

Results Of Black Shank In Tobacco Field

Tobacco, like people, can be cut down with disease if not immunized before it strikes. Here are shown two tobacco stalks in the foreground that have been attacked by black shank while those surrounding in the background are perfectly normal and healthy. Photo was taken on the farm of C. M. Stokes in the Renston community yesterday. Stokes, who is growing 18 acres this year, has one tract in which a section 50 by 100 feet was attacked by the disease, killing almost all the plants therein and endangering the surrounding ones. About the only remedy for black shank is to plant resistant varieties in the bed prior to setting out. (Staff photo by John Spinks, Jr.)

More Espionage Arrests Loom As Network Pattern Shapes Up

Washington, June 17—(AP)—With three American citizens under arrest, additional pieces are falling into place in the jig-saw pattern of Soviet wartime spying in the United States. By all indications, further arrests are in the offing, but when and where they will come, no one will say. However, it is known that scores of FBI agents have spent many months putting together bits of information from all sorts of sources in an effort to complete the picture. What was perhaps the key piece of the puzzle fell into place with the arrest in London last February of Dr. Klaus Fuchs, a top British atomic scientist. Detained by British intelligence on information originally developed by the FBI, Fuchs admitted giving the Russians atom secrets and was set to prison for 14 years. After top G-Men had interviewed Fuchs in prison last month, the Bureau closed in on Harry Gold, 39-year-old Philadelphia chemist, who had long been under FBI watch. Gold admitted acting as a courier between Fuchs and Soviet agents in this country during the war. With the pattern taking shape, the FBI this week picked up Alfred Dean Slack, 44, chemist employed by a paint manufacturing concern at Syracuse, N.Y., and David Greenglass, 28, former U.S. Army sergeant, of New York City. Each of the three Americans is charged with wartime espionage, which carries a possible death penalty. Each is held on $100,000 bond. With these arrests, the Justice Department dropped the previous mystery about the "John Doe, alias John" and the "Richard Roe, alias Sam" who were indicted for espionage conspiracy along with Gold by a Brooklyn grand jury last week. The department said "John Doe" was Anatoli Antonovich Yakovlev, a vice consul in the Soviet consulate in New York City until December, 1946, when he returned home, and that "Richard Roe" was Semen M. Semenov, employed by the Amtorg Trading Corporation, Russia's commercial agency in the United States.

Group Of Citizens Plan To Aid Stricken Family

A committee of citizens of the Forbes, Mrs. Gladys Forbes and House station community of Pitt County have banded together in an effort to secure clothing and household items for a young family whose entire belongings were destroyed when their house and outbuildings burned Monday morning. The tragedy struck at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Tripp of Greenville, Rte. 4, where they lived with their three daughters, ages six, three and two years old. The house caught fire about 10 o'clock Monday morning from an oil stove. The fire spread through the house and also to two of the outbuildings, destroying all the contents of the buildings. "I have lost my home and everything I had by fire," Tripp stated in a note to his friends. "Two of my outbuildings burned, all my furniture, clothing and everything else that I had was lost. If you can, please help me some; it will be greatly appreciated. "I had no insurance." People of the House station community, where Tripp lived, formed a committee composed of L. D. Buck, Lonnie Buck, J. J. Williams, Billy

Philadelphia, June 17—(AP)—Thirty nine years ago the Philadelphia General Hospital mailed out a bill for $362. The 1911 ledger was closed yesterday. In came a check for $362 and a note that said: "Cast thy bread upon the running waters, for after a long time thou shalt find it again."

Pioneers Still Exist

A Few Hours Drive From The Skyscrapers Of New York Brings One To A Wilderness Where Homesteading Is Going Forward; Two Families The Columnist Knows
By DEWITT MACKENZIE
It is an amazing thing, but true that a few hours drive by auto from the skyscrapers of New York will bring one to endless forests where bear, moose, deer, wildcats and other animals abound and it's easy to get hopelessly lost unless you know the ways of the woods. I've just had another experience of this strange transformation, having made my annual pilgrimage to the fishing grounds of Maine along the Canadian border. It's a wonderful adventure and one at which I never cease to marvel, for if you use your imagination as a magic carpet you can transport yourself back to the pioneering days of our forefathers. This year I visited two log-cabin camps for fishing and hunting, and in both of them "homesteading" was going forward. For these camps not only serve as business enterprises but during most of the year they are the homes of their proprietors. One of these was Jack Williams "Pine Lodge" on Grand Lake, and the other was Pete Spencer's "Greenland Cove Camp" on neighboring East Grand Lake. Both these men have spent their lives in Maine's forests and on her lakes and streams. There's nothing they don't know about that great outdoors. I first met Pete years ago when he was guide in a fishing camp on Moosehead Lake. He used to entertain my young son and me by shooting pebbles out of the air with a .22 caliber rifle as we threw them up. He never missed. Pete also is adept at throwing knives and hatchets at targets, and gives exhibitions every winter at various sports shows. One stunt is to lie on his back hold a rifle barrel between two toes of one foot while he pulls the trigger with the other foot and shoots flying disks out of the air. From this he gets the name "Barefoot Pete." Pete and his wife Betty, who also is a dead shot as well as a grand cook, started from scratch in the shore of the lake. Pete himself cut and peeled the logs which he is using to erect cabins with his own hands. It is pioneering of the American colonial type in many respects. But Pete is a Jack-of-all-trades and in an amazingly short time has been able to create a camp and equip it with both necessities and comforts. Jack Williams' "Pine Lodge" camp

Scott Studying SBI Report On Prison Director

Moore To See Report And Confer With Superior Before Action Taken

Raleigh, June 13—(AP)—Governor Scott today studied an SBI report on charges against Prison Director J. B. Moore. The Governor was presented the report at a conference with SBI Director Walter Anderson and Dr. Henry W. Jordan, chairman of the State Highway Commission and Moore's immediate superior. Following the conference, the Governor announced that Moore had requested an opportunity to see the report and to confer with Anderson before any action was taken. Moore's request is being granted, the Governor said. Dr. Jordan said that he and the Governor thought that Moore's request "was reasonable" since Moore hadn't seen all the charges and "we thought he ought to be given that chance." "Neither the Governor nor myself want to persecute anyone. On the other hand, we don't want to whitewash it," Jordan added. The SBI was asked several days ago to investigate allegations that Moore had used state materials and prisoner labor in building a garage-apartment at his home here. Moore has denied that any state materials were used for the work. He added that if any prisoners other than a trustee assigned to his home regularly did any work on the garage-apartment it was "purely voluntary and of short duration." Jordan said the SBI report would not be made public until after Moore has had a chance to see it and to confer with Anderson.

Farmville Jaycees Plan Own Census

Seek To Satisfy Doubts As To Recent Enumeration

Farmville, like many an enviable-looking suburb at its best, is possibly one of the reasons why the persons in the car were not injured, the patrolman said. No charges were brought against the driver. The Chamber of Commerce will be the proposed counting, Rouse said. Members of the preliminary committee are Rouse, John T. Walston and Fred Moore, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. EVIDENCE OF PROGRESS Princeton, Ill., June 17—(AP)—Jura county hasn't exactly stood still during the last 10 years. The population in 1940 was 37,600. The 1950 census, just announced, is 37,601. Surviving are his wife; a son, Col. George Henry Pittman, Jr., U. S. Army, now stationed at Westover Field, Mass.; a daughter, Mrs. John Tyler of Charlotte; three grandchildren; two sisters, Mrs. L. T. Pierce and Mrs. Ethel Thornton, both of Farmville; and a brother, Dr. E. E. Pittman of Oak City.

Book Trio For Robbing German Student At UNC

Raleigh, N. C., June 17—(AP)—Police today booked three Youngsville men in connection with the robbery here May 19 of a former Luftwaffe pilot who is now a student at the University of North Carolina. Detective Captain R. E. Goodwin said larceny charges were filed against Willard Kinton, 23, Thomas Hart, 33 and Ollie Thomas Evans, 17. They are being held in lieu of $100 bonds each. Goodwin said the men, arrested last night, have admitted befriending student enrolled in the Department of Regional Planning at Carolina, by offering him a ride and later robbing him of over $100, clothing, a brief case and money pouch.

Car Turned Over After Brakes Failed On Curve

After a period of several weeks in which there were no accidents reported in Pitt county, two automobile accidents occurred in the Greenville area last night and today. The above picture shows a car which was wrecked this morning around 6 o'clock near Chiood. The car was operated by Andrew Hunter, Negro, of 304 Reid Street, Greenville, who was not injured in the accident. Hunter told patrolmen that he left the road when the brakes of his car gave out as he rounded a curve. No charges were brought against the driver. (Reflector staff photo by Roy Hardee).

Car Is Wrecked As Brakes Failed

Turned Over, Landing On Wheels; Four Are Unhurt

A wreck this morning on the New Bern highway resulted when the brakes on a man's car failed as he rounded a curve, according to information given to Patrolman Paul C. Whitley. Whitley said a car operated by Andrew Hunter, colored, of 304 Reid Street, Greenville, left a curve on the road near Chiood about six o'clock this morning when the driver said his brakes failed and he took to the side of the highway and turned over. Hunter and three passengers in the car with him were shaken up but were not believed to be injured. Whitley said the 1940 model Buick, was landed on its four wheels, possibly one of the reasons why the persons in the car were not injured, the patrolman said. No charges were brought against the driver.

Pants Burglar Is Sentenced: Era Of Peace Looms

Morristown, Pa., June 17—(AP)—Lower Merion, Pa., men can hang up their pants at night without fear of finding empty pockets in the morning. The "pants burglar" is on an enforced vacation. Wilmer Johnson of Philadelphia was sentenced to four to ten years in the eastern state penitentiary yesterday by George C. Corson of the Montgomery county court. Johnson was known as the "pants burglar" because he took money from the trousers of sleeping men. Judge Corson told Johnson, "there will be some years of peace in lower Merion while you are in the penitentiary."

Find Body Of Baby In A Locker

Raleigh, N.C., June 17—(AP)—A premature white baby whose body was found in a locker at the bus station here was examined at Rex Hospital today. Coroner I. M. Cheek said the examination was being made to determine whether there was any foul play. The coroner added that the human embryo was apparently about six months old.

Babson: On Schools And Business

Babson Park, Mass., June 16—(AP)—"The public needs, then why not use the power of prayer in its distribution? This may sound strange; but isn't it a fair question?" Consider A Drug Chain I have in mind a small chain of some sixty well located drug stores. The president of the company is an honest, hard working man who knows the drug business from A to Z. He can control the buying which is very very important—both as to goods selected and the prices paid. But otherwise he is largely dependent upon the present—more or less indifferent character, energy and desires for service of these sixty stores. Hence, think what would happen if these present store managers—most of whom now are interested only in their monthly pay—should gradually be substituted by bright and ambitious graduates of Theological Colleges. These would be young men taught to like and help people and to get results through prayer—truly anxious to aid everyone who would come into the stores. Surely the reputation of

Sharp Repercussion To Basing Point Bill Veto

Quota Topped In Cancer Campaign

County Chairman Reports $4,500 Quota Now Surpassed

Pitt County's Cancer Crusade this week gained the distinction of being the first funds drive of 1950 to reach its requested quota. County campaign chairman James Jenkins reported yesterday the $4,500 quota has been reached and surpassed by $50. Jenkins expressed enthusiasm when he praised the work of all the towns and county areas which contributed funds enough to enable the Cancer Society to reach its quota for the first time in two years. Last year only $3,800 of $4,500 was contributed. Jenkins wished to thank all contributing persons, organizations and business firms for their help in reaching the top. "I wish to thank all those who had a hand in reaching the 1950 goal. It was due largely to the generosity of the rank and file of citizens throughout the county. The response from persons of smaller means was very gratifying whereas the response from wealthy persons was rather disappointing in many cases," he stated. The county chairman particularly wished to thank workers in the towns of Ayden, Winterville, Bethel, Beaver Dam, Belvoir and Greenville for their "wonderful cooperation" in reaching their individual quotas. He was of the opinion that these towns more than made up for the lack of funds in the county's outlying areas. Meanwhile, Mrs. Charles W. Reynolds, Society Commander, reminded the people that although the 1950 drive for funds was a success and is now over, the work of medical treatment and cancer education goes on all year round. "A portion of the funds collected this year," she said, "will be used for the treatment of the county's indigent persons. That treatment will be both medical and clinical and cancer funds will be matched by Welfare Department funds."

Presidential Action May Echo During November Congressional Elections; Regarded As Setback For Pennsylvania Solon

Washington, June 17—(AP)—President Truman's veto of the hard-fought basing point bill set off sharp repercussions today which well may echo during the November congressional elections. The 1,600-word veto message Mr. Truman sent to Congress yesterday was viewed in some quarters as a sharp setback for assistant Senate Democratic Leader Myers of Pennsylvania and a pat on the back for two administration-minded southerners, Senators Long (D-La) and Hill (D-Ala). Myers, who wanted the bill approved, faces a tough fight for reelection in his highly-industrialized state. Long and Hill, also up for reelection, had opposed the bill, which would have allowed businessmen to absorb freight costs in quoting delivered prices on their products. The veto also was viewed as another victory for Senator Douglas (D-Ill.), who fought the bill as hard as he did the Kerr natural gas bill, which the President also vetoed. Douglas claimed both measures were "monopolistic."

Sailing Atlantic In A Small Boat

Hull, Eng., June 17—(AP)—Tom Eastwood, a grizzled, 71-year-old port pilot, nosed out of Hull today in a 26 foot sailboat for a single-handed trip across the Atlantic. "I expect to be at sea for about 90 days, but I've stacked in enough provisions to be on the high seas alone for at least 100 days," he said.

Dewey Decides He Will Not Run For Governor

Albany, N. Y., June 17—(AP)—Governor Dewey today said he would not be a candidate for reelection. He said he probably would enter private law practice when his term expires next December 31. Dewey said he was very tired after 20 years in public life but that there was nothing wrong with him that a first class long rest would not cure. Dewey's long-awaited decision apparently left the field clear for the nomination of 74-year-old Lt. Gov. Joe R. Hanley for governor at the state convention in Saratoga Springs September 6-7. He is regarded as far in the lead for the nomination.

CAA Hunts For Lost Aviatrix

Washington, June 17—(AP)—The Civil Aeronautics Administration said today a check is being made of airports and landing fields in Virginia to locate Marjorie Harrison, missing contestant in the "Powder Puff" Derby, a Montreal to West Palm Beach, Fla., air race. The CAA said the Erco Airport at Riverdale, Md., near Washington, reported that Miss Harrison left there at 5:30 p.m. Friday afternoon to continue her flight south.

Suggests John Peurifoy Appear For Questioning

Undersecretary Of State's Testimony In Amerasia Inquiry Proposed

Washington, June 17—(AP)—Senator Hickenlooper (R-Iowa) suggested today that the Senate committee looking into the 1945 Amerasia case call Deputy Undersecretary of State John E. Peurifoy for questioning. Hickenlooper made the suggestion as the inquiry group arranged to take testimony behind closed doors next Thursday from career Diplomat John S. Service, one of the six persons arrested in the secret documents episode five years ago. Service was cleared in the case and returned to duty in the State Department. The case involved the removal of hundreds of secret government documents found by the FBI in the offices of the now-defunct Amerasia magazine. Both Peurifoy and Service figure in a separate Amerasia controversy touched off by Senator McCarthy (R-Wis.) in a speech Thursday night. Speaking at Groton, Conn., the Wisconsin senator said Peurifoy had offered legal aid and loyalty clearance to Emmanuel S. Larsen, another of the six persons involved in the case, in return for testimony favorable to Service when Larsen appeared before the Senate investigators. Peurifoy and Larsen both denied that accusation. Peurifoy added that he had been informed McCarthy himself had indicated he would go easy on Larsen "if he were to testify concerning John Service in a way satisfactory to Senator McCarthy." Peurifoy said Larsen had told him that. Hickenlooper, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee investigating the Amerasia case, commented: "Certainly the committee ought to consider talking to Peurifoy to straighten out the matter."

Co-Op Will Build Business Office

Farmville, June 17—(AP)—The Pitt-Greene Membership corporation with offices in Farmville plans to construct a building sometime in the fall to handle the electrical business of the 2,500 cooperative members. The co-op, which has just moved into new quarters and is directing its own affairs, is negotiating for a lot on the edge of town on the Wilson highway. Gilbert Whitley, manager of the co-op, said today construction of the building would begin as soon as possible after buying the lot. Heretofore, the business had been handled by the Town of Farmville which purchased the power on a series contract from the REA facility. When it moved into its present rented quarters, the corporation began active control of its own distribution effective yesterday and will continue to do so when the new building is completed. No building costs of the new structure have been released as yet. The building will be of brick and will have ample grounds, Whitley said. Whitley came here recently to manage the co-op. He was formerly employed in Hertford by the Albemarle Electric Membership Corporation serving five counties with electric power.

Standards Of Quality

A Discussion Of Supreme Court Decisions And How They Are Written; Dean Of A Big Law School Indicates The Best Are Understood By Only A Rare Handful
By JAMES MARLOW
Washington, June 17—(AP)—This week I ran into the dean of a big American law school, and we talked about the Supreme Court. We started talking about a Washington Post editorial which criticized the court for "dumping" 18 opinions on the public in one day. That was June 8, the court's last day before it went on vacation. Too much for the public to digest in one day, the Post said. "Perhaps," the newspaper said, "it is of no concern to the court whether its output is properly communicated to the people. Yet we do not see how anybody in a Democratic land could take such an attitude." The Dean defended the court. He said he couldn't see how it could do any better. From there we discussed the writing ability of the nine justices. Some of them, I suggested, don't write very well, or at least don't write so clearly and simply that the general public can understand. Since, from time immemorial, lawyers have written in a language all their own, I asked the Dean if American law schools are doing anything about teaching their future lawyers to write more readable English. "Yes, indeed," the Dean said. "American law schools are very much aware of that and have been working at it for years." Everywhere, he said, law schools are stressing better writing among their students. This is often quite a task, he said, because Universities ship into the law schools too many graduates who can't write at all. I suggested that if lawyers would stop writing Latin words and use English words, which most people can understand, it would be helpful. The Dean objected to this. Latin words in law, he said, have a special meaning for lawyers and can't be discarded. Since I didn't know what standards the Dean had for good writing by lawyers, I asked him: Who among the nine Supreme Court Justices is the shining example of a good writer? He named his favorite. He said lawyers generally consider this one man's opinions positively brilliant. It so happens that a number of

THROUGH A GLASS... DARKLY

She's frightened. She's seeing the world for the first time through dark glasses.
It's no wonder you and I are frightened. Ever since we were old enough to reason, we have been seeing the world through dark glasses. It's just as Paul said:
"Now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face."
We spend our years wondering why things happen as they do... why hatred flourishes and love withers... why sorrow seems inevitable and joy so rare. Apparently, we were not meant to understand... not here!
Some truths God has revealed to us; these our Churches teach. Other truths God will not reveal until another day; to prepare us for that day our Churches strive.
Until at length we gain that complete vision, we are happiest and strongest when we live faithfully in the truth already revealed. Even with dark glasses a man can see as long as he walks toward the Light.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For the sake of his children's sakes. (2) For the sake of his community and nation. (3) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

40 Years Ago Today

THE DAILY REFLECTOR
June 17, 1910

Miss Alice Blow and Miss Althea Fulford left for Washington this morning.

Will Greenville ever have a park or place for out-door recreation? The kindness of the different merchants of the town who have signed an agreement to permit their clerks to "knock off" work at seven p. m. each week day, except Saturday, is being frustrated by the numerous lady shoppers who happen along so often just at closing time.

Return From League Conference
Rev. and Mrs. R. B. Crawford and Misses Rachel Pollard and Mabel Ann Mills returned yesterday afternoon from a three-day national-wide league conference in Norfolk, Va. While there they met and talked with Benito Rodriguez and Miss Laura Belle Bernard. Mr. Rodriguez is a missionary from Cuba to the Free Will Baptist Bible college in Tennessee. Miss Bernard is a missionary to Cuba from the United States. Dramas and songs by the Bible college in Tennessee were featured morning and night.

Misses Pollard and Mills represented the Free Will Baptist League from Greenville.

Dr. Howard J. McGinnis Retires From Active E. C. T. C. Duties

DR. HOWARD J. MCGINNIS

By MARY H. GREENE
When young Howard J. McGinnis of Greenville, West Virginia, got his first job as a school teacher, his father hitched the horse to the family buggy and drove his son to near Venus to start building himself a career as an educator.

Forty-nine years later, Dr. Howard J. McGinnis, former professor and registrar at East Carolina Teachers College, once acting president of the college, and until May 15 of this year director of the Bureau of Field Services, retired from active duties as a member of the East Carolina staff. He can now look back on almost a half century of service as an educator. It is characteristic of his energy, versatility, devotion to duty and enthusiasm for his work that he is now ready to launch into a new career as district governor of the 27th District of Rotary International, which includes 37 clubs in eastern North Carolina.

Actually Dr. McGinnis hardly knows how to leave the college with which he has been so long connected. Most days this summer have found him back at his desk in the Administration building at East Carolina completing odd bits of work for which his busy life left little time and rounding out a number of projects which he is reluctant to leave unfinished.

Dr. McGinnis had an enviable record as an educator when he first came to East Carolina. Starting at Venus in horse-and-buggy days, he taught a one-room, five-months school at a salary of $25 a month. "But room and board," he said recently, "were only $6 a month and I was well off. At least I thought I was," he added with a smile.

As a youth he did all kinds of work to raise funds for continuing his education, for, after all, an annual income of $25 did not go too far in taking a boy through college even back in "the good old days." He did back-breaking work as a lumberman, trudged through snow as a telephone lineman, labored as a coal miner, and fired a railroad engine.

"The going was rugged some times," explained Dr. McGinnis "but it was valuable experience for a teacher." He came to know people in various walks of life, he said, and to estimate properly the values of hard work; he also learned self-discipline.

Eventually he received a diploma from the State Normal School at Glenville, West Virginia, and a degree from West Virginia University in Morgantown. In his native state he became increasingly successful in school work.

He served as principal at Morgantown, superintendent at Bridgeport and Harrisville, professor at Fairmont State Teachers College, and president of West Liberty State Teachers College at Wheeling. During this period he completed work on the master's degree at the University of Chicago, and later on the doctor's degree at George Peabody College for Teachers in Nashville, Tennessee.

Dr. McGinnis' association with East Carolina Teachers College, begun in 1927, includes services of a varied nature. He first joined the faculty as a temporary member of the department of education and psychology, replacing a professor on leave of absence. He remained as a regular staff member, conducting classes in education and school administration.

When President Robert H. Wright decided that East Carolina needed a full-time registrar, he appointed Dr. McGinnis to the office because of his educational background and his experience as an administrator. Dr. McGinnis thus became the first college registrar at the Greenville school and continued in this post until 1944. He was then made acting president of the college in 1944 and served in this position for two years.

In 1948, when the Bureau of Field Services was established at East Carolina, Dr. McGinnis again established a record a "first" when he became the director of this new branch of college activity. For the past four years he has directed extension work at the college and acted as liaison man and public relations officer between East Carolina and the North Carolina public schools which as a teachers' college it serves. Few educators know the schools of eastern North Carolina from first-hand knowledge as he does.

"My mother," commented Dr. McGinnis recently, "used to call me a Jack of all trades. My record seems to justify the description." Then he added with a chuckle, "The old saying goes in full. 'Jack of all trades but master of none.'" In Dr. McGinnis' case only the versatility suggested by the proverb applies, for he has performed well his many duties and has loyally stood ready to use his talents and his experience to the advantage of East Carolina, both in good times and in bad.

He has done many kinds of work in addition to his regular duties. He has edited for several years the college bulletins issued at intervals during the school year. For six years he combined the work of the Student Placement Office with his work as registrar. Lately he has become an expert with the movie camera, has produced an excellent film on college life at East Carolina, and before alumni chapters and other groups both in and out of North Carolina.

For many years he has been a popular speaker before graduating classes, educational and religious organizations, civic clubs, and other groups. Appropriately, prior to his retirement, his last speech before a student group at East Carolina Teachers College was made to a small number of honor students of the class of 1950, who were entertained in May by Pitt County members of Phi Beta Kappa, of which Dr. McGinnis is a member.

As a resident of Greenville for the past twenty-three years, Dr. McGinnis has shown himself a valuable citizen. He has been particularly identified with the work of the Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church and has served as steward and trustee. Since 1927 he has participated actively in the work of the Greenville Rotary Club and has held various positions in the organization, including those of president and member of the Board of Directors.

Intellectual attainments and an enthusiastic spirit as a worker go far toward explaining why Dr. McGinnis advanced surely from the one-room school at Venus to top educational positions in his native state and at East Carolina Teachers College.

The whole picture of the man must include personal qualities of friendliness, affability, unfailing courtesy, and willingness to forget self-interest in the spirit of service to others. He combines dignity with an easy, genial manner which springs from a real kindness and warmth of disposition. A handsome man with graying hair, a vigorous manner, and an old-school courtliness of bearing, Dr. McGinnis carries into his new work the same qualities of character which have made him a successful educator.

Memorial Baptist W. M. S.
A program will be presented by the Eula Andrews circle at the regular meeting of Memorial Baptist W. M. S. Monday afternoon. This is to be held at the church at 3:30 p. m. and all members are urged to attend.

Youth Revival at Pactolus
As a culmination of the vacation Bible school which is being held this week at the Pactolus Baptist church, a week-end youth revival will be conducted by Mr. James Mattox of Rocky Mount.

Mr. Mattox is well qualified to carry on this work. He is a graduate of Wake Forest, Louisville Seminary and this year received his masters degree from Louisville.

On Friday evening Bible school commencement will be held at 7:45 following which there will be a short sermon.

Services will continue through Saturday night, Sunday morning and Sunday night.

It is hoped that the young people of the entire section will all themselves of the opportunity to hear Mr. Mattox. He will hold a discussion period with those desiring to do so after the sermon, regarding such topics as choosing a mate.
The public is invited to attend.

F. W. B. Church Announcements
The Greenville Free Will Baptist church will hold Sunday school Sunday at 9:45 a. m.

The pastor will preach at 11 a. m. on the subject, "A Faithful Father."
The F. W. B. League will meet at 7 p. m. for a service centered on the subject, "The Doctrine of the Cross." Miss Ruth Little of the Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist church will be the guest soloist at the evening worship service when the pastor will use the sermon subject, "The Weeping Christ."

Rev. Crawford and family, Rachel Pollard and Mabel Anne Mills returned Friday from a nationwide Free Will Baptist League conference, Norfolk, Va. Mr. Crawford is a member of the five-member national board of directors, and he reports the Norfolk conference the best held in every respect.

Mr. Crawford and family, along with a group of youths from the local church will leave Monday for Cragmont Assembly, Black Mountain, N. C., where Mr. Crawford is the state director for the youth encampment for the week. Mr. Crawford has chosen a number of able junior, intermediate and senior directors to work with him during the week.

Citrus Packing Plant Destroyed By Huge Blaze

Winter Haven, Fla., June 17.—(AP)—A multi-million dollar fire that raged out of control for hours destroyed one of the Florida's largest citrus plants early today.

Police officials estimated that damage to the sprawling Polk Packing Association plant would exceed $2,000,000.

The fire was discovered about 11 p. m. last night in a second-floor office in a building adjoining the main packing plant. It spread quickly to other structures on the 10-acre installation, and fire fighting apparatus from seven nearby towns were summoned to aid in fighting the blaze.

Mary Barden Taylor Is Married To Eric Whichard In Ceremony

MRS. JUDSON ERIC WHICHARD

On Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock Miss Mary Barden Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Taylor, Sr., of Greenville, N. C., became the bride of Mr. Judson Eric Whichard, son of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Whichard of Stokes, N. C., in a double ring ceremony in the Jarvis Memorial Methodist church. Rev. Robert W. Bradshaw officiated.

Music for the occasion was rendered by Mrs. Paul A. Toll, organist, and Mr. Linwood Gurganus, Jr., soloist. The program included "Through the Years," "Because," and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride entered with her father by whom she was given in marriage. She wore a gown of Romance blue net designed with a basque bodice, short puffed sleeves, and a bouffant skirt with insertions of chantilly lace. She wore a shirred bonnet of blue net with a shoulder length veil, elbow length mitts, and carried a white orchid on a prayer book. The pearls she wore were a gift from the bridegroom.

Miss Mitzi Sue Taylor, the maid of honor, wore a gown of daffodil yellow marquisette designed with a bouffant skirt and a bodice of chantilly lace fashioned with a scalloped Queen Anne neckline. She wore short lace mitts and her flowers were pastel colored gardenias.

Mrs. G. A. Taylor, Jr., the matron of honor, wore a gown of pale pink marquisette and lace made identical in style to that of the maid of honor. She also carried pastel colored gardenias.

Mr. John E. Whichard, the groom's father, attended as best man. Groomsman were G. A. Taylor, Jr., Julius Whichard, Billy Steve Moss, and Conrad C. Taylor.

Mrs. Taylor wore for her daughter's wedding a dress of aqua crepe with a white hat and white accessories. She wore an orchid corsage.

Mrs. Whichard, mother of the bridegroom, wore a white sharkskin suit with a white hat and white accessories. She wore an orchid corsage.

The church was attractively decorated with seven-branch candelabras, twined with plumosus and interspersed with baskets of white gladioli and gypsophila.

Following the ceremony, the bride's parents entertained at a reception held at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Sude D. Corey. Arrangements of summer flowers were used throughout the hour.

Mr. and Mrs. Linwood Gurganus Jr., greeted the guests at the door and directed them into the living room where they were received by the parents of the bride and bridegroom, the bridal couple, the attendants, and the bride's grandmother Mrs. E. F. Tucker. From the receiving line, the guests were directed into the dining room by Mr. and Mrs. J. Hicks Corey.

Punch was served by Mrs. A. B. Corey and Mrs. John Lloyd Corey. Assisting in serving were Miss Lois Edwards, Mrs. Billy Corey, Miss Faye Sermons and Miss Anne Sutton.

Mr. Vance Corey directed the guests into the hall where Mr. and Mrs. Frank Strawn presided over the register. Goodbyes were said by Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Fennell.

Following the reception, the bridal couple left on an extended wedding trip. The bride wore a suit of misty beige with a mint blouse, a beige hat, and brown and white accessories. Her corsage was the orchid lifted from her prayer book.

Mr. and Mrs. Whichard will make their home near Stokes, N. C.

The bride is a graduate of the Greenville city schools and East Carolina Teachers College and for the past year has held a teaching position in the Craven County School system. Her paternal grandparents are Mrs. Sarah E. Tucker and the late James Andrew Taylor. Her maternal grandparents are Mrs. Sude D. Corey and the late James Henry Corey.

Strength for the Day

THE HEAT OF THE SUN
A great deal of money will be spent this year on developing methods of using solar energy. This is nothing new. For centuries men have dreamed of harnessing the sun's power, and many devices and machines have actually been made to put the sun's heat and light to work.

The features of the sun which make such dreams so attractive are obvious. The sun's energy is free, and obtainable anywhere on earth. It is tremendous, containing more power per day than we could use up in many years. And it is permanent, for while there may be cloudy days, the sun will always shine again soon.

The men who harness the sun efficiently may someday be very rich. But there are millions of people who are already spiritually rich because they know how to use another kind of celestial power. This is the love which flows from God to anyone who worships Him.

Like the sun's heat, God's love is free, and it is world-wide. Besides it, the sun's strength is puny, for not only will it remove mountains, it will also move the human heart—a much harder task. And while the sun shines only part of the time, God's love shines twenty-four hours a day, forever.

No expensive equipment is needed to tap this source of power. If you have not tried, try today.

Maybe Stiffer Penalties Would Help Traffic

In Israel careless drivers have caused the highway deaths to soar to such unreasonable heights that the parliament has authorized heavy penalties for offenders.

The drastic action of the parliament was brought about when the highway deaths for the country reached 20 to 30 a month. And the number of seriously injured in a month rose to 40 to 50 persons.

How different the picture is in the United States. Here we tolerate only minor punishment for people who are found guilty of traffic violations. Our toll of dead on the highways soars into the hundreds every month, and on the most recent holiday week-end alone, the number of dead reached almost 300 persons.

Nevertheless, nothing on the statute books of North Carolina or any other state can compare with the maximum penalty of two years in prison and $1,680 fine for the first offense on reckless driving charges which have been authorized for Israel.

The states of this nation have tried various and sundry means to cut down the highway accident and death rates. Perhaps more severe punishment meted out by the courts to the violators of traffic regulations would help people to remember to be more careful on the highways of North Carolina and the United States.

Britain's Proposal Is For Britain's Benefit

For a nation which is awaying under the burden of a socialistic government and its welfare state, Britain offers a poor example for the nations of western Europe to follow in their own governments.

Yet the Labor party, which is the ruling power in England, has declared that Britain will not enter into Schuman's proposal for pooling western Europe's coal and steel supplies until all the nations of the continent adopt socialist forms of government.

The adoption of such a form of government by the western European nations naturally would have as one of its principal features the nationalization of the key industries. And that is what Great Britain is looking for in Europe's coal and steel industries before she enters into an agreement which would pool her vital supplies with those of her neighbors and allies.

The far-reaching Schuman proposal is the most promising move in recent years for the economic consolidation of western Europe. And for the most part it is being eyed with optimism by the nations of western Europe as well as by observers on this side of the Atlantic.

Great Britain's stand in the matter is understandable even if it is not appreciated. Her coal and steel industries are bringing many dollars into the pockets of John Bull even though, under nationalization, they are operating with notorious inefficiency. Without nationalization of the industries in the other European countries, British coal and steel would be pooled with similar ucts produced through more efficient operation under free enterprise.

If economic unity can be achieved among the western European nations, it will be the master stroke for which diplomats and economists have striven for decades. It must be achieved through continued efforts for more efficient production by the individual producers; not through the organized inefficiency of nationalization of the industries of the western European nations.

They've Taken The Census Into Their Own Hands

Community pride and the aggressiveness of the citizens of Farmville is being demonstrated by the members of the chamber of commerce and the junior chamber of commerce of that city.

When the figures for the federal census showed the town's population 39 people less than the census figures ten years ago, the two groups decided to make a census of their own to find out just how many people live in Farmville.

Many other towns and cities throughout North Carolina have been complaining about the census figures for their respective communities, but Farmville is the town we've heard of that has decided to do something besides complain.

If the industrious people of Farmville find in their figures a substantial difference from the federal census figures, The Reflector feels they will be justified in petitioning the census bureau for an official recount. The type of community spirit which is being demonstrated in Farmville by the independent census is the type of spirit which makes a community grow and prosper.

News Behind The News
By RAY TUCKER

Every Saturday this veteran Washington correspondent devotes his column to answering readers' questions of general interest on national and international policies and personalities. Questions may be sent direct to Ray Tucker at 6306 Hillcrest Place, Chevy Chase, Md.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—"What is your opinion," asks S.E.L. of Pleasantville, N.J., "on the success or failure of the United Nations, as it is now organized, operated and managed?"

"Mr. Hoover said he thought the U.N. should be scrapped and a new start made, leaving out Russia. I wouldn't go that far, but I would say to start anew, and leave out the veto power."

DEBATE.—Answer: It is the general opinion here, although no high official cares to admit it, that U.N. is going about the same way as the League of Nations.

Like the Wilsonian organization, U.N. has settled several minor problems, but when two of the great powers differ over a major issue involving their economic and military aims, or their sovereignty, there is small chance of settlement inside or outside the international body.

As to Mr. Hoover's proposal, what hope of world peace or cooperation would there be in a U.N. without Russia and her satellite states as members? It would be like holding a debate with only one side being argued.

WINDUP.—The U.N. still has a certain value, however. It serves to provide a stage, a show window, where Moscow's brutal rule at home and selfish imperialism abroad can be denounced, and her hypocritical pretenses to democracy exposed.

As to elimination of the veto power, don't forget that it was the United States which insisted on this provision, as well as Russia. Remembering the refusal of Congress to join the League because it seemed to mean a loss of sovereignty our delegates at San Francisco figured that they could not win Capitol Hill approval of the U.N. without that reservation.

TAXES.—"How do you account for the delay in passing a tax reduction measure," explodes P.F. of Concord, N.H., "and the further fact that there may be no tax legislation at this session?"

"The economists report that business is booming in heavy goods, autos and building, but that there is a serious fall-off in movement of soft goods. There is no mystery about the matter. People are not buying many retail commodities because of the hope of elimination of luxury taxes held out to them by President Truman.

"I think we consumers are getting a raw break."

BUNGLED.—Answer: I agree. The question has been bungled from the start. Instead of asking for a complicated and controversial revision Mr. Truman should have suggested overnight repeal or reduction of the wartime levies. Even his advisers admit that now.

Four groups appear to be responsible for the delay and for the prospect of no legislation at all. They are the oil, farm cooperative, corporation and tobacco representatives on the House Ways and Means Committee. As against them, the mass of consumers is almost totally unrepresented.

In a meaningless gesture, the committee first reduced revenue from the nuisance taxes by $1.1 billion. President Truman says he will veto such a measure, unless that amount of loss is made up by new or increased duties. Any new tax burden would have to fall on the four groups mentioned above, if the committee men wish to meet White House requirements.

CIGARETS.—"But they don't. I think they prefer no bill at all to legislation that will penalize their friends back home. Therefore, they have framed it so that it cannot get through Congress, or so that if it does, Mr. Truman will disapprove it."

Chairman "Bob" Doughton of North Carolina, a powerful figure, is the real stumbling block. The tentative bill cuts taxes on so-called "economy cigarettes," which is opposed by his friends, the standard brand group. In view of that move, I doubt if he wants any tax legislation.

TRICK.—"How about these postal economies?" asks L.T.R. of Houston, Tex. "Is this a trick to make us demand revision of the present setup? Or is it a genuine attempt to save the public's money?"

Answer: I don't want to be unfair to Postmaster General Donaldson, but it looks like an attempt to pressure Congress into granting increased appropriations to his department. I have seen it worked many times in the past by other agencies especially Interior and Treasury. The idea is that the discharge of employees and reduction of service will arouse a storm of public protest, thus forcing Congress to do something.

The $500 million saving is piecemeal, in view of a $42 billion budget and the billions we are giving to foreign countries. Many postal workers have complained, saying that the present system is too burdensome. Moreover, it works a hardship on small business, which cannot afford to use the telephones and telegraph as freely as the great corporations.

When The Going Gets Tough—

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

Charlie and Betty Lou Howard returned to Greenville Sunday from New York. Charlie had been to Europe on tobacco business, and Betty Lou had met him in New York.

As always, they were anxious to see their prize possession, a wire-haired terrier named Frisky. Their neighbors, Travis and Sarah Flanagan, had been keeping Frisky while they were gone.

Frisky had been spending his afternoons away from home, but had been returning home in time for supper. When Charlie and Betty Lou returned Frisky was still out.

Supper time came, but Frisky didn't return. Betty Lou started the search. She rode all over town looking for Frisky, with no success. She thought surely that he would come home Sunday night.

When Frisky wasn't there the next morning, Betty Lou was alarmed. She notified the police, dog catcher, garbage man, the staff of the neighborhood grocery store, and all dog doctors in town.

Betty Lou approached the dog catcher with the question: "Do you know my dog?" He replied, "Lady, I know every dog in town."

During the day Betty Lou went to the dog pound twice, and made several trips all over town looking for Frisky. To make matters worse, Charlie was in Durham that day on business.

Monday night Betty Lou went to bed, heart broken. She said a prayer, saying that she could find Frisky if she could only hear him bark again.

Ten minutes later the miracle happened. Betty Lou heard a dog barking. After telling her neighbor to listen out for her daughter, Cindy, she took off in search for her dog.

Her hopes slipped when she traced down the bark and discovered that it wasn't Frisky after all. Just as she started back home, she heard another bark, unmistakably Frisky.

Betty Lou finally located her dog under the house on Eastern Street that was occupied by Henry Renfrew. Lou ran diagonally across the street to arouse Booger and Virginia Scavis for their help.

Booger, Travis Flanagan, J. B. Kittrell, and C. George Laulaire were engaged on a bridge game, so Betty Lou had plenty of help.

Frisky had jumped into a six-foot deep hole under the house and was trapped. With the help of automobile headlights, the boys rescued him.

"I hadn't seen him in two and half weeks," Betty Lou said, "but he was so interested in freedom that he paid me no mind. All he did was run all over the neighborhood."

The moral of this story: If you lose your dog, pray. And I thank Betty Lou.

Around Capitol Square

Daily Reflector Bureau

By LYNN NISBET

Raleigh, N. C.

RESIGNATIONS.—Resignation of Hugh Q. Alexander of Cabarrus County as a member of the general assembly brings to seven the number of vacancies in the house. There are four in the senate. Alexander resigned for the same reason he declined to offer for re-election—he is a candidate for commander of the State Department, American Legion, and the Legion constitution precludes its officers or candidates for office being involved with political offices.

VACANCIES.—There are at least four vacancies in membership of the 1949 state senate, which holds until the 1951 members are qualified. Rex Gass of Forsyth died. W. I. Halstead of Camden resigned to become a special superior court judge; Frank H. Gibbs of Warren resigned.

Prosecuting attorney in his county recorder court, and Henry Vann of Sampson a member of the state sports authority. The seven vacancies in the house were occasioned by death of Thomas E. Cooper of New Hanover and resignations of Hugh Alexander of Cabarrus to enter the race for Legion commander; W. C. Taylor of Caswell and Burt G. Hardison of Craven, enforcement division; Dan K. Edwards to become mayor of Durham; William T. Hatch of Wake when appointed a special superior court judge, and J. Frank Huskins of Yancey, who was named chairman of the industrial commission.

ACADEMIC.—There may be other members who have disqualified themselves by assuming different offices and have not bothered to formally resign. The question is wholly academic, because the only chance for the vacancies to make any difference would be a special session of the legislature before the November election. Last fall when the trend in general fund revenue was downward there was some prospect a special session might be required. Pick up in business, reflected in larger tax yields, plus closer collection on part of the state, renders such course unnecessary.

VAGUE.—Legislative resignations have occasioned discussion in capitol square bull sessions about the vagueness of statutes covering the matter. Some resignations have been filed with the presiding officer of the legislative branch affected, some with the secretary of state and some with the governor. The law does not say where resignations should be filed. The statutes set out clearly that the vacancy must be filled in a special election called by the governor. It is also clear (G. S. 163-6) that when the general assembly is in session the presiding officer of the branch in which the vacancy occurs is responsible for notifying the governor of the vacancy. When the general assembly is not in session that duty falls upon the chairman of the board of elections or the sheriff of the county in which the late member resided. That would seem to require a resigning member to file his resignation with the elections chairman or sheriff in his county, if the legislature is not in session. So far as oldtimers can recall no resigning member has followed that course.

OMISSIONS.—This is one of many places where there seems to be a "gap" in constitutional and statutory coverage. The omission has never seriously retarded progress of state government; perhaps it never will. For similar reasons there has never been an instance when death or other disqualification of a governor before November election and his inauguration has bothered North Carolina—as it did Georgia a few years ago. There remains possibility of confusion and need for clarifying the statutes on several of these matters.

ELECTIVE.—The constitution and the statutes are clear on one point. The only way a member of the state general assembly or the national house of representatives can take office is by majority vote of the people. The governor can appoint members of the council of state and the United States Senate to serve until the next election, thus obviating necessity of a special election. Nobody but a majority of the people themselves can qualify a man or a woman to cast a vote in the state legislature or the more popular branch of the Congress.

TREES.—A quarter of a million trees are not many when compared with all the trees that are—or ought to be—in North Carolina; but more than a quarter million new seedlings put out by 4-H Club members in 15 mountain counties is a good record. For some years, since the chestnut blight depleted growth of that tree and lumbering operations denuded mountains of all timber of useable size, travelers have noticed the bare mountainsides. That is changing now and the hills are getting green again. Reforestation has not caught up with devastation wrought by sawmills and pulp mills a few years ago, but more intelligent approach to the problem is doing a lot toward keeping young trees growing where larger growth has been cut out.

CO-OPERATION.—Co-operative activities among the State College extension service, the department of agriculture, conservation and development, forestry services of railroads, power companies and pulp mills are doing much to convince landowners they can derive a good profit from trees as well as from row crops on the farms. Not only are the colleges speeding up forestry courses, but all agencies are working together in promotion of summer camps where boys study improved methods of tree culture and harvest.

FARMERS.—Program for the 1950 Farm and Home Week at State College July 31-August 3 does not include as many big names as in some other years, but indicates closer attention to matters of more vital concern to North Carolina farmers than big speeches. There will be "big speeches" by Dean Rusk, assistant secretary of state in charge of Far Eastern Affairs, and by Mrs. Georgia Neese Clark, treasurer of the United States. Most of the week's program, however, will be devoted to discussion, study and inspection of things pertaining to rural life in North Carolina. Serious matters will be interspersed with entertainment, all of it with definite Tarheel flavor.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

HIDDEN FIELDS. (Washington Daily News) The Production and Marketing Administration has recently uncovered four hidden tobacco fields in Greene county.

To comply under the present marketing rules, the farmer has to abide by the acreage rules that have been allotted. Failure to do so places the entire program in jeopardy. The Daily News is inclined to think that these four fields present an exception rather than a rule. Most farmers will abhor such tactics as hidden fields.

The agency has not made a big fuss over the incident. And we feel that such a course was wise.

Farmers resent any effort by individuals to give the farm program a black mark by selfish methods and unfair acts.

We believe that if a perfect check could be made, that the results would show that more than 99 per cent of the farmers are being honest with themselves and honest with the government.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER
A new, large breach has developed in wall of price maintenance. It's worrying retailers who depend on so-called fair-trade laws to protect their margins.

Fair trade laws exist in all but three states—Missouri, Vermont and Texas—and the District of Columbia. Under these laws manufacturers may set the retail prices of trade-marked items, and obtain court injunctions against dealers who do not charge the prices fixed.

Ever since these laws were enacted they have been violated pretty consistently by discount houses. In almost all of the fair-trade states, retailers are constantly demanding that manufacturers cease selling to these discount houses and obtain court orders to prevent their price cutting. Some manufacturers police their lines very well and hustle price cutters to court whenever they can prove a case; others are lax and make their goods available to the discounters.

Earlier this year, several major New York department stores, annoyed at competition from discount houses, defied the law and openly cut fixed prices. There was a flurry of court actions, but the discount houses are still flourishing.

But the newest price cutting threat appears to be within the law. A company in Washington, D.C., where there is no fair-trade law—is advertising branded goods widely in eastern states at far below fixed prices.

Sale of goods by mail below fixed prices is not exactly new; it's almost as old as the fair-trade laws themselves, but the broad advertising activities of this company appear to exceed earlier efforts.

The Washington concern offers a famous $13.90 pen for $8.95, a celebrated $14.95 waffle iron for $10.95, and equally well-known electric blenders, silver, knives, clocks, toasters, lighters, pressure cooker irons and vacuums below the prices fixed in the remaining 45 states.

The National Retail Dry Goods Association, concerned about this unequal competition with its members, points out that the company is immune from their fair-trade laws, first because the District has no such legislation, and, second, because "a mail order sent to a concern there appears to be a sale made there rather than in the purchaser's home state. . . . Each item requires a small handling charge in addition to the price. . . . Presumably, since the ad makes it plain the purchaser is paying transportation charges to his own state, this is regarded as a clincher to the fact that title passed in an area where price maintenance is not legal."

The NRDGA seems to think Congress should enact a fair-trade law for the capital. That would not necessarily stop this company—it would simply move to Texas, Vermont or Missouri.

MORAL: DON'T TRY TO SELL CHILI TO NEW YORKERS
The appetite for hot stuff in Mountain and Southwestern states has proved what the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association has been saying all along: all business is local. A Bureau survey shows that those states, with only 20.7 per cent of the population, account for 46 per cent of the total amount of canned chili consumed in the United States. The figures show further that the average family in that region eats twenty-five times—that's right, 25 times—as much chili con carne as the average family in New York City each year.

SILK SALES RISE
47 PER CENT OVER YEAR
Nylon has largely replaced silk for stockings and other apparel. But silk dealers aren't giving up. Sales of silk in May totaled 4,876, bales, making a total of 23,290 bales for the first five months of the year, an increase of 47 per cent over the same period in 1949, according to American Silk Council figures.

NEW AND HOT
LIGHTER: Frenchmen boast that their newest cigaret lighters are unobtainable in America. They use compressed butane gas instead of lighter fluid—2,000 lights on a filling. But that's being changed now. An American company (Stratford Pen Co., 44 W. 28th St., New York) is introducing butane-gas lighters here.

ENAMEL: A new synthetic enamel claimed to have improved resistance to marring and chipping, has been announced (by Monsanto Chemical Co., Boston, Mass.). It's an industrial product—requires baking.

GUN: Table tennis balls can scarcely stop a tank, but a new toy anti-tank gun fires six of them in rapid-fire order. The gun, is of red Tenite plastic (and is made by Kusan, Inc., Nashville, Tenn.).

GREENHOUSE: A "pint size" plastic greenhouse for raising orchids at home is being made (for Goldfarb, 160 E. 87th St., New York). It is 8 inches long, 6 inches high and 6 inches wide. A clear top admits sunlight, maintains temperature and induces humidity. It comes with four hybrid seedlings, empty, or with a choice of other plants.

TABLEWARE: Colorful forks and spoons of molded Bakelite styrene plastic are durable enough to last for years, but cheap enough—12 for 15 cents—to throw away after one use. (They are by Sutherland Paper Co., Kalamazoo, Mich.).

Hal Boyle's Column

New York — (AP) — There's a grand new day dawning for that forlorn American figure—the guy who wants to rent a place to live. Yes, fellow tenants, somebody wants us again after all these years. Who wants us? Landlords do. Yes, that's right—landlords! A big landlord told me so himself.

"The renting honeymoon is over for the landlord," said Fred Trump, one of the nation's top ten private housing builders.

"We've been on a honeymoon since 1942. But we don't have to call the cops anymore to keep order in lines of people waiting to sign leases."

"The builder from now on will have to do more and more for the tenant, because the competition for his rent money is getting keener all the time."

What can the tenant look forward to getting that he hasn't received since 1942.

"More light and air, larger pre-war size rooms, and special services of many kinds," said Trump. He is completing two giant projects in Brooklyn—Shore Haven and Beach Haven—which cost $30,000,000 and will hold 3,200 families. The six-story apartment buildings occupy only 20 per cent of the area. The rest is given over to parks and play areas.

"Back in 1915 the buildings would have been crowded together to take up as much of the ground as possible," he said. "But under FHA we have learned not to sweat the land."

When the projects were in the planning stage, a member of the board of education told him:

"These big developments cause tremendous crowding in the schools near them, particularly in the lower grades. Why don't you let us put a kindergarten in each of your projects?"

"All right," said Trump, who has five children himself.

The board member then suggested that the space be provided free. Trump thought that over a little longer—then said okay. The school board would have the rooms for a dollar a year.

"I hope you will set a trend—that it will snowball," he said. "It has worked out very well with us. The mothers no longer have to drop their work to take their small children to and from school across busy streets."

Trump also provides a supervised play nursery. He is setting up a play sitting service. He has a "courtesy car" to drive tenants to the seashore, and a beach watching service to take care of the children while the parents go swimming.

Each new mother in the projects receives a dozen roses from him. As a gesture of good will Trump also started to give new tenants a pair of tickets to a Broadway show.

Some of the tenants dub Trump "the landlord with a heart." This rather embarrasses him.

"Heart nothing," he said. "It's just good business." To keep your tenants happy you have to throw in a few things to sweeten the deal. And it's going to be more like that, too."

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS
WASHINGTON — Chester A. Emerick, new deputy commissioner of customs, has the common trait of most law enforcement officers. He claims up when you ask questions, especially questions about himself. "What do you want to know that for?" he parried most questions I asked.

He has been with the customs service for 30 years. "Went in at Seattle, Wash., after serving in the Navy during World War I." Born in Takoma, Wash., 51 years ago, he has served the U.S. Treasury in various capacities. He was customs agent at Seattle from 1934 to 1938, later became agent at Portland and at Los Angeles. From 1944 to 1948 he was supervising agent at New Orleans, covering part of Texas, Louisiana and Alabama. I asked him to tell me some highlights of his career.

"Why do you want to know that?" he asked.

"After prohibition," he said, "we investigated the first so-called Canadian distillery case, involving recovery of several millions in duties and taxes on liquor smuggled in during prohibition years from British Columbia. In the first case, two defendants were apprehended and placed under $100,000 bonds each, later forfeited on their failure to report for the Commissioner's hearing in Seattle. During 1938 to '41 Mr. Emerick was in charge of extensive investigations involving fraudulent documentation of about 250 fishing vessels in Southern California.

"The vessels were owned by alien Japanese and documented unlawfully in the names of U.S. corporations or U. S. citizens," he explained. "At the time we were certain we had Japanese personnel working as fishermen on tuna clippers operating out of Los Angeles harbor and San Diego." Officials of one of the leading canneries in Los Angeles were indicted, pleaded guilty and were fined. The vessels were forfeited.

For the past four years Mr. Emerick has been supervising customs agent at Miami, Fla., covering Georgia, South Carolina, Florida, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and Cuba. He recently completed several investigations of unlawful exportations of military type aircraft to countries in Central America, the West Indies and Europe.

Did he ever have any close calls? That one he answered, quick as a wink: "Blonde, or brunettes?"

Scouting Movement Given Assist By Farmville People

Girl Scouts Given New Hut; Building Going Up For Boys

By ROY HARDEE

United together in a common cause to further boy and girl scouting in their community, the citizens of Farmville rallied together to make it possible for the youth of the city to have a regular meeting place in which to carry on their work.

Up until a short time ago the scout units of the city were practically orphans so far as having a regular meeting place which they could use freely.

Scouting in the town is not new as far as the boy scouts are concerned. The first troop was organized in 1919 and has grown since that time to the large unit that it is now.

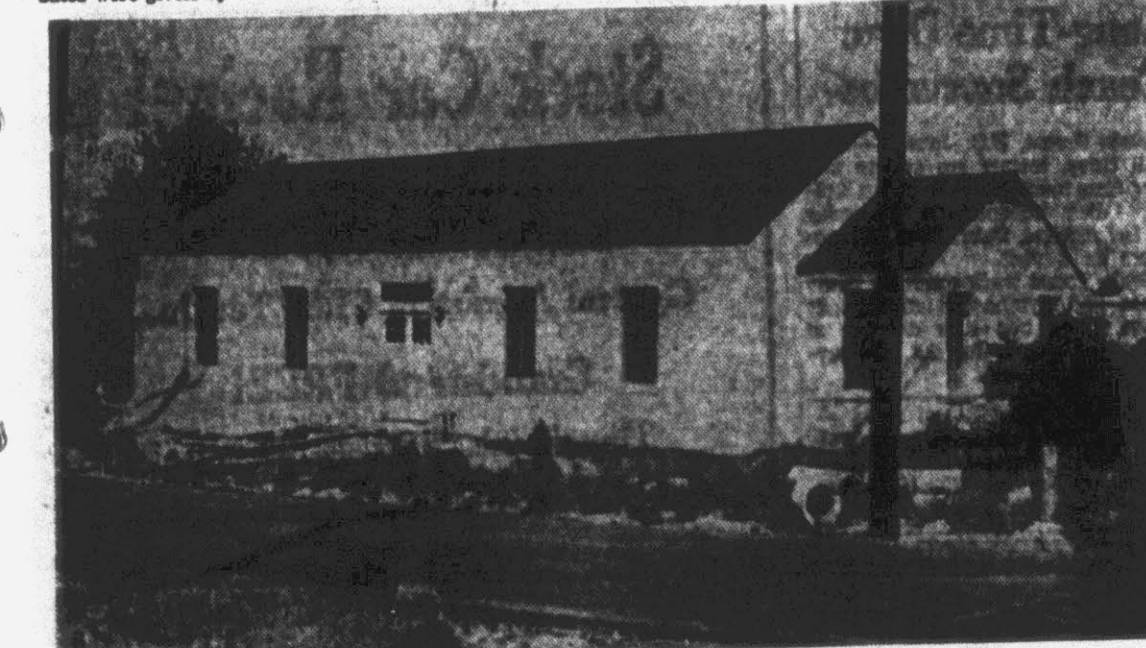

Girl scouting is much younger in the life of the town but has grown rapidly until at the present time there are five troops. The first troop was chartered in 1916, sponsored by the Junior Woman's Club.

As expressed by one of the leaders before the girl scout hut was built and construction on the boys' house started the scouts met in one place or another, wherever they could find space.

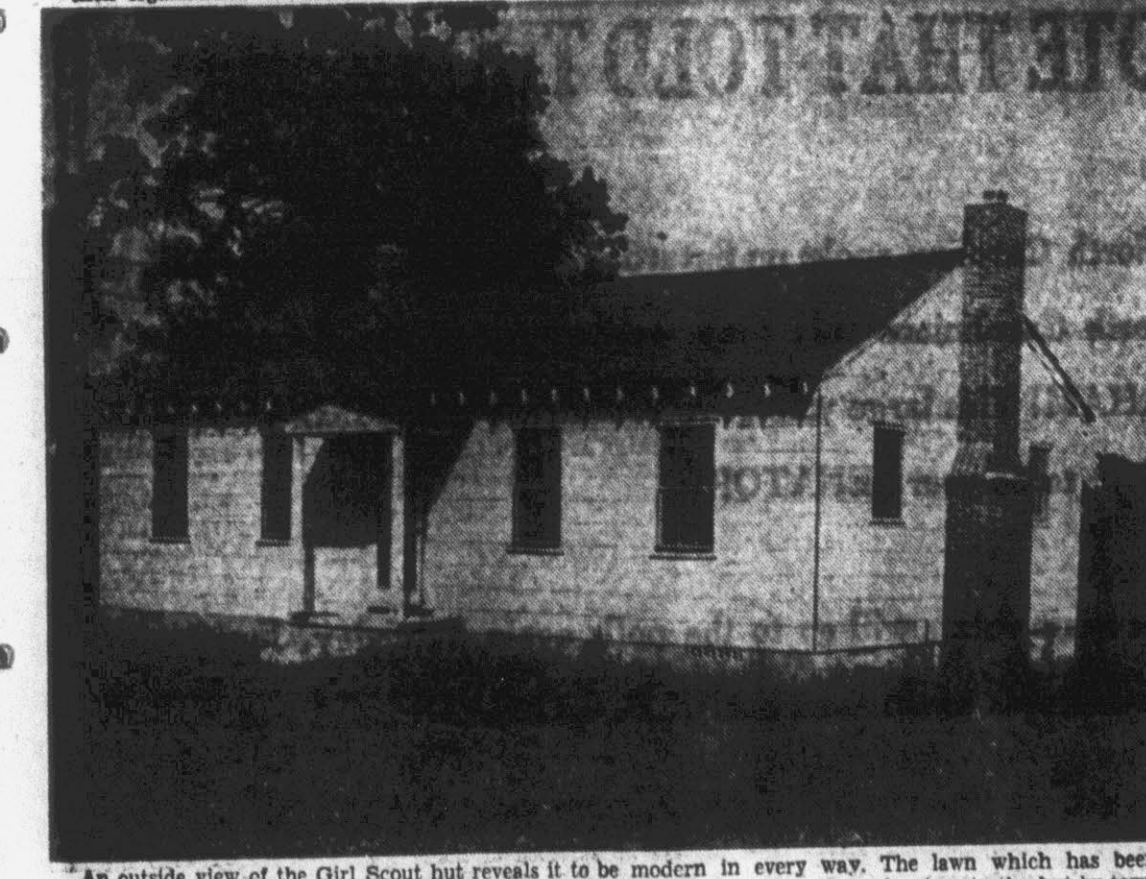

In 1917 the Farmville Junior Woman's Club saw the need for a club meeting place and a meeting place for the growing and expanding girl scout troops. A committee of the Junior Woman's Club was appointed to look into the prospects of obtaining a building to house both of the organizations. Mrs. R. T. Williams was appointed chairman of the committee.

A lot for the construction of the proposed building was donated by Robert Monk, who stipulated that the land was to be used for a girl scout hut and that a suitable building must be constructed on the property within two years.

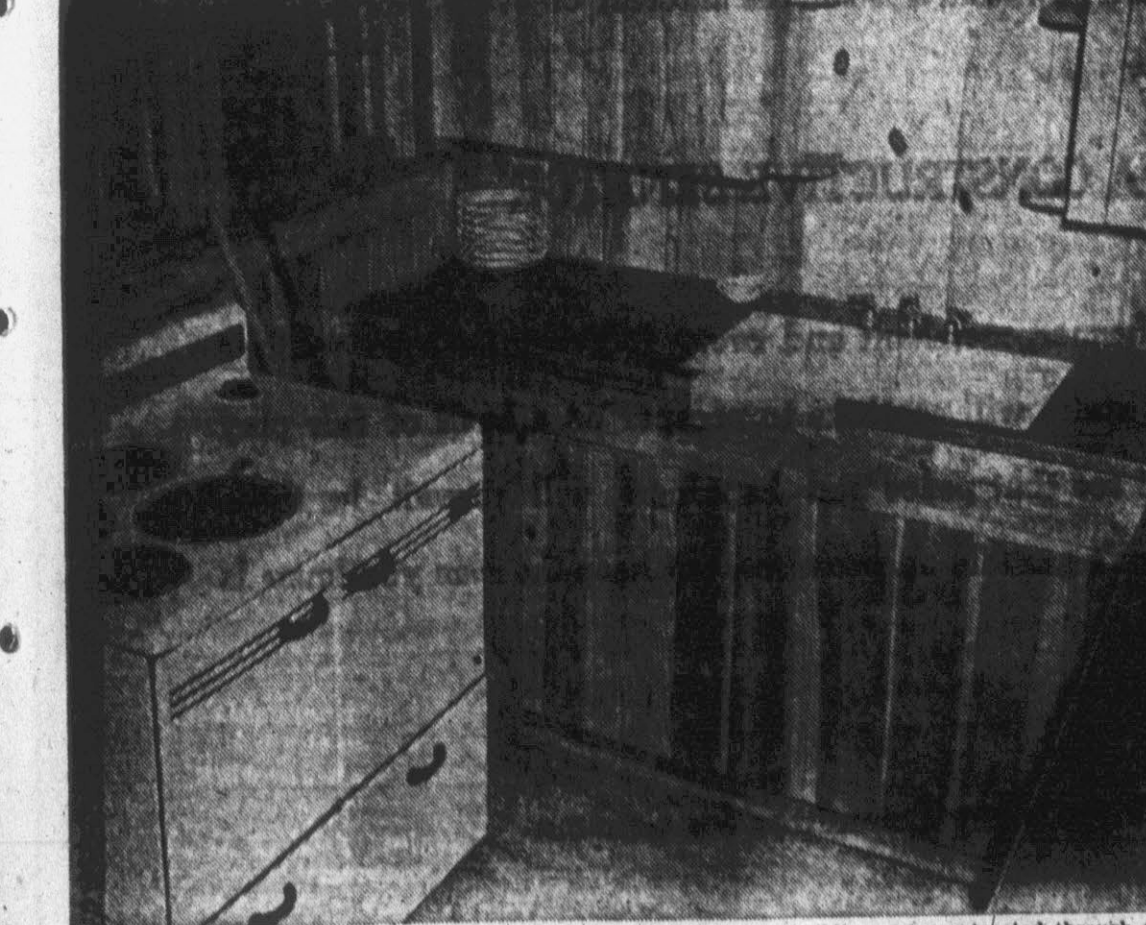

After this, an entire program swung into operation with everyone taking part. Shows and plays, and sales were given by the club in order

More than three-fourths complete is the Boy Scout hut which the Farmville Rotary Club is building. When completed, the building will offer a regular meeting place for scouts, something they have not had since their organization was formed in 1919. The building is estimated to cost more than $6,000.

An outside view of the Girl Scout hut reveals it to be modern in every way. The lawn which has been planted in grass will soon be beautified by the addition of shade trees and shrubs given to the hut by town people.

The kitchen of the Girl Scout hut is modern in every respect. The building was constructed through the efforts of the Farmville Junior Woman's club and Girl Scouts who also received funds from citizens of the community.

In the summer a group of the scouts go to Camp Hardee, while all the troops usually spend some time at the beach. Dances for the scouts and their escorts are held each month in addition to the numerous other programs held regularly.

Three girls, Doidge Jones, Carolyn Roebuck and Jean Cayton were the first class awards in the troop.

A Mother and Daughter banquet is an annual event with the scouts, also dances and hikes.

Though the girls are younger than the boys, the Boy Scouts, they have made a name for themselves and a record of progress even the older scouts can envy by taking on the task which they undertook in building a scout hut from the start nearly singlehanded.

Not to let the girls get ahead of them, the local unit of the Boy Scouts, some 33 members strong, are now on the road towards having a large meeting hut for their own use.

Boy scouting in Farmville dates back to 1919 when Troop No. 26 was first organized. Since that time the troop has grown but only one troop has been formed and the same number retained.

The Boy Scout faced the same program as the girls, and their sponsors, the local Rotary Club, undertook the task of building a suitable unit for the boys.

While not yet complete the cement block structure located across from the Water and Light Plant on the Tarboro highway will be made up of a main assembly room, four patrol rooms, scout masters' den and washrooms.

The money for the construction of the boys' hut came primarily from the members of the Rotary club and individuals who donated materials and money.

The plumbing and lighting fixtures were given free to the scouts. The building is scheduled to be completed around the 27th of this month when formal dedication services will be held.

The first scoutmaster of the local troop was W. G. Sheppard, who organized the troop in 1919. The present scoutmaster, Ed Warren, was a member of the original troop and has been scoutmaster for around ten to twelve years.

The scouts meet each week during the school year with meetings in the summer coming bi-weekly in order to give the season.

The Farmville district is a member of the Edgecombe district now, but was formerly a member of the Pitt-Greene district.

Chairman of the Rotary Club's building committee is Dr. John Newborn.

The estimated cost of the building has been placed at around $6,000.

Thus when the efficiency of scouting in their city faced a serious handicap the citizens of Farmville came through with flying colors in providing meeting places for both the boy and girl scouts. The records which have been made by these two units speak for themselves and prove that the effort and time was well spent.

When the scout hut was officially dedicated, an open house at which each person who came brought some furnishings was held.

A large record player with amplifier and many albums of classical and popular music, operas and poetry were given to the hut.

Actual construction was started in November 1919 and was completed in March of 1920.

Previously without a suitable place to meet, the scout program in Farmville had to be curtailed to meet the requirements of the meeting places in which the units met.

The leaders were worried over the lack of facilities to undertake the ten fields the programs offered in scouting such as arts and crafts, health and safety, community life, homemaking, international friendship, nature, out-of-doors and sports and games. While holding out of these programs could be carried out to their full extent; but with the construction of the scout hut the program was realized.

When scouting was first started in 1919, there was one troop made up of 25 girls as compared with five troops and more than 50 girls despite the graduation of a large senior scout unit this year.

Another troop is expected to be formed next spring. The girls are placed in troops in which they find girls of their comparable ages.

The girls conduct a well-planned program during the school years and suspend activities in the summer months.

The Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist Church is a modern structure throughout, but retaining the simplicity of a typical country church.

It is impossible to determine just when the church had its origin, or who gave the land on which it stands, because of the records being burned in the big fire which swept a city block, destroying the Pitt County Court House and all the records in 1854.

The owner of the land on which the church is located is not known nor the time that the first building was erected. According to information furnished by some of the oldest church members, the church is figured to be at least a hundred and fifty years old, which would place the time of the first building around 1800.

According to the memory of the old folks the first building was of log construction, and a large open fireplace furnished the only means of heating the structure. The seats were of wood with holes bored in them through which wooden pegs were driven as supports. As compared with the modern seating arrangements in the present church the discomfort of attending one of the long drawn-out sermons, typical of that day, seated on the crude bench can very well be imagined.

The Church became known as the Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist Church because of an old branch of water, overgrown by reeds, which ran on the north side of the church. The people of the first church are reported to have agreed on the name in keeping with the surroundings.

White and Colored

At that time, the colored people of the South were the property of the white men, so a section of the church was set apart for them and the white masters and the slaves of the bygone days worshipped under the same roof.

Following the close of the Civil War the great majority of the slaves in the county remained on the plantations which they had lived for many years except that they were free.

A preacher by the name of Billie May, Lorenzo Nobles and James Craft organized a church for the colored people, and was thus the first church in the state to be opened just for the colored people. The church known as English Chapel was assisted by the pastors until they could furnish a pastor of their own race.

As time drew on, the old log cabin church which for years had served as a meeting place for both black and white became too small for the increased population. The church had served for years and people had walked to it from miles around, while those who could afford it came on horseback or in ox-drawn carts.

As the members grew more prosperous after the close of the Civil War and the dark days which followed it, a new frame building was erected in or about the year 1880. The church built to take care of the overcrowded conditions, was not ample to seat the capacity crowds which flocked to the church to worship each Sunday.

In those days the crowds were unusually large on the first Sunday in May. Those who traveled a long distance to reach the service arrived on Saturday morning and were entertained in the homes of the members who lived nearby. They went back to church on Saturday night for communion and again on Sunday morning at which time people from many towns and other churches met with the local members for services.

The growth of the church was steady until in the early 1900s and a few of the farsighted members met to make plans for a larger and more complete building.

A building committee composed of W. J. Braxton, J. A. Griffin, M. G. Moye, Charles McLawhorn, W. H. Tripp, L. C. Fletcher, and C. H. Langston was selected to work out the plans for the new building. Each of the men pledged a sum of $25 each as a beginning of the building fund drive.

The results of the work on the part of these men brought about the building of the present structure.

While men like W. J. Braxton, W. A. Vincent, Malachi Vincent, R. L. Worthington, Bryant Tripp, D. C. Davenport, Charles McLawhorn, Charles Langston, L. C. Fletcher and probably others, gave lumber for the building, many people gave their labor freely.

The preacher's deck was given by E. W. and Evelyn Smith and the original furniture was made and presented to the church by Mrs. Smith.

The building was completed in 1901 with the dedicatory sermon being preached by Rev. C. J. Harris.

In 1925 a step forward was made by the church as a unit of Sunday School class rooms were added.

Dates Back At Least 150 Years

By CARRIE SMITH CANNON

The oldest, and possibly the great grandfather of all Free Will Baptist churches in Pitt County, is located about five miles south of Greenville, just off the Winterville highway.

Far from what one would expect of a rural church which has a history going back more than 150 years, the Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist Church is a modern structure throughout, but retaining the simplicity of a typical country church.

It is impossible to determine just when the church had its origin, or who gave the land on which it stands, because of the records being burned in the big fire which swept a city block, destroying the Pitt County Court House and all the records in 1854.

The owner of the land on which the church is located is not known nor the time that the first building was erected. The Church became known as the Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist Church because of an old branch of water, overgrown by reeds, which ran on the north side of the church. The people of the first church are reported to have agreed on the name in keeping with the surroundings.

The building was completed in 1901 with the dedicatory sermon being preached by Rev. C. J. Harris.

In 1925 a step forward was made by the church as a unit of Sunday School class rooms were added.

Renovated in 1949

The church building underwent a complete renovation in 1949 at which time a steeple and vestibule were added. The entire building was repaired and painted; floors sanded and finished; memorial windows installed, and new carpet placed on the aisles.

All the work of remodeling the church was directed by Elwood Davenport. As in the olden days the members of the church came through with both money and personal help by furnishing labor for the undertaking.

The building now is composed of a large auditorium which would do justice to any city church in the county. Five large Sunday School rooms and a well-equipped nursery round out the church facilities.

A wide-awake auxiliary made up of the women of the church are doing much to aid the work of the church.

The Sunday School is growing by leaps and bounds with a present enrollment of 182 and new members coming in regularly. Elwood Davenport is the superintendent of the Sunday School.

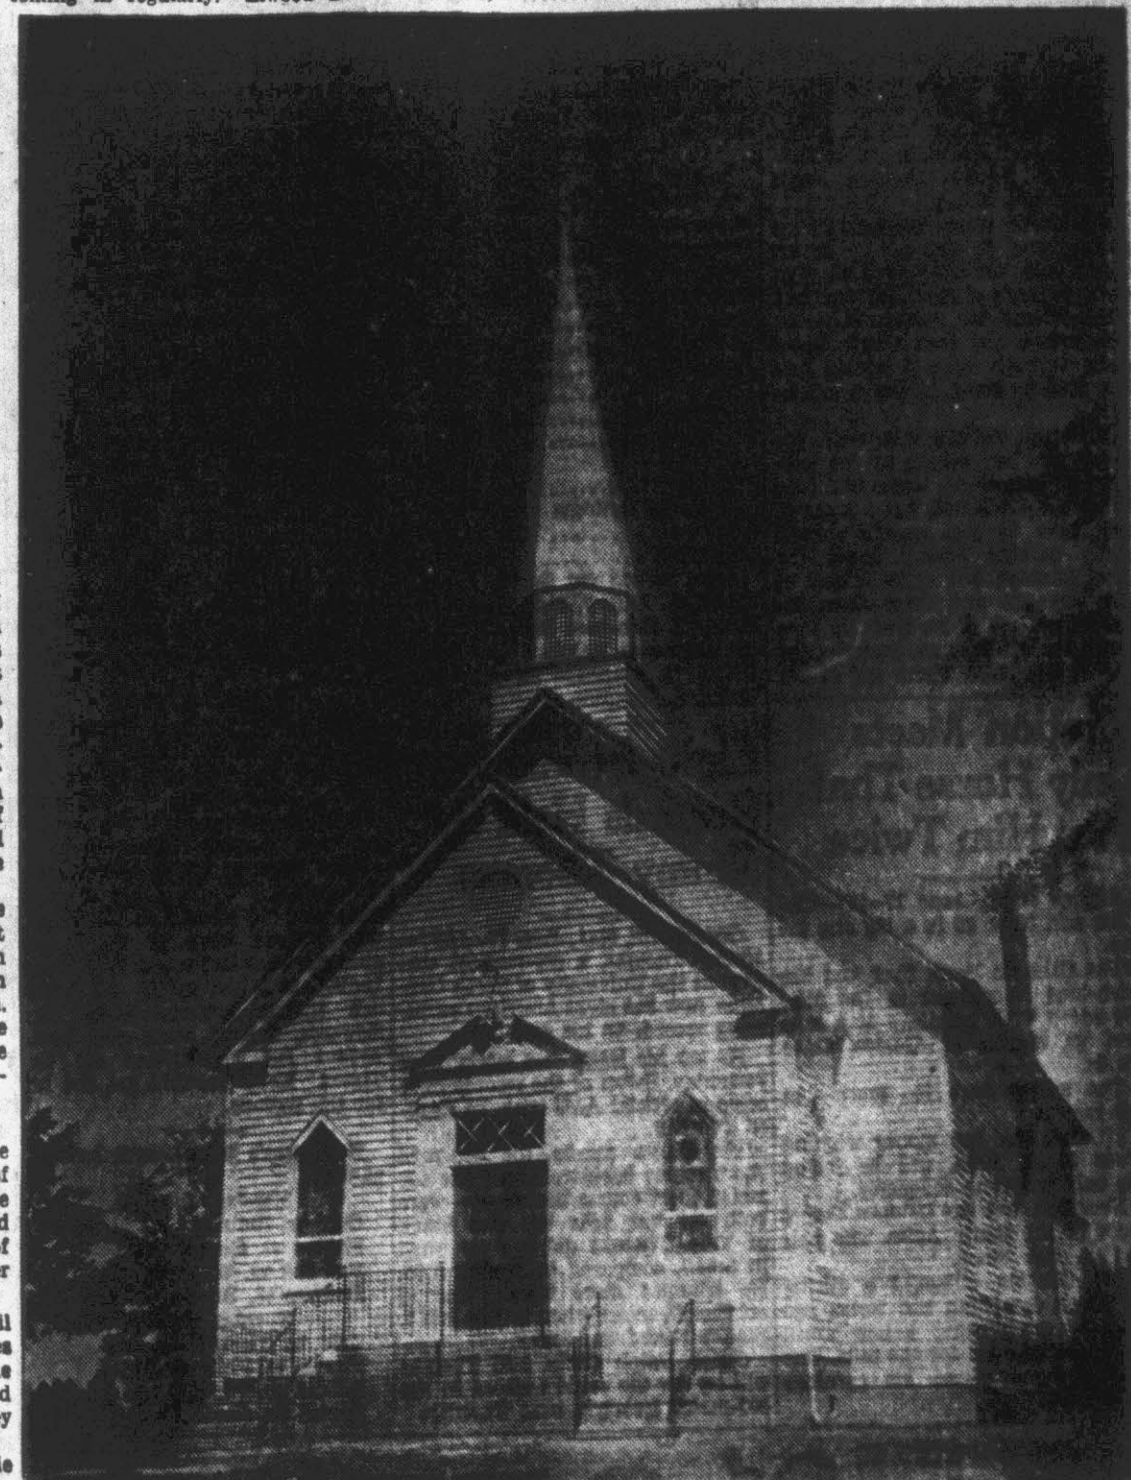

The Langston Relief Fund, a regular part of the church work, is directed by Rebecca Davenport, a granddaughter of Langston who was very active in establishing the work several years ago.

One of the oldest deacons in the church, Nehemiah Garris served the church for a period of 42 years. Others serving on the board of deacons are: R. L. Worthington, E. W. Smith, E. W. Braxton, A. B. Moye, C. H. Langston, C. C. Jackson, Philip Averett, Wilbur Worthington, George Jackson and McCoy Tripp.

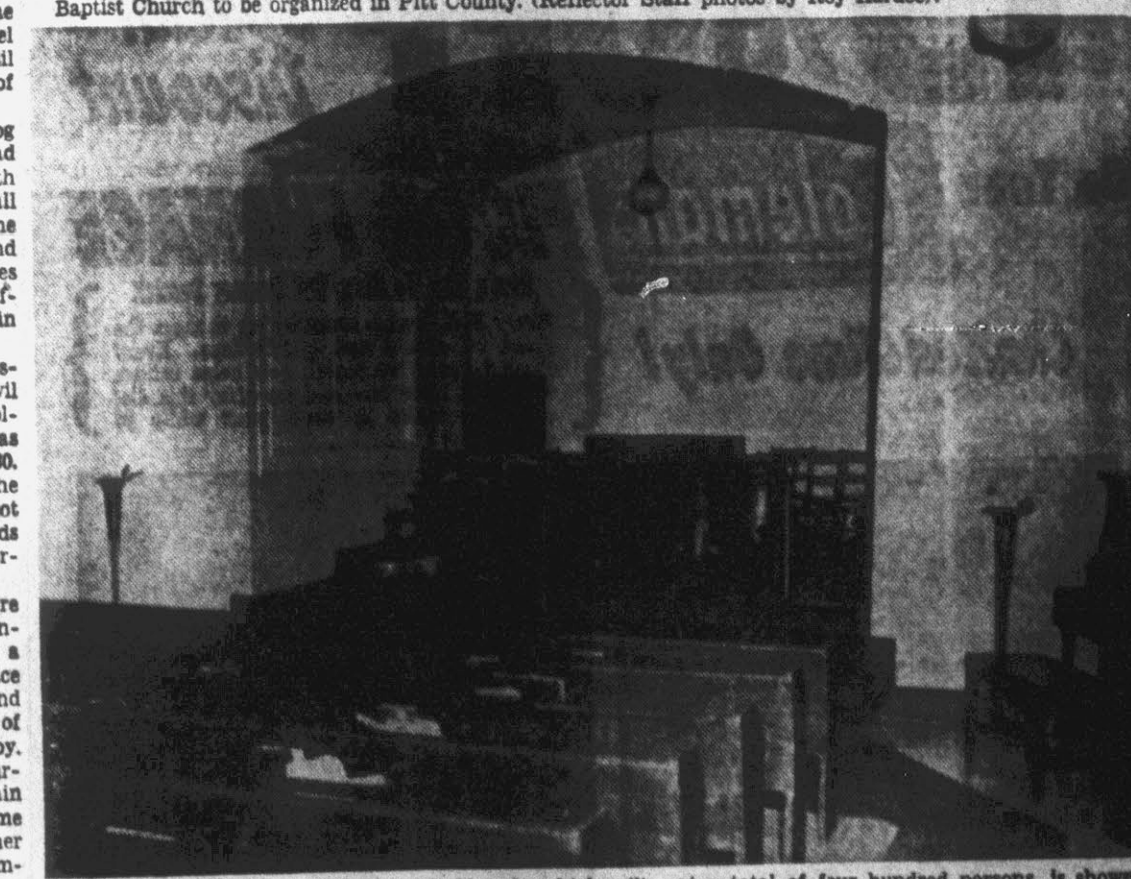

Among the ruling elders are: L. G. Mills, C. F. Little, S. J. Vincent, J. F. Harrington and R. L. Worthington. Outstanding among the clerks of the church was Paul Harrington, who served for many years. Others who held this office are E. W. Smith, W. A. Vincent, W. A.

Dall, Juanita Olive, Ruth W. Couch, Clarence Vincent, Burney Moye, Norman Coward and Viola Davenport.

Preachers who have served as pastors are Revs. Billie May, Jesse Heath, B. B. Albritton, T. N. Manning, James Craft, Dixon, Slaughter, R. K. Hearne, T. N. Baker, Wiley Nobles, Lorenzo Nobles, Tom Barnhill, Fred McGlohon, J. E. Sawyer, R. I. Corbett, G. C. Vance, C. J. Harris, L. R. Ennis, M. A. Woodard, M. C. Prescott, J. C. Moye, Callis Little, Lupton, R. C. Wiggs, Chester Peit, J. P. Woodard, J. F. Forrest, and the present pastor, D. D. Hansley. Reedy Branch has given to the ministry the following: Revs. W. J. Nobles, Callis Little, Henry Dixon, John Wiley Nobles, C. B. Jones, Alonzo Dall, W. H. Laughinghouse, James Craft and Arch Tyson. R. L. Worthington has been treasurer since 1928.

The Reedy Branch Church, located off the Winterville highway, has a history of some 150 years. The church's exact history is not known, but is believed to date back to 1800 and is possibly the first Free Will Baptist Church to be organized in Pitt County. (Reflector Staff photos by Roy Hardee).

An interior view of the Reedy Branch Church, which will seat a total of four hundred persons, is shown above. The church was recently renovated in 1949, with numerous improvements made to the building.

Another part of the Reedy Branch Church is the modern nursery kept by the church for parents who want to go to church but have no one to keep the children. The nursery is regularly filled.

Heflin's Hurling, Robins' Hitting, Tops Goldsboro Cards By 7-3 Score

Locals Score Five In Big Seventh Frame; Tepedino, Strausser, Baktis Pace Hitting

By BERT MOYE
 Manager Randy Heflin gave up only five hits in pitching his Greenville Robins to a 7-3 victory over the Goldsboro Cardinals here last night before a paid crowd of 868. The win for Heflin was his ninth of the season, as against three reversals.

The win for Heflin was his ninth the seventh inning on two singles—by Guidice and Heflin—a double by Baktis, two walks, an error, two stolen bases, a wild pitch, and a passed ball, to provide Manager Heflin with the win.

The Cards took a 1-0 lead in the opening stanza when Manager Jim Herbison was walked and after advancing to third on two infield outs, came home when Bill Smith lined a double into left field.

The Robins came back to knot the count at 1-1 in the third frame when Paul Strausser walked and then on a Texas League into center field by John Tepedino. Strausser raced all the way home from first base.

The locals went out in front with a singleton in the sixth inning when Tepedino beat out an infield hit, was sacrificed to second by Guidice and George Hallows' single brought him home.

The Cards' other two runs in the game came in the ninth inning when Jack Orlando reached first on a fielder's choice and Umfleet, pinch-hitting for Pitcher Mannino, was walked and then Chuck Sedor came through with a double into left field to bring in the two runners.

Manager Heflin's win over the Cards was his second of the season and one of his losses has been to them. He struck out a total of nine men in last night's contest while walking seven. From the third through the sixth frames it was three-up and three down for the Cards. All of his five hits were scattered among as many Card players with Billy Smith and Chuck Sedor getting a double for the only extra-base knock.

Johnny Tepedino with two singles in three trips to the plate and Paul Strausser and John Baktis with a double each, paced the eight-hit attack off Pitcher Mal Mannino, who went the distance for the Cards. It was the fourth loss of the season for him, his first against the Robins. He has won three victories.

The Robins travel to Goldsboro tonight to meet the Cards in a single game and then on Sunday afternoon go to Wilson to play the Tobs in a double-header with the first game getting under way at 1:30 o'clock.

Boys' League

Giants vs. Pirates
 The Pirates gave the Giants their third defeat in a row yesterday morning at Third St. It marked the third loss without a win for the Giants who have a good team but have not hoped to click yet. The Pirates topped on Haymes for fourteen hits and won easily 10 to 5. Billy Jordan on the mound for the winners showed a good "knuckler" and coasted in for the win after his teammates had given him a comfortable lead. Jody Taylor, with three for four and Richard Joyner, Billy Jordan, Bobby Nunn and Coon Williams with two hits each were the leaders for the Pirates. Bob Watson got two for four for the Giants.

Robins vs. Red Sox
 W. Greenville's Red Sox continued their heavy slugging to take another top heavy win over the Robins by the score of 25 to 6. The Sox scored nine in the first and seven in the second to take a commanding lead and continued their heavy scoring throughout the game. Carawan, catching for the Sox, socked two homers. Tommy Key Norris, Strickland, Barnhill, Larry Powell, Wingate and Nobles were the leading hitters for the winners. Nixon, Conway and Bullock got the only three hits given up by Powell who was on the hill for the Sox.

Cards vs. Dodgers
 The Cards slugged out an easy 12 to 3 win over the Dodgers of Third St. yesterday at W. Greenville. The Dodgers who only two days before battled the Cards to a five to five tie, had a bad day and were never in the game after the first inning. Jerry Phillips, Gene Hudson and Tommy Smith were the leading hitters for the Cards with three hits each. Hendrix for the Cards hit for the circuit. Pat Sawyer on the mound for the Cards scattered six hits among as many batters.

Indians vs. Tigers
 The training School Tigers took over the lead in the Mite League with a 9 to 1 win over the up and coming Indians from W. Greenville. The Indians have yet to win a game but are steadily improving and should begin to win some games in the future. W. L. Allen Jr., the nine year old veteran of the Tigers, who pitched them to the league championship last summer, held the Indians to a lone safety and struck out fifteen batters. Allen, Bro Edwards, Peanut Nunn and Lewis Arthur led the hitting for the Tigers. Kelly Barnhill got the hit for the Indians.

Preacher Roe Is Again Jinx For St. Louis Cards

By JACK HAND
 (AP Sports Writer)

Preacher Roe must be Public Enemy No. 1 in St. Louis. Every time the Cards get hot, the lanky southpaw from Hardy, Ark., holds up the stop sign.

The preacher man did it again last night, snapping a seven-game St. Louis win streak, as he pitched Brooklyn to a 7-3 victory. The results slashed the Cards' lead to 2½ games.

Beating St. Louis is old stuff for Roe, who once tolled in the Card chain gang. Last year he whipped the Red Birds four out of five. So far this year he's 3-1 against St. Louis with more than half the season to go.

Johnny Sain, making the pitching comeback of the year, won his ninth for the Boston Braves on Sam Jethroe's ninth inning single with two out. Jethroe's hit, prolonging his hitting streak to 12 games, scored Sibby Sisti for a 6-5 edge over luckless Pittsburgh.

Al Dark and Hank Thompson provided the power for the New York Giants' Sheldon Jones in a 6-1 victory over Chicago, the Giants' ninth win in 12 games. Thompson homered to tie the score in the fourth and Dark's two-run double put the Giants out front to stay in the fifth.

The only day game in the majors, Cincinnati at Philadelphia, was rained out.

Hal Newhouser whipped Boston for the second time in six days, 4-1, before 54,000 Detroit home fans.

Lack Of Talent And A True Governing Body Ails Boxing

By MURRAY ROSE
 New York, June 17—(AP)—What's wrong with boxing? What should be done to get the game back on a healthy footing again?

You hear those questions asked often these days. There's a lot of things wrong with the sport. We haven't the space to go into it as fully as we'd like, but we've got a couple of things on our mind we'd like to give out with.

What's wrong?

1. Shortage of real talent.
2. Not enough fighting champions.
3. Too many exclusive contracts held on the better fighters.
4. Lack of a real central body to rule the sport.
5. Too much quibbling over percentages by managers of the top battlers.

We'd like to see a national commissioner appointed to rule the game with full dictatorial powers. Jack Dempsey, the old Manassa Mauler, and several others, have been advocating this for years.

One of the chief stumbling blocks to organizing such a department is New York. The Empire State's Athletic Commission contends that state law won't permit it to join the National Boxing Association. The other 47 states belong to the NBA. But even that sprawling body hasn't the power in itself to control the sport. It mostly recommends action to the state organizations.

A national commissioner could do wonders for the game.

Take the heavyweight snarl for instance. Eszard Charles, the ailing Cincinnati Negro, is the NBA champion. Lee Savold of Englewood, N.J., won British and European recognition as "world" titleholder by stopping England's Bruce Woodcock.

Now a Savold-Charles match, providing Charles gets over his heart ailment, certainly would provide a universally recognized world champion.

What's the chances of such a match? Slim, is our conviction. Yes, there's talk of putting that one on, but we'll have to see the boys sign the contracts before we believe it.

Schoolboy Rowe Is Given Release
 San Diego, Calif., June 17—(AP)—Former major league pitching star Lynwood "Schoolboy" Rowe was released by San Diego's Pacific Coast League club yesterday.

The 38-year old veteran of 16 years in the majors was signed by San Diego last spring as a free agent. He failed to produce a win and was charged with four defeats. His earned run average for 40 1/3 innings was 6.47.

Rowe was released outright. He was reported undecided about his future.

Citation Meets Only Horse That Beat Him Twice

Albany, Calif., June 17—(AP)—Citation and Noor go in a big one today.

The Calumet Farm flyer and the Irish-bred Noor meet in the $10,000 added 90th handicap at a mile and an eighth at Golden Gate Fields.

The money isn't too much—but the race is.

Citation, the top money winning horse of all time, will be facing his only two-time conqueror.

Noor won over the Calumet Comet twice at the Santa Anita. The pair haven't met since.

But Citation climaxed a stirring comeback campaign two weeks ago here by establishing a new world record of 1:33 3-5 for the mile. The $14,000 purse raised his earnings to $924,563.

Eight Swimming Records Held By Jimmy Thomas

Chapel Hill, N.C., June 17—(AP)—Jimmy Thomas, a pre-medical student at the University of North Carolina, now has eight American swimming records to his credit.

He set his latest two marks here yesterday. Seven of the records have come in official AAU trials he started Tuesday.

Yesterday's marks—the 440-yard short course backstroke and the 400 meter short course backstroke—were both set last year by Alan Stack of Yale. Thomas did the 440 yard in 5:04.7, compared to Stack's 5:06. He trimmed more than a second off the 400 meter when he did 5:02.7. Stack's record was 5:03.8.

Coach Ralph Casey said Thomas will try for the world's record in the 500-meter freestyle next Tuesday.

SMOKY JOE

By W. F. BRAGG

Chapter 29
There followed a little silence. Then old McDevitt said softly, "I think you about told the truth, Shay. Excepting that there were two killers at the cabin that morning."

"Two," Joe cried. "How do you know that, McDevitt?"
"Because," old McDevitt said dryly, "I was one of the riders who came up just in time to prevent that murderer from throwing a load of buckshot into your wounded father Monty with me. One of them was dressed in black. The other wore a hat with a band around it that glittered."

"Your concho hat band, Pecos," Joe charged.
Shay asked old McDevitt, "What were you doing at the cabin?"
"I came there," said McDevitt, "for the same reason you did. I came there to kill Stormy Munro. My boy was with me."

"Where did you bury him?" Joe asked.
McDevitt shook his head. "We didn't bury him. We loaded him on a horse and got him into the hills."
Pecos Shay gasped out, astonished. "So we—that is—the killer didn't finish up old Munro?"
"No, Shay."

Whisperin' and Monty walked into the barn at that moment. They saw Joe take old McDevitt by the shoulders and call him fiercely to describe the death of Stormy Munro. "I fought over your own son!" Joe pleaded. "I rode away. But he was my father. I deserve to know what happened to him."

McDevitt pushed away Joe's hands. He nodded to Whisperin' and Monty. "Watch the prisoner." Then he said curtly to Joe, "Follow me."

The first stars were out when old McDevitt reached the door of a small cabin not far distant from the main ranch house.
As McDevitt opened the door, Monty came running up.
"Get back to the barn," his father ordered harshly. "Don't leave one lone guard with that Shay. He's a devil, even if he's tied up. Get back there, Monty!"
"No! I want to be with Joe. I want him to know about this. I don't want him to think we put him up against the blade. He was my friend."

In rumpled blankets lay a white-bearded old man. His face looked wasted and pale in the lamplight. It was Stormy Munro. Joe sank to his knees by the bunk and buried his face against the blankets as he reached for a scrawny old hand.
"Dad," he said brokenly. "My dad—"

And then he felt on his bare head the gentle touch of weak and quivering fingers.
"Joe," old Stormy quavered. "Joe—I knew you'd come back. I held off from dying until you did—"
Joe raised his head and took his father's wasted form in his arms. "You're not going to die. You'll live, Dad!"

But this was no longer Stormy Munro, this week old man with gentle eyes.
"I'm all tired out, Joe," he murmured.
"Show the old spunk, Dad. The McDevitts gave you shelter when they felt more like killing you. You owe them something." You must

Eye For Profit

Los Angeles, June 17—(AP)—It happened during the downtown rush hour, with the Shrine convention getting up steam. Accompanied by his mother, a small boy, about eight, passed a Shriner.

"Hiya, Noble!" the youngster shouted, "welcome to Los Angeles."

"Shush," cautioned his mother, "you don't know that gentleman."

"I know, but I yelled that at one this morning," the boy explained, "and he gave me a quarter."

affairs of the camp completes the Williams family. She is a moving spirit in this outfit of pioneers, all of whom love life in the open. I asked the elder son, John, who is a graduate of the University of Maine, and he promptly replied that he wanted to be a guide for hunting and fishing.

Standards Of . . .

"When you say he's brilliant," I said, "do you mean he's clear in writing for the public or do you mean he uses words which have a special meaning for lawyers only?"

"For lawyers" the Dean said. But I said: "I thought we were talking about writing so that both lawyers and the public can understand."

Babson . . .

Better Opportunities For Clerks

Such young men, who would begin as clerks, when later promoted to become store managers would employ only similar earnest praying people with a burning urge to be of service. This spirit of helpfulness would both appeal to doctors and give the stores a high standing in the community.

Then the Justice pointed to a single word down deep in the opinion and the clerk looked and said: "Oh, now that you point it out, I can see where that word says what you had in mind. But only one lawyer in 100 would see that."

More Students Should Attend Theological Schools
Or, such colleges could give a two year course especially to train spiritually minded young people for business. They thereby could render further service as very few business colleges teach their students how to pray for or serve others. Such courses should naturally have some business students covering selling finance and administration, but these would also be helpful to those who are to enter the ministry of preaching. Not only does the nation's employment situation depend largely upon its selling organizations but a teacher's usefulness depends much on his salesmanship abilities. Hence, the basic question—Do those attending Theological Colleges really want to help most people in the most useful ways? If more of them would enter spiritually minded staffed businesses rather than overlapping churches.
