

Coal Industry Is Opposed to Pact

Warns It Will Be Much More Difficult To Restore Mines To Private Ownership Should Gov't Negotiate New Wage Contract With John L. Lewis

By HAROLD W. WARD Washington, Oct. 30.—(AP)—The coal industry warned today that if the government negotiates a new wage contract with John L. Lewis it will be "much more difficult" to restore the soft coal mines to private operation.

The warning came from John D. Battle, executive secretary of the National Coal Association, just two days before government officials are scheduled to meet with Lewis who is demanding a new wage pact for his 400,000 United Mine Workers. The coal association speaks for the majority of bituminous producers.

Battle's statement said: "In the light of the confusion that exists at this time with respect to the bituminous coal mining industry and the conflicting reports regarding the forthcoming negotiations between the government and the union, it is obvious that if the government proceeds to make a new agreement with the union it will result in making it much more difficult for the coal mine owners to get together with the union on a collective bargaining agreement looking toward the return of the mines to private operations."

The question of whether the government's existing agreement with Lewis can be re-opened—still is being hotly debated. A number of government lawyers are reported to differ sharply from Interior Secretary Krug's stand that the pact is good for the duration of government operation of the mines.

At the Justice Department, where the contract is being analyzed, a press officer told reporters that Attorney General Tom Clark has not made a formal ruling on this point. Presidential Press Secretary Charles G. Ross told a news conference today that he had no comment on a published report that Clark had disagreed with Krug's position. He also said that President Truman probably will wait until after the election to make any statement on the future of the Wage Stabilization Act.

Complications In Hollywood Vows

Hollywood, Oct. 30.—(AP)—Artie Shaw and Kathleen Winsor, who managed to keep their romance a secret in this gossip-loving town, were just as successfully keeping their whereabouts to themselves today.

The bandsman who hopes to produce movies and the dark-haired writer who produced "Forever Amber" vanished after their weekend wedding in Juarez, Mex., and friends here professed not to know their destination. It was Shaw's fifth marriage. Miss Winsor's second. He is 36, she's 28.

The ceremony provided the movie colony with its most interesting conversational piece in many a month and the Los Angeles Times, in an article headlined "Winsor-Shaw Marriage Arouses Speculation" called attention to the fact that Actress Ava Gardner's California divorce last Friday from Shaw won't become final for a year and a day.

"Asked about the legal entanglements of the situation, the District Attorney's office yesterday said that the law provides that if persons divorced in this state remarry outside the state prior to obtaining a final decree they are liable to prosecution for bigamy if they return here to live as man and wife."

Appeals To People

Wordy Barrages Laid Down By World Statesmen Approach To Settlement Through Press And Radio; Appeals Made To Peoples Rather Than Gov'ts

The war of words has attained a volume which is difficult to digest all at once, but suggesting that there can't be much more to say before the nations get down to cases. Stalin, Molotov and Churchill—each doing some blasting and each doing some purring—have joined with lesser voices of the United Nations to lay the issues on the table. It's a strange new business, this approach to settlement through the internal press and radio. Open diplomacy which would surprise even a Wilson. Appeals to peoples, rather than to governments, but with one people—the Russian—barred from the debate or so enthralled by their own government as to minimize whatever little part of outside opinion might reach them. Churchill, although in retreat re-

U. S. SHELVES WORLD FLIGHT BY BIG B-29'S

War Dept. Requests No Action Pending Further Study Of Details

Washington, Oct. 30.—(AP)—The State Department said today the Army has indefinitely shelved its plan for a round-the-world flight of B-29 Superfortresses.

Lincoln White, State Department press officer, told reporters the Department received a "preliminary letter" on the subject a few days ago.

After sending the letter, however White said, the War Department followed up with a request that no action whatever be taken on it pending further study by War Department planners on detailed arrangements in connection with the flight.

Reporters, mindful of the possible international implications of sending a fleet of potential atom bomb carriers around the globe, asked if the State Department had requested the "no action" instruction. White replied no.

Army Air Forces officers have been saying for weeks they were ready to launch the flight "in a hurry."

Many Casualties In Calcutta Riot

Calcutta, Oct. 30.—(AP)—Twenty-five persons were killed and about 60 were wounded yesterday as Mohandas K. Gandhi arrived in this Bengal Province capital amid mounting Hindu-Muslim fighting, official announcements said today.

Military headquarters said one Indian soldier died of stab wounds and two others were in critical condition. The soldiers, first military casualties since the outbreak of communal rioting here last August, were in uniform but were off duty and without weapons when a mob overpowered and stabbed them. Earlier a military press advisory committee announcement said the soldiers had fought until their ammunition was exhausted.

Two more persons were reported killed in the Bombay suburb of Kurla. Seven have been killed and 17 injured in the past 24 hours in the Bombay area.

Accuse Germans Of Poor Effort

Stuttgart, Oct. 30.—(AP)—The U. S. military government bluntly accused its own sponsored German states council today of failing to put democracy into effect in American-occupied Germany.

In outspoken criticism, U. S. authorities took the main German administration of the U. S. zone to task for its failure to reach agreement on one of its most important problems—the absorption of expellees from the Sudetenland and other eastern territories.

"The lapse of time taken in unreasonable biased and uncompromising discussions bodes ill for efficient government," the military government declared, "and failure of agreement on this matter indicates a lack of realization of the fundamental democratic concept that chosen representatives must accept for their constituency the equal responsibilities and burden as well as the equal privilege of a democratic government."

Baruch Urges No Veto On A-Bomb

New York, Oct. 30.—(AP)—Bernard M. Baruch says America will not "surrender" the atom bomb "unless and until we know that all other countries are prevented from doing the thing we would be giving up—bomb making."

The U. S. delegate to the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission also declared at the 50th annual New York Herald Tribune Forum on current affairs last night: "Are we the only ones to disarm? That way is suicide."

Baruch's statement was a reaffirmation of the American plan for the atom bomb treaty that would not be subject to veto power once it has been signed.

The Russian counter-proposal asks that veto power remain in the enforcement of such a treaty.

Harold L. Ickes, former Secretary of the Interior, presided at a question and answer period after Baruch's talk.

Arms Limitation Is Endorsed By Greece

First Direct Response To Molotov Speech; Call For Safeguards In Disarmament Plan; Makin Challenges Veto Stand

New York, Oct. 30.—(AP)—Greece in the first direct response to Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov's demands for world arms limitations today that she was prepared to support the Russian proposal with the reservation that international control and sanctions must be set up to safeguard peace.

Greek Delegate Thanassis Agnides said he was stating Greece's position in response to Molotov's invitation for comment. He spoke shortly after Australian Delegate Norman J. O. Makin, without making a direct reference to Molotov's disarmament proposal, had urged the assembly to start work on the whole question of arms limitations.

However, both disagreed bitterly with other phases of Russian policy laid down by Molotov yesterday in the assembly and by other Soviet spokesmen in recent months.

Aghnides called for two safeguards in connection with any treaty or convention on disarmament: 1. International control with effective guarantees for loyal execution of the convention.

2. Sanctions against states violating the essential provisions of the convention.

While working to support the Soviet arms proposals, Aghnides indirectly criticized Russia and the Slav states for their hostile attitude toward Greece, which he said had received harsh treatment both at the Paris conference and before the security council.

Australia today sharply challenged Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov's assertion that elimination of the big five veto power would result in collapse of the United Nations.

Norman Makin, Australian delegate, took vigorous exception to Molotov's charge that certain countries were campaigning for elimination of the veto with the aim of world domination.

"This is a serious and totally unjustified proposal," Makin said.

The unfinished task of the USO is part of the unfinished task of winning the war—of safeguarding the fruits of victory so that peace can be made secure. For maintaining essential services to the 1,500,000 or more who will be the United States forces in 1947, USO must carry on for one more year.

WHAT'S LEFT TO DO

USO has three major obligations to meet in 1947: 1. To serve those veterans of the war who will not yet have been released from hospitals, armies of occupation or overseas duty by the end of 1946.

COTTON MARTS CLOSED AFTER PRICE SLUMP

Big Exchanges Shut Doors For Third Time In Less Than Two Weeks

New York, Oct. 30.—(AP)—The nation's principal cotton exchanges suddenly were slammed shut today for the third time in less than two weeks after the price of King Cotton had tumbled by an extreme of more than $50 a bale.

The New York Cotton Exchange acted swiftly this morning, only a few minutes before trading was to open. The New Orleans and Chicago Exchanges followed immediately. The Dallas, Tex., Exchange refused to close.

Frank J. Knell, president of the New York Exchange, said only that "numerous requests have been received from shipping centers in the cotton belt, pleading for a temporary suspension of trading in cotton futures to allow for an orderly survey of the spot situation in the South."

In an apparent move to prevent panic selling by hard-hit cotton producers, the Department of Agriculture Washington issued a statement that the cotton crop was in a "favorable statistical position."

The disruption of cotton trading in the last two weeks has been all but unprecedented.

On October 8 cotton for delivery in December was selling at a 26-cent discount.

SPECULATORS CAUSED BREAK

Cotton Price Collapse Laid To Small Southern Investors

New Orleans, Oct. 30.—(AP)—Speculation by "farmers, merchants, doctors, and everybody else all over the South" was blamed here today for the collapse of the cotton market.

An authoritative source, who asked that his name be withheld, said the break which has sent futures tumbling more than $50 a bale in recent weeks "is the same thing that always happens sooner or later in a speculators' market."

"When the speculators are shaken out of the market—and they're being shaken out—prices will be stabilized on a basis of supply and demand," he predicted. "But speculation, rather than supply and demand, has been the basis of recent prices."

The informant, who is close to all phases of the cotton industry in the deep South, painted this picture of the situation: "Farmers, merchants, doctors, and everybody else all over the South have been speculating in cotton futures. A banker in a Louisiana town says many farmers mortgaged not only their crops but their farms, to get in on the rising market. I know of a town in Mississippi where everybody and his brother was playing the market. The same is true all over the South."

"When the prices began going down, the banks started to call for their loans. Speculators were forced to put their cotton on the market. Besides, many speculators who had no loans simply got caught and had to liquidate. Any selling on the market causes some other selling, and the process grew like a snowball."

Some sources here said another influence which might have depressed the market was the insistence of banks that mills and others who had mortgaged spot cotton stocks should immediately "hedge" by selling futures.

Wallace In Gay Mood On Tour

Henry Wallace (right), former secretary of commerce, and James Roosevelt, California Democratic state chairman, are all smiles at a press conference in Los Angeles preceding an address Wallace delivered there. Major Parties Gird For Election Battle

All But Three House Seats At Stake; Control Of House Of Representatives Is Goal; New Faces In Next Congress

Washington, Oct. 30.—(AP)—The Democrats already have 67 seats locked up with unopposed candidates against only 10 assured for the Republicans in next Tuesday's battle of ballots for control of the House of Representatives.

Nevertheless, not since 1931, when they lost control, have Republicans been so keen in their chances—nor the Democrats more determined to stop them.

At stake are all but three of the 435 House seats. Those three already have been filled in Maine's election in September. With control goes the speakership, scores of choice patronage jobs, the chairmanships and domination of all House committees, and the power generally to direct the course of legislation.

A strong psychological asset is also at stake for not in half a century has the party that won control of the House in an off-year election failed to elect a president two years later.

Due largely to the traditionally Solid South, the Democrats have 67 House nominees either without major party opposition or with both major party nominations. They are certain of election. Seven Republicans have advance assurance of election because of no opposition and three others have been elected in Maine. Some Republican chiefs claim another 60 are certain of winning in traditionally Republican districts in the north, while Democrats count another 37 elected because of nominal Republican opposition in the South.

For a bare majority, 218 seats are assured.

Used Lantern As Deadly Weapon

Sheriff Ruel W. Tyson said today that he is holding in jail John Henry White, Negro of the Whitehurst station community, between Stokes and Bethel on the charge of murder in connection with the death yesterday of Washington White, 59-year-old Negro of that community. They are tenants on the farm of Sam Whitehurst of Bethel.

The sheriff said John Henry White and Washington White were in a crop game on the night of October 19. John Henry and Washington White engaged in a fight during which John Henry struck Washington White with a lantern. Dr. J. L. Winstead, surgeon at Pitt General Hospital, in an autopsy yesterday, reported to Pitt County Coroner Griffin H. Rouse that Washington came to his death as a result of a blow on the head. The coroner ordered John Henry White held pending an inquest.

Deputy Sheriff Cletus Jackson and Policeman Walter Gray of Bethel investigated the case.

The grand jury in Superior Court today returned a true bill against John Henry White, charging him with murder in connection with the death of Washington White.

they do. Briefly, the articles say this: 1. The south is losing people every year to the north and west. More people leave the south each year than go into it to live.

2. Southern income is behind the rest of the country.

3. Yet the birth rate in the south is greater than elsewhere.

4. With the population growing—but more and better jobs to be found elsewhere—people desert the south.

5. Because there are more and better jobs elsewhere, the people from outside the south are not now drawn there to live.

6. For these reasons the south is losing its population.

Warren Austin To Give Important Statement On American Foreign Policy; Address To Cover U. S. Position On Issues Raised By Molotov Yesterday

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER New York, Oct. 30.—(AP)—An important statement on U. S. foreign policy will be made today by American chief delegate Warren Austin in his address to the United Nations General Assembly, a delegation spokesman disclosed.

The address, it was learned, will contain some references to Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov's bombshell speech to the assembly last night, in which he demanded immediate action on a four-point arms control proposal.

Whether the American policy statement to be made by Austin will state the American position on the armaments reduction issue which Molotov has raised in this assembly for the first time, or whether it would be connected with some other aspect of foreign policy was not disclosed by the delegation spokesman.

The Austin declaration, it was learned, was worked out overnight and approved by Secretary of State Burns and President Truman.

This indicated that it resulted from some of the charges or statements made by Molotov. In this connection, diplomats said that the only really new policy question raised by Molotov was that of the American attitude toward his arms control program, including his demand that the S. should stop making atomic bombs.

Fears of new tensions between Russia and the western powers over atomic controls, disarmament, the veto and other critical issues swept through many United Nations assembly delegations as diplomats from 50 other member countries debated the challenging policy speech hurled into the assembly by Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov.

The Soviet leader topped off his speech with a four-point arms reduction program, including a request for action by the assembly to try to get the U. S. to stop making atomic bombs.

Molotov assailed Winston Churchill as a prophet of aggressive imperialism in America and Britain and blasted Bernard Baruch, U. S. member of the U. N. Atomic Commission, for allegedly molding a "militant philosophy leading toward a new aggression."

He attacked the American atomic control plan a designed to give this country an atomic monopoly, asserted abolition of the veto would be a "disaster."

Call For Police In Strike Strife

Milwaukee, Oct. 30.—(AP)—Police Chief John W. Polcyn ordered 120 city policemen to report today to be sworn in as special deputies for duty at the big West Allis, Wis., plant of the Allis Chalmers Mfg. Co., strike-bound for the last 183 days.

Polcyn also said he would hold the entire day shift of 120 officers in reserve for emergency duty at the plant, where picket line violence has flared out of control the past two days.

Fighting broke out for the second time yesterday as day shift workers left the plant, despite efforts of 95 sheriff's deputies and 30 West Allis policemen to maintain order. Windows in the company's engineering building and in nearby parked cars were smashed.

Milwaukee County Sheriff George Hanley telephoned Governor Walter S. Goodland "that the presence at the Allis Chalmers strike of approximately 80 per cent of my personnel jeopardizes the maintenance of law and order throughout the rest of the county."

Southern Migration

South's Economic Status Compared With Rest Of Nation; Trained Southerners Departing For Other States; More Industrialization Said Needed

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, Oct. 30.—(AP)—President Roosevelt long ago called the south the nation's No. 1 economic problem. It still is behind the rest of the country.

How much it is behind, although it has shown improvement, is made pretty clear in "Labor in the South," a series of articles in October's monthly labor review, a publication of the labor department.

These articles—economic studies on southern income and workers—are not for popular reading, but for economic studies, they're well and clearly written.

And they're important for anyone who wishes to know what is happening in the south to workers, their wages and the kind of jobs

The origin of our flag was well presented by Miss Bernadine Worsley. Mrs. Frank Taylor then introduced our guest speaker, Rev. Roscoe Hauser, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

He gave an excellent talk on our Chinese ally. Being stationed in China as a chaplain in the army he was able to bring to us a clear picture of China as it is today, and the necessity of a better understanding of China.

Rev. Hauser in comparing our army with the Chinese army said the Chinese seem to be set on the "me first and you next" idea which did not promote good fellowship between the two armies.

He also spoke of the poorly organized and the poorly managed Chinese army, which originated from outlaw bands that united their forces during the war as their government's army. He said another falling in China was corruption in the government or in politics.

In closing he said there was no better way we could help than to do all we could for the missions in China.

The program was followed by the refreshment hour which was enjoyed by everyone.

The assisting hostesses were Mrs. Arthur Corey, Mrs. F. A. Bendall, Mrs. Claud Allgood and Mrs. H. R. Rodgers—Reported.

It's fun to read! Trying it is believing it.

Something old! In the era of the bicycles and the Gibson girl, the following were the best sellers. "Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush," by MacLaren; "The Prisoner of Zenda," by Mary Anne; "A Lady of Quality," by Burnett; "Soldiers of Fortune," by Davis; "Quavads," by Sienkiewicz.

When "Remember the Maine" swept the nation as a battle cry, Kate Douglas Wiggin and Rudyard Kipling were the favorites. "David Harum," "Richard Carvel" and "When Knighthood Was in Flower" were the pleasure favorite.

In 1900 "Graustark," by M. Cuthbert reached 100,000 copies. "The Rosary" by Barclay, swept the country in 1910. "The winning of Barbara Worth" by Wright, and "The Harvester" by Porter, came along with "Alexander's Ragtime Band." It would be fun to read the best-sellers of 1914-1919, those years when the president was no longer able "to keep us out of war."

"The Eyes of the World" by Wright, 1914; "The Turnout," by Tarkington, 1915; "Seventeen," by Tarkington, 1916; "Mr. Britling Sees It Through," by Wells, 1917; "The U. P. Trail," by Grey, 1918; and "Four Horsemen of Apocalypse" by Ibanez, 1919.

From 1920 to 1940, we dare not call the most popular authors, old. Zane Grey, Gertrude Atherton, Philip Gibbs, Sinclair Lewis, A. S. M. Hutchinson, Edna Ferber, Hamilton Gibbs, John Erskine, Thornton Wilder, Erich Maria Remarque, Pearl Buck, Hervey Allen, Lloyd Douglas, Rawlings, John Steinbeck and Richard Llewellyn carried the honors.

Margaret Mitchell, Marjorie Kinnan for having written the top numbers in the best-sellers.

It's fun to read something new, the best sellers of today: Are they all good, fair, or rotten?

Check the list: Caldwell, "This Side of Innocence"; Wakeman, "The Hucksters"; Ward, "The Snake Pit"; Verby, "Foxes of Harrow"; Howe, "We Happy Few"; Keyes, "The River Road"; Costain, "The Black Rose"; Jennings, "The Salem Frigate"; Weston, "The Dark Wood"; Osborne, "Through the Purple Glass"; MacDonald, "The Egg and I"; and Liebman, "Peace of Mind."

"It's fun to be alone with a book." N. B. H.

Incest Case On Trial In Court

By CHESTER WALSH

In Superior Court late yesterday afternoon the jury returned a verdict of not guilty against Robert Lee Cox, owner of the car that struck and killed Edward W. Moore elderly Greenville man, last June on South Evans street. Earlier the court had ordered a non-suit of the charge of hit-and-run driving against Cox.

Mark Turnage, driver of the car who was being tried for manslaughter and hit-and-run driving, after testimony had been taken, submitted through his counsel, a plea of guilty of manslaughter, and the court accepted it.

Judge R. Hunt Parker of Roanoke Rapids, who is presiding over the one-week criminal term of court has not passed sentence on Turnage.

Late yesterday, the court took up the case of M. L. Bartlett, Negro storekeeper, and his daughter, Mary Bartlett Woodard, charged with incest. It was testified that Bartlett had put his wife, Mary Bartlett, aside in his affections and had an illicit affair with his daughter. The case was expected to go to the jury this afternoon.

Chapter 20

Cloud returned to the kitchen doorway. He looked at both of them sharply. Barbara lifted her head and freed herself from Martin's arms; she was careful not to look again toward the stove.

Cloud said, "She didn't do it herself."

Martin tried to interpret his somewhat meaningful inflection. "How about the note?" he asked.

"I'll show you." The detective started back for the living room. "Don't walk on the rug; use the floor."

They followed. Cloud stopped by the writing desk and pointed to a fountain pen, uncapped, lying on the blotter.

"She wrote it with that. She wasn't alone; someone stood here at her shoulder, making her write, either by threat or trickery. He had this in his hand—" Cloud indicated a heavy silver candlestick at the nearer end of the mantel, one of a pair with globes the size of a man's fist at the base. "The bottom is filled with lead. There are traces on it showing how he used it."

"That bruise behind her ear," Martin said.

"He hit her just as she finished the second sentence. The point of the pen dug into the paper and spattered ink across the note; it's bent out of shape. That's why I think perhaps he tricked her. If it was supposed to be her own confession, made in fear of death, he'd have waited for her to sign; but if he was pretending to dictate his own confession, which she expected him to sign, he wouldn't wait."

Martin drew a long, gusty breath, seeing with his mind everything except the features of the other person who had been in the room.

"And then," Cloud said, pointing again, "he dragged her to the kitchen. There are her slippers under the desk as they fell from her feet. There are the two furrows in the pile of the rug where her heels touched the floor."

Through the open doorway came the noise of several pairs of feet on the stairway and in the hall a policeman in uniform came first. He stopped on the threshold and looked inquiringly at Cloud, while three or four plainclothesmen, carrying a huge suitcase and various smaller cases, gathered behind him. Martin recognized two of the men and nodded.

Cloud disappeared briefly into the bedroom as the men entered, then emerged and beckoned to Martin and Barbara. "You two wait in here where you won't be underfoot. I doubt if anything in this room will help us, but just in case I'm wrong, please don't romp around unnecessarily."

In a sense, Martin felt, he was partly responsible for what had happened to Clarabelle. If he had not called on her and planted fear in her mind it might have been different.

Quite likely she had hastened her doom. He could imagine her, childishly troubled, at the telephone, pronouncing her own death sentence: "He knows I was there—I'm afraid he suspects. I'm afraid—"

But who was the killer, the man who had been shrewd enough to hit upon a simple and convincing scheme to solve his problem at her expense, yet clumsy enough so that Cloud had broken down the pretense within five minutes? He thought of Clarabelle's first husband, Dexter, who had been loyal after all other men had forsaken her. Dexter had given her money and promised more; but he had done that often, long before any question of murder had arisen, not to buy favors but out of steadfast love and pity.

He thought of Ennis. It was difficult to picture the publisher as a murderer the first time, but with that hurdle taken it was absurdly easy to assume that he would kill again.

Martin thought of Morrissey, and there was the most impressive suspect of all, by temperament, report and such intangible evidence as was available.

Barbara said, "It doesn't seem real. Who would be capable of such an awful thing?"

"Whoever was capable of killing Searle," Martin replied, wishing with all his heart that she might have been spared this.

"But she was so pathetic, so inoffensive."

"I guess a murderer has to take his victims as they come. He can't pick them for their pitiable or hateful qualities, but only because they are in his way."

"It's so dreadful, so frightening."

He leaned forward and put his hand over hers, lying on the arm of the chair. He said, "This time they're almost sure to catch him. He'll be twice as vulnerable. They'll be able to eliminate some suspects in the first murder who couldn't possibly have done this one—as they've eliminated Clarabelle already—and that will then concentrate on the ones who are left."

"How long will they keep us here?"

"Cloud wants to talk to us. Right now he's busy rounding up all the self-evident facts. The medical examiner will be here and Cloud will want him to guess at the time of death. He'll have special orders to give, errands to send men on. Then, I imagine, he'll get rid of us as soon as he can."

"I wish he'd hurry," she said. She rested her head against the back of the chair and closed her eyes. Her hand beneath his was still, her breathing was hardly perceptible. She seemed to be asleep, lost in a grave and remote dream. He looked at her for a long time, sensibly only of a deep, persistent yearning.

Scarcely knowing what he was doing, he leaned over and kissed her lips.

Her eyes opened slowly. There was no expression in their hazel depths, or else there was an unfathomable expression.

"Why did you do that, Martin?"

"Because I wanted to."

He was about to kiss her again because he wanted to, more than he had ever wanted anything, when the door opened.

Strength FOR THE DAY

By EARL L. DOUGLAS

ALWAYS IN NEED OF GUIDANCE
Very seldom are people able to understand the significance of the time in which they live.
This is amply illustrated in the attitude of the British during the Revolutionary War. For 150 years England regarded the colonies as mere plantations which existed only to enrich the mother country. Today, Great Britain has established the commonwealth of nations in which each component part is independent. Had British statesmen been able to entertain such an idea following the French and Indian War, there never would have been an American Revolution. Even Burke, Pitt, and other statesmen friendly to America thought of the colonies only as potential feeders of the homeland.
Today we are probably unaware of our greatest problems. Like those who have gone before, we are not doubt blithely ignorant of the significance of the times in which we live. A hundred, two hundred years from now, people will wonder how we could have missed seeing both the significance and the solution of certain problems to which today as a nation we are utterly blind.
Progress is often illusory. We are as weak, fallible, and ignorant as our forefathers, and as much in need as they of God's guidance.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By JANE EADS

MADDENING MAP-MAKING
Washington—How would you like just to have finished a new jigsaw puzzle of a map of 568 pieces and then have it outstaged?
That's what may happen to the National Geographic Society's map of India published a couple of months ago. The map, which required months of research, depicts India's complex political structure by showing the boundaries both of the British portions and of the states ruled by Indian princes and potentates.
On the back of a 10-color map of India and adjacent regions, 208 political divisions are described on a special chart. Natural features, cities, towns and transportation lines also are described.
Potential change, however, lies in the fact that if the Moslems win their current argument with the Hindus a new state will be carved out.
The Moslems, who predominate in a certain area, want to create a new state called Pakistan. That would leave Calcutta with the new map.
It's a tough job for cartographers when they're called upon to make a map of a country like India in the first place.
For example, one of the states called Bihar, has an area of only 1.65 square miles with a population of 82. Another, called Hyderabad, is larger than the state of Kansas and has a population of more than 14,000,000.
Almost half the peninsula is made up of Indian states. There are 562 of these.
The "Survey of India," which has much to do with the mapping of the country, has been carried forward successfully by the British since 1800 despite the area's faraway frontiers and difficult terrain.
Mount Everest, the world's highest peak, in the Himalayas, was named after the survey's second director, Capt. George Everest.

article which said that Lord and Lady Dunhope and their little daughter, Cynthia, had arrived on the clipper Manchester to make their home in Alexandria.
The child brought with her a huge tallish Manx cat named Lord Llewellyn. Miss Foust thinks Lord Llewellyn was the ancestor of today's cats in Alexandria.

Gen. Alexander A. Vandegriff, commandant of the U. S. Marine Corps, and his wife always get a kick out of telling their favorite story about the house they live in. Said to be the oldest official residence in Washington, built in 1804, it was one of the few landmarks not burned in the war of 1812, simply because it was occupied by British General Ross.
Finally, without much trouble the government got it back from the British, but it had a "dickens of a time" getting it back from the family of a Marine Corps commandant, Gen. Archibald Henderson. As commandant for 39 years he had lived in it so long that he forgot it belonged to the government and willed it to his family.

Migration

steadily being drained of people. Which means: Men and women, trained, educated and reared in the south, go away and other sections of the country get the benefit of their work.
Here are what some of the figures show:
Between 1920 and 1930 nearly 130,000 more people left the south than went there to settle. This figure dropped to 107,030 during the depression of 1930. One-third of those leaving are negroes. Negroes do so there to live.
Came the census program in the war years. People flooded out of the south because there were more war jobs elsewhere. Between 1930-45 the south suffered a net loss of about 900,000 to the north and west.
What's the answer? Will the migration from the south slow down?

Yes, the study says, if there's more large-scale industrialization there which means: More industry, more and bigger factories.
Or, the study goes on, a severe depression would keep the southerners home since they couldn't find jobs elsewhere.
And there's a difference between arming there and elsewhere; farms are smaller, there are fewer farm tools, and the work done per man is less. But the study says:
"While per capita income (that is income if divided equally among all individuals) in the south is low compared with the average for the country, a definite and encouraging upward trend has been evident in recent years. (This is because, in part, farming has become a little less important and manufacturing a little more important.)"
"Per capita income in the southern states rose from 55 per cent of the national average in 1929 to 68 per cent in 1945.
In the 1940-45 period per capita income payments to the civilian population of the United States went this way:
The United States average in 1946—$573. This rose to $1,158 in 1945. The southern states average in 1940—$337. This became $791 in 1945.
All other states average in 1940—$666. This became $1,229 in 1945.
This study goes through 1945 only. Undoubtedly southern income has declined since then, due to the closing up of so many war jobs.

tally's statement the number of fed troops in middle Europe should seem to run from 900,000 to 1,200,000 (100,000 to 400,000 more than he combined British and American forces. The British have probably 150,000 additional in Greece and the Middle East. Incidentally, the British give out some figures on their troop dispositions, but the United States is secretive. Figures on various sources indicate they each have about 600,000 troops on foreign ground.)
This business of military support for diplomacy is, along with the United Nations veto and the atom bomb, a leading cause of discussion between the powers. With Stalin apparently moving toward agreement with America on making atomic control international, and the American plan to save the veto through restricting and defining its use, this military situation suggests one barely possible way around the other big snag in the atomic proposals. Molotov continues to harp on the U. S. refusal to destroy her bombs immediately.
There has seemed to be no room for compromise on this point, and U. S. insisting that she cannot lay herself open until the whole problem of bomb manufacture is under an international control that is not merely projected, but actually working.
It would take a lot to change that. The only conceivable inducement would seem to be a reduction in the arms of other nations to a point where, even with the development of an atomic bomb of their own they would be without sufficient corollary weapons for aggression.
The possibility of such a development seems so remote as to be almost invisible. The whole trend of modern thinking is toward strength for peace, toward collective force against aggression, and toward self-defense first of all. But one cannot help remembering that Molotov, in mentioning a general reduction of arms as marking back toward an idea proposed by Russia at Geneva before World War II—total disarmament.

Health Dept. Warns Of Sanitation Laws
The Pitt County Health Dept. through its sanitarian, H. A. Hendrix, has found that since price controls have been lifted from beef and pork that certain persons are butchering and retailing meat without meeting the State Board of Health Regulations.
Mr. Hendrix advises that any person contemplating the butchering or retail sale of meat, get in touch with him in order that they may understand the sanitary regulations to be met.
Attention was called to the fact that persons violating the State Sanitary Code are subject to prosecution.

WASHINGTON LETTER
By JANE EADS
MADDENING MAP-MAKING
Washington—How would you like just to have finished a new jigsaw puzzle of a map of 568 pieces and then have it outstaged?
That's what may happen to the National Geographic Society's map of India published a couple of months ago. The map, which required months of research, depicts India's complex political structure by showing the boundaries both of the British portions and of the states ruled by Indian princes and potentates.
On the back of a 10-color map of India and adjacent regions, 208 political divisions are described on a special chart. Natural features, cities, towns and transportation lines also are described.
Potential change, however, lies in the fact that if the Moslems win their current argument with the Hindus a new state will be carved out.
The Moslems, who predominate in a certain area, want to create a new state called Pakistan. That would leave Calcutta with the new map.
It's a tough job for cartographers when they're called upon to make a map of a country like India in the first place.
For example, one of the states called Bihar, has an area of only 1.65 square miles with a population of 82. Another, called Hyderabad, is larger than the state of Kansas and has a population of more than 14,000,000.
Almost half the peninsula is made up of Indian states. There are 562 of these.
The "Survey of India," which has much to do with the mapping of the country, has been carried forward successfully by the British since 1800 despite the area's faraway frontiers and difficult terrain.
Mount Everest, the world's highest peak, in the Himalayas, was named after the survey's second director, Capt. George Everest.

VETERANS' INSURANCE

Liberalization of National Service Life Insurance by the Insurance Act of 1946 has given World War II veterans a choice of policies essentially equal to commercial life insurance and embodying features no commercial organization could offer at similar premium rates.

Changes of greatest interest to most veterans are the inclusion of a lump-sum settlement option provision for endowment policies, removal of all restrictions as to beneficiaries, and provision for a disability-income rider paying $50.00 monthly for a $10,000 policy without reducing its face value.

Lump-sum settlement may be designated only by the insured veteran, but regardless of the option he selects, his beneficiary may choose another providing payments over a longer period. Other options now included are monthly installments for 3 to 20 years, lifetime payments with 120 monthly installments certain, and refund life income with face value certain.

Added to the original permanent plans available (ordinary, 20-pay and 30-pay), are 20-year endowment, endowment at age 60 and endowment at age 65. The veteran may convert to two or more of these permanent plans if he desires, although endowment plans cannot be included if premiums are being waived because of disability.

Less publicized liberalization is the provision that any veteran who had active service between October 8, 1940, and September 2, 1945, is eligible for NSLI upon a showing of good health. Service-connected disabilities of less than total degree are not disqualifying. Under the old law, the veteran who did not take out an NSLI policy while in service could not apply after he had returned to civilian life.

The previous advantages of NSLI such as premium waiver for disability and absence of restrictions on travel, remain in effect.

Veterans who have let their term insurance lapse may reinstate their policies by paying only two monthly premiums. Physical examination are not required if the policies are reinstated prior to Feb. 1, 1947, regardless of when they lapsed. After that date, a physical examination will be required for reinstatement of policies that have lapsed for more than six months.

Full information and assistance in regard to this insurance is available at the local Veterans Administration Offices which is located in the National Guard Armory.

TRAIN DECISIONS TRUCK

Crawfordsville, Ind., Oct. 29—(AP) A train struck a truck here—and the truck struck back.

The train won the decision. Master Arthur Shelton, 51, was driving the truck when it was hit by a speeding passenger train. The truck was shoved into a yard, remained in gear and ran back into the side of the train. It bounced along for about half a block before disentangling itself.

Shelton was treated in Culver Hospital for minor injuries.

Be Quick To Treat Bronchitis

Chronic bronchitis may develop if your cough, chest cold, or acute bronchitis is not treated and you cannot afford to take a chance with any medicine less potent than Creomulsion which goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes.

Creomulsion blends beechwood creosote by special process with other time tested medicines for coughs. It contains no narcotics.

No matter how many medicines you have tried, tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding you must like the way it quickly allays the cough, permitting rest and sleep, or you are to have your money back. (Adv.)

Wilbur Dunnington knew there was a shortage of white shirts, but he didn't know it had come to this.

Wearing one, a pre-war model, he walked into a clothing store. A clerk eyed the garment, offered to buy it, explaining: "I'm all out of shirts myself." Dunnington didn't sell.

Forces of Attraction Keep a Comet in its Course...

and OIL-PLATE Your Engine!

BASIC forces of attraction and repulsion keep a comet in its course around the sun. By ceaseless study of the molecular attraction between liquids and solids, Conoco engineers are able to bring America's motorists new and better oils.

For example, under the laws of molecular attraction, a special ingredient in Conoco Nth motor oil is attracted to working surfaces of your engine. So strong is this attraction that cylinder walls and other parts are OIL-PLATED.

And because molecular attraction holds OIL-PLATING up where it belongs... prevents it from all draining down to the crankcase, even overnight... you get these benefits:

- added protection when your engine starts up
- added protection from corrosive action
- added protection from wear that leads to fouling sludge and carbon
- added smooth, silent miles

That's why to OIL-PLATE now... at Your Conoco Mileage Merchant's. Look for the red triangle. Continental Oil Company

There is no doubt that cooperation as a whole has helped us very much this year. Because of cooperation a man can till more acres and harvest larger crops. Plans are being shaped now for 1947. Let us still cooperate with one another. The importance of the forgotten rural churches should be remembered and emphasized. Your church is important. Some time in November plan for the "Old Home Church Day." Invite all old persons of the community to be present. Get someone to speak for the occasion or get some minister to preach. Sing old familiar songs such as we sang long ago. If you like, serve dinner on the grounds. So many things can be done at this time of the year now that the busy season is nearing its end. We might organize a community or a neighborhood Sunday school. If there is no church near by, you can meet at some home. I think it would be wonderful to start a Sunday school in a farm home. The church named Cherry Chapel, Route 5, Greenville, was born in a farm house on a 4-H Club Sunday (Second Sunday in May). The 4-H leader, Rev. Andrew Joyner became its pastor and now the community is proud of it.

Last but not least, help to train the youth for our coming years. Teach them to be good citizens, useful and industrial. The community will be proud of some of the 4-H club boys of Pitt who helped to win the prizes at the State Fair in Raleigh last week. These boys' names will appear later. Attend the dairy show at the Post Oak school on October 31.—Dennis D. Dupree, Negro County Agent.

Striking Pilots Say "No" To TWA Offer
Washington, Oct. 30—(AP)—Striking pilots of Trans World Air Lines rejected today a new proposal for returning to work and negotiating afterward for higher pay.
Chairman Frank P. Douglass of the National Mediation Board, disclosed the negative decision by David L. Behncke, president of the pilots union. He indicated, however, that he was still hopeful the strike leader would reverse his stand.
Douglass said his proposal called for an immediate return to work, followed by a week of negotiation. After that any unsettled problems would be submitted to arbitration.
Two is ready to accept such a proposal, the mediator said.

Big Conference Games For N. C. Teams Ahead

By the Associated Press
The Southern Conference's lone unbeaten eleven, the North Carolina Tar Heels, apparently will hang part of their hopes of remaining in that select class after the Tennessee game Saturday on a reinvigorated aerial attack.

Billy Myers and Charlie Justice are receiving lots of practice in tossing the ball around this week as Coach Carl Snively and his assistants attempt to evolve another unbeatable offense for the Knoxville clash.

Bob McDonald, aggressive Durham freshman, is making a strong bid to plug the gap in the lineup left by the loss of guard Larry Klosterman, who is out with a broken collarbone, while Sid Varney, the right guard, is back after an injury-enforced absence to strengthen that side of the line.

William and Mary, the conference pacesetter, looked askance at the approaching Maryland game at Williamsburg, remembering that the Tar Heels, who had dropped N. C. State from the undefeated ranks last week, had the Indiana, on the other hand, could take comfort from the recollection of their own 49-0 drubbing of Tech a little earlier in the season.

Despite Coach Beattie Feathers' mean that N. C. State doesn't have enough practice days between now and Saturday, the Wolfpack should find the going easier against Virginia Military Institute at Roanoke this weekend—that is, if the Keydets' Bob Thomason to Jack Hutchinson passing combination doesn't catch fire.

Wake Forest, conqueror of Tennessee, also will have a less highly rated opponent in Chattanooga Friday night than it did in the Volunteers' last week.

All the conference members were hard at work, however, for their next engagements, taking nothing for granted. The other family scraps send South Carolina against the Citadel at Orangeburg, S. C., Friday afternoon, and Washington and Lee to Davidson and Clemson to Virginia Tech on Saturday. Duke, somewhat weary from its hard game with Army, scrimmaged yesterday as it prepped for Georgia Tech at Durham. Richmond entertains Virginia, and unaffiliated eleven, and George Washington meets George Town in a hometown affair at Washington.

Wild Life Club Has Exceeded Its Quota

The Pitt County Wild Life Club has oversubscribed its quota of $300 to the $25,000 fund approved by the directors of the North Carolina Wild Life Federation, W. H. Woolard announced today.

The immediate major objective of the federation is to separate hunting and sport fishing from the supervision of the Board of Conservation and Development. Under the proposal, a separate commission will be set up with representatives from different parts of the state, and men who are really interested in preserving fish and game, rather see how much money they can collect from hunters and fishermen and spend it for something else.

The entire expense of the commission would be paid out of the hunting and fishing license receipts. Pitt County has a Wild Life Club of 175 members, of which T. A. Smoot is president, and J. A. Overton is secretary.

Davidson Tied In Defense Record

New York, Oct. 30—(AP)—Harvard and Davidson share the honor this week as the football teams owning the best defensive records among all the college eleven in the land.

Figures released today by the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau show that Davidson is tops in defense against both rushing and passing with Harvard in second place.

Harvard, on the other hand, leads the field in defense against ground plays alone, with Davidson the runner-up. Neither is among the first ten in aerial defense, where Navy has been setting the pace since the second week of the season.

In five games, Davidson has held its opponents to an average of 105 yards per game. Harvard has a defensive average of 112.4 yards per game.

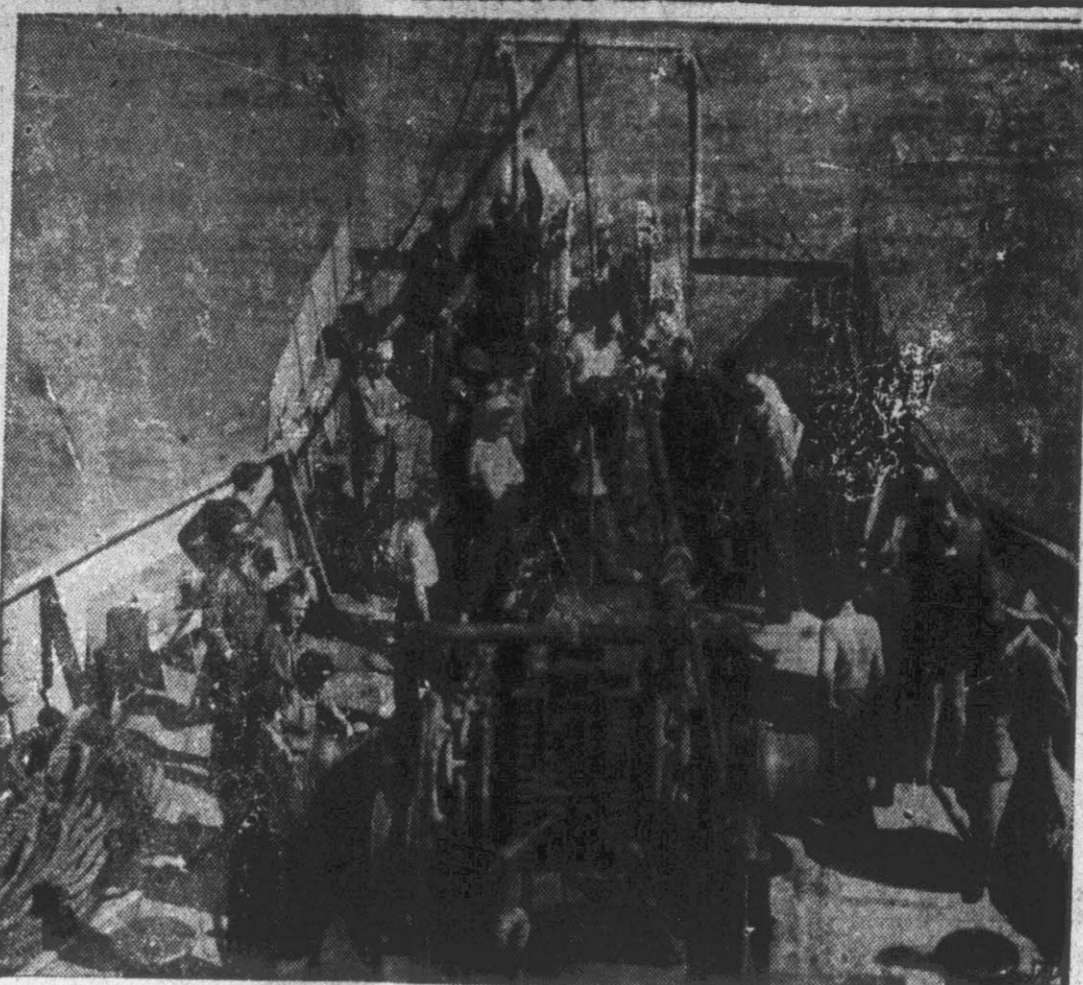

North Carolina State, the runner-up a week ago, dropped to third place in total defense with an average of 135.2 yards, pushing West Virginia to fourth with 135.7.

RENT CONTROL IS EXPANDED

Mounting Rent Pressures Over U. S. Brings OPA Action

Washington, Oct. 30—(AP)—A wide extension of rent ceilings effective Nov. 1 was announced today by OPA.

The agency announced that 88 more rental areas with a total population of more than 3,500,000 will be brought under rental ceilings Friday.

Eighty-one of these areas are being controlled for the first time while rent ceilings are being restored in the remaining seven.

At the same time the Bluefield, Va., area will be extended to include Boone, Fayette and Summers Counties.

These 88 areas had a total of 323,549 rental units in 1940, OPA said.

The agency said that the new additions bring the nation's rental areas up to 650 and that "few additional areas will require controls because today's list covers those in which rent pressures have been mounting since the war."

Government officials said they had been watching rents throughout the country since the end of the war and that the housing shortage "has been becoming more acute."

They said that action in many of the areas going under ceilings next month resulted from appeals or petitions by local officials.

"Increasing employment by local industry, return of veterans and their families have contributed to the housing shortage in most areas," they said.

Included in the new ceiling areas are 23 college towns where the return of veterans and students has aggravated housing shortages.

wreck the United Nations, and demanded a U. N. report on American and British troops in foreign lands. Capping his address with the four-point arms reduction plan, he urged the assembly to act on it at once. After the interpreters had made the translations Molotov suddenly sprang to his feet and said: "The Soviet delegation calls on the other delegations to express their views on disarmament."

The other delegations were caught off guard, but Philip Noel-Baker, Britain's chief delegate, promptly arose and objected that there was neither time nor preparation for such a debate. Molotov insisted but was overruled by Spaak.

Board which the administration reportedly is ready to abolish.

The New York Times said today that Clark had prepared an opinion upholding Lewis' stand and that White House advisers were concerned over the possibility that Senator

Kilgore (D-W. Va.) might be defeated as a result of Lewis' opposition. There are approximately 100,000 miners in Kilgore's state.

At the Interior Department, Undersecretary Oscar L. Chapman told news men in midmorning that the Department had "received nothing" from Clark who previously had disclosed that the Justice Department was analyzing the mine contract.

The issue of wage control was injected into the coal dispute by Lewis, who cited "significant changes" of government policy in arguing for reopening of the miners' agreement with the government. Reportedly, the administration is striving for a formula that will keep the mines operating without raising a target for a possible new round of wage demands in other industries.

In response to questions, Ross told his news conference he considered it "unlikely that Mr. Truman will clarify the status of the Wage Stabilization Board" before he returns next Wednesday from Independence, Mo., where he will vote in the Congressional elections.

Careful study of the miners' present contract reportedly convinced some government lawyers that Lewis has a strong argument to support his contention that he is entitled to reopen the entire question of wages, hours and other matters. By contrast, Secretary of Interior J. A. Krug has maintained there can be question of a new contract and only the present working agreement with the government can be discussed.

Noted Engineer To Be Kiwanis Speaker

Dr. C. G. Brennecke, head of the electrical engineering department of State College, will be guest speaker at the Kiwanis Club's weekly supper meeting Friday evening at 8:30, Arthur Tripp, who has charge of the program, announced today. President Ed Rawl will preside.

Dr. Brennecke, who was engaged in atomic bomb research work during the war, is an interesting speaker. When he spoke at the State College alumni meeting here last year he gave a vivid and thrilling description of the atomic bomb and told in plain every-day language how the bomb is made and how it operates.

On that basis, the Democrats can lose 23 seats and still keep a numerical majority. The Republicans must pick up 26 to reach 218; they are claiming they will gain up to 50. Against that claim, Democrats insist they will organize the new House next January 3 with votes to spare.

Regardless of which party wins the new House probably will have more new faces than any of its recent predecessors.

year high of 39.13 cents a pound. At the close of trading yesterday it had hit a low of $15 a pound, a drop of approximately $50 a 500-pound bale.

The liquidation of a single "long" account, in which a New Orleans trader was reputed to have held contracts for hundreds of thousands of bales, was held officially responsible for the original cotton break.

Thomas Jordan, who earlier had made millions in the New Orleans Cotton Market, has refused either to confirm or deny that he was the trader concerned.

Arrangements were being made here today for the sale of Jordan's seat on the New York Stock Exchange for $64,000.

After all exchanges were closed on Saturday, October 19, to arrange for the liquidation of the single long account—more than 150,000 bales then remaining unsold—the cotton market rallied.

However, after another closing last Saturday to allow dog-tired clerical workers to catch up with their work, the market suddenly started another tumble.

Official or quotable reasons for this drop have been conspicuous by their absence. One reason advanced for this unusual silence by brokers was that a Congressional investigation already was under way in Washington, at the instance of Senator Thomas (D-Okla.) Originally he had charged a bear raid on the market.

The effect of the sharp price breaks has been profound, particularly in the south.

Rep. Sparman (D-Ala) told reporters in Washington today that the slump was completely demoralizing. He said it had ruined thousands of farmers, ginners, bankers and cotton merchants, not just speculators.

World Flight . . .

matter of days" if the State Department approved.

State Department officials regard the problem as delicate for several reasons.

First, they say the Army Air Forces put Byrnes on the spot by announcing October 25—without consulting the State Department—that eight to 24 of the big bombers would make the flight "if the State Department approves."

Actually, the formal request for permission to carry out the project reached Byrnes' desk only late yesterday.

Then, some Department officials believe that since the end of the war, both the Army and Navy on occasion have attempted to edge into State's field of charting American foreign policy. They regard the projected B-29 flight as the latest of these attempts.

In this connection, there is a strong desire by many high-level State Department officials to avoid any act that could be called "word rattling." They believe any large-scale demonstrations of American military might could be exploited—particularly by Russia—to discredit this country's motives in international dealings.

British Papers Facing Inquiry

London, Oct. 30—(AP)—An early start was predicted today for a government investigation of the "financing, control, ownership and management" of the British press, ordered by the House of Commons last night after six hours of bitter debate.

British newspapers greeted the probe authorization today with such words as "sinister," "fearful," and "intolerable" and the Daily Mail declared the inquiry constituted "the first stroke in the murder of freedom."

The house voted 270 to 157 to establish a royal commission empowered to inquire into all phases of newspaper operation. Many British papers have been outspoken in their criticism of the labor government's domestic policies—criticism strongly resented by the government.

Well-informed sources said a six or seven man commission to be named soon would include no members of parliament and no working newsmen, although it might include some prominent former editors.

The fire department used an extinguisher to put out the fire. Nearly all of the ignition system was burned sufficiently to put the car out of commission.

Josephine Tucker Peterson's rendezvous with life ended in death after she had achieved her life-long dream to give birth to a baby. Before she died she smiled when she saw her baby, a four-and-a-half pound boy, normal though premature.

Mrs. Peterson's rendezvous with life and death came yesterday—on her 32nd birthday. For the last 12 years she had been bedfast with arthritis.

Some time ago she announced she was going to have a baby.

"All of my adult life I have had a rendezvous with death," Zoe said "Now I have a rendezvous with life. My baby will live and will be loved. The doctors have told me I have a 50-50 chance. I am happy because never before have I had that much of a chance."

Yesterday she as taken to the hospital and the child was born through a Caesarean operation. Several hours later Zoe died.

The baby, doctors reported, has a good chance for survival.

Mrs. Peterson's rendezvous with life and death came yesterday—on her 32nd birthday. For the last 12 years she had been bedfast with arthritis.

Some time ago she announced she was going to have a baby.

"All of my adult life I have had a rendezvous with death," Zoe said "Now I have a rendezvous with life. My baby will live and will be loved. The doctors have told me I have a 50-50 chance. I am happy because never before have I had that much of a chance."

Yesterday she as taken to the hospital and the child was born through a Caesarean operation. Several hours later Zoe died.

The baby, doctors reported, has a good chance for survival.

First Arrests In Gem Theft Wave

London, Oct. 30—(AP)—Two more jewel and fur thefts, including the $4,800 robbery of 30-year-old Princess Hilda of Bavaria, were disclosed today.

Spir Constantini, commercial councillor of the Greek Embassy reported the loss of $6,000 worth of furs and jewelry and $1,200 in wines and whiskey in the second of the two robberies, both of which occurred several days ago.

Scotland Yard forged its first break in the spreading wave of jewel robberies with the arrest of a man and woman who were charged with robbing Princess Hilda's Kensington flat.

The pair, Robert McPherson, 32-year-old engineer, and Patricia McPherson, 25, were arraigned on a charge of stealing the princess' emerald and diamond earrings and a diamond and sapphire bracelet. They were bound over without bail until Nov. 6.

The two were arrested at Woking, a suburb southwest of London, which has been suspected as headquarters of a gang of jewel thieves. A Scotland Yard inspector testified that when McPherson was arrested he said, "I want to tell you about it. I did the job."
