Manpower Plan By Job Experts

Gov't Nears Coordinated Program With Experienced Personnel Slated For Key Command Posts In Set-Up

Washington, Nov. 11—(AP)—The government moved closer today to a coordinated manpower program for defense, with a pair of World War II job experts in key command posts. The program began to take shape with Defense Secretary Marshall's recommendation of Mrs. Anna Rosenberg to be his assistant in charge of manpower, and the selection of important aides for the Office of Defense Manpower (ODM) in the labor department.

UN Awaits Results On Resolution In Council

Watch Battlefront To See If Combined Threats, Promises Affect Chinese Communist Activities

Lake Success, Nov. 11—(AP)—The United Nations watched battlefront developments today to see if a Security Council resolution combining threats and promises would force Communist China out of the Korean war.

The resolution—introduced yesterday by the United States, Britain, France, Norway, Cuba and Ecuador—assesses the Communist Peiping government that:

- 1. The border between Korea and Manchuria will be respected. 2. U.N. forces will be withdrawn from Korea as soon as possible. It also demands that Red Chinese troops be withdrawn from the fighting with the implied threat that the allies will take all-out military measures against them if they are not.

Britain's Sir Gladwyn Jebb, France's Jean Chauvel and America's arren R. Austin made it clear that the most dire consequences await the Reds if they spurn the U.N.'s assurances of peaceful intentions and continue intervention in Korea.

Suicide Verdict Is Returned By County Coroner

Coroner Griffin H. Rouse stated today that after a lengthy investigation into the death of Cecil C. Jones, it has been determined that Jones met his death by suicide.

Jones was found dead in his automobile late Tuesday afternoon near the Guy Smith ball park. Since that time, Coroner Rouse and local police officers have been conducting a detailed investigation into Jones' death. Rouse said: "We have investigated everything up and down and have not found any clue which would lead to anything other than suicide." There will be no inquest, as it is not believed to be necessary, the coroner stated.

China's Risky Policy

Red China Is Sitting In Midst Of Potential Trouble On Many Fronts; Guidance Of Kremlin Along Dangerous Path; Mao's Assigned Task; All Hope Not Gone

By DEWITT MacKENZIE

As a war-weary world awaits the advent of the Chinese Communist envoys to the United Nations to discuss the explosive Korean and Formosan problems, it is worthy of note that Red China is sitting in the midst of potential trouble, and therefore might be in a mood to negotiate.

One hastens to add that this doesn't mean Red China is in a chastened frame of mind for she isn't. It is rather to suggest that her astute leader, General Mao, is bound to have seen danger in the writing on the wall, especially since he is the one who has constructed the semi-circle of trouble on his borders.

Mao of course has been working hand and glove with Moscow. Under the guidance of the Kremlin he has been giving strong support to the North Koreans in their war against the United Nations forces. Latest reports from General MacArthur's headquarters say the Chinese are pouring into North Korea in large numbers. And apart from the Chinese Reds in Korea, there are 300,000 more ready for action on the Manchur-

Top Senate Posts For Vandenberg May Be Back On Job

Be Back On Job In Next Congress

Washington, Nov. 11—(AP)—Senator Arthur Vandenberg (R-Mich.) expects to be back on the job in the new congress and his return may temper Republican fire on administration foreign policies.

Vandenberg has written friends that he hopes by following doctors' orders to be ready for work when the 82nd congress convenes January 3. Idle for many months because of illness and a series of operations, he is resting now at his home town of Grand Rapids, Mich.

As top Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations committee, the Michigan senator has served in the past as chief GOP spokesman on foreign policy in congress. He has had notable success in comprising voluntary retirements. They are House administration, public works and public lands.

The two Southerners slated to move into Senate committee chairmanships are Senators Ellender of Louisiana and Russell of Georgia. Ellender is in line to succeed Senator Eimer Thomas (D-Okla.) as chairman of the agriculture committee. Thomas was defeated in the primary. Russell is heir-apparent to the armed services chairmanship. The incumbent, Senator Tydings (D-Md.), was beaten last Tuesday.

Senator Murray (D-Mont.) is expected to head the labor committee in place of Senator Elbert Thomas (D-Utah), who also lost out in the Tuesday balloting.

On a sectional basis, the Southerners in a Democratic controlled Senate will hold eight committee chairmanships. Far Westerners six and Midwest none. Chairman Neely (D-W.Va.) of the District of Columbia committee is the only committee head from the East, and he represents what usually is regarded as a border state.

Southerners will continue to dominate House committees, holding 10 of the 19 standing committee chairmanships. Three of these, agriculture, labor and the tax-writing ways and means committee, are filled by North Carolinians.

Chairmen Named For Seal Sales

Community Leaders Named By Mrs. David Evans

Community chairmen who will head the Tuberculosis Christmas Seal sales in the various parts of the county were announced today by Mrs. David A. Evans, county chairman of the seal sales this year.

Although it will be November 20 before the seal sales actually begin, members of the Greenville Service League will begin Monday to sell Tuberculosis Christmas bonds to those who have purchased the bonds in the past and those new prospects who have been placed on the bond list.

The Christmas Seal sales in Greenville will be headed by Mrs. Evans and her co-chairman Mrs. F. G. Basnight Jr. Other members of the Greenville committee are Mrs. Ray MacKenzie, publicity chairman; Mrs. Tyson Bilbro, mailing chairman; Mrs. Joe Moyer, chairman of school sales; and Mrs. Ed Willford, chairman of booth and street sales.

County chairmen who today were named by Mrs. Evans to head the Christmas Seal sales in their communities were: Mrs. Staton Ross, Aysden; Mrs. J. T. Dupree, Belvoir; Mrs. G. R. Gurganus, Bell Arthur; Mrs. Alton Whitehurst, Bethel; Mrs. Gran Cox, Chicod; Mrs. Woodrow Wooten, Falkland.

The Literary Club, Miss Tabitha DeVisconti, chairman, Farmville; the Ruritan club, Rev. R. L. West, chairman, Fountain; Mrs. M. Brown Hodges, Gritton; Mrs. P. W. M. Jette, Grimsland; Mrs. Dewey Foster and Mrs. James Davenport, Paeolus; Mrs. J. B. Congleton Sr., Stokes; and Mrs. Woodrow Worthington, Winterville.

Heading the Christmas Seal sales among the Negroes of the county will be Professor H. B. Sugg of Farmville, Chairman for the Christmas Seal sales among the Negroes of Greenville will be Professor W. H. Davenport and Mrs. Belle M. Atkinson.

Taft Says He Is Not Running For 1952 Nomination

Cincinnati, Nov. 11—(AP)—If the Republican party wants Senator Robert A. Taft as its 1952 presidential candidate, it will have to draft him.

The senator led right out in an interview yesterday by saying: "I am certainly not a candidate for the (presidential) nomination. I am not going to run for President." Then he carefully appended the remark: "I don't say that I wouldn't take the nomination if it were offered to me but I shall make no campaign to get it."

Ellender And Russell Slated For Chairmanships; Dominate House

Washington, Nov. 11—(AP)—Two Southern Democrats and one from the Far West are slated to move into top Senate committee jobs if the Democrats are in control of the new 82nd Congress when it convenes next Jan. 3. It appears now they will be.

The shifts, affecting the agriculture, labor and armed services committees, stand out in what is certain to be a large-scale and spirited reshuffling of the 203 jobs on the Senate's 15 standing committees. Present chairmen of the three important groups were defeated in Tuesday's congressional elections.

In the House, three committee chairmanships will be vacated by voluntary retirements. They are House administration, public works and public lands.

Vandenberg kept himself relatively free of the campaign preceding last Tuesday's election, results of which indicated administration international policies are in for a tough going-over from some Republican senators.

Some of these, notably Senator-Elect Everett Dirksen of Illinois, have joined in the demand for the resignation of Secretary of State Acheson and a complete overhauling of Far Eastern policies. Vandenberg has made it clear that he doesn't subscribe to the course that has been followed in Asia. In fact, he concurred in an August statement of GOP foreign relations members which charged that the administration had given a green-light for communist aggression in Korea.

The Michigan senator isn't counted as any great booster for Acheson. But he is a long-time friend and admirer of Secretary of Defense Marshall and a confidante of Robert M. Lovett, the undersecretary of defense.

If the administration establishes contact with Vandenberg and invites him and other Republican members of the Foreign Relations group to share in foreign policy decisions, it may modify some of the Republican fire against its policies.

Since Vandenberg's illness had kept him away from the senate, Republicans have complained that they weren't asked to take part in the forming of policies but merely were notified briefly in advance of the announcement of decisions already made.

Michigan Vote For Governor Is Still Undecided

Detroit, Nov. 11—(AP)—Four days after Michigan's election of a governor his identity was still unknown today.

The ultimate winner—either Republican Harry P. Kelly or Democrat incumbent G. Mennen Williams—was hidden in a great haze of fog of error in tabulating last Tuesday's record non-presidential year vote.

On the latest combined official and unofficial re-check a Kelly lead hovered around 300 votes. It stood like this: Kelly 934,851, Williams 934,532.

But it was almost dead certain there would be more corrections. County clerks and aides were still hard at work re-examining the vote. Not in all its 113-year history had Michigan run into one like this.

Babson Discusses Drug Stocks

Babson Park, Mass., Nov. 10. In view of a report in The Commercial and Financial Chronicle, America's leading business weekly, that I have recently been putting my hard-earned pennies in a certain drug stock, many inquiries have come to me asking the reasons. Hence, this week let me give them reasons therefor.

(1) Drug stocks fare well both in times of peace and war. In these uncertain days, when our country is "betwixt and between", the wise investor will not gamble on either peace or war. He will invest his savings in an industry which will be safe in either case.

(2) Some great new discoveries which may protect our families against polio, arthritis, and perhaps cancer are "on the way". As these come along drug stocks should boom as television and electronic stocks boomed last year.

(3) The chemists and pharmacists of drug companies are given especial consideration in connection with labor laws and perhaps the draft issue. They are recognized as important workers and entitled to such exemptions from rules and regulations as are possible to give.

(4) Drug stores are permitted by law to be open any number of hours per day and seven days a week including Sundays and holidays. As the modern stores have juke counters, this long opening

Find Illegal Amount Liquor In Car

Pitt County ABC officers and Greenville police today arrested Norman E. Tripp of 1009 Railroad Street on charges of illegal possession of a quantity of paid liquor. The whiskey was discovered in a car which was parked behind Howard Allen's filling station on Green Street. Officers found the ten pints of tax paid liquor in the boot of a new car operated by Tripp. None of the liquor had the seal broken. Tripp posted bond for appearance in City Police court and was released.

Officers Locate Whiskey Hoard

Law enforcement officers in a raid with a search warrant at the home of John Atkinson, 56, colored, 1306 West Fifth street, Friday night, found 11-2 gallons of moonshine whiskey hidden in his house. They confiscated the non-tax paid whiskey and arrested Atkinson. They charged him with possession of non-tax paid whiskey for the purpose of sale. Atkinson provided $250 bond and was released. He will be tried before Judge J. W. H. Roberts in Police Court Monday.

Yugoslav Gov't Closes Albanian Legation Doors

Belgrade, Nov. 11—(AP)—Yugoslavia closed and sealed the Albanian legation here today in a move just one step short of breaking off diplomatic relations between the two countries.

Anote containing the decision of Premier Marshal Tito's government was handed to a representative of its tiny, isolated, Mediterranean neighbor, and its contents were disclosed by the ministry of information here.

In blunt, stern, language, the note charged Albania has been using its legation in Belgrade not for "the conduct of current affairs and for the settlement of existing issues between the two governments, but has utilized its existence exclusively for the purposes of conducting offending and provocative activities against Yugoslavia and its authorities."

Push From Allied Bridgehead North Of Chongchon Meets Mixed Reception

Marines And Other Units Advance, Seize Power Plants

Seoul, Nov. 11—(AP)—United Nations forces shattered a tense lull in the Korean ground war today with a four-mile advance along the northwest front. Very heavy resistance was reported in one sector.

The push from the allied bridgehead north of the Chongchon River was begun cautiously by American, British and Australian infantrymen. It followed a puzzling five-day withdrawal by Korean and Chinese Communists.

Whether the Chinese Reds would make a stand was of utmost importance. A demand that Red China recall its troops in Korea—an estimated 60,000 of them—is before the U.N. Security Council.

The demand was introduced in the council Friday. It set no date for a next meeting pending China's reaction.

Reaction to the general push by the U. S. 24th and First Cavalry Divisions and the British Commonwealth 27th Brigade was mixed. On the left flank of the Chongchon bridgehead, the 24th and the British were virtually unopposed.

But on the right, elements of the First Cavalry met what a spokesman called "very, very heavy resistance" only 600 yards north of the river. The Reds were dug in strongly. It was not indicated whether they were Chinese or Koreans.

Across the peninsula, U.S. marines and other allied forces continue pushing forward in the northeast—mostly without opposition. The marines seized the last of four power plants south of the great Changjin reservoir, which supplies electricity for most of North Korea and parts of Manchuria.

The Leathernecks were on a plateau, still three to eight miles south of the reservoir. AP Correspondent Sam Pries, with the marines, said the Chinese met resistance in a "little start of miraculous."

He said the canyon road to Changjin corkscrews for 11 miles up a 5,000 foot mountain before leveling out, and added: "Had the enemy elected they could have fought it out on this line all winter."

The main marine force was in the town of Koto, eight miles south of Changjin. Leathernecks seized the Koto power plant practically intact. But air observers said strong reinforcements were spotted moving toward the reservoir from the north.

The Pujon power dam, 15 miles east of Changjin, was the objective of the U.S. Seventh Division, moving toward it from the east. Advance elements of the Seventh were reported 15 miles from Pujon.

The division commander, Maj. Gen. David Barr, attended Armistice Day ceremonies at an American cemetery in the broad Puchong valley, between Pujon and the east coast beachhead of Iwon.

Afterwards, he told correspondents grimly that he intended to spend the evening at division headquarters "perfecting plans to continue our advance to the Manchurian border."

Change Ahead

Marietta, O., Nov. 11—(AP)—Bill Ray, the man who was so busy barbering the last 69 years he forgot to raise his prices, retired last night at nearby Lowell.

His prices matched the now legendary "shave and a hair cut, two bits." He started out charging 15 cents for a haircut and a dime for a shave. He never charged more.

A new owner who will operate the shop says "prices are going up."

Impact Of Rearming

By Next Spring Civilians May Begin To Notice Less Civilian Goods; Armaments Orders Already Placed Will, In Many Cases, Take Time To Be Produced

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, Nov. 11—(AP)—Charles Sawyer, Secretary of Commerce says full impact of rearmament may hit industry next spring. Which means that by about that time civilians will begin to notice less civilian goods since industry will then be up to its neck in defense orders.

It's in Sawyer's commerce department that the National Production Authority (NPA) was set up some months ago.

Local Civic Clubs Gather Honor

Four Clubs Boast District Leaders

By JOHN SPINKS JR.
As a rule the civic clubs of America don't make many headlines in the newspapers of their communities nor do they whoop it up to any great extent at their annual conventions. About the only time during the year they draw attention to themselves is when the individual clubs make a drive for funds to donate to their pet community project, which project was the underlying reason for the club's organization.

But the civic clubs of Greenville can pride themselves that they operate in a town which has been designated as the only one in the is of primary importance. Each of the governors has to visit each club in his area at least once during his term of office. As is usually the case a second visit is called for when such-and-such a club stages its annual Ladies Night banquet.

With Eli Bloom the visitation part of the job is the easiest. Kiwanis has fewer clubs in this area than either Rotary or Lions, numbering only nine in the Seventh Division. However, Bloom will probably make more than the necessary—and usual—number of visits since he is unofficially presiding as governor at the present time. On the other hand Lion Dowd has the most extensive job since his district covers a major portion of the northeastern section of the state, comprising 53 clubs. The district is more or less triangular shaped with Manteo on the east, the Virginia line on the north, and a line running from Oxford through Ayden to the coast forming the southern and western boundary. The area contains Lions of 23 counties. Dowd's job is very similar to Bloom's in that he visits the clubs, talks to them either formally or off-the-cuff, informs them of activities of other clubs in the district and in general gives the members the low down on Lionism as practiced in the area through 1951. He has made 40 visits to clubs since he was elected last July and will finish up the other 13 shortly. Then the round begins again.

McGinnis probably has the easiest time of any of the governors in the group. He has been retired from the East Carolina administration for about a year but has definitely come out of retirement as far as McGinnis' district covers a large portion of

ORREN E. DOWD

United States having four district governors, or the equivalent. A notification of that fact came from the national and international offices of the Kiwanis, Rotary and Lions Clubs last month. The confirmation from the national offices, which was set off by inquiries from several officers of the four local clubs, stated Greenville is the only town which can claim three district governors all living here and performing the same job at the same time. It is a coincidence that has never occurred anywhere before and seems likely never to again.

The three candidates for the office at their individual conventions last summer are Eli Bloom, Kiwanis; O. E. Dowd, Lions; and Howard J. McGinnis, Rotary. A fourth, but not called a governor, is Sam O. Worthington, member of the Exchange Club, who was nominated for the office of State Controller. As was published earlier in the fall, all four were elected by their civic constituents and are now up to their necks in the work of their clubs in this area.

HOWARD MCGINNIS

The office is no honor, as such, for it entails a full year of hard work throughout the district. As stated by one of the governors the other day, "It isn't a title given to a man to commemorate his activity in his local club." He seemed to think if a member of any of the clubs who was in line for the office wasn't ready to put out a full year's work in addition to his business or profession, he'd better thank the nominating committee for its consideration, withdraw, and be glad of it.

McGinnis and Dowd, both of whom have been associated with education work in Greenville—the former at East Carolina until he retired, and Dowd as principal of the high school—have already begun their duties as governor, having been elected to the post in July. Bloom's job actually begins January 1 although he has taken over the leg work of the office since the death of the former governor Holloman late in the summer. Worthington was elected at the Exchange Convention at Wrightsville Beach in August and has attended meetings of the six-man Board of Control since then.

The work of a district governor or a controller is similar to the work of Vice President Barkley when he conducts goodwill tours of the nation's Democratic ballparks. And similar to the Vice President's job during that time, the speech making eastern Carolina, with Belhaven, Tabor City, Lillington and Bethel being the points on the four sides of the area. His is the 279th district of Rotary International and contains 38 clubs. As stated by him the job entails visiting the individual clubs to observe their activities and offer suggestions concerning their betterment. Since one of Rotary's prime aims is to build stronger clubs in the community, McGinnis has his hands full in observing the clubs and passing along suggestions to others in his twice-yearly circuit.

The job for Worthington differs in some respects from the others. The six Controllers are not elected from definitely laid-out geographical locations. All could hail from Greenville and serve on the board. Since Exchange is primarily a local organization and is almost autonomous in its activities, Worthington's job is to inform his club of the

New Underwater Camera Is Put To Practical Use

State club's projects and programs. He doesn't necessarily have to visit surrounding clubs since organization is not laid out in well defined districts as the other clubs. Worthington must meet with the other Controllers three times each year to discuss the work of local clubs and how they can contribute to the statewide Exchange projects.

All four officers have been active participants in their clubs' civic work. Bloom has the longest membership in any of the four, having been a Kiwanian for some 20 years in Scotland Neck and in Greenville. He was vice president of the local club in 1946 and was elevated to the presidency in 1947. Under his direction the Greenville club received the district's achievement award for the most outstanding work of any of the nine.

Dowd has been a Lion for 13 years, and during 11 of that period he has

NAVY FILM is shot under water with the Eclair Aquaflex.

The latest in underwater cameras is certainly not likely to be on the home movie fan's Christmas list this year. But it no longer is a fantastic notion either. Undersea picture taking is out of the trip-to-the-moon category and has found practical application in many fields—science, teaching, entertainment and war.

For some years the U.S. Navy has done some experimenting in underwater movie making. Their expert divers have a specialized role in war. Recently there were pictures and stories of the "frogmen's" latest exploits at Wonsan, North Korea. Garbed in their rubber suits and fin flippers, they scouted the enemy underwater defenses and carried on the demolition work that assured safe landings for our troops.

A review of "U.S. Naval Undersea" was presented recently to the Society of Motion Picture and Television Engineers at a Lake Placid, N.Y. meeting. The speaker was R.R. Conger, USN, Chief Photographer of the Motion Picture Dept., of the Naval Photographic Center at Anacostia.

Since this is a free, mobile underwater unit, the photo-diver must be equipped with self-contained or free diving outfit. After many tests, the French "Aqualung" diving unit and the "Squale" face mask were found most satisfactory, and usable film footage was obtained in depths up to 95 feet.

During the naval tests in tropical waters the photo-divers encountered potentially dangerous sea creatures like barracudas, sharks, sting rays, moray eels and octopi. None of them attacked the photographer so they, too, must like having their pictures taken.

had perfect attendance at either the Greenville club or another in the district. He was a Lion in Durham for three years, in Washington for two, and the past eight have been spent with the local club. He was elected to the office of president in 1946.

McGinnis originally became a member of the Wheeling, W. Va. club in 1924 and was still affiliated with it when he moved to Nashville, Tenn., prior to moving here. In 1927 he joined the club here and was its secretary from 1928 through 1932. During '32-'33 he was made president for one term.

Worthington has had the shortest rise to his president office after joining the Exchange Club when it was organized here last October. At that time he was a charter member. During the past year he has been instrumental in organizing the Exchange Club's work with the Midget athletic program.

(9) Drug companies, like other good merchandising corporations are especially good hedges against inflation. The capital of such companies is almost wholly invested in commodities which rise in price as the purchasing power of the dollar increases.

(10) There is also another personal reason for my investing in drug stocks. I have been most successful when investing in stocks of companies which are saving money or property and thus performing a national service. Certainly the drug industry is both saving lives and improving the health and happiness of every community.

I even look forward to the time when humely minded persons who now seek positions in social service, or in educational fields, or even in church work will see the great opportunity for helping others by serving in a high grade drug laboratory or store.

When this time comes it should give the industry a very high standing which should result in a much greater volume of sales at a larger margin of profit.

Just a word regarding merchandise stocks in general. I believe that most "store stocks" are preferable to "manufacturing stocks". I hope to see the Dow-Jones Industrial Averages divided between these two groups. Investors will be greatly surprised when this is done. Finally—for several reasons—I prefer the "Chains" to the large Department Stores—whether they are drug chains or variety chains or shoe chains. Moreover, chains which sell to women have better records than chains which sell only to men.

Six factories in the Ryukyu Islands are being equipped to produce about $600,000 worth of pearl buttons annually, principally for export.

China's Risky . . .
Without doubt they would pool their interests in event of attack on either one.

The job to which Mao has been assigned, so far as one can see, is to perpetuate the Korean war with the idea of bleeding the United Nations forces. This crafty scheme naturally is aimed especially at the United States with the idea of whittling her down to size economically and militarily.

Perpetuation of this struggle might not be difficult for China. She is reputed to have anything up to 5,000,000 regular troops and another 5,000,000 trained militia which could be armed and put into commission. Peiping could keep on funneling these forces down into Korea indefinitely.

Still, while that appears to be the present program, the western powers haven't abandoned hope that China may be made to see reason. Thus the visit of the nine emissaries to Lake Success—if it is made—may be a fateful one.

brings freight into Greenville is operating under a similar set-up. If such a method were followed, it would eliminate the congestion caused by a large truck stopping practically in the middle of the street for five or ten minutes while a hundred pounds of freight is delivered to a particular store. The same idea seems to be the most practical for the delivery of gasoline to the individual filling stations of the city. It seems the most practical from the standpoint of city traffic and from the standpoint of protecting the business district or a residential district from the possibility of a disastrous fire. During the past few months there have been three occasions on which Greenville has barely missed having a serious fire caused by gasoline overflowing from a fuel truck. The board of aldermen should take steps to minimize the possibility of such a fire. Likewise they should seek some solution to the congestion which is being caused on the city streets by large transfer trucks.

Strength for the Day BY EARL L. DOUGLAS

"HOPE CRUSHED TO EARTH" Thirty-two years ago today the world heaved a great sigh of relief. The first World War was at an end. Democracy had triumphed. One does not need to comment on this blasted hope. Today, democracy is fighting for its life. Idealism probably rose to greater heights immediately following the Armistice than at any other time in the history of the human race. Then came a series of disappointments, mistakes, betrayals; and within a decade, the world was disillusioned and cynical. Our two recent world wars are the outgrowth of a perverted philosophy of life. We believed we could get along without God. Science, we said, was sufficient. It would bring man all the heaven he could enjoy. Instead, the scientific instruments have fallen into hands of evil men, and the result is that instead of marching triumphantly into heaven, the race has been plunged into the agony of hell. Moral character alone determines the destiny of mankind, and moral character depends primarily upon religious faith. When we begin to seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, we will find that, true to the assurance of Jesus, all other necessary living values will be given man for his need.

High Times Are Good Times, But...

One of the most prosperous years in the history of the Greenville tobacco market has been recorded during 1950. And as usual the operation of the tobacco market is the barometer to general business conditions in eastern North Carolina. The farmers of this area have this year received the highest dollar value per pound for their tobacco that has ever been received in this section of the country. There is not only more money in circulation this fall than in the past few years, but it is spread more generally throughout the population. This year the prices were high in the medium and common grades of tobacco. More people have the bulk of their tobacco in these grades, and therefore the higher prices have benefitted a larger proportion of the people. The merchants in Greenville, Farmville, Ayden and the other towns of the county are feeling the benefits to the prosperous tobacco season. These are prosperous times compared to those we have known in the past. The outlook seems to be for continued prosperity in an almost unlimited number of years to come. Precautions, however, should be taken against over-expansion and too much indebtedness during these high times. In 1919 tobacco average $52.84 per hundred for the season of the Greenville market, but by 1931, the average had dropped to $9.13 per hundred, and only slightly over $6,000,000 was paid out on the market in that depression year. Of course we are not looking for any repetition of such a financial disaster again, but even an appreciable recession in the near future could wipe out the gains which many Pitt county farmers have made in the past decade. High times are good times, but they are not times in which to lose ones sense of values or sound financial judgment.

Traffic Hazards Still Need Removing

While the ordinance committee of the Greenville board of aldermen is considering safety measures which will govern the operation of gasoline trucks on the city streets, there is one more thing which should be given immediate consideration. It is the operation of large transfer trucks on the city streets. Traffic congestion on the city streets has become a major problem for the law enforcement officers. There have been great improvements in the manner the traffic has been handled in recent weeks, but there is still congestion which is caused principally by oversized vehicles on Greenville's narrow streets in the business district. Mayor Stafford for quite some time has proposed that large transfer trucks not be allowed on the city streets, but that their cargo should come into a terminal here and individual deliveries in the business district be made by smaller trucks. At least one of the major trucking concerns which

National Whirligig News Behind The News

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11—If the Truman-Boyle-Vaughan Missouri machine did not enjoy such a tight grip on the national political organization, conscientious Democratic leaders would today be looking for another Presidential candidate than Harry S. Truman for 1952 as a result of Tuesday's election disaster. Although the Democrats retain fractional control of Congress, albeit with a less workable and functioning majority than they have since Mr. Truman entered the White House, the rejection and repudiation of the Truman foreign and domestic programs are far more devastating than is generally realized. The bare election returns do not begin to reveal the extent of the catastrophe.

DECIMATED—The party's most promising political material, including conservatives and liberals, youngsters and veterans, was decimated because of its association with the Administration's domestic "Fair Deal" and its ill-fated overseas adventure. The ironic fact is that, even though worried Democrats should be able to sidetrack Mr. Truman two years hence, Tuesday's slaughter of the political innocents was so great that there are no understudies for the President or the Vice President. That is the real measure of the Democrats' off-year reverse.

Rarely in modern political annals, have so many up-and-coming leaders of a major party been liquidated on a single day of battle because of the voters' revolt against their commander-in-chief—such men as Bowles of Connecticut, Senate Whip Myers of Pennsylvania, Armed Services Chairman Tydings of Maryland, Senate Leader Lucas of Illinois, James Roosevelt and Helen Gahagan Douglas of California. They died fighting for Truman, leaving him in command of a leaderless and hostile Congress and political army. For, in retrospect, they blame the man in the White House for their defeat.

LOOK—Disillusioned Democrats, on the basis of the 1950 vote, are now taking a new and neutral look at the man in the White House. And, with the 1948, 1949 and 1950 elections in mind, they do not regard him as a statesman or a political miracle worker past, present or future. Under his accidental, postwar leadership, when he humbly admitted that the White House assignment was too big for him, the Democrats lost Congress in the 1946 elections. He won in 1948, as even he admits, by a fluke because Tom Dewey tried to squeeze in by "me-tooing" the New Deal and Fair Deal.

DESERTED—The Mid-Western farmers, who saved him in 1948, have turned against him. As Senator Taft's amazing triumph reveals, labor is souring on him and his unfulfilled promises. Labor's rank-and-file support the Taft-Hartley Act. Various racial and liberal groups discover that he cannot redeem the pledges he gave them to win their votes. They deserted his favored candidates in New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio and California. Even the Truman-Acheson foreign policy was designed to appeal, voted Republican or stayed at home. In short, to Democrats and Republicans alike, Mr. Truman no longer possesses the stature of a statesman or a 1952 Presidential candidate. But, politics being what it is, and with the Missouri clique in control, the Democrats may be stuck with him to their sorrow.

GAIN—The Republican victory—or trend—cannot or should not be measured only in terms of the seats the GOP has won on Capitol Hill, in governorships or in state legislatures. The opposition's greatest gain has been its increase in political manpower, as against the Democrats' loss in this respect. The Democrats obviously have no Presidential candidate save Truman, for, like Franklin D. Roosevelt, he has not permitted any of his cabinet members or prominent office-holders to grow or try their Presidential wings. In fact, for the same reason, the Democrats will have trouble in scraping up a Vice Presidential nominee from the likes of Dean Acheson, W. Averell Harriman, Senator Paul Douglas of Illinois and boyish Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. of New York.

PROSPECTS—The Republicans, on the other hand, are blessed—or cursed—with too many Presidential prospects because of their remarkable showing in the off-year elections. They can present such vote-getters, in the order of their present political importance, as Warren of California, Taft of Ohio, Duff of Pennsylvania, Dirksen of Illinois, Dewey of New York, Driscoll of New Jersey, and General "Ike" Eisenhower of New York, Kansas, Texas and military way stations. This shift in manpower potential is an extremely important political development. Whereas the Democrats have nobody but Mr. Truman, the Republicans have a Kentucky Derby stable of possible 1952 entries.

MAJORITY—In fact, the states carried by the GOP's senatorial and gubernatorial candidates last Tuesday furnish almost a majority in the Electoral College. If the Republicans can get together on the basis of the 1950 gains, and agree not to cut each other's throats at the 1952 convention, they might have a good chance to regain control of the White House. (Mr. Tucker's weekly question and answer column will be resumed next Saturday.)

GREENE, IOWA, RECORDER: "That the fault of the present day squeeze lies at the door of the Federal government is a foregone conclusion. The government has never operated like a business. It has spent monies for projects which are not for the general good of the country, and the matters which have benefited all have been accomplished in a wasteful and extravagant manner." DENVER, COLORADO, MINING RECORD: "Government, unlike private enterprise, is not faced with the necessity to make its projects pay off. Government can soak up losses forever, because it can make money up by reaching into taxpayers' pockets." KALASKA, MICH., LEADER: "Of course we realize we must pay for national defense, but it does seem that there are many economies that could be effected in government so that additional taxes would not be required at this time."

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR. Some people are gifted at entertaining. A good Greenville example is Mrs. Rufus Keel, who lives on Maple Street. If you don't believe that statement, read this story: Wednesday night the choir of the Eighth Street Christian Church was entertained by Mrs. Keel. Soon after the party started, Mrs. Keel casually announced that any minute she was expecting distinguished guests. Their names, she said, would be kept as a surprise. Naturally in a short time the choir members were gathered around the piano singing. When the two distinguished women walked in, the entire group wheeled around to see them. In unison, 25 mouths dropped as Mrs. Keel announced the guests: Mrs. Harry Truman and Mrs. Alben Barkley. The "ladies" turned out to be the minister of the Eighth Street Christian Church, Dr. Glen Hane, and a member of the church, Milo Smith. In the role of Mrs. Truman, Dr. Hane was wearing a red silk crepe evening dress trimmed in gold—low cut with a mere strap over the shoulder. As Mrs. Barkley, Mr. Smith wore a black satin dinner dress. Wigs were furnished by Brodys. Dr. Hane wore blond curls and bangs, while Mr. Smith was more modern: the upswep hairdo, no less. Mr. Smith wore high-heel evening shoes, and despite that hand-draped pranced gracefully around the house. No high-heel shoes would fit Dr. Hane's feet, so he had to settle for satin bedroom slides, held on by rubber bands. Both "ladies" were heavily made up and loaded with jewelry. When I called Dr. Hane for his permission to print the story I asked, "How did it feel to have hair on your head again?" His reply: "It tickled." Since Dr. Hane was one of the girls, one of them did not hesitate to ask him how he was holding the stockings up. "I roll 'em," he said. Mr. Smith tried his best to squeeze into his wife's evening dress. In the process, he caught his skin in a zipper. At that point he wondered whether or not he'd ever become Mrs. Barkley. But with grim determination he went out of the obstacle of women's clothes. Dr. Hane presided over the punch bowl, while Mr. Smith served other refreshments. Do you think I'm going to leave you without telling how the boys became shapely? The answer is no: they were genuine falcons. And I thank you.

Around Capitol Square

Daily Reflector Bureau By LYON MIBBET Raleigh, N. C. Speakership—Both Frank Taylor of Wayne and Fred Royster of Vance, leading contestants for speakership of the house in the next legislature, have been in Raleigh since the election. Each candidate is as confident of victory now as he was before Tuesday's voting decided who will be members of the 1951 assembly. Each admits he may have lost some prospective support by reason of Republican victories in several counties, but both deny the loss was serious enough to make any change in majority voting on the presiding officer. LITTLE FOLKS—The Democratic party in North Carolina is still controlled by the little people. Not only did efforts at mass bloc control of voters fail miserably, but the financial contributions came in small amounts from little folks. The final report to be filed by State Chairman Everett Jordan will show total contributions aggregating around fifty thousand dollars, but with no single item of more than $250. In fact, there were more contributions of five dollars and less than of one hundred dollars and above. DINNER—Tarheel Democrats may be offered something different in the Jefferson-Jackson Dinner next spring. Instead of a limited number of guests who pay or have paid for them by fellow Democrats—fifty dollars apiece for a seat at a hotel table, the prospect is that some five thousand or more Democrats will have a chance to attend a dinner in the State College coliseum at five or ten bucks a throw. There would be very little difference in the gross or in the net "take" and the coliseum deal will provide accommodations for a great many more people. QUESTION—It is known that party leaders are weighing the prospective advantages and disadvantages of the mass meeting idea. One of the factors to be considered is that all Democrats—spelled with a big "D"—are not real democrats—spelled with a little "d." Some folks will pay fifty dollars for an exclusive privilege who would not pay five dollars for general admission. From the money raising angle there might be little difference in the alternate ideas. PURPOSE—The annual Jefferson-Jackson dinners have a two-fold purpose. Raising money for the party chest is one objective; stimulating interest and activity among Democrats is another. The 1949 dinner did all right on the money raising phase, but it didn't contribute anything to party enthusiasm—due mainly to the cross-up and tie-up with an attempted all-south ballyhoo party for the national Democratic program. There was a lot of top brass from Washington and from other states, but a great many North Carolina leaders were noticeably absent. The wider, almost unlimited, guest list possible at a coliseum assemblage may be regarded as a sort of "correct the record" affair, to get the Democratic party in North Carolina back to the level of North Carolina Democrats. There will be no election next year, but party leaders are not unmindful of the fact there will be a president and a governor to elect in 1952.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

SAD SURPRISE (Raleigh News and Observer) School men in Pitt County certainly should not be the only ones to be disturbed by the failure of more than half their young men called up under the draft to pass the Army's mental tests. Similar results have been reported for other counties. Also in the midst of these disturbing Army test reports one of the State's automobile license examiners in Raleigh has estimated that three out of ten persons who take the examination in the Capital City of the State can neither read nor write. There may be something funny about these estimates and figures. There is something tragic about them, too. They arise in the face of the fact that the State of North Carolina has had compulsory school attendance laws since 1913 and that the State itself has assured every child in every district of six months of supposedly adequate instruction since 1931. Of course, the school attendance laws have never been seriously enforced. The census takers in 1940 found thousands of children whom the school authorities have never heard of. Even the 1949 Legislature declined to appropriate a small sum to provide some supervision of local efforts to get the children into the schools and keep them there. Under the circumstances as revealed in both Army mental tests, and automobile license tests, however, there is the greatest good sense in determination of Supt. J. H. Rose of Greenville to ask the State director of Selective Service to turn over the names of the men of his community who have failed in order that he may see how the community itself has failed—or whether it has. Selective Service officials who must be interested in acceptable men for America's strength in the future should be happy to cooperate with Superintendent Rose. Also other superintendents in other cities and counties should seek the same facts as a basis for similar studies. Above all of them the State Superintendent of Public Inform-

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER There is a lot of evidence to support the thesis that the current high price level is a consequence of anticipation of the rearmament program instead of the program itself. We saw what fear could do last July when hoarding and scare buying pushed prices up. As business and government leaders said then, and has since been borne out by the facts, there were just no serious shortages then. What consumers did to themselves then, the whole country, in a measure, may be doing to itself now. It takes time to mount a rearmament program. There must be planning, letting contracts, and tooling up before armaments start absorbing vast quantities of materials. A lot of contracts have been let, especially for planes and accessories, electronic devices, nuclear research, textiles, fuel and a few other essentials. Production has started, but it is not yet rolling in peak volume, or anywhere near it. And the large pouring out of government funds which will create real upward pressure on prices barring price controls—won't reach sizable proportions until next year. The actual bulge in defense spending is so much in the future that one economist, Dr. Arthur M. Weimer, dean of the University of Indiana School of Business, predicts that prices will level off and possibly decline before government spending exerts a real, rather than an anticipated pressure on prices. "Major upward pressures on prices have come to date from a war scare rather than a war effort," he writes in the Savings and Loan News. With the scare phase passing and controls in effect, he sees a slowing down of buying. "Thus for a short time prices seem likely to level out and may decline from the peaks to which they were carried by scare-induced demands last summer." Other economists point out that, so far whatever cuts in auto production have occurred have been a result of minor shortages rather than because of diversion of production facilities to government contracts. Television and radio production is still keeping up with demand despite the large government commitments of the electronics industry. Hoarding of labor in anticipation of war orders is partially responsible for the high employment rates; in general plants have been adding men instead of lengthening the work week into the overtime zone. But when war production begins to approach a peak and when the billions of dollars in defense spending start hitting the economy we will have real pressure on prices instead of the before-cast shadows.

NOW'S NOT THE TIME FOR SOME EXPANSION The Commerce Clearing House, Chicago, has come up with a suggestion that may save some business money. It's this: If planning to apply for licenses to do business in other than in home states, weigh the possibilities of postponing final action until after Jan. 1. In many states, applying for licenses now would involve taxes, reports and other liabilities for the entire year. These may be most costly than the profit on sales between now and the end of the year. BEWARE CHEATS. PROMOTER WARNS "Trying to save money for other people," said a voice over our shoulder. Our worst fears were realized: the old Promoter had tiptoed in and was reading over our shoulder again. "You might tell retailers," he went on, "that this is the time of the year to increase defenses against swindlers. The bad check writers, the phony bill pushers and the shoplifters love the holiday crowds," he said. "They also love the temporary employees, who aren't wise to their ways. Tell all the managers to enforce all the restrictions on checks, and to double precautions against queer money and shoplifters. If they do, they can save a total of a million dollars."

WE SAID WE WOULD AND THE OLD PROMOTER TOOK THE CIGAR WE HAD SIGNIFICANTLY POINTED TOWARD THE DOOR. TAKE FASHION SHOW TO MEN IN PLANTS On the theory that working husbands sometimes wonder why their wives spend money on fashions, an Allentown, Pa., department store sent a traveling fashion show through the mining and steel centers of that part of Pennsylvania. The show, traveling in trucks painted "shocking pink," carried clothes ranging from $19.95 to $50, and models to display them in moon-hour plant shows. Max Hess, in man-to-man talks, discussed the problems of keeping women folk well-dressed and happy. Mr. Hess figures that the average industrial worker in the area makes $90 a week and that his wife spends $500 a year on clothes. Since the caravan played to 25,000 workers, he was promoting to a potential $12,500,000 annual market. NEW AND HOT DURABLE: Knee patches vulcanized to the inside of western jeans are being produced for youngsters, with a guarantee they won't wear out. (By Farah Mfg. Co., El Paso, Texas.) VASE: Vases with a removable, plastic inner container for flowers have been introduced by Sterling Plastics Co. Union, N.J. The inner container can also be used in jardiniere and other large vases to hold flowers in artistic arrangements.

Hal Boyle's Column

By TOM LAMBERT (For Hal Boyle) With U.S. Forces in North Korea—(AP)—A tired, thin Georgia boy stumbled into an American patrol a few days ago after six days in Red-held North Korea. He told in softly accented words of Korea's winter—the new enemy of United Nations troops. Pfc. Max Brammon, Moultrie, Ga., was separated from his unit when it was ambushed by Communists in the Tokchon area about 20 miles east of Kunmo on the Chongchon river line. For six days he roamed the hills—at times within five yards of Korean Reds who were hunting him. One night his trousers legs and sox froze. For three days he satisfied his thirst by munching ice from frozen puddles. That is the beginning of the rigorous Korean winter in terms of suffering for one American soldier. Multiply Max Brammon's experience by several hundred thousand. And throw in the cold weather problems of aircraft, trucks, jeeps and all the other things that keep a modern army on the move. For United Nations ground forces collectively this is what the approach of winter holds: The ice is appearing generally along the northwest front now as the temperature drops daily below freezing. The north wind from the far Gobi and the Manchurian plains is beginning to whine down through the North Korean mountain passes and drill its cold way across the brief plains. The hills which a few days ago were splashed with autumn's vivid colors are turning drab brown. Leaves from maples and poplars are falling like thin sheets of leather. The approaching winter is hardening the rice paddies and making them firm for tanks and heavy vehicles. But it also confronts the Army already perplexed by supply problems in this remote land—with need for such practical items as anti-freeze solution for radiators and lighter weight oil and grease for the thousands of engines necessary for movement and attack. Not many officers here reckoned on a winter campaign in Korea. The capture of Seoul, followed by relatively easy seizure of the Red capital, Pyongyang, and the rapid thrust toward the Manchurian border, convinced many that the war would be over before Thanksgiving. Now, with arrival of Chinese Communists on the battlefield, a winter campaign becomes a possibility. The Chinese brought another problem with them—their language. There seemed to be no Chinese linguists in two divisions—the U.S. Second and 24th—which this correspondent visited recently. Both had captured Chinese prisoners and interrogating them was a trying task. U.S. Army Nisei (Japanese-Americans) who were invaluable in talking with North Korean prisoners—most of whom understand Japanese—were as helpless with the Chinese as the Americans. Some Chinese-speaking South Koreans were pressed into service as interpreters, but questions and answers had to filter through a South Korean Official interrogators were not happy with this procedure. Washington Letter

By WILBUR JENNINGS (For Jane Eads) Washington—Within a few hundred feet of the Capitol are 10,000 orchid plants worth more than $150,000. You can't pick them, for they're the property of the Federal Government—housed in the U.S. Botanical Gardens. Don't go to see them yet. Wait until about Christmas. From then until July they offer a riot of color. There's just about every kind and color of orchid known. There are no black orchids, says Orchidologist William B. Hansen. If there are, he says, they're colored like the green carnations on St. Patrick's Day. Hansen, 47, has been with the botanical gardens for 28 years and in orchids since 1934. His advice is sought by prominent people in the world over who make orchid raising a hobby. Hansen's hobby? Well, he said, it might be raising tropical fish. He does have a few African violets at home. The Capitol Hill orchid collection is fairly new. In 1934, when Hansen took over, the government procured a small collection for $2,979. There were some 300 plants representing several species and varieties. Since then the collection has mounted rapidly through the efforts of Hansen and the donations of nations and orchid lovers from around the globe. Hansen pollinates the orchids by hand for hybridization. The seedlings remain in small bottles for a year; then they are transferred to community pots. As they grow, they are removed to larger pots. It takes about seven years for an orchid to reach the blooming stage, Hansen says. The most popular type of orchid is the "cattleya," he says. That is the one milady wears on her lapel at Easter or Christmas or whenever the boy friend has the money to buy one. There are three orchid houses. One is for orchids from the "war" countries, and another is for those from the "cold" countries, such as the mountainous areas. Watch your step in the "warm" country house. The floor is littered with slow-moving terrapins. They eat up the snails or "slugs" which thrive in the climate and would eat up the orchids.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

| Saturday | Luke | 8 | 4-6 |

Think what it would mean if the leaders of all nations would choose the Bible to guide their decisions and their actions! Think what it would mean to have all people take the Scriptures into their homes and into their hearts!

For the Bible contains the guidance, the criticism, the comfort which enables us to grow continually in knowledge and richness of life. Through its teachings a country may become a great nation, leading the world to peace and freedom. To an individual the Bible can bring happiness on earth and the promise of a wonderful hereafter.

The only cure for the ignorance, superstition and prejudice of the world is the Holy Bible. In its pages we learn of the fatherhood of God, the brotherhood of man, the worth, dignity and personal responsibility to God of every individual—the pattern for daily living.

The Bible, if all nations would follow its precepts and its light, could help us preserve our civilization from dangers within and without. The Bible is the voice of a loving Father showing us the paths of righteousness and peace. Let us open our Bibles and find God!

Bucs Meet High Point In Loop Scrap Tonight

Two Of Last Year's All-Conference Stars Again Face Each Other In College Stadium; Real Thriller In Prospect

High Point College's victory-hungry Panthers invade East Carolina's Pirate cove tonight in a North State gridiron scrap.

This North State clash should turn out to be a top-notch thriller as Coach Bill Dole's fourth-place club, with a 3-3 record, is on the rebounds from last week's frigid, 20-0, defeat at Boone, while Coach C. K. "Tex" Smith's Panthers are seeking their first win in the nine-team circuit this season.

Both boys made last year's All-Conference team and are rated as top-flight stars in their respective departments.

You've Always been "interested in Flying" Why Not START NOW?

YOU'LL WONDER WHY YOU PUT IT OFF SO LONG

Thousands who took up flying for sport or recreation are finding that their one-time hobby pays off in utility, too. Farmers, salesmen, business executives — people to whom time is money — use one or another of the several types of specialized personal planes, and, with the rapid spread of airport facilities, derive increasing profit from such use...

There's ample time left this season to obtain your private pilot's license and get hours of fun and utility from the plane you buy or rent.

THE RAILROAD MURDER CASE

By R. M. Laurensen

Chapter 19

Marc covered the width of the veranda in long strides, with Nora's heels tapping along behind. Their feet crunched in the white gravel of a driveway that led to a two-car garage attached to the house. The garage doors stood open, disclosing an empty space, and the other filled by a long, sleek, black sedan. Marc paused as they walked toward the front steps, pulled out his notebook, and jotted down the license number.

The door was opened by a trim little maid with vacant blue eyes. "Mrs. Johnson in?" asked Marc politely.

"Yes sir," replied the maid, the blue eyes surveying him with approval. "she's here, but she's resting. I can't disturb her."

"I see," he said. "Are you Agnes?" "Yes sir," was the smiling reply. "We're anxious to see Mrs. Johnson. I'm surprised she's sleeping at this time of day."

"Well sir, she was at a party almost all night."

"When did she leave?" "About eight-thirty. She drove."

"And got back when?" "I don't know exactly. It was getting light when I heard her. When I took up her breakfast, she said not to bother her again."

"Who is it, Agnes? Who are you talking to?" a rich, throaty voice asked petulantly.

Agnes turned from the door, and both Marc and Nora watched with keen interest the figure descending the stairs. She was beautiful, with a full red mouth and straight black eyebrows. Her lustrous black hair was combed back to a shoulder-length bob with professional skill.

"A gentleman to see you, ma'am," stammered the flustered Agnes.

"Well, you've no business standing there talking to strangers," snapped Mrs. Johnson. "Who are you?" she demanded, turning to the couple in the door.

"Marc Jordan, Mrs. Johnson, and this is Miss O'Connor. I've some matters to discuss with you, if you please."

"However, I do have business with you, of an important and confidential nature." He glanced meaningly at the maid.

"Oh, all right. Agnes, scram! Come in."

"What's this confidential business?" she demanded.

Marc's half closed eyes never left Mrs. Johnson as she settled into a chair opposite her.

"Agnes tells me you've been resting all day. I presume, then, that you've not been listening to your radio?"

"How can that interest you?" "Obviously, it can't," replied Marc. "Just insatiable curiosity. It'll come as a surprise and a shock, then, to learn that your friend and neighbor, Mr. Richards, was murdered last night."

Marc watched her. The green eyes narrowed to thin slits, and the expertly applied rouge stood out on her pale cheeks. There was no other sign of emotion.

"Murdered!" she exclaimed. "You don't say! Well, I'm not surprised." "It's my understanding that Mr. Richards left here last night in company with his family—and your husband. Natural curiosity leads me to hope there're things to learn here."

"Why come to me?" "You're neighbors. People often know unexpected and interesting things about their neighbors."

"I can't tell you a thing. We were only casual acquaintances."

"Please, let me judge that." "I hear you like to fish, Mrs. Johnson."

"Fish? And if I do, is there anything wrong in that?" "Not at all. Only I'm somewhat surprised. You don't seem the type."

"It's no problem to determine your type, Mr. Jordan!" "Ah, yes, quite," said Marc hurriedly. "I wonder if you could help me identify this person." He pulled an envelope from an inner pocket. Carefully extracting a snapshot, he handed it to Mrs. Johnson. She examined the picture coldly and handed it back.

"Never saw him before in my life. Who is it?" "That's what we're trying to find out."

Legionaire 'Go-Getter' Home After Long Trip

By CHESTER WALSH

Herman J. McLawhorn, president of the "North Carolina Go-Getters' 1950 Club," has returned from Hawaii, where he spent 15 days as the guest of the North Carolina Department, American Legion, for obtaining a large number of new members for 1950.

The Greenville legionnaire was a delegate to the American Legion's National Convention at Los Angeles, October 9-12. He sailed the day after the convention on the Matson luxury liner Lurline for Honolulu. They made the Pacific trip in four days and five nights.

The welcome by the Hawaiians at the pier in Honolulu was wonderful, McLawhorn said. Flowers were everywhere. The women came in tribute to the war dead. J. Howard Moye is commander of the post.

At 12:30 today the American Legion Post was host at dinner at the Legion Home to those members who had paid up their 1951 Legion dues.

The Negro American Legion Post will have a memorial service to the war dead at Fleming Street School Monday, December 4, at 8 o'clock. A supper meeting is planned for the West End Tea Room, on West Fifth Street.

On another trip the American Legion group and others at the Royal Hawaiian Hotel were taken on a tour which included a visit to Pearl Harbor, Schofield Barracks, and the partly submerged USS cruiser Arizona, which was sunk during an air attack by the Japanese on Sunday, December 7, 1941. McLawhorn said he was told that the bodies of more than 1,100 American officers and men repose in the hulk of the sunken ship. Plans are under way to make the Arizona a shrine and memorial to American valor.

McLawhorn said he and a party were conducted over an American submarine that sank more than 20 Japanese ships during World War

First Parley In Phone Walkout Failed Friday

New York, Nov. 11—(AP)—It appears certain today that the partial coast-to-coast telephone strike will continue over the weekend. It now is in its third day.

The first federal peace talks failed yesterday after one of several pay and contract issues was discussed. No new joint session was planned before tomorrow afternoon.

At the same time, the striking CIO Communications Workers of America started a new system of "hit-and-run" picketing aimed at causing the greatest possible confusion in the huge Bell System.

It was designed to keep the company from mobilizing clerks and supervisors fast enough to handle the struck jobs at any one place.

Club Discusses Bowl Game Plan

Activities of the Midget football team of Greenville took the predominant place in the discussion last night at the weekly meeting of the Exchange club at the Woman's Club.

President John G. Clark presided at the meeting.

The Exchange last night discussed tentative plans for the second annual Exchange Bowl game which is to be played here on Thanksgiving day. Arrangements are being made for the game, although club officials have not yet announced what team has been invited to oppose the unbeaten Greenville Midgets in the classic of the Mighty Mites.

City Recreation Group To Meet

The Greenville city recreation committee will hold a business meeting on Monday night at the Greenville High School at eight o'clock.

Chairman Heber B. Tripp stated that some very important business matters will be discussed. One item to come up is the possibility of hiring a full time athletic and recreational director for the coming year.

A report on the work carried on by the commission's program in the city during the summer months will be made at this time.

Neighbors Complain Of Dogs Destroying Personal Property

Police are continuing to receive complaints about prowling dogs in various parts of the city. Some reports state dogs killed chickens.

Another report to police today was from Mrs. Bunn Mills, 900 Manhattan avenue. She complained that dogs prowling around in her neighborhood were trying to kill her rabbits.

Police are investigating.

Service Station Formally Opened

Fleming's Shell Service Station, Greenville's newest, will hold its grand opening all day today and tonight with the public invited to attend.

Located on Dickinson Avenue, 100 yards beyond the Atlantic Coast Line station, the service station will be operated by J. D. Fleming. At the formal opening today Fleming will give away a portable radio on a drawing which does not require the ticket holder to be present when the drawing is held.

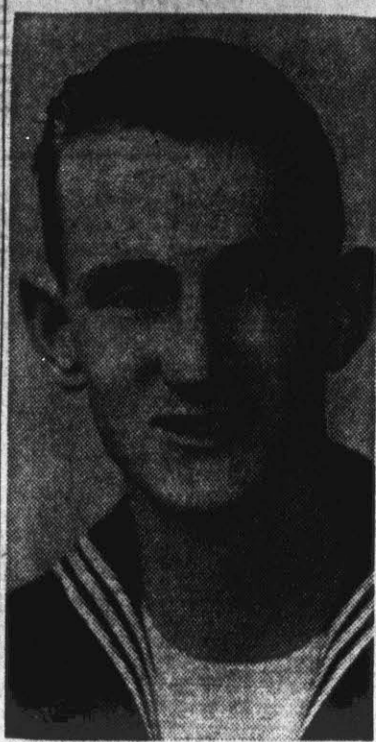

Fleming and his employees have been in business on the present site for a week and yesterday were busy making ready for the opening.

The station is built according to the newest plans developed by Quality Eastern Oil Company, a subsidiary of the Shell Oil Company, in the Shell "standard" plan of construction. It is constructed of concrete blocks with yellow painted stucco outside covering. The office, which offers ample operating space, is enclosed on two sides by wide panes of plate glass.

The concrete parking area surrounding the station provides plenty of room for servicing the patrons' cars as well as parking space.

Fleming's will offer around-the-clock service, operating 24 hours each day. The night operator will be Ben Fleming, a brother of the owner. Assisting J. D. Fleming during the day will be Mack Allen.

Eastern N. C. Teachers View Training School

Several groups of teachers from schools in the eastern section of North Carolina have visited the Training School at East Carolina Teachers College recently or plan visits within the next few weeks. According to custom, classrooms at the school are open to them and teachers are available for conferences and discussions.

Teachers in the Pender County schools have arranged a series of weekly observations and conferences in the Training School which began November 1 and will continue through December 8. The visits have been arranged through Gertrude Styron, supervisor of Pender County elementary schools, and to date four teachers from the county schools have visited the campus school each week this month.

Five teachers in the school system in Wilson observed classes in the Training School Wednesday of this week and held conferences with teachers of the first and third grades there. The visitors were accompanied by J.M. Dunlap, supervisor in the city schools there.

Farmville teachers will observe classes at the Training School November 15 and November 17. Arrangements for the visits were made by Annie Lee Jones, supervisor of Pitt County elementary schools.
