Braswell-Kilgo Vows Spoken In Formal Ceremony Saturday

Jarvis Memorial Methodist church was the setting for the marriage on Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock, May 20th, of Miss Susanne Kilgo to Charles Lewis Braswell. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Reverend Robert Bradshaw, former pastor of the bride.

Prior to the ceremony a program of nuptial music was rendered by Mrs. Paul Toll, organist. Her selections included Greig's "I Love Thee," Rubenstein's "Romance," and Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata." Mr. E. O. Parkinson, Jr., sang "All For You" and "Through the Years," and at the close of the ceremony as a benediction, "Oh Perfect Love."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory satin fashioned with a double ruffle of chantilly lace bordering a yoke of Marquise. At the waist was a peplum of chantilly lace. The bouffant skirt and the circular train featured inserts of chantilly lace. Her finger tip veil of illusion fell from a bandeau of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of valley lilies centered with a white orchid and showered with white satin ribbons.

Attending the bride were her sister, Mrs. Sterling Hudson, of Greensboro as matron of honor and Miss Peggy Rose Smith of Greenville as first bridesmaid. Their gowns were of white embroidered organza over yellow taffeta. They wore bandeaus of mixed spring flowers and carried old fashioned nosegays.

Mrs. Irving Jones, sister of the groom, of Nahunta, Mrs. J. I. Makepeace of Sanford, Miss Jane Massey of Greenville, and Miss Peggy Anne Ellis of New York were bridesmaids. Their gowns and flowers were identical to those of the honor attendants.

R. A. Oliver, of Princeton, attended the groom as best man. Grooms-men were Irving Jones of Nahunta, Sterling Hudson of Greensboro, Raymond Sugg of Princeton, and A. W. Bryan of Greenville.

The bridegroom's mother wore a gown of blue lace with white accessories and an orchid corsage.

Immediately following the ceremony the father of the bride entertained at a reception at the Greenville Country Club. The large reception hall was lovely with decorations of green and white. The mantels over the large fire places at each end of the room were banked with greenery, magnolias and white tapers. Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Kittrell greeted the guests and presented them to the receiving line.

Mrs. Walter F. Taylor and Mrs. J. H. Blount, assisted by Mrs. Jim Grooms of Greensboro, Miss Pat Waller of Durham, Mrs. Connie Getzinger of Greenville, served punch, cakes, nuts and mints from the bride's table covered with a cloth of cutwork and embroidery. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Forbes, Sr., presided at the register and good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Milo Smith.

Mrs. Braswell is the daughter of Mr. James Luther Kilgo, of Greenville, and the late Mrs. Kilgo, and the granddaughter of the late Bishop John C. Kilgo, once president of Trinity College, now Duke University. She was graduated from Duke University where she was a member of Kappa Delta, National Social Sorority, Theta Alpha Phi, National Dramatic Fraternity and the Duke Players.

Mr. Braswell, son of Mrs. D. D. Braswell of Princeton and the late Mr. Braswell, attended the University of South Carolina under the Navy Training program. There he was a member of Sigma Chi, National Social fraternity. From this school he was commissioned Ensign in the U. S. Naval Reserve. After the war, he was graduated from North Carolina State College where he was a member of American Society of Mechanical Engineers. At present Mr. Braswell is employed by National Carbon Division of Union Carbide and Carbon Corp. in Greenville, North Carolina.

For traveling the bride wore a two piece silk dress of robin egg blue, with a natural straw hat, and black accessories. Her corsage was the orchid lifted from her bouquet.

Out of town guests here for the wedding were as follows: Mrs. Bailey Grooms, Miss Edna Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Kilgo, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Hall, all of Charlotte, N. C.; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Kilgo, Jr., of Selma, Alabama; Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Davenport of Goldsboro; Mr. William Corbitt of Henderson; Miss Pat Waller Durham; Mrs. Robert Bradshaw, Wilson; Miss Peggy Anne Ellis, New York City; Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Makepeace, Sanford; Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Oliver, Jr., Mr. Raymond Sugg, and Mrs. D. D. Braswell of Princeton; Mr. and Mrs. Irving Jones, Nahunta.

On Saturday evening, May 13, at 7 o'clock in the Magnolia room of Hotel Proctor, Miss Jane Massey entertained at dinner in honor of Miss Susanne Kilgo and Charles Braswell.

The long table was centered with a beautiful arrangement of pink and blue snapdragons flanked with burning tapers in silver candelabra. Dinner was served in four courses to 20 guests.

Miss Massey presented Miss Kilgo a corsage and a silver platter. Mrs. R. M. Garrett was hostess at a buffet dinner and cake cutting on Friday evening at her home on Country Club Drive. Guests were members of the Braswell-Kilgo wedding party and out of town friends and relatives here for the wedding. Vari-colored flowers decorated the living room and in the dining room white flowers with bridal candles in silver candelabra were used. At one

Women In The Church

Mrs. Charles W. Mead, of Omaha, Neb., chairman of the standing committee of the Wesleyan Service Guild, an organization of employed women related to the Woman's Society of Christian Service, Methodist Church, announces funds in hand for ten "Marion Lela Norris Scholarships" for the training of missionary personnel at Scarritt College, and another ten for similar training at the National College for Christian Workers. Miss Norris, whose honor the scholarships have been named, was the founder of the Guild and is now executive secretary with offices at 150 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Miss Norris will retire from her post during the current year. Mrs. Mead also announces that the Guild members will raise $30,000 in the next two years to help build a new home for nurses in Seward, Alaska. The previous home, a Methodist institution, was completely destroyed by fire a few weeks ago.

One hundred three young people of the Methodist Church were approved recently for service as missionaries and deaconesses, at home and overseas, and will be commissioned and assigned to posts by the Board of Missions and Church Extension of the Church this summer. More than half the group are young women, single or married. The Board is seeking to secure and have trained at least 1,000 new Methodist missionaries and deaconesses during the years 1948-52.

When the members of the Luther Memorial Church, Des Moines, Iowa, were told that there was a Latvian war widow with four children among the displaced persons in a camp near Augsburg, in the U.S. Zone of Germany, they decided to do something about it. First, with their own hands they built a $9,500 brick house to present to Mrs. Antonia Kalnins and her children, aged 15, 12, 9, and 4. Volunteers did all the work except the plumbing, and did it afternoons and weekends. Some of the leading citizens of the community, including a college president and a banker did the work. Then they found work and transportation costs for the family. The church will carry a small mortgage and the house will go to Mrs. Kalnins free and clear. The Rev. Holger Jorgensen is pastor of the church; and Mrs. Alfred Jensen is chairman of its displaced persons committee. . . . When people congratulate the pastor, he reminds them that there are other such families in European DP camps awaiting resettlement.

Employment For Factories Off

Raleigh, May 22—(AP)—Factory employment in North Carolina was off in April for the fourth consecutive month, the State Department of Labor has reported.

During the month factory employment dropped 2,800 to 383,500, the report said.

The losses were accounted for by layoffs of textile workers and to-become stemmy workers totaling 3,700. They were offset by gains of 700 in employment in the lumber industry, 200 in furniture manufacturing and 300 in food products.

GOODNESS GROUNDED IN FAITH

Many people believe that being a Christian means living a certain kind of life. Well, it does, but it means living that kind of life because of the faith one has in Christ. A man may have a quite upright life and not necessarily be a Christian.

Now to many people that may seem a statement that is completely lacking in a sense of ethical values. Do you mean to tell me, someone says, that a life of high moral purpose does not itself constitute the Christian life? Yes, precisely so: for Jesus Christ came into the world to lead men to live their lives as children of God on the basis of faith. Real faith, of course, results in upright living. But a man who has just accepted Jesus Christ, who is struggling with temptations, who is stumbling and falling every day but nevertheless pressing on in his endeavor to do the will of God, is more acceptable in God's sight than a man of perfect morality and complete self-control would be who is doing it on the basis of his own will.

The only morality that can ultimately be depended upon is the morality that has its roots in religious faith. Other varieties of morality quickly fall the victim of expediency, but righteous living that is based upon faith in God withstands the ravages of time.

Knowledge Of Law In The JP Courts

The majority of the people who have had or observed dealings with the Justice of the Peace courts throughout North Carolina are in agreement that something should be done to make more uniform the "justice" meted out by the JPs.

For the second time a New Hanover Grand Jury has urged that the JPs of that county be instructed in law and procedure, but so far nothing tangible has come from the grand jury action.

We believe that for the most part, the JPs throughout the state could well benefit by schooling which would instruct them in law and procedure. And even more important, such training for the JPs would be of great benefit to the public which has dealings with the magistrates of the lower courts.

If the project is not undertaken on a state-wide basis, perhaps Pitt county could institute its own program which would prove mutually advantageous to the JPs and the public.

Issues Should Govern Your Decision

With the Democratic primaries scheduled for next Saturday this is the last week of the U. S. Senatorial campaign that has degraded into one of name-calling and charges and countercharges to an extent that has beclouded the real issues. Knowing the high caliber of the two major candidates, Frank P. Graham and Willis Smith, the depths to which the campaign has reached has certainly been disappointing. Frankly we do not place the blame for this upon the candidates as much as we do upon some of their partisans, or so-called politicians, who have left nothing undone to take a rap at their opponents. Nor do we show partiality in placing the blame on either side, for there has been little or no choice between the tactics used by the opposing camps.

If the coming decision was one to be based on character and integrity alone, there would be no choice between the two candidates for we feel that both have the qualifications and would carry out their senatorial duties as they honestly felt they should. Therefore, as we see it, the question before the voters is what kind of governmental policies they want carried out in Washington.

Frankly we have felt for a long time that our governmental policies are leaning too far to the left and if continued will ultimately lead us into complete nationalization and full socialism: We do not claim that the administrations of the past 18 years have not accomplished some good for they have, but on the other hand, along with the good, much that is bad for America and American ideals has also been added and present tendencies point toward a continuation of these policies.

We feel that the time has come for America to STOP, LOOK and LISTEN, and take stock of the situation before we travel so far along the road of so-called "liberalism" that there is no halting nor turning back.

Your decision will be made when you cast your vote next Saturday. In the one hand you have Frank P. Graham, ultra liberal to the extent that he probably could not do otherwise than support the Truman policies, and on the other hand you have Willis Smith, conservative, who would more likely approach the problems now facing this country with more caution and businesslike deliberation.

The choice is yours to make.

Science Is Overlooking A Local Phenomenon

Science has passed up or ignored a peculiar psychic phenomena enacted daily in our city.

Merrily yapping packs of "man's best friends" will be observed romping in streets and yards, playfully despoiling shrubbery and lawns, when for no apparent reason there is a sudden silence; they have all gone underground.

Between thirty and forty-five seconds later, along rolls the dog-catcher's truck . . . frequently empty, and a once-rich catching ground is bare.

Now certainly no ordinary human in the neighborhood had any premonition that a dog-catcher was coming; but a well-developed canine instinct must have sounded a claxon.

Civilization may have robbed the dog of many former instincts that were responsible for his survival in the wild state; but civilization has also seemingly developed an amazing new talent akin to telepathy or ultra-short wave radio among our diversified population of dogs.

News Behind The News
By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON, May 22.—The unexpected upward trend in farm prices has confirmed millions of farmers in their suspicion that the government's artificial supports operate over a long period to depress rather than increase the return on their products. The April-May movement has killed whatever chance the Truman-Brannan two-price plan had of action at this session.

The fluctuations in prices for hogs, which determine the prices for many kinds of feed, especially corn, have strengthened the farmers' demand that they be permitted to sell in a free market in times like the present. Although Secretary Brannan stopped support of hog prices some time ago, they are bringing about two dollars more than they did under the benefit-payment scheme.

The rise in prices of other major commodities, such as wheat, corn and soybeans, has also weakened chances of the White House proposal for expansion rather than a reduction of financial assistance to agriculture.

Although farmers recognize the need of federal aid in times of serious depression or bumper crops, they prefer to be allowed to run their business on their own terms now.

CHANGE—This new attitude in the corn-cattle-wheat belt marks a sharp change in the general agricultural situation, with a political repercussion that does not augur favorably for Administration policies and personalities in the forthcoming Congressional campaign.

When the farmers are sick, they are inclined to vote Democratic, as they did during the Roosevelt years and even in the 1948 campaign. But when they are well, they tend to return to the old Republican homestead. Thus the current reversal may prove harmful to the party which has prospered politically from the billions it has paid out in subsidies.

It will not be the first time that the weather, market conditions and recovery based on economic changes has upset all election forecasts.

RELATIONSHIP—When farm income started to drop several months ago, and it appeared that current drops would create new surpluses that only the CCC could handle, the Brannan plan grew steadily in favor. The heads of the major farm organizations opposed it, but numerous polls indicated that the farmers themselves favored it.

Now, the prospective drop in the size of the wheat and corn crops, due to inclement weather, seems to remove the need for continued government supports.

Another factor in maintaining price levels is the increase in employment within the last few months, showing the intimate relationship between wages in cities and income on farms. Buying of meat has risen sharply, bringing a boost in retail prices in the face of official predictions of a summer drop in living costs.

William Green, A. P. of L. president, has already entered his protest against these increases. He said recently that his unions would insist on further wage raises if prices did not fall. His threat had an unfavorable reaction among the farmers, who figure that another pay envelope fattening will mean higher prices for the things they buy.

FEUD—The American people rarely realize what a far-reaching effect personal prejudices and human-interest trivia have on high affairs of domestic and international import. Here is a laboratory demonstration of why appropriations for the Civil Aeronautics Board have been cut for two straight years because of a feud between an important Congressman and CAB's chairman.

The first is Representative John J. Rooney of Brooklyn, chairman of the House Appropriations subcommittee handling funds for this agency, among others: The second is Chairman Joseph J. O'Connell Jr. The story is given here without prejudice to either feudist, but solely for the light it may throw on government operations.

TIME—During a recent political celebration here, Chairman O'Connell was asked by a fellow-guest what he thought of the ability and energy of the Tammany delegation, especially the Brooklyn members.

"Not much good," replied Mr. O'Connell, in effect. "They're never here, and don't work on the job. They spend most of their time in Brooklyn."

"I don't think you know who I am," said the questioner.

"Sure I do," retorted the CAB chairman. "You're John Cashmore, the Brooklyn boss."

AFFRONT—That unfortunate response meant that Mr. O'Connell was "sneaking" on a Congressman to a local leader who might, under certain circumstances, deny a renomination. Moreover, although Mr. O'Connell's charge is not entirely incorrect as to many members from nearby states, it does not apply to Mr. Rooney. He is a conscientious and hard-working member.

The Brooklynite further maintains that CAB does not need all the money it has asked for the 1951 budget. Mr. O'Connell says that the cut will hamper airline expansion and possibly endanger human lives.

Congress, of course, will back Mr. Rooney. An affront to one member is an affront to all 435 in this honorable club.

Around Capitol Square

Daily Reflector Bureau
By LYNN NISBET
Raleigh, N. C.

MONEY—The money angle was injected into the current senatorial campaign in a big way over the weekend. It was precipitated by a story Friday that John Marshall, private secretary to Governor Scott, accompanied by Carl Williamson, former state ABC chairman, had visited distillers in northern cities seeking contributions for the Graham campaign. Marshall categorically denies he called upon any distiller representatives, in face of evidence that he did. Williamson's answer to inquiries was that as a private citizen his activities are his own business.

FUORE—The story occasioned considerable furore in political circles for two reasons. There was the factor of outside influence on state elections, and there was the liquor angle. Liquor in many places is a legal commodity, just like cotton and tobacco. In many other places it is outlawed by statute. Chief Justice Stacy of the North Carolina supreme court wrote in an opinion several years ago that although legal merchandise liquor refuses to be treated as an ordinary commodity.

IN CLEAR—Nobody has been discovered who thinks Senator Frank Graham knew anything about this deal, or that he would accept campaign funds from such sources if he knew it. The whole matter of campaign spending is up in the air, because everybody knows it takes a lot of money to inform a million prospective voters about positions and beliefs of candidates. It is almost certain that no candidate has been nominated to major state office in hotly contested primaries without spending or having spent for him much more than the law permits. It may be accepted as fact also that no such candidate has gotten by without having support from undesirable.

OPPOSED—It has been learned that Willis Smith personally disapproved publication of paid advertisements about involvement of liquor money in the campaign. Recognized advocates of the state ABC system have also voiced disapproval. Since it is conceded that Graham knew nothing about the matter, Smith disapproved publicity, and ABC folks didn't like it, the significant factor left is that of direct intervention of the governor's office in seeking contributions from outside firms who must do business in North Carolina only through state government agencies.

SIGNIFICANT—There is vital distinction between solicitation of financial support from corporations whose major dealings are with private enterprise, and pressure from the governor's office upon those whose sole or major dealings must be with the state government itself. That is regarded as more significant than the type of merchandise or services provided by contributors. That gets back to the question of controlling influence in state affairs for the next ten or twelve years and emphasizes again that there is more at stake in this election than whether Frank Graham or Willis Smith will go to the Senate.

VOTING—Many North Carolinians will vote next Saturday solely on the issue of which candidate is best qualified to serve in the Senate. Many others will vote with an eye to political factionalism. Still others, perhaps a majority of the total, will weigh both elements. Then, unfortunately, there are always some who vote the way the person hauling them to the polling place suggests. This group constitutes a small minority, but in close elections can hold the balance of power. For that reason "herded voters" acquire political value far above their real worth as citizens.

CATCHING UP—Without help of the proposed public housing bill which Congress has been so slow to enact, North Carolina is gradually catching up with housing demands. The state department of labor reports that during the month of April seventy-five cities and towns issued building permits for 1,545 dwelling units, estimated to cost about nine million dollars. Building construction authorized amounted to seven million, and another million dollars went into alterations and repairs. These figures do not include building in rural areas nor in towns not requiring permits for new work.

WORRIED—Some of the folks in Wilkes County are getting worried about future corn crops. Carl Buchanan of North Wilkesboro, in Raleigh Saturday, said the highway people are paving so much land, and threat of inundation of a lot more by flood control-power project dams, leaves not enough good land to grow corn. With a grin he recalled that corn in certain manufactured form is said to constitute an important product of that section. He indicated there is wide difference of opinion on the dam question, practically unanimous pleasure with the paved road program.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

UNION GOALS
(The Wilson Daily Times)

In the resolutions which the big CIO textile union adopted were one calling for larger pensions, more pay and less hours of work. And all that's a possibility if only we'll be patient. But like the eight-hour day and the 40-hour week, we must grow into them. Because General Motors makes enormous profits doesn't mean that all corporations do. Yet the unions attempt to make some highly profitable group set the pattern for an industry. And in doing so, they will bring about more bigness, forcing many of the smaller businesses to the wall.

We can support the 40-hour week because of our technological improvements. For machinery has been doing the work that man formerly did. In the early stages of those advances, labor naturally rebelled. It could see where in time thousands would lose jobs. But labor's fears weren't borne out. On the contrary, we have created thousands of new jobs that didn't exist before those improvements. It stands to reason that we'll create many more, permitting a man to do in 24 hours what he now does in 40.

But let's wait till we have the machinery before we're too insistent with our demands. If the unions will keep higher wages and shorter hours as a goal and not as an objective for immediate attainment, we'll make progress. If, however, they apply a strangulation process to industry as it exists at present, we'll suffer setbacks that are unnecessary. No better illustration of that can be found than in the recent Chrysler strike. In the end the union got what the company was willing to give at the start.

CONGRESS AND ECONOMY
(Greensboro Daily News)

One of the most pleasing happenings we have noted of late was the action by the House last week in trimming $600,000,000 from the "one package" appropriations bill. It is high time that the Congress did something to bring the income and outgo of the national government nearer in line.

The federal government has been in the red so long that the people—and the law makers—seldom give much attention to the mounting deficit. The move by the House, however, indicates that members of Congress, at least some of them, have come to the realization that the time has come to bring the budget nearer in balance. Despite the increasing calls for government funds, there must be quite a few items that can be chopped off the list of expenditures in order to save the taxpayers from an increased levy in the near future.

The trimming given the bill was just a drop in the bucket as figures go, approximately one-thirtieth of the proposed appropriation or roughly a trifle less than three per cent. But, if the same reduction is made in other expenditures then the total will really amount to something. We hope this is indicative of the trend of thinking in the Congress and that there will be more of the same when other appropriations are scanned before final passage. It's the people, after all, who pay these bills, and as someone has said, "The power to tax also is the power to destroy."

TRY SOMETHING ELSE
(Kinston Free Press)

Southern senators won the first skirmish against the so-called Fair Employment Practice Control bill Friday when they defeated the effort to limit debate.

The vote is considered by congressional leaders as paramount to final defeat of this iniquitous piece of legislation at the present session.

The Free Press is not surprised that the southern senators, who are unanimous in their opposition to this measure which would set up a Washington bureau to dictate to private employers whom they should hire, won their point. This paper doesn't believe that there is a chance for this law at the present session, and it is doubtful if any other sessions of Congress in this generation will enact such legislation.

It would appear that it is about time for Congress to turn its attention to wretched matters and not continue to agitate legislation which would only be a thorn in the flesh.

THE KINSEY REPORT
(Wilson Daily Times)

Common sense tells us that without sexuality we couldn't propagate. But common sense has also shown that the highest level of society can be found where family life is dignified. Knowing that, why must we have our Dr. Alfred E. Kinseys who, in two reports, has attempted to rationalize sexual behavior. For in any society can be found perverts; but must we paint a picture of how those perverts operate?

Men and women have only one life to live. When they conform to the rules of society, they get a measure of satisfaction out of living. It's when they misbehave that they have something to hide. And it's with that misbehavior that Dr. Kinsey largely deals. But do we need word photographs of such procedures? The Times, for one, is of the opinion that we could get along very well without them.

Admitting that some badness stems from environment rather than from a desire to commit sin, we would do better if we devote our efforts toward the improvement of that environment. That, however, Dr. Kinsey doesn't do. What purpose, then, do his reports serve? It's not within the province of The Times to say that they shouldn't be printed. But it is within the province of The Times to say that it borders on the sensual and therefore achieves little in the way of good.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER

A large Eastern builder the other day raised the tag on his $6000 house $600 and warned that might not be all.

The fact is, costs of lumber and other housing materials are heading up along with housing starts, which are currently running more than 50 per cent ahead of last Spring.

Lumber is the item staging the most spectacular rise. Some types have jumped as much as 30-40 per cent in less than six months. The boost in other materials is less drastic but noticeable: 5-7% per cent for plumbing equipment for example.

If prices of homes are forced up, naturally the market shrinks. But the influence of the construction business extends far beyond the builder's acres. Building and autos are currently two of the main props under the present general business boom.

Moreover, high home prices mean inflated mortgages and mortgage debt is already getting large enough to chill some economists. One authority reports that an increase of $7.5 billion in outstanding mortgages on homes is expected this year. Mortgage money is abundant, terms are long, interest rates are low under government guarantees. What with higher prices on homes, the direction of this area of installment debt obviously is up.

Builders and bankers both seem to feel the housing market and its credit structure are safe enough as long as they can keep new homes under $10,000. That's what the public wants to pay, and apparently is able to carry.

HOUSEWARES SUPERMARKET CUTS OPERATING COSTS

A housewares store arranged on supermarket principles has been opened in New York's giant Stuyvesant Town housing development. There are no salesclerks. Each item is price-marked, and wherever possible, prepackaged. Two cashiers check sales at the exit, thus eliminating the registers as well as the clerks at each counter, and keeping operating costs at a minimum.

HAT TRADE JOINS OUTCRY AGAINST IMPORTS

Add hat makers to the growing contingent of U. S. producers complaining that increasing imports are seriously damaging their market. Imports of felt bodies have increased from about 7 per cent of total domestic distribution in 1948 to almost 18 per cent in 1949, the hat makers are telling congressmen.

RAYON CAPTURES MARKET FROM COTTON, WOOL

New developments in its handling are giving rayon an increasing share of the apparel and home furnishings markets. Rayon is already pushing wool out of the summer suit and slacks market (both men's and women's), is getting into the rug business and now is crowding the other fibers out of other clothing uses. New blends of rayon and cotton produce lustrous corduroys for both women's dresses and men's sportswear. The trade reports the new item is moving fast. A new type of rayon flannel with a deep nap is also being promoted to replace currently high-priced wool flannel.

CHECK LIST OF JUNE PROMOTIONAL CAMPAIGNS

Check this list of outstanding promotions for June for your possible tieups: June 5-12, National Home Laundry Week; 12-16, National Luggage and Leather Goods Week; 18, Father's Day; 19-24, Swim for Health Week. And, of course, the whole month is "Dairy Month" and "Ice Cream Festival" as supplies of milk and milk products hit their yearly peak.

NEW AND HOT

CONCENTRATE: An improved bottled lemon concentrate claimed to stand up under storage for long periods is being marketed (by Lemon Juice Co., 227 W. 64th St., New York).

STORAGE BAG: A jumbo clothes storage bag with refillable vaporizer holds 14-16 garments. (It's made by Jayhaw Manufacturing Co., 286 Fifth Ave., New York).

INSULATION: New batts with aluminum foil wrappings are claimed to combine efficiency of mineral wool with the waterproof protection of the foil. (They're made by Sealite Insulation Manufacturing Corp., Waukegan, Wis.).

FARM PRICE SUPPORTS LOSING FAVOR

The policy of high-level supports under perishable farm crops is losing some favor as the result of what happened in the hog market this year. The Department of Agriculture last Spring announced it wouldn't be able to support pork because of lack of funds. Rather than the tumble expected after the announcement, hog prices have been going up. Now both agricultural administrators and legislators are inclined to quit buying up other perishable commodities such as eggs, poultry and even potatoes.

But the real test of non-support will come this Fall, when marketing of hogs will be heavy. If the market cracks badly, Washington may have to take some action to prevent bankruptcy among the smaller farmers.

LABEL TAPE: A new smudge-proof labelling tape is made of two sheets of acetate tape with a special carbon material sealed between so identification cannot be rubbed off, according to the maker, (Labelon Tape Co., 100 Anderson Ave., Rochester, N. Y.).

DESK: A new small all-purpose utility desk for homes, offices and stores has been developed by Orma-Metal Products Co., St. Louis. It lists at $39.95 and is made of steel electrically welded for rigid construction.

Hal Boyle's Column

New York —(AP)— Film Star Larry Parks says there "should be a law to make actors live sensibly —for their own good."

"It's almost an industry-wide practice now to encourage an actor to live over his head and beyond his means," he said.

"There is always pressure to buy a bigger house—to do this, to do that."

"But if he plays the game that way the actor finds he is never really economically stable. He can't afford to turn down a bad picture, because he is always in need of money."

"The only way he can beat the game is not to play it."

Larry, who just finished "That Bedside Manner" for Columbia Pictures, passed through here on the way to a four-week stage tour of Great Britain with his wife, Betty Garrett, the musical comedy star.

"When we get back we're going to do a picture together on our own," he said. "It'll be a three-partner enterprise — Larry, Betty and their lawyer, Lou Mandel."

"If the picture isn't any good, at least we won't be able to blame anyone else," said Parks. "When you're using your own money, you have to do as well as you can. If you lose it, you're dead on the first one."

Larry and his wife saved a nestegg for their venture by living as simply as possible.

"We don't have the drain of keeping up a $10,000 home," he said. "We probably have the smallest house in Hollywood. We can turn the key in the lock when we leave, and it won't cost us more than $32 a month while we're away—including taxes."

You just have to decide what kind of life you want," remarked Betty, who shares her husband's views.

Larry has had a wry interest in the financial rewards of acting ever since his first movie role. It was a biblical picture. Larry got $250 a day for playing a Roman soldier—and then learned that a camel on the set was getting $50 a day for playing a camel.

Parks, who has appeared in 40 pictures in 9 years, served a rough apprenticeship in 28 B-gradeers before catching the public eye in "The Jolson Story."

His years of struggling for recognition have made Parks, as he amiably says himself, "kind of hipped on the subject of security for actors."

He gave these figures:

"There are 7,500 members of the Screen Actors Guild, and they average less than $2,000 a year."

"Ninety per cent of the people who come out to Hollywood under contract are gone within a year. And most of these people have had some kind of background in their business. Isn't that a frightening statistic?"

"I don't know how to avoid this dreadfully high mortality rate. I really don't. But actors ought to know what they are up against and plan their futures accordingly. They are lucky."

Otherwise, "big names" that come to some in Hollywood are just fools' gold.

Larry still has three years to go on his picture-a-year contract with Columbia. But he and Betty are gambling for real security as a husband-and-wife team under their own setup.

"It is very difficult to have a happy life if you're working apart," Larry said. "So we've decided, come hell or high water, we're going to work together."

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON — The pastor's parakeets and "Willie," his one cockatoo, all of whom hail from Waco, Tex., were on their best behavior—barring a cheap out of any one of them. This set me at ease at once when I entered the sunny office of Dr. Warren Hastings at the back of the National City Christian Church. The pastor's feathered associates, I'll have you know, are psychiatrists. The fact that they remained calm meant they thought I was calm. Dr. Hastings told me.

"By sound and action from their cage the little parrots pass the word to me about the state of mind of my visitors," he told me. "Once a lady whose boy friend had been putting off marriage came to me. Despite her apparent calmness, the birds, sensing the inner turmoil, started a terrific chirping. Out came the problem. In any kind of a group, if there's tension, they reflect it—and they reflect sorrow. If the sorrow is expressed loudly, they fly back and forth."

Dr. Hastings tells about a young daughter, undecided which of two divorced parents to live with, who was brought to him. He left the girl alone with the mother. "You just knew," he said, "that the mother was 'brow-beating' the child. When she left the birds started screaming. 'Listen to the birds.' I told my secretaries, they know. Then the father went in to talk to the daughter. The parrots chirped happily. They were calm, seemed satisfied with the way the father and girl got along. The girl went to stay with the father."

"They even like your hat—they don't usually go for red, bright as that," Dr. Hastings said, pointing to my bonnet. "Though I don't know what they'd do if a little boy was wearing it. They'd probably raise an awful racket." Dr. Hastings doesn't know where his birds—he has about six of them—one a vivid yellow "and a devil"—get their insight to human nature. He thinks maybe "either waves," but he won't vouch for this.

Kidnapping Chase A Hoax, Admits Distraught Wife

Oklahoma City, May 22—(AP)—The distraught young wife of a vice squad officer admitted today the bizarre 21-hour kidnapping chase she led police yesterday was spurred by her own imagination.

Mrs. Jo Alice Raper, 23 abruptly halted a frantic police hunt when she called her husband, C. V. Raper from a suburban filling station and asked him to come get her.

But detective Chief Dwight Brown said officers still hadn't found all the pieces to the puzzling case.

Brown said Raper and his fellow officers feared Mrs. Raper had been overpowered by kidnapers, taken nude from her bedroom and held captive as avenge on her husband. Raper is assigned to the police gambling detail.

Brown reported Raper told police officers he received threatening telephone calls last week and a note in his mail box which said in part:

"Stay out of my business or that woman will have to take your punishment."

However, after long questioning, Brown said, Mrs. Raper broke down and admitted the whole affair was a "figment of my imagination."

The husband sounded the kidnapping alarm at 2 a. m. yesterday when he came home from duty. His wife was gone and there was evidence of a struggle.

He said her bedroom was in disorder. Her tattered night gown lay on the floor. A crudely scrawled note was pinned to a linen closet door saying:

"How do you like this Mr. Raper. Is afraid?"

Raper said outside the house he found a 12-foot ladder leaning against a second window where the screen was cut.

With that to go on, police chief L. J. Hill ordered an all-out manhunt.

In the afternoon Raper received a telephone call at home. He said he heard his wife scream and then the caller hung up before he could have the call traced.

He said he got two calls early Sunday night. In one a man's voice said Mrs. Raper would be released in front of her home. The other was a woman, saying his wife would be freed in a residential area several miles across town.

Detective chief Brown said Mrs. Raper finally called from a filling station in that residential area.

At first Mrs. Raper told Brown she was abducted by two men—43 and 20 years old. She forced their way into her bedroom and attempted to carry her away in the nude. She told a story of being held captive all day guarded by a woman.

Later Brown told Mrs. Raper admitted she left home of her own accord and was not kidnapped.

Repeats Denial Of Fishing Trip

Raleigh, N. C., May 22—(P)—John Marshall, Governor Scott's private secretary, says those interested in his movements during a vacation trip last week should seek particulars at the campaign headquarters of senatorial candidate Willis Smith.

Marshall said this last night in taking cognizance of reports that private detectives trailed him on his vacation journeys.

At the same time Marshall reiterated his denial of a story written last Friday by Lynn Nisbet correspondent for afternoon newspapers. Nisbet said in his story that Marshall and Carl Williamson, former state ABC board chairman, had solicited campaign contributions from liquor distillers for Senator Frank Graham's campaign fund.

Nisbet said Saturday Marshall's denial "surprised several people who had checked upon the facts." He added that "I have information on the time of calls made to two distillers by Marshall and Williamson."

Williamson also denied approaching any distillers for campaign funds.

Charles P. Green, Smith's campaign manager, was asked Friday night if anyone in the headquarters had a detective trail Marshall, and he replied:

"Not that I know of."

"SOAK THE POOR!"

Willis Smith, on March 17, 1949, stood before a legislative committee and urged that it be made the law of North Carolina that a retail merchant could not sell any of his merchandise for less than cost plus EIGHT PERCENT PROFIT.

The proposal was branded as "UNFAIR, UNJUST AND UNDEMOCRATIC" by Representative R. Lee Whitmire of Henderson County.

"A bill DESIGNED TO SOAK THE POOR" was the comment of Representative Robert Gantt of Durham County from the floor of the House.

Witnesses opposing Mr. Smith's proposal told the committee that the scheme "would force price increases and send up the cost of living!"

Make up your mind, Mr. Smith!

Was your heart in it in 1949 when you tried to send up the cost of living with a bill labelled as UNFAIR, UNJUST and UNDEMOCRATIC by legislators who killed your SOAK THE POOR proposal?

Mine Death Toll Is Now Set At 71

Gelsenkirchen, Germany, May 22 —(AP)—The death toll from Saturday's coal mine explosion rose to 71 today as eight more victims died during the night.

Hospital authorities said two or three of the remaining 22 injured miners are not expected to live.

City officials made plans today for mass funeral services for victims of the underground blast.

Investigators blamed the blast in the Dahlbusch mine on an accumulation of gas known as firedamp.

Gay festivities planned to mark the 500th anniversary of this Ruhr city's founding were called off as grieving residents went into mourning for the victims.

Former Greenville Man Will Retire Soon After 40 Year Tobacco Career

(Winston-Salem Journal-Sentinel) By PAX DAVIS

Harry White is a soft-spoken man who has never put any more distance between himself and tobacco than the length of the one-inch cigarette which he constantly chews but never lights.

So close has been that relationship, as a matter of reportorial fact, that Mr. White is a little at a loss for words when it comes to discussing the weed which has made the Piedmont.

Modesty being another of his characteristics, it is not surprising that one of Winston-Salem's top tobacco men isn't overly discursive when it comes to his own achievements in making the Twin City a world tobacco capital.

But Mr. White will be retiring at the end of this month as general leaf supervisor of Brown and Williamson Tobacco Corporation. And now, between hours spent thinking over the sea-side home he'll occupy at Beaufort—and reminiscing about the long years which have preceded this well-earned rest—he finds time to talk over a lifetime of tobacco work.

Story Begins in 1911

The story goes way back. Back, in fact, to 1911, when after a year at Pennsylvania State College, he got his first job in a factory.

"It really started before that," he says, "because when I was a boy in Greenville, the tobacco market was the only thing there was. My father raised some of the first tobacco ever grown in Pitt County, and I can remember tobacco back to the days when I was a boy."

As for 1911 and the first job: "I started in at Greenville as a foreman in the factory of the British-American Tobacco Company, right after the dissolution of the tobacco companies in July."

"I finished that season at Greenville, and then in February of 1912, I went to Petersburg, Va., and worked at David Dunlop, Inc. They were tobacco plug manufacturers and I worked in their leaf department."

Moved to Petersburg

By the Fall of 1913, he had moved over to the Petersburg plant of British-American—again in the leaf department—and in 1914, he went back to Dunlop, where he remained for the next five years.

In 1919 he bought tobacco in Petersburg for the Export Leaf Tobacco Company and, in 1921, moved over to the Imperial Tobacco Company of Canada.

"We worked in the leaf-growing section in the winter," he said, "and in Montreal during the summer. I helped out with growing and processing tobacco. It's a big thing there now, but it was a small outfit then."

"I stayed in Canada until the Spring of 1924, when I made a trip for British-American, spending some time in Caracas, Venezuela, and in the growing section of that country."

That trip to Venezuela produced another of those stories which some men keep hidden until it suddenly emerges as one of life's highspots. While visiting the growing section of Venezuela, Mr. White recalls.

"We got from Caracas to Valencia on a pretty good road. But to get to one of the growing stations, we had to go up into the Andes. Had 35 miles to go."

"We left Valencia right after lunch and got to where we were going just at dark that night in a Ford touring car. We carried our own gasoline in the back seat—there wasn't any available after we left the city—and the road was so rough, having been used for 150 years by mule carts, that the front springs wore out and fell out of the car."

Native Children Curious

"We slept in the Hotel Centrale that night on Army cots, no cover, a dirt floor. There were no doors on the inside, and we used one Deico light to serve three rooms. One more thing: we were a real curiosity to the native children. They'd never seen an American before."

The results of that trip paid off. Mr. White and his traveling companions were touring to help native tobacco-growers improve their growing methods, including cultivation and curing. The natives were still at the time—using oxen and plow to till their fields.

From Venezuela—on that same trip—Mr. White went to Panama, and then on to Costa Rica, where they traveled into the tobacco-growing sections on horseback.

Tobacco Growing Crude

"We found the cultivation of tobacco very crude. Through an interpreter, I asked a farmer how often they harvested their crop. He told me whenever they needed some money. Things have changed since then, and their cultivation has been greatly improved."

Other stops on the same trip were made at Christobel, Panama, Kingston, Jamaica—all on the same type of mission. Mr. White returned to New York in the latter part of July, 1924. Subsequently, he spent 1924, 1925, and the early part of 1926 buying tobacco for British-American in Virginia and South Carolina.

In August of 1926, a special mission took him to Mexico City, where he was instrumental in growing the first flue-cured tobacco ever raised in Mexico. In June of 1927, he returned by boat to New York. He came to Winston-Salem in July, and has been here ever since—first as assistant plant manager for Brown and Williamson and, two years later, as branch manager.

In March, 1948, he was promoted to General Leaf Supervisor, and C. M. Frost took over his old position as manager of the local branch.

Local civic activities have found him a willing participant, and the names of organizations and drives which he has headed in his 23 years here runs into a long list.

Among them, however, Mr. White recalls his presidency of the Chamber of Commerce for two years, his long-time membership on the Court of Honor of the Boy Scouts' Old Hickory Council, a directorship of the YMCA, and his chairmanship of the Board of Stewards of Centenary Methodist Church.

Others recall that he was the originator of the advertising which has become a promotional boon for the local tobacco market, and that he was one of the founders of the first Negro Juvenile Detention Home in North Carolina, an institution brought here three years ago by the child committee of the local Kiwanis Club, of which Mr. White has been an active member.

SMOKY JOE

By W. F. BRAGG

Chapter 7
Jo stood watching Connie. He was baffled and angry. Then he felt a light hand on his shoulder and he heard a low musical laugh. "Cowboy," said Nevada Kate, "I know just how you feel. I'll buy you a drink."

"Thanks," he answered stiffly, "but save it for another time. I've got to go and feed my pony."

He turned and swung down the street, hearing Kate's light and mocking laugh above the ring of his goose-neck spurs on the rough planks. He was passing a shack when a rich appetizing odor of coffee and sizzling steams reminded him that he had tasted nothing but cold biscuits and warmed-over java since the day before.

He turned into the place and took a seat at the half-filled counter. Customers had reached or finished the pie course and hurried on about their boom town affairs. A black-haired girl put water and eating utensils in front of Joe and began a monotonous chant of the bill of fare.

"Steak and spuds," said Joe. Then he glanced up at the girl, and chided, "Jane! What you doin' down here?"

The waitress choked on her chant. "Joe!" she exclaimed. "When did you hit town?"

"They were old friends, for Jane's father had operated a small foothill ranch not far distant from Stormy Munro's place."

"Got back couple days ago," said Joe. Then he grinned. "Met Monty McDevitt up near the canyon today." For Monty was reputed to be Jane Morgan's sweetheart.

The girl didn't respond to his smile. Her dark blue eyes narrowed. "What's that to me?" she went on coldly. "What are you eating?"

"Told you once. Steak and spuds." Then Joe frowned and thrust out his jaw. "Hey," he snapped, "what's the matter with you and Monty?"

"Nothing's the matter with me. It's Monty. Why do you think I'm down here slinging hash?"

"Maybe boom town wages. To help out your dad."

Her eyes suddenly filled with tears. She reached for the hem of her gingham apron. Joe stood up and leaned across the table, patting her on the shoulder. "Hey," he said, bewildered, "What's come over you, Jane? Breaking down when I speak of your dad."

"Haven't you heard?"

"What? No, I've been busy with other things."

"Dad's dead. Dry gulched! Two months ago. And we think—Mother and I—that he was ambushed by some of those murderous McDevitts from Blizard Basin. Shot through the back—"

"Old Silvertip Mormon murdered! Shot through the back!"

"After Dad checked in," she told him, "we found we were 'way short of cattle. We had to sell off to settle the estate. Nothing left then but to bury our dad. So I brought Mother to town. I've always been a good cook. So I opened up this joint. She turned toward the kitchen in the rear calling over her shoulder, 'I'll put your steak on the fire.'"

The few women on the ranches along upper Antelope were all famous cooks. Jane Morgan might be grieving over her murdered father, but she still possessed a light touch with a skillet. And she put enough coffee in the pot before she boiled the water. Joe ate, let out his belt, then pushed back from the counter.

"I'm about dead for sleep," he told her. "See you at supper time, Jane. Maybe you'll feel like telling me more."

She answered unsmilingly, "Joe you made a mistake in coming home. Get out while you are still alive."

"What do you mean?"

"It's poison range now, Joe. This Antelope country. The man in black—"

He whirled, cried out, "Jane—what you talking about?"

The man in black—the killer. Joe. I think he killed my father! With a shotgun!" Her voice had grown tense, desperate. She looked around while she talked to Joe, as though fearing she might be overheard. But they were all alone in the room.

Joe thought suddenly of the long spring blade knife he was carrying in his pocket, the deadly tool that a man dressed in black had hoped to use in a treacherous night attack. He had showed it to Jane, even pressing the button in the haft to release the blade. But she shook her head and said she had never before seen such a knife. He put it away finally.

"You're afraid of this man in black," he said. "Yet you also blame the McDevitts for waylaying your father. I don't quite get the drift."

"Everybody has been quarrelling over land and water rights since this ditch company was located. All they think about is big money. Dad fought with the McDevitts over some land he claimed in the foothills east of the creek."

"But the man in black. Where

"CAN'T, MA! I GOTTA GET MY BOX TOP IN THE MAILS RIGHT AWAY OR I'LL MISS THAT PREMIUM!"

"The man in black," Rogan said easily, "is reputed to be the young horse thief you helped to escape. Monty McDevitt!"

Jane Morgan came around an end of the counter and faced Joe, blazing eyes. "You helped Monty McDevitt to get away?"

"Pack of lies," Joe answered coldly. "I just kept Monty from being a seat at the half-filled counter. Customers had reached or finished the pie course and hurried on about their boom town affairs. A black-haired girl put water and eating utensils in front of Joe and began a monotonous chant of the bill of fare."

"You're pretty free with your talk about lies," Pack drawled. "Well," said Joe, "you know plenty of ways to stop free talk."

Federal Agency Said Involved In 'Fantastic Deal'

Washington, May 23.—(AP)—Rep. Crawford (R-Mich) accused the agriculture department today of swapping $2,800,000 worth of cotton for $4,600,000 worth of Communist-grown soybeans when it already had $2,800,000 in surplus soybeans on hand.

He said this "fantastic deal" netted a firm of New York brokers an estimated profit of over $2,700,000, and added in a statement:

"In the near future I hope to make recommendations not only as to a formal investigation but as to the action necessary to correct this foul-smelling mess."

Crawford identified the New York firm as the World Commerce Corp., and said its "officers and financial backers have been for the most part—and still are—closely and intimately associated with the administration and its policy makers."

The Michigan lawmaker said that under terms of the deal the agriculture department's commodity Credit Corp. arranged to trade 45,000 bales of cotton to the brokers for 60,000 tons of Manchurian soybeans needed by the U. S. Armed Forces in Japan.

"The 45,000 bales of cotton were valued on the New Orleans cash market on May 11 at $7,301,250," Crawford said. "The actual cost to the Commodity Credit Corporation is believed to be in excess of $7,603,000, which does not include storage or handling costs."

He said the market value of the soy beans on May 11 would have been $5,800,000, but added that the Communists were reported to be getting about $4,000,000 for them. That he said, "would provide a profit of over $2,700,000 for the brokers."

Crawford said the department decided not to buy soybeans on the U. S. market because the price was too high.

He quoted government reports as saying that U. S. stocks of soybeans were 119,663,000 bushels on April 1 compared with 115,052,000 bushels last year and 88,462,000 the year before. Furthermore, he added, a record crop is in prospect for next year.

Demonstration Set In Newest Septic Tanks

A demonstration of newest type septic tank construction will be held tomorrow morning on the farm of Dave Haddock in the Galloway Crossroads community at 9:30.

Sponsored by the Veterans Farm Training program at the Grimesland school, the demonstration is being underwritten by the State Health Department and individual departments of Pitt, Hyde, Washington, Beaufort, Tyrrell and Martin Counties. All rural persons are urged to attend.

Pitt County has been chosen as one of five areas throughout the state for such a demonstration. As outlined by the local health department, the plan calls for a community to buy a wooden form from which concrete septic tanks can be poured by any rural family wanting one.

The demonstration tomorrow will also include a feasible program of individual sewage disposal on farms. The Portland Cement Company, manufacturer of ready-mixed cement, is also supporting the project throughout the state.

Mrs. Ellen Knauff (left), German-born war bride, leaves New York's International Airport after her deportation was halted just 20 minutes before she was to have boarded a plane for Germany. Beside her is a woman official of the U. S. Immigration Service. The order halting deportation was issued by Justice Jackson of the U. S. Supreme Court. It allows her to remain in this country pending the outcome of her appeal to the Supreme Court. Mrs. Knauff, wife of a former American soldier, has been held on Ellis Island since 1948. The lower house of Congress has passed a bill to allow her to enter the United States. It is now pending in the senate. (AP Wirephoto).

Gertrude "Gorgeous Gussie" Moran hasn't quite opened her eyes after a kiss of greeting from Pat DeCicco at New York's LaGuardia Airport Thursday. The tennis star, who gained fame with her lace panties at Wimbledon, phoned Pat to meet her at the airport just after she arrived from London. DeCicco, former husband of Gloria Vanderbilt, soon drove up in his car with a chauffeur. He leaped out and threw his arms around Gussie. Pat said they are not engaged. (AP Wirephoto).

No estimate of the damage done to the building was made by the manager or the owner.

presents one of the major tragedies of history? The dispute would have to be weighed by competent investigators. Who would do this job?

"Why, the United Nations, of course," somebody replies.

That is a natural reaction, until attention is called to the fact that the charter of the U. N., provides that the organization cannot deal with German and Japanese affairs until after peace treaties are signed. Those treaties still remain in abeyance.

However, there is some speculation among observers whether this question of prisoners may be raised in the fall meeting of the U. N. assembly. That body is scheduled to consider charges of violation of human rights against Bulgaria, and Romania, and somebody may inject the question of German and Japanese prisoners in the Soviet Union.

Such a development would be no novelty for Russia. She was expelled by the League of Nations in 1939 for her invasion of Finland.

The tariff on the imported stuff is 10 1-2 cents a barrel. The imported residual oil for homes and plants can be sold for about $2 a barrel. About four such barrels ($8) equal about one ton of coal which is sold for a little more. And American residual oil has to compete with this price, too.

Some foes of the imported oil want this government to raise the tariff on it, thus forcing up the price and making it less a competitor for American oil and coal.

The importers argue that imports are necessary to fill needs here, that
