Extra Space Seen As Key To Future Of Health Dept.

By JOHN SPINKS JR.

The future of the public health program in Pitt is dependent to a large extent on whether or not the health department gets more room in which to operate.

It was at first thought by the board of health that to get the entire Tucker Building for the beginning of a county health center was the greatest advance the department could make, one that would bring the department into its own, so to speak. Now, however, it has been learned that it might not be a practicable undertaking to renovate the old brick structure in such a manner as to have it meet State Board of Health specifications.

It has been estimated by architects of the Medical Care Commission, the body that holds a major portion of the purse strings for the construction of health centers and hospitals, that a complete renovation would cost in the neighborhood of $30-$35,000. Walls would have to be knocked out and replaced for enlarging of room space, added support would have to be given the second floor of the building, new steps would have to be built—all of these major constructions in addition to the clinical purchases to be made in order to provide the best service available. One of the large items on the clinical bill would be the construction of an entirely new X-ray room with leaded walls and other paraphernalia required to obtain best results.

At the same time the renovation estimate was released by Medical Care this week, the Local Health Administration more or less recommended that use of the building be discouraged while the board of health and county commissioners begin thinking about the construction of an entirely new building. A statement from Dr. C. C. Applewhite, director of the Local Health Administration, indicated the inadvisability of going ahead with plans for the Tucker Building. He stated a new structure, with adequate parking facilities (something that is lacking at the present site) would cost about $60,000 with the county contributing $26,000, and the rest coming from state and federal funds.

He stated that the county should not count on receiving too many funds if it goes ahead with plans for renovation of the present building. Specifications for getting state and federal funds require at least one acre of land for parking space and the building. After the particular site has been obtained and approved, Medical Care would then give the green light to the new construction, provided the county meets its share of the cost.

That is the position in which the health department, the board of health and the county commissioners find themselves at the present time—whether to do minimum work on the present building as a temporary expedient while waiting to raise the funds for a new building, or take the bull by the horns and plow ahead now.

According to information obtained from the county auditor the latter possibility is out of the question. The county finances are bordering on the red ink side of the ledger due to money contributed to Pitt Memorial Hospital, the late renovation of the courthouse and the purchase of Pitt General Hospital last year for use by other county departments. The raising of the necessary $26,000 would only be possible after the end of two or three years' accumulation of funds for such a purpose. Other expedients would be raising of taxes or a bond issue put before a vote of the people.

Although the commissioners have not stated definitely what plan they will follow, they indicated at a meeting last fall when the Tucker Building health center was first proposed that the department would have to settle for minor repairs and a new paint job.

But regardless of what course will be taken by any of the bodies having to do with the future of the health department, the work in public health in Pitt will continue to "rock along" as one member of the board of health phrased it. The money from the county, state and federal governments will continue to flow into the health department budget and, it is hoped by health authorities, will continue to rise from year to year.

The nurses will continue their large task of caring for the sick and investigating the other ailments that affect the county's large white and colored population. And the sanitarians will continue to attack a large portion of the health problem by investigating poor water and disposal systems, testing the milk and making their routine inspections.

But the continuation of an adequate and effective public health program for the communities in Pitt depends upon the recommendations of the board of health and the funds approved by the county commissioners. On the shoulders of both bodies will be carried the provisions of better standards of health in the future.

War Crimes Are Charged To U.S.

HONG KONG — (UP) — The Chinese communist radio at Peiping accused the United States today of using Chinese war prisoners for bacteriological experiments.

It said the Chinese Red Cross had protested against the alleged practice to the International Red Cross.

Peiping also claimed that the Roman Red Cross had charged American troops in Korea with using poison gas.

Saved By Court, Child Goes Home

CHICAGO — (UP) — Cheryl Lynn LaBrea, the "RH" baby who was made a ward of court so that her life could be saved, was home today and in apparent good health. The child's parents had refused to permit a blood transfusion on the grounds that it violated their religious beliefs.

Fighting Red China

MacArthur Firm In His Conviction That The Only Way To Peace Is Defeat Of Peiping Government; His Reasons And The Other Side; Both Have Argument

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

General Douglas MacArthur continues to stick to his guns in warning that the Korean war may explode into another world conflict unless Red China is beaten into surrender.

He maintains that victory could be achieved by all-out air attacks, a naval blockade and the use of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's Nationalist Army on Formosa against neighboring Red China. Chiang has half a million or more troops.

The Washington Administration has rejected these proposals. The majority of the United Nations also have been viewing dimly any extension of the hostilities as likely to precipitate another general conflagration. They would be willing to make a negotiated peace when the Reds have been evicted from South Korea.

One of the great fears of those opposed to the MacArthur program has been that it might result in America and her allies becoming involved in a war on the Chinese mainland. Such a development, they hold, might easily result in the United States being bled white, both militarily and economically.

while Russia was sitting on the side-line and conserving her strength in preparation for war in western Europe.

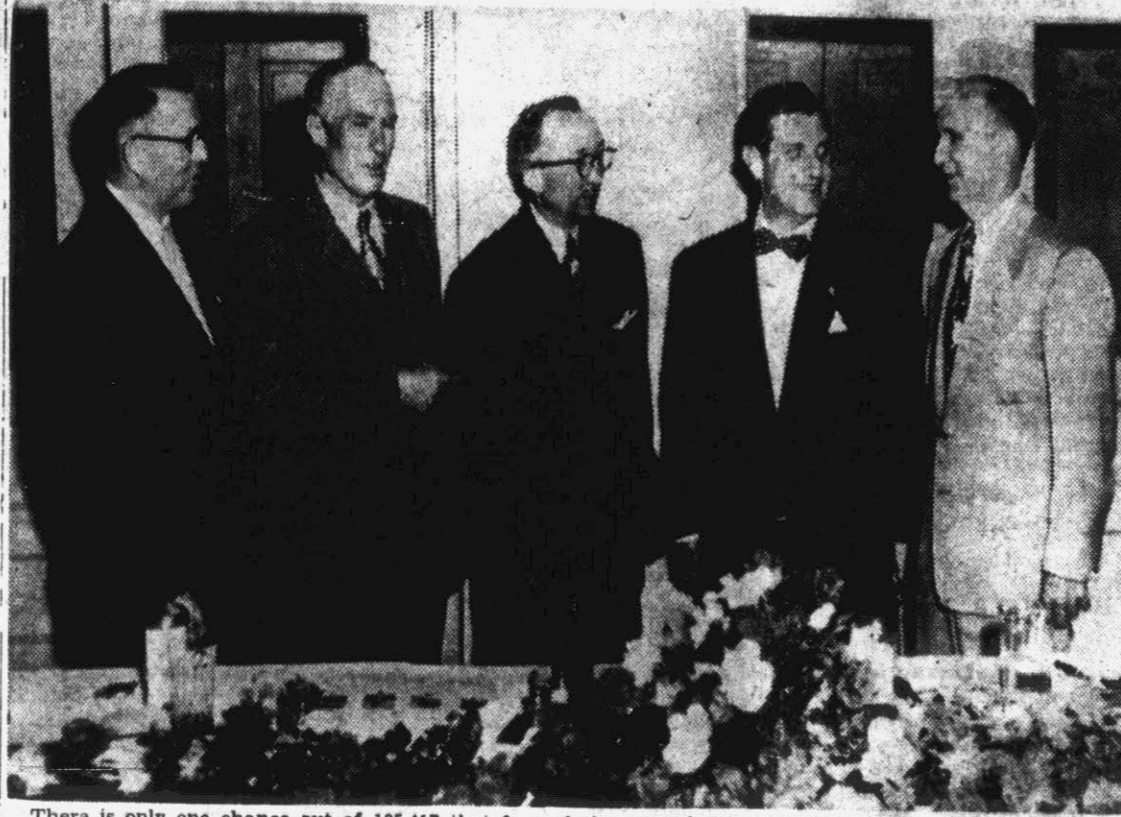

MacArthur has answered that by making plain that he has had no thought of sending American troops into China. In fact he has characterized any such move as insane. It is the Chinese Nationalist foot-soldiers whom he would move onto the continent.

The consensus of military experts seems to be that the best which could be expected, if the war should continue along present lines, would be a stalemate after a long war. And MacArthur declares that this "dreadful conflict" is costing too much in American blood.

As proof of this appraisal the General estimates battle casualties in Korea at 1,000,000 for both sides, with losses for the allies about 250,000. He says American casualties have passed 65,000. Korean civilian losses have been many times the military casualties.

Rare Occasion For Civic Club Leaders

There is only one chance out of 105,417 that four of the men shown above will ever be pictured together for the reason that they were photographed last night. They are district governors of their respective civic clubs in Greenville and were honored during a joint meeting of the Lions, Rotary, Kiwanis and Exchange clubs at East Carolina dining hall. Shown left to right are O. E. Dowd, Lions; Dr. Howard J. McGinnis, Rotary; Dr. Amos Abrams who addressed the banquet; Eli Bloom, Kiwanis; and S. O. Worthington, Exchange club controller. Dr. W. Amos Abrams Addresses Joint Meeting Of Clubs At Banquet Honoring Four

By CHESTER WALSH

"This meeting here tonight of four of Greenville's civic clubs is a wonderful thing, and such assemblies inspire the good neighbor spirit and better living," said Dr. W. Amos Abrams, Edgemoor county and associate editor of the North Carolina Education Association publications, at East Carolina College last night.

Dr. Abrams was felicitating the several hundred members of the Greenville Lions, Exchange, Rotary and Kiwanis clubs at the banquet at the college. He won a warm place in the hearts of those in the audience and profound applause when Dr. John D. Messick, who introduced him, said he had tried to persuade the distinguished educator to join the East Carolina staff. He interspersed his wholesome and entertaining anecdotes with a catching smile that won personal tribute after the meeting. His recitation of the story of the bride who was at a loss for words on her honeymoon and compensated by saying, "I'm glad I'm here," will linger long.

Dr. Abrams congratulated Greenville on having distinguished lieutenant governors in four civic groups—Lions, Exchange, Rotary and Kiwanis. He urged the members not to rest on present laurels, but to plan and prepare to go forward in the work that makes for better citizenship.

He paid tribute to the four honored Greenville citizens, O. E. Dowd,

Peace Resolution

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The Senate has approved and sent to the House a bi-partisan resolution telling the people of Russia this country wants friendship and peace with all the world.

Sponsored by Senator McMahon (D-Conn) and 22 other senators, the resolution was approved unanimously yesterday. It is designed to counter Soviet propaganda that Americans are "war mongers."

Tobacco Export Decline Studied

RALEIGH — (UP) — Farm Bureau and Grange representatives from the five flue-cured tobacco states are taking steps to bolster declining leaf sales in Germany.

Growers from the Carolinas, Virginia, Georgia and Florida voted yesterday to tell Rep. Harold D. Cooley (D-NC) chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, that "we insist that everything be done to assure us of continuation of German markets."

R. Flake Shaw of Greensboro, vice president of the state Farm Bureau, said German purchases from other nations could mean an export loss of some $60,000,000 for U.S. growers.

A committee was established to work with the Bright Belt Warehouse Association to consider opening dates in the five states, hours and rate of sale.

Symington Takes Up RFC Duties

WASHINGTON — (UP) — W. Stuart Symington took over today as administrator of the much-criticized Reconstruction Finance Corp., succeeding five directors. Symington was sworn into office late yesterday.

Congress approved of a single administrator for the RFC after sensational hearings during which a Senate Banking Subcommittee accused the five-man directorate of currying White House and Congressional favor in making loans.

Chinese General Queries His Fifteen GI Prisoners

By GENE SYMONDS

United Press Staff Correspondent WESTERN FRONT, Korea — (UP) — The dapper, round-faced Chinese general smiled at the 15 G.I. prisoners.

"If I release you, will you go home to your families and stop fighting us?" he asked in English. Allied planes roared overhead, hunting for the communists' camouflaged positions. The general spoke contemptuously of U.S. air power.

The 15 American infantrymen told about the interview today after 5 1/2 days in enemy hands. Intelligence officers believed their release was a propaganda move.

The returned prisoners, whose names were withheld, said they were treated well since their capture April 29.

4-H Coronation Conducted Today

Kings and Queens Of Health Crowned At Court House

Impressive exercises marked the coronation at the courthouse at noon today when Negro senior and junior kings and queens of health were crowned. The Pitt County Negro 4-H Council sponsored the annual event.

There are 23 4-H clubs with 1,200 members in Pitt county. Their activities cover a wide range. The membership is steadily increasing and the results of the "missionary work" done by the 4-H club school boys and girls are evident in the homes.

Miss Idell Jones, Negro assistant 4-H Club specialist of Greensboro, crowned the kings and queens. Senior king, Moses Foreman, Farmville 4-H Club, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Foreman of Farmville.

Senior queen, Helen Snell Grimley, Ayden 4-H Club, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Foreman of Ayden.

Junior king, James Henry Braxton, Ayden 4-H Club, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Braxton of Ayden.

Junior queen, Shirley White, Falkland 4-H Club, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Braxton, Greenville, Route 1.

Rev. P. H. Munford, pastor of AME Zion Methodist Church, said the invocation. Four-H Club members recited the club pledge and the Eppes High School Band played a selection. Miss Mattie Monk, president of the Pitt County Negro 4-H Club Council, made the address of welcome.

Miss Julia Fisher, supervisor of Pitt County Public health nurses, read the health report.

Rev. Henry L. Reaves, librarian, Fayetteville State Teachers' College, made the address.

Rev. H. R. Reaves, principal and 4-H Club leader of the Griffin school, presented the speaker.

Dennis D. Dupree, Negro county farm agent for a third of a century, recognized special guests.

The parade started at Ninth street and Dickinson avenue. Bauds from the Ayden, Farmville and C. M. Eppes Negro high schools, headed the parade. Negro boys and girls, members of Pitt County 4-H clubs, participated.

T. T. Mitchell, assistant Negro farm agent; Mrs. Amelia S. Capehart, Negro Home Demonstration agent the past 10 years, and Mrs. Margaret H. Wade, assistant Negro Home Demonstration agent, were generous in their praise of the Negro 4-H Club leaders for the success of the crowning of the health kings and queens.

Allies Gain Back Korean Yardage

Troops Push Lines Forward Several Thousand Yards North Of Seoul After Brief Fire-Fight With Screening Forces

By FRANK TREMAINE

United Press Staff Correspondent TOKYO, Sunday — (UP) — Allied troops pushed their line forward several thousand yards northwest of Seoul Saturday after a three-hour battle with communist screening forces.

The advance narrowed the no-man's land between United Nations lines and communist troop concentrations in the hills above Seoul.

Troops on the west-central front 12 to 15 miles east of Seoul pushed their lines forward several miles Friday.

The advance northwest of Seoul met no opposition Saturday morning. During the afternoon the Allies ran into a communist regiment. They fought the Reds for three hours and forced them to pull back.

A tank-infantry task force smashed into and beyond Uijongbu, 11 miles north of Seoul, during the day. It was the fourth time the tanks have reached Uijongbu this week but the first time they have gone beyond.

The tanks found only minor opposition south of Uijongbu. They moved north of the town. These Reds forced the Allies to withdraw.

The Allies took the initiative all along the front, stabbing into communist-held areas in efforts to learn more about preparations for the next round of the Red spring offensive.

Small groups of Chinese attacked the Allied line northwest of Seoul last night, but they were repulsed easily. Allied artillery fired on another enemy patrol early today southwest of Uijongbu.

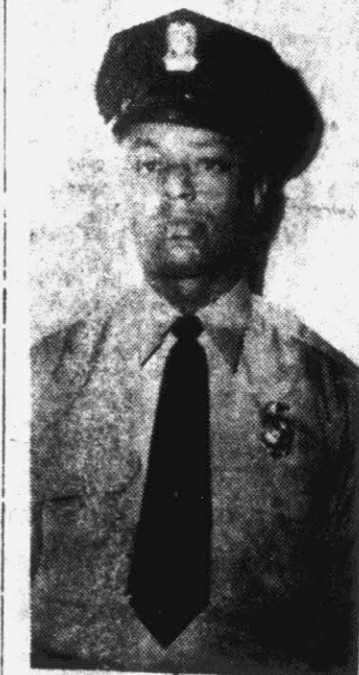

Heavy clouds which have blanketed the western front for three days were expected to lift, paving the way for resumption of full-scale U.S. air attacks.

Eighth Army holding forces advanced cautiously all along the front yesterday to gain closer contact with the reluctant enemy.

Tank patrols ranged out ahead of the main forces, but found few communists in no-man's-land except in the far west. There, two Red regiments dug in behind a broad minefield threw back Allied units.

On the eastern front, a South Korean attack was stalled by stiffening North Korean resistance in the high mountains east and east southeast of Inje, five miles north of the 38th Parallel.

Evict Students Over Fireworks

NEWARK, Del. — (UP) — More than 100 students at the University of Delaware hunted new quarters today because they refused to say who set off firecracker blasts that rattled their dormitory.

All 104 occupants of Harter Hall were tossed out by university officials last night. For eight months pyrotechnics in the building had started unsuspecting campus strollers.

Authorities ordered all of the windows of the hall nailed shut and the locks changed so the youths couldn't slip back in and spend the night.

Many of the evicted students slept on living room floors of the nine campus fraternity houses; some got shelter in private homes; and still others went home for the week-end.

The students had one last fling. As they departed they set off a string of firecrackers in the doorway, locked a watchman inside and posted signs out front which read: "Dormitory for Sale" and "Fireworks Display Cancelled."

Short-Lived Cease-Fire In Middle-East Fight

TEL AVIV, ISRAEL — (UP) — Syrian and Israeli forces resumed fighting today in the Lake Tiberias border area for the second time since a cease-fire was agreed to yesterday.

Both sides charged the other with firing the first shots. An Israeli spokesman, David Landwer, said the Syrians drove more than a half mile into Israeli territory. He said the Syrian attack was repulsed with artillery and mortars.

A Syrian military spokesman in Damascus said the attack was launched by Israeli forces in the demilitarized area between the two countries early this morning under cover of an artillery and mortar barrage.

The Syrian spokesman said seven Israelis were killed and 20 wounded in this morning's attack. Total Israeli casualties in the last 24 hours and 27 killed, he said. Heavy firing broke out last night after three hours after the agreement and was resumed again this morning, according to the Israeli spokesman.

Two U.N. field observers were scheduled to visit the battle area on the slopes of Tel Motilla hill today. It was not known in Tel Aviv whether they got through.

Landwer said the Syrian forces cut one kilometer (5/8ths of one mile) into Israeli territory west of the demilitarized border zone in their first attack this morning.

"We repelled the Syrians," he said.

He described it as the 20th attempt by the Syrians in three days to capture the strategic height on the lake's northern tip.

A second Syrian attack a few hours later was beaten back, he said. He added that Syrian fighter planes appeared over the area but were not attacked because they did not open fire.

United Nations chief of staff, ended a conference with acting Israeli Premier Moshe Sharett here and took off for his headquarters in Beirut, Lebanon, after receiving the news.

An Israeli military spokesman blamed the Syrians for the renewed fighting.

New Values Are Needed

A Feeling Of Purpose In These Decisive Days Felt Lacking By American People; Old Basic Conceptions Fading; They Seem To Want New Rock For Their Faith

By ROGER BABSON

BABSON PARK, Mass.—Unless the leaders of our country can rejuvenate the common spiritual values which give meaning and purpose to the New World, America is licked as the leader of free nations.

America Adrift I get lots of letters these days asking me, "What can a man believe, anyway?" They come from business managers and production line workers alike. One man is as confused as the next. One does not like labor unions. Another does not like government bureaucracy. The next doesn't want price fixing. Still another doesn't want the United States fighting wars in Korea. But all have a good word to say for General MacArthur.

MacArthur reports that Japanese intellectuals have been shocked by the inability of even our military officers to tell the Japanese what we believe in as a nation and what our long-term objectives are. We don't want the tyrannies of Hitler or Mussolini or Stalin. We don't want British Socialism. We don't want Communism; but, for the moment, we want Mac-

Arthur! We are fed up with the political mumbo-jumbo out of Washington. We are relieved and encouraged to find someone who has a policy, even if we don't agree with it.

What Americans Want I think most Americans want something substantial they can grab hold of—something to believe in, an ideology, a creed, a way of life. Something with more substance than a 50-cent "vollar bill." There was a time when the Church gave a meaning of life to people. Apparently this isn't fashionable any more. Our neglect of the spiritual has brought about a great cultural lag in Western civilization.

What was it that satisfied so successfully the wants of our forefathers? Certainly, it wasn't fast automobiles, television, the 40-hour week or a soft life. I believe the happiness and success of our ancestors in this country was the result of their spiritual and courageous approach to problems. The roots of our vitality are not economic. They

Cake Cutting On Friday Follows Wedding Rehearsal

Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Howard entertained the Penny-Huffstetler wedding party and out of town guests at a cake cutting which followed the rehearsal on Friday night at the First Presbyterian Church.

Miss Huffstetler was wed today at high noon to George A. Penny, Jr., of Lynchburg, Virginia, in a ceremony at the First Presbyterian Church.

The entrance hall, the living room and the dining room of the Howard home on Maple Street was decorated in a bridal motif throughout. The starry in the hall was entwined with ivy and satin ribbon, which terminated in a graceful bow. The punch table in the living room was covered with a lace cloth, and the crystal punch bowl was encircled with mock orange blossoms.

Miss Nan Howard presided at the bride's book, which was on a table in the hall. This table was graced with a large, low bowl of pansies. Pink tulips, white gladioli and fern were used elsewhere throughout the home.

and mock orange was banked on the piano as a background. Guests were greeted at the door by the host and hostess. They were invited to the punch table, where Mrs. G. A. Penny, Sr., mother of the groom, poured punch. In the dining room, the table, covered with a white linen cloth, was centered with a three tiered wedding cake, which was topped with a miniature bride and groom. A pair of crystal candlesticks bearing white tapers were used on each side of the table.

Mints in green and white and salted nuts were placed in silver serving dishes. Miss Cora Huffstetler cut the cake after the first piece was cut by the bride couple. Assisting in serving were Miss Sharlene Howard, Miss Alice Rowe and Miss Martha O'Hara Rowe.

Chapter 12

When Jeff awoke, dusk had fallen and the room was shrouded in gloom. He could dimly discern somebody seated on the edge of the bed and he said, "Hello. What time is it?"

"It's around seven," said Ruth Starr.

He said coldly, "What are you doing here?"

"I came to see how you are. It was a terrible thing Buddy did, but he was drunk and didn't know what he was doing."

"He wasn't too drunk to pick me out of a dozen others. And when he missed once he tried it again."

"I know; but, Jeff, he's such a kid. You called him a boy and he's determined to prove that he isn't. That's why he got drunk. He just can't drink and he thinks he won't be a man until he can."

"Don't try to excuse him; I'm about fed up with Buddy Starr."

Her voice was tight. "You have every reason to feel as you do. I'm not trying to excuse him, I'm just trying to explain. You see—" She stopped, took a breath, then plunged. "I think he has a crush on Diana Denton and he knows you're out there and—thinks that—that you're somehow in his way."

Jeff thought this startling information over. She volunteered no details and after a moment he said, "That puts a different light on things. A very different light. Somebody killed Dan Denton and you've just furnished a clue to the murderer. I think Buddy would make a damned good suspect."

She got up quickly. "How can you even suggest such a thing?"

"He seems to take quickly to killing, and if he was in love with Mrs. Denton—"

"Buddy didn't kill him! Jeff Payne, I hate you for that! Good-bye! She almost ran from the room and she slammed the door behind her."

Sam Cooper swung off his horse outside the Double D gallery and when Jeff awoke, dusk had fallen out of the house. She said, "Oh, it's you, Sam," looked over her shoulder into the house, then pulled the door shut.

He said, "I suppose it will have to be chairs. I'd rather it was the hammock but the conventions must be observed. In public, at least."

She shrugged prettily and sat down on a chair.

"I came out to tell you that Jeff Payne is recuperating from a wound given him by Buddy Starr. He observed her closely and decided that her start was caused more by surprise than by concern for Jeff."

"What happened to Buddy?" she asked.

Sam told her about it. "Jeff was not hurt badly; he'll probably be out in the morning. By the time the men get back he'll be rarin' to go. Has he told you his plans?"

"No. I left everything in his hands. He'll find a way, I'm sure. She smiled at him. "I offered him inducements."

Sam returned the smile a bit wistfully. "Clever gal! How does he take Ben and Walt?"

"Like so much castor oil. But he understands."

Sam nodded. "You're playing a dangerous game, Diana. You're playing with human emotions. Strong ones, the strongest of all of them, love and hate. Walt and Sam can shoot themselves full of holes for all we care, but Jeff is the man who can drive the Starrs out and we can't afford to lose him."

She shrugged. "I can handle him."

"I think you can. But a slip would be fatal."

He went down he steps, mounted his horse and rode away.

When her men came in for supper, Diana told them about Jeff and gave them their orders. When she had eaten, she went out and sat in the hammock and gazed over the valley at the sunset. The range she surveyed and the castle on it were hers. Or would be when the Starrs had been driven out and Walt and Ben disposed of. There would be a kingdom of cows, ease, wealth, power. It was a pleasant dream.

The dream lasted while the sky darkened and dusk gathered, and so intent upon it was she that she did not hear Ben Dowd's approach. He halted his horse before the gallery and swung to the ground. She looked at him a bit startled. He said, "Evening, Diana," and came up onto the gallery, and there was a purposeful set to his jaw that warned her what to expect.

She said, "Why, Ben! Come right over and sit here in the hammock with me. I've been wishing that somebody would drop in."

He said, "Thank you, Diana," and sat down in the hammock. He leaned back and slipped his arm around her shoulders. She moved a little closer to him.

He cleared his throat and said "Diana, I ain't much on speech-makin', I'm a blunt man and I talk blunt. I told you I love you and want you for my wife and you sorta hinted that you might consider my proposal after a decent time had passed. But meanwhile I see Walt Kirk sneakin' over here to call on you and it's just more'n I can stand. You told me to wait, and I respect your opinion in the matter, but I figger we could have some sort of understandin' so you could sorta hint to Walt that he needn't hang around no longer."

"But, Ben, I can't. Walt's a friend of John Starr's; if I were to tell him that he mustn't come over any more he'd want to know why, and if I said it was because of you he'd go over to the Starr's side at once."

"That's just what Jeff Payne told me, but I wanted to make sure. He answered her question before she could ask it. "It was Walt in the ford this mornin'. I'd seen Walt come over and I was comin' to have a showdown with him. Jeff talked me out of it, but I made up my mind to see you and settle things once and for all."

Diana turned and her soft fingers caressed his leathery cheek. "You poor boy!" she cooed. "You must not be jealous of Walt Kirk. What in the world could I possibly see in Heber B. Tripp, born and educated in Greenville.

Lived in an adopted city for 32 years where he took an active interest in civic affairs.

Returned to his home town 11 years ago where he immediately took an active interest in boy and girl scouting, civic drives, etc. Aided in organizing recreation and four years ago was elected chairman City Recreation Commission in which he has spent much time and some of his own money to build it up to what it is now.

Elected on Board of Aldermen four years ago where he has served faithfully and in an outstanding way as chairman City Sanitary Committee, especially, mosquito control and rat drives, etc.

Four years chairman Parks and Swimming Pool where he has spent much time not only for the youth but safety.

Two years as chairman Cemetery Committee where land has been extended and improvements to all cemeteries.

Two years on the Street Department's Committee where he has personally promoted getting opened four important dead end streets over two miles of new streets opened, ditches drained and tiled. Has taken an active interest in city planning.

Heber Tripp is not connected with any political group or interest. He is a friend of labor and the poor. In other words Heber is an all-around good citizen, progressive and well worthy of your vote for Alderman Ward 1.

TO THE CITY VOTERS

I am a candidate for Alderman from the 4th Ward of the City of Greenville, and I solicit your support in the election on May 7th.

If elected, it is my sincere wish to serve my city to the best of my ability and I shall endeavor to perform my duty faithfully and conscientiously.

Cordially yours,

ROBERT LEE (BOB) SMITH

LESTER D. PAGE For Mayor

I am proud to say that I am a citizen of the City of Greenville and have served the people for 22 1/2 years. I believe in Greenville 100%. I know most of our citizens and most of them know me. My record is clear. I showed no favorites while filling the position as your chief of police and if elected your mayor, I promise to do my duty in being fair to all: I bear no malice toward anyone. My desire is to serve the people, not any particular group. I shall make every effort to make Greenville a better place to live in.

Your Vote and Support Will Be Appreciated

FARMVILLE—Fifteen lovely young ladies from the very heart of the Eastern Carolina bright lead tobacco belt will compete for the title of beauty queen at Farmville's first annual "Farmers' Day" celebration here next Wednesday, May 9.

The beauty contest will be held at Monk's Warehouse at 8:15. Contestants must be from rural communities of less than 2,500 population. The winner of the beauty contest will be crowned queen and receive $100; the runner-up will receive $50, and the winner of the third place, $25.

Contestants for beauty queen will appear in the parade at 1:30 and they will be guests of the Junior Women's Club for supper.

High school bands from Goldsboro, Tarboro and Farmville and the East Carolina College band and drum and bugle corps will lead the "Farmers' Day" parade.

Members of the Girl Scout Troop who attended May Day at East Carolina College Tuesday were: Sylvia Taylor, Betty Vic Gaskins, Anne Purser, Shelby Jean Fulcher, Vivian Lockhart, Linda Butler, Emogene Willis, Janet Taylor and Betty Smith. They were accompanied by Mrs. Mildred Guthrie, Mrs. Bill Fulcher, and Mrs. Harry Smith.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLAS
FOOTPRINTS
The word "miracle" in Chinese is expressed by two characters which mean "the footsteps of God." When a miracle has occurred, this means that God has been present, and the miracle is the evidence of that divine presence—the print of his feet in the circumstances which make up our lives.

There are many people in the world who disbelieve in miracles. But it can be said with considerable confidence that the reason why they disbelieve in miracles is because miracles are so common. The world has become miracle-hardened. The order of nature, the rotation of the seasons, the flowering of the field, the appearing of the starry host—all these show forth a divine power which we take as a matter of course.

Just ponder the fact that every human being is physically the result of the coming together of two cells no minute to be seen by the naked eye, and that each of these cells contains all of the hereditary characteristics of all the ancestors who have come before. No, you say, this is just the working out of natural law. But what is natural law? Natural law is only the pattern of God's activities in the physical world.

When something happens which is beyond your power to account for, begin looking closely at the circumstances, and you will see, as the Chinese say, the footprints of God.

The City Election; A Privilege And Obligation

The election of public officials is one of the most important functions of the people of any municipality. If a representative group of men are to hold office in a city, they must be elected by a representative group of citizens. They must be elected by the vast majority of the citizens.

In past elections it has been true, and in future elections it will continue to be true here in our democracy: the poor public officials are elected not by the people who go to the polls and cast their ballots, but by the citizens who sit at home on election day and let the other fellow do the voting.

Monday's city election indeed is an important election here in Greenville. The people of the city must elect a mayor who will head the city administration for the next two years, and they must elect five members of the board of aldermen who will be part of the city's governing body for the next two years. The voters must also choose a judge and a solicitor for the city records court.

Monday, for the first time in many years, every eligible voter in Greenville has a right to voice at the polls his choice for an alderman from each ward of the city. Each member of the board of aldermen from now on will be elected by the majority of all the voters of the city... not just a majority of the voters from the particular ward he represents.

The voters of Greenville have had 30 days to give careful consideration to each candidate who is running for a city office. During that time the voters should have evaluated the qualifications of each candidate and should have decided which candidates will make the most capable city officials. But the opinion of the individual voter will amount to nothing if he does not cast his ballot on Monday.

Greenville needs now, and will need in the coming years, the most capable officials it can possibly have. On Monday every qualified voter in the city should assume his obligation to vote in the election. Every qualified voter should exercise his priceless right to participate in a free election.

Congratulations To Our "Four Governors"

A fitting tribute was paid last night by the members of the four Greenville civic clubs to four Greenville men who head the activities of the Rotary club, Exchange club, Kiwanis club and Lions club in this section of North Carolina.

It is a great honor for any city, and particularly a city the size of Greenville, to have among its citizens the men who in this section of the state head four of the most active civic organizations. The men who were honored at the "Governor's Night" celebration last night were Sam O. Worthington, member of the State Board of Control of the Exchange club; Eli Bloom, Lt. Governor of the Seventh Division of the Kiwanis club; O. E. Dowd, governor of District 31F of the Lions club and Dr. Howard McGinnis, governor of District 279 of the Rotary club.

The positions in which these four Greenville citizens have been placed by the members of the civic clubs of this section of North Carolina speak not only of the high achievement which these four have attained in civic activities, but likewise of the active participation in civic affairs which the Greenville clubs have taken in eastern North Carolina.

The Reflector joins the people of Greenville in offering its congratulations to the "Four Governors" and to their respective civic clubs.

Perhaps More Programs On Local Government

The panel discussion between four candidates for the office of mayor of Greenville and four local citizens which was broadcast over WGTC Thursday night was viewed with a great deal of interest by a large number of Greenville citizens.

It brought into better focus for the voters of the city the objectives of the individual candidates for mayor if elected to office. It brought the city government a little nearer to the people.

The Reflector believes a series of programs concerning our city government such as the two which have been sponsored recently by WGTC and the Junior Chamber of Commerce would help to stimulate public interest in local governmental affairs. Greater interest on the part of the people generally, should result in the election of better public officials to local offices, and more efficient local government.

National Whirligig

News Behind The News
By RAY TUCKER
Every Saturday this veteran Washington newspaper correspondent devotes his column to answering readers' questions of general interest on national and international policies and personalities. Questions may be sent direct to Ray Tucker at 6308 Hillcrest Place, Chevy Chase, Md.

WASHINGTON—Many of my Republican friends," writes S.F. of Yonkers, N.Y., "insist that Senators Kefauver and Fulbright pulled their punches in the crime and R.F.C. investigations. They think that the Senate investigators could have uncovered even more scandalous conditions, if they had not been influenced by the fact that Democrats were being hurt. Is that so?"

Answer: It is utterly untrue, in my opinion. I have been covering Congressional investigations since Teapot Dome and Harry Daugherty days, and I do not believe that any of the earlier chairmen or counsel—Tom Walsh, Bert Wheeler, Hiram Johnson, Jim Reed, Thad Caraway, Ferdinand Pecora etc.—ever did a better job.

OBVIOUS—It is true, of course, as it is with all these inquiries, that neither committee spreadeagled the field. That is almost impossible. And it is not necessary. Once the center of a cancerous condition is exposed, there is no need to show in detail the remote effects. They are obvious even to a layman.

Senator Kefauver's report revealed that half a dozen or more big-time crooks, operating out of New York, Florida, Chicago, Kansas City and Missouri, ruled the underworld, and looted the public of an estimated $15,000,000 annually.

It was not essential to show that these rings had tentacles in some of the committee members' states, such as O'Connor's Maryland, Tobey's New Hampshire and Wiley's Wisconsin, or even Kefauver's Tennessee.

COURAGE—More importantly, perhaps, the investigators disclosed and have reported that organized crime could not exist without the paid protection of the police and politicians. Although the Chicago revelations helped to defeat former Senate Majority Leader Lucas and many other Democrats, they also tended to discredit Republicans in other sections—Dewey in New York and former New Jersey enforcement officials.

Rarely have young members of the party in power—Messrs. Kefauver and Fulbright—had the courage to lay bare that party's long-time connection with big-time criminals, as in New York City. The report's castigation of the Truman-O'Dwyer deal, which was plainly an attempt to cover up, is almost without precedent in Congressional annals.

EVIL—In view of President Truman's violent reaction to the Fulbright disclosures, I don't understand how anyone can think that this investigation was a phony. Here again, in the Young and Dawson cases, the committee did not hesitate to make clear that the most evil political pressure exerted on our leading agency stemmed from the White House itself.

I know of an instance in which the Fulbrighters might have fingered a Kansas City Democratic clique more dramatically. That was the infamous Tommas oil loan of $10,000,000, where Democratic politicians and bankers were involved, as well as influential Republican firms in Boston. But that would have been mere ornamentation.

PAWNSHIP—The Fulbright committee achieved its purpose, which was to inform the public that the present Administration had transformed the R.F.C. from a sound financial agency into a political workshop, at tremendous expense to the taxpayers. Pending proposals to reorganize the R.F.C. reflect the success of the investigation.

Last, the result of both inquiries suggests that, along with attacks on the Truman-Acheson foreign program, the principal contention of the opposition next year will be that the Democratic Administration has become "content and corrupt" as a result of its long tenure in office.

"CRAWL"—Why does the United States," exclaims E.H.P. of Northampton, Mass., stand for insults from such gangster Soviet satellites as Hungary and Czechoslovakia? In view of the important concessions Hungary got for Robert Vogeler's release, it will look to all the world as if any nation can kick Uncle Sam in the teeth and get away with it. Now, Czechoslovakia will probably use this precedent when we try to free William Oatis, the imprisoned Associated Press correspondent.

Answer: Most of my correspondents share E.H.P.'s wrath, even though they rejoice over Mr. Vogeler's release. But they regard the several concessions as a "crawl" on our part. The only official explanation I can obtain is that Mr. Vogeler could not have been freed unless we granted Hungary's demands. Despite our humanitarian purpose, it is outright "appeasement" on a small scale.

BANDIT—The episode recalls the way Theodore Roosevelt handled a similar episode. When a Moroccan bandit named Perdicaris was ransomed for an American citizen named Perdicaris—as I recall, he was only a naturalized citizen, too—R.R. sent the following message to the Moroccan ruler in whose territory Raisul was operating, presumably with official connivance:

"I want Perdicaris alive or Raisul dead!" Perdicaris was freed immediately. We got apologies instead of giving concessions. Of course, Harry Truman is not a Theodore Roosevelt. To be fair, however, nations and individuals live in a far more complicated and explosive world than they did in the early years of this century.

Nevertheless, as E.H.P. notes, this is another kick in the teeth for American unrealistic!

Don't Let It Fool You, Joe—

Somebody Told Me

By L. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR

Last night I was reading in the Press section of Time magazine about the new method of setting newspaper type. As I read I thought to myself, "Well, it's a pleasure to live in an up-to-date town. The Reflector uses that system." Immediately after that statement, I saw that Time magazine is also aware of the fact that the Reflector uses the new method; in fact they quoted our publisher:

"Said Publisher Dave J. Whickard Jr., after a U.P. test run at his Greenville (N.C.) Reflector (circ. 5,277): 'I can operate three linotype machines with only one man.'"

The circulation of Time magazine in 1949 was 1,558,245, so by now there should be somebody in every state (and in many foreign countries) in the union that knows there is such a place as Greenville, N.C.

You never can tell what will gain national recognition. Since I can remember, photographers and writers from national magazines have been coming to events in Eastern Carolina, taking pictures, writing stories, and saying, "This will probably be in the next issue." That "probably" is a big word, for not yet have I seen the articles. Examples: Life magazine representatives were recently in Greenville to do a story on the draft. Life has been to the Wilson tobacco festival several times without printing the story, they have done the same at Chapel Hill. Evidently the big magazines use about one-third of what they gather.

Frankly, I had seen the Reflector story about the new typesetting system, and had seen the unit in operation, but I didn't know that this was the first operation of its kind in the country. Actually, experiments have been made with this system as early as 1918, but this is the first press-service teletypesetting system.

The system went into operation last week from Charlotte. At six o'clock in the morning an operator sat down and punched out a 250-word story. As he finished, the editors in seven newspaper offices (including the Reflector) received a perforated piece of tape from a receiving machine and fed it directly into their typesetting linotype machines. In less than five minutes the AP story was in type, ready to be dropped into the newspaper forms.

The Associated Press plans to extend its seven-paper system to the majority of afternoon dailies in North and South Carolina and later into Virginia and Tennessee. The United Press does not plan to be left behind. UP had a successful test run from Atlanta, and will begin feeding nine North Carolina dailies beginning this week. Another 25-paper UP network will open in Oklahoma next July.

The editor can read the news he's getting from the printing service, and therefore edit the tape by comparing the two. After editing, he can feed the tape into the machine and let it set the type for the paper. Local stories can be punched out too, by a machine much easier to operate than a linotype. To reduce our publishers' three machines can be operated with only one man.

And I thank you.

GREEN—How green is green, or to paraphrase the title of a famed book and movie, "How Green Are Our Hills?" Your reporter has been privileged within the past month to traverse a large part of North Carolina, the travel lines radiating from Raleigh to Wilmington to Charlotte, to Bugg's Island, to Brevard. This state is so big that the triangle represented by points at Wilmington, Bugg's Island and Brevard includes less than half the total state area; but it embraces practically all of the multiple types of terrain, soil and vegetation. However experienced the traveler may be, he is always newly amazed at the variety of beautiful scenery and color. This is the green season, and except for occasional spots of colored flowers everything is green. But everything is not the same color. There are dogwood and rebud, many species of azaleas and other flowering shrubs dotting the wooded hills and valleys.

In the yards there are borders of verbena and phlox, riotous beds of poppies and early roses, and many other cultivated flowers. Despite these contrasting splashes, the dominant color is green.

VAREGATED—Some of the new maple and elm leaves are lemon green, almost yellow; some of the oak buds have a tint of rose, while other budding leaves justify argument whether they are green or brown—and always everywhere there is the background of coniferous olive hue as to seem almost black. The cultivated fields and pastures afford similar variety in shades of green, with occasional white or crimson clover patches and numerous yellow flowers breaking the monotony. One can look for miles across the rolling piedmont and see almost nothing but green, and yet be enthralled with the entrancing pattern of color variety, such as no human artist could portray with a paint brush. And, speaking of paint, it is also noted that the unpainted home or church is conspicuous for its rarity. Not so many years ago the painted farm building constituted a sort of landmark.

PROMISE—There are some raw and bare places, but even these give assurance that they will not long be bare. It is more noticeable from the air but discernible from the highways that the green forests and pastures and grain fields are interspersed with acres of newly plowed crop lands. These raw fields afford almost as much variety in color as do the wooded areas. Some are white sand, glistening in spring sunlight; some have dominant reddish brown clay, and others are almost black. If travel speed is not too fast the observer can see in most of these fields faint lines of green where cotton or corn or beans or some other plants are just breaking through the soil with promise of later covering the raw earth with green—and still later decorative pockets of the farmers with another highly prized type of green goods.

DIVERSITY—The folks who have preached diversity in North Carolina can present tangible evidence of success. There are still a great many farms and small communities which put too much dependence upon one crop. There are sections where tobacco or cotton too largely dominate the farming economy. There are some farms which have gone too far and too fast in all-out change to other crops, poultry or livestock. An observant traveler over the state, however, cannot fail to be impressed with evidence of progressive diversity. Beef and dairy cattle are moving into the peanut and tobacco areas of the east. Sheep and poultry are becoming more important all over the map.

MECHANIZATION—Electricity and gasoline power adapted to machines designed for their special purposes have taken most of the backbreaking burdens off humans and animals. On a recent 600-mile trip your reporter saw only one one-horse plow in operation and very few horse-drawn vehicles. There were dozens of tractor-drawn farming implements—each doing several times the work of the old time equipment which it replaced. The clothes line with garments fluttering in the wind may still be found at most farm homes, but the wash tub and the wash pot are relics to be cherished as memorials of a custom which the electric washing machine outmoded.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

PEDESTRIAN'S RIGHTS

(Kinston Free Press)

In traveling about the country in large and small municipalities we've had occasion to observe traffic regulations with regard to the protection of pedestrians at stipulated street intersections and crossings.

In quite a few there are electric signs which read "Walk" or "Don't Walk." These are good and where traffic officers are vigilant and require pedestrians to observe them few accidents occur.

In Baltimore, we believe, we had occasion to observe the best protection being given pedestrians by traffic officers at the intersections. We noticed in several instances that pedestrians have the right of way where there were traffic lights and when the signal is "green." They not only have the right of way when the signal is green, but when they start on a green signal they have a right to get to the other curbing. Pedestrians have the right of way at any regular intersections of streets where a walk lane is marked.

It would be well if the local traffic officers would pay a little bit more attention to the rights of pedestrians. It wouldn't take long to educate "the average motorist" who thinks he is in his rights when he toots a horn and who usually is driving a model of some 10 to 15 years ago vintage.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER
Business may be rudely shocked one of these days soon when the House Ways and Means Committee comes up with concrete proposals for increasing government revenue. The nation is sailing into the end of the fiscal year on June 30 with a surplus, contrary to earlier predictions. The surplus is quite temporary, however. It's due to the facts that the military have not been spending money on material as fast as expected and that, because American income is high, tax payments have exceeded estimates.

Higher rate of spending in the coming fiscal year will wipe out the surplus and require higher taxes in addition.

Congressional sentiment appears to be against a further boost in corporation and personal income taxes during the present calendar year. However, a rise in rates is not impossible, especially in personal rates. In the meantime, the House committee is exploring the possibilities of more excise taxes. This week it has been considering applying a 20 per cent excise tax to all manufactured goods, except those already taxed. Under consideration are levies on furniture, floor coverings, wall coverings and glassware.

Unless the market changes sharply by the time the new imposts are levied, such taxes would be a midriff blow to the furniture and home furnishings industry, already staggered by credit controls, high shipping rates, margin controls involving rollbacks, threatened reduction in home building and by a decline in sales.

If such a tax were levied on manufacturers' sales without provision for taxing goods already in retailers' hands, it would give an advantage to those who built up their inventories, since these stocks would escape the tax. If it were levied on retail sales, the full impact on sales would be felt on the effective date of the tax.

The new excise tax is still in the talking stage, with no firm commitments as to exactly what classifications of goods should be taxed or exactly what the rates should be. If the Committee sells itself on the idea, there will be public hearings at which time both merchants and manufacturers may be expected to rise in wrath and tears to protest. Their chief argument will be that such taxes are regressive, in that they fall more heavily on low and moderate income groups.

DINETTE MAKERS PREPARE FOR FUTURE
A large number of dinette sets in wood are appearing on the market. While controls have not yet shut down production of metal sets, manufacturers are preparing for that eventuality and are trying to popularize wood lines now.

To this end, most of them are using good design and styling and ingenious applications of plastics.

SKIPS CONTRACTORS
"I have an item for you with a moral," announced the Old Promoter on his weekly visit. "A friend of mine is moving his business to a new suite of offices."

"He's a pretty sharp fellow. Hired his own carpenters to make partitions, and other changes, paying a contractor's mark-up. Bought all his own furniture and new equipment, scouring the market and getting the best prices he could. By handling every detail himself, he figures he saved $200. I'll confess he did a good job, too."

"That's fine," we said. "And the moral is that if you want something done cheaply, do it yourself."

"Well, no," said the O.P., with a sly grin. "It took him about three weeks. He makes about $10,000 a year. So I calculate that doing it himself cost him a neat $370. You figure out the moral."

Moral: A good item from the Old Promoter is always worth a good cigar and he knows it.

SEES NYLON HOSE LAST TO BE CUT

Hosiery will be the last to be hit by any future nylon shortage, Earl Constantine, president, told the National Association of Hosiery Manufacturers at a meeting in Atlantic City. He pointed out that production of nylon hosiery increased 14.6 per cent last year and said that if armed forces requirements are stepped up, other uses of nylon will be curtailed before stockings.

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK—(AP)—The Chinese puzzle for today is why nobody in high circles thought the Chinese Reds would enter the Korean War.

General of the Army Douglas MacArthur and the Administration are still playing "you-catch-the-hot-potato" at that question.

Each blames the other. The arguments can be summarized like this:

"Listen, General Mac," says Harry Truman, "you are supposed to know more about the oriental mind than anybody since Confucius. How come those Chinese slipped across the Manchurian border and clipped you before you even knew they were there? You told me at Wake Island they wouldn't come in."

"Don't try to pass the buck to me on that one, Harry," says MacArthur. "Of course, I did say they probably wouldn't come in. But you got a world-wide spy system—the Central Intelligence Agency. How come it didn't warn me the Chinese would fight us?"

"How come you wouldn't even let our Central Intelligence Agency even operate in Tokyo until last January?" replies Harry—or one of his boys.

"Tommyrot!" says MacArthur. And back and forth the arguments go until the ordinary man gets completely confused. All he knows is that the Chinese Reds ARE in Korea.

The whole debate must have a great laugh to the Chinese Premier, Chou En-Lai. He is the man who publicly told the world in advance what to expect. To paraphrase him, Chou said last fall: "Now, boys, you got the North Koreans on the run. But if you United Nations fellows go across the 38th parallel—well, we Chinese aren't going to stand idly by."

The top U. S. brass, including both MacArthur and the Central Intelligence Agency, knew the Chinese were massing troops along the Manchurian border. But they thought it was all a big bluff.

A below-the-top-brass Intelligence officer I knew in Korea at the time didn't think the Chinese were kidding at all.

"I don't think we should cross the 38th parallel," he said, "because I think it will mean we'll have to fight the Chinese. I believe Chou means exactly what he says."

"The Chinese don't want any big foreign land army marching right up to their order, and I don't think they'll let us—if we can stop us. But if we don't cross the parallel they won't have much of an excuse to come into the war."

Pointing out that great powers having the armies of other great powers get too close to their frontiers, he said:

"Remember what Stalin did in the last war when Hitler attacked Poland? He went into Poland, too, to keep the Germans from getting too close to Russian soil."

And this officer made some wry remarks about the public's idea of what Army Intelligence work consists of.

"They believe you get your information mostly through spies," he said. "That is nonsense. The cloak and dagger stuff is only about ten percent of intelligence. The other 90 percent is piecing together all the scraps of knowledge you get without espionage—and making them into the right picture."

"Usually it isn't the intelligence that was faulty," he said. "The information is there—but the interpretation is faulty. And you can't blame intelligence for that."

The entry of the Chinese Reds into Korea, he said, illustrated his point. Their Army was ready. Their Premier openly warned it would be used under certain conditions—and it was.

And he thought the American failure to believe the Chinese Premier's threat was less of a reflection on our intelligence system than upon the traditional American military habit of lowering the enemy.

Washington Letter

WASHINGTON—A unique educational system set up after World War I for the children of workers in a Stuttgart, Germany, cigarette factory, is now taking hold in this country, as well as in numerous nations abroad.

Known as "The Waldorf School Movement—the Open School for the Open Society," it was developed by the late Dr. Rudolf Steiner, an Austrian philosopher-educator. It boasts a unique, unbroken 12-year curriculum aimed to "create a harmonious balance of all the abilities and forces of the child."

Currently in Washington, for the first international art exhibit of the movement, Miss Katharine Phelan of New York, chairman of the board of directors of the Waldorf School Fund, describes it as a form of education designed to "develop the whole child, not only with the skills to meet modern conditions, but with the moral strength to meet them in a practical way."

"Art, for instance, is not taught as a separate subject but is used to develop a child's imaginative research. Other subjects are taught through lecture and discussion, rather than through text books," she says.

During the Nazi regime in Germany the movement was suppressed, Miss Phelan says. Since 1945, however, 24 schools have arisen within the Western Zone with British, French and American approval.

"No distinctions of religion, or race are made. No child is turned away merely for financial reasons," Miss Phelan explained. More than 60 co-educational Waldorf Schools now have been established in 14 countries, with more than 14,000 students, she says. In addition to England, Norway, Germany, Austria and the United States which are represented in the art show here, other countries in which the schools have been set up are Argentina, Holland, France, Denmark, Italy, New Zealand, South Africa, Sweden and Switzerland.

Waldorf Schools in the United States are the Rudolph Steiner School, New York; High Mowing School, Wilton, N. H.; Kimberston Farms School, Phoenixville, Pa.; the Waldorf School of Adelphi College, Garden City, Long Island, and the Nursery School at Spring Valley, N. Y.

"While the plan believes in discipline and achievement," Miss Phelan explains, "it aims mainly to present the schools' subjects in an interesting and creative manner to stimulate good working habits, instill respect in children for society and bring them up as well-balanced and cooperative young people."

Catawba Indians Take 10-6 Verdict Over Pirate Nine

Visitors Send Seven Runs Across Plate In Second Frame For Safe Margin Of Victory

Catawba College scored a 10-6 North State Conference victory over East Carolina's Pirates yesterday afternoon in a game played at College Park.

The visitors sent seven runs across the plate in the top of the second inning to grab an early lead and went on from there to top the Pirates by the 10-6 margin.

The Indians' big inning was paced by six hits, two errors on the part of East Carolina players and a wild pitch.

Jimmy Byrd, who was on the mound for the Bucs, aided his own cause as he rapped out a single, double and triple in four times at bat.

For the Indians, Bob Bradley led the attack of the winners with two hits in three official trips to the plate.

East Carolina scored one run in the bottom of the first, one in the fourth, two in the fifth, and one each in the seventh and eighth, but never could muster enough power to overcome the lead held by the Indians.

Billy Smith and George Graybill each gathered in two hits apiece for the losers.

Jimmy Byrd allowed 11 hits and walked four batters while Baker of Catawba gave up 13 hits and one base on balls. Each of the two hurriers struck out two batsmen.

Magli Tosses One-Hit Game For Giants Over Pittsburgh

By CARL LUNDQUIST

United Press Sports Writer

Pitcher Sal Magli of the Giants, an easy-going soul, isn't mad at anybody except Pittsburgh batters and he only hates them one at a time.

His indignation today was directed at Pete Castiglione, who broke up his no-hitter in a very unusual manner yesterday—on the second pitch of a game which the Giants won, 5 to 1.

Not a Pirate batter got past first base after the second inning as Magli turned in one of the great jobs of his career, with elegant hitting support.

In the other National League games, the Braves regained first place by defeating the Cubs, 9 to 3; the Phillies outlasted the Cardinals, 6 to 5, and the Reds upset the Dodgers, 5 to 4.

Meyer was only part of the colorful Philly hurrier's contribution in the victory over the Cardinals. He also delivered the key hit, a bases-loaded two-run single which put Philadelphia ahead for good.

The Athletics scored three in the fourth inning and made them stand up for their third victory of the year as Lefty Alex Kellner pitched six-hit ball to edge Early Wynn in a duel.

Detroit's anemic hitters came to life for their best run production of the season against the Red Sox as Hal Newhouse worked steadily all the way to achieve a five-hit victory, his first of the year.

Cincinnati came from behind to score three runs in the fifth and edge the disappointing Dodgers on an infield out and a pair of singles by John Framessa and John Wrosteck.

The Yankees, mopping up against the weaker western clubs, came through strong in the late innings to provide Lefty Ed Lopez with his fourth victory against no Defenses. A terrific catch by Jackie Jensen cut off one budding Brown-

Chicago Carrasquel doubled to score Gus Niarhos in the 11th and give Chicago the victory that knocked Washington out of first place. Eddie Yost hit a two-run homer to tie up the game for Washington in the eighth.

Greenville voters will go to the polls Monday to select from a list of 21 candidates eight city officials who will serve two-year terms of office beginning July 1.

For the first time in many years, the voters from all sections of the city will have a voice in the election of the aldermen from each ward of the city. An amendment to the city charter which was passed by the 1951 General Assembly placed the election of the local aldermen on a city-wide basis rather than by the voters of just the particular ward which the aldermen will represent on the board of aldermen.

The pre-election political scene in Greenville this year has been one of the quietest in a number of years, but local observers have expressed the opinion that this is one of the years when the voters will express their convictions on local politics at the polls rather than in the street-corner bull sessions.

Only five races have materialized in the election in which eight officials will be elected. Capturing the principal attention of the people of Greenville is the five-way race for the chief administrative post of the city. Former County Attorney Sam B. Underwood Jr., former Chief of Police Lester D. Page, Assistant City Tax Collector Herman H. Duncan, Marshall F. Clark, manager of the Greenville Funeral Home, and Clarence H. Bryant, manager of the Dixie Bargain Store, are vying for the office of mayor.

Incumbent Alderman R. E. (Yank) Howell of the third ward, and incumbent Alderman R. E. Rogers of the second ward are unopposed in their bid for reelection as Incumbent Solicitor Eli Bloom of the recorder's court.

In the race for the position of judge of city recorder's court, Incumbent Judge J.W.H. Roberts is seeking reelection and is opposed by Attorney Charles Whedbee, David Harris, sales manager of the Aroelite Sign Company, and the Rev. W.T.C. Briggs.

A four-way race has developed in the election of the alderman from the fourth ward of the city. Incumbent Walter M. Pollard is seeking reelection and is opposed by Robert Lee Smith of the R. L. and W. L. Smith Company, Harry V. Spreitler of Carolina Plastics Company and James H. Little, former member of the Greenville police department.

In the first ward, Alderman Heber B. Tripp is seeking reelection and is opposed by James W. Brewer of the

SHORT-HAUL MAIL
NEW YORK K. (UP) — Mail shipments between New York and Newark, N.J., will be made by trucks at midnight tonight to save $250 a day in rail costs, under a money-saving plan to use trucks for short-haul mail cargo.

On a high cliff in the Bavarian Alps Ludwig II built his castle. More than a home, it was a fortress, a safe place for a king to live in dangerous times. Ironically enough, Ludwig died only a few years after he had completed his castle. He didn't really get much use out of it after all. Down the valley there stands a little church. It is not nearly as imposing as Ludwig's castle. But it has been home and fortress to thousands through the trials and spiritual battles of life. Honestly now, which is truly a man's castle? The one he builds and in which he lives — or the one that BUILDS HIM, and in which he WORSHIPS?

THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

College Band In 'Lawn Concert' Here On Tuesday

The East Carolina College Band will stage its annual lawn concert next Tuesday afternoon, May 8, at 8:15 on the campus just west of the Administration building. Herbert L. Carter band director, and four senior students of music will share honors as conductors during the afternoon's program.

Boyd Elliott of Thomasville, Nell Dean Owen of Asheville, Ethel Clement of Oxford, and Lee Rogers of Rocky Mount have been announced by Mr. Carter as the seniors chosen as conductors for the lawn concert. All have recently appeared at the college in graduating recitals marking the completion of this spring of their work as students in the department of music.

The band has chosen for next Tuesday a program of light, popular music, pleasing for rhythm and tunefulness. Selections will be made up of marches and compositions by modern composers. Among numbers will be Gershwin's "Embraceable You" and "I Got Rhythm," Hoagy Carmichael's "Rock in Chair," Rogers and Hart's "Where or When," and other favorites among contemporary popular numbers.

The concert will be open to the public.

Fighting Red . . .

(Continued from page one) to fight a major war and believes that it wouldn't last long. He holds that Red China is "only a couple of jumps ahead of starvation at any time" and lacks the industrial base for modern war.

So far as China's impoverishment is concerned, there can be no argument on that score, as I can testify from personal observation on the ground. And certainly the Soviet Union would face grave difficulties in trying to give material support to her big satellite.

New Values . . .

(Continued from page one) go deep into the ethical and spiritual soil. Today the trouble is that a startling lack of religion has crept into our national economic thinking. Ask the average person what has made America great and he will probably reply, "our vast resources and our unparalleled production system." People who think this way have the cart before the horse.

Spiritual rejuvenation I am not a social scientist. Anthropologists tell me, however, that in order for any society, primitive or highly civilized, to hang together, it must have a courageous but simple rational creed, a set of spiritual values with strong emotional appeal which give meaning to life. This, I believe, is what we have lacked in the Western World since the disillusionment of World War I. This is what most Americans today long for—a vital, creative, forward-looking creed. We would like more brave leaders to help implement our beliefs for us. Many Americans do not like MacArthur's methods, but his forthrightness appeals to everyone.

Perhaps it is a defect that too many of us voters are waiting for someone else to come up with a real creed. This isn't the way our forefathers operated! They thought their policies out for themselves. I think more of our political, labor and business leaders need to take time to think, pray, meditate, and see if they can't rediscover life's essentials.
