Greeted By Jacob Malik; Delay Expected Before Testifying In U.N.

Lake Success, Nov. 24—(AP)—A nine-member Chinese communist delegation arrived at Idlewild International Airport today, en route to press Red China's charge of American aggression before the United Nations Security Council.

The group, which was met by Soviet U. N. Delegate Jacob A. Malik and representatives of other Iron Curtain countries, refused to speak to reporters as it alighted from a British Overseas Airways plane.

Later in a statement to the press Wu Hsui-Chan, leader of the delegation, said he hoped the U. N. would give "just treatment" to the Red Chinese charge that the United States has committed "armed aggression" against Formosa.

He said such "just treatment" would "be helpful to peace and security in the Pacific and in Asia."

Wu declared "a profound friendship has always existed between the Chinese people and the American people."

"I wish to avail myself of this opportunity to convey my greetings to peace-loving people in the United States," he said.

The Chinese Reds came with the permission of the United States government—despite the fact that Communist Chinese soldiers are fighting U. S. troops in Korea.

U. N. officials did not expect an immediate council meeting on the Peiping charges. Instead they looked for several days of private conversations among the Chinese, Russians, British and Indians, and perhaps among other delegations.

These officials thought Yugoslavia's Dr. Ales Bebler, November president of the Security Council, would call a session next Tuesday.

Red China's premier and foreign minister, Chou En-Lai, already has served notice that the delegation will not discuss Gen. Douglas MacArthur's charges that Chinese Communists have intervened in the Korean war.

Chou extended a Council invitation, accepted Sept. 29, to send his group here to argue his charges.

U. S. aggression was committed when President Truman ordered the U. S. Seventh Fleet to protect Formosa.

Cotton Suffers Heavy Losses To Insect Scourge

Charlotte, Nov. 24—(AP)—Boll weevils and other insects caused officially estimated losses of $88,000,000 to this year's cotton crops in North Carolina and South Carolina.

Official estimates obtained today placed the North Carolina loss at $46,150,000, involving 196,000 bales of cotton and 83,000 tons of cottonseed.

The South Carolina loss was $42,000,000, involving 190,000 bales and 77,000 tons of seed.

With each bale average 500 pounds the loss in the two states totaled approximately 193,000,000 pounds of lint cotton.

Veep Observes 73rd Birthday

Washington, Nov. 24—(AP)—Vice President Barkley is celebrating his 73rd birthday by going home to his apartment from Naval hospital for a few hours today, but he won't have a birthday cake.

He is getting a birthday present—a table model radio—from his pretty wife, the former Jane Hadley of St. Louis. Only last week he gave her a radio-phonograph combination as a wedding anniversary present.

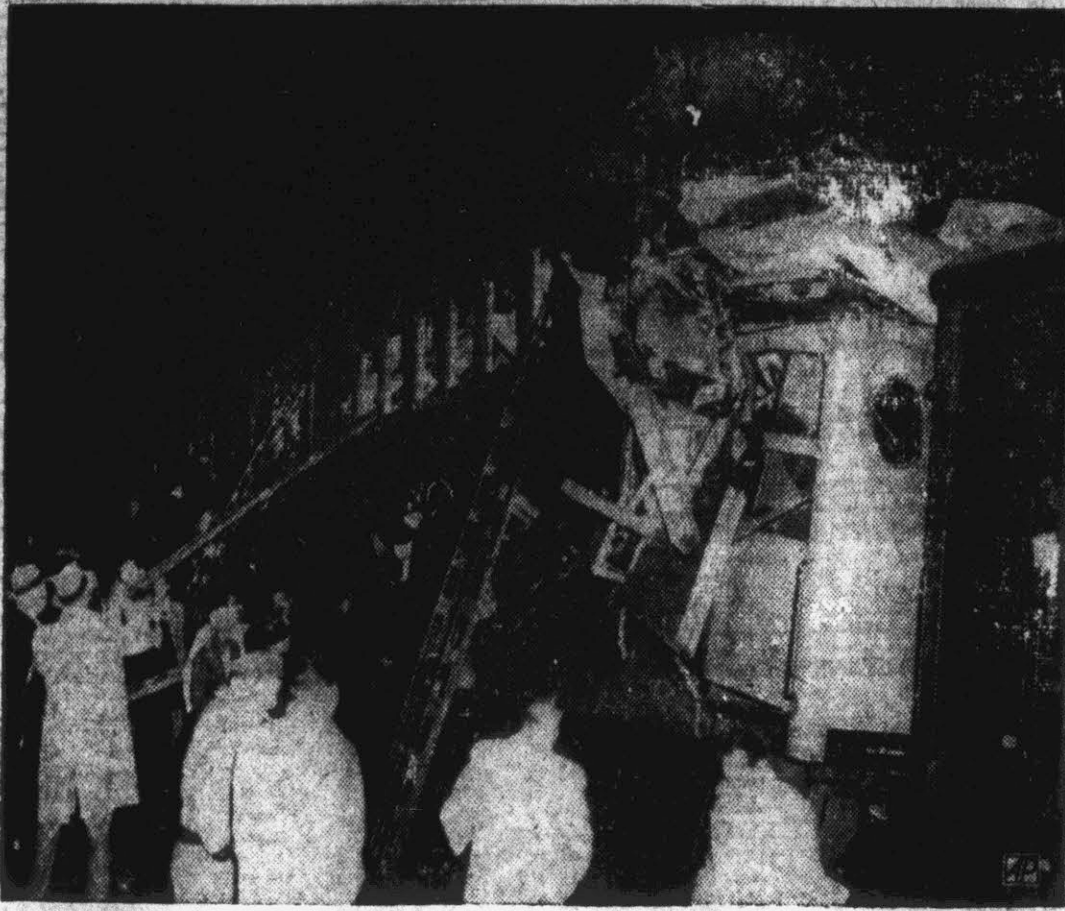

Achievement of that goal would in itself be a wonderful Christmas present for a war-weary world. But it strikes me that a quick victory might have an even more important result.

If the final phase of the conflict can be confined to Korean territory south of the Manchurian border, it might eliminate the danger of war between Red China and America. This would be on the basis of convincing a suspicious China that America has no designs on Manchuria.

Of course a large army of Chinese communists is in northwest Korea, just below the Korea-Manchuria boundary, to block the U. N. attack. But they claim they are here to defend their own border interests. Whether that claim is fact or fiction remains to be demonstrated, but if it is fact it would fit our theory.

Blount On Legislative Body, N. C. Merchants

Committee Will Oppose New Taxes For Another Two Years; Has Hopeful View Of Legislative Body

By JOHN D. SPINKS, JR.
Judson H. Blount, president of the Blount-Harvey Company in Greenville, was appointed to the legislative committee of the North Carolina Merchants Association at the meeting of the Board of Directors, of which Blount is a member, this week.

It will be one of the duties of the committee, according to Blount, to "talk down" raising of taxes by the 1951 General Assembly. Other duties of the committee concern lobbying against any legislative action that will prove detrimental to the merchants of the State.

Other members of the committee are: Thompson Greenwood, Raleigh, executive secretary; B. W. Haigh, Raleigh; S. T. Proctor, Piquette Springs; C. Wayland Spruill, Windsor; O. A. Swearingen, Concord; Emmitt Winslow, Hertford; W. G. Clark and D. R. Clark, Tarboro; and a representative of the newly-formed Greensboro Merchants Association.

Blount stated this morning the committee will recommend that no new taxes be placed on the people of North Carolina for at least another two years. He stated he thought the General Assembly should favor that.

Civil Term Of Court Is Closed

The civil term of this week's Superior Court wound up Wednesday afternoon with a mistrial ordered in the case of Lydia King, Negro, vs. John May and Louis Hudson.

A juror was withdrawn after the jury could not get together. The case concerned a deed of trust to secure some notes owned by Hudson.

A judgment was rendered in the case of Margaret Churchill vs. M. H. Hardee. The plaintiff was allowed to recover $50 and interest from the defendant on the amount due on a contract.

An Early Knockout?

If MacArthur Succeeds In Bringing Korean War To Quick Close, It Would Have A Number Of Important Results; Might Be Able To Reassure Nervous China

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

We are told that the great offensive launched by General MacArthur with U. N. forces in northwest Korea is aimed at ending the war.

Achievement of that goal would in itself be a wonderful Christmas present for a war-weary world. But it strikes me that a quick victory might have an even more important result.

If the final phase of the conflict can be confined to Korean territory south of the Manchurian border, it might eliminate the danger of war between Red China and America. This would be on the basis of convincing a suspicious China that America has no designs on Manchuria.

U.S. Casualties Continue Mount

Announced Toll In Korean Campaign Now Near 30,000

Washington, Nov. 24—(AP)—Announced American casualties in the Korean conflict rose today to 29,985, an increase of 1,115 over a week ago.

The new total covers casualties about which next of kin had been notified through Friday, Nov. 17. It does not include all casualties that had occurred up to that time because of the time required to check casualty reports in the Far East, forward them to the Defense Department and notify relatives.

Of the total number of casualties, 4,993 were deaths. The number of non-fatally wounded was 20,568. An additional 4,439 had been reported missing in action. Of the latter, four had subsequently died and are included in both the "dead" and "missing" totals, 528 returned to United Nations military lines and 107 were learned to be in enemy hands. This left the number listed as currently missing on Nov. 17 at 3,800.

By far the largest number of total casualties, 25,677, was reported by the Army. Navy casualties totaled 320, Marine casualties 3,756 and Air Force 243.

Hospitality Has Fatal Blow As Guests Failed

Half of the hundreds of central Indiana householders who invited Camp Atterbury soldiers for Thanksgiving dinner still wondered today what became of their guests.

Atterbury checked out 1,048 men who had accepted invitations, but only 590 showed up at the servicemen's center in the Indiana War Memorial here.

The mass disappearance put a chill on hospitality in the Indianapolis area. A total of 1,500 invitations had been offered.

Hundreds of hosts milled around the servicemen's center while turkey cooked at home, waiting for the men of the 28th Infantry Division, the former Pennsylvania National Guard.

One elderly woman said she had spent an entire week's wages preparing dinner for two soldiers who never showed up.

Senator Missed Island's Shelling

Taipei, Formosa, Nov. 24—(AP)—The Chinese Nationalist Defense Ministry said today Sen. and Mrs. William F. Knowland missed a Chinese Red shelling of Quemoy Island Tuesday.

It said Knowland (R-Calif.) and his wife missed the bombardment by several hours.

The ministry said the Reds fired about 40 rounds.

Tiny Quemoy is outside the Formosa defense zone neutralized by the U. S. Seventh Fleet.

Award Discussed

With U.S. First Corps, Korea, Nov. 24—(AP)—General MacArthur said today he had discussed the prospect for awarding a presidential citation to the 24th Division for its delaying action in the bitter early days of the war.

MacArthur told Maj. Gen. E. Church at 24th Division headquarters he had discussed the award when he and the President met at Wake Island.

The 24th Division lost its commander, Maj. Gen. William F. Dean, during the bloody withdrawal from Taejon in July.

Hold 2 Escapees At Prison Camp

Local Youth One Of Pair Nabbed By Local Police

By CHESTER WALSH
Two white prisoners who escaped from a state prison camp at Gatesville Saturday are being held for authorities at the Pitt County Prison Camp. An automobile they said they stole from Edenton was recovered.

Dewey Atkins of Greensboro, who had served five months of a nine to ten-year sentence, was captured last night at about eight o'clock.

Shortly afterwards officers apprehended Bobby Ward of Greenville, who was serving time at the prison camp for breaking and entering homes and larceny of shotguns and rifles from College View homes a little more than a year ago.

Ward was surprised at the home of a relative on the suburbs of Greenville. He and Atkins were taken to the state prison camp.

Ward admitted to the officers that he stole an automobile in Edenton to make their getaway. He showed the officers where he and Atkins had parked the car near Washington.

Gates County prison authorities came here today and took the two escapees back to prison.

Dewey, Impellitteri Take Lead In Rail Wreck Probe

New York, Nov. 2—(AP)—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and New York's Mayor today took personal command of investigations into the railroad disaster that turned Thanksgiving into a day of mourning on Long Island.

The toll stood today at 77 dead and 332 injured. With three score victims still in hospitals and 15 of them in critical condition, it was feared the death list would increase.

Dewey and Mayor Vincent R. Impellitteri cut short their reelection vacations and flew home—The Governor from Miami Beach and the Mayor from Cuba.

Both expressed horror and grief over the holiday eve crash of two crowded Long Island railroad commuter trains on the fringe of one of the city's costliest residential communities.

One electric train plowed into the rear of another, which was stalled about ten miles from Times Square. With a deafening roar and a blinding flash from the third rail, the front and rear cars of the two 12-car trains telescoped.

The motorman of the second train was killed, and the cause of the disaster is still uncertain.

Wednesday night's rush hour wreck—the nation's worst rail disaster in seven years—killed more than twice as many persons as the Long Island Rail Road collision nine months ago at Rockville Centre.

Blast Of Wintry Cold For West, Moves East

By the Associated Press
The Midwest got a touch of mid-winter's blustery elements today, icy cold, snow and strong winds.

The blast of frigid air swept across the prairie states and moved eastward. It also dipped into the south and put a chill over parts of Dixie. The season's coldest weather in the Midwest brought record breaking low temperatures for the date in many cities.

Meanwhile, southern California and the far southwest were having a mild heat wave. The mercury was in the high 80's yesterday.

The plains and Great Lakes region had a fresh blanket of snow and there were flurries as far

All-Out Offensive Moving On Schedule Against Reds

Big Push May Aid Peace Settlement

Diplomats Say U.N. General Offensive In Korea Will Not Hurt, May Help Border Settlement With Chinese Reds

Washington, Nov. 24—(AP)—Diplomatic authorities said today the U.N. general offensive in Korea will not hurt and may boost any possible chances for a peaceful border settlement with the Chinese Communists.

The timing of the big push—which Gen. Douglas MacArthur called the drive to end the conflict—was decided on military rather than diplomatic considerations, according to these fully-informed authorities.

The fact that it was undertaken on the eve of the arrival of a Chinese Communist delegation at United Nations headquarters in New York was described as entirely coincidental.

Nevertheless, predominant opinion among Administration leaders appears to be that this show of strength and determination to achieve a complete victory in Korea may hasten any negotiations which the Chinese are willing to undertake on the question of any arrangement to protect their border interests.

As regards the long-standing uncertainty over what China's real intentions are, the next few days or hours are critical.

If the Chinese Reds, under Moscow pressure, intend to make an all-out fight against U.N. forces, they can be expected to begin pouring reinforcements across the Yalu River promptly.

On the other hand, if their intentions are less hostile, if they have been making merely a token show of assistance to the Korean Communists or have other limited objectives, they are expected to hold their main forces north of the border while their troops in Korea fall back under U.N. pressure.

They have insisted all along that their troops are only "volunteers." That may be a device to avoid direct and official involvement.

This insistence on the voluntary nature of the Chinese intervention is one of two main reasons why Administration officials have been and remain somewhat hopeful of an early and peaceful settlement in Korea.

The other reason is that during recent weeks the Chinese must have not committed the large forces which they had available in Manchuria.

Washington officials told a reporter that in ordering the drive now under way, General MacArthur was acting under his broad orders to smash Communist aggression and restore peace to Korea. The only limiting order which he had, these officials said, was and is to avoid any attacks across the Korean border into Manchuria or Siberia.

That restriction includes aerial bombardment of strategic Manchurian centers.

In addition, it was said, there is a general understanding between Washington and Tokyo that no American troops will drive up to the Korean-Siberian border.

Register of Deeds Charles P. Gaskins stated this morning he has submitted a letter of resignation to the County Commissioners with the request that he be allowed to quit his post December 15 to go into private business.

Gaskins stated he has been offered the position as distributor for Quality Eastern Oil Company of Winston-Salem in the Greenville area. He will begin his new work immediately after his resignation is effective, he said.

The move came as a surprise to most courthouse officials. Gaskins, who has been in the office for the past three-and-a-half years, stated he had talked with Quality Oil officials in Winston-Salem earlier this week and had been offered the position in Greenville at that time.

His resignation will be acted upon by the Commissioners at the Dec. meeting. It is expected that the resignation will be a formality. Gaskins stated he had contacted Chairman M. Brown Hodges by telephone this morning, informing him he was resigning and also that he was submitting the letter.

No one has been recommended officially to fill the rest of the term. Commissioner J. Vance Perkins stated this morning he did not know of anybody who had offered himself as a candidate for the temporary post. He said the Commissioners will more than likely

Annual Student Congress Opens

The fifth annual Eastern Carolina Student Congress convened this morning at Greenville High School with more than 65 students registered for the event.

Following registration this morning, the group heard a State of the Union address by Robert Lee Humber, who told the students that "Protection of freedom is being strained to its resources."

After the joint session was over the group broke up into a house and senate, where matters of national, state and regional importance were taken up in the same manner as conducted by the national lawmakers.

Students present for the morning session of the congress came from Kinston, Farmville, Chicod, Winterville, and Greenville. Following the close of the session this morning another session will be held this afternoon with the closing session tonight.

Seventh Army Is Reactivated By U.S. In Europe

Heidelberg, Germany, Nov. 2—(AP)—The United States today announced reactivation in Europe of its Seventh Army—the first American "army" on the continent since demobilization after World War II.

Two veteran major tactical units of American forces in Germany—the First U. S. Infantry Division and the U. S. Constabulary—have been assigned to the new unit, the U. S. Commander-in-Chief in Europe, Gen. Thomas T. Handy, announced.

The Seventh Army will have its headquarters in Stuttgart. Its commander will be Lt. Gen. Manton S. Eddy, Commanding General of U. S. Ground Forces in Europe.

GOP Slowdown Spells Trouble For 'Lame Duck'

Republican Leaders Indicate Work Will Be Held To A Minimum

Washington, Nov. 24—(AP)—A prospective Republican slowdown spelled trouble today for administration proposals in the lame duck congress beginning Monday.

Republican leaders were reported in private agreement that work in the expiring session ought to be held to a minimum. They will have added strength in both houses—and thus a larger voice in decisions—when the new congress meets in January.

The GOP's reluctance to act might contribute difficulties to President Truman's demands for approval of an excess profits tax and for an extension of rent controls in the short session. It could help kill house-approved Hawaii and Alaska statehood bills, on which Mr. Truman has asked action.

There may be some questions about details, but Republicans are expected to go along with a forthcoming presidential request for another big chunk of money to finance the fighting in Korea and to build up military forces. Included in this are likely to be additional funds for atomic developments.

Although Senator Knowland (R-Calif.) has indicated he would oppose a request for aid to Yugoslavia unless something is done about Nationalist China, the majority of Republicans may back the President's plan to provide economic help to the drought-stricken Balkan country.

A proposed 80 to 90 day extension of rent controls may provide a h. fight. Chairman Maybank (D-SC) of the Senate Banking Committee had indicated he will go along with a short extension. Present controls expire Dec. 31, unless extended six months by local communities.

Senator Ives (R-NY) has said he would support a brief extension of the present law. Senator Taft of Ohio, who heads the GOP policy committee, has insisted that rent controls should be tied up with price-wage controls which the President said he isn't ready to impose yet.

The excess profits tax situation is up in the air. House passage of such a bill conceivably could be followed by no final senate action in this congress.

Army Rules Out Special Shelter For Its Personnel

Washington, Nov. 24—(AP)—The Army has ruled out the building of shelters to protect personnel at its installations in the continental U. S. against atomic, chemical or biological attacks.

In outlining construction policies to be followed at such posts, it has also turned thumbs down on dispersion or camouflage in any emergency construction to guard against attack.

The reason?

Army officials said today the geographical location of most camps and other installations in this country is such that they do not require protection for personnel. Outlays for this purpose therefore would not be justified. They contend.

The Seventh Marines fought through deep snowdrifts and five heavily defended Chinese road-blocks. They smashed through an estimated 1,000 Reds to a point three miles south of Yudan, western tip of the great reservoir.

Long-Range Endeavor

Despite Their Recent Political Setbacks, Labor Unions Are Again Demanding Repeal Of Taft-Hartley Act; Intend To Keep Issue Before American People

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, Nov. 2—(AP)—Labor unions, despite their recent disappointments at the polls, are again demanding the outright repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act of 1947.

The CIO adopted a resolution to that effect at its Chicago convention the other day.

Such perseverance may be puzzling unless you understand that this is a long-range endeavor, just as President Truman's renewed demand for his "fair deal" program is a long-range endeavor.

Labor leaders do not expect to get rid of the Taft-Hartley law next year.

They do hope that the law, or most of it, will be eliminated some day through a swing of the pendulum and the election of a congress disposed to such action.

In the meantime, they think it is good strategy to continue demanding the limit. They intend to keep the issue before the people for use in the next election, and later elections if need be.

This doesn't necessarily mean that they would refuse a compromise in 1951 or 1952, if offered.

The law passed the Senate but because of union opposition was allowed to die in the House labor committee, and thus the Taft-Hartley Act stayed on the books unchanged.

But it is questionable whether the unions could get the Taft bill now if they wanted it.

The strengthened Republicans and Southern Democrats may pre-

MacArthur Says His Boys Are Going Home When They Reach Yalu River; Gains Range Up To Eight Miles In Giant Assault; Losses Light; Little Opposition

Tokyo, Nov. 24—(AP)—A United Nations 100,000-man army launched an offensive on the entire Korean battle front today to end the war in a hurry.

The attack is moving "according to schedule," General MacArthur announced tonight. It followed a long lull marked by unconfirmed peace rumors.

MacArthur made the announcement at 8 p.m. (6 a.m. EST) 12 hours after flying boldly to the northwest front to direct the all-out assault.

Elsewhere allied divisions forged ahead in a giant pincer movement. The assault along the 80 mile northwest front was moving ahead against "stubborn but falling resistance," MacArthur said.

Gains ranged up to eight miles. U. N. losses were "extraordinarily light" as the allies pushed toward mountains where an estimated 100,000 Reds are entrenched. MacArthur said new Red armies had joined the defenders, but didn't amplify the statement.

Allied aircraft provided strength aerial umbrella advance.

The entire giant pincer movement, MacArthur said, is geared for a sustained offensive to end the war before Christmas.

"The justice of our cause," the Supreme Commander said, "and promise of early completion of our mission is reflected in the morale of our troops and commanders alike."

MacArthur ordered the drive in the northwest toward the Yalu River border of Manchuria the day after Tokyo was flooded with peace rumors. He told his frontline commanders:

"Tell the boys when they reach the Yalu they are going home. I want to make good on my statement that they are going to eat Christmas dinner at home."

Later MacArthur flew over enemy lines and along the winding Yalu. Then he returned to Tokyo. He was escorted by jet fighters.

Combat troops of three allied corps jumped off in freezing weather Friday morning along an 80-mile front. The U. S. 2nd and 25th Divisions and a Turkish brigade quickly moved up to take over a 25-mile sector in the middle of the line.

The advance—covered by allied planes—met little opposition. There were gains also on the northern Korean front. The northwest push began from a line 5 to 60 miles south of the Red border.

A tank led U. S. 24th Division task force drove eight miles west on the road to Sinuiju, entryway for Chinese communist armies in the extreme northwest. Sinuiju was in flames today, presumably from new allied air attacks.

Less than half of the 8th Army's 100,000 men were committed to the initial stages of the offensive. Mobilized behind the spearheads were well-organized and well-supplied reserves, ready to exploit any break-through in the deep defenses the Reds have been reported.

The heaviest opposition reported was in north-central Korea.

There the Chinese Reds threw a fresh division—the 89th—against the previously unopposed U. S. Seventh Marine Regiment moving up the west side of Changlin Reservoir.

The Seventh Marines fought through deep snowdrifts and five heavily defended Chinese road-blocks. They smashed through an estimated 1,000 Reds to a point three miles south of Yudan, western tip of the great reservoir.

Faculty Club Enjoys Review Of Musical Play

The members of the Faculty Wives' Club were delightfully entertained in the parlors of the Flanagan Building on Tuesday night. A South Pacific motif was used in decorations, program, refreshments and favors.

The rooms were attractively decorated with coconuts, pineapples and leaves suggestive of the South Sea Islands. Mrs. Astor Richardson was introduced as the guest speaker, and she charmed the members with a delightful review of the Broadway production "South Pacific."

Mrs. Richardson gave a background of the musical, telling how the idea of turning a prize-winning book into a record-smashing hit developed. She told many interesting facts about the cost of production, the money it has made and the legends that have grown up about it—some true and some exaggerations. The personal things she related about the stars were added touches to her review of the production. She gave a brief summary of the action plot and played selections recorded by the original cast. Her presentation of the program was thoroughly enjoyed.

Following a brief business session conducted by the president, Mrs. F. D. Duncan, the hostesses served a sweet course carrying out the South Pacific theme. Individual favors, small recipe books in the shape of coconuts with original recipes prepared by the hostesses, were on each plate.

The hostesses for the delightful event were Mesdames Jack Boone, chairman, H. A. Coleman, Karl Gilbert, Robert Holt, George Martin, John Reynolds, Rudolph Willmann, Alex White and Leo W. Jenkins.

Renston-Nobles H. D. Club The regular monthly meeting of the Renston-Nobles Home Demonstration club was held at the home of Mrs. R. H. McLawhorn, Sr.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. C. M. Stokes. "Come, Ye Thankful People" was sung.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Twelve members answered to the roll call. Three visitors, Mrs. Penner Allen, Mrs. James Allen and Mrs. Bill McLawhorn, were welcomed.

The treasurer reported that we have a balance of $89.94.

It was decided that the December meeting would be held at the home of Mrs. C. D. Laughton with Mrs. Obed Castelle, and Mrs. Willy Waters co-hostesses, and that we would exchange home-made gifts.

Mrs. W. A. Forbes, Jr., reported that she received a letter of thanks from Miss Steele for the pin the clubs gave her.

A letter from Mr. Gray, superintendent of the Oxford Orphanage, was read thanking the clubs for the offering that was taken for the children at the achievement day program.

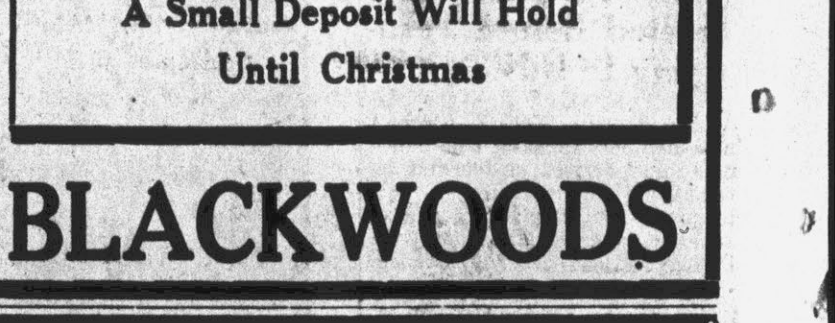

Mrs. J. B. Speight and Mrs. Obed Castelle turned in their third and fourth year pins.

Mrs. Leon Tyson agreed to take 2 1-2 pounds of pecans to the Home Demonstration office before December 1st to be used to fill Christmas packages for the men at camp Lejeune that fought in Korea.

Christmas ideas by Miss Parker were enjoyed by everyone present.

Plans For Christmas Bazaar Go Forward

In the above picture some auxiliary members are shown busily at work making gifts for sale at the bazaar which will be held in St. Paul's Episcopal church parish house on December 7. Since early fall, groups of ladies have gathered at the church every Thursday where they work on things for the bazaar.

December 7th, in addition to being Pearl Harbor day, is to be remembered in Greenville as the date of another event. On that day at 10:00 a.m. Uncle Mistletoe and Aunt Holly will arrive in town.

Those of you who can remember events of a year ago will recognize those names as belonging to the characters which preside over the Christmas Bazaar held annually for the past eight years or more at St. Paul's Episcopal Church Parish House. Again this year Aunt Holly and Uncle Mistletoe will be on hand to welcome the hundreds of friends who attend the bazaar each year. Some come to buy; some come to eat; some come just to look; but everybody comes to have a good time and to enjoy the hundreds of attractive gifts on display for sale.

There will be a table of dolls—gaily and extravagantly dressed—and doll beds, daintily ruffled and draped to delight the heart of any child. There will be complete wardrobes to fit dolls of all shapes and sizes. There one may find stuffed dolls for the tiny tots that can be cuddled and snuggled without fear of injury. In fact, there will be hardly a thought pertaining to dolls which won't be found charmingly carried out by the ladies of the Auxiliary.

On the aprons table will be found all kinds, sizes and designs in aprons. A feature of this group of gifts will be a surprise Christmas apron designed especially for the holiday hostess. From bib-size to Aunt Jemima size, there will be an apron for everyone—even the men-folk!

The households table will offer a variety of gifts that will please the taste of the most fastidious—and the nicest thing about these gifts is that they are useful. The young ones will love to have one of the special stockings to hang by the chimney for Santa to fill with something else from the bazaar. There will be beautifully designed table cloths in festive colors, individual place mats, hot pot holders, hosiery cases, sachets for dress hangers, quaint pincushions, cocktail napkins and numerous other miscellaneous items.

There will be an offering of Christmas greens and decorative items at another table. Here will be found tree ornaments, mantel decorations, greens gilded and silvered, winter bouquets and a host of other decorative touches which will glamorize the most commonplace spot into a thing of beauty.

All kinds of sweets and home-made pastries will be on sale at the bazaar. Cakes, cookies, puddings, candies, unusual sauces and the greatly coveted watermelon rind pickles can be bought for a small amount.

The men will have a definite part in this year's bazaar. They will preside over a white elephant table—and there is no telling what they will find to place on sale.

The doors of the Parish House will be thrown open at 10:00 a.m. and the welcome mat rolled out. From that hour until 9:00 p.m. that night, the ladies of St. Paul's Auxiliary will be there to provide food, fun and distinctive handmade items for sale to early Christmas shoppers.

The ones with foresight should arrive early enough to have first choice among the hundreds of useful and novel things for the holiday season gift giving.

The era 80,000,000 years ago is called Cretaceous age.

Christian Church Announcements

The Eighth Street Christian Church will be celebrating its 50th anniversary this Sunday. The church was formally organized in 1900 in the home of Mrs. Travis E. Hooker and she will read the list of charter members in the anniversary service Monday morning. Several others will be on the program and the members of the church are urged to bring their family dinners to the church where a committee will arrange the food on the tables in the church's social rooms. The choir will sing the anthem "Onward Christian Soldiers" by Sullivan. Mrs. William Vincent, nee Geraldine Allgood, will sing "Let Not Your Heart Be Troubled" by Speaks. The list of the ministers and their terms of office will be related by the chairman of the board of officers, Mr. Milo H. Smith.

The annual Woman's Day observance will be held in the regular church service on Sunday morning, December 3.

The choir under the direction of Mrs. H. L. Carter will present the annual Christmas music program on Sunday afternoon December 10 at 5 o'clock. The voices of the large choir will be augmented by that of Miss Gladys Reichard of the college. This has proven to be a most enjoyable occasion in past years and the program is even better this year.

There have been a good many good catches of king mackerel reported along the Carolina coast during the past few weeks, but among the best catches was the one landed early this week by Ralph Garrett Jr. of Greenville and a party from Jacksonville.

The party was fishing off Southport and landed 32 king mackerel which averaged approximately 15 pounds apiece. In addition to the 32 king mackerel, the party also landed five bonito.

CREATION—NOT CHANCE

In certain medieval glass paintings, there are parts so minute that they can scarcely be seen except under a magnifying glass. Yet when examined they are found to be as perfectly designed and executed as are the perfectly visible parts.

One's first introduction to a microscope is a revealing experience. But if one believes that the microscope is a marvelous instrument, let him see the new electronic microscope. Scientists believe that this marvelous instrument may introduce us to hitherto undreamed of discoveries.

As we examine nature in its different phases, we are amazed by the order, precision, and beauty of design, whether the object examined is a planet or the smallest particle seen through the electronic microscope. All life appears to be one. The universe was not made in sections. The mathematical formulae of probability renders absurd the contention that the universe took on its present form by chance. There is too much design in it for anyone to believe this sort of thing.

The Biblical doctrine of creation still maintains its place of supreme authority in the thinking of most men, including the scientists. "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth."

An Open Letter To Uncle Ben

Dear Uncle Ben,

Hits been a long time since I writ you, but causn't its thanksgivin I thot I might as well let you know how allun us is getting along.

Just about every body is doing fine ceptin Uncle Kerr whos been adoin just like he allus did—doin things his own way and not lookin much to what other folks thinks.

Fer instance you knows most folks writes Sandy Claws fer presents at Christmas time in December, but Uncle Kerr has plum got his idea set on ahavin a big passel of presents delivered to him when the legislature meets in Rawley in January. He's done said a lot of things he wants them men to do, and most of 'em has to do with spendin more money. Course Uncle Kerr ben gvnner ought to know what he's adoin, but somehow I don't see how takin mo money from taxin the people just to spend it in the state govmnt is goin to help much right now. We's done spendin all we kin afford and then some.

You know when Uncle Kerr was arunnin fer office a couple of years ago he said we oughtn't to have no sales tax cause it won't fair. An he said we ought not spend a hundret million dollars on roads cause the state couldn't afford it. But attter he got elected, he turned round and had the folks spend two hundred million dollars on roads.

Course Uncle Kerr ain't a man to go back on his word, and he still says the sales tax ain't fair, but now he's asayin we oughta keep the sales tax we got and put the same tax on everything else we's agotin. Course that would make it all even and equal, but somehow that ain't exactly what I thought he ment when he was a campaignin fore lection.

Then too, he's awantin to add another cent tax on every gallon of gas sos the state can take over keepin up all the streets in all the towns and have them under the 'highway commission just like all the country roads.

From what I'm hearin round here in Pitt county, the folks ain't takin too strong-ly to the idea of heapin on no more state taxes right now when the federal govmnt is gitten ready to hit all the people and all the businesses for more taxes to pay for the war.

Course I don't know what Dr. Paul and Mr. Sam and Mr. Shorty is agonna to do about them taxes when they gits to Rawley in January, but theres seemin to be a lot of folks whos askin them to try to keep the state taxes down. Just like everybody else, you and me knows all that figgerin ain't no use attter the legislature meets, and a lot of taxes an' things are being arranged now or just passin come January. If folks waits too long to let men like Dr. Paul and Mr. Sam and Mr. Shorty know what they thinks, Uncle Kerr may get lots more taxes hooked on us fore we knowns it.

Well give my love to ant Emma and the kids. Maybe I'll writte you again fore too long.

Your newew,
Willie.

A Good Time For A Rail Road Check-Up

With New York still reeling from the shock of its third major railroad disaster this year, the city and state officials have launched an investigation of the wreck which took the lives of at least 77 persons, and the officials who operate the bankrupt railroad.

The city and state officials in New York should follow every clue to the accident which would show what caused the high-balling express to plow into the rear of the stalled local train on the world's busiest railroad. Had the wreck been the first major disaster on the company's line perhaps it could have been termed an "accident." But with three disasters already this year, it seems the Long Island Railroad is systematically killing commuters in wrecks which should be avoidable.

The matter should be thoroughly investigated; and if evidence justifies, those responsible for the disaster, from the management on down, should be prosecuted.

And while the matter of the Long Island railroad is being considered, perhaps it would be a good idea to have a general check-up of all the railroads to be sure their methods of operations are affording the passengers the maximum amount of safety, and railroads are taking the maximum safety precautions.

National Whirligig

News Behind The News

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23—Russia has already attained a major objective in her struggle with the West by destroying the Roosevelt-Churchill-Truman dream of forging a united and integrated Federation of Europe. It had been hoped that such a political unification would enable the continent to become a third great power with sufficient economic and military resources to regain its historic place in the world alignment of nations.

Although the transformation of the Marshall Plan for civilian and industrial recovery into a straight-out rearmament program will be gradual, Russia's menacing moves in the Far East, the Balkans and Eastern Germany have forced almost complete abandonment of the original Truman-Acheson-Marshall purpose. That is the unpublicized conclusion of top American and foreign experts.

The ECA organization Paul Hoffman built up here and abroad is taking on, slowly but surely, the proportions of a so-called War Production Board. It will work closely from now on with the military in each of the seventeen countries where it operates.

MANPOWER—Europe is still too shaky to continue civilian reconstruction while it tries to rebuild itself into a military outpost and bastion.

For one thing, as in the United States, the peoples of Britain and Western Europe lack the manpower to restore ordinary industry, agriculture and transportation to planned levels and, at the same time, mobilize men in uniform and manufacture weapons. Even with our aid, they will not have the materials for both schemes.

The statesmen cannot devote the time or energy to organize the customs, monetary and political compacts that were expected to transform Europe into another United States. Instead of achieving unity, they will remain as rival and alien units. For an armed camp and a common army, created hurriedly to meet a specific menace, is far different from a permanent political federation.

Postwar differences among members of the anti-Axis alliance prove that. So does the record of the instrument which was supposed to inspire and implement any European union—the United Nations. DIVIDED—Russia's basic reason for refusing to enter into the Marshall Plan arrangements, even though she would have been a beneficiary, was to keep Europe weak, vulnerable and divided. Moscow did not want the continent to grow strong and united, knowing that its interests would generally be associated with ours in any future conflict.

Stalin's secondary aim, of course, is to isolate the United States by breaking the old world into bits and pieces that he could pick up at the proper moment. Like all ambitious conquerors, he prefers to deal with many small nations and frightened diplomats, as Hitler did in pre-war days, than with a solid front. Then he will be ready to challenge us.

It is the same policy which Britain pursued in the years of her world supremacy from 1815 to 1915. London's deliberate game was to keep any single nation on the continent from becoming too powerful, playing France against Germany and vice-versa.

This short-sighted diplomacy enabled Hitler to arise to power. Indeed, it is no exaggeration to say that it helped to produce the two world wars of this century.

FIASCO—Russia, for instance, has made it impossible to inaugurate the famous Schuman plan for industrial integration of Franco-German steel, iron and coal resources.

Although the Schuman pact will be signed sometime this week, economic experts point out that it will not go into operation for at least six years, and they ask whether Russia will remain inactive during that critical period.

Besides strengthening Central and Western Europe, this scheme was designed to terminate once and for all the age-old animosity between Paris and Berlin. It must now remain a blueprint for an indefinite number of years.

Several agreements for customs and payment unions still are in force, but they are only staggering along. The flow of American dollars for military preparations will make them unnecessary, at least temporarily.

Even Churchill, the proponent of European unity, was discouraged over the recent Strasbourg meeting of the European Confederation. It was a fiasco, he admits.

In short, Stalin has blocked any real unification, and forced his divided enemies to rely wholly upon the United States, with the prospect that this will weaken us in the long run. And that is his overall purpose.

AT-LARGE—The opportunistic Claude Pepper has engaged in operations that are designed to return this former crony of Henry A. Wallace to Capitol Hill. Defeated in last spring's Florida Senate primary by conservative Representative George W. Smathers, the noisy, oratorical Pepper operates on the theory that a good man should not be kept down.

Florida should gain two additional House seats under new redistricting based on a population increase. Mr. Pepper, of course, disdains the role of the ordinary Congressman. So, he is urging friends in the State Legislature at Tallahassee to block any state-wide redistricting, and force the election of two at-large members. He aims to fill one of those places in the 1942 election under the new system.

NUISANCE—He is said to stand a good chance of success. He has many friends at the Florida capital, which is his home city. Moreover, his enemies may prefer to make a deal with him just to keep him from becoming a political nuisance in future contests.

Characteristically, Mr. Pepper is already cashing in on his "at-large" prerogatives. When his use of Army planes for a "lame duck" flight around the world was recently questioned, an obscure diplomat in the Middle East justified it on the ground that Mr. Pepper would soon be a "Congressman-at-large."

Since only a few Florida politicians then knew of Mr. Pepper's ambitions and schemes, it is obvious where the diplomat got the news.

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

One thing is certain: There are many things in life that go un-said. Also, the average man will say one thing while he's thinking another, just to keep things running smoothly.

The newspaper man goes to a concert, and writes: "The program of operatic music thrilled the audience." He thinks: "I wish those long-hairs would at least sing in English, so you could understand what the story is, even if the music is awful."

The sportswriter tacks on the end of his story: "Officials for the game were Joe Blow and John Doe." He thinks: "Never have I seen such poor officiating."

A fellow named Randall Hobart wrote this story, to show what a journalist would say if he wrote exactly what he was thinking:

"Miss Jennie Jones and Bob Henry were married at the Jones mansion last night. The bride is the daughter of Constable Jones, who has made a good officer and will undoubtedly be re-elected. He offers a fine horse for sale in another column of this issue.

"The groom runs a grocery store on Main Street and is a steady patron of our advertising columns. He has a good line of bargains this week. All summer he paid two cents more for butter than any store in town.

"They were married by Rev. Josiah Butlerworth, who last week gave us a nice order for hand-bills. Jennie and Bob left to visit the bride's uncle, who, we understand, has lots of money."

That is a good example of how not to write up a wedding, and yet you must admit that it's a lot more interesting than a description of the dresses and flowers.

Suppose Mrs. Cary Warren, in the Reflector, would say something like this: "Mr. and Mrs. John Doe, who owe everybody in town and will not pay their bills, apparently can afford to go to the Duke-Carolina football game. Anyhow, they went today." That would never do, but wouldn't it be fun to read it?

Suppose the Reflector advertising department would run an ad: "The Acme Shop has a bunch of junk that they can't get rid of, so they've cut the price to rock bottom. We doubt if it's worth that."

Oddly enough, the Reflector did run a full-page ad with that theme about two years ago. Right now I don't recall the store, but the sale they featured was called a Pink Elephant Sale. The ad actually listed a "bunch of junk" that the store had accumulated over a period of years. The ad admitted that the stock was practically worthless. The items read something like this: "Workman's gloves. Not worth having. We don't want 'em; you can have 'em—for 10 cents a pair." The ad sold merchandise and was very entertaining. Frankly, I'd like to see another such sale.

And I thank you.

STEEL—No serious trouble is anticipated in obtaining steel for tobacco curing flues next year, according to information received by the state department of agriculture. Some weeks ago Commissioner L. V. Ballentine wrote the national production authority, setting out the need for priority on tobacco flue metal. This week he received from Frank T. McCue, assistant director in charge of the iron and steel division, advising that steel producers had given assurance they would be able to meet requirements of the tobacco growers, as well as serve other essential agricultural needs.

EARLY—No one can foresee developments of the next few months, and the agriculture department folks urge farmers and makers of flues to place their orders early as possible. It is not expected that rigid rationing of materials will be necessary, but farm leaders are mindful of the possibility.

HEALTHY—It has long been recognized that a good fight helps to maintain lively interest in an organization—political party or other. It is therefore not surprising that membership in the North Carolina Education Association is now at an all time high. Dire predictions following the internal elections of last year that the teachers organization would not survive have proven without foundation. Apparently it not only survived, but it thrived handsomely on the scrapping and is now in position to be more potent than ever before.

ELECTION—With the general election far enough behind to get a little perspective, it is interesting to review some of the situations which developed in close counties, where Democratic and Republican votes are usually almost equally divided. The real upsets occurred in Catawba, where Republicans won for the first time in years, and in Madison where Democrats elected a sheriff and legislature to break long Republican tenure. There were "funny" situations in Ashe and Watauga.

ASHE—Democrats had been worried about Ashe county. Reports came to state headquarters that the party was split into warring factions over location of a school building, and that as result the Republicans were quite likely to carry the election. It didn't work out that way and an Ashe county man explains why. He said the Democrats are still mad at each other, maybe madder than they are at Republicans. But, just before election day leaders of both factions got busy and made plans to get every one of their partisans to the polls. The purpose was to put blame for Democratic loss on the other faction. Actually what happened was that both Democratic factions turned out in full strength—and Democrats carried the county by majority ranging from 400 to 1500.

WATAUGA—The situation was tense in Watauga, and that county came through with the narrowest margins reported anywhere. Democrats won the legislative seat by 16 votes; Republicans gained control of the court house by margins ranging from one to 13 votes. If either party had made a clean sweep by majorities like that, the other certainly would have filed protest. Under the circumstances both parties decided to let the situation lay as is, lest a contest result in losing what had been gained on the county canvass.

MADISON—Republicans in Madison are challenging the county certification of a Democratic legislator and sheriff by margins of 66 and 31, respectively. Infected observers express opinion the vote was certified by the county board of elections—which the Republican member refused to sign—will stand up. For the first time in several years Polk county has no contest pending before the state board of elections. That's because the Democrats took everything by majorities that could not be overturned if a few irregularities were discovered. Considerable interest has been manifested throughout the state in the Catawba situation, where an apparently safe Democratic majority was upset with election of an almost complete Republican slate.

CATAWBA—Outsiders find it difficult to analyze what happened in Catawba. Two years ago the county was Democratic by around 2,000 majority; this year the Republican sheriff won by that margin, the Republican legislator won by 600, and county commissioners by 50 to 100. Meantime, the state Democratic ticket led, although in some instances with reduced majorities from last election. The fact that the state Democratic ticket lost, while the county ticket lost, indicates that controlling influences were local and to some degree personal. Testimony of Catawba citizens bears out that conclusion.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

TOUR. FOR. TAR. HEELS.

(Henderson Daily Dispatch)

Noting an attendance of one and three-quarter million persons in the Great Smoky Mountains Park this year, the Greensboro Daily News suggests that the State should try to induce those visitors, most of them from other states, to prolong their stay in North Carolina. They ought to come on down through the great industrial Piedmont, across the coastal plain and pull up at one or more of the many beaches along the coast.

It is presumed that the Chego-kee pageant drew a great many fellow Tar Heels at a distance as they should.

From the standpoint, however, of sheer education and enjoyment on their own part, people of this State would do well to make it a point to "See North Carolina First." It would be worth more to them than motor trips to Canada, the west coast, or to Europe, for the simply reason that such a trip would for many be a profitable and informative adventure and a most delightful one at that. This sort of tour for Tar Heels is one that every citizen who can arrange it should not miss.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER

As rearmament demands require more manpower, overtime will be a constantly more important source. This fact has a special significance to merchants as well as manufacturers.

Unemployment is down to 1,940,000 by Census figures. It will never get very much lower in a free country. Layoffs because of shortages of materials, seasonal displacement, changes in production lines and quitting to find a better job will always mean somewhere around a million men out of work. So the ranks of unemployed offer no rich supply of new labor.

Women workers are a better source. But a goodly number of women of the best productive ages are busy rearing children. And those that can be recruited will, for the most part, come into industry untrained.

Youngsters reaching working age are another good source, but here again there is a lack of skills and training. Some older workers can be induced to reenter the ranks of labor but the very fact that they retired raises a question: Were they retired because they had slowed down? When the answer is no, some great and valuable skills are available. Handicapped workers, often better than full-bodied men, also offer another source, although this again is limited.

There remains overtime. Of 61,764,000 employed in October, 63,274,000 were in non-agricultural employment. The average work-week in manufacturing was around 41 hours. It rose to 46 hours during the last war. Assuming that other non-agricultural employment can be lengthened as much as factory employment, a total of 266,368,000 hours of work can be added to the economy by a 46-hour week. That's equivalent to adding 6,650,000 men working 40 hours a week. In other words, every hour added to the work week adds the manpower of more than a million men.

There are disadvantages. Work efficiency declines with longer hours. Overtime is expensive, generally time and a half regular rates. But the man on overtime is not only trained—he's trained for the particular job.

The significance to the merchant is this: he may have to pay more overtime himself as manpower tightens. But among his customers who work overtime, the added amount in each pay envelope is the most highly expendable portion of a worker's earnings. The rest may be earmarked for rent, food and other necessities, but the added dollar—after taxes—is the optional buck.

35 OUT OF 1,000

QUIT JOBS IN SEPTEMBER

More men, it appears, are shopping around for a better job. In manufacturing 35 men out of every thousand employed quit in September, compared with 29 per thousand in August.

The rate is still far below war experience. In September, 1943, 63 out of every thousand quit. The rate was 39 in September, 1944, and only 11 in September 1939. The rate usually rises in September (hunting season) and drops to a low in December (Christmas).

Except in times of depression, quitting is usually the chief cause of dis-employment. In September, for instance, of every 1,000, 35 quit, 4 were fired, 7 were laid off, and 4 were separated for other causes, including military service.

SAMPLE HATS OFTEN NOT, COUNCIL TOLD

When is a sample hat not a sample hat? Most of the time, Sam Finkelstein, executive administrator of the Millinery Stabilization Commission told the National Council of Millinery Associations. He told the annual meeting of the council in New York that it would take twenty years of hat production to produce as many samples as have been advertised so far this year. Investigation disclosed that most of the hats offered as samples have been rejects, trimmed-over damaged hats and markdowns of regular stock.

Hal Boyle's Column

With U. S. Naval Forces In The Far East. (AP)—There is a road leading from home to war—and a road leading back from war to home again.

It is the same road, and if you are a real combat man there are regrets along the way no matter which direction you are traveling. That is an odd truth about real men at war.

Coming over to the Korean war, the chief regret of Naval Lt. Charles J. Deasy of Cincinnati, was that he had to leave his bride of three months—Louise.

Now Deasy, at 26 one of the most experienced jet pilots in the navy, is going home after flying more than 50 combat missions here in his second war. But happy as he is to rejoin his wife he has a big regret too.

"It's fine to be going home," he said thoughtfully, "but I'd like to get a Russian jet MIG-15 before I leave. My interest in the war revived as soon as we began to meet some air opposition."

Deasy is a slender dark-haired, blue eyed man who became a navy aviation pilot at the age of 18. Eight years later he is a veteran of two wars and one of the world's few specialists in the field of man's flight beyond the speed of sound.

As a pioneer navy test pilot in the cold peace that followed the last war, Deasy helped check the capability of some seven of the 15 jet type aircraft developed by the United States.

He also has twice participated in the first historic battles of Russian jet against American jet in the Korean skies near the Manchurian border. His views are shared by most fliers. I have talked to who have taken part in these fights.

Deasy feels that the swept-back wing Russian-built MIG-15 is better from a performance level in almost every way than any American jet used in the Korean theater. He says the Force F80s and the Navy F9Fs.

"It can climb faster, has a faster level speed, and can turn quicker," he said frankly. "It has about twice the all around performance of anything we have out here."

Technicians compare the Russian MIG-15 with the American F-86 Sabre, holder of the official world speed record. The American Air Force has squadrons of Sabre planes in Germany and the United States but none in Korea.

Then why have the slower American jet planes managed to shoot down—without loss to themselves—the fastest known planes in the Russian armory?

"They just can't teach those homebreds to fly," said Deasy. "Some people you can teach to drive a car—some you can't. It's the same way with planes."

The lieutenant acknowledged he didn't know by whom the MIG-15—in the 700-mile an hour class—were being flown.

"We have to fight on the defensive and hope to get a chance on them," he said, but we fight as a team—and they don't know teamwork. They come at us individually—or as groups of individuals without protecting each other."

The Americans did fight their slower jets as a team—as they had been taught. "We didn't lose any," said Deasy. "and we figure they lost two planes and maybe three. The Red fliers not only lacked teamwork—their gunnery was terrible."

Deasy shares the bitterness of most United Nations fliers who are ordered to respect an international boundary but also have to fight a foe who violates that frontier by flying across it into undeclared battle.

"We would like to go across that same border and wipe out the planes on the Antung field and shoot up the Ackack batteries that fire from the Manchurian side at us," he said.

"As it is now, they shoot at us on our side, but we can't chase them back or shoot at them from our side. They aren't any dummies. They know we can't or won't cross the border, and they take full advantage of it. When they've had all they want they just fly back into Manchuria."

The big regret of Deasy—and many another combat flier going home—is that, because of the international political situation, his orders keep him from pursuing the bandit air enemy to his lair and destroying him.

Washington Letter

By JANE EADE

Washington—Noted for their construction and destruction wherever American forces have gone to war, U. S. Army engineers have received less attention for a major operation here. They have been active in the planning, construction, even the maintenance of buildings, parks and grounds in the district of Columbia.

George Washington chose a former officer of his Corps of Engineers—Major Pierre Charles L'Enfant—to survey and lay out the original plan of the city. His plan is still followed in developing the modern city.

The rebuilding of the capital in 1817, after the British had burned it in 1814, was done by Army engineers under the direction of Gen. Joseph G. Swift. Swift's men built the present Capitol building before the modern Senate and House wings and new dome were added at the time of the Civil War. The later job was done by Army engineers under the direction of Capt. Montgomery C. Meigs.

Captain Meigs also planned and constructed Washington's water system, begun in the early 1850s and completed in the midst of the Civil War. Many of the original structures are still to be seen.

Even the Washington Monument, completed in 1885, was built by Army engineers. So were the old State-War-Navy building, completed in 1888, the Medical Museum and Library, the Garfield statue and pedestal and the beautiful Library of Congress.

The paving of famous Pennsylvania Ave., which links the White House with the Capitol, was done under the direction of Capt. Campbell Graham, topographical engineer.

For years his officer in charge of buildings and grounds of Washington and the District was a member of the corps and laid out the parks and grounds and superintended or inspected the building of many public structures. . . . the Government Printing Office, the old Post Office Department building, the Municipal Building, the War College.

When a commission form of government for the District was set up in June 1874, the act stipulated that one of the three commissioners be an officer of the Engineer Corps of the Army.

Driver Fined For Reckless Driving; Hampered Fireman On Way To Blaze

A Greenville man paid $15 in City Traffic court Wednesday morning on charges of careless and reckless driving which was an outgrowth of his car following Greenville fire trucks to a fire in the Cooperfield section last week.

Judge J. W. H. Roberts fined W. G. (Buster) Eilers, age 23, of 1415 Broad Street, Greenville, $15 on the charge of driving in a careless and reckless manner.

The warrant was taken out by a Greenville fireman who was nearly involved in a traffic accident with the Eilers car last Friday night as he was answering a fire alarm.

The firemen testified that the driver pulled out in front of his car causing him to apply his brakes, slightly injuring his small child who was in the front seat of his car. The Eiler car then pulled out in front of the fireman's car and continued on to the fire.

In passing out the fine, Judge Roberts stated that he had received a number of complaints from members of the Greenville fire department about the bad traffic problem which hampers them in getting to fires.

N.C. Wildlife Resource Value Is Program Topic

Radio listeners in the Greenville area will get a double-barreled dose of wildlife conservation from a 15-minute program tomorrow morning titled "The Shot Worth $100 Million"—tenth in the "Silent Siren" series produced by the North Carolina Resource-Use Commission.

The program will be broadcast over WGTC at 10:15 and is designed to inform Tar Heels of the need for using the State's natural and human resources wisely.

The program points dramatically to the fact North Carolina's wildlife resources are worth $100 million to the people of the State and the wise use of these resources is necessary to maintaining a high standard of living.

Prison Director Admits Politics Dominate Dept.

Raleigh, N.C., Nov. 22—(AP)—State Prisons Director John Gold says it's no secret the prison department has been dominated by politics for 15 or 20 years.

Gold, recently named to his post by Governor Scott, added he doesn't want to leave the impression that "the personnel we've got isn't any good. I think it's pretty good."

"Those I've talked to," he declared, "have been very cooperative and I want a good prison system and they want it rid of politics."

Gold made his comments following Governor Scott's news conference yesterday. The governor asserted Gold is striving to rid the prison system of petty graft.

Gold said "if you kick out the prison director every two years, it doesn't make much difference. But the people down the line," he added—"the lieutenants, captains and sergeants—they ought to be there on a merit basis and not depend on politics to hold their jobs."

Gold said the department needs a training program for its personnel and those who don't make the grade should be fired.

He pointed out he now has a training program underway for prison camp stewards, who are second in command to the camp superintendents. Later, he said, he plans to set up schools for the superintendents and still later for guards.

Recreation Body Will Open Office

The Greenville City Recreation Commission held a brief business session on Monday night which was a continuation of a meeting held earlier.

The group decided to have all future meetings on the 1st Tuesday night of each month. Approval was given for opening a recreational commission office on the 3rd floor of the City Hall, next to the Red Cross office. The office will be opened on December 1.

The possibility of employing an experienced recreational director was further discussed, but no action was taken on the matter. The proposal of securing a full time director was placed on the calendar for the December meeting.

Discussion also was held on the urgent need for an increase in the budget for the Recreational pro-

Local Pastor Called To Church In Texas

Reverend Robert B. Crawford, pastor of the Greenville Free Will Baptist Church, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Bryan Free Will Baptist Church, Bryan, Texas. Reverend Crawford will assume the pastorate December 1.

After coming here in October of 1948, Reverend Crawford has served his congregation in the Christian spirit during the two years. Since that time over 100 new members have been added to the congregation and the church has made advancement in the fields of material progress, spiritual life, and denominational enterprises.

Reverend Crawford received the call recently and stated it formally to his congregation last Sunday. He said:

"I do love the people of Greenville and the community and the ministry here has been most pleasant and rewarding concerning the friends and associations I have made here the fellowship of the Lord. There is a rich and rewarding field here for Christian service. I would not leave Greenville unless there had been a definite call to serve the pastorate at Bryan."

Reverend Crawford is a native of Birmingham and Tuscaloosa County, Alabama. He studied at the University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, receiving his AB degree. Later he studied at Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn., and at Scarritt College of Christian Workers, a separate school of Vanderbilt. While studying in Nashville, he served several churches there and in the vicinity between 1940 and 1943. Between 1943 and 1948 he was Executive Secretary of the National Association of Free Will Baptist Churches with headquarters in Nashville.

Vital Vote For Bavaria Sunday

Frankfurt, Germany, Nov. 22—(AP)—The biggest state in the American zone of Germany votes next Sunday in an election that could decide the fate of American plans to rearm western Europe in the near future.

The voters of Bavaria elect a new state parliament. The results may determine whether western Germany will take part in the defense of Europe against Russia.

Two large German states gave a ringing "No" to rearmament in similar elections last Sunday.

Life Shorter In 'Good Old Days'

the good old days in some respects weren't so good after all. Forty years ago the loss of life through scalds or burns was seven times as high as it is today. Even as recently as the period of 1936 to 1940 the average death rate was double last year's.

This is based on the experience among the industrial policy-holders of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, and the improvement, according to the company's safety experts, is due largely to the modernization of the American home with its improved heating, cooking, and lighting facilities.

"The trend reflects in some measure the effect of consistent and widespread education for safety, and the marked advances which medical science has made in the treatment of severe burn," declared Dr. Donald B. Armstrong, second vice-president in charge of the Metropolitan's health and welfare activities. "But most important has been the passing of the old fashioned coal or wood stove, the kerosene lamp, and other hazards of past years."

Even now burns and scalds claims about 4,600 lives yearly in the United States, and many additional thousands suffer serious and disfiguring injuries which do not prove fatal, the company's statisticians report.

Analysis of claim records shows that among adults, burns from stoves and grates, the explosion of flammable liquids, and careless smoking are the most frequent cause of the fatalities. For very young children scalds from hot liquids and steam are the most prevalent causes, and among somewhat older youngsters, burns from stoves and grates, the explosion of flammable liquids, and playing with matches exact the highest toll.

RIPE OLD AGE

Moscow, Nov. 24—(AP)—An Azerbaijani mountaineer, Ibrahim Gadsheev, recently celebrated his 151st birthday, a Soviet newspaper reported today. The dispatch said Gadsheev "despite his advanced age feels in good health." His family was said to number about 50 persons.

Locate Undersea Mountain Chain

La Jolla, Calif. —(AP)—A big mountain range under water in mid-Pacific has been found by a U.S. Navy-University of California expedition. It extends from Wake Island to Necker Island and is 1,000 miles long, 100 miles wide and 14,000 feet high.

Coral was dredged up from the range at 6,000 feet depth. Since coral grows only above 200 feet, it is assumed that the tops of the range were once above water.

Woman Tells How She Infiltrated Into Red Ranks

AP Newsfeatures

New York—Angela Calomiris spent seven years as an FBI plant inside the Communist party—but she doesn't have any fool-proof method of spotting a Red.

"When something walks like a duck, quacks like a duck and looks like a duck," she said, "chances are it's a duck. But if you've never seen a duck before, it's hard to identify the first one you do see."

The tiny, dark-haired photographer was approached by Federal Bureau agents in 1942 and asked if she would be "converted" to Communism, join the party, work hard in it—and report its activities to the bureau. She accepted the assignment—WITHOUT PAY AND WITHOUT PROTECTION. The seven years of grueling, hectic and frequently boring and unsatisfying work are recounted in her new book, "Red Masquerade."

Angela made a good Communist—rising from the lowest rank to financial secretary of an important Manhattan unit of the party completely unsuspected. In fact, she was held in high party esteem the very day when she appeared as a government witness in the New York trial of the Communist party's 11 top leaders—and identified each man as having actively taught and advocated overthrow of the government. Her appearance and calm statement she had always been a government agent was a bomb-shell in the courtroom.

"I think control of Communism is the most important problem we face today," she said. "I think the answer to ferreting out Reds lies in legislation, but I don't think the new Communist Registration means that anyone willing to sup-act is the complete answer. "There is one big advantage in outlawing the party, however. It port Communism is violating the law—and that will keep party membership from growing."

The party, Miss Calomiris said, is prepared to disappear completely into the underground to function efficiently.

"That means that the FBI will have to go underground with it," she said. "There will have to be more government plants in the party and danger to them will increase. Any plant's life is in danger."

The National Geographic Society says fossils indicate there were at least three kinds of giant sea reptiles 80,000,000 years ago.

THE RAILROAD MURDER CASE

By R. M. Laurenson

Chapter 29

Marc leaped from the car step and hurried across the yard to the station platform where his battered Ford was parked.

A grim smile curved his lips and thoughtful furrows creased his forehead as he guided the car through the early evening traffic. Arriving at a large office building, he carefully pulled into a convenient space between "No Parking" signs and headed for the entrance.

He found the doctor's office full of people.

"Is Dr. Lindstorm in?" he asked.

"The doctor hasn't returned from the hospital, but I expect him at any minute. Won't you be seated? There are several ahead of you."

He grinned and shook his head. "Thank you, no. I left a package for him this morning and I'm very anxious to have his report."

"Oh yes! Of course, you're Mr. Jordan. The doctor left the package for you, and a note in case he was out when you called."

She unlocked a drawer and handed Marc the package. He tucked the envelope under his arm. Thanking her, he quickly extricated himself from the ether atmosphere.

He climbed into his car, negotiated a succession of traffic jams, threaded his way across town, and pulled up beside the City Hall.

He opened the door to Anderson's office and found him seated at his desk, chin on chest, his round face wearing an expression of complete frustration. Marc slid the bundle across the desk and dropped into his usual chair.

"Evening, Inspector," he said. "You look fit as a jellyfish. Your property, item—exhibit 'A,' one bloodstained axe. Item—exhibit 'B,' one bloodstained towel. Returned in good condition and undamaged."

"Hm," growled Anderson, glaring at Marc. "What the devil are you doing, Jordan? What did you want those things for?"

"For a little experiment," replied Marc casually. "And successful, I might add. Not exactly the last straw, but a straw none the less."

Anderson heightened the shine on his bald pate with a red handkerchief, and scowled.

"If you're asking for information, it's no good. Frankly, Jordan, much as I hate to admit it, we're stuck. Damn it, I used to think I was a pretty good cop, but this case has me stopped. Not a thing to go on. Not a lead that makes sense."

Marc tapped his pipe and puffed thoughtfully.

"Jerry, I can name the murderer," Anderson jerked forward, his face a mask of blank amazement.

"Jordan, are you kidding?"

Marc slowly shook his head. "No, Jerry, I'm not kidding. I know who killed Mr. Richards. But I can't prove it."

"Well, come on, come on! Who was it?" Anderson leaped to his feet excitedly. "We'll grab him and sweat it out."

Again Marc shook his head.

"It'd never work. Not with this character. I'm convinced that there's not one shred of actual, positive evidence to convict this person. If you try third degree, all you'll get will be clever evasions. Everyone involved in that car had both opportunity and motive for murder—except Cliff and Miss Joan who had no motive. The guilty one knows that as well as we do, and would argue the point from here on in. What we must do is set a trap, and then flush our fox into it."

Anderson slumped into his chair in disgust.

"Here's what I want to do. I want all the principals in this case at Mr. Richards' car tomorrow night at about nine o'clock. It should be after dark. I want them all—Linden, Arnold, Miss Joan, Johnson, Mrs. Johnson, Miss Arthur, and George Miller. Will you arrange for that?"

Anderson's cigar bounced from one corner of his mouth to the other. "What the devil are you gonna do—start a game of poker?"

Marc, arms locked behind his back, stopped across the desk from Anderson and grinned at him.

"In a sense, yes. I want to conduct a class in murder, and see which one of those chunder characters'll prove to be the star pupil. Who can tell, maybe we'll have some fun."

Anderson threw up his hands in resignation. "Okay, Jordan. I'll try anything once. It's your show. I can guarantee they'll all be there!" he added grimly.

Chapter 30

An air of tension filled the luxurious lounge. The principals in the Richards case awaited the curtain call in various stages of annoyance and apprehension.

Arthur Johnson sprawled in a big chair against the forward partition where he had sat reading on the fatal night. With great concentration he spun a charm about on his watch chain and completely ignored his wife, Dorene, seated beside him.

Dorene, perched jauntily over one eye, puffed on a cigarette. Her crossed legs displayed a generous expanse of silk. A red spot danced in each cheek, and a high-heeled pump beat a silent tattoo on the thick carpet.

George Miller sat across from her, his pudgy hands thrust into his pockets, and stared morosely at nothing.

Eric Linden squirmed beside him, crossing and uncrossing his knees, and wringing his hands as though washing off a stain. His pale eyes darted around the car from face to face.

David Arnold smoked quietly in the corner of the davenport and occasionally patted the clasped hands of Joan who, composed and pale, sat beside him.

Miss Arthur huddled, almost crouched, on a chair in one corner and dabbed a handkerchief to her lips.

Inspector Anderson stood, spraddie-legged and belligerent, against the rear door, puffing furiously at a long cigar. A shining expanse of forehead showed below a hat pushed back on his head, and short arms gripped behind his back pulled the buttons on his vest taut. He glared around the car, and impatiently consulted his watch.

Marc appeared at the aisle door and surveyed the assemblage, a suggestion of a smile twitching the corners of his mouth.

"Where the heck you been?" demanded Anderson. "You said nine o'clock and here it is twenty after."

Marc grinned at him. "I'm sorry, Jerry. A few last minute preparations delayed me. Well, I see everyone's here. Quite a distinguished gathering. It's good of you all to come."

"What d'you mean—good of 'em to come?" growled Anderson. "The police department had a hand in that, and I must say it took some persuading!"

"Yes, I presume it did," replied Marc dryly. He turned to Joan. "I know you want this matter cleared up. I hope it won't be too hard for you."

"I'll be all right, Marc," said Joan quietly. "The sooner you get it over with, the better. If I can help, I'll be glad."

"Thank you, Miss Joan," replied Marc, shedding his coat and hat and dropping them over an end-table.

Nora, with a murmured apology, slipped to the rear of the car and sank demurely into a chair.

"Take it easy, Jerry. You'll bite that stogie in two," said Marc.

"Nuts!" snapped Anderson. "I don't set no store by this monkey business anyway."

Johnson looked up from his watch charm twirling and asked coldly, "Jordan, would you mind enlightening us on the reason for this nocturnal party? Anderson says it's your idea. What do you expect to prove?"

"It's outrageous!" cried Dorene. "What are we, a bunch of crooks to be ordered around by the police?"

"Definitely outrageous," interrupted Arnold. "But if Anderson and Jordan feel they can make any progress—notably lacking to date—we shouldn't begrudge them our cooperation."

"I'd like to know why I'm included," said Miller. "I'm just an innocent bystander."

"Possibly that'll develop as we progress," said Marc. "It's understandable that you're all wondering why this consultation has been called. We're going to take up the subject of murder. In particular, the murder of Mr. Richards on this car a few evenings ago. Incidentally, we may delve into history."

Marc slowly loaded his pipe, tamping each flake of tobacco into position with his forefinger. Touching a match to the bowl, he exhaled a cloud of smoke and, wandering to the end of the car and back, took up a stand at the forward end of the car. He surveyed the battery of eyes turned toward him.

"First, let us review the events of Tuesday last, three evenings ago," he said. "Let me say at the start that this is a fact-finding gathering. If any of you disagree with anything I say, or have facts to add, please feel free to interrupt at any time." He paused a moment, sucking on his pipe, and then continued.

"Let's consider the surface ripples, the things we all know about, or will admit. Mr. Richards planned to go to Chicago to attend a meeting of railroad officials. Miss Arthur, as usual, went along and you, Mr. Johnson and Mr. Linden, were accompanying him to the meeting. Mr. Arnold was going to Chicago on business for his company, and Mrs. Arnold went along for the trip."

"Previously, all of you, with the exception of Linden who was in St. Paul, were vacationing at Duck Lake. Linden took the regular train and joined the party when the private car was picked up at the Duck Lake siding about seven-thirty. The rest of you drove to the car in Mr. Richards' station wagon."

"Soon after leaving Duck Lake, Cliff, Mr. Richards' porter, served dinner, which I trust was enjoyed by most of those present. After dinner the men decided on a game of bridge to while away the time. Everyone moved around quite a lot, wandering about on various errands. Cliff served drinks. Miss Arthur sat; Miss Joan read the paper; her little dog Cleopatra scampered about the car. All in all, a picture of wealthy people traveling in luxury."

"By the way, Miss Joan, did you know that the section men found Cleopatra? She'd been—ah—run over."

Tito Claims Yugoslavia Would Fight To The Death Against Any Invaders

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Nov. 24 (AP)—If attack comes to Yugoslavia, Premier Marshal Tito says, "our people would know how to defend themselves and would give up their independence only at a dear price."

Firmly, he told the Associated Press in a Thanksgiving Day interview that Russia and her Communist satellites could not conquer Yugoslavia but independent Yugoslavia "except over our dead bodies."

Dressed in a dapper grey flannel suit, and chain smoking from a small pipe holding a domestic cigarette, the premier expressed his appreciation of American aid to his drought-stricken country. He said he hoped more would arrive soon.

Congress will shortly consider a bill proposed by President Truman to provide Yugoslavia with food worth between $80,000,000 and $105,000,000 to tide the country over until the next harvest.

Yugoslavia, which has requested the larger amount, should be able to get through on that, "though not easily"—Tito declared, by economy drives, reduction of supplies, and similar measures to combat the food shortage.

The famine threat will be critical around February and March, the marshal said, though "in certain sections even before that."

Tito showed no signs of personal disturbance over the possibility of an imminent assault by the Soviet bloc, with which his regime broke more than two years ago when he charged a policy independent of Moscow.

"We are not seeking arms abroad," he said, "regardless of the fact that we have the moral right to buy those means which we lack. I do not consider this question of prime importance."

But, he added, if the Cominform threat to his nation's independence should intensify, "we will buy arms from the west."

And it "is understood" that Yugoslavia would invite United Nations intervention in case of a Cominform attack, the premier added.

Fire Damages 2 Rooms Of Pitt Street House

Fire early yesterday morning in a three-story building owned by George Willoughby, 601 Pitt Street, did heavy damage to two rooms on the second floor.

When firemen arrived in response to a telephone and box alarm, the fire had broken through the outside weather boarding along a chimney and was rapidly eating its way towards the top of the house. Firemen using high pressure fog booster lines, brought the fire under control in short orders, but not before the two rooms had suffered considerable damage.

The fire was first discovered about seven o'clock, and all the occupants of the house were asleep. However, all made their way safely down the smoke filled stairways into the street below.

Parts of the ceilings in both rooms and some flooring along with some wall boards had to be torn out in order for all of the fire to be put out. It was believed that the fire originated from a faulty chimney on both sides were the areas most heavily damaged.

Firemen again praised the newly-purchased fire truck for the service rendered yesterday in quickly putting out the blaze. Without the new truck, the men stated that it would have been necessary to have put big hose lines into operation which would have resulted in most more water damage.

Approximately 450 Children See Free Movie

Approximately 450 Greenville boys and girls this morning attended the third annual Thanksgiving movie sponsored by the Wagner-Waldrop Motors of Greenville.

The kids were the guests of the automobile concern at the showing of "The Stratton Story" which starred James Stewart and June Allyson in the true story of a one-legged baseball player who made the major league.

A baseball and a baseball bat were presented to two lucky boys who attended the free movie this morning at the Pitt Theatre, and prizes were also presented two lucky girls.

Murray Again Is Given Top Post Of CIO Union

CIO winds up its 12th national convention today by handing Philip Murray his 11th term as president.

Murray's election by acclamation was only a formality.

Only one top level change appeared to be in the cards, Michael Quill, president of the Transport Workers Union, was slated to replace John Green as one of the nine CIO vice presidents.

The executive board of the Marine and Shipbuilders has demanded that Green not run again for the presidency of the union. Green reportedly has acceded to the demand. His union will hold its convention and election in Boston in January.

The complaint against Green has been that the membership of the Marine and Shipbuilders Union has dropped off in recent months.

Ernest Liles Is Executed Today In Gas Chamber

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 24 (AP)—A 34-year-old negro died in the gas chamber today for raping an elderly white woman.

Ernest Liles of Sanford went to his death calmly and was pronounced dead eight minutes after gas was released in the tiny, glass-walled chamber.

Less than 24 hours before the crime for which he was executed, Liles was released from the Franklin County prison camp. There he had served a five to 15 year sentence for attempted rape.

Liles, who was baptized by Prison Chaplain William H. R. Jackson Thursday night, joined other death row prisoners in a brief religious ceremony shortly before the execution.

Humane Officer Captures Mules

Enoch Elish Jones, city humane officer and in charge of the city's dog pound, found two stray mules on West Third Street near the school grounds Wednesday. He corralled the mules and notified Frank Savage's stables, Fifth and Cotance Streets. Savage's truck was used to transport the mules to his stables. A tenant on the Moye farm, near the fire tower in the western part of the city, claimed them shortly after they were taken up.

Huk Chieftain's Bodyguard Killed

Manila, Nov. 24 (AP)—The severed head of Lorenzo Nasal, former bodyguard to the Hukbalahap supreme commander, Communist Luis Taruc, was found today hanging from a tree in Pampanga Province. The body was sprawled a few feet away.

Nasal surrendered to government forces three months ago and was later released. Police theorized he was killed for telling officials too much about the Communist-led Huk.

A Camp Lejeune marine, Demosthenes Kompas, who was arrested by Greenville police at a dance at the National Guard armory last night for being drunk and disorderly, was fined $15 in Police Court today. Judge J.W.H. Roberts was presiding. Testimony was that the marine frequently "cut in" on husbands and wives at the Thanksgiving over their objections.

minded legislative body up there next year. Of course there'll be some errands too," he said.

Before new taxes are voted, Blount said, "We've got to get our feet on the ground, we've got to see where we stand. We're not in favor of raising any taxes inside of two years."

The directors drew up a resolution to the same effect. It stated: "Be it resolved that the Government of the State of North Carolina gear its spending to current revenue receipts, limit its building program to funds on hand, and refrain from considering any increases in taxes or alteration in North Carolina tax structure . . ."

Gaskins Resigns . . .

He gave as his reasons for resigning that he had been "offered another job which I think holds a better future and has more prospects."

The distributorship of Quality Eastern Oil Company was left vacant three weeks ago when Cecil Jones, then distributor, committed suicide.

During Gaskins' tenure in office, he has done much to revamp the system of filing records, public transactions and vital statistics. He re-indexed most of the files in the Register of Deeds office in an effort to make them more accessible to those persons desiring use of them. Also, this year he completed a job of having all the old records on file microfilmed for preservation.

Gaskins' resignation will break up what has come to be known, more or less, as a family tradition. His father, J. Claude Gaskins, held the office of Register of Deeds from 1915 until his death in office in 1940.

fer to keep things as they are for a while. Taft has not committed himself one way or the other on this.

The jockeying on labor legislation in the next two years will be something to watch. Each side will have one eye on the merits of labor legislation and the other on the 1952 elections.

It seems safe to say that although the Taft-Hartley law may possibly be altered in the next two years, it will not be "repealed"—that is, if by "repeal" you mean reverting to the situation that existed before the law was passed.

There has been widespread misconception about this word "repeal" in connection with the Taft-Hartley law.

The Democratic platform of 1948 never advocated repeal as defined above. True, it called for repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act. But so did the Taft bill of 1949, and nobody ever suggested that the Taft bill would wipe Taft-Hartley off the books.

Actually the Taft bill would "repeal" the present law and then re-enact most of it.

And the Democratic platform would "repeal" the present law and then, in effect, replace it with another law somewhere between Taft-Hartley and the old Wagner Act as it stood before Taft-Hartley was adopted.

out doubt she is working in partnership with Moscow, but there is a very real doubt whether General Mao, the Red Chinese leader, would allow himself to be pushed into a major war which he didn't want.

Mao may have been laboring under the misapprehension that the partnership is on a fifty-fifty basis and so has been willing to follow Moscow's schemes. However, he is a highly independent man of strong views. Just how far he would accept dictation remains to be seen, but one suspects he might revolt if he detected skulduggery in Russia's program.

Mao appears to be ambitious to gain the dominant position in Asia. If that is his goal, he is bound to have a mighty clash with Russia in due course, because she aims at control herself.

Communist China's attitude towards America will receive a further airing with the forthcoming appearance of the Peiping delegates at United Nations headquarters in New York to press China's accusation of aggression by the United States. This change has to do with the situation in Formosa.

Only One Road Accident In Pitt

One highway accident was reported by the Greenville Patrol office for the Thanksgiving holidays in Pitt County.

The accident occurred near Calico yesterday afternoon about 1:30.

Patrolman Richard Chadwick listed the drivers of the two cars involved as being Leslie Ippock, of Grimsland, Route 1, and Edward Leslie Corey, of Route 1, Grimsland.

The car operated by Corey was attempting to pass the Ippock car when the Ippock car got too close to the edge of the pavement and dropped down, striking the passing car.

Chadwick stated that damage to the two cars were moderate. The patrolman pointed out that there was a drop of six inches at the site of the accident. No charges were brought against the two drivers.

Schuman Offers French Plan On European Army

Strasbourg, France, Nov. 24 (AP)—French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman today called for a West European army including German units as a basis for world peace.

Schuman told the European Consultative Assembly "there is no other solution possible for Germany's security. To rearm Germany with a national army would provoke reaction in the east of great importance."

Outlining France's project for a European army, Schuman said that, with units integrated in the European force, renewal of conflicts between national armies would become "definitely and effectively" impossible.

The foreign minister cited his own plan for pooling European steel and coal resources and said "we must follow the same method in the military domain."
