Pitt Memorial Hospital Dedication On January 18

Formal Opening Planned For Following Week; Kenneth Royall To Deliver Principal Address; Hospital To Be Open For Inspection By Pitt Citizens

By JOHN SPINKS, JR.

Eastern North Carolina's newest and most modern hospital—Pitt Memorial—will be dedicated to the county Thursday January 18 with the formal opening scheduled within the following week.

Kenneth C. Royall, former Secretary of the Army, will be present to deliver the main dedicator. address during the hour-long exercises. In making the announcement of the dedication, former chairman of the hospital board of trustees C. Stuart Carr, Jr., stated the dedication is being made a few days before the opening of the hospital to give the citizens of Pitt County the opportunity to inspect the plain and facilities of their hospital. He stated he hoped patients could be admitted to the building by January 22.

Royall's address is slated sometime after the exercises begin at 11 o'clock. Also invited for the day are Governor Scott, Senator Clyde Hoey, Representative Herbert Bonner and former Senator William B. Umstead. They have been asked to make brief remarks for the exercises. Also on the program will be members of the North Carolina Medical Care Commission, the Public Health Service, the members of the board of trustees of the hospital, the county officials and the various contractors who helped construct the $1,445,000 building.

Royall comes back to North Carolina from his present legal practice in Washington, D. C., and New York City. A native of Goldsboro, in 1947 he was named Secretary of the Army just after the unification of the Armed Forces.

Following the formal dedication the public will have the opportunity of inspecting the building that it appropriated the money for. All departments of the four-story structure will be open during the rest of the day. Members of the Greenville Service League will be on duty at various points throughout the hospital to conduct the persons from one place to another.

Following the dedication, a luncheon will be held at the Greenville County Club for guests of the trustees. These will include the County Commissioners, mayors and public cials of the county towns, doctors of the towns in addition to the special guests of the county during the exercises.

(this week urged every citizen of the county to attend the ceremonies. The program will be held on the lawn of the hospital in front of the administration wing of the building. Chairs will be placed on the grounds for the public's convenience during the ceremonies. In case of inclement weather that morning, the dedication will be held at East Carolina's Wright Building.

Taft Opens Fight On Foreign Policy

Challenges President Truman's Contention He Has Authority To Send Additional Troops To Man European Defenses

Washinton, Jan. 6—(AP)—Senator Taft (R-Ohio) has opened a new phase of the bitter foreign policy fight by challenging President Truman's contention that he has the authority to send additional troops to Europe.

Taft said the Senate yesterday that the President has no power to commit American troops to a European defense force without approval first from congress. He asserted that Mr. Truman had involved the U. S. in the Korean war "without authority."

In his first foreign policy speech to the 82nd Congress, Taft said he is willing to commit "some limited number of American divisions" to North Atlantic defenses. But he said the Europeans must take the lead in forming such a force.

President Truman already has named Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as supreme commander of the projected international army. And the administration has laid plans to contribute an undisclosed number of troops.

Mr. Truman said at his Wednesday news conference that there was no question but that he has the authority to do this.

Taft said that instead of sending troops, the United States should build up powerful Air and sea edfenses, spending up to $40,000,000,000 a year for all military purposes.

He added:

"If we send to Europe or promise to send within a few weeks of the beginning of the war, say a million and a half men, there is at least a reasonable chance that that army may be destroyed and may never return to this country."

Taft's reference to 1,500,000 men drew a challenge today from two Democrat senators.

Senator O'Mahoney (D-Wyo) stuck to his assertion—made first in the Senate yesterday—that there is no responsible opinion in the government "which to commit American boys to any such futile effort" as trying to match communist manpower on the continent.

Senator Kilgore (D-WVa) said Taft was "proceeding from the wrong premise."

Taft's lengthy speech brought varying reactions from his colleagues.

Senator Humphrey (D-Minn) told reporters he thinks the Ohio Republican "merely put some other decorations on former President Hoover's speech—but it's still the same old Isolationist cake."

Suits Filed Over Recent Accident

Suit Asks $25,000 Damages In Wreck, Resultant Death

Two civil actions have been instituted in the Clerk of Court's office as the result of two automobile accidents in November and December.

Mrs. Hattie Lee Bell, colored, is suing several parties for the death of her father November 25 near Stokes. Suit asks $25,000 damages and costs of the action.

Bell was killed while a passenger in the car belonging to Lawrence Bret Hagans which collided with a truck at the intersection of N. C. 903 and N. C. 33 just outside Stokes.

She is also suing White Construction Company of Kinston for destroying a stop sign that was placed at the intersection, which fact caused both the car and truck not to stop. Defendants in the action, besides the construction company, are Hagans, William Hagans, passengers with Bell in the car; N. N. Meece, owner of the truck; and James Albert Smith, driver of the truck.

The suit stated the Hagans car was driving on 903 in a careless manner and when the collision occurred, Bell was killed. It also states Smith did not stop at the intersection and was driving in an imprudent manner.

Another suit for $10,500 is being brought against John Lautares, Greenville, as the result of an accident December 1 that involved Mrs. Eula Mae Beachum, plaintiff in the suit. It alleges Lautares' car collided with Mrs. Beachum's car at the intersection of 14th and Charles Streets in Greenville, demolishing it and causing extensive injuries to Mrs. Beachum.

It further alleges Lautares was intoxicated and was driving his car at an excessive rate of speed and in a careless manner. The plaintiff's husband, Roy Beachum, was driving the car at the time. Mrs. Beachum, the suit states, suffered a concussion of the head, lacerations, and injuries to her back, all of which have caused permanent injuries.

Suit requests $10,000 damages to the plaintiff and $500 for damages to the car.

Ike Puts Damper On Big Welcome

Paris Calls Off Hero's Welcome; Eisenhower Is Serious

Paris, Jan. 6—(AP)—Paris today prepared a hero's welcome for her favorite American hero—and then called it off because the hero said he was coming on serious business.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, due at 7 a.m. (2 a.m. EST) tomorrow to begin his first visit to the Atlantic Pact nations whose armies he will command, has banned all state dinners, parades, bands and flag-waving.

The French government had organized a welcome that would combine a royal visit and the return of a conquering hero.

But when Eisenhower, newly named Supreme Commander of the allied forces in western Europe, heard of it, he reduced it to a skeleton working schedule.

During his visit to Paris, Eisenhower will see top ministers and military leaders and pay a courtesy call on President Vincent Auriol. He plans to fly to Brussels for the second stop in his tour Tuesday.

To the French communists however, Eisenhower is anything but a hero, and they are trying to prepare their own reception—"patriotic strikes" against Eisenhower's presence in France.

French police have been alerted to prevent any possible communist demonstrations when Eisenhower arrives. Communists have been thumping their propeganda tubs all week against him.

Missionaires To Quit Red China

Hong Kong, Jan. 6—(AP)—Nearly all of approximately 2,000 Protestant missionaries in communist China have decided to leave soon, the English-language Hong Kong Standard reported today.

The newspaper said the only exceptions would be missionaries unable to obtain exit permits immediately. It said the main reasons for the withdrawal were Red China's seizure of United States assets and American-subsidized institutions and "the inimical communist attitude toward missionaries."

Raises Number Of Phones Here

Frank Harrington, manager of the Greenville office of the Carolina Telephone and Telegraph office, said today the figures for the Greenville telephone exchange released Thursday by district manager H. F. Davis are incorrect.

Harrington said the Greenville telephone exchange at the end of 1945 had 2,463 telephones and at the end of 1950 the exchange had 4,222 telephones.

Harrington said the five-year period has seen an increase of 1,759 telephones on the Greenville exchange rather than an increase of 465 telephones during the five year period as indicated by Davis' report.

Second Division Given Citation

Tokyo, Jan. 6—(AP)—The South Korean government has awarded a Presidential Unit Citation to the U. S. Second Infantry Division for "outstanding and heroic performance of duty."

The award is for the action of the division in repulsing a strong communist attack along the Naktong River early in September.

The citation carries with it a ribbon which may be worn by each man who was in the action covered by the award.

Diplomats Meet To Find Formula For Korean War

Seek To Localize Conflict, Preserve UN, And Avoid Splitting Ranks

Lake Success, Jan. 6—(AP)—Non-Communist United Nations diplomats conferred behind closed doors today to find a formula that will keep the Far Eastern crisis from splitting their united front.

They agreed that their two immediate aims are:

1. To localize the Korean war.
2. To preserve the United Nations as a world forum.

They disagreed on how to achieve this.

The United States wants to take a strong position, formally condemn the Chinese Communists for their aggression in Korea and proceed from there.

A group of Asian countries, with at least tacit support from the British, fear that such a stand would lead to war with Red China and play into Russian hands. So far, however, they have not come forward with any concrete alternative proposal.

It is reported, however, that their plan is to seat Communist China in the United Nations and then try to work out with representatives of that government a peaceful solution of all Far Eastern problems.

The Asia countries, led by India, are said to feel that the Communist Peiping government would quit fighting in Korea if offered a deal like that.

The U.S. position was set forth yesterday in a speech by delegate Warren R. Austin. He said:

"The free world, if it is to maintain its solidarity and retain and fortify its determination to remain free, cannot afford to accept this situation without a demonstration of its united will to withstand aggression.

"It would be incomprehensible for the U.N., as the cohesive force in the free world, to ignore this aggression. Such a course would prove as fatal to long term peace as the helpless inaction of the League of Nations in the various crises which it faced. To ignore this Chinese aggression would mean in effect that big aggression can succeed with impunity. The world order for which the United Nations has been striving would be in direct peril, leaving every member to stand alone against aggression."

'Concessions' To Asia Suggested

London, Jan. 6—(AP)—Far-reaching western concessions to the independence aspirations of Asian peoples have been suggested to British Commonwealth leaders by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru of India.

He laid before the leaders of the eight nations represented at the Commonwealth conference here a formula which, qualified sources reported, provides for:

1. Admission of Communist China to the United Nations.
2. A Korean cease-fire and subsequent creation of an independent, united, and democratic Korean state.
3. Formosa to be turned over to the duly-recognized government of China—the Communist regime.
4. A peace treaty restoring independence to Japan.
5. France to consider withdrawing from Indochina, where Communist-led Vietminh rebels are battling the French defenders.
6. Britain, in time, to pull out of Malaya.

Then, Nehru proposed, the advanced nations of the west should come to the economic aid of underdeveloped Asian nations—but without political strings attached.

RUBBER FOR RUSSIA

London, Jan. 6—(AP)—Great Britain shipped 9,878 tons of raw rubber to the Soviet Union in the first 11 months of 1950, trade figures disclosed today. Total value was 2,236,429 lbs. ($6,254,001).

Red Armies Slash Deeper Into Korea; Near Hub City

Wreckage Left In Wake Of Early Fire At Bethel

An early-morning blaze of unknown origin raced through the building of the Bethel Manufacturing Company today, causing a loss estimated to run over $20,000. Fire departments from three towns were summoned to fight the blaze which broke out in the kiln room about five o'clock. (Reflector Staff Photo by Roy Hardee).

Heavy Thrust Pounds Nearer Wonju, Rail And Highway Center; Hammer And Sickle Strategy Shaping Up; Long Retreat By Eighth Army Goes On

Tokyo, Jan. 6—(AP)—Red armies slashed up toward the heart of South Korea today with a heavy thrust on the central rail and road hub of Wonju. Big guns boomed in the growing battle.

This was on the sickle side of the hammer and sickle offensive aimed to beat and cut retreating United Nations forces to death.

Red China's troops and their satellite North Korean ally fought under new orders of Premier Kim Il Sung to "pursue, surround and destroy the enemy units."

Old Strategy

The strategy is timeworn in military annals and fits the hammer and sickle design: pound the enemy into an encircling trap for the kill.

Allied troops still fought stoutly, however, against overpowering force, and still had maneuvering space.

The mass of seven Red China armies—210,000 or more troops—thrust close to Wonju.

Allied artillery and Red mortars dueled for the city's airstrip. Smoke and dust plumed into the sky. Communist rifle fire crackled from the western hills.

But A. P. correspondent William C. Barnard said allied defenders still fought north of the key city at nightfall Saturday.

While the Reds cut through Wonju's outer defenses, the communists pounded at both sides of the allied line across South Korea.

Other Fronts

One hammer force hit south of the twice-lost capital of Seoul, striking toward Suwon and its valuable airfield. Allied troops slammed a leading force of 6,000 Reds to a stop after a fight that raged throughout Saturday morning, 10 miles south of Seoul. Allied artillery chewed through the communist ranks, but survivors dug in, waiting for the Reds' main western force massed east of Seoul.

The other hammer force pounded in four regiment strength—12,000 men—south of Yongpo on the western front. Yongpo, on the Sea of Japan, is about six miles south of the parallel 38 border.

Hub City

Wonju, 45 miles south of 38, lies almost at mid-point between Korea's coast lines. Roads fan out in all directions. Fall of the vital hub would give the Reds control of the heart of South Korea.

Their manpower masses could swing to the right or left or straight down the road to Taegu, the allied anchor in last summer's fight for the Pusan beachhead.

But it was to the southwest that the richest prize beckoned the

Firm Swept By Fire Early Today

Firemen From Three Towns Answer Summons To Blaze

By ROY HARDEE

Bethel, Jan. 6—A destructive early-morning blaze of unknown origin raced through the Bethel Manufacturing Company today leaving in its wake damages estimated to run over $20,000.

Fire Departments from three towns battled the fire. A night watchman at the lumber mill, which specialized in making tobacco hogshead materials, discovered the blaze in the kiln room about five o'clock. By the time the fire alarm was sounded and firemen from Bethel arrived on the scene, the blaze was eating its way rapidly through the structure and was into the main part of the saw mill.

W. J. Smith, sole owner of the structure, estimated the first loss to run between $15,000 and $20,000. About 60 or 70 thousand feet of lumber was believed destroyed in the fire.

Fire equipment from Robersonville arrived in Bethel about 5:30 followed around 6:15 by firemen from Tarboro. Greenville firemen were not called to the blaze. The Tarboro truck was not used.

The fire severed the main telephone lines between Tarboro and Williamston, knocking out the communication between Bethel and the area. It was understood that the firemen from Robersonville were summoned by automobile because of the telephone lines being out.

Telephone service in the Bethel region was disrupted for about three hours but all units were back in operation by mid-morning.

Plans for reconstruction of the burned buildings have already been formulated and clearing of the wreckage will be started as soon as it is possible to enter the area. Firemen were forced to fight the fire from the road about 75 feet from the farthest building due to the intense heat. A cotton gin belonging to the company burned about a year ago.

Railroad Treaty Stalled By New Union Demands

Three Groups Want Better Terms Than Provided In Agreement Recently Worked Out At White House

Washington, Jan. 6—(AP)—The railway labor agreement recently worked out at the White House was stalled today by demands of three union groups for still better terms.

Ironically, the demands came on the same day the railroads announced they would seek a six per cent freight rate increase to offset their wage boost offers and other increased costs.

The new labor demands were made yesterday by regional leaders of three of the four major unions which reached a tentative agreement with the principal carriers Dec. 21. Government mediators said today they hoped the agreement still may be used as a basis for a final settlement.

Informed sources said the proposed rate increase would add some $400,000,000 to the railroads' anticipated revenues in 1951. D. P. Loomis, chairman of the carriers negotiating committee, had said at the conclusion of the White House conferences that the proposed settlement would cost the roads $130,000,000 annually.

The proposal, accepted by railway and top union officials taking part in the negotiations—and generally hailed as a three-year peace pact—ran into difficulty when it was presented to regional union organizations for approval.

First the engineers, then the trainmen and firemen, and the enginemen turned the pact down at meetings of their general chairmen. The fourth union, the Order of Railway Conductors, will hold its meeting in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, today. It, too, is expected to reject the settlement plan.

Navy Is Doubling Carrier Forces

Battleships, Cruisers And Destroyers Are De-Mothballed

Washington, Jan. 6—(AP)—The Navy is working on an expansion program calling for twice the number of aircraft carriers had in operation at the outbreak of the Korean war.

The plan also calls for two additional battleships, several cruisers and about 100 more destroyers.

The Navy announced yesterday that the 27,000-ton carrier Tarawa is being taken out of mothballs and that the battleship Wisconsin will be ready for active duty in a few months.

In answer to questions, Defense Department officials told a reporter today that the expansion program proposes increasing the carrier fleet to 28 or 29 as compared to the 14 in service last June.

They added that the carrier force will be composed of nine 45,000-ton and 27,000-ton vessels and about 17 smaller carriers.

Work on the Wisconsin boosts to three the battleship force proposed in current planning. The Missouri is in service off Korea and demothballing was begun last year on the New Jersey.

The Navy started the war in the Far East with 13 cruisers. Last October orders were given to get two more cruisers ready for action. Navy officials said today that undoubtedly more cruisers will be taken from the reserve to provide for a balanced sea-going fighting force.

The program also calls for about 245 destroyers of all types, compared with the 142 on the active list last June.

Two-State Hunt For Suspected Family's Killer

Cushing, Okla., Jan. 6—(AP)—Officers in two states searched today for a man who may have murdered a family of five.

An unidentified grocer reported to the highway patrol that a man nervously bought food in his store and then rushed to his car. The grocer said the man resembled W. E. Cook, 22-year-old Joplin, Mo., ex-convict charged with armed robbery in another case.

Another person was thought to be with him and patrol units began an intensive search for the late-model car.

TREMOR RECORDED

Weston, Mass., Jan. 6—(AP)—A "quite strong" earthquake in South America, probably in Colombia or Venezuela, was recorded on the Boston College seismograph today. The disturbance, placed at about 2,400 miles south of Boston, was timed at 2:58:30 a.m. EST.

Finish Repairs At County Jail

The boiler and other equipment for heating the Pitt County jail, which went out of commission earlier in the week, have been repaired and are functioning effectively now, Jailer W. G. Leggett reported today.

The heating apparatus at the jail was ancient and had served all of its usefulness, when it "folded up" some days ago and caused the authorities to transfer prisoners to the jail at City Hall. During this time meals for the prisoners were cooked at the county jail and taken to the City Hall. The prisoners were taken back to the county jail Friday afternoon.

Babson, On Small Stockholders

Babson Park, Mass., Jan. 5—Various organizations have been formed to protect the small stockholders. The two most active are the B. C. Forbes Group and Independent Investors, Inc., of New York City. The basic difficulty with them all is that the members are so widely scattered geographically that it is very difficult to get them together for action.

ALL COMBINED AGAINST YOU

Your best help should come from your local bank. It has your money and exists upon the deposits of local merchants, nearby farmers and small stockholders. Most banks will do what they can for you and make no charge. Naturally, you don't dare go to a lawyer for fear he will charge for saying, "Howdy"; while your poor minister never saw a stock or bond. As a result of this condition, there are many companies, whose stock was bought by readers like you, which have gone completely bust.

You can cuss Franklin Roosevelt for many things, but he certainly tried to protect small stockholders. His difficulty was that he left the solution to theoretical bureaucrats who made the "Prospectuses" so long and complicated that very few investors can make "head or tail" out of them. Yet, if you have been "stuck" by a stock salesman, you should write the Securities and Exchange Commission, Washington, D. C. It will cost you nothing; you will get a reply; and they may help you get your money back.

IMPORTANCE OF RECORDS

Another suggestion is that you write the New York Stock Exchange, Broad Street, New York City. They is an honest organization which is now very anxious to have friends. If you can prove that one of its member firms or any employee thereof has definitely wronged you, a committee of the Exchange will call the member firm before it and force the firm to make up your loss. You will not need to employ any lawyer or go to New York if you have followed these three rules:—

(1) Insist that all your dealings in stocks be in writing. Before giving a salesman an order, make him write you all he has said. Never listen to a stock salesman on the telephone.

(2) When buying any stock, have the salesman give you a receipt

Rearming For Japan

Signs Of The Times Point To A Controlled Rearmament Of War-Guilty Japan In The Interests Of Its Own Defense; Commonwealth Leaders Talk It Over

By DeWITT MacKENZIE

As the signs of our fast-moving times read, it begins to look as though war-guilty Japan may be allowed a controlled rearmament for self-defense.

In token of this likelihood most of the eight British Commonwealth countries which are meeting in London are reported ready to agree to the rearming of Japan. This is with the qualification that Nippon's military strength can be controlled. The Dominions appear to be satisfied that American safeguards will take care of that.

This change of front by the Dominions follows by only a few days General MacArthur's startling announcement to the Japanese that it will be their duty to "mount force to repel force" if "international lawlessness continues to threaten peace." He obviously was referring to the great Red offensive which is sweeping Asia.

All of this strikes a strange note, specially in view of Japan's war history. She blacklisted herself in the first place by her sneak attack on Pearl Harbor even as she talked friendship in Washington. And her subsequent operations in the Pacific gave her a terrible record of war guilt.

How is it that the allies now are able to forgive, even though they don't forget?

Well, a lot of things have happened since Japan signed her abject surrender at the end of World War II. Under the strong guidance of General MacArthur she has adapted herself to western requirements. She has created a new constitution which disavows war, and she has followed through with an apparent determination to tread a straight path in the future.

Moreover, Japan's strategic location makes her absolutely essential to allied defense in the rapidly developing communist offensive to gain control of all Asia. The demands of this crisis make it necessary not only that Japan be strengthened for her own defense, but that she become an allied bastion against the Reds.

Income Tax Due Soon

March 15 Is The Date When Most People Must Have Their Taxes Paid; A Number Of Others, Because Of The Kind Of Work They Do, Have A Jan. 15 Date

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, Jan. 6—(AP)—January 15 is a date for a number of taxpayers to remember.

Everybody with income of $600 or more in 1950 must file a tax return by March 15, and pay in full any tax owed.

That's all most people will have to do because during 1950 they had the full tax for the year withheld from their pay.

But others — because of the size of their income or the kind of work they did—didn't have the full tax or any tax withheld from them in 1950.

They too must file a final return, just like anyone else, and pay in full any tax owed. But there's something else for them.

Last March 15 they were supposed to estimate what their full tax would be in 1950.

Then by last March 15 they were supposed to file an estimate of what that full tax would be and start paying the difference between the tax withheld from them, if any, and the full tax owed.

They were supposed to pay this estimated tax in four installments, starting March 15, 1950. The second installment was due June 15, 1950, the third, Sept. 14, 1950. And the fourth is due Jan. 15, 1951.

So these people by Jan. 15 are supposed to pay the final installment on their 1950 estimated tax.

They may find now they owe more tax then they thought last March 15 they would owe. This will be true for many people since the income was raised last Oct. 1.

So people who have been paying as estimated tax and find now they owe more than they estimated can do one of two things:

1. Make their regular quarterly payment on Jan. 15 and then by March 15 make their final return and pay in full any tax still owed.
2. Or, make their final return Jan. 15—instead of waiting till March 15—and pay by Jan. 15 any tax owed. This will save them the trouble of paying an estimated tax on Jan. 15 and then making a final return by March 15 and paying

TIGHTEN CENSORSHIP

They also forbade reference to units by number, nationality or position in any action, retroactive to Thursday midnight.

First Aid Class For Police Slated

Eugene King, chairman of the Pitt County Red Cross First Aid Committee, today announced that a first aid class for city policemen will begin Monday night, Jan. 8, for first aid training as part of the local and nation's defense program. The instructor will be "Snag" Clark.

King reports that plans are under way to enlarge the first aid classes so that many of the public may be enlightened on the necessary operations to prevent serious injuries by early care of injured persons. Under this expanded program the citizens of the community will be preparing themselves for any emergency. A trained person in every family can mean the difference between life and death to members of the family, particularly in case of a disaster before organized medical aid can get in motion, King stated.

With the present civilian defense plans getting underway, the institution of first aid classes will facilitate the coordination of the leaders of this organization. A lot of people who will take first aid as a national defense measure will benefit from it many times in years to come, stated King.

Russians Agree To Resume Talk On Lend-Lease

Washington, Jan. 5—(AP)—Russia has agreed to resume negotiations January 15 for settlement of the $11 billion Soviet account for lend-lease the United States supplied her in World War II.

The State Department told of the new meeting today. It said the conference was arranged after the U.S. began pressing last June 15 for a resumption of talks. Previous negotiations were broken off more than two years ago.

In the meantime Russia has returned one ice breaker and 27 frigates out of a total of 585 naval vessels and 96 merchant craft which were turned over by the U.S. as part of the allied war effort. These ships were only a part of the lend-lease extended by the U.S. to Russia as an ally.

Girl Scout News

Dear Scouts:

In visiting around the past few days we found that we missed telling you about one of the lovely Christmas parties. Troop 2, with Mrs. Sherman Parks as leader, had a party and invited all the mothers and the Scout's teachers to be their guests. Each guest was presented a gift that the Brownies had made in their troop meet'gs. They have 28 in the troop and all but one was present for the party.

We overheard a conversation the other day about another party, but it will be for the mothers and fathers of the Scouts and Brownies. It is planned for the 23rd of this month, and will be a dinner meeting with a guest speaker. This is the one time during the year that the Brownies and Scouts stay at home and let the parents pla the part of Scouts. Tell your parents that they will be missed if they are not present.

We were told that there were some Brownies that go to Training school who could not get in a troop because all were filled to capacity. Tell these little Brownies that if they will come to the Rotary Club on Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 someone will be there to meet them.

Scoutingly,
Susie Scout and Katie Kamper

Bridal ices, snowballs, salted nuts, cheese wafers, mints and coffee were served by the hostess, assisted by her mother, Mrs. Lath Morris, and Mrs. Joyner.

The honoree was presented a corsage of red roses and a silver tray. Miss Scott was remembered with silver in her pattern. Miss Ann Turnage, another bride-elect of January, was given a silver cheese server.

Invited for refreshments were Mrs. John T. Thorne, mother of the honoree, Mrs. A. C. Monk, Mrs B. O. Turnage, Mrs. Rand Montague, Miss Ann Turnage, Miss Cynthia Fleet of Richmond, Va., houseguest of Miss Betsy Jones, and Mrs. Haywood Smith. The only out-of-town bridge guest was Mrs. Larry James, Sr., of Greenville, mother of the bridegroom-elect.

Throughout the home, Christmas decorations and potted plants were used.

As a courtesy to Miss Thorne, Mrs. Wesley R. Willis entertained at a coffee hour from 11 to 12 o'clock Thursday morning. Upon the honoree's arrival, she was presented a corsage of roses. The hostess greeted the guests at the door and the honoree invited them into the living room.

In the dining room, Mrs. John T. Thorne, the bride-elect's mother, was seated at the table and poured coffee. Sandwiches, in decorated Christmas tree, flower pot and heart shapes, assorted cookies, rose mints, nuts and pickles were served buffet style. As guests left the dining room, Mrs. Eli Joyner presented each a colonial lighted candle, made of gum drops, miniature candles and mint drops.

Later, as the guests conversed, the hostess passed rolled pimento cheese sandwiches and coffee.

Highlighting the living room decorations of a lighted Christmas tree, red carnations, poinsettias and begonias was the mantel with a snow storm scene, lighted by red candles.

The dining table centerpiece was composed of greenery, lighted red tapers, colored balls, flanked by tapers, tied with silver ribbon and bells. Seasonal decorations were used elsewhere.

Miss Babs Williford received at a coffee hour Saturday morning at the home of Mrs. G. M. Holden in honor of Miss Thorne.

Christmas decorations were used throughout the home. In the dining room the table was centered with silver balls, white chrysanthemums and candles, flanked by silver candelabra. The buffet arrangement featured bells and green tapers and candles and a miniature bridal couple were on the sideboard. Mrs. Thorne presided at the coffee service. Cookies, sandwiches, cheese straws and pickles and olives were on the table.

East Carolina Faculty Member Writes Piece For English Journal

Greenville, January 6—Dr. R. C. Simonini, Jr., of the department of English at East Carolina Teachers College, is the author of a recent article in "Notes and Queries," a scholarly journal published in England by the Oxford University Press. Dr. Simonini, a graduate of the University of North Carolina, from which he holds the doctor's degree, joined the East Carolina faculty last fall. He is a native of Baltimore, Md., and has taught at the University of North Carolina; Washington College, Chertertown, Md.; and the University of Maryland.

The article appearing in "Notes and Queries" deals with the poet, critic, and playwright Ben Johnson and his relationships with John Florio, an Elizabethan grammarian, translator, and lexicographer. Particular emphasis is placed by Dr. Simonimi on the play "Eastward Ho!" a collaborative drama by Jonson and others.

Strength for the Day

SCIENCE AND RELIGION

The wise men came from the East to see the Babe, Jesus.

These men were the scientists of their day. During the last century a terrible and unnecessary conflict has been waged between science and religion. There is no real conflict between genuine science and sound religion. There is conflict between religious faith and that presumption which causes some scientists to say that there is neither purpose nor divine power behind the created order. But when the scientist speaks only as a scientist, describing what he has observed in the material world, he is never in conflict with sound religion. The truth of the matter is that many of the greatest scientists in the world today are devout men of God.

Children go to college and come back home telling their parents that they cannot be truly scientific in their outlook and at the same time religious. Be patient with young people under such circumstances. They are nursing a delusion. They are caught in the toils of logical inconsistencies which in their immaturity they are not able yet to see.

Save your anger for the presumptuous adults who put such devastating ideas into the minds of young people. You can be sure that such adults are not thinkers in the best sense of the term.

A Plan For The Future Of Greenville

Planning for the future . . . a thing which Greenville has neglected in the past . . . was evident Thursday night at the aldermen's meeting in the report of the city planning board.

The planning board's report proposed work begin immediately on securing right-of-ways for connecting links from the heart of the city to the route to be followed by a proposed beltline highway around the city.

The new beltline highway around the city is not a project which will become a reality within the next few months or within the next couple of years even. It may be a decade before the complete beltline around the city becomes a reality; but as the planning board recommended to the aldermen, now is the time to begin work on the project to make sure Greenville will have such facilities some day in the future.

The project proposed by the planning board is a long range program designed to meet the traffic needs for Greenville now and for many years to come. It is a step in planning for the growth of the city, and planning the necessary facilities which will be required to handle the traffic that will come with the continued growth of Greenville.

City planning is relatively new in Greenville. For years this city, like many other small cities throughout the United States, has just grown up. There has been very little planning of sections, traffic facilities or projects designed to cope with the problems which are sure to arise with new growth.

Now Greenville's planning board has set forth the preliminary steps for a long range plan for city expansion—especially in regard to handling large volumes of traffic.

And even though the official report of the city planning board is less than 48 hours old, there are already those people in Greenville who have voiced their opposition to such planning and have threatened to do what they can to nip the project in the bud. There are those businessmen, supposedly farsighted men with an eye to the future, who have voiced opposition to routing traffic around the city on an arterial highway rather than bringing all the through traffic right by Greenville's retail stores.

It is folly to suppose that Greenville's business district is not already overcrowded with the automobiles of shoppers. The large trucks and the automobile travelers who try to pick their way through Greenville from one end of town to the other only add to the general confusion.

There are also people who are opposed to the future planning because they are afraid such preparations for future years may adversely affect future development of property in which they are interested; or perhaps a few feet may have to be taken from the sidewalk in front of their houses to make wider streets on which to move traffic through the city.

These objections may be taken on their face value . . . personal interest placed ahead of the future welfare of a bigger, better and more prosperous Greenville.

The initial proposal of the city planning board is subject to change. The members of the board are the first to assert that many more long hours of planning and consideration must be given to the matter before a final plan can be worked out. The initial plan, however, is the first step to city planning.

It is a step the city of Greenville should have taken more than a quarter of a century ago. The Reflector urges the support of the project of the city planning board and continued long range planning for Greenville.

Are They Keeping The Truth From The People?

How much censorship can be invoked before the people cease to get a true picture of the conditions in Korea?

The Reflector believes the command of General MacArthur has gone too far in its latest censorship of happenings in Korea.

We can understand why it may be necessary to refrain from identifying specific fighting units on the various fronts in Korea, and the movement of fighting men and material from this country to the battle fronts. But the latest ruling goes too far.

The MacArthur headquarters has invoked new censorship rulings which prohibit correspondents from making derogatory remarks about the military operations in Korea or reporting uncomplimentary attitudes of the rank and file fighting men in the Korean campaign.

The people of the United States whose sons and husbands are fighting in Korea are entitled to know through the press what the fighting men think of their lot. The people of the country should be kept informed if the military leaders of our forces in Korea make costly blunders.

The people in this country are intelligent enough to know that conditions in Korea are far from a bed of roses. Likewise we are smart enough to read between the lines and know that if such censorship as has been invoked is deemed necessary by the military, the military leaders must be anxious to cover up the truth from the people.

Nothing comparable to the current lid on news was invoked during the days of World War II. The only thing which approached it was a threat to censor any reports of incidents which may indicate a political split between the allied nations. This was never enforced,

To restrict some information from Korea is necessary. To keep the truth of conditions in Korea from the American people is unnecessary and should not be attempted by the military.

News Behind The News

Every Saturday this veteran Washington correspondent answers readers' questions of general interest on national and international policies and personalities. Questions may be sent direct to Ray Tucker at 6308 Hillcrest Place, Chevy Chase, Md.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6—"Republicans criticise Dean Acheson's conduct of foreign relations," writes I.G.F. of Greenville, Mich., in a discerning and conscientious letter, "and so do a considerable number of Democrats. But exactly what alternative course do the Republicans propose and offer?

"A lot of us plain Americans are much dissatisfied, but we want to know in some clear-cut manner what the alternative is. Mere personal criticism is extremely satisfactory, but so far that is all I (for one) have been able to sort out of the many news reports and columns."

RECANTED—Answer: The ironic, encouraging but generally unnoted fact is that President Truman and Secretary Acheson have begun to do the very things in the foreign field which many Republicans have proposed, collectively or individually. It is not too much to suggest that they have recanted in a big way.

The Republicans, for instance, have demanded that Washington recognize and aid Chiang Kai-shek. Mr. Truman has not renewed relations formally, but our military men in Japan are advising and keeping in touch with Chiang on Formosa. If events necessitate, we shall fortify and occupy that island. We are giving some aid, but not enough, to thousands of Nationalist guerrillas on the mainland.

The opposition has insisted on the rearming of Japan and Western Germany. In our recent sharp note to Moscow, we informed Stalin that we intended to negotiate final peace with Japan, and also to keep bases and troops there, as Tokyo will undoubtedly request.

We are extending new concessions to the Germans in an effort to persuade them to become an integral part of General Eisenhower's proposed European defense force.

SECURITY—The Administration has named an Ambassador to Madrid under Congressional pressure, although Mr. Truman said only a few weeks ago that it would be a "long, long time" before he would do so.

He has overruled Mr. Acheson in favor of the General Staff, who insist that Franco's million-man army, landing fields and ports, and with the Pyrenees as a final barrier to any Russian conquest of the rest of Europe, are essential to our security.

It was largely insistence on the part of Capitol Hill that forced a change in our attitude toward Tito of Yugoslavia. We plan to rearm and finance him, in view of the fact that, save for Russia and Switzerland, he has Europe's finest fighting force in such a strategic area as the Balkans.

OUTPOSTS—Finally, we have begun to "get tough" with the United Nations members, especially Britain and France. Frank Pace Jr., Secretary of War, told Europe's statemen and military experts at Brussels that we expect them to show a greater will to rearm and to fight.

The same warning has been served on the U.N. on their responsibilities for sending greater reinforcements to our troops in Korea. General Eisenhower will drum the same theme into their ears when he settles down at his Paris headquarters.

Mr. Truman has been forced to scrap the Johnson "economy program," and to embark on a colossal national defense program. As Messrs Hoover, Dulles and Dewey have suggested, we are building a ring of "deterrent and retaliatory" defense outposts around the Soviet heartland from England to Japan.

Reviewing His Troops

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

The way a man can go crazy over sports is something to behold. If he isn't participating, he's always in a bull session talking over the sports page.

My father and I were going to a movie one night, and he was making a special effort to find a parking place near the theater. "It seems to me," I said, "that you would rather park a mile away from the theater. As much as you walk on the golf course, I can't see that another couple of miles would matter."

He quickly explained the difference. "At the golf course," he said, "at the end of each walk there is a little white ball to hit. In other words, there's something to look forward to each time. That makes the walking a pleasure. Here, it's just a means of getting to the picture show."

"Well," I said, "next time we come to the show I'll bring a golf ball and throw it down the street, so walking will be more of a pleasure."

There was a day when I could tease Daddy about his love for the game of golf, but Santa Claus put an end to that when he brought me the finest ping pong table you'll ever see. Now I. J. can ride me about ping pong more than I can tease him about golf. Even I have to admit that I've gone completely overboard about the game. Wife Rachel is what you might call a ping pong widow. When our house is completed and the table can be at home, she'll be forced to learn to play, in order to keep peace in the family.

Amos and Faye Leggett are in the other half of the duplex house W. R. and I live in, so Amos was a logical ping pong opponent. The first session Amos and I had together was completely one-sided, with Big Jack the victor.

As proud as I was, I wouldn't even tell W.R. what I was really thinking: "What a shame Amos can't play. It would be so convenient for us to play together, and he's not even competition for me, which means he's in bad shape."

The next day Amos and I had our second session, and he walked all over me. It just about got the best of me, because Amos couldn't have possibly practiced all night. It was strategy that he pulled, pure strategy. He learned my weakness and took advantage of it.

Faye and W.R. had a laugh on me when I blistered my feet playing ping pong, so I must take this opportunity to emphasize the fact that ping pong is no sissy game; in fact, it gives you a good workout.

They tell me that the craze for ping pong wears off in a hurry. In my case, I know mine will last until I can beat Amos Leggett again. That first day of victory was so much fun that I'm determined to get back in the win.

And I thank you.

Around Capitol Square

Daily Reflector Bureau — By LYNN NISBET — Raleigh, N. C.

VACANCY—Death of Senator-elect W. B. Reeves of Ashe county (29th district comprising Alleghany, Ashe and Watauga) early Friday morning occasions a vacancy in the legislature even before it gets started to work. The constitution provides that a special election in the district will be required to fill the vacancy, and the statutes place upon the presiding officer of the senate the duty to formally notify the governor of the vacancy, whereupon he shall issue a writ of election. Usually the date for such election is determined by conference with interested people in the district. Nominations for the office will be made by the respective Democratic and Republican senatorial district committee.

PEOPLE—There are only three offices for which there is no provision except popular election for filling vacancies. They are membership in the national house of representatives, the state senate and the state house of representatives. Constitutional methods are provided for filling vacancies in offices of governor, United States senator, all posts in the judiciary, and all other elective state and local offices, by advancement or appointment. The constitution has reserved irrevocably to the people themselves the right to name, originally and to fill vacancies, members of the popular legislative bodies. The 29th senatorial district will be without representation until an election shall have been held and a senator named to succeed the late Senator-elect W. B. Reeves.

CUSTOM — Legislative vacancies have occurred many times in the past. On some occasions the vacancy occurred late in the session and it was agreed that time and expense of a special election would not be justified. Since this vacancy occurred so early, it is practically certain there will be an election ordered just as soon as appropriate under the circumstances.

DURATION—Popular pasttime among legislature is speculation on probable length of the 1951 session. Estimates vary widely, ranging from 60 to 120 legislative days. In terms of calendar time that means between late March and mid-May. This wide range is due to rather general belief that if the assembly gets snarled up in March it will take several weeks to straighten out. There is evidence of sincere purpose to stay here until a decent job of legislating is completed, regardless of how long that takes. At the same time, there is just as obvious determination to get to work and finish the job as quickly as possible.

ONE-THIRD — One veteran member quipped Wednesday afternoon that the assembly completed one-third of its absolutely "must" legislation during the first hour of its session. That was passage of the joint resolution notifying the governor that the general assembly had organized and was ready to hear his message. There is just one bill and one other resolution that must be passed. That is the biennial appropriations act and a joint resolution for sine die adjournment. Since 1939 when the revenue act was made "permanent" it is not necessary to enact any tax legislation. The bill has been amended every session since and will be amended this time, but state business could get along without such action. It cannot get along without the appropriations act, because appropriations are made on two year basis, and without legislation not a single wheel in state government machinery could turn after June 30, 1951.

BILLS—In all probability there will be some fifteen hundred bills and resolutions introduced, more than a thousand passed, before the boys go home sometime next spring. Majority of these bills will be for betterment of conditions in the state. Actually only one bill and two resolutions are absolutely necessary.

CONFIRMED—The state senate went through formalities Friday to confirm appointments made by the governor since last session to various boards and commissions. Most of these appointees have already been on the job, acting under oaths of office duly administered. The senate business was little more than post facto approval of what could not be changed in any event. But it had to be done and it was done in proper order, even to extent of formally putting the senate into executive session. None of the visitors was asked to leave the senate chamber, not many senators paid any attention to the list of appointments read, and confirmation vote was without dissent. Consequently a hundred or so trustees and commissioners can rest easy. They have been made legal.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

GOOD FOR THE SOUTH

(The Charlotte Observer)

The election of Senator Ernest W. McFarland of Arizona for Democratic floor leader in the Senate was a development of special importance to the South. It represented a victory for Southern senators and a setback for the Truman administration.

In his contest with Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming for the important post of leadership long held by Senator Scott Lucas of Illinois, Senator McFarland had the strong backing of Southern Democrats. One reason was that he had sided with them in refusal to vote to choke off fulibusters against Mr. Truman's so-called civil rights legislation. But there were other reasons.

The significance of the McFarland victory does not lie only in the popularity of the Arizona senator. Greater significance lies in the fact that he had the support not only of Southern senators but also of enough Democrats of other sections to give him a decisive majority over an opponent who is a strong and consistent administration backer.

It means that the Southern bloc of senators hereafter will have greater influence on legislation than heretofore and that the coalition between them and Republicans in the Senate will be even stronger than in the past.

In that connection, there is significance also in the election of Senator Lyndon Johnson of Texas, a Southerner, as assistant floor leader to succeed retiring Senator Francis Myers of Pennsylvania.

Aside from the civil rights bills, McFarland can be considered almost a party regular, for he voted against the administration only four times during the last session, in contrast with Byrd's 23, Hoey's 21, George's 21, McClellan's 20.

The day McFarland and Johnson were elected to these posts of leadership was a good one for Southern senators and for the South.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER

We never had it so good. And the chances are we won't have it so good for a long time ahead.

In the year just ended, income reached an all-history high. Prices were inflated, but the consumer share of goods and services was greater than it had ever been.

The total of goods and services produced in the United States (which statisticians call the gross national product) in the third quarter were at an annual rate of 284 billion dollars. Final figures for the year have not yet been compiled by the Department of Commerce, but they will probably be close to the third quarter rate. So it's a good guess that all of us produced a total of that much worth of food, clothing, homes, factories, planes, atom bombs, service and so on, endlessly, last year.

Of this, judging by the third quarter rate, the government took by purchase some 41 billion dollars worth of goods and services. More than 48 billion consisted of new plants, equipment and inventories. With three billion gained from foreign investment, that left 198 billion dollars worth of things, from appendectomies to zithers, for consumers. That's about $1,320 worth for every man, woman and child.

Because prices were high, many people will suspect that they got less in actual goods and services than they had in years past. For many individuals, that will be true. But the figures show that the total distributed was higher, even in terms of prewar dollars, than it had been in any previous year.

Take 1948, for example. Many people regard that as a most prosperous year. The goods available for consumers were 20 billion dollars less, although the consumer price index (which measures the value of the consumer's purchasing dollar) was just about the same as it was in 1950.

Take prewar 1940, for example. Goods and services available to consumers totaled 72 billion. Valued at 1950 prices, they would have been price-tagged at 126 billion. The average man, if there is such a critter, got half as much again in goods and services than he did in 1940, by either 1940 or 1950 prices.

Now the gross national product is rising rapidly. In the best war year, it went up 24 billion and we can do that again. But the government's share is growing even larger; investments in new plants and equipment are rising and, in the end, the consumer's share may be smaller. That's already begun to happen in fewer new appliances, autos and gadgets. And as the year goes on, there will be less of other goods and services.

ELECTRONIC HAMS HOARDING SUPPLIES

There has been a run on the stores that supply parts to radio hams. With cutbacks on copper, chrome, nickel and other metals important in electronics, the amateur builders of sets and other electronic equipment have been rushing to buy advance needs. A ham bought $300 worth of small parts in one eastern store; another store reports that its stocks are almost bare as a consequence of heavy buying.

PROMOTER SEES BOOM IN TAX BORROWING

The Old Promoter dropped in today to wish us a happy New Year and the affable manner in which he took a handful of cigars when we opened the box led us to remark that the state of the national economy called for less promoting and more working and we pointed out that among the advantages of a steady job was the ability to buy one's own cigars.

The O.P. smiled. ... did not take offense. In fact, he took some more cigars and said, "I have that very thing in mind. I have made contact with a personal loan company and tendered my services for the coming rush period."

"The coming rush period?" we asked.

"Yes," he said, "from now on until March 15. The biggest season in history, with Uncle Sam as a silent partner. Income taxes, you know."

Hal Boyle's Column

With U. N. forces south of Seoul—(AP)—The American soldier in Korea is getting more American every day.

It might be worth the salary of a couple of dozen good psychiatrists to make him even more so. They ought to be Chinese psychiatrists, for the Chinese are doing the most to teach him why he is here and what he is fighting for.

The more American he gets, the madder an American soldier becomes at feeling he is being pushed around—or that his own country is being threatened.

Under the blue and white flag of the United Nations he fought here for months without any real idea of what it was all about.

In that respect the American soldier was like the average American civilian. Who at home or here really felt in his heart what the war was about?

To be told they were fighting for the principle of the U. N. meant little to the first American troops here, because to them the principle wasn't clear.

A boy from Kentucky did not see that as long as a grandmother in Seoul lived in fear his own grandmother in Paducah could not really live in safety—not at the speed the world is moving now toward chaos or unity.

How could he see it when his own grandmother didn't see it herself and perhaps complained because he was sent to fight in a far foreign war?

The Army did make—and still is making—an attempt to indoctrinate American soldiers into the whys and wherefors that brought them here, and the reasons for their sacrifices. That campaign has hardly been successful.

"They gave us a poop sheet a mile long full of 25-cent words about what we were fighting for," said one soldier, "but it is hard to read beyond the second page.

As a result, the American soldier in Korea has probably fought more often in obedience to orders rather than to express his own hatred of the enemy and what the enemy stands for.

The withdrawal forced upon his army by the entrance of the Chinese masses into war has changed all that. It has awakened the American soldier as nothing else could to the reality of the world communist menace.

He did not like being pushed around at the start of the war by the more numerous forces of North Korea, but North Korea after all was only a small part of a small, divided nation.

Most soldiers realized after the first shock that they would in time to get the extra troops and weapons needed to localize the situation. They did. The North Korean army was decisively and impersonally beaten.

"I could never see much reason for fighting over here for the United Nations," said one soldier, "but since the Chinese butted in, I feel I'm fighting for the U. S. A.—and that's another thing with me."

His attitude is typical—and it has already borne results. The Chinese have forced the American soldiers here from a nebulous world patriotism, that they didn't quite understand, back down to bedrock national patriotism that they do understand—the defense of their own country.

That should have after-effects healthy for American solidarity in the long pull, whether or not it brings a decision here.

For the American soldier is a complex soldier. He isn't really a fighting soldier at all unless he knows what he is fighting for and believes what he is fighting for. Once aroused he can be a remorseless, stubborn, implacable trooper. He is only a few generations from the wilderness. To keep his civilization intact, he can step back again into he ruthless wilderness once more. He did it in the last war in many a memorable campaign.

The Chinese are firming him to his purpose here. They are also firming the people behind him at home.

These oriental psychologists have been the unwitting alarm clock of a nation they despise as soft—not knowing that there still is pioneer muscle beneath the obvious fat.

To love comfort and grace of life it isn't necessary to sell freedom. That is the lesson America may yet teach the Chinese Red psychologists.

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS

Washington—A simple little ceremony here will mark the 91st anniversary of the birth of Carrie Chapman Catt, the suffragist.

Two interesting volumes testifying to the far-reaching effects of Mrs. Catt's teachings will be presented Jan. 9, 1951 to the Library of Congress.

The books are the gifts of the Carrie Chapman Catt Memorial Fund, created in 1947 by the League of Women Voters organized in 1920 as an outgrowth of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, which Mrs. Catt founded.

The fund was set up to help women in foreign countries who seek American aid in the use of their citizenship, and to help American college and university students to become more active and effective citizens. Mrs. Charles Henning of New York City is president of the fund.

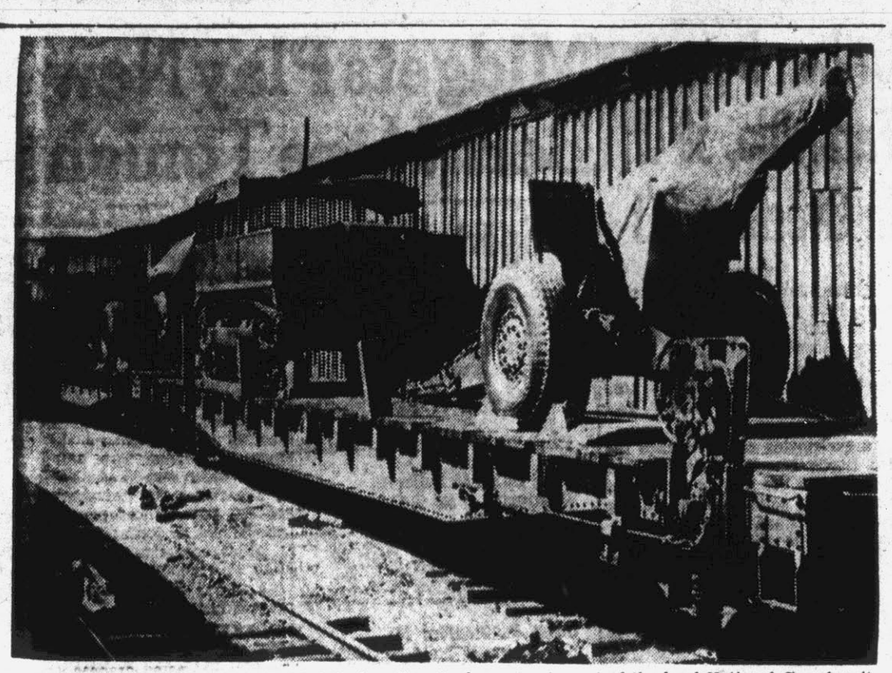

One of the volumes will be presented by Mrs. F. Louis Slade, also of New York, a life-long friend of Mrs. Catt, and the last president of the N. A. W. S. A. It contains names of contributors to the fund inscribed by hand by Miss Alda Wilson, confidential companion of Mrs. Catt (who died in 1947) and executor of her estate.

The other book represents a projection of Mrs. Catt's ideas toward the future. It is the first copy of a pamphlet, "ABC of the USA", and presents an interpretation in simple, popularized form of the representative democracy in the United States. It is to be sold in this country and abroad. Its publication was made possible through sale of a star sapphire brooch given to Mrs. Catt by fellow workers on her retirement.

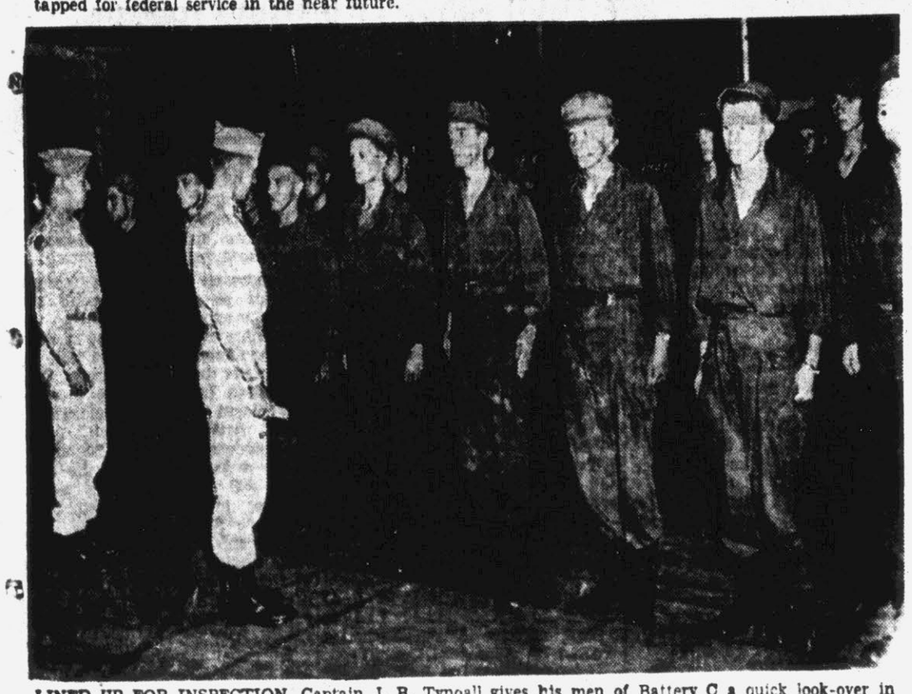

A number of women, being assisted in their exchange program by the Fund, will be present at the ceremony at the Library, as well as women members of the U. N. General Assembly, women in U. S. Government posts, living members of the N. A. W. S. A. and past national presidents of the League of Women Voters.

The League contributed its records of activities and progress from the time of its organization to the Library last year. This is the nucleus of the collection to which the two books are being added. The Fund was created by the League as a research and educational enterprise and is a separate organization. While the League as an organization does not contribute to the fund, its individual members are its most generous supporters.

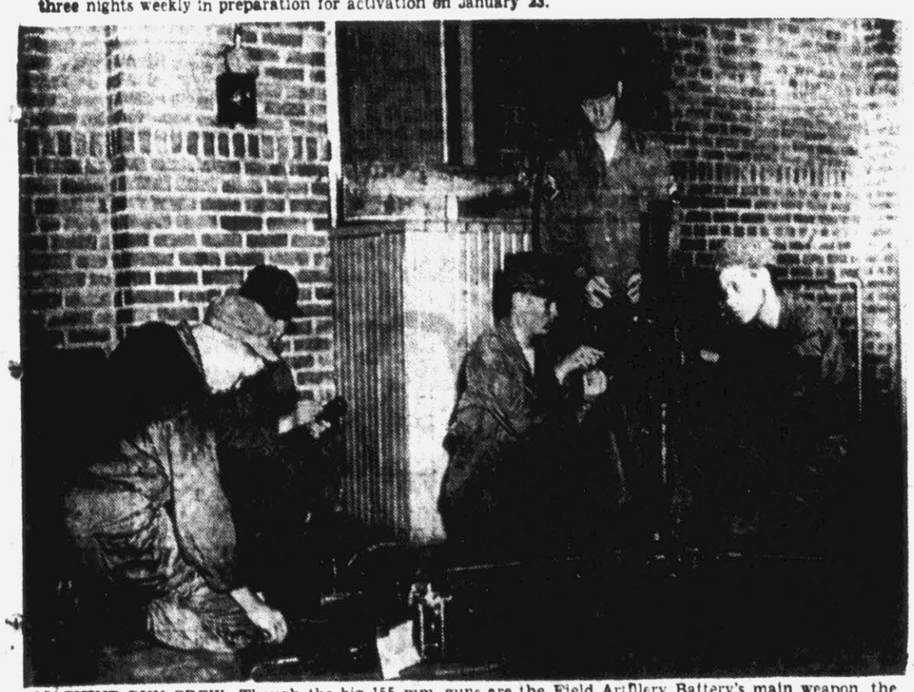

Greenville's Guard Unit Is Ready For Federal Service

ALL PACKED UP AND READY TO GO, describes the heavy equipment of the local National Guard unit when it prepared for departure for summer camp. A portion of the heavy gear was left at Fort Jackson when the Battery returned home; and even then, there were some who thought it meant Battery C was tapped for federal service in the near future.

LINED UP FOR INSPECTION, Captain J. B. Tyndall gives his men of Battery C a quick look-over in the Greenville Armory where they meet for weekly drill. Since the alert, the Battery has been drilling three nights weekly in preparation for activation on January 23.

MACHINE GUN CREW: Though the big 155 mm. guns are the Field Artillery Battery's main weapon, the murderous .50 caliber machine gun is a powerful supporting weapon. Its care and maintenance is closely studied and applied by the Guardsmen. (Photos by Roy Hardee).

Battery C Takes Up Its Tools

By DON C. SCHLIENZ
Reflector News Editor

Ever since the first of the year, when Battery C of the 690th Field Artillery Battalion was alerted, its men have been drilling three nights weekly in preparation for their call to active duty.

You may have seen them; either clustered around an instructor, or brushing up on their basic drill. In any event, the observer probably noted the businesslike way in which the young men went about the process of learning their part-time trade.

And for nearly all of them, it is a "part-time trade"; with the exception of Warrant Officer Francis L. Joyner, 1st Sgt. Walter Beddard and Cpl. Robt. A. Brooks the members of the National Guard Unit fill their days with earning a living or as students in the high school or college.

Why Did They Join ?

Just what is the specific lure that drew these men into the National Guard? It probably varies with the individual. They all volunteered, and their reasons probably boil down to the fundamental idea that either they needed the Guard, or the Guard needed them.

Some look upon the National Guard as a sort of select fraternity, a grouping of men with much in common; they are serving among friends upon whom they know they can depend, and under officers who know them....and on whom they can rely. It's as nearly a "neighborhood proposition" as can be found. Most of the members of Battery C are from Greenville; but Farmville is well represented and the unit includes men from Ayden, Bethel, Grimesland, Winterville, Maysville and Washington.

To a man, they'd prefer to have their Battery roster filled with other Pitt Countians rather than strangers.

Experienced Group

As you might expect, there's a hard core of veterans in Battery C. Approximately one-third of the men served in World War II; most of them in the Army, but the Navy and Marine Corps are represented too.

The Battery Commander, Captain J. B. Tyndall, and his officers, have all risen from the ranks. Lt. Lee R. Carawan and Lt. John B. Fleming are former Navy men. Lieutenants M. H. Moye, Jr. and Elmer M. Cox were with the Battery before World War II. Cox, as well as Capt. Tyndall, served with the unit throughout the war. Several men in the ranks have a similar record.

Their Training

Since their reorganization on October 1, 1947, members of Battery C have spent two weeks each summer in camp. The first encampment was at Fort Bragg, the succeeding ones at Fort Jackson, S. C.

There, they put to practical use the lessons learned at regular "drill nights"; and in addition, go through an intensive period of training in their respective specialties. The men undergo a tight schedule of classroom work, and perform the regular functions of Army unit. For three days they sharpen up on the firing, and care of, the big 155 mm. guns which are their principal weapon.

The cumulative effect of this training was apparent in the 1950 encampment when Battery C won a rare rating of "Superior" from the Commanding General's office of the Third Army; and the men added to this the distinction of being regarded as "the best in the battalion".

Important Factors

The degree of experience and training is recognized as an important factor in keeping any military unit up to its full potential of capabilities. It is necessary to learn the handling of modern, intricate equipment; just as it's necessary to acquire the personal competence and "esprit de corps" of a good soldier.

The acquisition of these military virtues comes only after long hours of working together; and then sometimes, there's something missing.

Unit's Background

At the time it was called into federal service (September 16, 1940) the local unit was known as Battery A of the 113th Field Artillery Battalion. Captain Worth Wicker was the commanding officer. Lieutenants J. Edmund Waldrop and Howard P. Carpenter were serving with him.

The first post where the battery "set up for business" was at Fort Jackson, South Carolina. There followed months of moving from one post to another! always training, frequent maneuvers and seemingly interminable waiting.

As a member of the hard-striking 30th Division, they embarked for Liverpool on Lincoln's Birthday, February 12, 1944; and arrived on Washington's Birthday, February 22. With such propitious dates figuring in their organizational record, things seemed to be looking up.

War Record

The wait in England was brief... just long enough to hone a sharper edge on the fighting trim of the 30 th Division. D-Day for the invasion of France was June 6 of that year (1944); and on D-Day-plus-three the division crossed the Channel and joined the already bitter Normandy campaign.

Years and months of preparation paid off in the period that followed. Greenville's National Guardsmen fought through the campaigns of Normandy, Northern France, the Ardennes Bulge, Central Europe and "The Rhinelander". The 113th early won reknown at St. Lo, and its guns helped power the 30th Division into Germany. (The division was nicknamed "Roosevelt's SS Troopers" as a tribute to its near-irresistable drive, and was called upon for special tasks.)

At The Finish

When it was all over but the shouting, old Battery A began to fold. What Hitler's soldiers couldn't do, the Army's point-system for discharge did in short order. Most of the men had seen enough service to make them eligible to go home...and they did. Most of them, that is.

The records aren't available now, but as far as Lt. Elmer Cox (now of Battery C) and other officers can recall, only two men of the original battery didn't live through the ordeal of war. They were: Preston Clark, killed in the breakthrough of the Siegfried Line; and William E. Vincent, whom they believed was a victim of an accident.

This extremely low number of casualties might well be a convincing argument on the real dividends paid by the thorough training Greenville's Guardsmen underwent before and during World War II. And the lesson learned points up the value of such National Guard training in the event of future conflicts.

Reorganized

Dispersed by the swift demobilisation of America's armed forces, the National Guard unit in Greenville, like the legendary phoenix, wouldn't stay "dead". Interested former members of the Guard formed the nucleus of a new battery which on October 1, 1947 was given the designation of Battery C, and it became a component of the 690th Field Artillery Battalion.

It was a slow process, but the unit kept growing. There were veterans who wanted to "keep their hand in"; young men who weren't of age to be called up during the war, and wanted a clearer look at the military life; and some who wanted to accrue more credits on their service records.

Then there were those who believed firmly in the country's need for a National Guard...and as they looked over their newspapers and listened to their radios, it seemed as though that need was becoming greater with each passing day.

They Know

Battery C's officers know their way around in the National Guard. They are on very intimate terms with the viewpoint and problem of the men, from the newest recruit to the experienced non-coms. All of them have served in the ranks, and most of them have been but recently commissioned.

Fittingly enough, the C. O. has by far the longest record as an officer...having been commissioned on November 6, 1942, and retained his commission as a Reservist after his discharge from the Army. Captain Tyndall's executive officer, Lt. M. H. Moye, Jr. was with Battery A when it was called into federal service, and was commissioned in the Air Force in November of 1942. He was discharged from the Air Force in 1945, and commissioned in the local Guard unit April 29, 1949.

Lt. Lee Carawan was commissioned in the Guard, June 16, 1950; Lt. Elmer M. Cox was commissioned April 29, 1949; Lt. John B. Fleming was commissioned November 4, 1949. Warrant Officer (jg) Francis Joyner received his warrant on November 25, 1947.

On the surface there isn't much concern apparent among the men of Battery C as to what the future holds in store.

True, their immediate, personal plans must be discarded. There will be a gap in their lives as civilians; and for some, the call to active duty represents a very real inconvenience.

However, it's a safe assumption that on joining the National Guard all were aware that some day just such a contingency might arise, and they would be called. That's why there is a National Guard..... and they're ready.

UNMASKED AND FIRING:—The big "number two gun" of Battery C boomed loud and often at their last summer encampment. The 155 mm. Howitzer is classified as "medium" field artillery, but the gunners see nothing "medium" in the punch it packs. Each summer encampment includes a workout with the guns for National Guardsmen.

Kiwanians Install Officers For '51

By WYATT HIGHSMITH

In its initial meeting of the year, on Friday Night, the Greenville Kiwanis Club had occasion to look back on the history of the past year with pride and at the same time set out with a new determination to build still further in the year 1951 with the understanding that in these perilous times, "Freedom is not free, it has to be wrought out".

Eli Blom, Lt. Governor of the seventh division exemplified the spirit of Kiwanis in his installation of the following officers for Haney; Vice President, Milo Smith; Secretary and Treasurer, David C. Moore Jr.; and new directors, John Barnhill, John Reynolds, Bill Drum and Davis Lee Moore.

Past Governor, Sam Bundy of the Farmville Club with his usual bit of humorous philosophy inducted Major Alfred E. Baucaum as a new member into the club.

Secretary David C. Moore Jr. gave the annual report of the Secretary and Treasurer and also the annual report of the Underpriveleged Child Fund. The good work done by the Greenville Kiwanis Club was shown by the number of underpriveleged children that were helped by the funds acquired from the annual Dixieland Minstrel.

The attendance prize was won by John Barnhill and Dave Moore paid a nicle for each year since his birth on the occasion of his birthday. Guests present included Roy Hardee, R. T. Rogerson, Kiwanian Sam Bundy, Circl K Club ber Bill Sutton, Mrs. Glenn Haney and Mrs. Milo Smith.

Executives Club Meets Tonight

Members of the Executives Club tonight will hear one of the more popular speakers among those offered by the Associated Clubs, Incorporated, when Miss Nilima Burn-Perry addresses the members and their wives on the topic, "Women Today—And Always."

Miss Burn-Perry, who is of Western and Eastern lineage, is a most unique individual. Born in Calcutta, she subsequently studied in Indian schools and colleges and later was affiliated with the U.S. Army in the CBI theater of operations. During the latter time, she was secretary to the commanding officer of the first troops to make their headquarters in her native Calcutta.

Tonight she will tell the men a lot of things they don't know about women, and will tell the women quite a few things they hadn't suspected about themselves. Hers is a unique lecture, full of surprises and thought-inducing moments, and it is one the officers and directors of the club feel the membership will retain for a long time.

Mayor Of West Berlin In Fight To Keep Office

Berlin, Jan. 6—(AP)—A bitter fight for pwer today threatened to unseat Lord Mayor Ernest Reuter, Berlin's colorful symbol of resistance to Russia and communism.

The man who has thundered a solid German "no" to every communist squeeze play against Berlin is involved in a fight for his political life despite his personal popularity.

The decision whether Reuter remains mayor of anti-communist West Berlin will be made within the next few days.

The western allies want Reuter above anyone else for the prestige he swings here and abroad, but are reluctant to step into the internal German political squabble. It is becoming so sharp, however, that the allies may have to do something about it tosave West Berlin from political chaos.

Filipino Fear New Huk Attack

Manila, Jan. 6—(AP)—A Filipino army spokesman today said 4,000 Communist-led Hukbalahaps, emboldened by the fall of Seoul, were massing for a big attack south of Manila.

Government troops were alerted along the borders of Batangas and Laguna Provinces, south of the Philippines capital.

Out Of Balance

Washington, Jan. 6—(AP)—Americans last year cashed in more series E Savings bonds than they bought. Treasury records disclosed today.

That's happened only once, in 1946, since the bonds were put on sale in May, 1941.

Cash-ins of the former "war bonds" totaled $3,912,050,000 last year, topping purchases by $243,964,000. In 1949 purchases ran $759,702,000 above redemptions.

Sect Is Awaiting The World's End

Keremeos, B.C., Jan. 6—(AP)—Thirty members of a religious sect who call themselves the "Children of Light" today are in an old, shuttered farm house waiting for the end of the world. They say it'll come next Tuesday.

They are members of the "Church of God" who broke away from a Pentecostal Tabernacle in this British Columbia interior town of 1,000, some 150 miles east of Vancouver, B. C.

The group has sold all worldly belongings and has been in the self-imposed confinement for 11 days.

A mother pleaded with her son to leave the farmhouse last night because his father had died. The son yelled from behind closed doors:

"No, I won't come home. I'll see him in four days, anyway."

The elders of the sect have made no public statements; but friends say the sect bases its belief that the end of the world is near on "Biblical prophecy."

Phantoms Whip New Bern, 50-30, In Conference Opener

Briley Scores 21 Points To Lead Locals To Win

Phantoms Catch Fire After Trailing In First Quarter, 10-5; Greenville Juniors Win Handily, 56-40

By BILL LLOYD
Reflector Sports Editor

Greenville spotted New Bern a two-period six-point lead in their first Northeastern Conference outing last night, then suddenly caught fire with a burst of net-swishing to down the Bears going away, 50-30.

Center Sydney Briley was the lad who lit the torch to the Phants as he dropped nine field goals and added three gratis shots to take individual scoring honors with 21 points.

The local Phantoms got off to a very slow start, as New Bern went out front, 10-5, at the end of the first quarter on two baskets each by Jim Diffee and Bunk Stewart, with Bud Williams adding two free throws.

Trailing 16-10, with only 1:10 remaining in the second period, the local high schoolers went boom, boom, boom, with consecutive buckets by Briley, Jake Higgs, Virginius Haymes and Glenn Scott.

Haymes' two points knotted the count, 16-16, and Scott's last second set shot from the outside put the G-Men out front at halftime, 18-16.

As the second half started, it looked as if the roaring spectators had a thriller on their hands, as Williams netted the score, 18-18. Briley made good on a shot from the free throw line, putting the Phants back into the lead, 19-18, which was short-lived as Diffee went in for a lay-up for the Bears, 20-19.

Haymes, the little National Guard recruit, dipped a shot from the outside at this point, and from there the Phantoms ruled with the upper hand.

Sydney Briley was easily the standout in the Phants' first circuit outing, as he hooked, and used plenty aggression under the basket to tip in his 21 points. Jack Gaskins was high for the Bears with ten.

Johnny Aman, regular guard for the Phantoms, missed last night's contest with a sprained ankle, with Jake Higgs filling in with a capable performance.

In a preliminary game, Greenville's Junior Phantoms swamped the New Bern JV's, 56-40.

Coast Officials Head For NCAA With Problems

Riverside, Calif., Jan. 6—(AP)—Officials of the Pacific Coast Conference headed today for the National Collegiate Athletic Association convention at Dallas after one of the most turbulent winter meetings in its history.

Highlights of the session were:

The possible withdrawal of the conference from the post-season Rose Bowl football game.

A proposal that spring football practice be abolished by all the NCAA member schools.

Banning of live televising of conference football games next fall.

"We feel that the conference took real steps to relieve the pressure now placed on intercollegiate athletics, particularly football," said Commissioner Victor O. Schmidt.

The decision regarding the Rose Bowl will be made at a special meeting in San Francisco "soon after the NCAA meeting."

The conference adopted a resolution seeking to have the NCAA amend its constitution to bar spring practice. Such a measure, if adopted, could not become effective until 1952.

Television got the heave-ho because the conference believes it was a factor in declining attendance. The delegates, Schmidt said, were disturbed by the decrease in attendance receipts.

Ranzino Faces Groat Tonight In Headliner

By the ASSOCIATED PRESS

North Carolina State is a 12-point favorite to whip Duke in Durham tonight and takes undisputed first place in the Southern Conference basketball standings.

The sellout crowd of 9,000 will see two of the nation's top scorers. State's Sammy Ranzino has made 289 points in 13 games, an average of better than 22 a game. Duke's Dick Groat has scored 278 points in 12 games, an average of better than 23.

State has lost only to Villanova in 13 games. In the conference, the Wolfpack is tied for the lead with West Virginia at 4-0. West Virginia meets Niagara in a non-league game tonight.

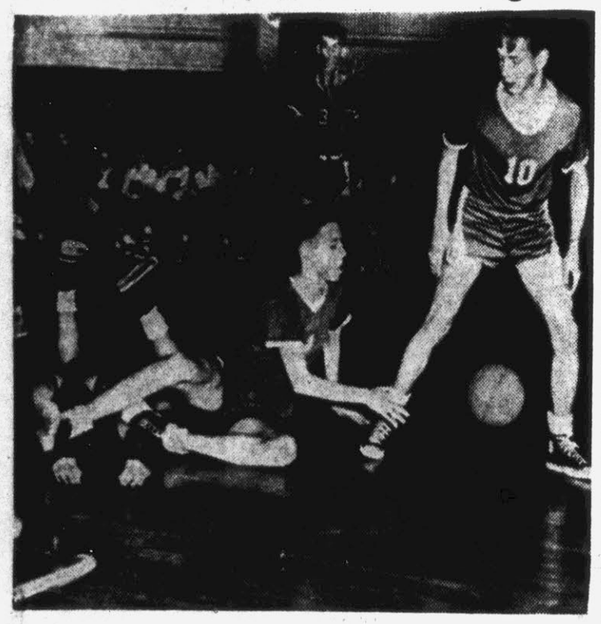

Duke has won its three conference games, and could displace State as the team tied with West Virginia by winning. It will be Duke's first home game, following an 8-4 record on the road.

North Carolina's traveling Tar Heels stop over in Philadelphia tonight to meet Temple. The Tar Heels gave New York University a good battle in Madison Square Garden Thursday night, losing by six points.

Davidson, a 69-52 loser to South Carolina last night, takes on the Citadel at Charleston in another Southern Conference game.

Red Ink Removes Gaels From Grid

Moraga, Calif., Jan. 6—(AP)—A deluge of red ink washed St. Mary's famed Gaels from the nation's gridiron and coursed in angry warning today through the collegiate sports world.

The first major football power to abandon intercollegiate competition for the duration of the national emergency, St. Mary's decision came as a stunning jolt to followers of the Catholic school.

For an unbroken period of 43 years, on football fields from the Pacific coast to the Polo Grounds in New York, the red jerseyed Gael teams have fought it out with the best of them. Not even during World War II did they give up the game.

But now, confronted with a sports deficit for 1950 which some say may run as high as $150,000, the St. Mary's board of trustees "has with some reluctance reached the decision that intercollegiate football and baseball must be discontinued. . . ."

Only basketball will be played until things straighten out.

With many colleges concerned over declining gate receipts, television and an impending war economy which may slash deep into manpower, St. Mary's thus followed the course taken earlier by several smaller schools.

Saad's Shoe Shop Gains In League

City League Standings

State Highway	23	7	.766
Carolina Grill	15	15	.500
Saad's Shoe Shop	15	17	.433
Norris Texaco	9	21	.300

Saad's Shoe Shop bowlers gained on second-place Carolina Grill in Thursday night's City Bowling League as they swept through the three-game series without a loss.

Joe Shivers paced Saad's keglers with an individual single game high scorer of 154, while H. Shivers was three-game high in this three-game match with 430 pins.

John Warner was top three-game high man for the losers with a 412, with Bob Rath rolling a single game high of 153.

State Highway, league-leaders by a wide margin, strengthened their lead Thursday night, receiving a forfeit from bottom-place Norris Texaco.

Snead Leads In LA Golf Tournament

Los Angeles, Jan. 6—(AP)—Southern Sam Snead, temperamental proprietor of golf's golden swing, stood out as the man to catch today as the second round got underway in the 25th annual Los Angeles Open.

Snead, the defending champion and a rather capable country golfer, contributed a four-under-par 67 yesterday toward his third victory in the $15,000 tournament.

Snead's opening round included such gems as an eagle-two on the ninth hole, a run-in with press photographers, who he says bother him, three birdies, and a five foot putt that couldn't find the cup.

That latter item was the only recurrence of the Snead hex of bygone days—a misbehaving putter. He mastered the shower-soaked Riviera Country Club green in much the same way he did last year in conquering Ben Hogan in an 18 hole playoff.

Coastal League Adopts 126 Tilts

By BERT MOYE

The adoption of a 126-game schedule for the 1951 season and a revision of the classification of players were the main items of business to come before the directors of the Coastal Plain Baseball League in Roanoke Rapids last night.

The meeting, which was held at the Chockoyotte Country Club, was presided over by League President Ray H. Goodmon of Williamston, with five representatives, including press and radio men, from each of the league's eight clubs. Prior to the start of the business session a turkey dinner with all the trimmings was served.

The 126-game schedule adopted by the directors cuts the 1950 schedule by a total of 14 games. The league will open two weeks later on May 3 and will be brought to a close on September 3rd. The schedule calls for a double-header on July 4th but on Memorial Day, May 30th, there will be a double-header between the two teams scheduled to play with both games being played at the place scheduled at night. The pairings in the league this season are the same as in past seasons and opening games on May 3rd will find Greenville at Tarboro, Rocky Mount at Roanoke Rapids, New Bern at Kinston and Goldsboro at Wilson.

After a lengthy discussion by the directors, which ended in a 4-4 deadlock count by the eight directors, and in which President Ray Goodmon exercised his right to break a tie in such matters, the league adopted a player classification for the coming year of four veterans, seven limited service players and six rookies—a total of 17 men. Last year the classification for the league was two veterans, nine limited service men and six rookies.

George Scott, president of the New Bern Baseball Club, was re-elected to the post of vice-president of the Coastal Plain League for the 1951 season.

Upon a motion made by Business Manager Norman McCaskill of the Kinston club that the league disband for the 1951 season, the directors voted against suspending operations for the current year by a 6-2 vote.

President Ray Goodmon then called another meeting of the directors to be held in Tarboro on the night of January 26th at the Tarboro Country Club. He told the directors present that at this meeting each club would have to notify him whether or not they intended to remain in the league for the 1951 season. During the meeting there was some discussion among one or two clubs as to their ability to remain in the league this coming season due to financial reverses and other causes suffered during the 1950 season.

Longhorns Replace William And Mary On Tar Heel Slate

Chapel Hill, N.C., Jan. 6—(AP)—The University of Texas, replacing William and Mary, is the only newcomer on the 1951 ten-game University of North Carolina football schedule, announced yesterday by Director of Athletics R. A. Fetzer.

The card, however, shows several shifts in dates. Virginia, played the past few years in the final game of the season, will be met on Nov. 10. The Tar Heels' closing contest will be with Duke on Nov. 24. Virginia has been North Carolina's traditional windup, although for many years the game was played Thanksgiving Day.

Virginia will be played for the second year in succession at Charlottesville.

The Chapel Hill dates are with North Carolina State, Georgia, South Carolina, Tennessee and Notre Dame. The Notre Dame game will be played on Nov. 17.

The Tar Heels last played Texas in 1948 at Chapel Hill winning 34-7. The year previous the Longhorns turned back the Tar Heels at Austin 34-0.

The schedule:

Sept. 22—N. C. State at Chapel Hill; 29 Georgia at Chapel Hill.

Oct. 6—Texas at Austin; 13 South Carolina at Chapel Hill; 20 Maryland at College Park; 27 Wake Forest at Wake Forest.

Nov. 3—Tennessee at Chapel Hill; 10 Virginia at Charlottesville; 17 Notre Dame at Chapel Hill; 24 Duke at Durham.

VOYAGE TO EDEN

By Bennie C. Hall

AP Newsfeatures

Chapter 5

Either she was provincially early or unpardonably late, Molly decided. Seemingly, no matter how hard she tried, she could not do anything just right on this ship.

As she sat down, she glanced around the room, but there was only one familiar face. Doctor Peter O'Malley, looking as smug as ever, sat at a long table with the captain and a group of fellow-officers. They had finished eating and were smoking and talking.

Her other dancing companions of the evening before were conspicuous only for their absence. Evidently the "early birds," Bert and Patricia Hasbrook, had already eaten breakfast and gone about their more serious business of playing.

The woman who sat across from Molly smiled a welcome. She was an exotic-looking brunette, smartly dressed and strikingly beautiful. She appeared to be in her late thirties and obviously was not an American. She practically oozed diamonds, wearing them with an unconscious grace that made them seem to "belong" even at the breakfast table. The immense stone she wore on her hand made the normally large diamonds on her wrist and in her ears look like mere chips.

Molly was frankly surprised when, after introducing herself as "Olga Wedemer, a countess without a country," she laughed and added:

"I'm a refugee, my dear. At least I suppose that's what you would call me, though I prefer to think of myself as a citizen of the world." She spoke in English with a slight but rather intriguing accent.

Molly identified herself, explaining that she had come aboard at Istanbul and was en route to America, her home. The countess then presented their table companion, Mark Norwood. He was a man approaching middle-age, tall and lanky almost to the point of emaciation. But his homely face was relieved by an infectious smile and twinkling black eyes that bespoke friendliness and gay good humor.

"Mr. Norwood is an archeologist, and quite famous," the countess offered, when Molly had finished giving her breakfast order. She reached over and patted his arm, as if to indicate that Mr. Norwood was also her personal property, if she wanted it that way.

The countess, smiling apologetically at her table companions, got up. "I'm afraid I'll have to leave you two pleasant people," she said. "I feel a headache coming on and should speak to Doctor O'Malley. It's never wise to take chances with headaches. They can mean so many ghastly things."

A moment later, having joined the ship's doctor, she was leaving the dining salon, beaming up at him as she clung to his arm—just as Patricia Hasbrook had done last night. Obviously she had not as yet mentioned her headache; whatever she was saying was complimentary to him, for he was smiling down at her, lapping it up, just as he had last night when Patricia Hasbrook had called him "Doctor Handsome" and told him how wonderful he was.

"I don't wonder Doctor O'Malley's conceited," Molly said, without thinking. "I know he's good-looking and all that, but he's not the only man on board."

Mark Norwood was amused. "Seems he's got something nobody else around here has." He chuckled. "At least all the girls think so."

"Not all of them." Molly shook her head vigorously. "I'm sure I don't. I know it's a hateful thing to say, but—well, he makes me positively sick."

Norwood's chuckle gave way to a guffaw. "What? You too?" he teased, pretending to misunderstand.

Again Molly felt her face burn. "I didn't mean it that way. And I shouldn't have said it at all. But I do think the way he plays up is — well, undignified, to say the least. For a doctor, I mean," she added hastily.

"But why?" Norwood regarded her with polite surprise. "He's young, he's good-looking, he's human."

Molly, thus cornered, decided an explanation was in order. It was none of her business how Doctor Peter O'Malley conducted himself. She hesitated briefly, then said:

"Maybe I look at it a little differently from most girls. You see, Mr. Norwood, my father was a doctor. He had no time to tear around impressing the ladies. He was much too busy minding his patients.

"Why, he spent his whole life taking care of the sick," she raced on, knowing she was saying too much, but unable to stop the mechanism. "And half the time they didn't even have the grace to say thank you, much less pay their bills. He certainly didn't go around encouraging rich women to play up to him. Why, he practically killed himself, trying to do the right thing, living up to the code...."

Norwood nodded his head soberly and said, "Maybe there's your answer, young lady. Maybe these modern young doctors have got something the old-timers didn't have. A sense of self-preservation, that is."

Molly hadn't finished. "I was all set to be a nurse too. But when I realized I didn't have the stuff—you know, wasn't willing to make the sacrifices involved—at least I had the decency to give it up."

Norwood stopped eating long enough to reach across and pat her hand. "Well, I wouldn't get excited, my dear. The thing to do on this trip is to keep well and have fun. Just watch out you don't wind up eating crow."

Scott Indicates He And Legislature In Harmony

Raleigh, Jan. 6—(AP)—How are Governor Scott and the state legislature going to get on?

Pretty good, Governor Scott indicated yesterday in his first news conference since the General Assembly convened.

Scott and the state's lawmakers had it out hammer and tongs for a good part of 1949's session when the newly inaugurated governor began pressing his "Go Forward" program.

Legislators have found, the governor asserted, that "my horns are not as big" as they thought they were.

Scott said he believes the things his administration "fought so hard for the last time" have been proving themselves "not so bad."

Scott predicted the 1951 legislature won't become involved in "so much delaying action" as its 1949 predecessor. "There probably will be less fighting. Either they will or will not act" on measures without drawn out fights.

Asked to comment on committeemen named yesterday by Senate leader Lt. Gov. H. P. Taylor of Anson, Scott replied, "They're up to standard."

The governor, who pressed the 1949 legislature to call for a statewide liquor referendum, apparently has had his say on the subject this session.

In his biennial message to the lawmakers Thursday, he urged that a state-wide referendum be called. Asked if he would press the matter further, Scott answered he would speak about liquor "once more, Monday night."

Since the governor is to deliver his budget message at that time, he may urge additional liquor taxes as a means of possibly increasing the state's revenue.

Holt's topic was "The Gods We Worship," a discussion of the many material things of life that are worshipped instead of the Christian God.

Guests of the church were J. B. Bell, Rev. H. G. Haney, Rev. O. C. Haas, Jesse Brown and I. H. Morris. Thirty persons were present for the dinner and program.

Outlay Signed

Washington, Jan. 6 —(AP)— President Truman today signed a $19,841,412,938 emergency appropriation bill, boosting to approximately $118,000,000,000 the total appropriations of the 81st Congress.

Most of the money in the emergency measure is for defense needs arising out of the invasion of Korea by Chinese Communists. Of the total, $17,000,000,000 was earmarked for the Army, the Navy and the Air Force, boosting to around $45,000,000,000 the military appropriations for the fiscal year ending next June 30.

Also included is contract authorization up to $224,000,000 for the Maritime administration to build 34 more high-speed cargo vessels.

Says Broadcasts To Russia Are Not Convincing

Washington, Jan. 6 — (AP) — A London editor said here last night that the Voice of America and other broadcasts from free nations to Russian-dominated countries are "not convincing."

The Countess of Listowel told delegates to the Moral Rearmament Assembly that the "Voice" and free Europe broadcasts are ineffective as psychological weapons.

If the message of moral rearmament could be transmitted, she said, 100,000,000 allies from beyond the iron curtain would be ready to join the West.

The Countess edits a publication called "East Europe and Soviet Russia." She said letters she has received from eastern Europe have convinced her that a new line is needed in broadcasts from the West.

Corn And Wheat Limits Removed

Washington, Jan. 6—(AP)—Planting restrictions for 1951 on corn and wheat were lifted yesterday. That means farmers can plant and grow all they want of the two great grain staples.

Secretary of Agriculture Brannan said the move results from the national emergency and the country's partial mobilization.

But Brannan warned farmers that "increased livestock numbers" will need pasture as well as feed. And he said each farmer should make sure that in devoting more land to wheat and corn "he is not doing violence to continuing needs for soil conservation."

Military Treaty With Portugal

Washington, Jan. 6—(AP)—The State Department said today that the United States and Portugal signed last night a military aid agreement. The pact clears the way for Portugal, as a member of the North Atlantic treaty organization, to receive American military assistance.

The agreement was signed at Lisbon by Ambassador Lincoln MacVeagh for the U. S. and Portugese Foreign Minister Dr. Paulo Cunha.

French Troops Recapture Post

Saigon, Indochina, Jan. 6—(AP)—French troops, breaking out of their northeast frontier salient in a major counter-offensive, have retaken the outpost of Chucphaisan, 18 miles northeast of Tienyen.

A French army communique said tonight two French columns converged on the outpost, which the Vietminh captured a month ago in a broad enveloping movement.

Clerk Is Accused Of Selling Dope To Teen-Agers

New York, Jan. 5—(AP)—A young store clerk was accused by police today of selling dope along with bubble gum and candy to teen-agers who gave the password: "Yankee Doodle."

The arrest of Jay Seifert, 17, of Brooklyn, the clerk, followed a two-week vigil of detectives posing as casual customers. One sleuth said he gained ten pounds on a diet of ice cream sodas and banana splits.

A woman detective mindful of her waistline restricted herself to soft drinks as she gathered evidence.

The police also arrested dapperly-dressed Harold Pugatch, 23, of Brooklyn, as the alleged dope supplier. Police said he had ten suits of clothes worth about $100 each.

Owner Smith stated this morning in an interview with a Reflector reporter, the hope the plant will be back in operation in about two weeks.

The boiler equipment of the mill was not believed to be seriously damaged.

Police Chief Walter Grey stated that firemen poured water on the blaze and outlying buildings for about four hours. Even around noon today, firemen were keeping a watch over the smoking ruins which flared up here and there.

No other buildings were damaged.

Red Armies . . .

Reds. There, along the old "heartbreak highway" of allied retreat last summer, the Eighth Army was pulling back into new defense lines set deep in South Korea.

Line of Retreat

Trucks and jeeps, massive British Centurian tanks and the smaller but deadly American Patons, armored cars, bulldozers, tractors, tanks carriers, big cranes—all rolled down the highway. And with them came the bulk of Eighth Army troops in western Korea, retreating with a rear guard shield.

The communist sickle of massed armies could sweep southwest once Wonju falls and cut the escape road for allied troops leading to the old Pusan beachhead.

The communist masses threatened to pin the Eighth Army's western force against the Yellow Sea.

At Wonju, communist mortar shells were falling on the airfield. The field had been closed to all planes except those evacuating wounded.

Correspondent Barnard said in his field dispatch that Chinese swarmed throughout the dominating hills west, north and east of the city.

Income Tax . . .

whatever tax is still owed.

Those choices are open to anyone who's been making the estimated tax payments—provided—

They don't find now they underestimated their tax for the year by more than 20 per cent.

If you're in this group, you must file a revised estimat by Jan. 15.

Under the law farmers don't have to pay any tax on their income during the year in which it was earned. But they have to get busy on it in the January following that year.

This is what farmers must do:

1. They can file, by Jan. 15, an estimate on their 1950 income, and pay their estimated tax by that date. Then by March 15 they must file a final return and pay in full any tax owed.

2. Or, they don't have to file an estimate on Jan. 15 at all — if they file their final return by Jan. 31 and by that date pay in full any tax owed.

Babson . . .

stating of whom he bought the stock, and what he paid for it, and what his commission is or for making the sale.

(3) Save all these papers and put them in the envelope with the stock certificate, which envelope you—of course—will keep in your safe deposit box. The very fact that you take such precautions, after telling the salesman that you are to do so, will surely cause him to be honest with you and perhaps withdraw the offering.

The above is no criticism of stock salesmen as a class. Most of them represent good firms and are honest. But with your small fund you cannot afford to lose anything.

Everyone Should Be a Stockholder

The fact that I urge the above three rules, should not keep you from buying stocks. Your bank checking accounts now pay no interest; while savings accounts pay very little. Yet, you can buy safe stocks paying over 6 per cent. Your local banker should be able to supply you a list of stocks which have paid some dividend for over 50 years. Rich people buy such stocks; they don't leave money in savings banks. Yet, the small investor needs 6 per cent much more than do rich people. Diversify very widely by distributing your money over a very large number of stocks—or else employ honest and long-established Investment Advisors.

Another thing, all investors—large and small—should sit down tonight and write their Congressman how excessive corporate taxes are hurting everybody. Certainly, the present double taxation on dividends is absolutely unfair. The idea of "paying as we go" for war does not seem logical, because if World War III comes it will be fought for our grandchildren and their children, as well as for us. As for inflation, we, of course, should avoid it in times of peace; but the nation has always had it as the result of war and we still survive. A great need of the U. S. today is the encouragement of thrift and small investors.

Of course the new Japanese constitution contains a prohibition against Japanese armed forces. This doesn't preclude police, but it does preclude regular military contingents. Thus if there were to be outright rearmament it might be necessary to revise the constitution.

Still, any nation has a right of self-defense, and ways probably could be found to rearm Japan under the present constitution. The peace treaty proposed by America does not forbid Japan to have armed forces despite the Japanese constitution.

Britain appears to have sweet over the Commonwealth nations of the Pacific by the argument that the continued presence of American troops in Japan will preclude further aggression by the latter. That seems to be sound reasoning, since the indications are America will maintain military units there indefinitely.
