Big Three Agree To Lift West Germany's Controls

U. S., Britain And France To End State Of War With Germany; Any Attack On West German Govm't To Be Considered Attack On Three Big Powers

Frankfurt, Germany, Sept. 19—(AP)—The United States, Britain and France have agreed to end their state of war with Germany. This was announced today by the Foreign Ministers of the three countries, in a communique made public here.

London, Sept. 19—(AP)—Defense ministers of the Big Western nations have been called unexpectedly to New York to organize the quick formation of a central Western army.

Government officials both here and in Paris said today the British and French ministers probably will fly to the United States later this week. Arrangements for their suddenly-summoned parley apparently have not yet been finalized.

Any attack against the west German government will be treated as an attack upon the three big powers the foreign Ministers declared.

The Ministers, in their New York session, also decided to:

1 "Permit the establishment of mobile police formations organized on a land (state) basis but with provisions which would enable the federal (west German government to make effective use of all or part of this force in order fully to meet the exigencies of the present situation."

2 Review present prohibitions and limitations on German industries.

3 Remove immediately all restrictions on the size, speed and number of commercial cargo ships built for export.

4 Permit steel to be produced beyond the present limits laid down by the allies wherever such increased production would "facilitate the defense effort of the west."

5 Permit west Germany to set up a Ministry of Foreign Affairs to handle its own Foreign Relations, now handled by the allies.

The Foreign Ministers said they had given serious consideration to the problem of Germany's military security and to sentiments favoring German participation in the defense of western Europe. But no decision was reached on this question. "Study and exchange of views will continue on it

However, the Ministers ruled out any idea of rebuilding the German army outside the framework of common European defense.

They said:

"The Ministers are fully agreed that the recreation of a German National army would not serve the best interest of Germany or Europe. They also believe this is the view of the great majority of the German people."

Union Strikes; Charge Stalling

Winston-Salem, N. C., Sept. 19—(AP)—Union members have gone on strike against the Arista Mills here, charging the Textile Company with "stalling" on contract negotiations.

The strike started yesterday. Spokesmen for the CIO Textile Workers Union of America said that about 225 of the approximately 270 production and maintenance workers walked out.

The TWUA, which was certified as bargaining agent in June, said the company has "stalled" in five or six contract meetings since then.

Athletics Fund Drive Is Opened

Greenville Businessmen Begin Campaign Designed To Raise $7,500; Chairman Rawl Looks Forward To Early Success

Approximately 40 Greenville businessmen who compose the East Carolina stadium committee today began a campaign designed to raise $7,500 for athletic scholarships for the college.

The scholarship drive was touched off last night at a meeting of the group which was held in the north dining hall on the East Carolina campus.

Chairman Ed E. Rawl of the stadium committee told the group at the meeting last night, "What the coaches need and what they have to have to carry out this athletic program this year and next year is $7,500. I think that this week we can go out and wrap this thing up."

Each member of the stadium committee was given a list of business firms and individuals in Greenville to contact for donations to the scholarship fund. Practically all the local business firms contributed in the campaign in 1948 which raised $28,000 to build the stadium at the college, and a large number of firms contributed to the scholarship fund last fall when approximately $8,000 was raised by the committee.

College President John D. Messick last night reviewed for the committee the early attempts to rebuild the athletic program at ECTC following World War II. He also pointed out the growth the college has enjoyed during the past few years. The total enrollment of the college in 1946-47 was 1,382, and the total enrollment this year, Dr. Messick said, is expected to range between 2,300 and 2,400 students on and off the campus.

Dr. N. M. Jorgensen, head of the department of health and physical education at the college, discussed the athletic program in general, and left to Coaches Bill Dole, Howard Porter, Jack Boone and Johnny Long the discussion of the individual sports.

Football Coach Dole told the committee members, "There is a job which has to be done. When you started rebuilding this athletic program you started from scratch. You've done a great job. All of you will see the day either this year or next when you'll be proud of what you have done in this respect."

Dole said if his team can get by Lenoir-Rhyne Saturday night without a defeat, "We'll have a splendid season. If we don't, we'll still have a good season."

Basketball Coach Howard Porter outlined the prospects for the coming basketball season and said he expects to have more reserves and a better balanced team than last year. Jack Boone said prospects for a better baseball team than last year were good, and Boxing Coach Johnny Long said the coming season should find the Pirates more formidable in the ring than a year ago.

Rawl said the first report of the results of the stadium committee scholarship fund campaign will be released Monday and added, "I hope only one report on the drive will be necessary."

Falkland Offers Thanks For Help In Recent Blaze

The town of Falkland yesterday went on record yesterday through Chief of Police R. L. Tripp in thanks to the fire departments of five surrounding towns for their assistance last week when four buildings burned.

In a statement yesterday issued by the Police Chief, the persons stated:

"They also wish to thank the members of the State Highway Patrolmen for their fine help in the emergency.

"They wish to thank the people of the surrounding communities for their fine help in removing the merchandise and furning buildings."

The fire, which broke out about 8:30 Monday night, gutted the ABC store, Post Office, a warehouse and a merchandise store.

Plan Repairs On Parkway Route

Asheville, N. C., Sept. 19—Repair work is scheduled to begin this week on a slide-damaged section of the Blue Ridge parkway.

The slide, in a section between the Mt. Mitchell turn-off and Buck Creek gap further east, left a deep gash in the scenic highway, which is eventually going to link the Shenandoah National Park and the Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

A detour, using park service roads, has been established around the dmaged portion.

Merchants Hold Monthly Session

Association Directors Begin Christmas Planning

The Greenville Merchants Association directors held their regular monthly meeting last night in the merchants association office in the city hall.

A report from the trade promotion committee on plans for the Christmas decorations and program was received by the group last night from Chairman C. A. White.

A meeting will be held on Tuesday morning of next week at ten o'clock for the actual laying out of plans for the Christmas affair, White said.

A. Hartwell Campbell was welcomed into the organization as a new director by President D. J. Whichard.

The local secretary of the merchants group, Cora Powell will leave on October 15 to attend a three-day meeting of the North Carolina and Virginia Merchants Association secretaries to be held in Danville, Virginia.

It was reported at the meeting that J. H. Blount will represent the local association at the North Carolina Merchants Association directors meeting to be held in Raleigh on Thursday, September 21.

New Sanitarian For County Said Expected Soon

Health Officer Dr. T. G. Basnight stated yesterday afternoon, he is reasonably sure the county can procure the services of another sanitarian by October 1.

The department head would not state the man's name but said "I feel reasonably sure he will come to work in the county by the first of October."

The sanitarian, who at this time is working in another county in sanitation work and does not want his name mentioned, will come to Pitt highly recommended by the State Board of Health and the district sanitarian, Basnight said. He is experienced in all phases of the work, particularly milk sanitation.

The man will take the place of Charles Morgan who resigned effective September 10 as one of two senior sanitarians for Pitt.

Redistrict Township's Precincts

Elections Board Plan To Require Seven Voting Places Instead Of Four

Pitt county's board of elections has decided to break up the precincts of the Greenville township and make smaller voting precincts for the township.

The decision was made at a meeting of the three-man election board Friday. It was announced yesterday by Board Chairman J. H. Harrell.

The redistricting of the precincts of the Greenville township will make seven voting places instead of four, and will decrease the number of votes in each of the precinct boxes. The three polling places which have been used for a number of years—the city hall, the court house and the Third Street school—will continue in use. The West Greenville school will be a polling place as it was last year.

The new polling places which will be added are the Farmers warehouse across the river, the Gold Leaf warehouse at the intersection of Charles and 14th streets, and E. H. Boyd's store which is located on the Greenville - Washington highway about three miles from the Greenville city limits.

The redistricting of the precincts of the Greenville township will make necessary a new registration for all the voters in the township. Books for registration will be open at the polling places of the seven precincts for three consecutive Saturdays beginning October 14. The books will be open at the polling places from 9 a.m. until sunset.

Harrell said the reshuffling of the precinct boundaries and the creating of new precincts was done "because the four precincts in the township were so badly overcrowded. The board has been thinking about changing the precincts for some time—ever since the war was over." During the war years the vote in the four precincts was light, Harrell said, but it has become increasingly heavy since that time.

The change in the Greenville precincts is expected to cut considerably the sizes of the former precincts two and four which were the largest two precincts in the county. The change may, depending upon the new registration, leave the Ayden precinct the largest in the county. The Ayden precinct cast approximately 900 votes in the Democratic primary last May.

According to the order of the election board, Greenville precinct number one will consist of all of the township north of the Tar river, and the polling place will be Farmers warehouse.

Precinct number two will be bounded on the north by the river, on the west by Greene Street, on the south by Fifth Street and highway 264 to Allen's road and west of the Allen road to the river. The polling place will be the court house.

The third precinct will have the Third Street school as its voting place and will include all the Greenville township west of Greene Street, south of the river and north of Fifth Street and highway 43 leading to Falkland. Precinct num-

Red Reinforcements Race Allies In Bid To Save Seoul

U.S. Marines Pass Inchon On Road To Seoul

U. S. Marine Amtracs roll through the streets of Inchon on their way toward Seoul, the South Korean capital held by the Reds. The burning building was set afire by the bombardment and air attack that preceded the landing of the Americans. Seoul is about 20 miles inland from the port city of Inchon. Liberation Force Of 40,000 Men Build Up For Spanning Han River And Quick Capture Of Capital; Red Lines On Southeast Box Perimeter Cracking Wide Open

Tokyo, Sept. 19 —(AP)— Allied liberation forces rushed up river-crossing equipment today to jump the Han water barrier at Seoul before Red defenses can be rallied.

The allies were racing against oncoming communist reinforcements for possession of the besieged capital city.

The Reds appeared to be abandoning the old allied southeast beachhead box perimeter in an effort to save Seoul for themselves.

Marine-led allies were mounting a 40,000-man offensive aimed at spanning the half-mile wide Han river and winning Seoul quickly.

Marine forward elements were reported two miles from Seoul—across the unbridged river from the Red-held capital.

The southeast front was cracking wide open under pressure and Red withdrawals toward the allied second front 140 miles away.

A shield of Sherman and Pershing tanks and infantry was thrown out on the Marine south flank in Seoul's cross river suburbs to block off the north bound Reds.

There the allies had a tank-ringed perimeter set up with great firepower.

Advance Red columns were reported within a few hours' drive of Seoul.

Seventh Division infantrymen—Americans and South Koreans—streamed from Inchon into positions across the main highway leading into Seoul from the south.

The Marine vanguard had driven into Yongdong, 20 miles south of Seoul on the Han's southwest bank, and another Leathernecks force pushed about seven miles — also on the southwest bank of the Han.

Korean Reds rolling north in motorized columns faced the task of fighting through this barrier to Seoul or running the right flank.

As Red Koreans streamed out of positions on the southeast Korean front in their northward flight, allied forces punched ahead there.

They seized Waegwan, fought into the hilltop walled city of Kasan, put at least 4,000 men across the Naktong and a bridge over the river—all in the center of the old 125 mile perimeter — and forged gains on the Masan and Pohang ends.

Thousands of tanks, trucks, amphibious tractors and other river-crossing equipment moved toward the Han river in solid columns.

Air observers spotted three motorized Red columns moving northwest toward Seoul along heartbreak highway.

Warplanes strafed and rocketed the rear column on the stretch between Kumchon, 18 miles northwest of Waegwan, and Yongdong.

At least 74 Russian-made artillery and mortar pieces were abandoned by the Reds east of the Naktong. Ordnance men set to work preparing them for combat use by allied troops.

Huge stores of Russian-made ammunition also were seized. One regiment alone captured 200 tons.

Engineers threw a bridge across the Naktong, assuring a steady buildup of the bridgehead.

Negro troops retook Battle Mountain, bloody peak which has changed hands nearly 20 times. The bald peak is two miles west of Haman.

Units of the South Korean First and Sixth divisions drove to positions nearly 20 miles north of Taegu.

UN Assembly In Critical Session

Fifth General Assembly Opens In New York Today

New York, Sept. 19—(AP)—The world's top diplomats gathered here today for the opening of the United Nations fifth General Assembly—its most critical meeting in U.N. history.

A gavel rap by retiring president Carlos P. Romulo, Philippines foreign minister, unleashes a review of the world's troubles that may occupy the 500 delegates from 59 member nations for the next three months or more.

The foreign ministers of the 12 Atlantic pact nations, including the British-French-American Big Three, closed their sessions yesterday. They moved today to the auditorium at Flushing Meadow, on the old New York World's Fair grounds, to weigh their concern over East-West differences with fellow U.N. members.

Britain's Ernest Bevin, France's Robert Schumann and U. S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson scheduled their last Big Three meeting for late this morning before going to the assembly hall to head their delegations.

Russia's Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky and a number of other delegates were aboard the Queen Elizabeth, speeding into New York harbor this morning to disembark them in time for the afternoon session.

Vishinsky's haste was to reopen his fight to oust Nationalist China from the U.N. and seat Communist China.

Communist-Led Troops Take Indo-China Town

Frontier Outpost Captured By Force Newly-Armed In China; French Troops On March To Attempt Recapture Point

Saigon, Indochina, Sept. 19—(AP)—A French army communique said today Communist-led Vietminh troops newly armed in China were used for the first time in attacking the outpost town of Dong Khe on the Chinese frontier.

The army announced that the town fell today to the guerrillas after a bitter three day fight, but that the exact identity of all of the attackers was not yet known.

"Dong Khe was attacked Sept. 16 at dawn by Vietminh units not completely identified, but certainly exceeding four battalions in strength and supported by artillery and heavy mortars," the French communique said.

The inability to obtain complete identification left open the possibility that Chinese Communist troops might have assisted in the fight which left the town in flames.

Unofficial sources said the French had lost 40 killed and 80 wounded or missing in the attack.

French military sources disclosed that reinforcements are pushing on Dong Khe in an effort to retake that important post. Paratroopers dropped Sunday on nearby Tha Khe, the sources said, and Moroccan infantry are attempting to hammer north through the rugged mountain terrain.

Failure to regain the Dong Khe fortress would isolate and endanger Caobang, a larger post to the north. As it is, Caobang now can only be supplied by air.

BUNCOMBE FARMERS VOTE

Good Leaf Sales On Local Market

Near-Record Day Greets Announced Marketing Holiday

Near record sales on the Greenville tobacco market yesterday marked the announcement that all flue-cured markets will close after Wednesday's sale.

Yesterday all warehouses in Greenville sold a total of 1,677,634 pounds for $944,441.73. The average was close to opening day—$56.30.

Sales Supervisor W. L. Whedbee, of the Tobacco Board of Trade, stated this morning he expects full sales today and tomorrow. The tobacco being brought in now is of better quality he reported, the majority of it was smoking leaf.

A telegram sent to Whedbee from F. S. Royster, president of the Bright Belt Warehouse Association Incorporated, stated the Association will meet next Monday to decide on a re-opening date.

Royster stated the date will be voted upon by the executive committee of the warehousemen. The telegram also officially notified the local warehouse operators that sales will be suspended after Wednesday morning.

Pitt Countian Is Wounded In War

Farmville, Sept. 19.—Another Pitt County casualty of the Korean war was noted today when the parents of Tommie Dixon, Jr., colored, were notified by the Defense Department last week he had been wounded in action.

The Department wired Dixon's father, Leamon Dixon, 108 Cotton Street, that the 20-year-old private first class had been wounded. The wire did not state how seriously the youth was hurt.

Dixon joined the army 21 months ago in December and received his training at Fort Benning, Georgia. He has been in Korea since the outbreak of hostilities.

He was born in Greene County near Snow Hill and moved to Farmville 13 years ago. He attended the public school here, leaving at the end of the ninth grade. His last letter home was dated August 28.

Offers Plan For Arts Building To Cost $4 Millions

Raleigh, Sept. 19—(AP)—A $4,900,000 arts building is proposed for the state.

Plans for the new building were laid before the Advisory Budget Commission yesterday by Dr. Christopher Crittenden, director of the Department of Archives and History.

The commission was asked to recommend an appropriation of $3,996,264 for the project. Of this, $3,540,264 would be spent for the building, $350,000 for the land and $106,000 for the equipment.

The building would house the State Art Gallery, the State Museum of Natural History and the State Department of Archives and History.

Federal Inspection Today For Local National Guard

The local unit of the National Guard will have its annual federal inspection today. The inspection will be carried out by a regular Army inspector from the Third Army. There will be two different phases of the inspection. All records, files, equipment and supplies will be inspected during the afternoon with the inspection of the personnel and training coming at the regular drill tonight.

At the federal inspection last year the local unit received a rating of excellent in all phases of the inspection which included records and office procedure, transportation equipment, supplies, kitchen and eating equipment, and training. Special efforts are being made this year to improve the grades on the inspection.

Two prizes of $5.00 and $2.50 are being offered to the two men in ranks who present the best appearance as to neatness, military bearing and knowledge of duty.

The Guard has lost several men by enlistment to regular services and need additional men to fill out their quota. Young men who are alert, in good mental and physical condition are needed to fill the ranks. Anyone interested in joining the Guard contact any member of the Guard or see the personnel at the Armory.

Pitt PMA Nearing End 1950 Task; Plan Ahead

The county Production and Marketing Administration today ran out of money for agriculture conservation practices during the rest of 1950.

However farmers should not be alarmed because the 1951 program is just beginning. Since last Friday the office staff of the PMA office has been writing orders for next year's program of permanent pastures, winter cover crops and small grains.

At the same time most farmers have been applying for government assistance for next year's ACP program, some farmers have applied for the remainder of funds approved for this year. This morning a spokesman for the office stated the last of the $118,000 has been exhausted.

No figures on orders for 1951 have been released yet. Chairman of the County Commission Jamie Wilson stated this morning he could give no definite figures concerning the overall allocation for the program or for the money that has been approved since last Friday.

"We're trying to close out the 1950 ACP program now so we can start on 1951," he said this morning. "There are just a few dollars left for practices this year."

Since Friday's opening day, 33 farmers have applied for funds during the remaining months in this year. Prior approval for them centered around applications for lime, fertilizer and seed.

The farmers who in the past three days have helped to exhaust the county funds brought to a total of $49,818.19 provided for purchase of the three commodities.

For lime farmers during the year thus far have received $12,859.30. They receive $2.90 to help pay for a ton and they pay the rest themselves. The same delineation of cost is practiced for fertilizer and seed.

The total expended this year for small grain is $12,246.50. Of that amount oats and barley were partially financed with a total of $2,992.50. The farmer receives $1.50 on the cost of an acre. Those farm-

Invading North Korea

A Dangerous Question That Must Soon Be Answered, Shall The United Nations Forces Invade North Korea; The U. N. Goal Is To Unite Korea; Red Rescue

By DeWITT MacKENZIE

Continued success of the powerful United Nations offensive in South Korea will mean that ultimately the peace organization will have to face the dangerous question of whether its forces shall cross the 38th parallel and occupy Northern Korea.

One used the expression "dangerous question" advisedly. Invasion of Northern Korea could produce an Asiatic upheaval. And with the major powers preoccupied in the Far East, there might easily be an explosion in Europe.

The U. N. goal, of course, is not only to smash the Red invasion of South Korea and restore peace, but to unite North and South Korea under one government, chosen by the people. So far as one can see now, that must call for temporary military occupation of North Korea.

General MacArthur's chief of staff, Maj. Gen. E. M. Almond, yesterday pointed out that if the enemy is destroyed in South Korea there is no problem about the 38th parallel. It becomes a political question.

That is correct, but it strikes me that this immediately poses a fresh problem of how long it could remain a political question. Occupation of Northern Korea by U. N. troops might bring neighboring Chinese Communist forces in great strength to the rescue of the Korean Reds.

Apropos of this, two big Chinese armies are sitting on the border of North Korea, watching developments. Other Chinese and Manchurian troops are available, and Russia has been feeding much military equipment to the North Koreans.

As for Russia, just as she has avoided becoming directly involved in the present Korean war, so she might be expected to pursue that policy if U. N. troops occupied Northern Korea. However, should Red China go to the rescue of the Korean Communists, with Moscow's blessings, it could produce a major upheaval in Asia.

And why should Russia steer clear of entanglement? Well, for the very good reason that the European theater is of much greater importance now than is the Far East. Moscow certainly would hesitate to commit vast strength to an Asiatic campaign at this junction.

Maybe A Job For Him

Story Of A Copy Boy Who Received A Warning From A Tax Collector And His Letter Of Reply; Perhaps The Tax Collector Has A Place For Him, Sounds Like It

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, Sept. 19—(AP)— We have in our office a copyboy with red hair. Maybe that has something to do with the letters he writes.

He's not really a boy. He's a man in his early 20's and a veteran. Last year, 1949, he didn't make much money for several reasons:

He was ill a couple of months, and then, because he was going to school most of the time under the GI Bill of Rights, he worked only part time.

But recently he got a letter from the tax collector for a county in one of the nearby states. The letter said:

"Dear M.:—r Our records show that you have not as yet made your state and local tax return which should have been filed before May 1.

"In order not to resort to the law and summons you to appear, we are sending you a tax form which we will thank you to prepare and return within the next five days. Please cooperate with us.

"If, prior to the receipt of this letter you have made your return, please advise us of the approximate date of filing of same, giving name and address under which you filed.

"Assuring you of my good wishes, I am

"Very truly yours,

The copyboy then sat down and wrote the tax collector this letter:

"Dear Mr.————————: In the individual income tax return form on page three, paragraph one . . . I find that every single person making less than $1,000 in 1949 does not have to file an income tax return. This applies to me.

"If you or your staff had taken as much trouble to find out how much I had earned in 1949 as you had in sending me the insulting letter that I received, I believe you would have found your letter unnecessary.

"My receiving this letter leads me to the conclusion that your office is under-staffed, incompetent, or that the income tax return form is in error. One of the aforesaid statements must be true in order for you to inform me that you would resort to the law and have me summoned if I did not file said form. For your records and for your deficient staff I am acknowledging

Miss Dorothy Ormond Guest At Luncheon On Saturday

Miss Dorothy Suggs Ormond was the guest of honor at a luncheon on Saturday at 1:00 p. m. when Mrs. Reid Perkins and Miss Virginia King Perkins entertained as a compliment to her at their home on Summit street.

Sharing honors with Miss Ormond was Miss Frances Kittrell. Both are brides-elect of early fall.

The luncheon guests were greeted at the door by Miss Perkins. They shook hands with the honorees and Mrs. Perkins, who were just inside to receive them. The brides-elect were wearing white carnation shoulder corsages.

After assembling in the living room, they were invited to the luncheon tables by the hostesses. The bride's table in the dining room was draped with a white damask cloth. In the center was a low, oblong bowl artfully arranged with large white chrysanthemums interspersed with fern. Surrounding the centerpiece was trailing greenery which entwined silver candelabra holding lighted cathedral tapers and showered with mums and tube roses tied with knotted satin streamers. On the antique chest against one wall was a crystal punch bowl holding an arrangement of white flowers and green fern.

The two auxiliary luncheon tables in the living room, covered with linen buffet cloths, had small bud vases of mixed fall flowers in the center. The guests found their places marked with formal place cards.

Mrs. K. B. Pace and Mrs. Luther Bowling assisted the hostesses in serving a two-course turkey dinner to the eighteen guests, who were close friends of the honoree.

Miss Ormond was given a pair of silver candlesticks by the hostesses while Miss Kittrell was presented a salad bowl in her selected china pattern.

Joint Hostessses Honor Bride-Elect

On Saturday afternoon Miss Peggy Cox and Miss Alef Collins entertained Miss Mary Jeanine Cox, bride-elect of September, at a kitchen shower at the home of Miss Peggy Cox. The house was decorated throughout with lovely arrangements of cut flowers. Shortly after arrival of the guests Miss Cox was asked to open her many gifts. They were later put on display for the guests to see. Mrs. T. H. Boykin gave interesting points on a wedding and many games were enjoyed. The hostesses invited the guests into the dining room. The table was covered with a yellow cloth and centered with an arrangement of yellow mixed flowers in a red container. Red satin bows were tied at each corner of the table. The hostesses, assisted by Miss Polly Ann Brady, served decorated cakes, mints, nuts and bridal ice cream. The honoree was presented a cream and sugar set in her every day china. Goodbyes were said by Mrs. Walter Cox and Mrs. J. E. Collins.

Most of our time, after school for several weeks now will be directed toward this important senior activity.—Alma Paramore, reporter.

Musical Program For Lions Club Monday Night

The Greenville Lions Club was treated to a musical program last night at their regular weekly club meeting.

The group heard seven selections sung by Ruth Little, soprano, accompanied by Mrs. Howard Bodkin at the piano.

The numbers were "Lilac Time," "Only a Rose," "Kashmiri," "Blue Skies," "The Song Is You," closing the program with "My Lindy Lou." Mrs. Bodkin gave a rendition of "Nautilus" by Edward McDowal on the piano.

Lion President Larry Averette read a report from District Governor O. E. Dowd on attendance among the local clubs in this district and standing of the various clubs over the past month.

George Wilkerson told members that the week of September 24th-30th has been set aside for the blind drive promoting the "White Cane drive."

A tentative bucget of $2,000 to be raised for the drive has been set, it was reported.

Following the regular club meeting the board of directors held their weekly meeting.

Representing the high school in place of the regular Junior Lion was Glenn Scott. Another guest of the club last night was Kenneth Kite.

Semmes is remembered for his outstanding work in building up the much needed Confederate Navy. He captained "The Sumter" which was the first ship of war commissioned by the Confederate States and the first to display the Stars and Bars of the Confederacy on high seas. He also captained the "Alabama," one of the most famous Confederate cruisers. The Battle of Bentonsville which took place not too far from this vicinity was one of the outstanding Confederate successes.

The social hour followed. The hostess assisted by her granddaughters, Mary Kathryn and Gwen Johnson served Coca-Colas, sandwiches and cookies.

Formal Tea On Saturday Compliments Brides - Elect

Between the hours of 4:00-5:30 on Saturday afternoon, Miss Frances Kittrell and Miss Dot Ormond were complimented at a formal tea given by Mrs. J. D. Messick and Mrs. J. Knott Proctor at the home of Mrs. Messic.

Tall standards of mixed greenery were used in the spacious reception hall, while in the drawing room mantel arrangements of bronze dahlias were used. On the piano was placed a large vase of red and white dahlias, while throughout the other rooms the floral decorations emphasized a green and white color note.

Miss Mary Rose Messick was at the door to welcome the callers and introduce them to the receiving line, composed of Mrs. Proctor, Miss Kittrell, Miss Ormond and Mrs. Messick. The honorees were wearing white corsages made to resemble small calla lilies given them by the hostesses.

Mrs. F. L. Blount invited them into the dining room for refreshments.

The dining room table was covered with a Madeira cut-work cloth and held a bridal arrangement composed of dolls, flowers and streamers. The lighted miniature bride and groom were placed atop a five-branched silver candelabra, which held epergnettes overflowing with white mums. From this ribbons in white and silver showered with tiny white pom-poms and green foliage fell in graceful streamers to the other end of the table, where a large silver serving tray held bridal ices in green and white. Surrounding the tray were large pom poms and fern.

Mrs. H. L. Ormond and Mrs. J. B. Kittrell, mothers of the honorees, alternated in serving the ices, and assisting in passing mints, nuts, and bridal cakes were Misses Mary Rose Crisp, Kathryn Van Nortwick, Lillian Wooten, Janice Ormond, Ione Bradsher and Mrs. J. B. Kittrell, Jr.

From the dining room the callers were invited into the rear hall by Mrs. M. L. Wright. They were greeted at the door of the drawing room by Mrs. W. E. Hooker and shown into the sun parlor where they were given cups of punch.

The punch table, presided over alternately by the mothers of the honorees, was covered with a green and white linen cloth. The crystal punch bowl was encircled by large clusters of frosted purple grapes placed along the rim and hanging gracefully over the sides. At the opposite end of the table was an unusual white swan floral arrangement. Tiny white lilies, small mums, and lily leaves were placed in a crystal swan in such a way that they resembled feathers, wings and tail. Miss Hannah Proctor and Miss Mary Will Long passed the cups of punch to the guests.

Goodbyes were said by the callers to Mrs. K. B. Pace.

Bridge Party For Brides-Elect

Miss Jane Hadley was hostess at bridge on Friday night at her home on Evans street, complimenting Miss Dot Suggs Ormond and Miss Frances Kittrell, whose marriages will be solemnized in October.

Seven tables were arranged for bridge in the living room, drawing room, and reception hall, which were thrown ensuite.

The honorees were given shoulderettes of white mums and tube roses upon arrival and with the hostess greeted the guests at the door.

In the rooms where the card tables were placed, flowers in colors of gold and purple were used in mantel and table arrangements.

The guests found their places at bridge marked with bridal tallies. After several progressions, a pink quilted satin bridge table cover was given to Mrs. J. J. Perkins, holder of high score.

At the conclusion of play, a frozen fruit salad course accompanied by iced tea was served. Assisting the hostess were Mrs. Morgan Fambrough, Miss Agnes Fullilove and Mrs. Robert Wolff.

The honorees were presented gifts of crystal in their selected patterns by Miss Hadley.

TRUTH AND HALF-TRUTHS

Our generation is afflicted with a terrific rash of half-truths. Communism wins its converts by feeding them half-truths. There is social injustice in the world; everybody can see this; all men are created free and equal. Therefore be a Communist and live in a world ruled by the people.

Well, it is only a short time, of course, until we see the foul dishonesty of this whole reasoning. A few men are using a multitude of gullible people for their own ends. They are persuading them to give up themselves and their possessions, and their persuasion is the persuasion of half-truths.

Some preachers mar their ministry by preaching half-truths, when the proclamation of the full gospel of Jesus Christ is their solemn privilege. There are many reformers today striving for good causes, but their whole enterprises are cluttered up with a lot of half-truths. Medical quacks often have remedies with some virtue in them, but the danger of the quack arises from his association with a lot of medical half-truths.

Demand the whole truth. "Ye shall know the truth," declared Jesus, "and the truth shall make you free." But it must be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. Half-truths will not do.

Even Greater Dividends Are In Store For Us

Athletics has become a major role in practically every college in the country. The colleges have to a large extent gained popularity and enjoyed growth in accordance with the prominence of their athletic teams.

East Carolina Teachers College is no exception to the rule. During the past three years the college has grown from approximately 1,500 students to its present total enrollment of more than 2,000. The growth has been due to the leadership of Dr. J. D. Messick, president of the school, the varied scholastic program which is being offered, and to the popularity the school has gained through its improved athletic program.

In addition to Coaches Bill Dole, Howard Porter, Jack Boone and Johnny Long, the citizens of Greenville and Pitt county have played an important part in the school's athletic program through financial support.

It takes a lot of money to field good athletic teams in today's college competition. That money has to be supplied by friends of the individual school until such time as the athletic program gains enough momentum to pay its own way.

Today another drive was begun by Greenville businessmen to raise money for athletic scholarships for East Carolina. The goal has been set at $7,500, and the ECTC coaches seem to think that amount now will see the athletic program at the college through the 1950 and 1951 seasons.

In one sense, a gift to the ECTC scholarship fund is a donation. In another sense, it is a good investment in the most prominent industry Greenville and Pitt county have. Not only does ECTC bring literally thousands of people into our midst every year, but the vast majority of the one and one-half million dollars spent on the college's operating expenses every year is spent in Pitt county.

The more the college grows the greater asset it will be to our community. The better the athletic program for the college, the more new students it will attract, and the more publicity they will garner for Greenville and Pitt county.

Already we are seeing the dividends of the money our citizens have put into athletics at East Carolina. With the proper response to the current scholarship fund drive, the dividends from the college athletic program will be even greater.

A Long Time Yet For Completed Program

At long last we have been given a general outline for Civilian Defense.

Took a long time, something we begrudge in matters of such importance, but in view of the multitude of contingencies to be met it is somewhat understandable.

As outlined, there is a vast amount of detail to the program required by all levels of government, from the national to town level. It behooves all who are connected with this program to work diligently that there will be no weak links. The program is so complex that even with a concentrated effort completion of the vast organization required will be long in coming. Much can happen in that interval of unpreparedness.

No one knows whether the civil defense program will ever be required, either on a localized or nationwide basis; nevertheless, the labor and expense involved can never be counted as wasted.

Military Policy: 1950

Because U.S. foreign policy has shifted from containing Communism to contesting the aggressions of its followers, it is more important than ever before that the American people understand their military policy, according to General Omar N. Bradley, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. To aid in this understanding, General Bradley has prepared an article entitled, "U. S. Military Policy: 1950" which will appear simultaneously in the October Reader's Digest and October Combat Forces Journal. As Chairman of the Military Committee of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, the Chairman of the Western Big Three's Standing Group, General Bradley addresses the article not only to American military men and civilians but also to our friends in Western Europe.

"The year 1950 has been a turning point in world affairs," he says, "the free peoples of the earth have decided to resist Communist aggression wherever it occurs, and by force of arms if necessary."

Because our foreign policy has shifted, our nation must have a long-range policy on which to base its preparedness. "This cannot be quickly improvised, nor waver with every wind that blows across the Elbe in Germany or down the Yangtze in China," he writes.

"The Communists have demonstrated that they know where they are going and are getting there as fast as they can. Korea indicates their willingness to provoke the use of arms to gain their ends, with indifference to peace or the reaction of non-Communist nations."

General Bradley thinks that neither diplomat nor soldier alone can lead the American people to wise international action. "Both voices, if the course pursued is to be realistic and effective, must be heard. The soldier can see strategic perils that the civilian might overlook. The soldier must not direct civilian policy, but the civilian must never overcommit the soldier. We must never have a foreign policy that sends our armed forces to world tasks beyond their capabilities."

Military policy must be constant, and at the same time flexible enough to adjust itself to the demands of foreign policy. Today these two are united on three basic objectives: (1) To maintain our form of government and our way of life at any cost. (2) To seek peace, but not appeasement. (3) To support the United Nations, for we are agreed that world peace is an integral part of American peace.

"This year is a turning point toward accomplishment of these objectives," he says. "In Asia we drew a line of defense against Communist aggression at considerable military risk. We chose to defend Korea when it was attacked, rather than watch aggressors 'pick it off' and then wait to see what country would be next."

Another crucial 1950 decision is that both foreign and military policy call for defense of Western Europe from the start, "not for a liberation of our friends after they have been overrun, and their homes occupied."

It was recognized, however, that American military capabilities should not be "unduly weakened" by involvement in areas of secondary importance and of negligible strategic value. The whole vast semi-circle of Asia from the China Sea to the Mediterranean Sea can be regarded as a range of volcanoes that can erupt into local wars at any moment if the Communists so choose."

Two principles should guide us in our attitude toward all such local wars. (1) We will recommend aid only to those peoples who are willing to fight Communist aggression. (2) We will refuse absolutely to allow local wars to divert us from our central task. "They must not be allowed to consume so much of our manpower and resources as to destroy our strength and imperil our victory in a world war," he emphasizes.

"No enemy is likely to overcome us unless he first possesses Western Europe which is still the strategic pivot of the world." The defense of the United States is our primary aim, he says, and the defense of Western Europe forwards that aim.

In discussing defense, General Bradley stresses the importance of the word "balance." As an example of the need for balance he cites that one of the greatest deterrents to an all-out attack on the United States has been our stock pile of atomic bombs and our long-range airplanes capable of delivering strategic bombing blows upon far-off vital targets.

"I nevertheless do not believe strategic bombing by itself can win a war," he says. "Our experience in Korea has emphasized the fact that we also need tactical air groups supporting ground troops."

The defense of our country requires a balance between our air, ground and naval forces, he continues. It requires a balanced development of all three—balance against the missions and assignments each is to perform in our defense plan. Within our air effort itself we need a balance between strategic and tactical. We need a balance among the many different types of planes available.

"The nations of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization have agreed that the defense of the North American area shall be effected on the principle of 'balanced collective forces'," he states. "This involves treating the North Atlantic Treaty Organization as a pool of forces.

"This principle contends that each country contribute to the common defense of those forces—air, sea and land—which its geographical situation or its industrial capacity, or its resources and manpower make specially appropriate. These individual contributions would be rounded into a collective balanced whole; and thus the North Atlantic Treaty Organization would have a military strength which the present overlapping efforts of its members could never reach."

It would be logical for the United States, for instance, to make a specially large contribution of strategic bombers and for Britain to make a specially large contribution of jet tactical aircraft, in which it is extremely proficient. The United States and the United Kingdom would logically contribute the bulk of navy support. Countries nearest the action would logically furnish the bulk of initial ground troops.

"The record of two World Wars says to Western Europe that we Americans do not flinch from fighting on the ground," he continues. "I think Korea conveys that same suggestion now.

"But Western Europeans must provide the first main force to stem the real force of a Soviet onset. Paris, Rome and Brussels are more vulnerable than Chicago, Detroit and Kansas City, both from the air and from the ground."

Defense of Western Europe seemed impossible a year ago. Today, the chance of accomplishing it is much brighter. Both economic and military reasons have contributed: (1) American productive power is at its all-time peak, not in collapse as Communist theory predicted. (2) Western Europe with help from the Marshall Plan but also by its own inherent vigor, has made an almost miraculous recovery. (3) The North Atlantic Treaty Organization's Spirit has greatly invigorated Western European military action, helped by money from our military-aid program. (4) There are important developments in the weapons useful for Western Europe's defense.

"No man can now foresee the end of this period of tremendous pressure against us," General Bradley concludes. "We only know that we must proceed unfalteringly . . . in full faith. Our enemy has faith in things material. I do not hesitate to say, as a soldier, that we must have faith in things spiritual."

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

Somebody Told Me that there is an interesting report on flying saucers in the October issue of the magazine "Pageant." Since I had already written several columns about saucers the report was not of too much interest, until I started looking for the magazine. Everywhere I went the October "Pageant" was sold out. Last night I checked the newsstand on West Fourth Street. The lady there told me that normally that magazine has to be turned back in after sitting on the shelf for a month. But this issue has sold double the normal amount. Every newsstand in town has sold out, and the newsstand has customers on the waiting list.

Finally I borrowed an issue to get the report. As I read it I was influenced by the report I read previously by Henry Taylor, news reporter for the American Broadcasting Company Henry says that the saucers are a product of the American Air Force, of a confidential nature, but "good news." He says the ones he has seen have a label directing the finder to report immediately to the Air Force.

The report in "Pageant" is from a book by Frank Scully, a veteran journalist. Scully has to give an assumed name for the man who gave him the report for reasons of security, so he called the man Dr. Gee, and told his story something like this: When the first saucer was found in Colorado and was discovered, the scientists decided to observe it from a distance for two days. Finally they decided that it was safe to go closer, as nothing had happened to indicate that there was life inside the ship.

The first examination revealed that there was no indication of damage, except a broken porthole. The scientists found a door in the ship, and entered. They found 16 bodies, 36 to 42 inches high. Their clothing resembled our styles in 1890. The bodies were normal from every standpoint and had no appearance of being what we call midgets. The only trouble was that their skin seemed to be charred and the scientists decided that their bodies had been burned as a result of air rushing through that broken porthole window, or something going wrong with the means by which the ship was being propelled. The scientists found some pamphlets or booklets, which probably were navigation instructions. Oddly enough, they found no maps. All of the booklets were turned over to the Air Force, but so far experts have not been able to translate the handwriting. The conclusion seemed to be that the saucer had come from Venus. The theory is that the size of the men had led the scientists to believe that the little men came from Venus. If there are any human beings on the planet Mars they would probably be three or four times as large as human beings on Venus.

Personally, I don't believe in this report. However, judging from the number of copies of "Pageant" that have been sold, half of Greenville is reading the story. Some of those who read it will believe it, so Scully will have convinced some, if not me.

And I thank you.

Around Capitol Square

Daily Reflector Bureau — By LYNN NISBET — Raleigh, N. C.

ETHICS—The State Young Democrats convention did not formulate or promulgate a code of political ethics, after all. Responsibility for the failure rests mainly upon James A. Baley, state chairman of the Republican party. It might surprise many Young Democrats to hear that the Republican chairman had so much influence in their group. It came about this way. President Terry Sanford announced last week he had named a committee to prepare a code and he predicted the convention would recommend its acceptance by all parties.

QUICK—Sanford did not suggest any item or statement for the code. Jim Baley was quick to see possibilities and was not bashful about seizing the opportunity. As the Vanguard of YDC delegates traveled to Asheville last Thursday they read in the daily papers the full text of a suggested code of ethics prepared by the Republican chairman. There were some things in the text which the Democrats could not accept. Most of it was obviously essential for any code, the items would have had to be included in a Democratic document. Then the Republicans would have claimed credit.

POSTPONED—The committee on ethics didn't function, no set of rules was suggested for consideration of the YDC conventioners. Accomplishment consisted in obtaining a resolution requesting the new president to name a committee with a view to action next year. At that time there will not be a campaign in progress. Democrats and Republicans alike will be less acutely conscious of such things as use of absentee ballots, gerry-mandered districts and strictly partisan county boards of education, excessive campaign spending and other practices which would be regulated by a code of ethics.

APATHY—The YDC delegates just didn't want to be bothered with anything. Only semblance of contest for officers was the race between Jim Chestnutt of Clinton and J. W. Griffin of Forest City for national committeeman. Even that failed to get up much steam. Other positions were uncontested, with the western half of the state copping nearly all of them. A vice president from Edgecombe and the national committeeman from Sampson comprised the eastern spoils. The president from Buncombe, a vice president from Forsyth, the secretary from Guilford, the treasurer from Burke and the national committeewoman from Union, gives the organization a very definite western coloring. None of the youngsters seemed to be concerned about that or about other items on the program. Expected attendance of 1,000 to 1,200 was reduced to approximately 300—although the representation was well distributed over the state. An Asheville observer noted that although this was a statewide gathering at which home town man was being elected president without opposition, there were perhaps not more than two dozen local people at the formal banquet.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

GESTURE OF FAIRNESS

(Henderson Daily Dispatch)

Decision of the Henderson City Council to pledge to all men called in the draft that their old jobs will be open to them when they finish their service and return home is a gesture of fairness reminiscent of World War II days. Thus far no Federal statute has been enacted to protect military men generally, as was true in the last war, but as hundreds of thousands are called up such legislation may be anticipated. The city's action well in advance of any such requirement gives it a place of leadership in that direction.

For governmental agencies at whatever level to show the way in this respect sets an example to private concerns. Irrespective of legal edicts, most employers recognized the justice of furnishing employment to their men at the end of hostilities five years ago. In that manner, millions of soldiers found immediate work upon discharge from the armed services and thus were able to resume their former economic status at home.

It may be assumed that this will be the case in most instances in the present emergency. Indeed, most employers will probably be pleased to have with them again experienced workers after absences in the service of their common country.

A TRAFFIC POLICY

(New Bern Sun-Journal)

Who gets hurt when you run downtown and fix a traffic ticket you got for driving too fast, or maybe for sneaking through a stop sign when you thought you wouldn't get caught? Nobody, perhaps — until the next time you're in a hurry. You know if you're stopped you can get it quashed, so you try to beat the red light and another car beats you instead; or you forget what the speed-limit sign says, and a little boy suddenly chases his ball out in front of you.

It couldn't happen to you, of course—or could it? The good citizens of Lansing, Mich., didn't think so. Like people anywhere else, they figured paying a traffic fine was all right for the other fellow, but why bother if you had a friend at City Hall? Then Lansing's city officials began to get uneasy. A record of 21 traffic fatalities and thousands of personal injury and property damage accidents in a city of about 100,000 didn't seem the way it should be.

They called in traffic experts. Their most important single recommendation, Murray Teigh Bloom points out in his ticket-fix survey in Woman's Home Companion, was "If people know they can fix tickets they're not apt to drive safely. A strict enforcement setup with teeth in it is badly needed." Despite threats they were committing political suicide, Lansing officials swore off ticket fixing. They put a penalty on it of 90 days in jail or a $100 fine. With the help of the Lansing State Journal, which aired all traffic violations in a daily column, they made it stick.

Today the National Safety Council calls Lansing the safest traffic city in America. The honor came as a result of the no-fix policy and a new kind of uniform traffic ticket—ideas which have spread to 78 other Michigan cities and many other places.

Business Today

America's armament program is becoming a bonanza for non-Communist foreign countries.

It entails stepping up purchases abroad. This demand has naturally increased prices. In some instances foreign governments have taken action themselves to make higher prices stick and cut in for a share of the proceeds.

Here's a quick run-down of made-in-America booms abroad:

Wool: With the world supply short, military authorities are planning to stockpile wool. This would push already skyrocketing wool prices higher. Putting a ceiling on wool prices has been suggested to the Australian government but Australia, together with new Zealand and South Africa, appears more interested in a plan for government buying to keep prices up.

Soda ash: Production of this basic chemical has been cut by strikes here and imported lots are being offered at sky-high prices.

Natural rubber: Prices have jumped from 21 cents to 57 cents a pound since June 25 and future prices indicate they will go higher. The Indonesian government is adding an export tax of about 7 cents a pound.

Quicksilver:: Prices are being pushed up in Spain and other Mediterranean countries; it is now around $85 a flask of 75 pounds.

Coffee: With demand here already at the highest in history, it is being increased by Defense Department purchases. While it may seem that a man becoming a uniformed coffee drinker ceases to be a civilian coffee drinker, it's not as simple as that. The military must necessarily buy further ahead and buy for the potential maximum number of men rather than the actual number. It is also probable that men in the services drink more coffee than they do as civilians.

Steel: Increasing amounts of foreign steel are being offered to American buyers at premium prices.

Other metals: Prices of other metals produced abroad and which the armament program is making short here are hopping right on up.

The ECA is advancing $70,000,000 in counterpart funds (foreign moneys set aside to match ECA dollar contributions) to develop mining projects in Germany, Greece and overseas possessions of Belgium, Britain and France.

CIVILIAN IMPORTS ALSO RISING

In addition, because they fear shortages of civilian goods, importers are increasing purchases abroad. Purchases of letters of credit reached an all-time high in July and went on to a new mark in August. These are in anticipation of buying abroad in September and October.

All of these things, except when ECA uses counterpart funds, mean a flow of American dollars abroad. This will give foreign nations a greater buying power here but at the moment we have less to sell them.

Their dollars can be converted into gold, however. In recent months gold, contrary to the pattern of many years, is flowing out of the country.

OPENING UP MARKETS FOR OTHER SUPPLIERS

Foreign nations are benefiting in another, indirect way from the armament program. While so far there have been only minor cuts in exportable goods, it is certain that government interdiction and shortages will reduce the amount of things we can sell in foreign markets.

Because foreign buyers know this, they are already seeking new sources of supply. This may not mean a permanent loss of these markets because the countries most able to supply these markets are themselves under the necessity of rearming and won't have much surplus to export.

SPAIN SQUEEZES MORE THAN OLIVES

Though not connected with the armament program, there has been an interesting squeeze in Spanish olive oil.

Spain produces half of the world's crop and the government sets the price. During June and July American importers ordered oil at $460 a ton. Some sold on the futures market.

Last week the Spanish government announced that export permits would be issued for oil only at a price of $650 a ton. Those who have already sold the oil face losses up to $190 a ton. Spain can gain about $3,000,000 on the deal.

NEW AND HOT

COVERING: A plastic wall covering which is resistant to abrasive wear, scuffing and gouging, is now being made for the home and business market. (by U. S. Rubber Co., Rockfeller Center, New York 20). Previously it has been used by chain stores for counter fronts and walls. It's called Naugahyde and comes in 12 colors.

FLASH-PROOF: An interior paint for ships which will not flash or flame even when exposed to a blow torch, is being marketed (by Sherwin Williams Co., 32 Central Ave., Newark, N.J.).

WREATH: For holidays, there is a new plastic wreath base in an ivy leaf pattern to which evergreens, ribbons and flowers may be clamped. (It is by Kusan, Inc., 2716 Franklin Rd., Nashville, Tenn.).

BALER: A farm baler so automatic that it seems to think is announced today (by New Holland Machine Co., New Holland, Pa.). It automatically warns the farmer when the wire is running out, ties wires with eight full twists in two seconds, and has other features enabling it to bale 10 tons of hay an hour.

ENAMEL: An enamel for coating radiators and kitchen ranges "in all the high fashion colors" and that won't crack, peel or discolor under heat up to 500 degrees has been announced by Sapolin Paints, Inc., 229 East 42nd St., New York.

INSECTICIDE: A new bug-killer for plants is packaged in a flexible Bakelite polyethylene spray container. Contents include DDT as well as other insecticides. (It is by Bulb of the Month Club, Box 1010, Chicago 90.)

STENCILER: An electronically operated machine which will cut accurate stencils from almost any black and white copy will be unveiled October 23 at the National Business Show in New York by Times Facsimile Corp., 229 West 43rd St., New York.

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON—Anthony Palmer Micocci, pink and dimpled, arrived just in time to meet the publication date of his mother's first book. Although at present he indulges only in squalling, eating and sleeping, Harriet Palmer Micocci and her husband Tony, young and philosophical State Department employes, think he'll turn out to be the real critic of the book "Protocol and the Peabodies."

Mrs. Micocci wrote the book to help pay for the farm she and her husband bought within commuting distance in Virginia. In the beginning, she wrote, when they first fell in love with the old farm and its shambled dwelling, they thought that: "When you feel the urge to get away from it all, all you have to do is go ahead and do it. It's as simple as that."

You can buy a farm on a shoestring maybe, even a 100-acre farm, with a flock of chickens—"the peabodies," as the Micoccis came to call them—but sooner or later you've got to have folding money. The house and outbuildings had to be rebuilt, and rent had to be paid on an in-tawn apartment until the farm was habitable.

The young couple continued at their jobs in Washington until Harriet sought leave to have their first baby, Rhoda Maddalena. Tony told Harriet if she was going to write at all, she'd better write about sex. He said if you want to make money, it's sex, or vegetables." Harriet decided "to write about us anyway, and if nobody would read it, maybe our children would." Result: "Protocol and the Peabodies."

Not only does it detail all the problems involved in getting a farm habitable and working, it gives the reader a lively and intimate close-up of life in the so-called "striped pants" diplomatic set which is so much a part of Washington. It pokes fun at protocol, but the State Department approved the book because it "humanized" its individuals. I called Harriet Micocci just before the book was published. She was temporarily ensconced in the home of a friend in fashionable Georgetown, where the couple had lived before going to the "sticks."

"I'm just sitting here looking out the window, waiting for the baby," she told me. "This time the hospital is only seven blocks away instead of 28 miles. We've made great strides forward, but life on the farm is still pretty rugged. I hope the book will sell so we can buy a new wing to put the baby in."

Hal Boyle's Column

By DON WHITEHEAD

(For Hal Boyle)

On the road to Seoul, Sept. 19—(AP)—The North Korean soldier came marching down the road—stark naked. He was young and stockily built and limped painfully into captivity.

The bullet had hit the fleshy part of his left leg, leaving a small hole where it entered and a jagged wound where it had emerged. The Marine bullet had felled him when he tried to run away.

A Leatherneck walked behind him with a rifle pointed at his back. And the Marine ordered the naked soldier to sit beside the road while an interpreter questioned him.

The Leatherneck glared at the young communist who had blood smeared on his face and who cowered with his hands clasped behind his head.

Pfc. Josep Saia of Sacramento, Calif., said:

"That guy shot the sergeant. He got the sergeant right above the heart. He didn't live long."

Young Saia stared at the Red.

"He had on civilian clothes when we shot him but the boys stripped him and sent him down the hill," Saia said.

The interpreter finished his questions and the Marine snarled:

"Take him to the stockade. Take him back before I . . ."

And they took the Red soldier away.

Up on a hillside in his command post Col. Lewis B. (Chesty) Puller of Saluda, Va., sat in a graveyard looking at his maps. The colonel is a tough, leathery little man who still is fighting at 50 years of age after 33 years with the Marines. He could wear a chest full of medals for heroism on such places as New Britain, Peleilieu and other Pacific spots.

On his maps, Col. Puller traced the progress of his men from the point of their dawn attack to the hill where the sergeant was shot down late in the day.

Except for the sergeant, it had been a good day—and his men on the ridges could look across the valley and see Seoul in the distance.

Departs To Participate In Columbia U. Project

Howard B. Clay, associate professor in the department of social studies at East Carolina Teachers College, left the campus here September 17 for Columbia University, where he will participate during the fall quarter in the Citizenship Education Project, sponsored by Columbia University and financed by the Carnegie Foundation.

East Carolina is one of seven colleges selected from the nation's institutions of higher learning to participate in the project at the present time, and the only college south of Mason and Dixon's line taking part in discussions and conferences during the fall at Columbia.

Mr. Clay was recently appointed by President John D. Messick of East Carolina to represent the college here at Columbia and has been granted a leave of absence for the fall quarter. President Messick visited New York last spring, where with other college administrators he discussed plans and objectives of the project.

"The basic purpose of the Citizenship Education Project," says a progress report from Columbia issued last May, "is to strengthen citizenship in the nation." Emphasis in carrying out the program is placed on the public schools, and the long-range objective is that the program will become nation-wide. Control of public-school projects is local. Important phases of the work in the schools are improving student government organizations and vitalizing the study of democracy in action on the local, state, and national levels.

After returning from Columbia, Mr. Clay will be associated with the student-teaching program at East Carolina and will work with student teachers toward building more significant citizenship-education programs in public schools of this area of the state.

Mr. Clay has been a member of the East Carolina faculty since 1948. A native Georgian, he is a graduate of Emory University, where he earned both the bachelor's and the master's degrees. At present he is completing work on the doctorate at the University of North Carolina. Before coming to East Carolina, he was principal of schools at La Grange and Richlands, Ga., taught at Druid Hills High School, Emory University, and was an instructor at the University of North Carolina.

Red Oak News

Three great feasts were spread before the hosts of friends and members who gathered at the Red Oak Christian Church last Sunday to celebrate the annual Homecoming Day.

The first great feast came in the morning services when the pastor, Reverend Harold Tyer of Bath, delivered one of the most inspiring sermons ever heard at Red Oak. His subject was "The Supremacy of the Soul" and without any great outward show he presented facts that sank deep in the hearts of his listeners. Lawrence Tyson directed the song service and he and his brothers sang as a quartet, 'Is It Far to Canaan's Shore?"

Two new members were welcomed into the fellowship of the church.

The second great feast came at the noon hour when platter after platter of delicious fried chicken, old hams, barbecue, cakes, pickles and dozens of other good things to eat was spread on a long table in the shade of the trees. This feast was thoroughly enjoyed by a large crowd.

The third feast was a 'feast of good singing and fellowship" held in an afternoon service that lasted about an hour. Short talks of less than one minute were given by Rev. Thad Cox of the Farmville Christian Church, Mr. Credle, superintendent of Oxford City School, Mrs. Louella Stancill of Greenville, Mr. Office Stancill and Mrs. J. J. Jenkins of Mt. Pleasant and others. The Tyson quartet with Mr. Stanley assisting sang several numbers, and Mrs. B. L. Tyson played "Sweet Hour of Prayer" and "Whispering Hope" on her accordion and the audience joined in and sang.

It was a lovely day. An invitation that read "Come to the Feast" was extended and people from far and near and from all walks of life responded and it was a day that the Red Oak folks will long cherish in their hearts.

On Sunday night at the church fifteen members and five visitors attended the meeting of Circle No. 1.

In the absence of our secretary, Mrs. H. R. Allen gave the minutes of our last meeting, called the roll and gave the treasurer's report.

Mrs. Travis Crawford gave a very inspiring devotional. Birthday money, money from the sales of a stove and a gift of money from a dear friend, Mrs. Georgia James, was placed in our treasury.

Mrs. B. L. Tyson gave a report on the church carpet. The carpet has been shipped from the factory but has not arrived in Greenville. We wanted so much to have it on the floor by Homecoming Day. If nothing happens, it probably will be installed by next third Sunday.

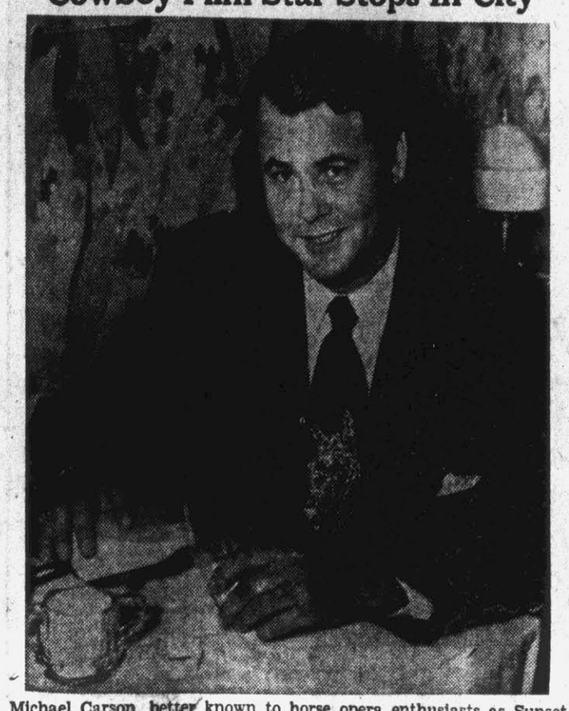
The circle will sponsor an eating booth at the Fair. Committees for various jobs were appointed and we all want to work together with all our heart and might to make this a success. The money derived from this booth will be applied on our rugs.

October 20, on Friday night, will be our annual 'Harvest Sale." We will serve supper to a limited number of people and the tickets will go on sale about the twelfth of October. We hope our neighbors and friends will support us in this Harvest Sale.

The meeting adjourned to meet next time with Mrs. H. R. Allen.

Reports from the bedside of Little Jimmy Allen, who has been confined at Duke Hospital for the past two weeks with polio, state that he is getting along just fine.

Cowboy Film Star Stops In City



Michael Carson, better known to horse opera enthusiasts as Sunset, is shown above topping off a hearty breakfast with a bottle of milk. The star of many cowboy movies during the past few years was a visitor to Greenville over Saturday and Sunday nights just before he joined Clyde Beatty's circus in Kinston yesterday. He will perform his sharpshooting act with the circus for the next six weeks. (Staff Photo by Roy Hardee.)

First Meeting For Ayden FFA

Ayden, Sept. 19—The Ayden Chapter of the Future Farmers of America held its first meeting of the school year in the Ayden Agricultural Building recently.

Officers elected for the year were: McDonald Hardee, president; David Hardee, vice-president; Delano Cox reported; Smodie Wilson, secretary; Billy Harris, treasurer; David Manning, delegate to Federation; and S. F. Peterson, advisor.

Each member was urged to exhibit his project work at the Pitt County Fair. Plans were made for a F. F. A. chapter exhibit at the fair. Fifteen members reported the purchase of feeder steers for projects. The chapter has chartered a bus to take them to the State Fair and a chapter project in town beautification was considered.

Chapter 3

As Stephanie waited for her first glimpse of Sandy, she prepared herself to see a stranger.

Yet when she saw him—her heart leaping to her throat—he looked almost exactly as he had. As tall, as big, as fair. At bit thinner, a few more lines in his face. But his eyes were as intensely blue. And when they saw her—a slender, tall girl dressed in beige, standing a little apart—they lighted up with the same laughter she had remembered.

"They do come true," he said, shaking his head wonderingly, his laughing mouth held in a dubious line.

"What does?" she asked.

"Dreams. What else? And you. It is you isn't it, Stevie? Just the same. Just exactly the same! As gorgeous, as delectable, as sweet as ever—"

"Of course, Sandy!" she said, wishing her heart would settle back down where it belonged.

"Hear, hear!" he cried. "I'd like to kiss you—the very daylights out of you, my pet. But not here. A much more excluded, seclusive spot—Where are we going? Where are we staying?"

"That's all arranged," Stephanie said quickly. Her heart was behaving better. "I'm parked right across the street."

"Lead the way, baby. I did not expect to be met in such style."

"We're not going to Mother's," Stephanie said. "We're going to a cottage out at the lake."

"Okay by me," Sandy replied. "However," he added, "I hope it isn't too quiet. It's been quiet enough where I've been."

"Was it very bad, Sandy?" She tried to keep the pity out of her low voice. "I don't mean that I expect you to tell me about it—only I hope it wasn't too awful for you."

"I survived. I'm all in a piece." His voice, always lightly mocking, held a tinge of irony. "I'll give you all the gory details later," he tacked on with his wide grin.

"I say, that looks like old Bill! Bill Davidson. Pull up, Stevie, run him to the curb, give him your horn."

"Not now!" she answered more sharply than intended. It was Bill Davidson, one of Sandy's old cronies. But Stephanie did not want Sandy to talk with him—with anyone—until she had had the talk that loomed ahead like a formidable bridge that must be crossed.

"Why not?" Sandy's brow furrowed with a deep scowl.

"There'll be plenty of time," Stephanie returned, striving to speak more lightly. "We'll have a party, all the old crowd, if you like. I should think you'd realize I want you just to myself for a while."

"The end is nowhere," Sandy remarked, as the car drew to a standstill. "Still, it should be a likely spot for a second honeymoon."

"You will like it, won't you, Sandy?" Stephanie asked, a throb of wistfulness in her voice, a shade of anxiety in her eyes.

"It's not too bad," Sandy responded. His voice held its teasing note, but his grin, the merriment that sprang into his blue eyes, gave reassurance. He put his arm around her slender waist and drew her to him, almost roughly. "With you here, Stevie, it may not be bad at all."

His kisses were rough, too; hungry, fierce. Then as suddenly he let her go, so that she stumbled a little and had to catch hold of a chair-back.

"Still the Ice Queen," he said. There was no laughter in his blue eyes. He turned from her and went over to the fireplace and threw himself down into a big chair.

"I'm sorry, Sandy." She knew what he meant. She had suffered his kisses, she had not responded to them at all. But it was too soon.

"Shall I fix something?" Stephanie asked. She forced her voice to sound gay. "It's teatime."

"I'd like a scotch and soda much better," Sandy interrupted shortly.

"Scotch and soda it shall be then!" Her response was prompt and cheerful.

Over the scotch and soda Sandy said, that deep furrow in his smooth forehead once more, "Well, let's have it, Stevie."

She put down her cup of steaming tea, raising startled eyes to meet his.

Before she could say anything, he said again, more curtly this time, "Shoot. I know there's something. I knew it the second I saw you, took your hand in mine. You're not very glad to have me come back from the grave, are you, my love?"

"I'm very glad," she said. "I hoped you would wait, but there is something I must tell you, Sandy. If you insist, I'll try to tell you now."

She took a sip of her tea, put it down again. Her voice was steady.

"Sandy, I wanted to be the one to tell you before you heard it from anyone else. I wish I didn't have to tell you—hurt you. I was married, Sandy—to someone else, I mean."

A sound stopped her, the low muffled sound that came from his throat.

But this ended on a higher note. The high shrill note of laughter. For that was what Sandy did—threw back his head and laughed.

Well, maybe it was a laughing matter—this Enoch Arden triangle. Maybe you had to laugh, in order to believe it, "take" it on the chin.

Tydings Easily Wins Maryland Democratic Primary By 2 To 1

Baltimore, Sept. 19—(AP)—Senator Millard E. Tydings was beaming his best Harford county grin to all comers today after Maryland Democrats gave him an overwhelming vote of confidence in the state's primary election.

His two opponents, a young Baltimore lawyer and a former congressman, made the issue in yesterday's balloting Tydings' conduct as chairman of the subcommittee investigating charges of Communist infiltration of the state department. They contended he covered up for the sake of the National administration.

The lean, affable veteran of four straight terms in the Senate used the same issue as his strongest forte. He stressed he had been "fair and honest" and was proud of his and the subcommittee's showing.

Tydings won two-thirds of the votes cast.

In one sense, it could be construed as a moral victory for President Truman, for Tydings also was critized for supporting the President's handling of the European recovery program. Mr. Truman himself took no part in the campaign.

Another close friend of the President, however, was having much tougher sledding.

Governor William Preston Lane, Jr., trying for the Democratic nomination for a second term, met strong opposition from George P. Mahoney, former state racing commissioner. But as the county results straggled in, Lane appeared to probable winner.

With almost two-thirds of the returns in, Mahoney was leading Lane in the popular vote, 135,841 to 126,451. However, Lane was ahead in the unit count, which decides the victor in Maryland election.

The state's unit system parallels roughly the election college in Presidential elections. Baltimore City and each county are assigned as many convention votes as they have members of the general assembly. The candidate that is tops in the district gets the district's unit vote. There are 152 convention votes in all.

With his popular vote of 111,920 in 990 of 1929 precincts. Tydings apparently took all 152 unit votes. Thirty-year-old Hugh J. Monaghan II got 31,454 popular votes, to 28,860 for John A. Meyer, who served in Congress during the war.

The contest for the Republican Senatorial nomination was much closer. John Marshall Butler, Baltimore attorney, took an early lead because a large amount of his support was concentrated in his native city, while D. John Markey, former National Guard General, was looking toward the counties for his victory margin.

With 807 polling places in, it was 21,205 for Butler to 17,415 for Markey.

Monday's Cases In Police Court

By CHESTER WALSH

In Police Court Monday, Judge J. W. H. Roberts found James Evans, 24-year-old Negro, guilty of assaulting with a deadly weapon his estranged wife, Katherine M. Evans, 509 West Fourth Street.

The woman testified that her husband seriously wounded her with a knife about the chest and face. Judge Roberts gave Evans six months on the roads and suspended sentence on condition that he pay $50 fine, costs deducted, and $18 to Dr. H. B. Kelley for medical services.

Joe N. Dawson, colored, ran afoul of the court's Crutchfieldian ire" when he stated on the witness stand: Maybe I ought not to have put the law on Carl Wilson (colored), for assaulting me with a deadly weapon." Judge Roberts dismissed the case against Wilson and fined Joe N. Dawson, prosecuting witness, $15, for 'malicious and frivilous prosecution."

Johnny Weldon, colored, was given six months on the roads for assault with a deadly weapon, sentence suspended on payment of $50. He gave notice of appeal. The court also gave Weldon 30 days on the roads for disorderly conduct and profane language. He appealed.

Judge Roberts nol prossed with leave two cases against Bill Bunker, colored, one for larceny of $12 from Mary Speight, colored, 1125 West Fifth street. The other case was assault with a deadly weapon. He ordered Court Clerk Johnston Dees to issue a capias for Mary Speight, the prosecuting witness, who failed to appear on court.

Sylvester Phillips, colored, non-support, six months on the roads, sentence suspended on condition that he pay $10 a week to the County Welfare office for support of his wife, an invalid. The court placed him on probation for two years.

New Charge For Carolina Kluxer

Camden, S. C., Sept. 19—(AP)— A second charge of conspiracy to incite mob violence has been slapped on the Grand Dragon of the Carolinas Ku Klux Klan.

This time Thomas Hamilton of Leesville is charged in connection with the alleged beating of Leslie J. Boney, about 25, a swimming instructor at the Sumter YMCA. Boney said that Hamilton was among Klansmen who slapped, punched and beat him with a leather strap last August 12 on a country road near here.

Boney said he later recognized Hamilton from newspaper pictures which appeared after the Grand Dragon was charged in connection with a Klan Demonstration against Negroes in Myrtle Beach August 26.

Hamilton is free in $5,000 bond in the Myrtle Beach incident. The state constabulary was instructed to serve him with the Boney case warrant yesterday. He will appear before magistrate John C. Langford, Jr., of Camden, for a bond hearing. The date has not been set.

Boney said he was returning from a meet in Kannapolis, N. C., when members of the Sumter YMCA swimming team when his automobile followed a Klan procession for about a mile. Then the Klansmen questioned him and beat him, he charges.

"Realism vs. Superstition"

Even fifty years ago there was a tendency to wait until the last minute to draw one's will. From this very waiting originated the superstition that a will is one of a man's last acts.

The influence of this superstition has kept many a person from making a sound will and selecting a qualified executor.

Last minute wills are often dangerous for they lend color to the complaints of relatives who feel aggrieved or neglected. Then, too, plans conceived in haste frequently fall short of providing the protection intended.

One of the highest forms of financial protection you can provide for the future of your beneficiaries and estate is to have a properly planned will—to have a competent lawyer draw it—to name this Bank executor and trustee.

In view of the Federal Revenue Act of 1948, it is important that you act NOW!

Kinder Saves Day For Red Sox In Big Stretch Drive

Again Comes To Boston's Rescue, Earning Second Place Position For Fired-Up Team

By MURRAY ROSE
Associated Press Sports Writer

The talk was all of "Kinder, Kinder, Kinder" as the fired-up Boston Red Sox steamed into Cleveland today for a two-game series with the Indians.

After Cleveland comes the vital two-day set with the Yankees in New York Saturday and Sunday. But the hustlers from Boston weren't looking that far ahead.

"Win 'em today and worry about tomorrow, tomorrow," was the motto of every man from Manager Steve O'Neill down as they looked fondly in the direction of Ellis Kinder.

And well they might. For it was Kinder again who saved the "big one" against Detroit in the ninth yesterday just as he did the day before. On the strength of those great rescues the Red Sox won them both, 3-2, and today rested in second place, a game behind the pace-setting Yanks and a half length in front of Detroit.

It was the fifth time in the last two days that O'Neill waved the 29-year-old Arkansas native to come on in and stop 'em."

"I wanted to give him the day off," said Steve. "I knew he was tired and I told him he could have the day off."

"'No,' he says to me, 'you might need me, Steve. I think I can work one inning for you.'"

He did—and what an inning! The Sox had come from behind on a 2-1 count to score twice in the ninth for a 2-3 lead.

Rookie Willard Nixon, who had pitched fine six-hit ball in a duel with Detroit's doughty Hal Newhouser, pitched three straight balls to lead-off man Joe Ginsberg. That was all for Nixon.

"Bring in Kinder," called O'Neill.

Kinny pumped in two strikes but finally walked Ginsberg. He was the last Tiger to get on. Pinch-hitter Pat Mullin sacrificed but another sub swinger, Charley Keller, popped out and then Gerry Priddy grounded out.

Only Big Slump Can Stop Musial

New York, Sept. 19—(AP)—Only the severest of slumps can keep Stan Musial from a fourth National League batting title. The St. Louis Cardinal slugger, sporting a neat .352 average, looks like a shoo-in.

Musial is 19 points ahead of his closest pursuer—Brooklyn's Jackie Robinson, the defending champ. The Dodgers' second baseman is hitting .333.

Middlecoff Wins

St. Louis, Sept. 19—(AP)—It took a "sudden death" playoff, but Cary Middlecoff finally won top money of $2,600 yesterday in the St. Louis Open Golf tournament.

Middlecoff and Ed (Porky) Oliver of Seattle wound up in a tie in the $15,000 tournament at the end of regular play Sunday. Each had a 270.

Yesterday they went into an 18-hole playoff to determine the winner. At the end of the 18 holes each had a 67, necessitating the "sudden death" extra holes.

Aerial Attack Is Most Feared Of Grid Strategies

Richmond, Va., Sept. 19—(AP)—More and more, it appears the forward pass is football's most feared offensive weapon.

For up and down the Southern Conference today coaches were saying the same thing:

"We need better pass defense."

Wake Forest's Deacons, Virginia Military Institute's Keydets, South Carolina's Gamecocks and Maryland's Old Liners all face tough foes in opening contests this coming weekend. And all four teams are spending most of the current week concentrating on ways to halt the aerial onslaught of the opposition.

South Carolina goes up against Duke's Blue Devils Saturday. Duke has one of the finest passers in the 17-team league in Billy Cox, a triple-threat tailback. Gamecock Coach Rex Enright drilled his charges hard yesterday trying to find a combination which might halt Cox's pitches.

It wasn't any wonder VMI Coach Tom Nugent sought a way to break up William and Mary's air assault at Roanoke, Va., Saturday night. The opposing Indians, Coach Rube McCray admits, have at least four pretty nifty passers in Ed Magdziak, Ed Weber, Paul Yewcic and Dickie Lewis.

At Maryland, Coach Jim Tatum said his Old Liners would spend most of this week's preparation for Georgia doing one thing—adapting themselves to a defense for the Bulldogs' attack, particularly their air game. Maryland battles Georgia at Athens, Ga., Saturday afternoon in the week's No. 1 game involving a Southern Conference club.

Wake Forest tangles with Boston College in Boston Friday night. The Boston team always mixes an abundances of passers with its running game.

Washington and Lee's Generals aren't too interested in pass defense. They're cooking up an aerial offense of their own to throw against Furman at Lexington, Va., Saturday.

Berra Bats

Yogi Berra is a congenial young man with an ever-present smile and blessed with the unusual talent of being able to enjoy a joke even when it is at his own expense. He clowns around with his Yankee teammates and with opposing players. That's all before the shooting starts. Once the ball game starts, Yogi is a hustling, serious and determined player. And how he loves to swing that big bat!

Berra's terrific hitting has played a major role in the success of the Yankees this season. He had one batting streak that extended over sixteen games. He is the most dependable of the Yankees in the clutch and his runs batted in mark as tops for the team. He seems certain to top the 100 mark in driving runs across the plate for he is already ahead of his 1949 figure of 90.

Some insist that Berra's batting alone makes him a great catcher. Yogi is more than a mere backstop behind the plate. Under the skillful coaching of Bill Dickey, Berra has developed into a fine mechanical catcher. He has overcome his weakness on trapped balls, balls which hit the dirt in front of him and he has improved his throwing to the bases. He may not be a match for some of the fancier catchers when it comes to stylish catching, but he does a thorough job every second of the way. And what if that big bat does overshadow his catching? It drives in runs that often mean the winning of a ball game.

Sedgman Again Whips Schroeder

Los Angeles, Sept. 19—(AP)—Except for the principals, Ted Schroeder and Frank Sedgman, the Pacific Southwest tennis contingent prepared to move on today to the senior hard courts championships at Berkeley, Calif.

Sedgman, the Australian champion, disposed of Schroeder for the second time in a month yesterday in the Pacific Southwest tournament finals. He'll forego the Berkeley affair fo ra more leisurely engagement at nearby Balboa.

SCOUT NEGRO HURLER

Terrytown, N. Y.—(AP)—Syd Pollack, owner of the Indianapolis Clowns, says his star southpaw, Harry Butts, is being scouted by the Boston Braves. Butts recently pitched a one-hitter against the Philly Stars at Harrisburg, Pa. The Clowns are members of the Negro American League.

Hunting Party Bags Bob Cat And Gray Fox

A hunting party from the Victory Warehouse, displays the large bob cat and gray fox caught on a fox hunt in Beaufort county. The bob cat was first found by the pack of more than 30 dogs taking part in the hunt, which ran for nearly two hours. The cat was killed on the ground. Soon after the killing the dogs trailed the fox which led the hunting party for more than two hours before being overtaken. The bob cat was estimated to weigh about 25 pounds, large for this section. Taking part in the hunt were Harold Forbes, Jack Harrington, Gray Smith, Gene Briley and Frank Harrington. The hunt was in the Mauls Point section. (Reflector Staff Photo by Roy Hardee).

Macclesfield Wins Against Farmville In Final Playoffs

Farmville, Sept. 19.—Macclesfield proved last night it could use an ace more effectively than could Farmville with a pair. Score of the seventh and deciding baseball game was 4-2.

The ace in question was Pitcher Bennett Flowers, late of the Triple A Louisville club, and he set Willie Mauney's club down with six hits, scattered over the nine-inning route.

The locals scored the first run of the game in the third but Macclesfield matched that in their half of the frame when a run scored on a wild pitch.

That run was unearned off Pitcher Jim Lewey who otherwise pitched brilliant ball, although going down the loser. The former Greenville Robins pitcher gave up only five hits over the route, the longest one being a double by Second Baseman Stuart that brought in the second and third runs for the win in the sixth inning.

Although Farmville added another run in the seventh, the three by Macclesfield prior to that were enough to wrap up the Shaughnessy series. Thus, Macclesfield walked off with the two Bright Belt honors, having won the pennant during the regular season.

Willie Mauney, for one of the few times this year, was not in the lineup last night. Instead he chose to substitute Piner behind the plate and Pittman in the outfield, the two positions at which he usually alternates.

Although Farmville was fighting a losing cause, Third Baseman Gay provided the longest blow of the 11-hit game. He hit a triple in the fourth with no one aboard and he remained on the sack for the third out of the inning.

Both managers juggled their lineups last night. Prior to the game they decided again to substitute any imported player. Farmville used Matt Hall, another Greenville Robins player, at shortstop in addition to Lewey.

Dole Says Mistakes Must Be Corrected For Coming Games

By BILL LLOYD

"We had a lot of rough spots in Friday night's game. And we'll have to iron out our mistakes this week because Lenoir-Rhyne, Elon and WCTC will be three of the top teams in the league; and we can't afford to make the same mistakes that we made against the Apprentice."

So opined Coach Bill Dole after his East Carolina eleven had defeated the Apprentice School, 21-7, in their season opener at Newport News, Va. last Friday.

East Carolina had to score three times in the second half to win over a fighting Apprentice team, with two scores coming in the fourth quarter to ice the game for the Buccaneers.

This week, the Pirates meet the always powerful Lenoir-Rhyne's Bears in their North State conference opener at Hickory.

From all indications, Saturday night's clash with the Lutherans will test the strength of the Pirates against the power of the smaller college circuit.

The Bears are reported to have looked highly impressive in trouncing the Flying Fleet from Erskine, 32-0, last Saturday night, with Halfback Gene Robinson leading the onslaught.

In last year's thrilling Pirate-Bear tilt, the lads from Hickory barely got by Coach Dole's gridders, with a 21-20 triumph.

Two key men for the Pirates suffered injuries Friday night but should be ready to go in Saturday night's league opener. End Ed Tanner sustained a bruised hip, while Halfback Johnny Daughtry is favoring a leg injury. Other than these two, the Pirates came out with full strength in their season's opening game.

Ted Williams' Long Drives Missing Due Weak Elbow

Cleveland, Sept. 19—(AP)—Today's Ted Williams does everything like the old Ted Williams—except one thing. He does not hit like the old Ted Williams.

The once fearsome Boston Red Sox slugger, ever the frank and forthright person, is the first to tell you so.

"I don't have the old power yet," baseball's top batsman said before yesterday's important clash with the Tigers in Detroit. "I'm swinging as hard as ever, but the bat doesn't come around as quickly."

Williams flexed the muscles in his left arm and said:

"See, my left arm is smaller than my right. It is still weak from lack of exercise. The elbow still hurts when I swing at certain pitches."

Williams was referring to the elbow he fractured in a crash against the wall while chasing a fly ball in the All-Star game in Chicago last July. The injury sidelined him for 59 games.

Goodman Batting At .358 Average

Chicago, Sept. 19 —(AP)— Boston's Billy Goodman apparently will be hard to catch in the waning American League batting race. Entering the semi-final week of the campaign, Goodman's .358 gave him a 17-point lead.

Billy faded three points last week, but second-spot George Kell of Detroit dropped four to .341. In third spot was Detroit's Hoot Evers with .334.

Someone Robbed A Safe, Threw Their Loot Away

Denver, Sept. 19— (AP) —Robert Northan, 32 found a sack near his apartment building door, casually opened it while he ambled upstairs, then ran screaming to his wife.

"I've found $6,000," he cried.

She tried to calm him, until she saw him wave handfuls of currency. When they both calmed down, they searched the sack, found a bank deposit slip from the Tiffin Dining Room. They called police.

Detective William Scott, a bit skeptical, phoned Tiffin Owner Paul Shank.

"We have some people who have a $6,620 bank deposit of yours," Scott said.

"That's ridiculous, the money's in the safe at the restaurant," Shank replied.

"O. K." said Scott, "but I'd check if a were you."

Half an hour later, Shank frantically called back.

"The safe's been opened. The money's gone."

It ended with Shank getting his money, Northam being promised a reward, and police wondering why anyone bothered to open a safe and then throw their loot away.

At a hearing before Magistrate Fred C. Carraway at Snow Hill today, Rayfield Moore, 38-year-old Negro, a witness in the case, was arrested on a bench warrant charging aiding and abetting in larceny.

Work Is Resumed On New Ayden School Cafeteria

Ayden, Sept. 18.—Work on the new Ayden cafeteria now under construction and stalled for the past several weeks because of lack of materials has begun to move forward again.

The $18,000 structure is being built by local school funds and county labor.

When completed, the plant is expected to be capable of handling a large number of students ranging up to 250 at one time. In addition to being used for school functions, the plant will be open for use by local civic clubs and other organizations as a community center.

Overall dimensions of the building are 67 by 35 feet with a kitchen 20 by 20 feet and a serving room about 18 by 24 feet; wash rooms and a store room 18 by 18 feet. Both the high schools and elementary schools will use the building once it is completed.

Lack of cement, which held up the pouring of the floors for a long time, was remedied recently and the floors have all been poured this week.

Asphalt tile will cover the cement floors, walls will have a plaster finishing.

All rooms will be well-ventilated with 26 windows furnishing light and air.

New equipment, including a potato peeler, fixers, stoves and a steam table are included in the outlay for the building.

S. F. Peterson, who is supervising the construction of the building, said that if no further tie-up of the materials is encountered, the building will be completed in the near future. Pouring of the window casings and installing fixtures, windows and other small items is about the balance of the work remaining to be finished, Peterson said.

ers planting rye received $9,254 at the rate of $2 per acre.

Approximate acreage of rye in the county financed by PMA is 4,627. For oats and barley there are approximately 1,995 acres.

Money expended for fertilizer totaled the largest assistance given this year for the three programs. Figured at $.95 per hundred-weight, $24,712.30 were given out.

Ditching for the county totaled this year 260,329 yards which have been financed by the office. Tiling amounted to $12,364.05 for four, six and eight-inch tile used for drainage.

During the year, 1,069 farmers have been helped in their practices. The last 32 farmers added to the former ones comprise the total for this year.

Invading . . .

Moreover, that's an argument that western allies certainly have no desire to get heavily involved in Asia at this juncture. They are in process of building their defenses in Europe against any upheaval there, and can't afford to weaken that effort.

The North Atlantic Council at this moment has before it the American proposal for the defense of western Europe. Therefore one would expect the U. N. to hold the Korean program in leash, pending completion of the defense plans for maintaining peace in Europe.

Maintenance of a fairly equal balance of power in both east and west would seem to be essential if world war is to be avoided.

Driver Stopped To Give Assistance, Car Struck By Following Automobile

A new twist was added to Pitt's mounting accident toll last night as a woman driver stopped her car to avoid striking another woman lying in the roadway, and her car in turn was hit by a following automobile.

It all came about this way, according to Highway Patrolmen Cpl. John Laws and Dick Chadwick. A car operated by Mildred Dudley of Ayden stopped when its driver saw the woman lying in the middle of the highway about a half mile from the Open Air Theater on the Ayden highway. As the Ayden woman attempted to find out what was wrong, a car driven by Albion Bright of Winterville collided with her car.

Damage to the cars was unestimated by the officers who termed it slight.

About this time the officers arrived on the scene, found the woman in the middle of the highway, Nora Wilson, to be drunk and lost no time in escorting her to the jail where she was booked on a public drunkenness charge.

Another accident was added to the county toll yesterday afternoon but no report has been mad as yet, the patrol office announced.

"Sorry that I cannot be of further assistance to you in this period of great financial crisis and your hour of need.

"Thanking you for your inadequate service, I am

"Very truly yours,

"_____"

A few days later the tax collector answered him with this letter:

"Dear Mr. _____:I feel sorry for you that you are not making more . . . Than $662 annually. Such cases as yours are few and far apart but it is our business where we have no report on such matters to make inquiry of the individual . . .

"If our letter was insulting, then by the same token we feel that your letter to us was likewise insulting and if you are capable of writing such a letter as the one we received —and looking for a position, I would be very glad to have you call at my office and talk the matter of a better position than the $662 annual one you have now over with us.

"Yours very truly,

"_____"

The copyboy hasn't gone around yet to see the tax collector about the job offer. Some of us in the office have been urging him to go.

We sort of felt, from the tax collector's letter, that he had found the kind of man he's been looking for.
