers who had telephoned the munitions group's Washington office were two generals she identified as Waite and Porter.

She told the committee that among her superiors were Joseph Freeman, Louis Sarelans and Murray Garsson. She testified that they had phoned May's office several times a week.

HIGH COTTON PRICES AHEAD

Already At 35 Cents A Pound, 50-Cent Cotton On Horizon

New Orleans, July 17.—(AP)—Talk of 40 and 50-cent cotton is being heard throughout the south since OPA controls apparently are off the market for good, and 37 cents a pound has just been passed for the first time in more than a score of years.

Discussing the crop, which today is worth a potential $30,000,000 more than last June 1, J. E. McDonald, Texas commissioner of agriculture, predicts that the price may soar as high as 50 cents a pound within the next few months.

Another commissioner, Tom Linder of Georgia, comments that cotton is cheap up to 50 cents a pound.

"Keep your eyes open and you will see 40-cent cotton within 31 days," Linder predicts.

Linder, McDonald and others in official positions think the price of cotton has been too low for some time, and that the steady rise in prices during recent weeks will benefit the farmer economically.

Others point to poor crops in the wake of rain and weevils. They say the increase in price will amount to an economic break for the farmer, in lieu of his increasing labor costs and other production expenses.

The price of cotton on the New Orleans Exchange fluctuated under 35 cents a pound on July 16 after most months had closed well above the 35-cent mark the day before.

Exchange statistics show that cotton has increased about $30 a bale from June 1, 1946, or from about $144 to $75 per 500-pound bale.

An estimated 10,000,000 bale crop a middle guess among the 1946 unofficial crop predictions, would have a potential value of $1,440,000,000 at the closing May futures quotation of 28.73 cents a pound on June 1.

Don't Buy!

TULSA, OKLA., July 17.—(AP)—Rebelling against a price of 79 cents a pound for butter, Tulsa housewives kept telephones busy yesterday with a "chain" campaign aimed at stopping retail sales of butter.

Each caller asked that the list-gener telephone two additional persons and pledge them not to buy butter until the price went down. An anonymous butter distributor claimed a boycott would have only one effect—diverting the local supply to eastern markets.

CHINESE REDS BEGIN ATTACK

Government Protests To U. S. Envoy Gen. Marshall

Nanking, July 17.—(AP)—The Chinese government charged today that 130,000 Communist troops had opened an offensive along the Yangtze river and were attacking only 20 miles from Nanking and 45 miles from Shanghai.

The government carried a protest to General Marshall, asserting the Communists intended to sweep up key cities and ports along the 175 miles of the mighty river between this capital and Shanghai.

The Communists had complained to the special U. S. envoy late yesterday, charging the government was provoking this east China fighting and the situation was "heading directly into a full-scale civil war."

The government's ministry of defense said the Communists had attacked Luho, 20 miles north of Nanking, and the city of Haimen, across the Yangtze 45 miles north of Shanghai, as well as other ports.

Correspondents were unable to obtain permission to visit the alleged battle front north of Nanking to investigate the conflicting claims.

Red Army Unable To Locate Officers

Frankfurt, Germany, Aug. 17.—(AP)—Russian authorities have told the U. S. army that two U. S. officers who supposedly disappeared into the Russian zone of Berlin recently cannot be located, it was announced here, officially today.

The missing men are Capt. Harold Cobin of New York City and Newark, N. J., and Lt. George Wyatt of Oklahoma City. They were last seen on July 4, boarding a train for Oranienburg, as Russian provisional headquarters 20 miles north of Berlin.

The Russians yesterday released two other missing Americans, Warrant Officer and Mrs. Samuel L. Harrison, and the Americans released three Russians, two of them army officers, who had been held on suspicion of espionage.

Tradition Of Kingship Despite The Fact England's Constitutional Monarch Has No Governmental Authority, His People's Devotion And Special Training Give Him Influence

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

For the foreigner who has been reared in the understanding that England's constitutional monarch has no governmental authority in his own right, there's an odd ring in the current petitions by British housewives to their king to repeal the bread rationing which is scheduled to become effective July 21.

Of course King George can't reverse his government's decision to ration bread and the indignant housewives are quite well aware of that fact, although your correspondent—having experienced Britain's spartan rationing recently—has an understanding sympathy with them in their plea. In the present case the appeals went to the Home Office to be dealt with, and the chances that His Majesty would be consulted about them were indeed remote. Why then are such petitions addressed to him?

Well, of course, tradition has something to do with it—tradition which dates back to the days when kings ruled by divine right and were lords of all they surveyed. And the average Briton clings to tradition as a Scotsman does to a sixpence. However, it strikes me that the real reason lies in the very fact that these days the monarch has no governmental powers but is completely detached from the political arena.

Because he is wholly outside politics, although devoting his life to the people, he is held in the deepest respect and affection by his subjects. They feel that he is one of the men upon whom they can bank without reserve. And so, because of the unique position which he holds, an appeal addressed to him, even though he never deals with it, attracts public attention. Proof of this lies in the fact that the Food Ministry has increased the proposed bread ration slightly for children under 18 since the housewives' protest.

However, that isn't the whole story. Actually, and the constitution notwithstanding, the king of England is a very powerful individual and the ministers of government pay much deference to his wishes. The reasons are (1) the high regard in which his subjects hold him, and (2) the fact that the direct heir to the throne is trained intensively from birth for his or her great responsibility. His education includes not only schooling in affairs of the home country but of the entire empire. (Continued on Page Two)

England's Kings

... and the world at large. Thus the ruler is supremely well equipped to deal with matters of state.

It probably is true, as I have reported in this column from London six months ago, that the present ruler, George VI, is far less inclined to voice strong personal views than were his immediate predecessors. That would be natural if for no other reason than that he wasn't the direct heir but has had to acquire king-like still acquiring it for that matter. However, his disposition not to interfere with state affairs complements the new Socialist regime perfectly and makes him a most acceptable monarch for a leftist government.

George's grandfather, Edward VII, took a lively hand in governmental affairs at times, and the next in line, George V, was a chip off the old block in that respect. It was during the nation-wide general strike of 1926, if memory serves me right, that George V sent for the Home Secretary and told that harassed minister: "I will not have my people manhandled." And that was that.

Then came the strong-willed Edward VIII who gave up the world's greatest throne so that he could marry Mrs. Simpson. He was beginning to exercise much influence in public affairs when he quit his job, and a lot of British statesmen breathed easier after the abdication, since many feared that Edward might overreach his position under a constitutional monarchy.

Nothing like that is likely to happen with the present king, but I'll bet a bright new penny that so long as England has a king, just so long will the government pay him deference and grant his wishes where they can. His Majesty is, as previously remarked, a powerful individual.

JIGGER MORAN

by JOHN ROEBURT

Chapter 3

The sun was a great red ball rimmed with fire. Broadway was a gigantic wave of rolicking sound and a dripping sea of faces.

Jigger caught the express elevator in the 1501 building and got off at the thirty-second floor. Halfway down the hall he turned the knob on a door that read "Independent Feature News Service."

The anteroom was deserted and Jigger opened a door that was plainly marked "Private."

A young man with close red hair on a small brow and a look of habitual preoccupation glanced up from a typewriter.

"Lo, Jigger."

"Hello, Red. Where's the office girl?"

"Canned."

"What for?"

"No doubt."

"I thought she was satisfied with coffee and a by-line."

"She was. But it dwindled down to just a by-line."

Jigger lit a cigarette and burst in to a fit of coughing. His eyes fixed on the droop of Red's shoulders. Red was skinny and had no vices; a guy that preferred a shoeshine to a fifteen-cent Nedick's breakfast if he couldn't have both. It was easy to like Red.

Jigger's voice was strangled. "Going getting tough again?"

"And how. Six weeklies that took our features canceled out."

"So what? Keep plugging."

"It's a waste of postage, Jigger. Just can't compete with the big syndicates. I'm going back to plain and simple theatrical press-agenting with a little playwright on the side."

Red grinned without humor. "Who knows? I might yet hit the jackpot with a play."

Jigger piped a bar from "Happy Days Are Here Again" in his morning voice and Red's face curled into an oh-yearh.

"Red, you got to keep pitching. With City News out, et cetera, et cetera, there are plenty of live openings coming up. What's the back rent situation?"

Red made a wry face. "A hundred bucks. And twenty more for the phone company."

Jigger toiled at a bulging wallet and threw three bills on the desk. "Here's three C's. Got the office girl's phone number? You need her for a front."

Red continued to look penniless. "It's no go this time, Jigger. I can't let you breathe life into this crypt any more. What's the use in keeping a corpse alive?"

"It's useful to me, Red."

"Jigger, you're off your nut. Where can you get three hundred dollars worth of use out of this office?"

"It's been plenty useful to me this far, pal. Jigger was emphatic.

"You never broke a story."

Jigger said slyly, "But I suppressed plenty."

Red's scowl deepened. "Jigger, besides sleeping, eating, breathing, larceny—what goes on in that mind of yours?"

Jigger stuck his neck out cautiously in self-diagnosis. "Generally, Red, I like to find out for sure, over and over again, what makes them bounce, squeal, dream, laugh. It helps me establish my own identity beyond any doubt; get to know myself better."

Jigger patted Red on the head and concluded, "That's a thin slice of the generality of me. Specifically, Red, I'm after a four thousand dollar balance Little Joey is dangling under my nose."

Red looked startled. "Four thousand? What do you have to do? Murder?"

"Nail a murderer. Unless Joey fed me doctored bait."

"That's Joey's specialty, pal. The double-double-cross."

"Well see."

Red said, "Wait a minute, Jigger, you don't mean we?"

"Sure thing. We're get it, we're tackling the case of the Yorkville doctor from a crime reporter's angle. No use trying to mix it, Red, unless you want to try a thirty-two-story drop without a parachute."

Red drew his eyes together. "Yorkville doctor? I remember. That was a headliner tall end of last week."

Red looked at Jigger meditatively. "I don't know, Jigger. My adventure complex isn't half the size of yours. I'm still an earnest young man anxious to get ahead in journalism without too many black marks."

"How about for four thousand dollars?" Red said dourly.

"Or four thousand dollars. You mustn't be so prejudiced against me because I believe wholeheartedly in the profit motive, Red. It's the American Way."

Red looked resigned. "What can I do?"

"I have a few yeoman chores mapped out for you."

"Such as?"

Jigger barked it out newscaster style. "One: start up a series on the rise of crimes of violence as a result of the larger world spectrum of violence. You know, the old social psychology line. Grind the copy out in mimeo and start flooding the nation's press via the mails. No charge. Give it away."

Red grimaced and reached for a pad and pencil.

"Two: buy up a file of homicides in the American scene, past and present. Hire a student to do library research if you must. Jam your file cabinet full."

Red scribbled memory clues.

"Three: get that strawberry blonde back if you can. She gives the office respectability."

Red looked up from his pad. "Is that all? That's only a short order, bud. There's ten bucks left of your three hundred."

Jigger grinned affably. "Four: give me an assignment, in writing and on IPNS stationery, to do metropolitan field work on current crimes and their social significance."

Red got up on his feet and saluted. "Then what, master?"

"Well see. On the basis of developments. Meanwhile, all this gives plausibility to my strong interest in the strange death of the Yorkville doctor. Just in case the D. A. makes gurgling sounds of disapproval at me." Jigger skipped to the door. "Is it all straight in your mind, Red?"

"I suppose so." Red registered doubt, perplexity, disgust.

Jigger went through the door and down the elevator.

Strength FOR THE DAY BY EARL L. DOUGLAS

A news story related recently the experiment which is soon to be made whereby man will try to out-fly the speed of sound. All sorts of novel devices have been thought up for measuring speed and temperature, and for rescuing the flier if he gets into trouble and is too far gone to do much for himself.

The account gives a picture of man's ingenuity at its best. It appears that the mechanically possible has been achieved. Yet with all his ingenuity, man has not learned how to behave himself. We have just had one war and are talking about the inevitability of another. While man's power to produce goods has been mounting in an astonishing fashion, so have crimes in general and juvenile delinquency in particular. As he builds more beautiful homes in which to live, the family life which the house is designed to enclose has been disintegrating. We have smooth highways over which to drive our high-powered cars, and no real purpose or direction in our lives. We have more books than ever before, and fewer masterpieces. Men seek after happiness today more frantically than in any previous age, yet on the whole they appear to have less contentment than did their forefathers.

Why is it that an age with a genius rating in things mechanical and electronic should have a sub-normal IQ in things which have to do with happiness and good living?

REBUILDING THE HOUSE OF WASHINGTON

The complexities of efficient government has long been a headache to legislators. Bureaucracy, rising from an attempt to simplify governmental procedures, has become a monster. An evil to be shunned; but even its strongest revilers would admit that to an extent, modern government would be impossible without it.

Through the passage of time, the governing of our nation has become the biggest business in the world. The many branches of administration have grown prodigiously with new agencies, departments, committees and sub-committees sprouting on every limb. It is no wonder that in the last 150 years the system has grown top-heavy.

Under President Roosevelt, the government assumed a new role; that of attempting to control the economy of the nation-at-large. Feebler efforts had been made before, but with the New Deal a tremendous stride was taken in enhancing the powers of the Federal Government. These new responsibilities produced the inevitable labyrinth, adding more confusion to an already overburdened and out-moded system of procedure.

Certain congressmen have already thrown up their hands in despair over the maze in which they are working. Virginia's Senator Byrd submitted to the President a program for reorganization. The proposals include the abolishment of many agencies and merging of their powers . . . a correlation of the activities of the new departments and the speeding up of procedures to permit quicker action, allowing more time for additional work.

The step has long been needed, and the fact that Congress itself recognized its ills would indicate that the patient is far from being a hopeless case. The President now has the authority to reorganize the government; in some cases he will have to ask for specific legislation.

The strongest opponents will be those who suddenly find themselves without a position of influence when their powers are taken from them to be merged with departments of wider scope. There will be many such men, all of them seeking to keep the prestige they gained under the old formula of government. These will naturally unite in an effort to block the breaking-up of their petty kingdoms . . . but surely, even that, but nature has hurled its greatest trials, such power-hungry congressmen can find no excuse for blocking a step into the shining future.

WASHINGTON DAYBOOK

By D. HAROLD OLIVER

Washington—The road of a President is not all rocks and ruts. For example, consider the gifts he receives. President Truman gets about 200 a month, more at Christmas.

They come from persons all over the world, mostly by mail. Some are presented in person, sometimes with photographers present, sometimes not. The President is allowed to keep all gifts addressed to him and intended for him personally, even if they come from a foreign government. Gifts to the government—say a valuable book for the White House library—remain the property of Uncle Sam.

A great variety of things are mailed to the President and members of his family. Shirts, nylon books by the score—mostly autographed—some yellowed with age; hand-painted neckties, bedspreads hand-embroidered tablecloths, vases, canes, hats, suits, prize-winning pies, fish, turkeys, crates of asparagus, cans of honey.

More than 200 shirts have been received at the White House since the President tried unsuccessfully to buy some on a trip to Kansas City. Just his size too, most of them. They came from firms and individuals. A farmer sent one of his old ones, freshly laundered.

Mr. Truman has given some of these away. Three went to a reporter, same neck and sleeve length during a news conference. There are several repositories for gifts. The President has a built-in case in his office where he displays some of them. Wearing apparel and household goods go to the living quarters. On the third floor is a "gift closet" for gifts that probably will never be used; ties a little too loud for the dignity of the office; red-white-and-blue salt and pepper snakers, etc. Down in the basement is a "chamber of horrors" for gim-cracks.

Among the latest gifts was a set of instruments that belonged to the British ship Resolute

Queen Victoria presented President Hayes a desk made from the Resolute's timbers. This desk still reposes in the President's study in the White House proper. The little box of instruments was donated by T. G. Todd of Mobile, Ala.

Carved portraits of FDR and his successor recently arrived from Colombia as a gift from that country's Evangelical churches. A Peoria, Ill., donor sent an "invasion prayer" on copper plate, commemorating June 8, 1944.

Each gift was acknowledged, by the White House if personal, by the State Department if governmental. The State Secret Service gets the first crack at them, with an X-ray machine. Doubtful ones are tossed into water.

Eatibles go first to the Agriculture Department for tests. If a cat survives a hunk of prize salmon, it goes back to the White House kitchen.

Returning to Nanking from Shanghai, he told Marshall the Communists' still are on the defensive "unless some drastic action is taken instantly, the answer is civil war." Marshall was expected to confer within two or three days with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, who is in the summer capital at Kuling.

Jaycees Sponsor Beauty Contest
By DICK STOKES III
The Greenville Junior Chamber of Commerce, whose annual beauty contest and dance will take place on Tuesday evening, July 22, in the High School auditorium, has only two objectives in sponsoring an evening of dancing and pageantry. The first, to select from the ranks of Greenville's eligible young ladies between the ages of 18 and 25 a leading lady who will represent the city in the Miss North Carolina pageant in Wilson on August 3; secondly, to offer the people of Greenville—young and old alike—an opportunity to enjoy themselves with dancing as well as a well arranged program.

N. Y. Stock Market
New York, July 17—(AP)—Selected industrial rallied behind steel in today's stock market and a few special issues exhibited strength but many leaders found the going a bit difficult.
Irregularity ruled until after midday with dealings notably slow. Actively picked up somewhat as bids were reinstated here and there although volume of around 900,000 shares was well under that of Tuesday. Advances of fractions to a point or so—there were several much wider jumps—predominated near the close.

Greenies Split Double Header Against Wilson

By BERT MOYE
Greenville and Wilson split a twin bill here last night with the Tobs taking the opening game 7-4 and the Greenies taking the night cap 9-4.

In the initial game, Wilson started their scoring in the first frame when they scored one run without a hit. Dickens walked, advanced to third on infield outs of Wolfe and Carnahan, and then scored when Eason hit to Merle Blackwell, who threw the ball to Narron for a perfect out, but Old Sol got in his eyes and he missed the ball entirely with Dickens scoring.

Wilson scored again in the second frame when Stuart reached first on Narron's error, went to second on Ballam's wild pitch, and then scored on Kee's timely single.

In the sixth the Tobs put across two runs when Bauer doubled, Brooks walked, Stuart sacrificed and Byrum singled to bring in Bauer and Brooks.

What proved to be the winning runs for the Tobs came in the 7th when they tallied three times. Wolfe first man up singled, Carnahan singled, Eason hit a fly to deep center with Wolfe scoring on the out, and then Bauer parked one over the left field fence to bring in Carnahan.

Greenville was held scoreless until the seventh frame when they scored two runs. Parise singled, Merle Blackwell singled, Carlson was walked to load the bases, then V. Blackwell was walked forcing in Parise, and Earle Smith singled to bring home Merle Blackwell.

Greenville scored two more runs in the eighth frame when Narron walked, Ranweiler walked, Merle Blackwell singled to bring home Narron, and Carlson doubled to bring home Merle Blackwell.

Dean Ballam started on the mound for the Greenies and pitched the first seven frames being touched for 11 hits and all of the Wilson runs.

In the second game the Greenies returned to their true form behind the five-hit pitching of Rex Benton, who was touched for only five hits which he kept well scattered in the seven inning affair.

Wilson started the game by taking a one run lead in the first frame. Dickens walked, stole second and came home on Eason's single.

The Greenies came back in the fourth frame to go out in front when they scored two runs when Parise walked, M. Blackwell reached first on fielder's choice, Ray Carlson tripled to bring M. Blackwell home, and Carlson scored on Verne Blackwell's long fly to deep center.

The Greenies scored seven runs in the sixth frame on four singles two walks, an error, hit batsman sacrifice and a wild pitch. A total of eleven men faced pitcher Felton during this spurge.

The Tobs started a rally in the seventh frame with two out, when they scored three runs on Dickenson's single, Wolfe's walk, and Earl Carnahan's homer over the right field wall to bring in Dickens and Wolfe.

The Greenies go to Wilson tonight for a return game with the Tobs, on Thursday they go to Tarboro where they meet the Tars in a twin-bill there and then return home Friday night to play another twin-bill with the Tarboro Tars with the first game scheduled to get under way at 6:45.

MANY JOBS, FEW WORKERS

Acute Labor Shortage Here While Hundreds Are Idle

By CHESTER WALSH
Today was the quietest day in shopping circles in Greenville since the midweek half holidays started in June. People are busy in the country curing tobacco and apparently did not have time to come to town shopping. There were fewer people on the streets and vehicular traffic was unusually light.

With tobacco ripening fast and insufficient labor to house the crop an acute labor shortage is prevailing here. Restaurants, stores and the hospital need clerks and workers, but workers are simply not available while tobacco curing in the country is in full swing the next several weeks.

Housing the tobacco crop is not the main cause of a scarcity of workers in Greenville. There are hundreds of men and women—white and colored—who simply do not want to work and who shake their heads when jobs are offered them unless the wages paid are double what they ought to be. And then too, it seems that there are very few of the unemployed here who want jobs in which there is real work to do. It's an unusual situation—a hardback of prosperity among workers who profited on wartime jobs, before the fighting stopped.

Harvesting the tobacco crop is not requiring all of the available workers, although farmers need more workers and need them now. There has been considerable migration of Negro workers to Eastern Shore of Virginia and New Jersey points to harvest vegetables and fruit crops and to work in canneries. Many restaurant workers have migrated to seaside resorts.

In the meantime, if the labor problem is bothering you, take a ride around Greenville any morning except Sunday, and observe the hundreds of idlers who can't be tempted to work, except at excessive wages, and, if reports circulating are true, employers do not know just how long their workers will remain on the job. They are on today and gone tomorrow. In the meantime hundreds of jobs here are untitled.

They need workers at the post-office and a road contractor building roads in this county needs workers, as well as the city of Greenville and some of its projects, including laying of sewer lines.

The U. S. Employment Office is doing a good job as far as registering persons for jobs and listing the needs of employers. The office refers workers to jobs. Many of them look over the jobs and never report for work. The labor problem is serious. One businessman here today said if there are any people drawing unemployment insurance—unless they are old and unable to do

Senators Find Star On Their Own Bench
Washington, July 16—(AP)—It looks as if the Washington Senators finally have found that fast, hard-hitting outfielder they've been hunting. He was sitting sadly on their own bench all the time. G.I. Coan is the name.

The St. Louis Browns, a club that has caused Washington misery all season, came to town Sunday, and Coan was put into the lineup.

In the three games Coan: Got seven hits in 18 attempts, including a double and a triple. Scored five runs.

Showed such bursts of speed that already local clients are wondering already local clients are wondering Washington won all three games, and it appears that Coan has got himself a regular job at last.
