Contracts Let For School Addition

Greenville School Board In Special Session Lets Contracts For Construction At West Greenville School Which Will Cost About $101,000

Members of the Greenville school board met in a special session yesterday at 1 o'clock and let the contracts for the construction of an addition to the West Greenville school which will cost approximately $101,000.

Bids for the same building were opened several weeks ago, but the total low bids amounted to $113,500, and the school officials decided to make alterations in the plans of the building to bring the construction cost to a lower figure.

The general contract for the construction of the building was awarded to W. G. Dunn of Greenville who was low bidder at $75,400. The low bid on the original plans for the building, which was received some weeks ago, was $87,500.

The heating contract was awarded to Deane and Baker of Wilson for $5,300, the plumbing contract was awarded to C. E. Williams plumbing company of Greenville for $5,475, and the electrical contract was awarded to the Hub Electric Company of Greenville for $5,135.

J. H. Rose, superintendent of Greenville schools, said the alterations on the original plans made possible a savings of a little over $12,000 between the first and second bids received on the building. He said approximately $3,000 worth of stone was taken from the building plans, the arcade which would have connected the new building with the present West Greenville school was omitted temporarily, changes were made from tile to concrete floors in part of the building, and doors and windows were changed.

The functional building will be so constructed that it will contain a modern kitchen and lunchroom and will have a combination auditorium and gymnasium. The building will have covered porches, showers and dressing rooms for the students and a teachers' lounge. The children's toilets, Rose said, will have outside entrances so they may be accessible to students using the playground when the school is not open.

The present West Greenville school will undergo some changes this summer while the new building is being constructed, and next fall will have 14 classrooms. In the present building two toilet rooms and an assembly room will be converted into two

House 'Rumbles' And Shakes In Dead Of Night

Worcester, Mass., May 12—(AP)—Something mysterious—and frightening to occupants—is happening to a three-tenement house here.

Worcester telegram reporter Edward F. Breen was assigned last night to investigate reports that the house appeared to be haunted.

He got this story from neighbors and a relative of occupants:

The house shakes and rumbles violently at times, plaster and pictures fall from the walls. Beds quiver in the dead of night and dishes rattle out of closets.

This has been going on at intervals for three years, with the manifestations increasing in violence in the past few weeks.

Last night two police officers had to be assigned to handle mounting traffic near the house.

More Thousands Of Rail Workers Join Idle Ranks

Three-Day Strike By 18,000 Firemen Has Already Idled Nearly 200,000

Chicago, May 12—(AP)—More thousands of railroad workers joined the ranks of the idle today—laid off by the deadlocked firemen's strike against four major carriers.

Workers in many other key industries also were getting layoff notices and others were threatened with forced idleness. The three-day-old strike by 18,000 firemen appeared to have made idle nearly 200,000 workers already, including some 150,000 rail employes.

There wasn't a sign of peace in the nation's biggest rail strike since May, 1946.

There was, however, the first flareup of violence on some of the strikebound lines.

Shortly after two freight trains were reported ambushed and fired upon near Knoxville, Tenn., the Southern Railway lines suspended all operations in the area. A spokesman said the move was made to protect the road's employes. An acting fireman on one train was shot in the arm. Pickets outside the Knoxville switch yards denied they fired any shots, but said they were stoned.

There were other minor disturbances on the strikebound New York Central lines in two Indiana cities.

The Southern, the New York Central and a third struck carrier—the Santa Fe—are operating only emergency skeleton service. The Pennsylvania, struck west and north of Harrisburg, is not operating in the strikebound area.

With operations drastically curtailed, the Pennsylvania issued layoff slips to 85,000 employes. The New York Central, which said 25,000 already are idle, planned to furlough another 25,000 over the week-end.

Southern Railway estimated 18,000 of its workers have been forced into idleness by the strike. The Santa Fe furloughed several thousand, as it closed its shops, but it did not announce the number of idle.

The railroads again refused to accept what the rail union described as a modified demand of its original proposal. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen struck to enforce its demand for a second fireman on multiple unit Diesel locomotives. The carriers rejected the demand, as did the two presidential fact-finding boards.

The strike started Wednesday with the union and carriers deadlocked over the issue. Members of the National (railway) Mediation board remain in Chicago, available for consultation by either side.

The strike was hitting coal production in western Pennsylvania and Indiana. With no empty cars to carry away the mined coal, 14 big mines and several smaller ones closed in western Pennsylvania.

Confer On City Traffic Problem And Ordinances

Merchants' Committee Approves Regulation Of Large Truck Services

Members of the transportation committee of the Greenville Merchants association met yesterday with Mayor W. S. Stafford, and members of the street committee of the board of aldermen to discuss possible city ordinances controlling the unloading of trailer-tractor trucks and other smaller trucks on the streets of Greenville.

The group voted to make a joint recommendation to the board of aldermen of Greenville that the large transfer trucks not be allowed allowed to "load or unload on the streets of Greenville in areas to be designated by the board of aldermen from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m., except by special permission from the group also recommended that "no trucks be permitted to load or unload in the middle of the streets.

The recommendations included a proposal that present loading zones be enlarged and where necessary add loading zones.

Mayor Stafford told the members of the city administration and the Merchants association present at the meeting yesterday that large trucks have been blocking the streets of Greenville and holding up traffic, and that he feels something should be done about it. He added however, that he had requested the meeting of the representatives from the Merchants association with the city officials before enforcing the city ordinances. He said the city has no desire to work a hardship on the merchants in receiving their merchandise.

The recommendations of the group are expected to be presented to the board of aldermen at their next regular meeting provided they are approved by the board of directors of the Merchants Association.

Present at yesterday's meeting H. L. Ormond, Ollie VanNortwick, Jr., W. L. Harrington, W. H. Taft, and Durward Harris of the Merchants association; Mayor W. S. Stafford, Alderman J. E. Collins, and Heber B. Tripp, Police chief L. D. Page, and Superintendent of streets C. K. Beatty.

Shaw Opines

Oxford, Eng., May 12—(AP)—George Benard Shaw says the best thing about college is that it gives students manners equal to those of sailors.

In reply to the question, "is Oxford worth it?" Put by the editor of the University's undergraduate magazine, "Cherwell," Shaw wrote:

"Collegiate residence, common meals, and cap and gown give a priceless social training in good manners which is shared with sailors only. The incidental counts for nothing except its delusive qualification for certain professional jobs."

Peace, Harmony In Demo Session

Truman Praised In N. C. Convention But Controversial Points Ignored; Contrast To 1948's Silent Disapproval

Raleigh, May 12 —(AP)— Two years after shunning the name of President Truman, North Carolina Democrats have thanked the leaders who kept them in the national party in stormy 1948.

That was the major action yesterday of the state party's biennial convention, which harped sweetly on the notes of party loyalty and harmony. Some 2,500 persons attended the gathering.

It was a sharp contrast to 1948. Then, the state party's platform failed to mention President Truman's name. The keynote speaker also passed it over.

The name Truman was used yesterday, and applause greeted it. The platform praised the "progressive leadership President Truman is giving the nation," and endorsed "the far-sighted and firm foreign policies of the Truman administration."

Not mentioned, however, in the platform or by speakers were controversial matters proposed by the President, such as civil rights legislation, the Brannan plan and socialized medicine.

The platform called for a balanced federal budget and a reduction in the national debt—without increased taxes.

It called also for a balanced state budget and pledged efforts to "meet the increased demand for public services through greater efficiency and economy in government rather than by the imposition of new taxes."

It praised Governor Scott for his "vigorous and forward-looking administration," his secondary road program and "his deep and faithful interest in the public schools."

Recommendations included a proposal that the next legislature appropriate funds so that the state can assume full responsibility of providing all school buses. At present, counties buy buses, and the state provides replacements for them as they wear out.

The platform advocated federal, state and local cooperation to raise average grants to the needy; urge a state appropriation supplement county aid for persons between the ages of 16 and 65; pledged an exanded public health program; and said "We must do more rather than less for our mental hospitals."

The platform committee turned down resolutions from the Durham county delegation urging modification of the Taft-Hartley, repeal of the state's anti-closed shop law and expansion of the federal Social Security program.

The state party's labor plank pledged "fullest support of the proper demands" of labor.

Run-Off Election In Second Ward

Top Candidates Contesting For Seat In Monday Vote

Citizens of the second ward in Greenville will go to the polls Monday to elect an alderman from the ward from the two candidates which ran first and second in the city election on May 1.

Incumbent C .B. Mayo and Charles O'H. Horne, Jr., are seeking the two-year term on the board of aldermen from the second ward. Horne was high man in the three-way race in the city election two weeks ago, receiving 156 votes. C. B. Mayo received 128 votes in the election and W. L. Patrick received 28 votes.

Mayo notified City Clerk J. O. Duval last Friday that he would like a run-off between the two top candidates in the first race.

The polling in Monday's election will take place at the court house with the polls opening at 6:30 a. m. and closing at 6:30 p. m. Only those people registered in the second ward will be eligible to vote in the election, Duval said.

Tickets Delayed For Voting 'Miss Bright Leaf'

A delay has occurred in the arrival of tickets which were to be used in the balloting for "Miss Bright Leaf" of Greenville, it was reported today.

The tickets were to be given out by the merchants of Greenville to anyone making a purchase of 50 cents or more, or paying on accounts. A limit of 100 ballots per person at any one time was placed.

A telephone call received in Greenville today stated that the tickets had not arrived from the printers and would either arrive Saturday or Monday.

The person receiving the most votes as 'Miss Bright Leaf of Greenville" would then go to Raleigh for the premier showing of "Bright Leaf," the movie. A winner from the contests there will receive a new automobile.

The movie will be shown in Greenville a week after its showing in the capitol city.

Report Progress In Paving Work

Division Engineer R. Markham of the second division said this morning construction work on the paving project between highway 43 and highway 264 is expected to be completed as far as Black Jack by noon Saturday.

The work on the project was begun Tuesday by the White construction company of Kinston, and two and one-half miles of the project already have been completed.

The paving project is divided into two parts, and together they total 17.05 miles of roads which will be hardsurfaced. Part one of the project runs from highway 43 at Chicod School through Black Jack, Hudson's Crossroads, Galloway's Crossroads and Simpson to the junction with highway 264. Part two of the project runs from highway 43 at Bells Forks through Simpson to the junction with highway 264 seven and six-tenths miles east of Greenville.

Admits Attempt To Force Entry Of Post Office

A Negro man who last night attempted to break into the Greenville Post Office turned himself in as he failed to gain entrance into the building.

The man, listed by Greenville police as Richard Boyd, 40, of Petersburg, Va., is being held in the city jail pending the arrival of a postal inspector this afternoon.

The man attempted to gain entrance by breaking a glass door on the side loading platform of the building around 10 o'clock last night, police stated.

Reportedly, Boyd came into the Post Office about 5:30 yesterday afternoon, looked around the building and left; only to return and make an attempt at a night breakin.

Boyd stated to police officers that he took a brick in his hand, broke a glass in the back door, but did not enter as he cut his hand. Whereupon he left the scene and went to a nearby drug store where he told what had happened. Greenville police were called and the man was arrested by Officers H. F. Lawson and J. E. Mills.

Post Office officials today stated they could not remember a previous break-in, or an attempt, at the local office.

Tax Collections Keep High Level

County tax collections through April 30 are just about the same this year as they were last year at that time, Tax Supervisor Allen Powell stated this morning.

With a total levy of $585,943.20 on an evaluation of $50,089,395 for 1949, 96 percent, or $488,735.79, has been collected. That percentage figure compares favorably with the same for last year. Through April 30, 1949 on the 1948 levy, 94.5 percent has been collected, or $370,107.51 on a total levy of $48,011,367.

The figures are substantially the same for both levies. The countywide tax rate for 1948 was 70 cents on the $100. For 1949 it was hiked 20 cents to finance increased costs in school operations. With a $2,078,022 raise in total valuation between 1948 and 1949, the collections ar eoming along at approximately the same rate of payment, Powell said.

The 1948 countywide levy is in addition to the county school levy which was $117,522.58 as compared to $135,138.65 for 1949.

Truman Continues Rap Taft-Hartley

Senate Says 'No' To Truman Plan Of Reorganizing

Proposals Affecting NLRB And Comptroller Of Currency Are Beaten

Washington, May 12 — (AP) — Senate rejection of a presidential plan to reorganize the National Labor Relations Board was cited by Republicans today as proof that Congress won't go for the Truman 'Fair Deal."

By a 53 to 30 margin—with 18 Democrats, chiefly from the South, voting with 35 Republicans — the Senate nullified the NLRB revision that Mr. Truman wanted.

About an hour later it junked by a 65 to 13 count another Truman proposal involving the Comptroller of the Currency.

Senator Wherry of Nebraska, the Republican floor leader, said the Labor Board showdown 'proved that Scott Lucas has only one-third of the Senate with him when the President wants to put over his Fair Deal' program."

Majority Leader Lucas (D-Ill) led the opposition in the futile effort to save the reorganization plan.

Asked about the combination of Southern Democrats and Republicans, Wherry said "any time a real crisis comes up about the 'Fair Deal,' a coalition will take control to ward it off—but each time it is a different coalition."

The NLRB vote was another victory for Senator Taft (R-Ohio) over President Truman, who wants to repeal the Taft-Hartley labor law.

Taft, in a separate interview, said the vote indicates the congress is against most of these 'Fair Deal' measures."

Taft said the union of Republi-

Trygve Lie Has Brief Audience With Vishinsky

Moscow, May 12—(AP)— United Nations Secretary-General Trygve Lie conferred for an hour and a half today with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky.

It was his first conference with a Soviet government leader since his arrival here yesterday on his mission to try to bridge the differences between the East and West in the cold war and preserve the U.N.

The Secretary-General's arrival by plane from Prague was published in two-paragraph stories today on the back pages of Moscow's newspapers, without comment. It was the first news the Russian people had of Lie's trip.

President Says He Will Not Cease To Fight For Labor Law's Repeal; Defends Fair Deal With Criticism Of 'Lunatic Fringe' Among Reactionaries

Butte, Mont., May 12—(AP)—President Truman said today he will not "cease to fight" for the repeal of the Taft-Hartley labor law.

"The Taft-Hartley law hangs over the head of labor, threatening to destroy the gains of 15 years," he said.

"There it will hang until we are able to replace it with a law that is fair to management and labor alike."

The President, in one or a series of major talks on his cross-country crusade for the Fair Deal, said in a prepared address:

"That is something we must do, not only for the sake of labor, for the sake of the whole country.

"I believe profoundy that the Taft-Hartley Act is a substantial infringement of the basic freedom to bargain collectively."

Mr. Truman's address, arranged for the rear platform of his cross-country special train, was one of a series in which he has been trying to whip up sentiment for the Fair Deal.

The President said that the "avowed intention" of the sponsors of the Taft-Hartley law "was to strengthen the hand of management."

"To do this," Mr. Truman said, "they devised a clever law which insidiously undermines the strength of labor unions."

Mr. Truman struck back against critics of his "Fair Deal" program.

"All of you, I am sure," the President said, "have heard many cries about government interference with business and about creeping socialism.'

"The truth is that government action during the last 17 years has been the salvation of private business in the country and has strengthened the private enterprise system against socialism, communism and all other 'isms.'

"Don't let anyone tell you that the government should retire to the sidelines while the national economy goes back to the days of 'boom and bust.' The power of the government exists for the people to use. It would be folly for the people to be afraid to use their collective strength through the government."

Mr. Truman told the Butte audience that the government's most important single economic goal "is to see that there are enough jobs for those who need them." He added:

"You sometimes hear it said—and I think this comes mostly from the lunatic fringe among the reactionaries—that the government promises to make it possible for people to live without working. They say our government programs would make us a nation of dead-beats and loafers. That, of course, is absurd."

The President, in two addresses yesterday, fired back at critics who describe his "Fair Deal" program as heading down "the last hole" toward socialism.

Earlier, Mr. Truman dedicated

Probers Receive More Data Than Anticipated

Washington, May 12—(AP)—Senate Communist investigators were reported today to be getting much more FBI data than they had expected in their study of State Department loyalty files.

The files cover 81 persons accused by Senator McCarthy (R-Wis.) of being Communists, fellow travelers, or security risks for some other reason.

The records are being examined by the Senate foreign relations subcommittee which is investigating McCarthy's accusation.

In making the State Department records available to the inquiry group, President Truman declined to budge from his earlier decision that the committee could not see the FBI's so-called "raw" files.

Committee Chairman Tydings (D-Md.) has said, however, that the department's records contain a vast amount of FBI material.

And Tydings told reporters today that "we have from the FBI everything that (FBI Chief) J. Edgar Hoover has got."

Tydings has said that examination of the 81 files will give the committee a complete "true or false" picture on McCarthy's charges in the 81 cases.

Senator Hickenlooper (R-Iowa) told reporters, however, the current study won't provide a final answer.

Hickenlooper said he expects the files to produce leads that will warrant further investigation by the committee. He said the committee might want to question some of the informants who furnished data in the State Department files.

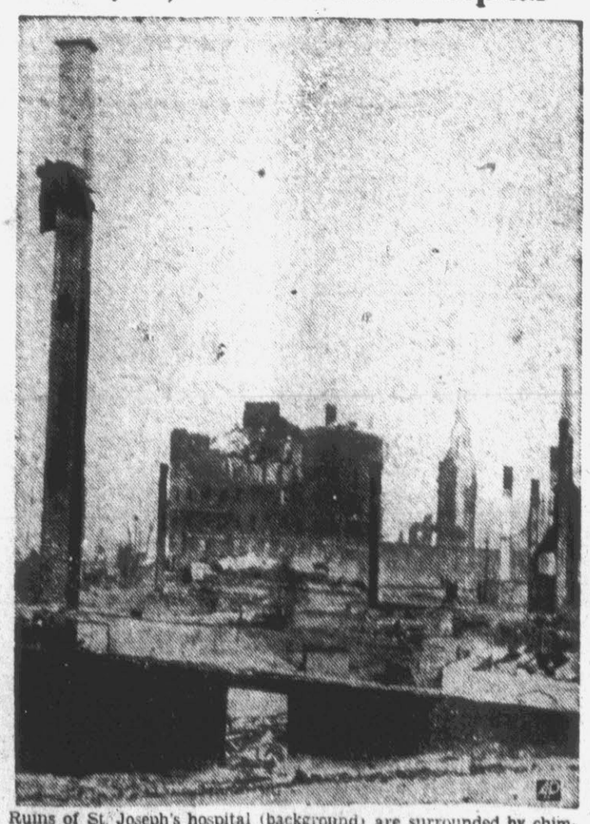
Wrong Label Is Deadly Mistake

Port Jervis, N. Y., May 12—(AP)—A patient died on the operating table at St. Francis hospital from Carbon Dioxide mistakenly administered for Oxygene, county and city officials said today.

"The label on the cylinder indicated that it contained Oxygen only, whereas in fact it contained carbon dioxide," a statement by the Orange county district attorney and Port Jervis police chief said.

The officials said there appeared to be no fault of the hospital or staff.

$20,000,000 Fire Burns Hospital



Ruins of St. Joseph's hospital (background) are surrounded by chimneys of other buildings destroyed by the $20,000,000 fire which devastated a third of Rimouski, Quebec. At least 2,000 persons were made homeless. The fire started in a lumber yard and was driven into town by high wind. It raged unchecked for 30 hours and destroyed 300 houses, a theater, two hotels, the county court house and the hospital. (AP Wirephoto).

Approval Is Mounting

Importance Of French Proposal To Pool Steel And Coal Industries Grows In Magnitude With Analysis; Guarded Reaction Because Of Plan's Sweeping Scope

By DeWITT MacKENZIE

The sensational French proposal for pooling Western Europe's steel and coal industries under a central authority—beginning with a union of the great German and French works—grows in magnitude with analysis.

Thus far, too, it has grown in general approval among the Western powers, though Russia treats it as a further move hostile to her. Western Germanys quick acceptance of this project advanced by her old enemy has given the idea a decided fillip, strengthening as it does the hopes of a really United States of Western Europe.

However, the reaction continues guarded because of the sweeping implications of the plan. The idea does involve the surrender of some degree of sovereignty and this is causing a cautious survey of the position.

Some aspects of the proposal are so patently for the general good that there is no question about them. For instance the burying of the hatchet by France and Germany would be a wholly unexpected boon. The integration of Western Germany into the politico-economic union of Western Europe is essential to general rehabilitation and the creation of defensive strength.

But there is another side to the picture. At first blush Britain showed anxiety because she feared that the Franco-German iron and steel combination would be harmful to her own vast steel business. Further consideration seems to have eased her doubts somewhat, but she is moving cautiously in appraising the proposal.

This is an important point, because British approval would be necessary before the project became effective.

America's position has been indicated by Secretary of State Acheson, who is attending the Big Three (America, Britain and France) Foreign Ministers' Conference in London. He has given his sympathy and approval to the "significance and far reaching intent" of the proposal, but has withheld judgment on the plan itself until details have been studied.

Acheson also made a highly important speech before the Pilgrims Society, calling for a return of Germany to "the family of Western civilization." He asserted America and Western Europe must sacrifice some "purely national interests" to avoid another war. He further de-

Daniels' Attorneys Bid Again For New Hearing

Raleigh, May 12—(AP)—Attorneys for Bennie and Lloyd Ray Daniels have begun a new effort to have the teen-age Negro cousins' death sentences set aside.

Counsil for the youths, who this week failed in an appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court, asked the State Supreme Court yesterday for a writ of error coram nobis. This is a process which would give them a rehearing in Pitt Superior court.

The two were convicted in the Pitt court in March, 1949, of first degree murder in the death of Benjamin O'Neal, a white taxi driver of Greenville. There was no recommendation of mercy by the jury.

Their Negro attorneys, Herman L. Taylor of Raleigh and C. J. Gates of Durham, contend Negroes were not given adequate representation on the grand and trial juries and that confessions by the two youths were obtained improperly.

The appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court was based on a contention that trial Judge Clawson L. Williams failed to protect the defendants' constitutional rights. The court last Monday declined to review the case.

he plea for permission to appeal to the state court through a writ of error coram nobis is a comparatively rare procedure in courts of this state. Technically such an appeal is an action aimed at having a verdict returned for correction to the court which set it.

Two attempts to bring the full case before the State Supreme Court review failed because the court ruled that the attorneys failed to meet court deadlines and to show sufficient cause.

Can Now Weigh Next To Nothing

Roanoke, Va., May 12—(AP)—A top physicist today described a new set of scales so sensitive they can measure the weight of next to nothing.

Specifically the device will measure weight difference as tiny as one-thirtieth of one-billionth of an ounce. Dr. Jesse W. Beams of the University of Virginia reported to the Virginia academy of science.

This would be as if one drop of water were removed from a scale large enough to weigh a swimming pool.

Freedom Of Speech

Supreme Court's Knotty Rulings On Question Of This Freedom; The Circumstances Involving Rights And Abuses; Decisions, Reversals And Opinions

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, May 12—(AP)— The Supreme court gets itself into neat knots on the question of freedom of speech.

The constitution says Congress shall make no law interferring with freedom of speech.

In 1919, backed by the other eight justices of the Supreme court, Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes wrote an opinion on freedom of speech. He said: "The question in every case is whether the words used are used under such circumstances and are of such a nature as to create a clear and present danger that they will bring about the substantive evils that Congress has a right to prevent.

Since 1919 this "clear and present danger" test has been a guide for other Supreme court justices to follow in deciding whether some law which comes before them is in keeping with the constitutional guarantee of freedom of speech.

No one will argue that a man should be allowed to shout "fire" in a crowded theater to cause a panic. That's a clear cut case of when a man shouldn't be allowed free speech. It's an abuse of freedom and harmful to others.

But other cases which have come before the court since 1919 are not so clear cut.

The Communist party, on the surface at least, is a political party. In this country anyone is free to join any political party he chooses. This is an exercise of his guaranteed right of freedom of speech.

Since the Communist party has never been outlawed by Congress, anyone is free to join it. But in 1947 Congress passed a law, the Taft-Hartley labor act, which said:

If the officers of a labor union are Communists, that union can't get the benefits and protection of the law. This has been a bitter point with labor leaders ever since.

The argument against that part of T-H goes like this: It is unconstitutional because it interferes with the right of union officials freely to express their political views by joining the Communist party.

The case finally was brought before the Supreme Court for a decision on whether this part of T-H violated the constitution. Only six of the nine justices took part in the decision. The vote was 5 to 1, saying the act was constitutional.

Chief Justice Vinson issued a long

Chatham Club Entertains Husbands

The Chatham Book club entertained their husbands Thursday night with a steak supper at Ficklen's camp near Bath, N. C. This has become an annual event and one to which all members look forward to with a great deal of pleasure. An evening of fun and good fellowship was enjoyed by everyone present.

Christian Church Announcements

An invitation to all the mothers of the church and friends of the church is extended for the service at Eighth Street Christian church Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. This is a special service honoring Christian motherhood. The chorus choir will sing a special number and the pastor will bring a message on the theme, "Christian Motherhood—A Noble Tradition."

Under the auspices of the Woman's Council a silver tea will be given on Monday afternoon from 3:30 to 5 at the home of Mrs. David A. Evans, 1501 East Fifth Street. The women of the Council are urged to support this with a silver coin offering which will go toward the renovation of the church kitchen. The general public is most cordially invited.

It is requested that all organizations and churches support in some way the national emphasis upon National Defense week which will culminate on May 20. Accordingly there will be a special season of prayer in the service Sunday for world peace. No prayer could be more appropriate on Mother's Day as the Christian motherhood of the world finds world peace close to the hearts of all.

The intermediate and senior young people's meetings will be at 5:30 and 6 p. m. respectively on Sunday evening at the church.

The meeting of the past week with Dr. G. Curtis Jones of Richmond was a most effective one in the deepening of the spiritual life of the church. The next main objective is the completion of the second year's quota of the program of "A Crusade for a Christian World."

Immanuel Baptist Announcements

The revival services will continue through Sunday night with preaching by the Rev. Paul B. Nickens of Plymouth. His subject tonight is "Is Your House Well Built?" Mrs. Dink James Installed President Training School PTA

One of the highlights of the Training School P. T. A. meeting Wednesday, was the installation of Mrs. Dink James as president for the coming year. Mrs. James was installed by Mrs. W. J. Stell, outgoing member of the State Executive Board. Other officers to serve next year are Mrs. R. H. Evans, vice president; Mrs. John Reynolds, treasurer; Mrs. Dorothy W. Johnson, recording secretary; and Mrs. George Clapp, corresponding secretary.

Mrs. L. E. Tyler, outgoing president, presided. She introduced Father Charles J. Gable who gave a most inspiring devotional on the importance of the good rearing of children.

The Training School Glee club, under the direction of Miss Beatrice Chauncey, sang several selections. This group was an example of the fine work Miss Chauncey has done during the past year.

During the business session which followed reports of the various committees were heard.

Mrs. James S. Jenkins, of the City PTA, gave a report on the organization of this council and recommendations which had been made.

Plans were made for and everyone urged to attend the PTA Institute which will meet at the college June 19-22.

A rising vote of thanks was given to Mrs. Tyler for the outstanding work she had done during the past year.

The group was then invited to the school library where refreshments were served.

Underwood, Jr. Mr. Underwood discussed the "Responsibility of Citizenship." His subject was very interesting and very timely.

A committee composed of Mrs. Ruth Garner, chairman, Mrs. A. P. Baker and Mrs. Hazel Jordan was appointed to select a girl for the Business and Professional Women's club to sponsor in "Miss Bright Leaf" contest.

Mrs. Susie Ragsdale installed the new officers for the year 1950-51: Mrs. R. W. Tyson, president; Miss Louise Galphin, vice president; Miss Annie Turner, secretary; Miss Elizabeth Deal, corresponding secretary; and Miss Mildred Lang, treasurer. San Francisco, May 12—(AP)—Radiomarine station KPH today picked up a distress signal from the Norwegian motorship Talisman saying she was battling a big fire in her engineroom about 300 miles due east of Yokohama.

The 6700 ton vessel expected the U.S. Navy tanker Shawnee Trail and the Japanese freighter Tokatisan Maru alongside to assist her. Both vessels were reported speeding to the Talisman.

Watermelons To Be Main Crop On Farm Near City

T. E. Dickerson, farmer who diversifies his crops and has planted 18 acres of watermelons last summer and harvested a bumper crop that netted him good prices, is increasing his acreage this summer.

Dickerson's farm is across the Tar River, about one mile east of the Bethel highway, and to the rear of the Growers' Warehouse. He always has netted good profits on his watermelons, he said today.

Thursday Dickerson and his helpers planted 25 acres to watermelons and he sowed the seed with a transplanter. Using a transplanter for sowing watermelon seed is unusual in this part of the country. In the warm California valleys, where 100 or more acres may be planted to watermelons or cantaloupes, transplanters are regularly used.

Dickerson's watermelons are expected to ripen in mid-July. He ships the fruit out by truck to Norfolk, Richmond and other market centers.

Jaycee Speaker Discusses World Peace Problems

By CHESTER WALSH

Betty M. Unterberger, member of the faculty of East Carolina Teachers College, guest speaker last night at the bi-monthly supper meeting of the Greenville Junior Chamber of Commerce, delivered an eloquent and informative after-dinner speech. She concluded her entertaining discourse by answering questions. Mrs. Unterberger used as her subject, 'World Security and American Foreign Relations."

James White, a member of the Commerce Department at the college, introduced the speaker. He said she received her A.B. degree at Syracuse University; her M.A. degree at Harvard and her Ph.D. at Duke University.

Mrs. Unterberger prefaced her interesting discourse with a tribute to Robert Lee Humber, distinguished Pitt countian, world traveler and originator of the World Federation Plan.

'All through the ages," the speaker asserted, "man has agreed that war is not an effective method of settling world affairs. Conflicts of vital interests have netted no profits," and she stressed the point that "the brotherhood of man is a slender vision on the horizon of human hope."

The speaker reviewed conditions prevailing in war-torn countries. She enumerated some of the helpful methods now being applied for alleviation of suffering and unstable conditions in that area. She lauded Woodrow Wilson for his early recognition of the need for some world-regulating agency for the nations of the world and regretted the failure of the League of Nations to accomplish its purpose, and she reminded that "the basic nature of war has changed."

Mrs. Unterberger's familiarity with world conditions, her convincing and eloquent delivery and unusual magnetism and charm enabled her to hold the rapt attention of her audience.

President Bancroft Moseley presided. Routine business of the supper session included sponsoring the "Miss Bright Leaf" contest and discussion of plans for the annual Jaycee convention at Raleigh.

William Green Hints Revision In Unity Parley

Philadelphia, May 12—(AP)—Although the nation's two largest labor organizations differ over the extent of possible unification, AFL President William Green has hinted he might change his mind.

The CIO, in a letter written by President Philip Murray, suggested functional unity. Green countered with the statement that the AFL wanted unity but only if it was a complete merger.

But yesterday as the AFL's Executive Council ended its annual four-day session here, Green said:

"My letter (written to Murray) speaks for itself," and then he added he will "leave the negotiations wide open."

Green said he had not received an answer from Murray but he named a committee to meet with one which he expects the CIO to appoint.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLAS

FROM THAT DAY FORTH

Some years ago an artist of fair ability was asked to produce a series of posters to be used in a great religious campaign. As he got the spirit of the movement his technique improved to an astounding degree, but best of all his whole outlook on life changed. He seemed particularly to have been influenced by a poster he made in which the figure of Jesus dominated the scene.

Speaking to a friend some time later, he said. "From the day I drew that picture of Jesus I have never done an unworthy piece of work. I do not mean that all my work has been at the same high level, but I do mean that from the day I created the figure of Christ, a strange new spirit has dominated my life and turned my energy into high channels."

This sort of thing happens time and again in the lives of all sorts of people. They get a new vision of Christ, and after that two things invariably happen. First, their lives become dominated by a spirit of nobility and peace; and second, their efforts take on a new quality of creativeness. They begin to do their everyday work better. The tasks of the day become the means by which they do happy service to God.

And all because, like the artist, they have looked upon a face whose gentleness stills every evil impulse of heart.

Moderate Democrats Are Challenging 'Fair Deal'

Secretary of State Thad Eure recognized the growing dissension within the Democratic party ranks in his brief address to the North Carolina party convention. His acknowledgement of the situation came with a recommendation that despite their differences, Tar Heel Democrats should present a united and harmonious front.

All of the party leaders will concur with his advice; there is room for differences within the party. It is a natural, and we think, a really desirable state to a limited extent.

Nevertheless, it must also be recognized that this divergence of opinion has of late grown greatly, and the voter is approaching a crossroads in matters of governmental policy. The voters' decision should modify or affect policies and goals of Democratic leaders, unless they attempt the doubtful propriety of the tail wagging the dog.

The acknowledged rift within the party ranks of the state is largely due to differences over the extreme liberalism in budgetary and social aspects of government as represented by the Truman Administration; and the more conservative (though still "liberal") views of former Democratic figures such as James Byrnes, Bernard Baruch and Edwin Nourse.

These men, and there are others like them, are tried and true Democrats; but they were unable to wholeheartedly support the program and policies of their nominal party leader. Some were quietly dropped from posts of political and governmental prominence; others simply resigned. It's a "family matter." There is no desire to break away from the political party which did not ignore the social responsibilities neglected by Republicans in their hey-day. What is actively being sought, is less of a tendency toward that vaguely-defined "leftism" by present Democratic policy-makers.

This opposition took its most violent form in the States Rights movement . . . a political excess which was fore-doomed to failure. The deeper, more significant move made itself manifest in the Florida Democratic primaries. There, the contest between Senator Pepper and Rep. Smathers was publicly tagged as a contest between a "Fair Dealer" and a more moderate Democrat. Florida voters were aware of this significance, for the point was brought up and repeated by national publications and radio commentators. The moderate element, a good Democrat, triumphed.

It has been said that the North Carolina senatorial primary will also represent a true contest between the "Fair Deal" and the more conservative viewpoint. We do not think that this is entirely true. For one thing, Senator Frank Graham has publicly renounced some of the pet rallying-cries of the Trumanites . . . though we confess doubts as to the extent of his conservative approach to other equally liberal-tinged Administration policies. Another cause for doubt that this will represent a true test of moderation versus "Fair Deal," is the personal attitude of many voters toward the Little Doctor. Unquestionably he is, as an individual, respected for his innate honesty and Christian character. This personalized and emotional attitude of the voter may be a factor in the forthcoming primary.

There should not be a ballot cast on the emotional aspects of any election. Too often, our emotions lead us astray. Instead, an objective viewpoint is the most desired. A calm appraisal of candidates as to their qualifications in best expressing the attitudes of their constituents should be the sole basis for support. Only by this means can members of any political party guide their leaders into the philosophy of the majority.

Unquestionably senatorial candidate Willis Smith represents the more moderate element of political thinking among Tar Heel Democrats. His success or failure will largely depend on the extent of his ability to convince North Carolinians as to the importance of a dispassionate appraisal between his philosophy of moderation, and that of Dr. Graham.

National Whirligig

News Behind The News

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON, May 12—President Truman has finally given his blessing to the movement to nominate 35-year-old Representative Franklin D. Jr. as the Democratic candidate for Governor of New York next November. He has been sold the idea, principally by National Committeeman Edward F. Flynn, that only the late President's son can defeat Governor Thomas E. Dewey.

Mr. Flynn has hitherto been regarded as the backer of Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing for the gubernatorial nomination. But it is understood that Mr. Ewing does not seriously want the prize, and will consent to be used as a possibility solely to corral support for young F.D.R., and to stave off opposition.

Thus, if James Roosevelt should become Governor of California next November in the face of several hurdles ahead of him, there may be two members of the family on the way to the White House out of which they moved rather recently. That is, assuming that F.D.R. makes the grade, and that his birth on Canadian soil does not bar him from the presidency.

MAGIC—Mr. Truman was not and is not now an enthusiastic admirer of either of these ambitious Rooseveltians. In addition to personal reasons for his dislike of the "royal family," as his friends refer to them, he wants no rival of that name for the 1952 nomination.

But it is understood that James has given a pledge that he will not seek that honor, even if he wins in California. And F.D.R. Jr. will obviously be too young and inexperienced to aim for the White House only two years hence. In fact, his sponsors admit that he is too new to public affairs to run for Governor, but they feel that his "magic name" will overcome that handicap.

• • • •

ACCEPTABLE—Young Roosevelt has become acceptable to the White House only because of the Flynn-Truman belief that he can eliminate the President's 1948 opponent from the national political stage. A Dewey defeat in 1950 would boost party morale, even if the Democrats should lose control of either House or Senate.

The disappearance of Mr. Dewey from the scene might also help to demoralize the GOP for 1952, in the opinion of Truman strategists. As Governor, Mr. Dewey would control the state's delegation to the convention, and his steadying influence might prevent a bitter and long-drawn-out struggle among Republican contenders. He would probably be able to name the nominee after only a few trial ballots.

But the 98-man delegation might fall apart, if left to their own devices and factional decisions. Some would go for Senator Taft, some for Harold E. Stassen, and others for "Ike" Eisenhower.

REINCARNATION—On the advice of his political nursemaids, young Roosevelt has begun to behave more like a candidate in Congressional corridors. His more regular attendance suggests that he has taken to heart Ohio Clarence Brown's advice that "you can't serve your district here from a New York night club."

In contrast to the brashness he exhibited in his first few days in the House, he now keeps out of floor debate. His latest speech showed signs of thought and preparation, evoking praise from his colleagues and the press gallery. He is making friends of key members from other states, and he has his father's radiant, smiling personality when he wants to turn it on.

He has no illusions about the reasons why the politicos want him to run, for he breakfasts frequently with National Committeeman Flynn at a downtown hotel. When he recently told a few friends that he would be nominated and elected, they asked him why he was so certain of winning in his first major try.

"Haven't you heard of the reincarnation?" he smiled.

CALCULATING—Practical political considerations forced President Truman to withdraw and repudiate the invitation given to Senator Glen Taylor of Idaho to ride on the presidential train during its passage through Idaho. The strange incident depicts the man in the White House as an extremely calculating and hard-boiled individual where his personal fortunes are concerned.

The invitation was extended by Interior Secretary Oscar Chapman in a formal letter to the Idahoan. Mr. Chapman has done all the advance preparation for the current western tour, and is Mr. Truman's general western political agent.

The invitation was originally approved by the White House, for the Cabinet member is far too timid to make such an important gesture on his own. Asking Henry A. Wallace's 1948 running-mate to return to the old homestead, in view of his nasty remarks about the Administration in that campaign, was a major political reversal of great consequence.

• • • •

ULTIMATUM—Two happenings led the politically canny Mr. Truman to back away.

The first was an ultimatum from top Idaho Democrats that they would not underwrite presidential support of the party deserter. They will enter their own regular candidate against him in his attempt to obtain renomination as a Democrat.

The second was the fact that Claude Pepper's erstwhile association with the Wallace-Taylor leftist, pro-Moscow faction was one of the underlying reasons for his defeat in the Florida senatorial primary.

After all, a President has to think of himself first!

NEW ALBANY, INDIANA, TRIBUNE: "France was neither the first nor the last to try to thrive by spending cheap money. Every nation trying the system believes it can be made to work, and ends by proving the contrary. New nations, new governments in old nations are always learning the hard way. That the father may have had bad burns in the fire, teaches his baby nothing."

EMPORIA, KANSAS, GAZETTE: "Today, the boy or girl who seeks part time or vacation employment, or tries to get started in a job with no experience, finds the higher minimum wage a stumbling block. Many an employer used to hire up-and-coming youngsters and start them at a beginning wage while they learned a trade or a business. Now, that is the exception rather than the rule."

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

Everybody in Greenville who's interested in politics is talking about the senatorial race that's coming up between Frank Graham, Bob Reynolds, and Willis Smith. Yesterday's issue of "Time" magazine has an interesting story on the race:

"After fair dealer Claude Pepper had been thrashed, the next big question in Southern politics was: Will it happen to Fair Dealer Frank Graham in North Carolina, too?

'Like Pepper, Graham was accused by his opponents of being too friendly to socialistic causes, too soft on communism and overkindly to Negroes. But the resemblance could be pushed too far. Candidate Graham was no Claude Pepper; he had not gone junketing off to Moscow. He was not even a professional politician; he had been appointed to the Senate 14 months ago to fill out a vacancy. Most North Carolinians knew him better as a small grey man who for 19 years had been the able and respected president of the University of North Carolina. In his first campaign for office, he was taking no chances. Hustling down from Washington, he rolled out his black Ford sedan and set it skimming off across the back roads of North Carolina.

"With his thin hair rumpled in the breeze, his coat slung on the seat beside him, he kept his Ford rolling on—from the VFW meeting in Pink Hill to the Daniel Boone celebration in Salisbury (accompanied by Vice President Alben Barkley), to a Lions Club meeting in Albemarle. After every meeting he stepped down from the platform to chat with the crowds, often delayed his schedule because he insisted on stopping off for roadside discussions. When he disappeared during the Wallace strawberry festival next week, his supporters knew just where to find Frank Graham: at the market, talking to denim-clad strawberry farmers.

"Everywhere, in his plain, unangry way, he did his best to answer the charges leveled against him. He had only pledged support to the Fair Deal in general,' Graham protested. Though he was a member of the President's Civil Rights Committee, he was against any fair employment law based on compulsion, a position shared by many another conscientious Southern legislator. He was opposed to the Brannan Plan. He favored the present agricultural price-support program, said Graham. 'In spite of some defects it has proved itself (by) bringing to a more equitable level the income of farmers.' "

The article went on to say that Graham need not expect much opposition from Bob Reynolds, but his real opposition lies in Willis Smith. "With the primary only a fortnight away, Frank Graham still seemed to be the man to beat."

And I thank you.

Around Capitol Square

Daily Reflector Bureau — By LYNN NISBET — Raleigh, N. C.

LOCKED OUT — A number of Democrats from distant points in the state, arriving early for the biennial convention, were sorely disappointed Wednesday to find state offices closed. They had hoped to get in a day's work with sundry departments, and then be ready to mingle with their fellow politicos Wednesday afternoon and night — and lay plans for next day's convention. Wednesday was May 10, Confederate Memorial Day, and observed for many years by state offices, banks and other public places as a legal holiday. There was very little criticism of the closed offices, most of the fellows blaming themselves for not remembering. There was general approval of the recognition accorded the Confederacy and none of the visitors begrudged state employees their holiday. It was just unfortunate it came on the eve of the biggest Democratic meeting in years.

OPEN — The supreme court, which is a law unto itself as well as unto everybody else, was doing business as usual. In fact, it was a bit heavier day than usual because it was "opinion day." Several groups of school children who had failed to anticipate the closing when arranging trips to the capital city also found the museum and other points of interest open, although disappointed at not being able to visit the capitol building and the governor's office.

PEEVED — One of the most peeved persons encountered early Wednesday was Dr. Henry Jordan, highway chairman. He woke at the usual time and temporarily forgot about the holiday. So he pulled himself out of bed and was eating breakfast before he remembered he could have taken that much desired extra morning nap.

OPPORTUNITY — The closed offices gave state officials a chance to mix with visitors around the hotel lobbies — an opportunity they were not slow to take. One top flighter, who naturally refused to be quoted by name, said it was certainly a relief to be able to pick the folks he wanted to talk with instead of having people he didn't want to see come to his office.

LINED UP — Telephone wires have been kept busy between Raleigh and all corners of North Carolina during the past few days with party leaders here urging delegates to the state Democratic convention to select appropriate members of platform and resolutions committees at the congressional district caucuses preceding the all-state assemblage. Under the plan of organization each district has a member of these and other committees, as well as a vice chairman and assistant secretary of the state convention. 'Appropriate" selections, of course, means persons favorable to the candidates backed by the officials making the calls.

LEGITIMATE?—That is a legitimate function of campaign managers and the cost of telephone calls is properly chargeable to the campaign expense account. There is question, both on legal and ethical grounds, about legitimacy of state officials using time and telephone service paid for out of tax money for such purposes. It has been done a lot in many state offices, including that of Governor Scott. Since so much has been said about petty grafting of low ranking state employees, there might also be question raised about the state paying cost of mimeographing speeches and platform drafts for the Democratic convention.

DISTINCTION — All of these situations present close questions. The national and state administrations are Democratic. The President and the Governor are titular heads of the Democratic party within the scope of their realms. Technically, their official positions are non-partisan. So are the governments which they head. As Democrats they are expected to take stands for or against candidates and party policies. As top ranking government officials they are supposed to be neutral. If the taxpayers foot the bill for Democratic propaganda, they should also pay the cost of Republican propaganda.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

AN ENCOURAGING SIGN
(The State, Columbia, S.C.)

The defeat of Senator Claude Pepper of Florida by young George Smathers, member of Congress, is a good sign that voters are tiring of New Dealism, Trumanism and other Socialistic tendencies and are looking to a return to the sovereignty of the state and individual initiative and independence.

Pepper has been a New Dealer and a Truman defender during the whole 14 years he has been in the senate. Smathers is represented as opposing the present administration policies on many important domestic issues. Apparently not much can be said for either side in the purity of its race, accusation, recrimination and general mud-slinging seeming to have largely preoccupied the candidates. However, in a democracy, as in a dictatorship, the means seem often to justify the end.

The situation in Alabama seems to refute the Pepper defeat as a trend, but there may be real differences in the situation in the two states as indicated by the admonishments of Alabama leaders that party differences on policy be settled within the party. There, there was an open split between the regular Democrats and the States Righters, the state having gone for the Thurmond-Wright ticket in 1948.

Whether the plan for settling party differences within the party means anything, and whether the suggestion will be adopted or not, it is still an idea worth serious consideration, and one with much on its side.

It is difficult, as has been demonstrated in Alabama this week and throughout the South 18 months ago, to establish a successful third party that can seriously invade the ranks of either old line party. For this reason it might be better policy on the part of what might be termed conservative Democrats to represent themselves as much sufficiently to be elected, then to turn their efforts in congress to straightening out party policy and returning it more nearly to its original significance.

At least this is the plan adopted by Smathers in Florida. He ran as a regular Democrat opposed to several important issues—and was elected. Perhaps the Alabama States Righters might have been more successful if they had followed a similar policy. Certainly they can have no part in changing policy now that they have been kept out of congress.

Of course, it remains to be seen how far the new Senator Smathers will be able to go in putting his policy into effect, as well as how much might have been electioneering.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER

With non-selling personnel now comprising 50-58 per cent of store employees, retail executives are advised by a leading trade expert to make greater use of 'methods engineering" and modern machine systems to cut down operating expenses.

Earl W. Elhart, managing editor of Women's Wear Daily, recommends this three-point approach for developing higher productivity out of existing facilities:

1—Question all current operating budgets.

2—Practice methods engineering in all departments.

3—Adopt greater mechanization of non-selling jobs.

Sometimes retailers continue expenditures on certain phases of their business more because they're traditional than because they're justified by current conditions. Elhart reports that an analysis of advertising expenditures in one department of a certain store showed that the allocation was quite unrelated to the demonstrated sales potentials of the different lines in the department. Are you spending your money promoting one line of goods when the same push devoted to another line would produce greater sales results?

Methods engineering is one of the most efficient tools at hand for increasing employee and plant productivity, Elhart believes. First a group of supervisors is trained. Then department by department, employees participate in a cooperative effort to study their procedures and eliminate unnecessary steps and use of materials. The key to success in methods engineering, Elhart emphasized in an interview with this writer, is to point out to employees that the firm is not seeking to eliminate jobs. Rather, the appproach should be to show employees how greater efficiency in procedures will make possible raises and promotions.

Methods engineering already is extensively used by industry, but remains largely untapped by the merchandising trades, Elhart points out.

Another important tool for reducing the ratio of non-selling to selling employees is mechanization. This has been accomplished partly in stock handling, but only in small degree in store systems, such as keeping track of sales, best-selling numbers, inventory and credit records, etc. New electronics equipment applied to retail systems may be a great boon in this respect, Elhart says.

SMALL STORE HAS SOME EDGE OVER BIG FELLOW

The problem of expensive non-selling staffs becomes larger as a store gets larger. Smaller stores have a more flexible operation; the sales staff devotes time between selling rushes to record-keeping and stock arrangement. The boss himself is generally down on the selling floor and not locked up in an office, so he pretty much knows what numbers are moving well, what goods and price brackets consumers are seeking, etc.

But as a store's executives become more remote from customers, the number of non-selling employees seems invariably to pyramid and its systems grow more complex, Elhart observes. In a big department store, for example, a salesclerk has to write a lot of detailed information on a sales check and make four or five copies of it for different operating departments to tabulate into records.

The small merchant just rings up the sale. He's his own electronics calculator. Apparently the best way to keep store still is to stay in the store.

TRADE SEEKS SOLUTION FOR THE HOSIERY SLUMP

The bare-leg season isn't even here yet, and the hosiery business is already in a slump. In fact, if it weren't for people buying hosiery for Mother's Day, sales of stockings would be poor indeed.

That's a source of much concern for apparel retailers. Hosiery is generally one of the four most profitable departments.

A survey by the National Association of Hosiery Manufacturers, soon to be published in detail, will show that two-thirds of all women over 14 years old go without hose at one time or another, generally for reasons of comfort, with economy another if secondary consideration. Among those who go stockingless, nearly one-third never even wear socks or anklets.

There's at least one angle to help retailers sell more anklets during the Summer. Namely that pediatrists consider it harmful to feet to wear shoes without socks. Moreover, foot perspiration ruins the shoes themselves.

Hal Boyle's Column

New York—(AP)—There is a way to break up the nationwide gambling ring.

The American housewife can do it. She can succeed where the cops and politicians seem to have failed. And she can make a mint of pin money for herself in doing it, too.

How? Well, my theory is simple. It is based on taking the gambling out of gambling. You can't beat the horses, girls, but there is a possible way to beat the bookies. And if you can beat the bookies—you can break up organized illegal gambling.

A suburban housewife here has shown the way to do it. Under the law you can sue to recover money paid to settle gambling debts. And that's just what Mrs. Hannah S. Kartiganer did. She sued Jules H. Bender for $11,195 she claimed her husband lost to him in horse race bets three years ago. And a gentlemanly jury of eleven men and one woman returned a verdict in her favor.

Although Bender insisted he himself was no bookmaker but a businessman, the decision disclosed a fascinating way in which determined ladies might put the knuckle on men, who, beyond cavil, are professional bookies.

Here, for example, is one possibility:

A group of 100 housewives, outraged because their husbands keep bringing home paychecks full of gambling holes, hold a rummage sale and an ice cream social. They raise $1,000.

Three of the girls take the $1,000 to the biggest bookie in town and lay it on the nose for Plug Ugly, a 100-to-1 shot, to win the fifth. If lightning should strike Plug Ugly and he comes in ahead, each of the 100 gals collects $1,000—enough for a fur coat. And the bookie has a broken heart.

The next day the girls put $5,000 on Sadfoot, another 100-to-1 hoofer, to breeze through in the fourth. If he loses, the girls promptly file suit against the bookie. And if all 100 of the women show up in court with their 275 children, in rags, won't the jury make the bookie hand back the $5,000?

So the next day the girls, maybe working through a couple of male stooges this time, bet the $5,000 on still another 100-to-1 shot. If he leads the field to the wire, they collect a half million bucks — or the bookie commits suicide. If their horse loses, they haul the bookie right back into court.

This 'break the bookies" program could sweep the ladies clubs of the nation like wildfire. It has two things women love: (1) a moral purpose, and (2) a chance to make some money.

It beats radio giveaway shows all hollow, because no sponsor can dish out prizes equal to the millions hidden by wealthy bookies in their safe deposit boxes.

If American wives cooperated in this you-can't-lose-from-winning-venture, most bookies in six months would be back pitching pennies against each other for a living.

The only flaw I can see in the whole scheme is that women, after all, are human beings, too—in their way. When they start playing the horses they act just like men. They brag about their winnings and hide their losses. And before long they'd be secretly betting against each other, and it would be the bookies' wives who'd be buying the fur coats.

Gambling is like any other disease. If you don't expose yourself to the germ, you don't get infected.

But it is a wonderful plan, isn't it?

Washington Letter

WASHINGTON — We climbed the worn stairs to a sunny room on the third floor of the Christ Child Settlement House. The faded walls were covered with about 200 paintings—lively, imaginative — the artistic expressions of young pupils. With sparkling enthusiasm, Mme. Wanda Gabrinska, the teacher, tripped to a long, wooden box-like bench along one wall and lifted the top.

'A Pandora box—a blue bench, a few bottles and jugs of paint, some worn brushes," she said, pointing inside. "To create something from nothing—that is good. I have traveled a good deal in my time, but seldom have I seen so much talent and so much desire to develop it as I find among American youngsters. Such frankness of approach, such courage of expression, such freedom. Freedom is my dogma."

During the pre-war years Mme. Gabrinska was president of the juvenile court in Warsaw, Poland. She is an accomplished student of law and sociology. However, she says that her life's vocation has always been art. 'I've been painting ever since I could hold a brush," she told me. "I intended being a professional, but after World War I, as a very young girl, I was impressed by the misery in my country. Art in those days was not in the first row of crude necessities. The saying in my country was 'You shouldn't take care about roses when the forests are in flame'. "

Coming to this country in 1947, Mme. Gabrinska was a lecturer at the Catholic University here. A friend, seeing her paintings, urged her to teach art. Now she has 40 pupils. Ages vary between 10 and 20. 'Children and youth are fundamentally the same all over the world," she says. "They all need an outlet for their talent and desires. I believe art provides just that for them."

Mme. Gabrinska feels that a major principle in art education is that it should not be compulsory and should not be 'suffocated by academic training. You can give encouragement and the necessary elementary technical help and guidance. That should be all." She teaches pupils to be honest with themselves, paint as they feel and think. She is eager for them to see beauty in ordinary, everyday life surroundings—in their homes and neighborhood and scenes from other places in the world. Art, she says, develops the powers of observation, discrimination and judgment.

In addition to her art teaching, Mme Gabrinska says she attends UN meetings as a consultant on behalf of voluntary international organizations to its economic and social council. She wants to write a book 'to show that children and youth have the same problems and needs all over the world. The medium varies, but the line of influence is the same," she said.

Hosea Reveals God's Forgiving Love ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Hosea 11:1-4, 8-11; 14:1-9.

Jehovah brought the Hebrew people out of the land of their oppressors, Egypt, and led them, after many dangers and adventures, into the land He had promised them.

Before Moses died, Jehovah took him to the mountain-top and showed him the land He had promised to the children of Israel after their wanderings, but he did not set foot upon it.

In spite of all Jehovah had done for them, the Israelites were not true to Him; they made a golden calf and worshiped it instead of the Lord, their deliverer.

Hosea pleaded with his people to return to Jehovah who loved them, and who would put aside His anger and forgive their backsliding.

Hosea Reveals God's Forgiving Love

PROPHET SAYS JEHOVAH WILL PARDON BACKSLIDING

Scripture—Hosea 11:1-4, 8-11; 14:1-9.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

THE ISRAELITES were a primitive people in the days, centuries ago, when Jehovah appointed Moses to lead them out of captivity in the land of Egypt, to a land He would give them.

After 40 years of wandering in the wilderness, encountering countless dangers besides hunger and thirst, they still could not seem to be grateful to the Lord who had saved them in many miraculous ways and brought them to comparative safety with the promise of a land of their own. Instead, they felt they must have some tangible god to whom to pray and in whom they could put their trust.

When the heathen peoples among whom they dwelt built the figure of a calf and worshiped it, the Hebrews evidently felt that such a visible god would help them, too. So they made themselves a calf of gold, and fell down and prayed to it.

There are many backward people in the world today who worship idols. They too are primitive and feel they cannot put their trust in a God in the heavens whom they cannot see and touch, even though the proofs of His goodness and power lie all around them.

Hosea, the good prophet, out of his experience with his unfortunate marriage to a wife who could not content herself with her husband, children and home, understood how his people could forget their God and stray away from His teachings.

He knew well that such sins would bring disaster and misery—just as his wife's misdeeds had brought her tragedy. And as he had forgiven her transgressions and taken her home once more, he knew that Jehovah—God of Love—would overlook the misdeeds of His people and bring them safely home if they would only turn again to Him.

Human parents forgive their erring children and continue to love them. Even very small children know that if they have done wrong, mother and father may punish them, but their love does not die. They can rely on their parents' love and devoted care all their lives.

"When Israel was a child, then I loved him, and called My Son out of Egypt," God makes Hosea say. But then they "sacrificed unto Baalim, and burned incense to graven images."

Even so, the Lord "drew them with cords of a man, with bands of love."

The first part of Hosea's book speaks of God's anger and is filled with threats of dire punishment for the sins of the people. The concluding part emphasizes God's love, His desire to overlook the people's wrongdoings, to forgive them and care for them as always.

"I will not execute the fierceness of mine anger, I will not return to destroy Ephraim: for I am God, and not man; the Holy One in the midst of thee; and I will not come in wrath."

The last chapter of Hosea is a poem of love, forgiveness and promise of future help to Jehovah's erring people. Even if the smaller children cannot entirely understand the meaning of the words, they will enjoy their music.

"O Israel, return unto Jehovah thy God; for thou hast fallen by thine iniquity.

"Take with you words, and return unto Jehovah: say unto Him, Take away all iniquity, and accept that which is good: so will we render as bullocks the offering of our lips.

"Assyria shall not save us; we will not ride upon horses; neither will we say any more to the work of our hand, Ye are our gods, for in Thee the fatherless findeth mercy.

"I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely; for mine anger is turned away from him.

"I will be as the dew unto Israel, he shall blossom as the lily, and cast forth his roots as Lebanon."

The Jewish people who have returned to live in Israel must feel that this prophecy has come true. And all of us should feel that there is hope for us, no matter what we have done that we shouldn't do. God loves and He forgives.

Payroll Guards Slugged, Robbed

Thompsonville, Conn., May 12—(AP) Four gunmen, their faces hidden behind gas masks today slugged and robbed three Bring's guards of $15,000 in the pay room of the Bigelow-Sanford Carpet factory.

The four men, all believed armed with shotguns, apparently escaped in an automobile after they tied the guards.

The guards were so badly beaten on the head and face they had to be taken to the Mercy Hostipal in nearby Springfield, Mass., for treatment.

The money represented the payroll of 300 third shift employes of the carpet company.

On January 17, a band of masked gunmen held up Brink's Inc., offices in Boston and escaped with approximately $1,700,000 in cash and checks. No trace of them has been found.

Last night in Wilkes Barre, Pa., a burglar alarm foiled an attempt to rob the Brink's office there.

Recapture Ship Seized In Trying To Run Blockade

London, May 12 —(AP)— The British navy has recaptured the 564-ton British steamer Ethel Moller, seized by Chinese Nationalists two months ago for running their blockade, an Admiralty spokesman disclosed today.

The spokesman said Nationalist soldiers—some of them wounded—and several Chinese women and children were aboard the Ethel Moller when she was retaken without a fight.

The British destroyer Cossack hailed the captured steamer yesterday off the island of Amoy, then boarded her. Seamen from the Cossack disarmed the Chinese soldiers.

The boarding party hoisted the British merchant navy flag to indicate the Ethel Moller was a merchant vessel and not a naval prize.

Hospital Appeal Given Brushoff

Seattle, May 12—(AP)— Blonde Screen Actress Frances Langford sought a brief interview with President Truman yesterday but reported later shoe got a brushoff.

She said she had flown 1,200 miles to Coulee City, Wash., from Los Angeles to plead against proposed closing of the Birmingham hospital at Van Nuys, Calif., where paraplegics—those paralyzed in the lower half of the body—are being treated.

'I boarded the (President's) observation car at Coulee City, shook hands with the President and inquired: 'You got my telegram?' "

"Yes, I know what you mean," she said Mr. Truman replied, referring to her telegraphic request that he listen to her plea in behalf of the hospital.

"Well, Mr. President," she continued, "you know I am interested in those boys at Birmingham Hospital and . . . "

"The whole thing's a pressure deal and I won't have a thing to do with it! she said he interrupted.

The President was still holding her hand firmly as he edged her to one side, then returned to shake hands with a growing swarm of politicians, she recalled. Next thing she knew she had been eased down the platform steps, almost in tears, she said.

Eugene Dennis Is Ordered To Jail

Washington, May 12—(AP)—Communist Leader Eugene Dennis today was ordered to jail immediately for contempt of Congress in 1947.

Federal Judge David A. Pine directed that Dennis, secretary general of the American Communist party, start at once to serve a one-year prison sentence.

Dennis had asked the court to delay the commitment until June 22. On that date the Court of Appeals in New York is scheduled to hear an appeal by Dennis and 10 other Communists convicted on conspiring to advocate the overthrow of the government.

In 1947, Dennis was convicted by a federal court here on charges of contempt growing out of his refusal to testify before the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Dennis appealed the conviction. The Supreme Court upheld it last May 1.

While the appeal in the contempt case was pending, the government had brought the case against Dennis and 10 other Communist leaders in New York.

Tigers Break Fenway Park Tradition In Doubleheader

Pennant Talk Has Been Tempered With Question Of Breaking Old Jinx; They Answered Without Help Of Hal Newhouser

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

Red Rolfe's Detroit Tigers ripped the sheets off the Fenway Park "bogie man." And they did it without Hal Newhouser.

All Detroit pennant talk has been tempered with the big question "Can they beat the Sox in Boston?" The answer obviously is "yes."

They did it yesterday—twice. In the first game by a rollicking 13-4 score and later a 5-3 squeaker with the help of damaging errors by Ted Williams and Walt Dropo.

Failure to beat Boston cost the Tigers a shot at the 1949 pennant. In fact, they have won only 14 of 44 games with the Red Sox home and away in the last two seasons.

Joe Dobson just didn't have it and Freddie Hutchinson did in the 13-4 first game. Hutchinson had a three-hit shutout until Ted Williams hit his eighth homer, with the bases loaded, in the eighth inning. All of Ted's home runs have been hit at Fenway.

Thanks to Clyde Vollmer's two-run round-tripper, Ellis Kinder rode into the eighth inning of the second game with a fancy shutout. Then Williams let him down. With the bases full, Williams let Vic Wertz' single skid past him for an error and three runs scored. Dick Kryhoski's homer and an error by Walt Dropo provided two more Detroit runs in the ninth. Dropo's four bagger in the home half was just a futile gesture.

New York took advantage of a double shot at the wobbly St. Louis Browns to win a pair, 5-1 and 6-5. As a result, the Yanks now are second and the Brownies nurse a budding six-game losing streak.

Cliff Mapes lowered the boom on Al Widmar in the opener, hitting a homer with two on that broke a 1-1 tie. It was Widmar's first start of the season. He's the boy who held out for a long time and threatened to go to the courts before the Brownies relented.

Washington crowded within a game and a half of Detroit by whipping Chicago, 8-5, their fifth straight win. Bob Ortiz hammered home three runs with a triple, double and single.

Manager Lou Boudreau took Shortstop Lou Boudreau off the bench and it worked. Lou came across with four hits in Cleveland's 4-3 edge over Philadelphia in 10 innings. The manager set up the winning run with a 10th inning single off Alex Kellner.

Willie Jones helped the Phillies add another half game to their National League lead. Jones, a red hot rival for Ralph Kiner in the home run derby, hit his seventh homer with two men on in the first inning of last night's 3-2 Phil win over Pittsburgh.

Johnny Sain flashed his comeback form against the Cubs with a four-hitter for Boston's 3-0 win. Sloppy defense cost Bill Voiselle the decision in his first meeting with his former mates.

The New York at St. Louis night game and Brooklyn at Cincinnati day games were rained out.

Phantoms Go To Washington For Conference Tilt

Greenville high school's much-trampled-on Phantoms travel to Washington this afternoon to do battle with Coach Bill Sweel's Pam Pack, the team that beat them in the first game here, 8-4.

Currently on the short end of nine games played to date, the Phants have lost six of those tilts and are now resting in the second division of the Northeastern Conference. They boast wins over Roanoke Rapids once and Edenton twice.

For the Phants it will be the last journey away from town this season. They return here Tuesday for the season final with New Bern at Guy Smith Stadium in the afternoon.

For six of the 1950 Phantoms these last two games will be their last in a baseball uniform for Greenville high school. Those boys graduating are Bobby Flye and Julian Vainright, pitchers; Joe Sawyer, catcher; Billy Jordan, second base; Billy Brady, third base; and Eugene Ayers, shortstop.

These men have performed in the starting lineup for the Phants this season and win or lose, they have been out there trying hard each game.

Coach Bo Farley will start Julian Vainright today in an effort to tame the second-place Pack. He pitched the first game and was relieved midway the game in favor of Joe Clark.

More Ducks And Geese Are Killed

Washington, May 12 — (AP) — The Fish and Wildlife Service estimated today that hunters killed 18,500,000 ducks and geese last fall—1,500,000 more than in 1948.

Albert M. Day, director of the Service, said liberalized hunting regulations accounted for the increase. The number of hunters in the field in 1949, he said, was 1,676,400, about 10 per cent fewer than in 1948.

"In addition to an increase of 10 days in the length of the shooting season, hunters had greater hunting opportunity last fall because large flocks were concentrated in the steadily diminishing areas still suitable for migratory waterfowl," Day said.

"Also, millions of ducks and geese remained in the United States during the mild fall instead of wintering in Mexico or other southern points, which is their normal procedure."

21-Game Losing Streak Is Broken By Little Rock

Nashville, Tenn., May 12—(AP)—The Little Rock Travelers may be in the Southern Association cellar — 14½ games off the pace — but they aren't downhearted today.

They broke a 21-game losing streak here last night by nosing out the Nashville Vols, 6-5.

Little Rock's 21 consecutive setbacks was the longest losing record in Southern Association history.

The Mobile club of 1917 had owned the previous record with 20 straight losses.

Hollywood Helps

Los Angeles—(AP)—"Going Hollywood" seems to have worked wonders for right handed pitcher Lee Anthony, an off season acquisition from Los Angeles. Last season, Anthony was the Pacific Coast loop's "losingest" pitcher with seven wins and 19 defeats. This season he won his four games for the Hollywood club, a Brooklyn Dodger affiliate.

Tonight's Games
Kinston at Greenville (2)
Tarboro at New Bern (2)
Roanoke Rapids at Goldsboro
Wilson at Rocky Mount

The rain came last night and as a result broke up all four games in the Coastal Plain League for the first time this season. The New Bern-Greenville contest had started when rain broke that up and came after three and one-half innings of play with the New Bern Bears holding a 5-0 lead. All these contests will be played as doubleheaders on the night of May 20th. That brings a total of four double-headers facing the Robins and they are scheduled to be played between now and next Saturday night.

Greenville fans will get their first glimpse of the 1950 edition of the Kinston Eagles here tonight at Guy Smith Stadium when the Robins and the Eagles play a twin bill which will get underway at 7:00 o'clock. The first game of the bargain bill is scheduled for seven innings with the second contest to be a nine-inning affair. Although it has not been announced by Manager Randy Heflin who will do the hurling in these two contests it is the guess of the writer that Vince Jones and Jim Lewey will be the manager's choice.

The Robins' announcement yesterday of the option of John Tepedino to their club was received with great enthusiasm by local fans as they recall the work he did last year with the local club. It certainly was a wise step by the club to get John's option and no doubt his batting power will be a great asset to the Robins.

Here is the record of John Tepedino last year:

He played in a total of 138 games, was at bat 529 times, scored 132 runs, collected 169 hits for 241 total bases which included 24 doubles, 12 triples, eight home runs. He stole a total of 47 bases, was walked 102 times, was hit by the pitcher on five occasions, he knocked in 86 runs, struck out 57 times, and ended the season with a .319 batting average for sixth place among the Coastal Plain League hitters last season.

In all of the 138 games he played with the locals last season he played at shortstop. He had 246 putouts, 446 assists, committed 65 errors and took part in a total of 55 doubleplays to wind up the season with a fielding average of .914 percent.

The Kinston club's efforts to get another active player to make up for a non-playing manager have failed in an appeal to Minor League Commissioner George M. Trautman. The Kinston club had appealed a league decision that non-playing managers should be included on the playing roster, and for a time things looked hopeful for the Kinston club. Baseball officials in high places said that the section in the CPL constitution which applies to the managers was illegal. But word from Trautman this week stated that the league ruling will be good for this season. The Kinston club is the only club in the CPL this season which has a non-playing manager—that being Veteran Millies.

Charlie Ouzts, who was recently released by the local club, may play with the New Bern Bears. . . The Goldsboro Cardinals have released Pitchers Joe Alusik and Paul Jepson and Infielder John Nemorak. Newcomer to the roster is Don Atwell, a righthanded pitcher who hails from Durham, Conn.

Grantland Rice, the noted sports writer, some years ago in the American magazine, gave us a code for a good sport. Much has changed in those few years, but the code is good yet, and it may be applied to business and social relations as well as to athletics. Here it is:

1. Thou shalt not quit.
2. Thou shalt not alibi.
3. Thou shalt not gloat over winning.
4. Thou shalt not be a rotten loser.
5. Thou shalt not take unfair advantage.
6. Thou shalt not ask odds thou are not willing to give.
7. Thou shalt always be ready to give thin opponents the shade.
8. Thou shalt not underestimate an opponent nor overestimate thyself.
9. Remember that the game is the thing and that he who thinketh otherwise is a slacker and not a true sportsman.
10. Honor the game thou playest for he who playest the game straight and hard winneth even when he loseth.

Crowds Drop But Tax Take Holds

Chicago—(AP)—Although the size of the crowds at horse race tracks has dropped off a bit, the "take" of state tax collectors is holding up pretty well. The Federation of Tax Administration reports:

Attendance at the U. S. tracks last year was 22,591,421 compared with 23,853,807 in 1948. Revenue to the states from part-mutual betting totaled $25,658,829 last year compared with $95,803,364 in 1948.

Paddy Young, Charlie Fusari Make Fighting Try For Title Bout Tonight

New York, May 12—(AP)—Paddy Young and Charlie Fusari will let their fists do the talking for them tonight when they make a last gasp try for a title shot with Middleweight Champion Jake LaMotta.

But the prospects aren't too bright that either will get the prized crack at Jake in Yankee Stadium. Rocky Graziano, boxing's boxoffice bigshot, has a strong "in" for the championship contest.

The decision on the champ's opponent may be announced shortly after Young and Fusari finish their Madison Square Garden ten rounder.

Young, a growing 21-year-old 154-pounder, is rated the best prospect in the division. He's been moving up with giant strides since he took up cash clouting 3½ years ago. The game New York youngster has won 12 of his last 13 bouts and has developed a power-packed left hook.

Fusari, although listed as a welterweight contender, has grown into a 152-pounder. The 24-year-old blond bomber from Irvington, N.J., has won 14 of his last 16 starts and was seconds away from an upset victory over Graziano. Rocky bombed him out in the final round last September.

Wakefield Case Is Put Back In Chandler's Lap

Yankees Suspend Flychaser After Ordered To Take Him Back; Wakefield Hints Appeal To Commissioner

New York, May 12—(AP)—The explosive Dick Wakefield case was shoved back into commissioner A. B. Chandler's lap today, with the career of the temperamental outfielder in the balance.

The New York Yankees suspended the 29-year-old flychaser without pay yesterday shortly after they had been ordered to take him back in the deal with the Chicago White Sox that didn't jell.

Wakefield, in Ann Arbor, Mich., said he's give George Weiss, general manager of the Yankees, "48 hours to talk it over with me as a gentleman."

"If he doesn't do it," he added, "my alternative is an appeal to the commissioner."

It seemed unlikely Weiss would make a dash for the telephone. The Yankee major Domo appeared miffed when he called a hurried post-game press conference and announced Wakefield was suspended indefinitely, effective April 29, for failing to report to Chicago.

"He will not play again with the New York Yankees," Weiss declared.

A few hours earlier the commissioner had voided the April 28 deal that was supposed to send Wakefield to the White Sox for a sum of cash and outfielder Johnny Ostrowski.

Wakefield wouldn't report to the White Sox unless they restored a $5,400 pay cut from his 1949 salary at Detroit, giving him $22,500 for the year. His Yankee contract called for $17,100.

When the outfielder didn't show up, Chicago general manager Frank Lane called the whole thing off. Weiss protested, asserting the trade was made through proper channels and "in good faith."

They put it up to Chandler, who held that their verbal understandings were "at variance" and he had no choice but to "have the situation revert to the status that existed."

Under the baseball law a suspension can not last more than 30 days.

Bonus Plan For Employers To Keep Over-Aged Workers Talked

By NORMAN WALKER

Washington, May 12 — (AP) — A plan to give employers a government bonus for keeping workers employed beyond the 65-year Social Security retirement age is gaining favor.

Secretary of Labor Tobin has just endorsed the idea. It was proposed to Congress two months ago by Harvard Economist Sumner Slichter.

The problem is to keep men 65 or over at work when they want to keep their jobs, even though they could retire on government and private pension plans at age 65.

Tobin agrees with Slichter that making these men retire is bad for the individuals and is bad from the standpoint of increasing unemployment and losing worker usefulness. They said that many major employers are adopting a rule of compulsory retirement at 65.

Slichter proposed that employers be given an incentive to keep workers 65 or older at their jobs. He suggested that the employer be given one third of the amount the worker would have received in Social Security retirement payments.

The plan would work like this: assuming a man was entitled to a ernment or $900 a year, his ernment, for $900 a year, his employer would get $300 a year from the government for keeping the employed.

Under the plan the individual could still retire at 65 if he desired. But he also could keep on working. The money the government paid the employer would encourage the boss to keep the man working, and also recompense the employer for the reduced productive value of the elderly man.

Commenting on this in remarks prepared for the CIO Steelworkers convention Wednesday at Atlantic City, Tobin said:

Management would find it worthwhile to organize operations differently in order to provide more jobs for older workers.

'Management would have an incentive to invent such opportunities instead of summarily cutting off capable workers.

"It has been estimated that involuntary retirement of workers at 65 deprives our economy of an increase in the national product of almost $4,000,000,000 a year.

"We would be just that much better off if the roughly 3,800,000 persons who face the harsh rule of '65 and out' were permitted to stay at work."

Tobin said a widespread notion that "at a fixed time older workers should give up their places to younger ones, without reference to productive capacity" is harmful economically and harmful to the national morale.

Nears Normalcy Despite Strike

Raleigh, N.C., May 12—(AP)—Freight operations of the Southern Railway through Raleigh are returning to near normal despite the firemen's strike, railroad spokesmen indicated today.

M. H. Shell, division freight agent, said that all regularly-scheduled freight trains between Selma and Greensboro were operated yesterday and the same program was expected today.

Shell said the Southern expected to restore two passenger trains today on the east-west run, Number 16 east-bound in the morning and Number 13 west-bound in the afternoon. Normally three passenger trains are operated each way daily on the lines.

Shell added that so far as he knew no firemen in the Raleigh area are on strike.

Shell said that the Southern here is still accepting freight in carload lots except those to other strike-bound roads which have embargoed shipments. These shipments, he said, are being accepted subject to delay.

Improbable, But Goat In Bath Tub

Detroit, May 12—(AP)—Okay, Mrs. Lehman, it was fun to hear about the boa constrictor in your washing machine.

Now how about a goat in the bath tub?

It happened to Mrs. Virgie Mack in suburban Wayne yesterday

(Earlier this week Mrs. Alberta Lehman of Los Angeles found in her automatic washer a small boa constrictor belonging to her young son, a snake collector. The boa was released.)

Mrs. Mack found a goat peacefully asleep in her bath tub. She couldn't figure it out. Neither could police.

The goat was transferred to the dog pound.

Trains Will Run Out Of Asheville

Asheville, N.C., May 12—(AP)—Two passenger trains are scheduled to leave Asheville today—the first since Southern Railway firemen went on strike Wednesday. The trains will carry regular crews, including firemen, the railroad said.

Both trains will carry coaches only.

Asheville division headquarters of the Southern—only railroad serving this city—said firemen have continued to report for work each day since the strike began.

Peanut Acreage Hearing Is Set

Washington, May 12—Hearings on legislation to authorize allocation of peanut acreage according to nut types have been set for Monday morning before the House Agriculture Committee, Rep. Herbert C. Bonner of Little Washington said today.

The bill would set up a peanut allotment program similar to the tobacco acreage allotment set-up, in which weed is allocated by type according to demand.

Although the legislation was introduced by Rep. Watkins M. Abbitt of Virginia, it is identical in principle with a measure proposed by Bonner in a speech on the House floor earlier this year. Its passage, Bonner believes, would be to the distinct advantage of producers of Virginia-type goobers who, despite heavy demand and short supply, are being forced to cut their acreage.

Bonner said he expects a number of North Carolina growers to attend the hearings Monday.

Unfair Bargain

Indianapolis, May 12 —(AP) —The manager of the Walker Theater agreed today his nine-cent bargain show was unfair competition to public schools.

Police and school social workers yesterday started an investigation when Crispus Attucks High School and a nearby grade school reported nearly 1,000 absentees. They had hardly enough pupils left to keep going.

It took only a little sleuthing to discover Walker's morning bargain, being enjoyed by about 1,000 youngsters.

The manager agreed to call off the whole thing. The pupils went back to school—where admission is free every day.

Dr. E. B. Aycock Addresses Class

Dr. E. B. Aycock was the guest speaker for Coach Doles' health education classes Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock. The two hundred students who heard the address received valuable information concerning socialized medicine.

Dr. Aycock lectured for a half hour and then carried on a question and answer period at which time many good questions were raised and were capably answered.

National Wildlife Week was first proclaimed by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1938.

Floodwaters Receding In Nebraska, Oklahoma Area

By The Associated Press

Floodworkers appeared receding today over parts of Nebraska and Oklahoma, where damage was estimated in the millions. The death toll in the two states was 26—22 in Nebraska.

The Red river at Winnipeg was tisat at its highest at its highest level—29 feet, eight inches—in more than 100 years. The swollen stream appeared to have halted its climb up the sandbagged dikes guarding the flood-stricken Manitoba metropolis. The threat remained critical for several residential areas.

Some 40,000 residents of the flooded areas of Southern Manitoba, the Winnipeg Tribune estimated, had taken refuge in the twin cities. Floodwaters spilled out over one-eighth or more of the 70-square-mile metropolitan area, and 540 square miles of southern Manitoba.

Flooding creeks and rivers in eastern and South Central Oklahoma appeared to have reached their crests and receded slightly. Property damage was estimated at more than $1,000,000. In addition to the two dead, two persons were missing. They had been in a boat crossing Rush creek. Farmers in the rich Sequoyah county bottom lands were evacuating their homes.

A man and a woman were swept to their deaths from an automobile on a flooded bridge near Shawnee, Okla. Some 500 residents of Waurika fled their flooded homes when waters of two creeks isolated the community.

There was no rain over the flood areas today. Fair weather was reported in nearly all sections of the country. There were some showers from Arkansas and northwestern Louisiana northeastward to southern Ohio.

U. S. Is Getting Richer But Not Rapidly Enough

By CLARKE BEACH

Washington—America is getting richer and richer. But still it isn't getting rich fast enough. If it doesn't get rich faster, serious trouble lies ahead somewhere. That's the substance of the conclusions experts draw from the latest monthly report to Congress by the President's Council of Economic Advisers. Nearly all business indices have been rising in recent months, and business prospects look good. So said the President, and so say his economists.

Yet the nation is affected with creeping unemployment. If unemployment keeps on rising indefinitely any economist will agree that a day of reckoning must come. About the only healthy way to avoid unemployment is to provide more and more jobs. And that's what industry is doing. But it isn't providing new jobs fast enough.

Leon Keyserling acting chairman of the Council, told a reporter: "We are not getting the expansion in industry and investment that we need to absorb the steady increase in the labor force. That is a serious problem."

The total number of employed persons has been rising for the past three months. But the monthly average is still lower than the monthly average for either 1947, 1948 or 1949. In March civilian employment stood at 57,551,000—slightly under the total for March of 1949, which was 57,647,000.

But the labor force keeps growing—the body of persons working or seeking work. It totaled 62,305,000 in March 1947. It was 63,021,000 in March of this year—a gain of 716,000 persons. Unemployment increased from 3,167,000 in March 1949 to 4,123,000 in March of this year—a gain of 956,000. Those figures worry government economists. They the President and Congress are committed to the principle that America's economic hope lies in full employment. That means creating new jobs fast enough to give work to the ever-growing mass of persons who need it.

In order to do this, according to the economists, the nation's industrial production must increase at the average rate of 1-2 to 3 per cent each year. Two per cent of this increase would be to give new jobs to persons who have been displaced in industry because of increased productivity—the ability of industry to turn out more goods per worker as a result of new machines and techniques. That means fewer workers are needed to do a given job.

The other one-half to one per dustrial production would be to provide jobs for the new workers who join the labor force each year as the population grows. But in the past year industrial production did not increase. The index of production stood at 184 in March 1949. It was still 184 in March 1950. It has been rising ever since the post-war low of 161 last July but still is not so high as in 1947 or 1948.

Expenditures for new plant and equipment are on their way down, according to the Council. They amounted to $18,120,000,000 in 1949. The Council estimated that they will be only $16,000,000,000 this year. The annual rate dropped more than $2,000,000,000 between the fourth quarter of 1949 and the first quarter of this year. In the second half of this year the rate will be only $15,440,000,000, says the Council.

What can be done to expand production and bring about this ever-expanding economy? One measure according to a highly placed economist, might be to increase somehow the volume of small business. For big business is getting bigger all the time and small business proportionately smaller. Another answer might be, he said, to reduce prices (chiefly by reducing the percentage of profits) in order to create greater consumer demand and stimulate greater production.

Report 2 Trains Fired On From Ambush At Yard

Knoxville, Tenn., May 11—(AP)—The Southern Railway reported that two of its freight trains were fired on from ambush today at a switching yard north of the city.

D. W. Brosnan, general manager of the Southern's central lines, said one shot was fired at each train. None of the trainmen was hurt, he added, but 'one shot pierced a crewman's sleeve."

One of the trains was moving from the switching yard into the Knoxville yards; the other was en route to Knoxville from Oakdale, about 50 miles west of here.

Earlier, Brosnan accused striking firemen of 'some acts of sabotage." He did not elaborate.

Chapter 31

The serious stranger turned to Andrew as to a responsible person. "I was just telling your friend, sir, that a stranger can't be too careful in this city. There is a complete disregard for human life which disgusts me, sir."

"Disgusts me too," agreed William solemnly, and they repeated, "Saved my life."

"Pity," said Andrew tersely.

He called a taxi.

"Thank you," he said to the serious man. "My friend is just a little high. I'll take care of him."

"No one is going to take care of me," said William with dignity. "I say, let us all go and have another drink and talk about Shakespeare."

The taxi driver pushed his cap back, grinned, and Andrew put his foot out as William moved, and tripped him neatly so that he disappeared backwards into the taxi. He got in beside him, waved goodbye to Williams startled rescuer, and gave the man his address.

"What were you doing in Katherine's hotel?" asked Andrew. "Waiting to see her?"

"I saw her go out with you, so I waited to see her come back. She hasn't changed a bit. A little brown bird. The nightingale."

"Were you going to speak to her?" William laughed. "Would you, if you were me? No, I don't dare to speak to Katherine, or Morton, because Morton would bawl me out, and Katherine would be sorry for me."

"What are you going to do now?"

"Go back to England."

"You weren't going to let her know that you were in New York?"

"Good brief, no, man," said William with weary impatience. "She is a lot better off without me."

The taxi drew up, and he paid the man. Together they managed to get William to his feet, stuck his hat on his head, and with considerable difficulty Andrew got him upstairs. He turned the light on in the big lounge, and deposited William in a chair. He flopped back, with his long fine hands lying against the arms of the chair, his head resting against the cushions. Andrew turned and called exasperatedly for Morton, who came in a huge, cowled dressing gown, Moorish slippers flopping from his feet, a glass in one hand and a copy of Rabelais in the other. He stopped and stared.

"I've brought home the prodigal," said Andrew irritably.

If he had expected Morton to be angry, he was disappointed. The great fat figure shuffled forward, and bent down. "Hmm," he said. "Where did you find him?"

Andrew told him.

He regarded William agian, with a tenderness that was completely ludicrous. "Looks like Hamlet in the last act," he said. "I was always going to have him play it. Didn't tell him, though. Quite conceited enough as it was, and," he added with sudden indignation, "I wasn't going to offer it to him to tempt him away from Hollywood."

"'Good night, sweet prince, and flights of angels sing thee to thy rest.' Go on, say it," said Andrew savagely. "Here he is, helpless, hopeless and gormless, as they say in Yorkshire. And we are all going to put him on his feet again with our blessings. He deserves a good whipping."

"Yes," said Morton gravely, "and he's had it. He'll never let anyone know that, of course—except perhaps Katherine. Come along; let's get him into bed."

"Why?"

Morton regarded him in amazed indignation. "He's got to be in shape for that audition tomorrow," he said.

Andrew had asked the telephone exchange to give him an early call so that he could be at the office early. He put the receiver back and, hearing a vague sound in the hall, went out. William, who apart from a slight darkness about the eyes was looking his normal graceful self, was creeping toward the front door, his shoes in his hand.

"Where are you going?" asked Andrew.

William said ingeniously, "I'm awfully sorry about being such a blasted nuisance last night, Nolan. I was trying to get off without disturbing you. It was decent of you to look after me, but I must be going now."

Andrew said irritably, "Put your shoes on, and don't use that prep school boy act with me. I know you too well."

William laughed and sat down on the hall chair to put his shoes on. One of the most endearing qualities he had was that he never bore malice if one saw through his affectations.

"Oh, come and have some coffee." Andrew opened the door of the other bedroom, and shouted, "L. M.! Your prodigal is trying to run out on you."

There was a scuffle inside ,and Morton came to the door blinking like an owl. William went white, and stood up like a disgraced school boy, his face averted. Morton said crossly, for it was too early for him to put any emotion into the scene, "Well, what have you to say to me?"

For a moment William was stripped of his pretenses. For a moment there was no posing, acting, no deliberate charm. He put his hand across his eyes, ashamed, humiliated, admitting defeat. Then he turned toward the door again, with a sort of blind, fumbling movement, and Andrew felt his heart twist with pity. He saw then, with a clarity that hurt, the weakness beneath the shining beauty and the breathless talent, and he saw what it was that chained Katherine to him, heart and imagination. He saw too that it was only when she was separated from him that she was weak, purposeless, drifting and afraid—that she needed his help. With William she was strong and brave, alight with her talent and love, swift to comfort, brave as a motherbird to protect him. He saw then that his dreams of protecting her were the merest foolishness, that these two strange and talented children were two parts of a whole; that without each other they had no existence, but together they could conquer the world.

Three Thousand Demo Chieftains On Way To Big Chicago Political Show

Chicago, May 12 —(AP)— Three thousand Democratic chiefs from 48 states headed for Chicago today to put on their biggest political show since two years ago.

Billed as a "Jefferson Jubilee' celebration, the three day powwow will serve to welcome President Truman in grand fashion.

It also will whoop up party enthusiasm for the coming congressional election campaigns. It won't hurt the reelection bid by Senator Lucas (D-Ill).

A program of 15 major events will open tomorrow noon with a luncheon for women leaders, and continue through Sunday and Monday.

It will end Monday night with a Jefferson pageant and a major speech by Mr. Truman at the Chicago Stadium.

The President, returning to Washington from his western trip, will come to Chicago Sunday night.

Waiting to welcome him will be congressmen, governors, mayors, national committee members, and the President's cabinet—to say nothing of lesser political figures.

Chicago's political showmen are dipping deep into their repertoire of razzle dazzle, especially for the Monday night finale.

Gene Autry will ride a horse and 3,000 party workers will carry sparkling torches. Movie Actress Margaret O'Brien will read a prayer for peace. Giant television screens will entertain any overflow crowds.

At a given signal, 25,000 colored balloons will be released. One thousand of them will carry coupons redeemable for $2 bills.

Elizabeth Taylor is on the program. Sponsors say the screen actress has promised to interrupt her honeymoon with Conrad Hilton, Jr.

William M. Boyle, Jr., Democratic National chairman, arrived yesterday with a prediction that the whole affair will be "tremendous."

It started out as a civic observance of the election of Thomas Jefferson as president 150 years ago. But Mr. Truman will get most of the attention.

Boyle said the Democrats are bringing "the servants of the people to the people to give a report" but he doesn't expect any Republican servants to show up.

They are welcome, he said, but "Well, we want to keep this thing orderly."

In addition to several dinners and luncheons for high ranking political figures, the program offers several public round table talks. Topics include civil rights, socialized medicine and deficit financing. Halls in three large hotels will be used.

Sharing A-Bomb Talk Is Opposed

Washington, May 12 — (AP) — Talk of sharing the atomic bomb with America's North Atlantic allies brought this hot reaction from Congress: Not a chance!

Among the men who would have to pass a law permitting such a move, there was consternation at the mere knowledge that the subject has been discussed by military officials in a preliminary way, even without approaching decisions or recommendations.

Senators and House members, Democrats and Republicans, cried out against letting any A-bombs get out of American hands.

The lone voice in support of sharing was that of Chairman Vinson (D-Ga) of the House Armed Services Committee—and he put in an "if." Vinson said:

"Our allies should have all equipment necessary to be in a position to undertake a worthwhile defense against any aggressor. If it is necessary for them to have the a-bomb, they should have it."

Of course, a lot of minds could change if we seemed to be getting definitely closer to war. But for the time being there obviously is no possibility that the lawmakers would consent to arming our cold war partners with atomic weapons.

Key members of the congressional atomic, foreign affairs and armed services committees said in interviews that they are against it.

For that matter, some of the military experts in the Pentagon are against it, on grounds A-bombs would be safer in American hands, with less chance for information leaks or for U.S. atomic weapons to fall into Russian's grasp.

Laborites Beat Another Bid By Conservatives

London, May 12—(AP)—The Labor government today beat down, 131 to 93, an attempt by a conservative member of the House of Commons to criticize its bulk purchasing and state trading program.

It was another in a long series of conservative potshots at the government and the second in three days. On Wednesday Prime Minister Attlee's government beat a conservate attempt to cancel a 16 2-3 per cent increase in freight rates on the Nationalized railways. The vote then was 304 to 283.

The motion, demanded that private traders again be given the right to buy food overseas.

The constantly attacking Tories, who almost bounced back to control in the Feb. 23 National elections, have just scored new gains in Britain's town and city council elections, indicating a continuing urban drift away from the labor party.

Larger Wheat Crop Predicted

Raleigh, N. C., May 12—(AP)— A wheat crop of 5,814,000 bushels was forecast today by the federal-state crop reporting service. The estimate was based on May 1 conditions.

The predicted crop would be 29,000 bushels larger than last year's production but 995,000 less than the 1939-48 average production.

cans and Southern Democrats on this issue would not continue on the controversial Fair Employment Practices Commission bill.

The FEPC bill became the pending Senate business again today although Senator Donnel (R-Mo) planned a speech criticizing the methods by which the Senate confirms presidential appointments.

An attempt by Lucas to invoke a limitation on FEPC debate is expected to be made next week. Taft said he and other Republicans will support Lucas on that, with 64 votes required to end talk and bring a vote.

N.C. Peach Crop Estimated Poor

Raleigh, N. C., May 12—(AP)—The next to smallest peach crop on record in North Carolina was predicted today by the federal-state crop reporting service.

The service said that after a careful study of damage done by mid-April freezes it was estimating the crop at 365,000 bushels.

Striking back against critics, including former President Herbert Hoover, Mr. Truman said "we shall not be stopped by discredited claims or by tattered slogans.

"We will still have to fight those who imagine that every progressive action is a step down that famous last mile to socialism," the President said.

opinion. Summed up, it said:

Freedom of speech isn't involved, But another part of the constitution is involved. That's the part giving Congress the power to regulate commerce among the states.

The government here isn't interested in preventing the spreading of Communist doctrine. And the spreading of that doctrine, at least in this case, isn't a matter of a "clear and present danger." In fact, speech isn't involved in this case at all. What is, then?

Action, said the court. Justice Vinson argued that the T-H section in question was intended to protect the public, not against Communist ideas, but the things Communists do: Pulling strikes that interfere with interstate commerce. Therefore, the law is all right because Congress has a right to protect interstate commerce.

Still, it wasn't a unanimous decision of the court. Justices Reed and Burton agreed in full with Vinson. Justices Jackson and Frankfurter agreed in part. Justice Black dissented.

cl red that "the Germans themselves must be prepared to accept their full measure of responsibilities and the full measure of what may appear to them as risks in returning to the Western community.

Well now, that's laying it on the line pretty bluntly. It fits in with the Paris coal and steel proposal, which amounts to a proposal of peace. This new-born attitude towards Germany is likely to cause heart-burnings in a good many quarters which refuse to forgive her for initiating two world wars.

Probably most of us have felt this bitterness towards the aggression which has cost so dearly. However, bitterness shouldn't be allowed to blind us to facts. No nation has suffered more at the hands of Germany than France, yet we see the latter holding out the hand of friendship. Two world wars have exacted a frightful cost from America, yet we hear Secretary Acheson calling for a return of Germany to the Western fold.

new classrooms, and two new toilet rooms will be added to the building.

Superintendent Rose said the school officials hope the new building will be completed and ready for use by students of the West Greenville school by October.

The completion of the building will bring to a total of approximately $280,000 the amount spent on school buildings in Greenville since April 1949. The building at the West Greenville school will be paid for by approximately $40,000 from state funds allotted to Greenville through the state school building program, and the remainder of the money will come from the proceeds of a $250,000 bond issue which was voted by the people in Greenville in 1940. The bonds which were voted 10 years ago were sold last June, and from the money the new elementary building in South Greenville has been constructed, work is being done on an addition to the Third Street school building, and improvements have been made at other schools.

After the West Greenville building has been completed, the next steps in the school expansion program will be for additional classrooms at the C. M. Eppes high school and a new elementary school building in Southeast Greenville. When the elementary school program is settled, Rose said, the school board will take up plans for the high school facilities in the city school system.
