'Popularization' Of Public Health Import Is Lacking

By JOHN SPINKS JR.

Another concept of public health is popular health and its instruction. The two terms are not synonymous, although they should be instituted at the same time and with equal vigor in any community that would place the health of its citizens foremost.

In lay terms popular health is similar to a man fighting a fire with a fire extinguisher. He may not put out the fire before the trucks come but he more than likely can prevent the flames from spreading. And in medical terminology popular health is similar to preventive medicine.

In Pitt the program is somewhat underway, although at present it is something of a hit or miss undertaking. There has been no concentrated effort on the part of the health department to popularize public health in the minds of the community's citizens. This could be accomplished through several channels: regular talks on the subject by health officials to various groups, regular reports of health department activities through the newspapers and radio, and distribution of literature to any and all persons for their information.

Of course the department nurses and sanitary staff talk to individual persons or families in their routine duties concerning what the person can do toward improving his own standard of health. The nurses talk up personal hygiene in the homes in conjunction with school teachers' approach to the subject through the pupils in the classroom. They try to point out how the person can help himself in recognizing symptoms of sickness or disease in the early stages before they get worse and the "hurry" call to a doctor is necessitated. And the sanitary staff points out systems and sewage disposal systems in the home where they are needed to improve the family's health.

However, such person-to-person talks are a hit or miss method. Usually where recommendations have been made for improved sanitary methods on the farm, for instance, a follow-up call by the sanitarian is often not possible due to the press of other duties. It results in a loss of interest by the landowner in making the recommended improvement. And the time consumed in explaining the necessity of making the improvement has been lost.

Such a situation prevails in the county today due to a lack of direction and coordination of activities in the health department. Such direction and coordination falls on the shoulders of the health officer in all counties. And it is the duty of the board of health to see that the job is being accomplished.

Here the program has become increasingly difficult to put over due to the fact that the board of health has not seen fit to hire a full-time and experienced department head. A tribute to the medical training of Dr. T. G. Basnight is that he has been able to accomplish as much as he has. He was asked by the board of health in February of 1948 to take over the duties as temporary health officer after Dr. J. M. Barrett stepped out as acting head. Dr. Basnight informed the board at that time that he would be glad to fill the interim appointment until an experienced health officer could be found. At the same time he told the board that he knew very little of public health work as it had been practiced in the county by preceding health officers.

During the past 26 months he has held the post as temporary head working on a full-time basis. He has held the different sub-departments together during that time and has added to the nursing and sanitation staff, additions made possible through his foresight in seeing the needs and also through the addition of funds in the budget.

However, he has held the rating of Class 4 health officer during that time, which is the lowest rating allowed by the merit system, waiting until the board could find a man to relieve him. In the meantime he has passed the merit system examination which allowed him his present rating and he probably could pass the Class 1 examination on the knowledge he has gained during his 26 months at the helm.

However, to do that would not be in keeping with his original appointment as temporary head, he feels. To take the examination and pass it would necessitate the county paying him the highest salary under the merit system, and to foist himself upon the board in that manner would not be fair to the members, he says.

During Dr. Basnight's tenure the board has interviewed three applicants for the job of full-time department head. The most recent application was from a qualified health officer who had practiced in Indiana but was not hired because of various reasons. He never met the members of the board of health sitting as a board but talked to them separately. Some members say they were not impressed with his qualifications for the job, some say they thought he was pretty well hired by another North Carolina county while he was talking to the members here, others stated he was asking too much money.

To the board's credit two other men who applied for the job were not hired, one because he was too old and had entered public health practice after retiring from his medical practice, and the other because he was reputedly fond of intoxicants. As one board member expressed it, "I don't want a man who is too old to fully carry out his duties nor does it want a man who will give the department a bad name, regardless of his qualifications."

There are only two ways, to find a qualified man for the job, this member stated. One is to have an applicant sent here on the recommendation of the State Board of Health and the other is to advertise in medical journals and public health circulars that there is an opening. The first method is pretty well closed, the member thought, since there are 12 other vacancies in other county health departments in North Carolina. The second has not met with any degree of success so far.

There is a third method but which the board does not wish to engage in. That is "stealing" a health officer away from another county through the offer of salary increments above the merit system requirements or through other inducements. None of the board members are in favor of that.

To add to the problem in Pitt, it was stated by Dr. G. Grady Dixon of Ayden, now president of the State Board of Health, that health officers throughout the country are harder to find now than ever. It is becoming increasingly harder nowadays, he said, to find members of the medical profession into the public health field due to their own lucrative practices. And, too, the Army is taking doctors into the service—for the most part the younger ones who are the most desirable to have enter the field—and that fact cuts out many of the eligible medical men who would possibly cross over.

Faced with this condition, Dr. Dixon stated, counties are realizing they must pay higher salaries for the services they are to obtain in a medical man who has been trained in the public health program.

Civic Club Leaders Honored

DR. H. J. MCGINNIS

O. E. DOWD

ELI BLOOM

S. O. WORTHINGTON

Four Greenville men will be honored at the "Governor's Night" banquet sponsored by the Exchange Club, Kiwanis club, Lion's club, and Rotary club, at East Carolina college dining hall tonight at 6:30.

Honorees are Sam O. Worthington, member of the State Board of Control of the Exchange club; Eli Bloom, Lt. Governor of Seventh Division of the Kiwanis club; O. E. Dowd, Governor of District 31F of Lion's club, and Dr. Howard J. McGinnis, Governor of District 27F of the Rotary club.

By a mathematical probability worked out by a member of one of the civic clubs, Greenville will have the above officers once every 105,417 years.

Panel Poses Questions For City's Candidates

Four Seeking Mayor's Office Queried In Radio Program As To Stands On Current Local Problems

Candidates for the office of mayor of Greenville presented their platforms to the public during a radio program last night and then answered questions presented to them by a panel of four interested Greenville citizens concerning what action they would take on the traffic problem, suggested revaluation of property, the proposed Negro swimming pool, slum clearance and the use of Powell bill street funds.

Four of the candidates—S. B. Underwood, Jr., H. H. Duncan, Marshall Clark and Lester D. Page—were present for the question and answer program while Clarence H. Bryant, who was called out of town due to illness in the family, presented his platform in a letter.

The panel was composed of Mrs. J. B. Spilman, former labor relations expert; Frank Wooten, attorney; Paul Murray, professor of political science at East Carolina; and D. J. Whitehead, Jr., editor. The 45-minute program, which was sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, was moderated by A. Hartwell Campbell, WGTC manager.

Some points in the candidates' platforms were similar, ranging from more courtesy to the public by city officials to the encouragement of more religious activity among the citizens. Most of the points in the platforms dealt with economy in government, better recreation facilities and maximum value of each tax dollar.

Judge Sharpe To Preside Over Term Of Court

Judge Susie Sharpe of Reidsville will preside over a one-week civil term of Superior Court here next week. A light docket will confront the Rockingham County jurist when she comes to Greenville.

Governor Scott appointed her a special judge of Superior Court in 1949.

Judge Sharpe will preside here for the first time Monday. However, she has been here before. She appeared as an attorney in a case with Judge Albion Dunn some years ago.

A singular feature of the calendar for next week's civil term of court is that there are only three suits for divorce listed. The calendar usually contains from 10 to 15 divorce cases for hearing at civil terms.

Aldermen Vote To Increase Number On Planning Board

Greenville's aldermen last night voted to increase the membership of the city planning board from five to seven members, and specified that the mayor of the city, the superintendent of the utilities and a person recommended by the recreation commission automatically be members of the board.

The action was taken by the aldermen after they were advised by Mayor W. S. Stafford of the resignation of Charles B. Bissette and Dr. Paul A. Toll from the city planning board. The city attorney was instructed to draw up the necessary ordinance for making the changes in the organization of the planning board. In a resolution, the aldermen requested the city planning board to make a study of the fire district of the city and make recommendations to the board of aldermen concerning changes in the present district or additions which should be made to the fire district. The aldermen last night voted to remove from the city's fire district all the property now in the fire district on the south side of West Fifth Street, from Hudson Street westward to the city limits. They likewise voted to include in the fire district the property along the south side of Dickinson Avenue from Truman Street to Ione Street, and the property within the city limits between the Ayden and Farmville highways owned by Mrs. Ione H. Marshburn. After discussing the information on mileage of streets in the city which will be needed if the city is to receive an allocation from the State Highway and Public Works Commission under the provisions of the Powell bill, the aldermen instructed Mayor Stafford to have a survey made of all the streets in Greenville to determine the exact street mileage within the city limits. Stafford estimated the survey will cost the city between $1,500 and $2,000.

In connection with the city's preliminary steps for making application for state funds under the Powell bill, the aldermen requested the city planning board to study areas adjacent to the city limits which may be brought into the corporate limits of the city between now and July 1.

A petition signed by 37 residents of the Long Acres section of Greenville was presented the aldermen requesting sewerage facilities be made available to that residential section. The board voted to request the utilities commission to make the sewerage facilities available to the section as soon as possible. A request for a fire alarm box for the area was referred to the fire committee.

U.S. Moves For Partial Embargo On China Trade

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. — (AP) — The United States has proposed a worldwide embargo on the sale of all arms and war materials to Communist China and is urging immediate approval by the United Nations.

U. S. Delegate Ernest A. Gross outlined the embargo plan yesterday at a secret meeting of the United Nations' Special Sanctions committee.

Informed quarters said some delegates expressed the belief that discussion of sanctions at this time might hinder rather than help in the Peiping regime to accept a cease fire. These sources said the opposition was tied to the timing and not to the principle.

Gross spoke to the committee after it had voted 10 to 0 to concentrate its efforts on economic sanctions at this time. He told newsmen later that the United States felt it would be more effective to limit its first embargo efforts to a ban on arms and strategic materials than to seek a total economic embargo.

Gross said many countries already had banned the shipment of war materials to Red China, but that the United States wanted to formalize the program and set up special machinery to review the effectiveness of the embargo.

The U. S. already has a total embargo on trade with Red China. The Philippines also have a complete ban on trade with the Communists. In addition gross mentioned Britain, France and Turkey as examples of countries which have imposed restrictions on the shipment of war materials to the Peiping regime.

Major Supply Point In North Korea Said Saved By Orders From U. S.; Claims Joint Chiefs Approved Division Of Forces; Heatedly Explains Expression Of Views

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Gen. Douglas MacArthur was quoted today as saying Washington never would let him bomb one major Communist supply point within Korea but near the Russian border. A Senator, asking that his name not be disclosed, said MacArthur gave that testimony yesterday but censors knocked it out of the transcript of testimony made public. The Red Korean supply town was described as about 35 miles from the Russian border.

MacArthur, but in the extreme northeast the boundary line meets Russian territory.

This Senator said MacArthur testified also that Lt. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer and Maj. Gen. Emmett (Rosie) O'Donnell had insisted that the enemy distribution point in that section within Korea must be destroyed. The two men are air officers.

The censored transcript sent out to newsmen disclosed the General had a brisk question-and-answer exchange with Senator McMahon (D-Conn.), a vigorous supporter of the Administration's viewpoint in the great dispute.

McMahon's questions ranged into MacArthur's statement last fall that he hoped to have his boys "home by Christmas" and the General's tactics in splitting his forces for a "win-the-war" drive to the Korean-Manchurian border.

As to the split forces, MacArthur said his troops' dispositions had the approval of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

And as to the "home by Christmas" talk, the General said, "that was my hope."

The record indicated some signs of anger on MacArthur's part when McMahon asked whether he thought it came within the province of a theater commander "to register publicly with persons in political life, or out of it for that matter, his differences of opinion" with his government.

MacArthur replied: "I believe the theater commander has the responsibility of registering his views as he might see fit, if they are honest views and not in contradiction to any implementing directives that he may have received."

Then referring to what he called the "implications" of McMahon's question, the General said he did not believe that "any segment of American society shall be so gaged that the truth and the full truth shall not be brought out."

The American way, MacArthur went on, is for full airing of diverse opinions on controversial issues while "the Soviet method is entirely in contradiction to that."

Both Sides Guessing

General MacArthur's Setbacks And Conditions Which Would Remove A Scar On His Honorable Career; Even He Is Guessing What Russia Might Act Upon

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON, — (AP) — Near the end of his brilliant career General MacArthur, a proud man, suffered two setbacks which undoubtedly stung him severely.

First, the Chinese forced his troops in Korea to make a great retreat. And then when he urged broader war against China, President Truman stripped him of his commands; a great humiliation for any General.

MacArthur urged the wider war on China on the grounds that it was the only sensible way to fight the war, would bring it to a successful conclusion, and would save American lives.

He urged this even though—as he told two Senate committees yesterday—we might have to go it alone without allies, even though it might possibly—although he said he doubted it—involve us in a prolonged war with China, or even bring in Russia and start World War III.

If he had had his way, of course, and fought the war with China to victory, as he wanted to fight it, that defeat by the Chinese last November would have been erased from the history books.

But as he insisted before the senators, the chance of carrying out his view was denied him by the President who had different plans and took all MacArthur's commands away from him.

MacArthur returned home in a lightning mood, plugging for his viewpoint, not retreating from it one step, and arousing the country to great excitement over a controversy which has split the country down the middle on our foreign policy.

If in the end he can persuade Congress and the nation to his view, forcing a change in the war in Korea to his way of doing it, he will be vindicated since it would be his judgment, and not the President's, which the country accepted.

And so far the show has been pretty much MacArthur's. Great city receptions were given him; he addressed Congress; the Republicans rallied to his support; and now he is having his big day in court, testifying before the com-

What Is The UN Goal?

Do The United Nations Want To Stop At Parallel 38, Content With Merely Driving The Invaders Out Of South Korea? Stalemate Is Usual Prediction

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

While the debate continues over what MacArthur or Wedemeyer or somebody else said long ago about the Asiatic military position, we have—more to the point—a fine up-to-date achievement on hand against the Red offensive in Korea.

That immediately raises the question of how this victory affects United Nations' ambitions for a united Korea.

The U. N. forces under Lt. Gen. James A. Van Fleet have fought the Communist drive to a standstill just north of Seoul, the South Korean capital. The commander describes this as a "great victory for us unless Naugous" but warns that it is only the first phase of the offensive and that the enemy is capable of hitting as hard, or harder, again. He adds:

"I am confident the results will be the same."

The Reds are said to have established a line about 10 miles north of Seoul, with the idea of holding there while regrouping to another major assault against the allies. On the central front a vast flow of water over torpedoes has been dammed to be expected to shift quick renewal of the Red drive in that sector. U. S. Navy bombers torpedoes the dam Tuesday.

Well, supposing our success continues, what is our objective?

Are we aiming merely to evict the Chinese and North Korean invaders from South Korea, or do we aim for the Yalu River, which is the boundary between North Korea and Chinese Manchuria?

We must remember that this is a United Nations show, although the United States has been designated as agent for the U. N. The majority of the peace organization currently aim at a negotiated settlement if possible. They want to get out without losing face. But while they earnestly desire a free, united North and South Korea, they are ready to negotiate at the much debated boundary between North and South Korea—the 38th parallel.

Those supporting such a peace settlement argue that the best the allies can achieve in Korea is a stalemate unless there is a heavy increase in U. N. forces—an increase which the organization does not want to undertake. They argue that the United States has been designated as agent for the U. N. The majority of the peace organization currently aim at a negotiated settlement if possible. New Paint Cleaner Retains Gloss

Have you ever cleaned walls or wood work when the paint literally disappeared before your eyes? Perhaps your white woodwork formerly had a glorious gloss but after cleaning became flat and dull. Now you can retain the beauty of painted surfaces with the new C33 Concentrate. It removes the dirt but leaves the paint when used as directed. C33 is also ideal for cleaning venetian blinds, linoleum, refrigerators and tile. This new product now available at Belk-Tyler's 3rd Floor.—Adv

Ayden News

The graded school will close Friday night.

Our new city fathers met and qualified Wednesday evening and our progressive town did not miss a revolution. Only good men succeeded good men. Still we must expect even greater things.

The J. R. Smith Company has been dissolved by J. R. Smith and Bro., having absorbed the entire store. This is the oldest firm in town, having started here soon after the railroad was built in 1891.

There was a large sturgeon caught at Pitch Kettle seine Thursday weighing near 200 pounds. This meat usually sells for 15 cents per making it a valuable kind.

The high price has caused several large lots of cotton to be marketed recently.

Family Picnic Night

On Wednesday afternoon, May 9, beginning at 5:30 the annual family picnic will be held by the members of Jarvis Memorial Methodist church.

As in past years, the picnic will be held on the grounds of the Third Street school, and every family of the church is invited to attend and bring a supper, which will be spread on long tables set up on the lawn.

This will be a part of the observance of Christian Family Week and will serve to remind the family groups of the importance of the fellowship of the families.

The Red Banks Club Meets

The Red Banks Home Demonstration Club met at the community building on May first, with twenty members and two visitors present. One new name, Mrs. Luther Guthrie, was added to the list. "Rock Of Ages" was sung as the devotional hymn, since Mrs. Paul Davenport, leader of music for the county, stressed better hymn singing—and the one mentioned is considered the most popular.

It was voted that the club would sponsor a concession at the fair this fall. Mrs. R. B. Starling gave a talk, "Survival of the Atomic Bomb Attack."

Mrs. L. W. Cherry, assisted by Mrs. Mattie Tucker, gave a delightful demonstration "How to Use Sweet Potatoes."

All members were seated, when an invitation from the Eastern Pine Men's Club was read, that all the club ladies would attend a joint meeting for an out-door supper on Wednesday evening, May ninth.

Mrs. H. R. Rogers played the piano for group singing as recreation. Delightful refreshments were served by the hostesses.

LESTER D. PAGE For Mayor

I am proud to say that I am a citizen of the City of Greenville and have served the people for 22½ years. I believe in Greenville 100%. I know most of our citizens and most of them know me. My record is clear. I showed no favorites while filling the position as your chief of police and if elected your mayor, I promise to do my duty in being fair to all. I bear no malice toward anyone. My desire is to serve the people, not any particular group. I shall make every effort to make Greenville a better place to live in.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLAS

WHAT REALLY COUNTS
A recent newspaper story told of a robbery in a New England town. The burglar had carried off a few knives and forks, a typewriter, and a wallet containing a little cash. The family was annoyed, but at the same time relieved. For in an unlocked china cabinet just a few feet from where he had picked up the knives and forks, the burglar had overlooked a collection of antique silver plates and dishes worth several thousand dollars.

When it comes to religion, some people work just like that burglar. They join a church, because it gives them standing in their community. They attend the services, and enjoy meeting their friends and neighbors there. They listen to the music, and sometimes make suggestions to the committee. They contribute regularly in the collection plate, and discuss the budget of the annual meeting. They go to church suppers, the men's fellowship, the women's guild. But they never pay any attention to God.

When Jesus was asked about the most important rules for life, the second thing he said was to love thy neighbor as thyself.

But the first thing Jesus said was this: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength."

What Does Public Health Mean To You?

It is unfortunate in a county the size of Pitt where every person in the county is affected directly by the work of the county health department that there are so few people who are familiar with the activities of that particular department of the county government.

The Pitt health department this year is operating on a budget of $58,195. There are very few people in the county who realize what they are getting from the money; too few who have any idea of how to evaluate whether the county is getting its money's worth for the dollars it is spending on public health; too few who have any idea whether the department is being provided with sufficient funds to carry on the type of public health program which is needed in the county.

There are all too few people in Pitt county who are familiar with the set-up of the local health department and the problems which confront it.

The series of articles on the Pitt health department by City Editor John Spinks currently appearing in The Reflector are the result of a thorough study of the past and present needs, problems and activities of the department. It is a series of articles which has taken weeks of study and research to prepare, and a series which is written to present to the people of Pitt county a complete word picture of their health department.

The Pitt health department has made great strides since its formation in 1918. But there remain many things to be done to give the people of the county the calibre of health department they need and deserve. The problems which confront the Pitt health department can not be overcome until the people of the county become public health conscious, and realize the needs of the department.

The people of Pitt should familiarize themselves with the facts of the organization and operation of the county health department, then evaluate the facts and take steps to afford improvements if, when and where they are needed.

The work of the health department is an important factor in the well being of every citizen of the county. The people by all means should take a genuine interest in the well being of the department.

A Step To Block Power Nationalization

A major victory has been scored by the opponents of the further spread of federal power in areas already served by private and municipally owned electric power companies.

It was a victory for the American people in the saving of more than $9,000,000 which the Department of Interior proposed to use for the extension of federal power lines into areas already served by electric power companies. It was a set-back for those bureaucrats who envision the day when electric power will be completely nationalized in the United States.

The House of Representatives yesterday lopped off $9,450,000 of the Department of Interior appropriation earmarked for the construction of power and transmission lines. It was a follow-up to the previous action of a committee which recommended the cut. And of the cut which was made in the appropriation bill, almost $4,000,000 was supposed to have been used by the Southeastern Power Administration which is the federal power agency that operates in Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Arkansas, Texas, Missouri, Kansas and Louisiana.

The action by the House was a small but decisive step against the ultimate nationalization of electric power. More tests will come in the future, engineered by the administration proponents of federal power. The Reflector hopes the Congress and the individual citizens will keep their guard up against the measures which would take the electric power industry from the hands of the individual municipalities and the private companies.

News Behind The News

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON—Although General Douglas MacArthur's spectacular reappearance on the American scene has presented the Administration and the Democrats with a difficult challenge on the eve of the 1952 elections, he has also given considerable discomfort to fellow-Republicans, especially to would-be presidential candidates. He has even upset the so-called Dixiecrats' political plans.

He has driven many prominent GOP-ers to take a definite stand on the Truman-Acheson policies in Europe and Asia, whereas they had hoped to avoid this practical and emotional issue until it had been clarified or eliminated by future events, including possible war with Russia.

Without meaning to be unfair to the on-the-scene honorables, he has forced them to lay down their cards at a time when they would prefer to "hold them close to their chest" until next spring.

HAYOC—Not a single Republican prospect has escaped MacArthur's line of fire. Having no political ambitions himself, he did not mind whom he hit—or hurt—although it is doubtful if even he realizes the havoc he seems to have wrought in current American politics.

The only 1952 possibility who has not been embarrassed by these dramatic developments is Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio. To him MacArthur has meant a reinforcement, and the Ohioan has been quick to take advantage of this fresh support.

PROBLEM—Mr. Taft has embraced the MacArthur doctrine so wholeheartedly—and this is an other major consequence of the General's abrupt firing—that the GOP lineup today finds the son of the former President facing a field that includes Dewey, Warren, Eisenhower, Lodge, Stassen, Duff etc.

As top Republican leaders prepare to assemble at Tulsa to select next year's convention site, they recognize that the former Korean commander has complicated their problem of choosing a presidential nominee. Sometimes they wish he had been permitted to remain in Tokyo.

BOGS—Governor Thomas E. Dewey's embarrassment is reflected in the fact that the 1948 nominee has not squeaked on the Truman-MacArthur controversy since the recall. The victim of a cold and legislative overwork, Mr. Dewey left for Bermuda just before the battle.

However, as an Eisenhower promoter and an all-out supporter of the Truman-Acheson program, Mr. Dewey must seek refuge in silence. He had placed almost all his eggs in what might be described as an anti-MacArthur basket. He wanted to send 100, not four, divisions to Europe. His principal adviser on foreign affairs in the 1948 campaign is now a Truman aide—John Foster Dulles. There was talk that the Governor might some day take Mr. Acheson's place.

Governor Earl Warren of California, the 1948 vice-presidential entry, has been more astute—or lucky. Although he rarely discusses national issues, confining himself to matters affecting his state, he held a special press conference to express his approval of the aid-for-Europe plan. But he has not gone overboard for it or for an Eisenhower nomination, and he paid a high tribute to the General on his return to this country.

SHIP—Senator Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. of Massachusetts, a likely choice for V.P., if not for first place, has rolled with the MacArthur punch. Although regarded as a strong internationalist, he has begun to denounce the Truman-Acheson "bungling in domestic and foreign fields." He will not find it difficult to make a halfway shift to the idea of showing more concern for Far Eastern threats of Communist aggression.

Mr. Stassen doesn't yet know where he wants to land. Although almost a "one worder," who once wrote that Stalin wanted peace, he recognizes an earthquake when it strikes him.

Still politically ambitious, he does not want to be lined up against MacArthur. So he begs the two principals—the President and the General—to shake hands and "make up" for the good of the country." His suggestion, which would resolve no issues, found welcome nowhere.

STRATEGY—General Eisenhower's political fortunes may be the most deeply affected of all these bigwigs. As recently discussed here, the Republicans' kidnapping of MacArthur lessens his chance for obtaining the GOP nomination, assuming that he would accept it.

On the other hand, it strengthens the belief that, if Mr. Truman does not seek another term, the Democrats may turn to European generalissimo. However, in view of his present assignment, "like" occupies the enviable spot of being able to say nothing and wait upon history's antics. In any event, his best strategy is to force the Democrats to seem to draft him.

Insofar as his party is concerned Mr. Truman's position has been strengthened. Even those Democrats who disagree with him on almost every question recognize the MacArthur threat to 1952 success, and are slowly rallying around him. Paradoxical as it may seem, he has more partisan rooters for another term now than he did before he fired the General.

The Dixiecrats, who once hoped to join with the GOP behind Eisenhower, are now without a candidate. As a result, they may work with Senator Karl Mundt of South Dakota on his plan for a ticket of a conservative Republican and an anti-Truman Democrat. In this connection, a Taft-Byrd slate has been mentioned.

TYNDALL, S.D., TRIBUNE AND REGISTER: "A short time ago we remarked that the Federal Government was adding a lot of new employees, without knowing at the time just how the figures were running. We have these figures now to substantiate the statement: The Federal government added 60,594 employees to the payroll in January—more than 2,000 per day. It doesn't seem to add up to a program of economy in government spending."

GILBERT, ARIZONA, ENTERPRISE: "Former Governor M. E. Thompson of Georgia announced his resignation as Office of Price Stabilization consultant . . . because he could not take the money from the taxpayers for a job that he did not have. In his announcement he revealed the waste that was going on in the stabilization program and stated that he did not want to have any part of it. If we only had more men like this we would have less bureaus, less taxes and less confusion."

Just A Minute, Swami—

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

You can kick em all you please but movies are one of our best means of entertainment. If you see 'em all, you should be kicked, because there are too many that aren't worth your time and money. However, if you pick carefully, it's a great pastime.

When you follow the movies, it's fun to look into the private lives of the stars you see on the screen. After seeing a star in several movies, you naturally feel like you want to know what he does at home.

That's why a story about Spencer Tracy caught my eye last night. Twenty-five years ago a doctor told Spencer and his wife, Louise, that it would be their responsibility to create a normal life for their baby son, John, who was born deaf. The Tracys gladly accepted the challenge. They taught John to read lips, how to talk, how to play with other children. Today John is an active and popular young man, and he's got a good start on an art career.

Spencer and Louise didn't stop when they had trained John. In 1942 they started the John Tracy Clinic at the University of Southern California. They wanted to teach other parents to do what they had done with John. Over 2,000 children can now say that deaf children need not be dumb, thanks to the Tracys. Louise is full-time director of the Clinic, and Spencer's Hollywood earnings pay the bills. This clinic has cost them a lot of time and money, but they think it's well worth it. Maybe other stars will have more Oscars than Spencer, but who will be able to count their children by the thousands?

At the same reading I saw a story about one of Hollywood's best in four fields: acting, dancing, directing, and writing. That's Gene Kelly, who is as natural in a movie as anybody I've ever seen. Gene, his wife Betsy, and daughter, Kerry, age eight, have the title of the most unusual Hollywood family in Hollywood.

The Kellys live in Beverly Hills, but in a small clapboard house that does not even have a swimming pool. Believe it or not, they have been married to each other for nine years. They send their daughter to the neighborhood public school, shun publicity, keep their house overflowing with friends and neighbors who don't even bother to knock on the door. They want, casually in for a game of volleyball with Gene, who is usually wearing dungarees, a polo shirt and a baseball cap. Gene loves to talk sports, collect books and paintings, and keep the house full of company.

Betsy drives a '41 Ford on shopping trips, does her own interior decorating and wears sports clothes most of the time. No make-up, and believes that the most important place is the home. And Gene averages 100 per cent. Amazing to find normal people in Hollywood, eh?

And I thank you.

ANNUAL—Ten states now have annual sessions of their general assemblies, according to recent report of the council of state governments. Colorado, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island and South Carolina. Arizona, Colorado and Michigan amended their constitutions last year providing for annual sessions. All the other states have meetings every two years, unless special sessions are called.

BUDGETARY—California, Colorado and Maryland limit subjects to be considered at even-year sessions to revenue and appropriations. Argument in favor of annual sessions, and particularly for the limitation on budget items, is that under consideration now existing is extremely difficult to project fiscal estimates as much as two years ahead. There were frequent references during the recent North Carolina assembly to probable need for a special session next year to adjust fiscal items to changing conditions. It is further argued that in a so-called business firm, the general assembly is the board of directors, close by the stockholders who are the voting citizens; and that no corporation would attempt to do business with less than yearly scheduled meetings of the directors.

OBJECT LESSON—There is an object lesson and argument against unlimited annual sessions in the record of South Carolina. The 1951 assembly has just adjourned in Columbia, having run for some time longer than the biennial session here, and with apparently just as much—perhaps more—confusion and uncertainty.

taintly about status of revenue and appropriations bills. It has been suggested that with the budget system in effect in North Carolina, the advisory budget commission might propose no material changes in money acts for the even-year session and that the meeting could be held to one week. In case material change seemed advisable the proposals could be argued out, unencumbered with legislation dealing with matters other than state finances.

UNLIMITED—The reason governors have avoided calling special sessions until made absolutely necessary by desperate conditions is that under the North Carolina constitution each general assembly is a law unto itself. Neither the governor nor the advisory budget commission can do more than recommend and suggest; the legislature itself determines what matters it will consider and what disposition to make of them. Classic illustration of what can happen was the special session called by Governor Glenn to consider freight rates—and which devoted most of its time to setting up the prohibition election of 1908. Suggestion has been made that the situation might be met by a constitutional amendment providing that the governor's call for a special session could be limited to fiscal matters. That would obviate necessity for regular annual meetings, and would keep special sessions from running wild.

IMPROBABLE—Students of North Carolina history and tradition agree that any material change in present constitutional provisions concerning the general assembly is improbable. The recent legislature submitted to vote of the people at next year's election an amendment providing for executive appointment to fill vacancies occurring in legislative membership. That amendment is accorded less than even chance of adoption, because the people have cherished their exclusive right to name their own lawmakers. It is believed that the people also will object to giving the governor right to say what subjects those elected lawmakers may consider when they convene as a general assembly. Existing provisions of the constitution and the statutes admittedly are cumbersome and work hardship in some instances. The disadvantages, however, are outweighed by the basic advantage of keeping the business of making laws close to the people, by retaining full responsibility in the hands of representatives elected by the people, unhampered by executive restrictions, limitations or appointments.

CONVENTIONS—Special subcommittees of the national Democratic and Republican committees are now in process of picking places for the quadrennial conventions next year, at which party platforms will be adopted and candidates nominated for president and vice president of the United States. Recent news stories indicate that major contenders for both conventions are Philadelphia and Chicago, with Kansas City, Miami, San Francisco and other cities bidding for one or both. These stories about the national conventions serve to remind that one year from now the North Carolina 1952 state convention will be history, the Democratic convention an imminently upcoming event.

Our Joint Chiefs of Staff, it seems to us, are in a better position to give correct answers to these questions than is the armchair, or even the jeep-borne strategist. Yet the Joint Chiefs can't very well argue their case in public because they can't disclose the facts on which it is based.

That is why in time of grave peril we don't like to hear a senator impugning the motives of the Joint Chiefs or a general appealing to public sentiment to put his own brand of strategy over.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

To Much For Average Man (Greensboro Daily News)
The MacArthur controversy is ignominious to us that a confession of ignorance may be good for the soul.

The affair has raised a lot of emotions and it has also raised a lot of questions to which we don't know the answers. Here are some of them.

Would all-out war in Korea, including bombing of Manchuria and Chinese bases and the use of Chiang's troops in China or Korea bring the war to a speedy end? Or would it bring Russia in and precipitate a third world war? If so, what?

"Asia? And what would happen to us? Even if Russia did not come in, would we be bogged down in China as Japan did? Is this what the Kremlin is trying to achieve? Is it better to shoot the worms or play safe? What is playing safe under these circumstances? Is time on our side or Russia's?

We don't know the correct answers to these questions, because the answers depend on a vast mass of complex facts from all over the earth, many of which are known to only a very few people in this country, not to mention other facts which may not be known at all.

For the same reason we don't think the man in the street knows the answers either.

And for the same reason we doubt that any general who has been outside this country for a good many years and who has been pretty exclusively occupied with his own sector of the whole hot-cold worldwide front knows MacArthur.

Our Joint Chiefs of Staff, it seems to us, are in a better position to give correct answers to these questions than is the armchair, or even the jeep-borne strategist. Yet the Joint Chiefs can't very well argue their case in public because they can't disclose the facts on which it is based.

That is why in time of grave peril we don't like to hear a senator impugning the motives of the Joint Chiefs or a general appealing to public sentiment to put his own brand of strategy over.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER

The number of business failures in the United States is continuing at the remarkably low postwar level. Failures during the first quarter of the year were 2,106, according to Dun and Bradstreet.

With approximately 4,000,000 firms in business, this is an annual rate of .0021 or 21 out of 10,000. In 1940, a better-than-average prewar year, the rate was .006. The all-time low occurred in 1945, after the war economy and the draft had shaken out large numbers of marginal operations. In that year there were only 810 failures for an annual rate of .0004, or four out of 10,000.

These figures refer only to bankruptcies. There are about 30,000 closures a month, but most of them are due to death, illness, retirement, mergers or other kinds of solvent wind-ups.

There are many reasons for the low rate of failures. Most important of all, the economy is expanding. Demand has kept up with and often exceeded production. The principles of business management are more widely understood. Tax rates may be a burden, but at least they force every business to keep adequate records, and lack of records has always been one of the most important causes of failures. In addition, there are scores of books, published both governmentally and privately, which help to guide business management. Many colleges now give courses in business management.

The rise of trade associations, providing interchange of information, is also an important factor. There are, of course, still many hazards. Examination of the first-quarter figures show that while retailing accounts for 40 per cent of the firms in business, the failures slightly more than 50 per cent were retailers.

Food and liquid stores appear to be the most risky of all: of the 2,106 failures, 274 were in those lines. Next was eating and drinking places, with 201 busts, and apparel and accessory retailing, with 185 failures.

HIDDEN CAMERAS
CHANGE FISH LABELS

Hidden movie cameras have caused one company to change the designs of its frozen fish packages.

The movies, made in a number of markets, show housewives were uncertain about buying. The company's packages for uncoked fish showed appetizing coked fish on the package. That was all right once, but the introduction of a number of frozen coked fish made the labeling confusing to shoppers. So the company is dropping pictures of coked fish on raw fish packages and is adding more information on handling and preparation of the contents.

HEATERS AND RANGES
AT NEW HIGH RECORD

Shipments of automatic gas water heaters and home gas ranges in the first quarter, both reached record highs, the Gas Appliance Manufacturers Association reports.

Despite looming shortages, the industry shipped 680,000 heaters in the first quarter, 47.7 per cent more than in the corresponding 1950 quarter. It also delivered 619,000 ranges, 37.5 per cent more than in the first 1950 quarter.

Because of the expected decline in home building, the industry does not expect to maintain these record rates.

BUYING LIMITED
IN BOYS' WEAR

Buying was restricted at the boys' industry market work, which closed in New York last night. Most store buyers said that heavy inventories were limiting their orders.

There was considerable activity, however, in back-to-school wear, in western merchandise, and in the fluorescent fabrics which are becoming a rage among the younger set.

HOUSING IS CHEAPER,
IT SAYS HERE

Housing is "relatively" cheaper than before World War II, the National Association of Home Builders would have us believe on the basis of an analysis by Miles L. Colean, housing economist. The cheapness cited is in relation to family income. Mr. average family today is in a position to afford better housing than it was before the war, in that its income has increased more rapidly than either the cost of living or the cost of building.

NEW YORK (AP)—Practice puts by the Poor Man's Philosophy:

Are American girls better looking this spring?

An informal poll at our office watering trough disclosed that everybody thought the girls were more beautiful all right, but for varying reasons.

"They're rounder," said a fellow who likes 'em plump. "Winter feed must have been more plentiful this year."

"They're more slender," said a fellow who prefers 'em thin. "It's probably some new type out-of-sight armor they're encased in. It doesn't let them overflow so much."

"Nope, you're wrong," objected another. "It's just that you can see them more like nature made them. They don't wear those circus tents like they did a couple of years back."

"I think it's because there aren't so many of them walking around like ducks," remarked a fourth. "Not so many wearing those flatfooted slippers that make them look like they were hiking off to dance in a ballet."

"It's because they are more intelligent—wisdom always makes people look better, even girls," insisted the office optimist.

"You're all crazy," grunted the office cynic. "They look better to you because you're all a year older yourself. The older you get, the prettier they look—damn life anyway."

Well, whatever the reason, girls, the verdict is unanimous: you look prettier this year than ever.

Personally, I like stories about children. Here's a couple from the suburbs:

A schoolteacher, taking her third grade pupils over the hurdles of grammar, had brought them to the problem on punctuation marks. They found the apostrophe particularly difficult to understand.

"Apostrophes, apostrophes," complained one little girl. "That is hard to pronounce. Why don't they just call them flying commas?"

And doesn't that make wonderful common sense? The father of a ten-year-old girl recently received a telephone call from one of her pre-teenage male schoolmates asking his daughter's hand in marriage. The startled father fought that request down firmly.

the other end of the wire. "We are all going."

The dazed parent decided he had better to consent to this—and did.

"You know," replied his little future son-in-law cautiously, "everybody pays his own way in."

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON—Miss Greta Smit, pioneer in the teaching of domestic science to the rural women of the Netherlands, riding about the country on a bicycle and carrying her teaching equipment with her.

Now chief governmental supervisor for home economics in her country's department of education, she is here with a group to study and take back more scientific up-to-date know-how under the sponsorship of the Economic Cooperation Administration.

Miss Smit, who began her career in 1922, tells me that great strides have been made in improving homemaking techniques in her country despite the ravages of war and post-war scarcities of equipment, foods and materials.

Today, she says, there are some 250 rural home economics schools, three colleges for teacher training and some 200 movable cooking and sewing units which can be taken into the more remote areas.

"During the war it was very difficult to have the right equipment—any equipment at all for that matter," she told me. "The Germans were stealing everything. There was no cloth for dresses. We had to make new from old, then again new from old."

"We had nothing to cook. We could only teach the women to cook a bit of water, with a little potatoes, sometimes only grates. We got a great deal of help from America and the Marshall Plan. It was simple, but efficient. We are grateful."

"The women of the Netherlands are good homemakers and clean, and they like housekeeping instinctively," she said, "but we can't buy many things all ready like you can in America. We have to make them in our homes. We can't buy dresses. We have to make them. We have little food to eat. We have to plan very seriously. We have to do without refrigerators and all the time and work-saving devices. It takes a lot of thinking out, a lot of planning."

One Burial Service For Father And Eight Children In Tragedy

LENOIR (AP)—A single burial service was held today for a father and his eight children, victims of one of the state's worst family tragedies.

The nine bodies, placed in two caskets, were buried in a single grave in Mountain View Baptist Church Cemetery.

The father, jobless Ralph Gragg, 36, bludgeoned the children to death, set fire to their six-room mountain home, and then shot himself at nearby Collettsville Wednesday night.

The bodies of the children, ranging in ages from three to 16, were so charred from the fire that neighbors could identify them only by measuring their heights.

Thus Gragg made good a promise to his estranged wife—that she would never get their children. The grief-stricken mother told police, "He threatened to do this before—that's why I had to leave him. I was afraid of him."

A grim clue to the tragedy was found in the desk of 16-year-old Catherine at the school she attended. The girl in an unmailed note to her mother, wrote:

"...Mama, I wish you would come back and stay with us. I am treated like a dog. Peggy and me are fussed at all the time..."

The letter stopped there. Residents of the community said Gragg was normal. But Coroner Marshall Kincaid said Gragg "was bound to have been mentally unbalanced." He added there would be no inquest.

Mrs. Gragg had been living with a brother, Ivey, in the Patterson community about 12 miles from Collettsville.

Half Of Paving Goal Completed

RALEIGH (AP)—One-half of Governor Scott's 12,000 mile paving goal under the $200,000,000 rural road bond program has been completed.

State Highway Commission chairman Henry Jordan announced yesterday 6,036 miles of farm-to-market roads have been hard-surfaced. Another 9,825 miles have been stabilized for all-weather travel during the two-year period, Jordan added.

Jordan said as of April 1 the commission has spent $83,241,000 of the $125,000,000 issued in bonds under the program. An additional $29,862,000 has been earmarked for specific projects. Additional bonds are scheduled to be sold this summer.

Jordan declared the mid-state Sixth Division, under the direction of Dairyman George S. Coble, led all other sections in the mileage paved. The sixth reported 1,002 miles hard-surfaced.

Five counties, the Highway Chairman said, have passed their projected paving goals during the two year period. This means they will exceed the mileage promised when the program began. The five are Hoke, Robeson, Scotland, Montgomery, and Richmond.

Few Alarms For Firemen In April

Greenville firemen were called to seven box fire alarms in the month of April, answered ten telephone calls and one out-of-town alarm for aid, the monthly report for Fire Chief George Gardner revealed this morning.

Only one rescue call was made by the department over the month. A total of two lots were burned off in the city.

No estimate has been turned in as to the losses suffered over the month. However, damage was not expected to run very high.

Cotton Ceiling Violation Sought

—CHARLOTTE (AP)—An investigation is underway to determine if ceiling prices on cotton are being violated in the Carolinas.

This was announced yesterday by the Charlotte district OPS enforcement officer, J. Harry Sample, who said complaints had been received that sellers are upgrading cotton in order to get prices higher than those allowed under ceilings established by OPS regulations.

OPS agents have been instructed to check into contracts entered into by Carolina Mills since last March 8, and to obtain samples of cotton involved in these contracts.

Also to be checked are records of cotton merchants.

Sample said complaints had come mostly from cotton dealers and merchants "who have been unable to continue operations because of their inability to purchase cotton at proper prices."

Ceiling prices for white and extra white 15-16th inch middling cotton were set at 45.76 cents a pound in March, Sample said, in counties centering about Mecklenburg and Gaston counties.

The SIREN of SILVER VALLEY

By PAUL EVAN/LEHMAN

He turned and strode from the gallery, leaped on his horse and rode swiftly away. He was angry and his pride had been hurt. It was bad enough to have Jeff Payne call him a boy; to have Diana throw it up to him was the height of indignity. By God, he'd show her! He'd show her that when it came to handling a Colt he was as much a man as was Jeff Payne!

He flung himself from his wet horse in front of the Bonanza and went into the saloon. There were some Star men there and Ed Keever had come in with them to keep an eye on them. Buddy strode up to the bar beside Ed and ordered whiskey in a harsh voice.

Ed peered at him from his sad eyes. Buddy did not drink as a rule; liquor usually made him deathly sick. But he tried manfully and right now he poured two drinks down in quick succession and called for a third.

Ed Keever watched him furtively, then sought out Marshal Al Sanders.

"Better keep an eye on Buddy. He's gettin' loaded and he's lookin' for Jeff Payne. If he tangles with Jeff it'll be just too bad. Specially with him so drunk he couldn't hit a elephant with a twenty-gauge at ten feet."

Al nodded. "If he starts anything I'll slap him in the calaboose."

Noon came and most of the men in the Bonanza went out in search of dinner, but Buddy stayed at the bar fingering a glass of whiskey and trying to get up the courage to swallow it. His anger grew; he just couldn't take the stuff; even the thought of drinking it nauseated him.

A man came in and said to the bartender, "Howdy, Harry. Pour me a short one to settle my dinner."

The bartender pushed bottle and glass before him. "Many up there?"

"Not so many. Mostly Star men. Nobody from the Double D but that new foreman of Miz Denton's."

The bartender sent a furtive glance towards Buddy. Buddy had stiffened, his fingers tightening about the glass. He looked at the bartender, then at the glass. He lifted the glass suddenly and tossed its contents down and went out, walking unsteadily.

He entered the hotel, strode past the desk and through the doors which led into the diningroom. He stopped inside, his gaze searching the long table. Jeff was near the far end and on his left side. Ed Keever and Al Sanders were at this end, but it is doubtful if Buddy even saw them. His burning gaze was fixed on Jeff and as though drawn by the intensity of that gaze Jeff raised his eyes from his plate and saw him.

Buddy stepped forward saying shrilly, "I told you to keep clear of me, Payne! Now, you lousy son of a pup, I'll—" His hand stubbed for the glass at his hip.

Nobody had time to act, and it seemed as though Jeff would surely get it in the next second. Instinctively he thrust backwards and a slippery floor helped him. The chair slid back and he came to his feet, his hand automatically finding his gun and flipping it from the holster with the combined arm and wrist movement which becomes instinctive to the gunman.

He fired over the head of the man at his right, but even as he fired he pulled the gun slightly out of line. To kill that boy, weaving on his feet with drunkenness, would be plain murder.

Buddy's gun was just clearing leather when Jeff's bullet struck him. It hit him in the shoulder and the impact swung him completely around. He staggered, got his feet tangled and went down. Before he could get up again Ed Keever and Marshal Sanders were on him. Buddy's numbed fingers had let go his gun and it lay on the floor.

He struggled, cursing them for interfering, and Ed Keever said fiercely, "Shut up, you damned fool! And thank God that Payne didn't kill you."

"He can't kill me! I'm as good a man as he is! Let me go!" Sanders, with a deft motion, snapped handcuffs on his wrists.

"Whoa up, son," he warned. "Again that youthful term that Buddy had come to regard as a reflection on his manhood. A change came over him; he ceased struggling and let his muscles go lax. Son! He'd show them."

They held him for a moment longer, felt the resistance go out of him and then let him go. Ed Keever stepped back a pace and Sanders turned away, his gaze on Jeff, who still stood at the far end of the table. "Want to prefer charges, Payne?"

Jeff looked steadily at Buddy, then shook his head. "No. The boy's drunk. Probably got a whiff of the bar towel. Lock him up until he's sober then turn him loose."

It was the crowning humiliation and probably Buddy himself did not realize just how and why he did it. The marshal's right hip was a foot in front of his manacled hands and on that hip swung a .44 Colt. With a sudden swift movement Buddy reached out and snatched the gun from its holster. He whipped it up, holding it with both hands, and fired.

Ed Keever cried out and lunged at him, striking the gun aside. Sanders wheeled and Buddy, suddenly sobered, backed away, gun threatening them. He snapped, "I'll kill the man that moves, so help me!"

He backed through the doorway, kept backing until he reached the front door. He turned then and ran down the steps and leaped on the first horse he saw.

At the far end of the diningroom, Jeff Payne lay on his back on the floor. His eyes were closed in unconsciousness and blood was oozing over his face.

When Jeff awoke a bewildered Santa Claus was watching him intently and fingers were pinning a head bandage in place. Santa Claus said, "Hold still a minute while I finish up. Feeling pretty rocky, eh?"

Jeff discovered that he was feeling very rocky indeed. He succeeded in moving his head and saw that he was stretched out on a table at one side of the diningroom, and a glimpse of a black bag yawning on a chair told him that Santa Claus was a doctor. Standing off at one side was the hotel clerk.

Rocket May Be Pioneer In Space

PHILADELPHIA — (UP) — The Navy's new Viking rocket is the forerunner of a crew-carrying space ship which may become a reality in 10 to 15 years, a prominent aircraft engineer believes.

William B. Bergen, vice president and chief engineer of the Glen L. Martin aircraft firm which built the rocket, said the Viking has registered speeds up to 4,000 miles an hour and an altitude of more than 105 miles.

If engineers can a little more than quadruple the rocket's speed, they will be well on the way to building a successful "Earth satellite" or space ship, Bergen said.

He predicted that rockets with speeds up to 17,000 miles an hour—fast enough to push them away from the gravitational pull of the earth—will become a reality in 10 to 15 years. They would be able to cruise in the atmosphere 400 miles from the earth.

Such a rocket could be used to carry atomic bombs over an enemy target within a matter of minutes, he said. For peacetime use, it could be sent outside the Earth's gravitational pull and used as a television relay station capable of covering half the world.

Industrialist Describes North-South Struggle

AUGUSTA, Me. — (AP) — A moving key employee; less cost of moving equipment and material; less interruption of output and no sales or income tax in Maine. (A two per cent state sales tax was enacted yesterday, effective July 1, but it exempts industrial raw materials and shipping materials.)

In the South's favor—lower wages, lower buildings, heating, packing and outboard freight costs, Southern pride in buying home products, and reports of "better production, better attitude and better cooperation from both unionized and non-union employees."

Quoting Saco-Lowell president David F. Edwards' last annual report, Chafee said "it was finally decided that whatever may be done in the future to expand the company's operations in the South, it is probable that the company will always want to maintain a substantial operation in its present location."

The Kingdom Is United

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Boesch

Scripture—II Samuel 5-8; I Chronicles 22:17-19.

After Saul's death, all the tribes of Israel came to David, reminding him that he had been their leader even in Saul's day, and he was anointed king over all Israel.

So David became king over all Israel, and he executed justice and righteousness unto all his people, and David "waxed greater and greater, for Jehovah, God of hosts, was with him."

David overcame all his enemies, defeated the Philistines, and conquered Jerusalem, and he brought the ark of the covenant to the city, and danced before it while all rejoiced.

David gathered materials for building the temple, but he was growing old, and he called upon all the princes to help his son, Solomon, build it.

MEMORY VERSE—Deuteronomy 6:18.

THE KINGDOM IS UNITED

DAVID IS ANOINTED KING OF ALL ISRAEL

Scripture—II Samuel 5-8; I Chronicles 22:17-19.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

THE STORY of David begins back in the first book of Samuel, when he was a simple shepherd who defeated the Philistines by slaying their giant champion, Goliath, with his slingshot.

Saul, who was king at the time, had displeased the Lord, and He had told Samuel to choose another king for the kingdom, and indicated that this shepherd lad was his choice. Samuel had sought out David and anointed him.

After that Saul grew jealous of the lad because he was a favorite with the people, and tried to kill him. David fled and hid—living largely in the wilderness. Now Saul and David's great friend, Saul's son, Jonathan, were dead—killed in a disastrous battle with the Philistines, who had also stolen the sacred Ark of the Lord.

David mourned for both, although he had little cause to feel sad because of Saul's death.

Now he was a man of 30, and an acknowledged leader of his people. The Bible (II Samuel: 5), tells us that all the tribes of Israel came to him and told him that he had been their leader even Israel, they sent a force to overcome the Israelites. But in two battles the Lord helped David and his soldiers to defeat the enemy.

Next David determined to bring the Ark of the Covenant to Jerusalem. It was in Judah, in the house of Abinadab, in the city of Gibeon. David's men made a new cart and brought the Ark out of the house. On the way the oxen shook the cart and one of the men—Uzziah—put out his hand to steady it, and immediately dropped dead.

Frightened, David decided not to take the Ark into the city at this time, so they left it at the house of Obadiah, where it stayed for three months, and the Lord blest all Obadiah's household.

A new cart was then built, and this time no mishaps occurred, and the Ark was brought triumphantly into the city. David himself danced before the Ark "with all his might," and all the people rejoiced greatly. The Ark was installed in the midst of the tabernacle that David had erected for it, and the king offered burnt offerings before the Lord.

David now began to collect materials to build the temple, but he was growing old. His son, Solomon, was to succeed him on the throne, and David commanded all the princes of Israel to help, telling them, "Is not the Lord your God with you? and hath He not given you rest on every side? for He hath given the inhabitants of the land into mine hand; and the land is subdued before the Lord, and before His people."

"Now set your heart and your soul to seek the Lord your God; arise therefore, and build ye the sanctuary of the Lord God, to bring the Ark of the Covenant of the Lord, and the holy vessels of God, into the house that is to be built to the name of the Lord."

As Moses was not permitted to enter the land to which he had led his people through the wilderness for 40 years, but only to view it from a mountain top, so King David was not able to see the fulfillment of his dream of a beautiful temple builded to honor his God and to house the Ark.

MEMORY VERSE

"Thou shalt do that which is right and good in the sight of Jehovah."—Deuteronomy 6:18.

In Saul's day, and they wanted him to be their king, not only over the tribe of Judah, but over all 12 tribes.

So it was that the divided kingdom became one under David, and we are told that "David waxed greater and greater; for Jehovah, the God of hosts, was with him."

The time had now come for Jerusalem to be captured by the Israelites. If you look at a map or photograph of this ancient city you will see that a small area is walled in, and the modern city reaches far beyond these walls.

The part enclosed by the walls is the ancient part of Jerusalem, the city as David knew it. Jerusalem has now been decreed by the United Nations as an international city—a fact that the Jewish people resent.

So David and his men took the city and David dwelt in the fort, and David had a house built for him, and he ruled his people with justice and righteousness, for 40 years.

When the Philistines heard that David had been anointed king of

Decline In Road Deaths Reported

Raleigh (AP)—A decline in North Carolina highway deaths was shown during March for the first time since last July.

The Motor Vehicles Department reported yesterday that 82 persons were killed in highway accidents during March compared with 90 in the same month last year.

For the first three months of this year, however, highway fatalities totaled 239—a gain of 24 over the same period last year.

Wake county, with eight fatalities, led the state during March. Seven of the deaths were in an accident near Zebulon. Next came Cumberland and Mecklenburg each with five deaths. Forsyth reported four. Guilford, Bladen, Buncombe, Craven, Johnston, Richmond, Rockingham and Wayne listed three each.

GHS Pupil Wins Third Place In French Contest

Edwina McMullan, Greenville High School Junior, won third place in a state-wide French contest sponsored by the American Association of Teachers of French and the French Government.

The announcement was made by Professor Maxalynn Mourane of the Catawba college faculty, who is state chairman of the contest and vice-president of the North Carolina Chapter of the Association.

Although Edwina is a member of the junior class, she has enough credits to graduate this year. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. McMullan of 122B Woodlawn Ave.

TO THE CITY VOTERS

I am a candidate for Alderman from the 4th Ward of the City of Greenville, and I solicit your support in the election on May 7th.

If elected, it is my sincere wish to serve my city to the best of my ability and I shall endeavor to perform my duty faithfully and conscientiously.

Cordially yours,

Robins Wallop Tarboro 11-4; Teams Play Here Tonight

Braun Goes Route, Backed Strongly By His Teammates

By BERT MOYE

Manager John Streza's Greenville Robins walloped the Tarboro A's 11-4, in the season's opener over in Tarboro last night in a contest which the Robins played heads-up, both defensively and offensively. The game was delayed one hour and twenty-five minutes in getting underway because of rain. The two teams will meet here tonight at Guy Smith Stadium in the season's opener for Greenville with the game starting at 8 o'clock. On the mound for the Robins will be Bobby Harrison and for the A's will be Jack Yerkes. Pre-game ceremonies will include the tossing of the first ball by Mayor W. S. Stafford with Chief of Police Guy C. Langston being on the receiving end.

Pete Braun went the route for the locals last night and although he gave up a total of 11 hits, he was most effective at times and also received great help from his teammates, as a total of 13 men were left stranded on the bases.

Tony Napoles pitched the first eight frames for the A's and gave up a total of seven runs and six hits. Bob Shimko, who relieved him in the final frame was touched for four runs off of one hit—a grand-slam homer off the bat of Vince Lautato over the 340-foot mark in left field.

The A's scored the first marker in last night's game, this coming in the second frame on successive singles by Jim Stevens, Bob Powell, a walk to Tony Napoles and a hit to short right field by Joe Garcia.

Trackmen Edged By Visitors

A Rocky Mount track team battled the newly-organized Greenville Phantoms track team here yesterday afternoon in a dual meet held at Guy Smith Stadium track, gaining a three point margin of victory when the final races had been decided and it was not until the last event was ended that the tabulation could be rendered.

For the two teams, it marked their first experience in team competition as both teams are being fielded this year for the first time. Greenville high school has not had a track entry in the years since the war, when track reached a high level among a selected few of the athletic group.

Greenville took five firsts in yesterday's contest, while Rocky Mount collected only four; but gained on the locals in the second place division and two in the third places in the meet.

Honors for the day went to Glenn Scott, who scored three first places in three events; the mile, broad jump and the half mile. Scott scored 15 of the total team points of 42 made by the local entries.

The track meet yesterday was in preparation for the state track meet which the local trackmen will enter next week. At that time, track teams from all over the state will gather in Chapel Hill for the state meet and a day-long string of running and throwing events will be held for the state champions.

Events, winners and school: listed in first, second and third placing. Mile—Time 5:23.5; Scott, Gr.; Braswell, RM; Mayo, Gr. Half Mile—Time 2:22; Scott, Gr.; Chandler, RM; Ballard, RM. 100-yard dash—10:5; K. Jim Konstanty Target Of 'I Told You So' Gang

By JACK HAND

Associated Press Sports Writer

Big Jim Konstanty is running behind his 1950 schedule and the "I told you so" choir is tuning up. They said around the training camps that Konstanty, the Phils' relief ace, couldn't possibly repeat last year's success. So far they're right. Because he failed last night, the St. Louis Cards ride in first place today.

Konstanty didn't lose a game until May 30 last season. Already he has lost two and won none. This time last year he had 1-0. Last night was his eighth job in 16 Phil games.

Four hits, a walk and an error by Del Ennis in the eighth accounted for three runs and brought in Milo Candini to relieve the reliever. A fourth run crossed before the side was out. The final count was 8-4 St. Louis.

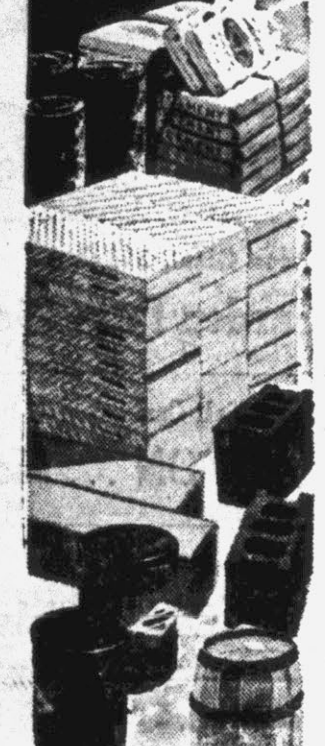

But Konstanty's troubles are only a part of the Phils' woes. Catcher Andy Seminick was hit behind the left ear by Max Lanier's pitch in the fourth inning. Carried from the field and taken to a hospital, Seminick soon regained consciousness. X-rays will determine how long he'll be out.

Branch Rickey's Pittsburgh Pirates continued their sweep through the east by running the New York Giants three-game win streak, 7-4. After Spider Jorgensen's pinch homer tied the score in the ninth, the Pirates batted around in the 10th, scoring four runs on only two hits.

Brooklyn solved an old charmer, Herny Wehmeier, who beat them four times last year. With Prescher Roe throwing a six-hitter, the Dodgers shut out the Cincinnati Reds, 8-0.

Andy Pafko's homer with the bases loaded paced Chicago's 9-3 win over the Boston Braves. That opened the door for St. Louis to slip past Boston into first place.

But the big explosion of the day was in St. Louis where the New York Yankees scored 11 in the ninth inning to flatten the Browns, 17-3. The 11 runs were a new league record for a ninth inning and the 24 total bases in the inning tied a record.

Sports Writer Looks To Arcaro For Derby Crown

By FRANK ECK

AP Newsfeatures Sports Editor

NEW YORK—We like Battle Morn to win the Kentucky Derby. When Eddie Arcaro, the only jockey to take the Derby four times, decided to ride Battle Morn in the 77th running at Churchill Downs on Saturday (May 5) that made it official, for me.

Arcaro has won Leberies with Lawrin, Whirlaway, Hoop Jr., and Citation. He was second with Hill Prince last year and in 1947 just missed by a head when Phalanx tried to catch Jet Pilot.

Arcaro, who has ridden in 11 Derbies before this one, usually gets his pick of Derby mounts. He's that good. One of the reasons he gets his pick is because he is under contract to no trainer or stable.

Arcaro was slated to ride Battle Morn in the 1951 renewal of the Run for the Roses but the horse failed to reach his best form and was withdrawn. Then he had a choice between Long Bow and Battle Morn.

He finished a fast closing second with Battle Morn in the Wood Memorial Stakes at Jamaica. Four days later he thought he'd take a ride on Long Bow, a highly respected King Ranch bay colt trained by canny Max Hirsch. But after Long Bow got beat by five lengths in a Jamaica sprint, Arcaro had hardly dismounted when he said:

"I'm riding Battle Morn in the Derby."

Battle Morn runs in the colors of the Cain Hoy Stable which is owned by Harry F. Guggenheim, 60-year-old copper magnate from Sands Point, Long Island. For Guggenheim, a retired Navy captain, Battle Morn represents his first Derby entry.

Cultivation Is Still Effective Against Weeds

WASHINGTON —(AP)—A warning to farmers who are fighting weeds with the new herbicides of recent years was issued here by Warren C. Shaw, agronomist with the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Shaw comes out in favor of cultivation as one of the most effective ways to control weeds.

"No available herbicide," says Shaw, "will kill all weeds and leave crop plants completely unharmed. If we do not cultivate to control resistant weeds, it will be weeder than ever with weeds even more difficult to control only a short time until fields."

Shaw adds that research results throughout the country show that even when weeds are controlled with chemicals, many soils will give higher crop yields when cultivated at least once.

Chinese Go Home To Avoid Draft

KUALA LUMPUR —(AP)—Youthful Chinese in the Federation of Malaya are still trying to leave the country to avoid being called up under manpower regulations.

R. P. Bingham, Secretary for Chinese Affairs, reported more than 10,000 Chinese—60 per cent of them between the call-up ages of 18 and 24—have asked permission to leave Malaya and return at a later date.

The young Chinese desiring to leave all list Communist China as

Thunderstorm

A thunderstorm over a wide area last night about 6 o'clock caused a decided drop in the temperature and the rain was a blessing to field and garden crops. Mrs. Carl E. Maiden, local observer for the U. S. Weather Bureau, stated, "More than one-half an inch of rain fell here."

The highest temperature here yesterday was 86 degrees; lowest last night, 66, and at 8 a. m. today the mercury stood at 64 degrees.

The sky was overcast during the forenoon today, with indications of more rain.

Funeral Services For A. T. Banks Saturday

A. T. (Alex) Banks, 83, died at his home in Maysville Thursday after a short illness. Mr. Banks, a native of Jones County, was married to Henriette Conway of Jones County in 1904, who preceded him in death in 1943. Mr. Banks spent most of his active life in the lumber and mercantile business. He was survived by one daughter, Mrs. George Flowers, of Maysville, one step-daughter, Mrs. Lillian Melton of Roanoke Rapids, one stepson, G. L. Eubanks, of Maysville, a sister, Mrs. W. P. Whichard of Elizabeth City, and one brother, C. H. Banks of Maysville.

The body will remain at Greenville Funeral Home until ten o'clock Saturday morning at which time it will be taken to the Baptist Church in Maysville, of which he had been a member for forty years. Services will be at three o'clock. Officiating will be his pastor, Rev. G. L. Foushee assisted by Rev. R. L. Lewis, Methodist minister of Maysville, and the Rev. J. P. Harris, Baptist minister of Bethel. Interment will follow in a family plot in Maysville Cemetery.

Last Rites Saturday Set For B. W. James

BETHEL — Benjamin William James, 89, died at the home of his son, George C. James, in Parmele on Thursday afternoon at 1:30. He was the son of the late W. C. and Annie Britton James.

Mr. James was one of the oldest residents of the Bethel community and had spent his entire life there, having lived in his present home since about one year after his marriage to the late Rillie Teel in 1881 who died in 1931.

He was a member of the Parmele Methodist church. Surviving are three sons, G. C. James of Parmele, R. E. James of the home, D. L. James of Greenville; four daughters, Mrs. A. S. Hardy of Scotland Neck, Mrs. J. E. Wynne, Sr. Bethel, Mrs. G. H. Reid, Fort Pierce, Fla., and Mrs. Tige Gardner of Greenville, 27 grandchildren and 39 great grandchildren, one sister, Mrs. C. R. Speight of Spring Hope.

Funeral services will be conducted Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home by his pastor and burial will be in the family cemetery. His grandchildren will act as pallbearers.

Battle Anderson

In a quiet home ceremony on Saturday evening at eight o'clock Miss Eunice Mae Anderson of Greenville, Route 5, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Anderson, became the bride of Robert Louis Battle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nicolas Battle of Greenville, Route 5.

The Rev. Leroy Perkins performed the ceremony. The home was beautifully decorated with spring flowers and candles.

She wore a full length white candlelight satin wedding gown fashioned with a fitted bodice and low neckline encircled with a bertha collar. Her fingertip veil fell from a bandeau of orange blossoms. Her only ornament was a strand of pearls given by her parents.

Immediately after the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception in the home. The table was beautifully decorated with bridal cakes, greenery and candles.

The bride was graduated from Jones school and before her marriage she was a member of the Grimesland high school.

They will make their home with the groom's parents where he is now engaged in farming.

Pitt County Negro Democratic club met Thursday night, May 3, for their regular meeting. After reading the minutes of their last meeting, the house was opened for new business with Sylvester Wilcox presiding. After a brief discussion of the importance of voting the meeting was adjourned.

The United Daughters club of Mt. Calvary will meet at the home of Mrs. Janie Corey Sunday, May 6, at five o'clock. All members are asked to be present.

The Smart Set club will meet at the home of Miss Maggie Clements tonight at 8 o'clock.

The Pastor's Aid club of Sycamore Hill Baptist church will meet at the home of Miss Dora B. Cherry Monday night, May 7. All members are asked to be present.

There will be a program May 20 at Mt. Calvary church. Response will be by class No. 4. Everyone is asked to come and help us make this program a great success.

Two Cars Collide During Rainstorm

Cars driven by Arden L. Tucker and Mrs. Nannie D. Raulerson, both of this city, collided at First and Greene streets, during the thunderstorm last night shortly after 6 o'clock.

The investigating police officer said the Raulerson car's bumper caught a fender on Tucker's car while it was making a left turn. He estimated the damage at $100 to each car. No arrest was made.

Aldermen Vote . . .

The aldermen accepted the resignation from the city zoning board submitted by D. J. Whichard Jr., but deferred the appointment of a person to fill Whichard's unexpired term of the board until a recommendation can be received from the zoning board.

A motion by Alderman R. E. Howell, seconded by J. E. Collins, calling for a salary increase from $10 to $25 a month for members of the board of aldermen, and a salary increase from $2,400 a year to $3,000 a year for the mayor was withdrawn after discussion by the members of the board.

The aldermen accepted and adopted an ordinance imposing penalties for the non-payment of city privilege taxes when they are due.

They accepted a request from the residents of the Brookgreen section of the city for numbering the housing in the section.

The board was informed by the city attorney that it does not have the power to exempt anyone from the payment of any privilege taxes except as provided in the general statute of the state.

Complying with a recommendation from the recreation commission, the aldermen appointed to the commission Tyson Bilbro to fill the unexpired term of John G. Clark Sr. who last month submitted his resignation as a member of the commission.

Mayor Stafford requested each department to submit to him not later than May 15 its budget request for the 1951-52 fiscal year. After authorizing the payment of $5,363.73 of current city bills and the disposition of other routine business, the meeting was adjourned.

meeting were turned into the program. Mayor Stafford halted proceedings in the meeting just before the program began and then resumed the meeting at 10 o'clock.

Questions asked by the panel did not get full answers, primarily because of the time element. However, the question of whether or not the candidates would favor a Negro swimming pool received very definite "yeses" from all four.

The question of whether they would favor a re-valuation of property received a yes from Clark while Duncan and Page stated it would have to be left up to the people. Underwood stated he was against raising the bonded indebtedness base. To Underwood's answer both Page and Duncan stated it would have to be left up to the county commissioners.

in town. Page was in favor of employing traffic engineers to make recommendations. As for the use of paying monies to be granted under the Powell bill, all candidates stated they were in favor of using them to best advantage. Page stated he would use the money as a supplement to the present street improvement funds in the budget.

What Is . . .

not desire. Apropos of this, Lt. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, successor to General MacArthur in command, recently said that allied winning of territory up to the 38th parallel would be a victory.

And MacArthur himself yesterday in effect predicted a stalemate in the Korean war unless air and naval forces are cut loose to carry the fight to the Chinese communists in Manchuria.

MacArthur . . .

Punching away along the same line, McMahon asked how MacArthur would feel about a subordinate officer in his theater "who had felt as you feel." Would he, McMahon asked, defend the right of a Brigadier General on his staff to express policy opinions contrary to those being pursued by the government.

MacArthur: "I wouldn't have a Brigadier General or anyone else on my staff that didn't freely and frankly give me his opinions in contradiction to my own. The very value of a subordinate is the freedom with which he expresses his initiative."

'Popularization' . . .

Sometimes it is necessary to raise the salary much higher than merit system minimums require. Many counties either cannot or will not do that.

The members of the board of health in Pitt feel that such will have to be done to obtain a qualified man. All state it will cost between $2,000 and $3,000 to get a man and keep him. However, they do not make the payments; they can only recommend to the county commissioners what salary is needed for the particular man—if one comes along. As yet, it is understood, the board members have not stated to the commissioners a salary minimum needed to get a trained man. But one stated he bought the salary should be as high as $10,000 as an inducement.

An adjoining county has seen the need for hiring the salary to get a trained and experienced man. Beaufort county, which is in a health district with Hyde County, is reportedly offering a salary of $9,000 for a man to fill the vacancy. The last health officer began work last November and quit just recently for another job. A replacement is expected in June at about the $9,000 figure.

Both Sides . . .

bined Senate Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committees.

This one-man show can't last forever, of course, for the Joint Chiefs of Staff—and probably Secretary of Defense Marshall and Secretary of State Acheson—will soon follow him before the Senate Committees to give their views.

President Truman must feel that what they say will contradict Mac-

Arthur, for late yesterday Mr. Truman urged the country to wait until both sides were heard before reaching a conclusion.

The Truman Administration's view is this: the main threat from communism is from Russia, not China, and the main threat is to Europe, not Asia; so defense against Russia has to be built up in Europe; therefore, don't get involved any deeper in Asia, since it would drain away supplies for Europe and might bring in Russia on China's side, starting another world war.

The Truman Administration can not be sure what Russia would do. So it's guessing, when it worries about start of World War III. But so is MacArthur guessing, optimistically, judging from what he told the Senate yesterday.
