Chinese Moving Up Under Protection Of Rain, Mud

Spring Rains Bog Down UN Army; Allied Warplanes Driven From Skies By Weather; Red Probing Attacks Expected, Though Big Offensive Not Yet Ready

TOKYO (UP)— Allied and Chinese communist troops exchanged artillery fire across a rain-drenched no-man's land in Korea today. Small enemy groups were reported merging into one large striking force for the expected major assault on United Nations forces. The spring rains for which the communists have patiently waited finally came. The U.N. army was bogged down in the sticky mire and Allied warplanes were driven from the skies. The moment the rain started falling, the enemy began his expected moves. He massed his forces and pressed them into a bridgehead which stabbed like a dagger five miles into South Korea. American troops patrolling no-man's land said the bridgehead, south of the Soyang River, appeared to be widening. On the western front, Allied tanks flushed out an enemy company for a brief skirmish of the type which has dominated the war in the past three weeks. The weather was the chief Allied

'Great Debate' In Korea Deals With Red Plans

Officers Argue Whether Chinese Now Able To Force Military Decision

By NATE POLOWETZKY U. S. 8TH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, KOREA.—(AP)— Allied officers in Korea have their own version of America's "great debate." The question here is: Have the Chinese Communists finally massed enough strength to force a military decision in Korea—assuming they want to? One group answers with an emphatic "Yes." Their argument: "The Reds have more tanks, more artillery, more reserves and—most important—more airplanes based in North Korea than at any time since they entered the war last December. "The April 22 Communist push was not an all-out offensive. The Chinese attacked only because they were goaded by our incessant air and artillery attacks. That attack was premature. It was a reflex to our constant stinging into their lines, like a swarm of hornets attacking when you prod their nest with a long stick. "The Chinese are ready for the big one. They are getting replacements. Heavy rains are coming and they will hurt the mechanized United Nations army more than the Chinese. Low ceilings are holding down tactical air support. "When the Chinese strike again they can mount an all-out drive designed to destroy the United Nations army or drive it into the sea. "That's one view. "Other officers are just as emphatic in rebuttal. "The Chinese supply system is bad. They haven't got the means to bring food and other equipment down from Manchuria. Our air force is playing havoc with the little transport the Chinese have. We have pretty well destroyed their supply routes. "Therefore, the only thing they can do is mount short and shallow offensives, designed to penetrate our positions. Once that penetration has been made, the Communists hope they can find a new food supply. Then they can go on to exploit the breakthrough. "The key to the puzzle probably lies in the answer to this question: "Do the Communists actually want to reach a military decision in Korea?" No one knows.

Baruch Endorses Global Concept Of U. S. Policy

Elder Statesman Honors Marshall; Urges Mobilizing Of More Strength

LEXINGTON, Va.—(AP)— Bernard M. Baruch today upheld the concept of global defense against communism and hailed Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall as "history's first global strategist." In his first formal comment on the controversy stirred up by President Truman's firing of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, the elder statesman called for a huge increase in the military strength of the United States and her allies in order to ensure success in a global defense program. Baruch did not mention MacArthur by name, but in a speech prepared for delivery on "George Catlett Marshall Day" at Virginia Military Institute, he said: "I wonder how much of the controversy in recent days is really a reflection of the difference between the leader of troops and the organizer. "A great leader of troops naturally is zealous in desiring that when his men become locked in battle that every resource be marshaled which might increase the chance of their winning or decreasing their losses. The very qualities which made him so valiant a leader of troops would make him impatient of any limitations on his action. "An arch was to be dedicated to Marshall, a VMI graduate, at the ceremony honoring the U. S. Secretary of Defense. Baruch, a presidential adviser in two world wars, has differed with President Truman at least. Baruch said in his address that he put the concept of global defense, which "saved the free world once and which can save it again," ahead of any other consideration in U. S. policy planning. But Baruch said that global defense could occur only by a tremendous increase in the military strength of the UNITED STATES and the rest of the free world. "Many issues have become involved in the raging controversy over Far Eastern policy," Baruch said. "I would not want to seem to be answering or dismissing them. Still, I would like to put forward this one thought of my own: much of our trouble is the result of military weakness. "In our present situation, whatever is attempted on behalf of peace, must fall short, because of a lack of supporting military strength. "We are trying to enforce a global doctrine of opposition to communism with a military establishment which is sorely strained by the demands of only one theater. "Many of the issues—and choices—raised by the controversy would solve themselves if more of America's strength were mobilized. Until we have mobilized, few if any of the issues which have been raised can really be solved. "There is strength in unity. But there is also unity in strength. We—our allies as well as this country—must first grow stronger militarily before we can have a unified foreign policy."

Omar Bradley Warns U. S. Not Ready For 'Showdown'

C-of-C Directors Unanimously Endorse Power Exchange Plan

Swartz Addresses Board; Pitt-Greenville Airport Franchise Appeal Consolidated

Directors of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce last night unanimously endorsed the proposal for an interconnection of lines and an exchange of electric power between the Greenville utilities and the Virginia Electric Power Company. The city's final action on the proposal is expected to be taken Friday night at a joint meeting of the aldermen and the utilities commission. Martin Swartz, superintendent of the local utilities, met last week with the executive committee of the Chamber of Commerce to discuss the interconnection proposal, and the executive committee last night discussed the matter with the directors of the Chamber of Commerce. Manager W. T. Kyzer of the Chamber of Commerce last night informed the directors of the organization that the Pitt-Greenville airport commission received yesterday notification that the commission authorized the compilation of briefs and designated legal representatives of the commission in the event the consolidation of the docket was authorized by the CAB. Following the report of the transportation committee last night, the directors of the Chamber of Commerce voted to postpone action on a proposal of the Shippers Traffic Association of Raleigh for the checking of local freight bills and rates. Manager Kyzer was instructed by the board to make efforts to contact a reputable auditing concern which would check for overcharges on local freight bills on a percentage basis. If desired by the members of the Chamber of Commerce, the organization would act as sender and receiver for the freight bills from local business firms to be checked by the auditing concern. The board accepted the report of the agricultural committee and adopted the seven-point program of specific projects for the year which was recommended by the agricultural committee. Kyzer was instructed to attend the annual meeting of the North Carolina Chamber of Commerce executives which will be held at Fontana Village August 2, 3 and 4. President F. Badger Johnson presided at the meeting.

Military Spokesman Says Striking Red China Would Start War With Wrong Enemy At Wrong Place And Wrong Time; Believes Present Strategy 'Paying Off'

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Gen. Omar N. Bradley said today the United States is not prepared for a global "show down" with Russia. He testified that to strike directly at Red China would "involve us in the wrong war" with "the wrong enemy." Nothing would "delight" the Kremlin more, Bradley told senators, than for this country to adopt Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Korean war strategy and carry the fighting to China. The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff was before the Senate Armed Services and Foreign Relations committees at their hearings on the dismissal of MacArthur from his Far Eastern commands for publicly quarreling with the administration's Korean policy. Bradley began by paying tribute to MacArthur's "illustrious career," adding that he would not "say anything to discredit" it. Then he tore into MacArthur's arguments and contentions about Korean policy. Denis Divisio Bradley said it was "just not so" that the President, Secretary of State Acheson and Secretary of Defense Marshall "have a policy all their own, and that the Joint Chiefs of Staff have been overridden." He did not attribute that statement to MacArthur, but MacArthur, when testifying before the "Reds" said he wanted the Joint Chiefs to "assume" they were taken by President Truman or Secretary Marshall. Bradley said, too, the Joint Chiefs who are the top military planners for the Army, Navy and Air Force, were in a better position than any theater commander to assess the risks of World War and the country's military resources. Increased Risks MacArthur had expressed doubt his hit-at-China proposals would bring on war with Russia, and had declared he believed this country had the strength to meet the communist threat wherever it appeared. But Bradley said the Joint Chiefs believe MacArthur's plan for blockading Red China, bombing Manchurian bases and using Chinese Nationalist troops would increase the risks of World War II. "Red China is not the powerful nation seeking to dominate the world," Bradley declared, adding: "Frankly, in the opinion of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, this (MacArthur) strategy would involve us in the wrong war, at the wrong place, at the wrong time, and with the wrong enemy." Highlights Here are other high spots of Bradley's testimony: 1. He believes the administration's "global strategy" of avoiding all out war with Russia at this time "is paying off." 2. "Our present strategy" is no guarantee that a world war will not be thrust upon us, but he believes "a policy of patience and determination without provoking a world war, while we improve our military power," is the one to follow. 3. There is "real danger" of Russian intervention if all-out war is carried to Red China, although it is "anybody's opinion" about the degree of the risk. 4. No proposed military directive of the Joint Chiefs in the Korean war has been disapproved because

Weather Delaying Tobacco Growers

Cool Nights And Light Rainfall Means Pitt Tobacco Crop Will Get Into Ground Later This Year Than Last

Cool nights and a smaller than usual amount of rainfall will delay setting out all of the tobacco crop until later in the month. That's the report from tobacco men who have observed the county crop during the past several weeks. The concern is that the crop will get into the ground later this year than last, although it wasn't until the first of May last year that farmers could begin setting out due to a lack of any rainfall whatsoever during a six-week period. This year planting began in the middle of last month in some sections. There were intermittent rains during April and March which moistened the ground enough to warrant setting out. And although the rains have been intermittent since then, the amount of fall has not been enough to assure best growing conditions at the outset. Even so, though, the number of new barns being constructed indicate a better than usual crop next fall. Farm agents report new barns are going up all over the county, called for by the increased acreage during past seasons. Both S. C. Winchester and S. J. Weeks, farm agents, stated the number of new barns being built will not be adequate to handle this year's crop, even though there are plenty going up. Most farmers, Weeks said, have smaller barn space than their crop requires and they depend on squeezing every bit of tobacco into them as possible. And even though some farmers have received a two- or three-acre increase this year, they probably won't build a new barn to handle the increase. On the other hand, said Winchester, a new barn will pay for itself in one season. "If a barn is really needed," he said, "and it is used just one time during the season," it will pay its way during the season." He based his opinion on the increased yield that new varieties have produced in the past several seasons. And because of the yield nowadays, he said, any farmer would be justified in building a

Heavy Docket On Tap For Monday

Next Monday marks the opening of the biggest civil term of superior court in the history of Pitt County. In addition to 16 cases set for trial, the clerk of the court has scheduled 100 extra cases for hearing in an effort to clear the docket of as many old cases as possible. All cases will be called for disposition that were instituted prior to May 20, 1946. The oldest one to be called was begun in superior court in 1928. Clerk D. T. House, Jr., stated all will be called out in one session. "If there is anything to them" and if not, will be stricken from the docket. Judge Leo Carr will preside during the next two weeks of court. The week of May 28 will be a mixed term for trial of civil and criminal cases. That will be Carr's last term in the spring circuit.

Iran To Expel Oil Field Workers If Oppose Grab

TEHRAN.—(UP)—Iran threatened today to expel all British oil field workers if they oppose seizure of the British-owned industry by the Iranian government. Indications were the seizure might come quickly. Britain retaliated by alerting 3,000 men of the crack 16th Parachute Brigade for possible duty overseas—perhaps in the Persian Gulf area where the big refineries of the Anglo-Iranian Oil Co. are situated. The tense situation sent British Foreign Secretary Herbert Morrison hurrying back to London from a holiday. If British troops intervene in the oil field seizure it "will mean the beginning of the third world war," the secretary of the Iranian Parliamentary Oil Committee warned.

Farm Promotion Agenda Adopted

Seven-Point Program Approved By Commerce Body A seven-point program for the promotion of specific agricultural projects in Pitt County during the year was adopted last night by the Greenville Chamber of Commerce upon recommendation by the organization's agricultural committee. The program adopted by the Chamber of Commerce included plans for the promotion of poultry raising on Pitt County farms, a junior calf show next fall, and a combination fat stock show and sale of beef cattle and hogs. The specific projects incorporated into the organization's agricultural program were: 1. Co-sponsor with Pitt county agents and agricultural agents, a junior purebred swine show at the Pitt County Fair. 2. Cooperate in the promotion of the Pitt County Agricultural Fair with the committee members rendering such services as possible to make it an agricultural event. 3. Continue efforts to get construction either by private local capital or otherwise, a government approved grain drying and storage plant. 4. Offer to the 4-H club and FFA officials the assistance of the Chamber of Commerce in the sponsorship of a fat stock show and sale of beef cattle and hogs, with a definite appropriation for the project to be determined when further details of the project are worked out. 5. Consider the co-sponsorship of a junior calf show on October 10 and 11 provided adequate show and judging space can be obtained. The show would cover the "stern half" of North Carolina and is expected to attract 100 to 150 exhibitors. 6. Assist further providing the artificial insemination program such assistance as necessary as the need arises. 7. Study with the assistant county agent in charge of club work the possibility of inaugurating the Sears Roebuck plan of poultry club projects, this company providing 10

Known Clues To 'Mystery Blast'

Langston Indicates Camp Lejeune Personnel Involved The smoke has cleared away from the "bomb scarred" area on Dickinson Avenue since yesterday's early-morning scare and with it police are hoping to "make arrests." It has been definitely determined that someone threw the giant firecracker out of a passing car in the early morning. Chief of Police Guy Langston stated this morning he believes the person or persons were Marine Corps personnel stationed at Camp Lejeune and hopes to make an arrest this afternoon. "We have the license number of the car and also the base tag," he said. Working on that information SBI agent S. G. Gibbs and police detective N. H. Byrd have been dispatched to Camp Lejeune today to investigate with Marine authorities. Langston, however, didn't say how the license number of the car was obtained. And instead of "the thing" being something used by military personnel, Langston stated it was some type of fireworks that explodes several times in the air after being fired from the ground. The cardboard cartridge was marked "R-5," the chief said, which indicated it had five reports after being set off. "The people out there on Dickinson only heard three reports," he said, "which makes us believe two of the canisters inside fizzled out." Whoever the persons are who set off the explosion will be indicted under a misdemeanor, he said. They can be prosecuted for setting off firecrackers and also for disturbing the peace, he said. Gibbs and Byrd went to Cherry Point yesterday with the cardboard container that was found in the street immediately after the explosion. It was determined there the firecracker was not military property and also that the persons who dumped out were not Cherry Point personnel.

Big 'Guessing Game'

Boiled Down To Its Fundamental Issues, The MacArthur-Truman Debate Hinges On Guessing As To What Russia Would Do; A Summary Of The Viewpoints

By JAMES MARLOW WASHINGTON —(AP)— Enough has now been said in the most publicized guessing game of years—the Truman-MacArthur dispute—to see what the main points are and to examine them. This is certain: both sides are guessing on what would happen if this country followed General MacArthur's ideas for widening the Korean fighting. MacArthur gave his views to Senate committees. And for parts of seven days Secretary of Defense Marshall has explained to the same committees the opposing views of the Truman Administration. Many issues have been injected into the dispute, such as these: Was the President right in firing MacArthur? (Not even MacArthur questions the President's right to do so) Was MacArthur wrong in going to the public with his views, over the President's head? But all the issues are secondary to these three questions which have emerged as the main points in the whole dispute: 1. Would widening the war— which MacArthur suggests as a

Salute Returning Men From Korea

WASHINGTON.—(UP)— Maj. Gen. Courtney Whitney, chief aide to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, will be retired May 31 at his own request, the Army announced today.

SAN FRANCISCO.—(UP)— A 17-gun salute will be fired today to honor 1,442 Army veterans of the Korean War, the first to return home via San Francisco under the Army's new rotation plan. The men are expected to sail beneath golden gate bridge late today. At that time, the salute will begin booming out and an escort of Army and Navy planes will fly an aerial guard honor. When their ship docks, they will be greeted by Maj. Gen. James A. Lester, commander of the Port of Embarkation. Also on hand will be film actors Dick Powell, Alexis Smith, Mercedes McCambridge, Craig Reynolds and Richard Conte. After the ceremony, the veterans and their families will be allowed to get together at Camp Stoneman, where the men will be processed for leaves and new assignments.

N.C. Etchings Given To Community Art Center

The Louis Orr etchings of North Carolina buildings and beauty spots which were featured as the main exhibit at the Arts Festival in April, were so well received by the public that the members of the Board of Directors of the Community Art Center felt that they should become the permanent property of the Art Center where they can be made available to the residents of the community at all times. The Art Center had no money with which to buy paintings, but a call for contributions was favorably received and the response so generous that all ten volumes and the "State Capitol" have been purchased and money to have all of them framed is in hand. Contributions were made by the following: M. K. Blount, Robert Lee Humber and the Woman's Club each gave one volume; S. T. White of the North Koreans made proper use of it.

Red Spies Stand Trial; Had Secret U.S. Plans

TOKYO.—(UP)—The Communist ringleader of a North Korean spy ring had the "top secret" plans for the Inchon landing a full week before the operation took place last September, a United States Army prosecutor charged today. Maj. Robert M. Murray, chief prosecutor for the International Provost Court, said the secret document containing the information on the Inchon was found in the possession of Yoshimatsu Iwamura, 38, the spy leader. The prosecutor said the information possessed by the Japanese spy could have turned Gen. Douglas MacArthur's dramatic "behind-the-scenes" landing into a debacle had

Unity Of Big Three

Further Consolidation Of Western Policies In Far East; Inter-Dependent For Survival; Decisions Hinge On Common Interests; Not All A One-Way Street

By DEWITT MACKENZIE There are no political or economic interests which begin to touch the importance of that fact: The Big Three must stand together for security. Mr. Churchill's statement obviously was tacit recognition of America's vast strength and consequent leadership. He declared that the Labor (Socialist) government should avoid giving the United States the impression that, while Americans carried the heaviest load in Korea, Britain "pulled at their coat tails and read them moral lessons in statecraft and the love that we ought to have for China." Shortly after the Conservative leader resumed his seat, the government announced that the hasty criticized rubber shipments to Red China had been halted for the rest of 1951. Then yesterday the United Nations took its sweeping action, with Britain and France's approval, the measure. This came after both Britain and France had made a fight against American insistence on the arms

Veteran Is Told Feared Ailment Is Not Cancer

TUCSON, Ariz.—(UP)— Former Marine David J. Arellano, whose plea for treatment brought Congressional action to admit Korean War veterans to VA hospitals, was "overjoyed" today to learn he does not have cancer. The 21-year-old Arellano was denied treatment at a veterans hospital because the law provides free government treatment only for veterans of declared wars. He was admitted to Pima County Hospital where physicians diagnosed his ailment as granuloma, an infection of throat glands, and not cancer as originally believed. Arellano's case was placed before President Truman, who asked Congress to rectify the situation. Congressmen responded with legislation giving Korean War veterans equal rights with those of world war II. He was transferred to Tucson Veterans Hospital to be treated for the throat infection.

Annual Garden Club Picnic Held Saturday At Andalusia

More than one hundred Garden Club members and guests assembled on the spacious and beautiful lawn of "Andalusia," suburban home of Mrs. Owen Marshburn on Saturday, April 13, for the annual picnic and last meeting of the club year.

Mrs. W. J. Stell, president of the club, graciously welcomed everyone. She gave a condensed report of the year's work, told about the forthcoming annual meeting of the State Council of Garden Clubs to be held at Wrightsville Beach this week, and introduced the new officers for the local club: Mrs. W. E. Dole, vice-president; Mrs. J. W. Teisterman, corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. Hicks Corry, treasurer; Mrs. J. C. Clifford, reporter; Mrs. J. E. K. R. as president and Mrs. J. E. K. R. as recording secretary have another year to hold office.

Mrs. W. E. Dole presented the program for the afternoon. Several flower games were played. A large bowl of various flowers had been arranged and each member was asked to name the flowers. Mrs. J. Lindsay Savage won the prize, an African violet, for naming the most. A popular feature of the annual picnic is a modeling of hats trimmed with fresh garden flowers. Mrs. L. C. Eickman and Mrs. J. B. Kittrell received the same number of votes for the most original hat and each received as a prize a blooming anemone.

Miss Eunice McGee introduced Mrs. T. E. Hooker, the speaker for the afternoon. Her introduction was given in the form of a very clever rhyme, composed by her and enthusiastically received. Mrs. Hooker was charmingly gowned in a native Hawaiian Holoamu costume. She wore leis she had made of various colored rose buds and sweet peas. Mrs. Hooker told of her recent visit to Honolulu, described many beautiful flowers she saw while there and gave a short history of the island on which Honolulu is the chief city. Complimenting the visit to Hawaii as presented by the speaker was a group of Hawaiian dances given by students of the Marie Wallace Dancing School. Those taking part in the dances were Sarah Adams, Hannah Proctor, Mary Dunn Beatty, Lou and Lib Rogers and Ann Wallace.

At the close of the program Mesdames J. D. Messick and J. K. Long, co-chairman for the hostess committee of the afternoon, invited everyone to the terrace where a beautiful supper was served. The table was decorated a la Hawaiian.

First Graders Present Program For Parents

On Thursday morning, May 10, the first graders at West Greenville School, under the direction of their teachers, Miss Agnes Fullilove and Mrs. R. L. Wolff, presented a delightful program of songs, rhythm band numbers and singing games to a large and appreciative audience.

The program was given on the lawn in front of the school building, and guests were pre-school children who will enter the first grade next year, their mothers, and mothers of the pupils taking part. The rest of the grades in school were also present.

The program opened with the children singing a group of spring songs. As they sang "May Baskets," they presented to their mothers gay little May baskets, filled with colorful flowers, which they had made themselves.

The rhythm band numbers were well received by the audience. Singing games were beautifully done and the favorites with the audience were "The Snail" and "Jump Jim Crow."

The program grew out of the music activities in which all the children had taken part throughout the year. Mrs. T. M. Watson, who accompanies them in their rhythm work all during the year, played for the program.

At the conclusion of the games ice cream was served to all new and old first graders and their mothers.

Rites Begin For Griffon Seniors

GRIFTON—The Rev. Burkette Raper, Free Will Baptist minister, now doing graduate work at Duke University, preached the baccalaureate sermon to the senior class of Griffon High School Sunday night, May 13, in the school auditorium.

Raper spoke on world conditions today saying our trouble comes from our human relations, not only with our country but peoples of the world. He gave a pattern in three words by which we could make the world better: "Worship the Lord and know that he is God; Work, not only about our tasks each day but be co-workers with God and for Him; and Wait."

In this day and time," he stated, "there is too much hurry and we are always doing so much that when called upon for just a small task which might be of help to our fellow man, we are too busy. We first must worship, work, and then learn to wait upon the Lord."

A special tribute was made to mothers by the speaker when he said, "We owe so much of the success in our life to our mothers. It is true that the father provides the means for the family but it is the mother that sees to the other comforts and gives us the encouragement and incentive that we need."

Preceding the sermon, Mrs. Mae Eure played "God of Our Fathers"; the invocation was said by the Rev. Horace C. Quigley and Rev. E. W. Downum led the prayer. The glee club, with Mrs. William May taking the solo part, gave "Sanctus" as a special number.

The procession was led by Ethlyn Koon and Vance Abbott, marshals and the other marshals were Ruby Hoffman, Hazel Wilton, and Eva Westbrook. Senior mascots are Brenda Lee Mumford and Walter Bryan Haddock.

Kiwanis Clubs Hold Session In Farmville

By CHESTER WALSH
FARMVILLE—Fellowship and the good neighbor spirit featured the supper meeting of the Greenville and Farmville Kiwanis clubs at the High School Cafeteria here last night.

Farmville President Charles S. Eiw... reported that the club realized a substantial profit from the sale of hats and drinks. He thanked businessmen who donated merchandise for the enterprise. Allen said "Farmers' Day" was a success and that next year it will be a greater success.

While Allen was on his feet he introduced Billy Capps, golf "pro" at the Farmville Country Club.

In his parting message, President Edwards announced that the Farmville Kiwanians are planning to attend a meeting with the Greenville club in June. He recognized Mrs. Lena Tyson as the "sweetheart of the Greenville Kiwanis Club," and in turn, presented Miss Anne Bynum, pianist, as the "sweetheart of the Farmville Kiwanis Club."

Rev. Thad Cox said the invocation. Earl Holmes led the singing of Kiwanis songs.

Last night's meeting was the second inter-club meeting held here. The Farmville Club was host to the Stantonsburg Kiwanis Club in April.

Aries Book Club Meets With Mrs. Derrick

The Aries Book Club met at the home of Mrs. J. O. Derrick on Thursday night, May 10, with 14 members and three visitors present.

In the absence of the president, Miss Grace Outland, vice president presided. The secretary's minutes and the treasurer's report were given. Members who had attended the annual Book Club Day gave a report of the meeting to those present who were unable to attend.

Mrs. Marshall Starkey reported that a guest speaker would be present at the next meeting to discuss the Christian Science faith.

Miss Mary Eakes gave current events.

Mrs. W. C. Goodwin, who presented the program for the evening, chose as her subject, "Mahatma Gandhi." In her interesting and informative paper, she told of Gandhi's background and training; Gandhi was a member of the Bania caste, which was usually the richest in India. As a young man, he went to England to study law. He took vows of chastity, temperance and abstinence from meat eating before leaving, to satisfy the opposition to his going, and these vows he observed throughout his life.

As to the vow about women, he was married, but at a very early age, and in 1906, he took a vow of self-restraint and encouraged and urged his followers to do the same.

He stayed in England three years, and when he returned, he was reconciled with a part of his caste by bathing in a sacred river, Mrs. Goodwin stated. In the early years of his practice of law, he was not too successful, but when he was sent to South Africa in settlement of a case, he found his stride and started on his way to fame and influence, the speaker declared.

In explaining his weapon of defense which he and his followers used so often against England, Mrs. Goodwin described it as a strategy of non-violent direct action. Gandhi himself thought of it as a spiritual sort of thing and declared that to remain mentally and spiritually unyielding in the face of wrong was the height of dignity.

Gandhi was not a Christian, though he admired many of the aspects of the Christian's beliefs and doctrines. He, in fact, the speaker declared, studied all the outstanding religions and took the best from each as he saw fit for his needs.

In conclusion, Mrs. Goodwin said, "Whether we agree with all or any of Gandhi's tenets, we will each have to concede that he was a tremendous influence and that India's pattern today still dates back to this man who has inspired so much spiritual fervor and faith among his countrymen."

During the social hour which followed, the hostess served an ice course with cookies and nuts.

Special guests for the evening were Mesdames George Pasti, R. H. Holt and Linsey Wilkerson.

The second primary should be given serious and thorough consideration by the voters of Greenville. The people should consider the qualifications of each of the candidates for mayor and each of the candidates for alderman. The city officials have the responsibility for administering the almost $325,000 annually involved in running the city of Greenville, and likewise the making of decisions which vitally affect the well being of the city.

ANN ARBOR, MICH., WASHINGTON POST: "Adam Smith's rule that 'Money should be one-fifth or one-tenth of Annual Produce' is even now in 1951 badly broken—for our money is now $175 billions, or more than one half our 'Annual Produce' whereas it should not at the utmost exceed $60 billions, or one-fifth."

Can It Be Possible?

Somebody Told Me

No one will argue the point that advertisement is the greatest salesman in the world. One of the newest advertising techniques is to slip advertising into movies, so the public gets it without even realizing it. The hucksters started using this method after a few things happened to give them the idea:
1. Back in the day of silent films Wallace Reid wore a cap in his pictures, and therefore started a rash of men to buy caps.
2. In 1934 Clark Gable almost ruined the sale of men's undershirts by appearing without one in "It Happened One Night."

Around Capitol Square

The corporate limits of cities and towns. Even worse, and almost as numerous, are spokesmen for the municipalities who, in many instances, are paid out of public tax funds. The group includes state officials and employees who spend a lot of time promoting special legislation affecting their particular department.
HIGH MAN—Topping this list perhaps is the governor's legislative counsel, whose job is to further the legislation desired by the executive branch of government. He doesn't register as a lobbyist, he seldom appears before legislative committees, but he is frequently highest paid of all the lobbyists. There is no statutory authority for the position, but at least 25 years each succeeding governor has had such a contact man with the general assembly.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

WHAT OTHER PAPERS ROSE NOT NEEDED YET (Greensboro Daily News)
There has been some discussion at Raleigh, we note, and perhaps elsewhere as to the likelihood of annual instead of biennial sessions of the General Assembly of North Carolina. Two such keen and sapient observers of Lieut. Governor Pat Taylor and D. Hiden Ramsey are reported to have agreed that we are going to have to come to annual sessions, certainly for the purpose of making appropriations.
We'd hate to challenge the observations of two such citizens. But we still hope their prediction, if what they said can be termed that, is far from materialization. For our part, we see no reason for the change in the discernible future. Of course it may be that dev-

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER
Activity was high during the first three months of the year, with 260,000 new units started, almost as many as in the same period in record-setting 1950. It led to forecasts that the number of new units would far exceed the 950,000 to which the government hoped to limit them. But in the 30 days, there has been a sharp downturn. Many builders are weeping into their shavings.
The Federal Reserve's Regulation X is a factor. More depressive has been the disappearance of mortgage money. Builders all over the country report that banks and loan associations have no money to lend for housing.
The reason for this situation appears to be reports that the Federal Housing and Veterans Administration would increase their interest rates one-half per cent. These rates, being competitive, govern the rates of other lenders. These lenders, of course, are unwilling to finance housing now if there is hope of getting higher interest rates in a short time. Builders are saying interest rates should go up, or that the federal agencies announce that government rates are not going up, to break the log jam.
Other factors are bearing down on new construction. The National Production Authority recently decreed that construction of large apartment houses, luxury residences and private construction projects requiring more than 25 tons of steel would have to have its approval.
The Office of Defense Mobilization has asked states, counties and cities to submit borrowings of more than $1,000,000 to a special committee for approval. This will slow down financing of public housing projects.
The Material Control Plan, which goes into effect July 1, may make steel for housing harder to get.
An indication of what's ahead may be found in FHA loan insurance applications, which precede much home building. Applications covering one-to-four-family home mortgages totaled only 19,842 in March, 58 per cent less than in March 1950.

Hal Boyle's Column

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—Will America be forced to fight a great land war in Asia—in the near or far future?
It is the belief of many Army ground commanders in Korea that the American Army should avoid an all-out war in that area if it is all possible to do so.
"The big lesson we have learned here," one veteran officer told me, "is not to get too deeply involved in this part of the world in ground warfare. It isn't for us."
His argument was that the continent of Asia favored the enemy method of infantry battle and hindered ours. It gives the other side every advantage. It holds none for us.
This officer—he had held a high staff rank in the European war—felt that to win an Asiatic victory through land battles would cost more blood than the American nation would spend.
"It would bleed us dry," he said. "The enemy has too much potential manpower and too much landscape. Taking landscape doesn't win a war—as Napoleon and Hitler found out in their marches on Moscow. You have to destroy the enemy, his industry—and his ability to resist."
He pointed out that Europe's fine road network had enabled the American Army in the last war to utilize its superior mobility and mechanized firepower. Once our tanks and mobile guns had broken through the enemy's forward crust they could race at will through his rear lines and chop them up.
"Asia doesn't have those roads," he said. "And our mobility is reduced to the minimum. That means our infantry and their infantry would have to slug it out too much on a rifle to rifle basis."
He felt that even tactical control of the air would be insufficient to overcome this handicap.
"It is too expensive for us even if we killed five men for every one we lost," he said. "The oriental people simply don't regard human life the way we do."
Recently I received a letter from another veteran commander of the Korean campaign.
"The Korean war continues to be an enigma to me," he said. "It has become inexplicable to me not because of its see-saw character or its political implications—I have neither the responsibility nor interest in the diplomatic significance of Korea."
"What I would like to understand is why we have suffered so many casualties against an enemy who is not, and never has been, as formidable as the Jap or the German of World War II. I am not at all satisfied that the so-called Chinese 'human sea' mass attacks can destroy a well-supplied, adequately mechanized defender. Nor do I believe that Napoleonic 'mass attack' tactics have replaced agility, flexibility, timing attack of small, coordinated units."
In other words, one machine-gunner (even if his morale is not of the best) can raise havoc with an attacker who is advancing in mass without adequate artillery and air support."
This officer recalled how American infantry used to beat back Japanese night Bansai attacks in the last war and added:
"But then we had the troops to do the job. Units advanced shoulder-to-shoulder all across the enemy island. But in Korea shortage of troops and the terrain

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS
WASHINGTON—Lt. Comdr. Helen Hull Jacobs, internationally famed former tennis champion and now a public relations officer at the Naval Gun Factory here, is winning new laurels for her spare-time book-writing.
In fact, the attractive brunette WAVE commander today is better known for her literary achievements than for the many tennis-court victories which started her career in the late twenties and thirties. In "Who's Who" she is listed as a writer.
"Only play tennis for fun now," she told me, explaining that back and leg injuries forced her out of tournament tennis several years ago.
Miss Jacobs, who has just finished a sequel to her juvenile tennis novel "Laurel for Judy," says she has done a lot of writing since she has been in the Navy, mostly things about tennis, and two novels, "Barry Court" and "Storm Against the Wind," a pre-American Revolution work which started to be a biography of an ancestor, Carter Braxton.
"Writing, not tennis has been my first love," she said. "I began when I was 17. Now I'm at work on another novel, writing in my leisure, with no deadline. I find it most relaxing."
Regardless of her seeming nonchalance, Miss Jacobs really works at writing. She hustles to her apartment from the gun factory at lunch time every day and bats out 500 words in a half-hour. She dashes home nights and puts in about three more hours.
Born in Globe, Ariz., she first won attention as a tennis player in California at the age of 15 and won the National Junior Tennis Championships in 1924 and 1925. Her record in the Women's National Singles Championships for four consecutive years still stands. Thrice winner of the National Women's Doubles and Mixed Championships in 1936, she won the Wimbledon title after six years as a finalist on the famed British court.
Miss Jacobs joined the WAVES in 1945, serving until 1947, when she retired at the age of 18 near Fredericksburg, Va., where she raised Labrador retrievers and small grain crops, collected antiques and Staffordshire china, swam and fished. She sold the farm in 1949, rejoined the Navy at Washington, now wants to buy another farm.
The four thrilling highlights of her life she says have been winning the American Championship, the Wimbledon, receiving her commission in the Navy and writing her first piece of fiction.

"Most Dependable Car in America!"

Everyone knows that Pontiac is famous for dependability. If you want personal confirmation of that fact, talk to some of our Pontiac owners. Talk to owners of high-mileage cars—owners who can speak from experience. You'll be surprised how many will say, "The most dependable car in America!"
That, essentially, is why the 1951 Pontiac is in such tremendous demand. To be sure, it is the most beautiful thing on wheels—a joy to drive and to ride in. But it's that reputation for dependability and long, trouble-free operation which causes so many people to make Pontiac their choice.
Bear that in mind when you consider your next new automobile. It's one of the big reasons why so many people are saying, "Dollar for Dollar, You Can't Beat a Pontiac!" Come in today—get the facts and figures that prove it.

Lopaf Admits He's Beating Law Of Averages To Death

By CARL LUNDQUIST
United Press Sports Writer

Red-headed Ed Lopaf of the Yankees won't even try to figure out what makes him so "doggedly mystifying" to the Cleveland Indians, but confided today after his 11th straight victory over them that "I am beating the law of averages to death."

"You figure it out, if you can," he said, still sipping with perspiration after his latest conquest, a six-hit, 11 to 4 decision before the season's biggest baseball crowd at Yankee Stadium last night. There was a standup gathering of 66,265 on hand.

Lopaf now has beaten the Indians 30 times as against only six defeats in his American League career. The last time they won from him was on June 17, 1949.

"I sure has me baffled why I should have any better luck against Cleveland than any other club," he said. "They have tough hitters and they don't fold up on you. And I throw exactly the same stuff against them as any other club."

"But take the Athletics. They're a second division club and they are the toughest guys in the league for me to beat. I always have trouble. I even lost nine straight games to them once. So you try and figure it out."

Lopaf conceded also that he was not at his best last night.

"I got tired at the finish for the first time this year," he said. "My arm stiffened up a little, but I don't think it is anything to worry happened before."

Lopaf's left-handed legerdemain has given him a mark of six straight victories, tops for the majors this season, and a terrific earned run average of 1.17. And he used to be considered strictly a hot-weather pitcher, a hurler who couldn't loosen up before the warm days.

Lopaf received elegant 12-hit support from the Yankees, who went 2-1-2 games in front in the American League race since second place Washington dropped an 8 to 7 11-inning decision to Boston in the only other major league game played.

Rookie Gil MacDouglad started Lopaf off right with a two-run inside-the-park homer in the first inning which right fielder Sam Chapman played like a sand-lotter. Hank Bauer slammed another two-run homer in the fourth and thereafter the issue never was in doubt.

Lopaf was touched for two homers by George Stirnweiss and Jim Hegan and both he and Coach Jim Turner admitted he got a little careless.

"He didn't throw either of them the ball he intended them to have," Turner said. "He realized it the instant he let go the ball but it was too late. But he doesn't do it very often. And practically never if he isn't in front."

The Red Sox received top-flight relief pitching from Harry Taylor who blanked Washington for 4-2-3 innings before Gil Coan dropped a pop fly by Matt Batts for a two-base error that sent home the winning run in the 11th.

Washington had taken a 6 to 0 lead in the third off Bill Wright, who was knocked out for the fifth straight time. Boston cashed in on the wildness of Julio Moreno, getting three runs in the third on four walks and a single, and two more in the seventh of two walks, an error and Billy Goodman's safe throw. They tied it up at 7-7 in the eighth with doubles by Batts and Dom DiMaggio, the key blows, then won it on Taylor's bear-down relief pitching.

Robins Win, 8-7, In 12-Frame Game

By BERT MOYE

Four consecutive walks in the bottom of the 12th inning off Pitcher Harold Ensley gave the Greenville Robins an 8-7 win over the Roanoke Rapids Jays here last night. The win for the Robins broke a four-game losing streak and gave them an even split in the two game series with the Jays.

The Robins travel to Rocky Mount tonight to meet the Leafs in the first of a two-game series this season and return home on Wednesday night at which time the local club will observe Ladies' Night, when all ladies will be admitted free.

The Jays jumped into a three run lead in the first frame of last night's contest by scoring three runs on three hits and three errors.

The Robins came back to score a singleton in the bottom of the first frame when Joe Guidice walked and Vince Lautato lined a double into left centerfield to bring him home.

The Robins grabbed the lead in the bottom of the sixth with a five run spurge to give them a 6-3 lead at this stage of the contest. Pitcher Johnny Kovalchick helped his cause by hitting a line drive homer over the left field fence to clear the bases.

The locals strengthened their lead by scoring another singleton in the eighth.

The Jays came back in the top of the ninth to push across four runs and knot the count at 7-7 and forced the contest into extra innings.

Both teams were unable to score until the Robins put across their winning run in the bottom of the 12th. After Mauney, Guidice and Piestrak had been issued walks to load the bases, Lautato also drew walk, his third of the night, to force in Mauney for the winning marker.

Mighty Ted Williams Hits Lowly .216 In Late Slump

NEW YORK—(UP)—Ted Williams of the Red Sox, generally closer to 400 than 300, walloped weakly along at .216 today and came close to a personal all-time mark for futility.

Rarely in his 10 years in the majors has Williams, a hitter of the first water, come so close to touching bottom.

He has managed to collect only 16 hits in 74 times at bat, which adds up to the poorest start of his career.

Williams says he doesn't know what is causing his current slump. He does know, however, that something will have to be done about it and soon.

The full extent of Ted's sudden decline may be gleaned from the fact that a year ago today he showed 20 hits in 60 trips to the plate for a .33 mark.

In 1949 at a corresponding date, he was batting .309 and on May 15, 1948, he was rolling along at a breezy .411 clip.

Several American league pitchers claim the Boston strong boy appears to be pressing, possibly in an attempt to prove the elbow he fractured last year is sound again. Despite his microscopic batting mark of the moment, the hurlers insist he still ranks with the toughest hitters in the circuit.

"It's only temporary, I'm sure," says Manager Steve O'Neill. "How long can you stop a hitter as good as Williams? When he does begin to hit, he'll get 'em in clusters. No, sir, Ted is one fellow I never worry about in the base hit department."

Williams leads the American League in home runs with six but apart from those circuit clouts, has been able to collect only one extra base hit, a double.

Sport Slants By Pap

Busy Batter

Texan accounted for 29 home runs last season. His batting average for 1950 was .280 but he batted in 93 runs and made 157 hits.

Zernial was a sensation when he broke in with the White Sox in 1949. He was leading the league in May until he suffered a broken collarbone making a tumbling catch in the outfield. It was late July when Gus returned to action but he was unable to regain his early form. Manager Dykes has long been high on Zernial. Gus played for Dykes in Hollywood for two seasons so the Philadelphia manager knows what to expect of his new muscle man.

Locke Decides To Play In Open

NEW YORK—(AP)—Bobby Locke, South Africa's putting wizard, has made up his mind definitely he'll play in the U. S. Open Golf Tournament at Birmingham, Mich., June 14-16.

Previously he had announced he would and wouldn't. His entry was received yesterday by the U. S. Golf Association.

Gil Coan Leads League At Plate

CHICAGO—(AP)—Washington's fleet outfielder, Gil Coan, forged into the American League's batting lead with a lofty .412 mark through Sunday's games.

Coan, who will be 27 Friday, held an eight-point bulge over Detroit's Dick Kryhoski who had .404 for second place. Both Coan, a .303 hitter for the Nats last season, and Kryhoski broke into the top ten leaders' list for the first time. Previously they had too few times at bat to qualify.

Coan had 21 hits in 51 trips while Kryhoski had collected 21 in 52.

The biggest jump up the batting ladder was made by Ferris Fain of Philadelphia who vaulted to third with .379 after delivering 12 hits in 22 trips.

Another spectacular display for the week was by Detroit's Vic Wertz who drove in 15 runs for a season total of 23 and the RBI lead. Fain included six doubles in his effort to take first in that department with a bag of 10.

South Edgecomb Takes 5-3 Win Against Ayden

Pinetoppers Win Initial Game Of Coastal Conference Playoffs; Ayden Outhit Rivals, But Outscored

By MELVIN LANG

PINETOPPERS — South Edgecomb High School got off to a fast start yesterday in the Coastal Conference playoffs by defeating Ayden High 5-3. The Pinetoppers were out-hit by the Ayden lads, but made their his count when they were needed the most. They made only four hits during the game, but two of them were triples.

The winners took a brief lead in the third frame, after two were out, second baseman Brooks Webb tripled and came home when the Ayden pitcher, Teddy Bullock, threw wild at the plate.

Ayden came back with a single run in the fourth as David Manning singled and stole second; shortstop Dal Worthington brought him home with a single to right field.

The fifth frame was the beginning for South Edgecomb. Four runs crossed the plate with three of their runs coming in on a bases filled tri-

Ayden threatened in the last inning, when Bullock and Dunn started the inning by dragging walks. Catcher Hal Edwards singled, sending Bullock home with his second single of the game. After Allen gained lift on a fielder's choice, Harrington doubled, sending Edwards across.

After Allen was picked off third base, Kittrell and Willis Manning gained life on a walk and single respectively, filling the sacks.

Earl Deal, the South Edgecomb pitcher, won his second game of the year over Ayden, as he forced D. Manning to ground out, pitcher to first.

Deal struck out 12 men in gaining the victory and walked only five men, while giving up only six hits.

Bullock who worked the game for the losers on the mound walked only four men while fanning six. He gave up but four hits during the game.

The second game of the series will be played in Ayden this afternoon at 3:15.

Dal Worthington will get the starting nod for this afternoon's contest.

Davis Cup Tests Begin In July Against Japan

NEW YORK—(UP)—The United States' effort to win back tennis Davis Cup will begin on July 20-22, at the Louisville, Ky., Boat Club with a first-round elimination series against Japan.

The U. S.-Japanese match will be the only first round series in the American zone, the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association announced. In the second round, Canada will meet Cuba and Mexico will meet the U.S.-Japan winner.

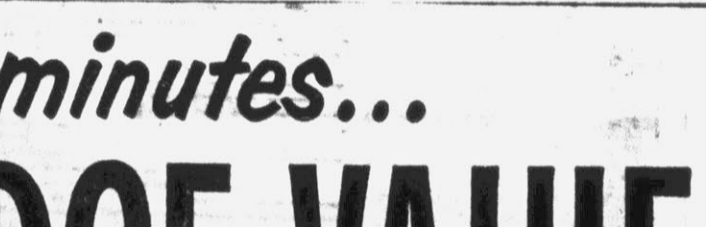

The Louisville Boat Club recently completed a $60,000 improvement program. It has eight excellent, quick-drying courts and seats for 3,000 to 4,000 spectators.

Platoon Leader Has Targets All Ready For Plane

EAST-CENTRAL FRONT, Korea. —(AP)—The American patrol was in trouble. About 50 Communists, dug in on a hill near Chunchon, had pinned down the platoon with small arms fire. The platoon leader radioed for aid from air or artillery, anything available.

By coincidence, at that moment a B-29 pilot called the same fire-control headquarters, saying: "I've got a dead engine and have to get rid of 12 1,000-pound bombs. Hate to waste 'em. Have you any immediate targets?"

The answer was a profane yes. Moments later the earth shook for miles around with the burst of bombs. The platoon leader called back with a shaky "thank you; no more enemy."

ROCKY FORD, Colo.—(AP)—Gus Breeden thinks he has proved nickel still has some value.

A small boy fell into a narrow hole near Breeden's home here. Breeden and another man pulled and tugged. But the boy kicked and squirmed so hard they couldn't pull him out.

Then Breeden pulled out a nickel. He told the boy he could have it if he reached for it. The youngster quieted down, flattened his body in stretching for the coin and the two men hauled him free.

The SIREN of SILVER VALLEY

By PAUL EVAN LEHMAN

Chapter 26

The victory had been won but somehow the savor of it was not there. Jeff swore harshly to relieve his feelings. "Get busy!" he said harshly. "Tombstone, put more riders down at the entrances of those passages. Tell the cook to drive the chuck wagon into the yard and unhitch. See that the men have bunks. And keep a good watch. If the Starrs come back for their stuff let them take anything they want. But look out for tricks."

He set out for Silverstone, riding down the valley trail. The wind of his passage drove the gloom from him and the shame he had felt while watching Ruth was banished by thoughts of the reward Diana had promised him. He drew rein before the hotel at Silverstone half an hour before noon, went through the lobby, ran up the stairs and rapped sharply on Diana's door. "Diana!" he called, and twisted the knob. The door was locked.

From within came the sound of movements, the soft pad of footsteps, a tiny thud as though somebody had bumped into a chair, the almost imperceptible rasp of a hinge. He knocked again and called, "Diana! It's Jeff!"

"Just a minute. I'm dressing."

He waited and presently the key turned in the lock and the door swung inward and Diana stood in the entrance. He said, "Good news this time, darling! The Starrs have left the valley!"

A look that was close to annoyance left her face and she cried,

"Really?" and stepped back to let him into the room.

He followed her quickly, leaving the door ajar. "Yes. They gave up this morning. I paid off twenty of their men and let them go on their promise not to hang around. The Starrs' look their cattle are penned back in the hills. My lady, the Starrs castle awaits your coming!"

She drew in her breath and the blue eyes flashed. "That's grand! Simply grand! It's mine now; all mine."

"We'll have dinner together, then I'll get a buggy and drive you out."

A little frown crossed her face and she shook her head. "I'd rather not go out today. Tomorrow, perhaps."

He looked at her in surprise. "Aren't you anxious to see your castle?"

"Of course; but I don't feel up to the long drive today. I've a little headache. I was lying down when you came."

"I'm sorry. How about dinner together?"

"Honestly, Jeff, I couldn't eat a thing." She pressed a hand against her forehead. "Be a dear and let me hibernate the rest of the day."

"Maybe I'd better have the doctor run over and take a look at you."

"It isn't that bad. Just a headache. You run along and I'll get Sam to drive me out tomorrow."

He turned away reluctantly. He was disappointed; he had expected a little more enthusiasm, some expression of gratitude. But then, if she had a headache—

He stood with his hand on the door and her bed was to the left of him. His gaze went to it absently and as arrested by sight of a dark object which protruded from beneath the hanging side of the counterpane. It was part of the brim hurriedly pushed beneath the bed.

Diana's voice came from behind him. "Close the door when you go out, Jeff; I think I'll lie down again. And don't worry about me; I'll be quite all right by tomorrow."

He glanced over his shoulder at her and she smiled, looking very sweet and desirable. His face softened. "I hope so, darling. Good-bye."

He closed the door softly and went down the stairs. A man's hat. Or was it a man's hat? He had never seen her wearing a Stetson, saucy poke bonnet she had worn saucy poke bonnet she had worn that first day he had seen her, but it was quite possible that she owned a Stetson. Certainly it was.

He muttered, "I'm even worse than Wait and Ben," and walked over to Sam Cooper's office. Sam was not in and Jeff returned to the hotel knowing it was the lawyer's custom to eat his dinner there. He was not in the lobby and the dining-room was closed. He went out again, got on his horse and rode towards the Purple Palace, undecided what to do. He wanted to see Cooper and tell him the news and he would want rider before undertaking the long ride up the valley. He swung his horse abruptly into a passageway and turned into the alley. He would put the animal in the hotel barn and have him given a feed of grain while he ate. He rode through the doorway and turned the horse over to a hostler, then rolled a cigarette and turned back towards the entrance. He stopped before he reached the doorway. Sam Cooper had come out of the hotel kitchen and was standing on the top step looking up and down the alley. He was wearing a black Stetson hat. Jeff stood rooted, watching him. Cooper came down the steps and disappeared into the passageway which led alongside the building to the street. Jeff, fighting back suspicion, remained where he was. Had that been Cooper's hat under Diana's bed? Had Sam been there in her room with the door locked, and had she hidden him and pushed his hat beneath the bed before admitting Jeff?

For a moment his faith faltered and he remembered all Ruth Starr's bitter words; then he swore beneath his breath and stamped the half-smoked cigarette beneath his heel. He was acting like a jealous fool; Diana would never be guilty of such deceit.

He went into the hotel and found the diningroom open. He had his dinner, eating slowly, waiting for Cooper. The lawyer did not show up and when he had finished Jeff crossed to his office. Sam was there and Jeff told him of the Doubtful D's success. "I missed you at dinner," he finished. "Have you stopped eating?"

"Didn't feel like dinner," said Cooper casually. "I stopped in the kitchen and had the cook make me a sandwich. It's good news you bring, Jeff. You've done a fine job."

Jeff hardly heard his words of praise. Cooper had not been leaving the hotel by the rear door to prevent Jeff's seeing him; he had simply gone into the kitchen for a sandwich. Jeff felt very much ashamed of his doubts.

He found everything under control when he returned to the ranch. The Starrs had sent some men down with Ed Keever and they had driven off the rest of the corral stock and had loaded a wagon with furniture to take to Ruth's cabin. One of them had hitched up and driven the Star chuck wagon into the hills and Tombstone assumed that the Starr crew were working hard to get the scattered cattle into parks where they could be held until John Starr recovered sufficiently to find other range.

Wurst Should Be At Its Best In American Markets

FRANKFURT, Germany — (AP)—German meat dealers are putting everything they've got into their wurst these days. They want to get back on the American market with old-time specialties like German-made bratwurst, bockwurst, and frankfurters.

Time was when hungry Americans could sit down to a big plate of sauerkraut decked over with fat, juicy sausages direct from Germany. But now the U. S. Department of Agriculture is closely studying Germany's food and meat laws for sanitation, health and quality. When they finish a committee of Allied High Commission men and West German government representatives will inspect about 10 per cent of Germany's food processing plants.

If the report is favorable, America's sausage lovers can start tucking their napkins under their chins.

Report Many Red Troops In Tibet

SRINAGAR, Kashmir (AP)—A large concentration of Chinese communist troops have been reported in western Tibet, bordering Sindh and Indian-held Ladakh frontier of Kashmir.

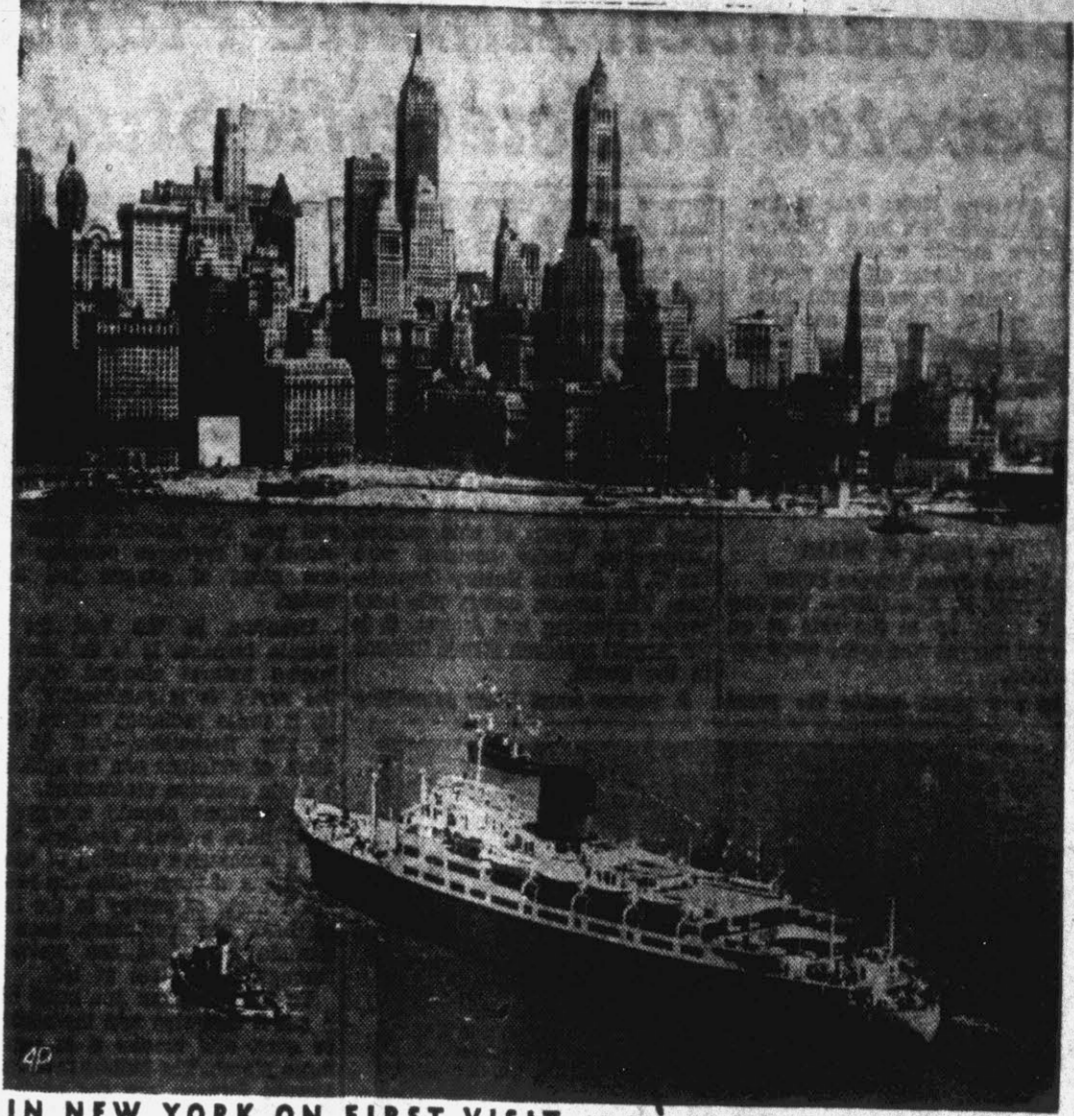

A Buddhist trader from Ladakh who had just returned to Leh, Ladakh's capital, said that in and around one Tibetan village alone not far from the Ladakh border as many as 20,000 Chinese troops are stationed.

These reports are in conflict with statements of Tibetan traders reaching Kalimpong in India that that bulk of the Chinese regular forces were withdrawn from western Tibet after the collapse of Tibetan military resistance.

Brookhaven Atomic Plant Devoted To Scientific Study

Editors Note: Part of the Brookhaven National Laboratory's atomic energy furnace has been taken off the secret list. United Press Science Editor Paul F. Ellis was one of a group of science writers invited to see the west face of the furnace and learn some hitherto unpublished secrets of how the furnace operates. Following is the first of a series of four dispatches on the Brookhaven Pile.

By PAUL F. ELLIS
United Press Science Editor
UPTON, N. Y. — (UP)— You can walk right up to the side of an atomic furnace and come away unharmed.

As you stand beside the great furnace behind whose walls the heat of a sun is being generated you can hear the steady hum of the electrical motors that operate the automatic controls.

The furnace, encased in concrete walls many feet thick, is noiseless—although there are virtually billions of explosions going on every second. They are the explosions of atoms of uranium being split into halves or even smaller fragments.

The atomic furnace at the Brookhaven National Laboratory is operated by a group of nine eastern universities under contract with the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission. The atomic energy pile here began operating last August. It is the largest research atomic furnace in the world.

of high school physics or chemistry to understand how an atomic energy pile operates. In the first place most students know there are at least three elementary particles in all forms of matter. The particles are the neutron, proton and electron.

Those three particles combine to make an atom, and everything is composed of molecules of atoms—even yourself. The way those atoms arrange themselves in molecules determines what substance you get. For instance, when two atoms of hydrogen combine with one atom of oxygen you have water.

Uranium is the fuel for an atomic furnace. It is the heaviest known natural element found in the earth. It is radioactive. That is, it emits radiation naturally. It is also fissionable—that is, the atom of uranium can be split and a chain reaction maintained.

To produce atomic energy you must have a chain reaction. That is, a successive splitting of atoms—billions of them—with the resultant release of energy in the form of heat and radiation, such as gamma rays that can penetrate through many feet of lead.

To split an atom you must have a bullet that zips into the nucleus, or core, and breaks it in two or more pieces. The bullets used in an atomic furnace are the neutrons, the particles that have no electrical charge. At the outset, one atom must be split by a stray neutron and neutrons released in that initial splitting must split other atoms with additional release of other neutrons and more atom-splitting. This goes on until there are more neutrons doing the splitting action than there are those which get lost and don't get into the act.

Result—a chain reaction. In an atomic energy pile, the chain reaction is controlled. In the atomic bomb, there is no control. The big boom occurs in the matter of a second.

The amount of uranium used in the Brookhaven furnace is a secret. The whole furnace is located in a concrete walled chamber. To slow down the neutrons so that they will not zip too fast through other atoms without causing a split, there are layers upon layers of graphite between slugs of uranium. The pile also has 60 openings, or you might say furnace doors. They resemble porpoises of an ocean liner. The pile also has an undetermined number of boron rods that are used for controls. That is, when the rods are pushed into the pile they absorb neutrons and the chain-reaction stops. When the rods are pulled out, the neutrons go back into action and the chain reaction starts up again.

The pile here can be stopped within seconds. There is no chance that it will blow up in an impromptu atomic bomb.

The Brookhaven pile was designed for the production of neutrons for scientific study. The pile, it was disclosed, produces as many as six trillion neutrons per second within a cubic centimeter at the center of the pile.

Even at that, all the neutrons produced in the pile in one second would not have the weight of three mosquitos. It takes about 20 billion billion billion of them to weigh an ounce.

Ancient Gold And Silver Exhibited

By MICHAEL NEWMARCH
AP Newfeatures
LONDON—Some of London's most glittering history is being seen by the public for the first time.

It is all gold and silver, 3,000,000 dollars' worth of it. Its owners (the ancient Livery Companies (groups of city merchants) and other corporate bodies of the City of London, normally keep it under lock and key.

Some of the cups, dishes, spoons and other pieces of plate in the display are unique and priceless. It includes a 19½-inch high gilt and enameled cup, made in 1554, from which Queen Elizabeth is reputed to have drunk on her coronation night. It holds more than a pint.

Two of the exhibits once belonged to American financier J. Pierpont Morgan. These include a nine-inch, delicately engraved salt holder dating from 1599 and a huge Morgan beer tankard, dating from 1692 and holding more than a gallon.

But nothing stresses the changing sense of values more than one piece of silver contributed by a City bank.

Made in 1716, it is listed in the catalogue as "Chamber-pot-engraved with coat of arms." Apart from the fact that it is made of silver, it is identical in design to modern pieces of china but the catalogue adds: "these chamber-pots were dining-room, not bedroom, furniture in the Eighteenth Century."

Work In Progress On New East Carolina Dorm

Architect's drawing for the new apartment-dormitory now being built at East Carolina College. The new home for college teachers was designed by Eric G. Flanagan of Henderson, architect of the Flanagan building, which is considered by many the most beautiful building on the campus.

Work on a new apartment-dormitory for teachers at East Carolina College is now in progress on the west campus. Building materials are already in evidence near the location of the new structure, the ground plan has been laid out, and construction workers are laying heating tunnels.

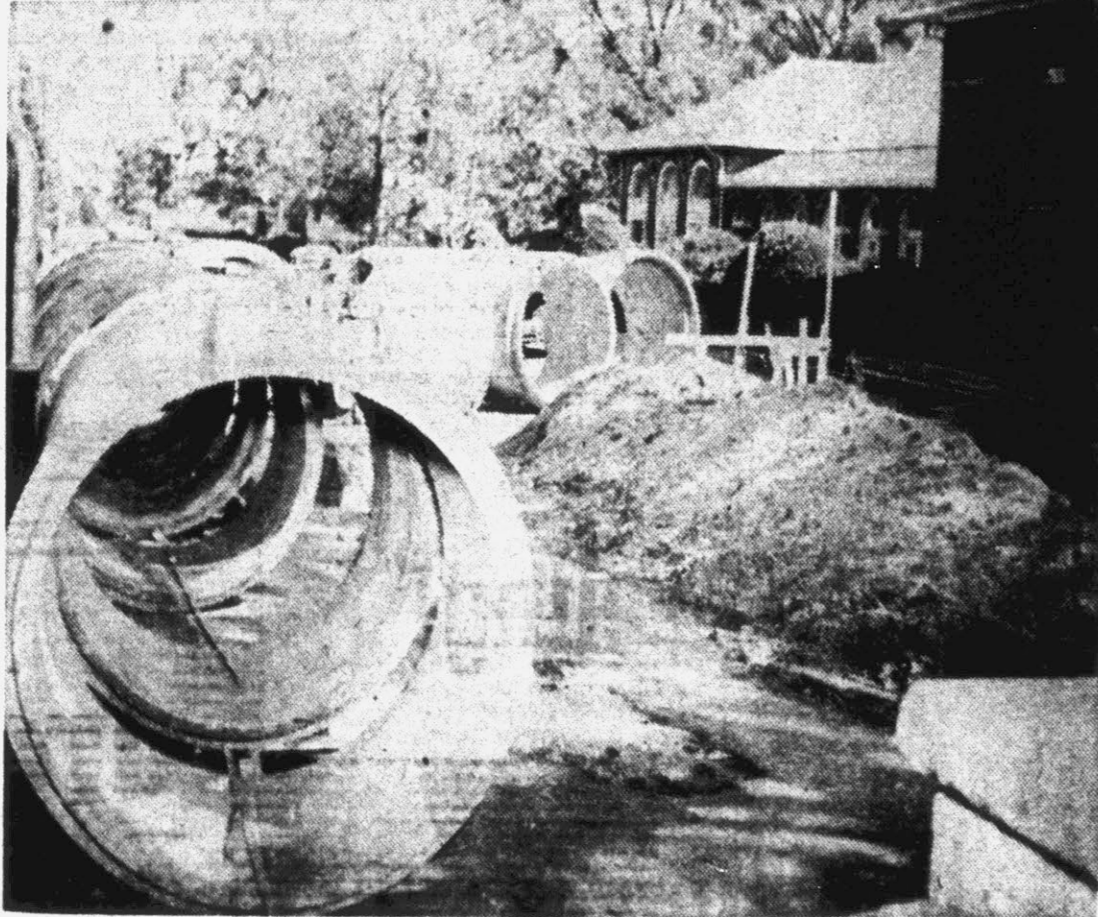

The new apartment-dormitory will be located to the rear of Wilson Hall, and will face west. Later, according to present plans, a new home management house to be used by home economics students will be constructed just west of the apartment-dormitory and will face east. The two new buildings have been so planned and located as to form an attractive unit on the campus. The natural setting, a grove of trees, will contribute to the pleasing appearance of the buildings.

The apartment-dormitory will be of brick and steel construction, and will have three floors. The design, by Architect Eric G. Flanagan of Henderson, shows an attractive exterior, simple in details, which will harmonize well with other buildings on the campus. The flat roof of the new dormitory presents, however, a departure in architectural planning.

Living quarters for 42 people will be provided in the new building according to F. D. Duncan, college business manager. Twenty-two units, each designed for 2 occupants, will accommodate those living in the dormitory. Two bedrooms adjoining a centrally located bath and kitchenette will make up a unit.

The kitchen in each unit will contain a sink, a stove, and a refrigerator. This equipment and that for the baths has already been purchased. Mr. Duncan states, "Furniture for the bedrooms has not yet been bought."

Storage and laundry rooms will be located on each of the three floors. Throughout the building, flooring will be of asphalt tile. Plans for the first floor include

Materials for the construction of heating tunnels to the new apartment-dormitory for teachers at East Carolina College line the driveway in front of the South Dining Hall. The big concrete cylinders will be underground, and through them both heating and water pipes as well as electric wiring will pass.

rooms for entertainment to be used by all living in the dormitory. A reception room and a living room will extend through the center of the building from front to rear and will open upon an outdoor terrace. A living room with adjoining kitchen will complete this part of the building.

Ragsdale Hall, built for and occupied since its construction by women teachers at the college, will be converted into a dormitory for women students. President John D. Messick of the college has stated, "A new wing is to be added at the rear of the present building. It will match the present wing in construction and will lie parallel to it. The two wings will be separated by a court."

The addition to Ragsdale Hall will be made up of thirty rooms, which will provide living quarters for sixty women students. The space provided by the use of Ragsdale Hall as a student dormitory is much needed in view of the increasing enrollment at the college, according to Dr. Messick.

Benedict Arnold In Colonial Home

PHILADELPHIA (UP)—Custodian Edward McElwee found a man sleeping in the master bedroom of Mount Pleasant, a colonial mansion once owned by Gen. Benedict Arnold, the traitor, yesterday.

McElwee ordered the man out, but he refused to move. "What do you mean by disturbing me," he asked McElwee. "Don't you know I'm Benedict Arnold."

The intruder was later identified as Joseph F. Baker, 30, a fugitive from the state mental hospital.

Eisenhower Inspects Atlantic Pact Troops Closely In Frequent Reviews

By JAMES M. Long UDINE, Italy, (AP)—When General Dwight Eisenhower reviews troops, he looks behind the ears.

News reels of him walking down the neat lines of European forces for his Atlantic Pact army may look like he just smiles, salutes and shakes hands.

That's only because you can't hear what is being said. General Ike is after information. Every few steps of the way he asks pointed questions to get it.

The questions popped through a succession of reviews of hill country infantry, plumed Bersaglieri, White-clad Alpine troops, new armored units and an air fighter squadron along Italy's northeast frontier.

One infantry commander had his men widely scattered in small, well-camouflaged groups. Eisenhower walked from group to group, noting the camouflage, the arms the gun positions—and the distance. Finally he turned to the commander:

"How do they communicate with one another?"

At another base an armored regiment interested him "Is Italy making her own radio sets for these tanks?" he asked. The tanks were a half-dozen different kinds, mounting half a dozen different types of guns.

"Have you the different ammunition for all this," he asked. Then "how do you like the gun on this tank?"

"Excellent," the officer replied. Eisenhower shook his head and advised: "Well, don't try to use it against other tanks. It's no good for that; you have to be up too close."

When Eisenhower inspected the Ariete Battering Ram armored brigade, one of Italy's crack units, it had its 100 tanks and armored cars drawn up fender to fender in a perfect line. When he reached the end of the line he turned to the commander and said:

"There's just one thing I'd like. Could you please have this whole line moved forward 50 yards?"

Orders barked, motors roared, and the line rumbled forward, bucking a bit because the heavy tanks were squeezed so close. They went 50 yards, then on, and still on.

"What command did you give them?" "I told them to advance—about 50 yards."

"That looks more like 150 yards to me," Eisenhower mused and walked up to look closer. There, in front of the tanks, was a little ditch marking the new line.

"Oh," said Eisenhower. "Now

I see why," he grinned. The energetic Atlantic Pact commander drives himself hard. In three days in northeast Italy he inspected every kind of military force in the area and most of the military posts. He was reviewing from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. and later.

Sometimes he looked tired. But he still took time to talk to the soldiers. "You've got that equipment in fine condition," he'd tell a soldier. "You've got that equipment he'd say to a non-com."

"Where's your home? How do you like that bazooka? How long have you been in the army? What did you do in civilian life? Where did you go to school?"

When Italy turns her three best divisions over to the Atlantic Pact Army, they won't have to be moved around much.

They are already where Eisenhower wants them.

That is in the 100-mile arc northeast of Udine facing the Yugoslav and Austrian frontiers, the historic attack route between Italy and eastern Europe.

It was no secret that the troops General Ike inspected in this hot corner of Italy's defense are the ones from which his 3 Atlantic Pact divisions will be drawn.

They're Italy's best. To them has gone the first and the most of American arms shipments. They have had special courses of training in how to use the American equipment, from tanks on down through 105 mountain howitzers to the bazookas. Some scattered American technicians are still here on this work.

The 51st Lion's Head fighter squadron is typical. It has now completely converted to American Thunderbolts and Mustangs at its central base at Treviso, and outlying airfields. It is waiting now to switch to jets.

The actual, mountainous frontier is held by the Julia Alpine Brigade with one of the finest fighting traditions in the Italian army. They are back up by the Mantova and Cremona Infantry Divisions, first to get all the new American equipment.

These are supported by the Ariete Battering Ram, Italy's first full armored brigade, black-plumed he asked one tank commander Bersaglieri, Italy's running soldiers whom Eisenhower described as some of the finest in the world, and two units of motorized infantry.

Discusses Animals And Plants In Our Economy

By WYATT BROWN Everything from bacteria that is unseen to mountain lions fit into the general picture of the web of life according to Dr. H. C. Jones of the Science Faculty of East Carolina College in his address last night at the Rotary Club on the subject "Plant and Animal Life in Our Economy." He illustrated the idea with an experience in Pleasant Valley in the Grand Canyon and the plant life in Pitt County.

In Pleasant Valley the cattlemen had hunters to kill the mountain lions to protect their cattle. This permitted the deer to reproduce unmolested. They so increased in numbers that the forest suffered damage from the deer forced to nibble at the trees since the number of deer was too great for the vegetable matter in the area to support them.

In Pitt County, Dr. Jones explained, plants are the basis of the web of life. Plants have many enemies starting with plant lice and some insects even smaller. Insects have enemies—other insects and birds. Bird life is the best pest control for plant life illustrated best by the robin who eats one half his weight of insects each day.

Another enemy of plant life is the rodent. Some birds catch rodents. Skunks act as a control of predatory birds—skunks have an important role in the natural balance.

In concluding Dr. Jones urged that people cooperate with wild life and natural law. Urged the wise use of land. He commented on the large number of damaging fires in this section. He characterized grazing in the woods as bad as fire in woods. Urged cover crops during high wind season, control of erosion, winter food for wild life, destruction of stray cats and dogs, and finally water for animals.

Col. Leslie Babcock of Camp Pickett, Virginia and A. B. Stalworth were guests of the Club. Johnnie Mindler of Charlotte, Ray Welch and Dorsey Phillips of Washington were visiting Rotarians. Mrs. Rachel Moore, vice president of the N. C. Art Society, presiding the program. Floyd J. M. Drix, Club President, presided.

Most engine wear comes from engine deposits—Amoco-Gas leaves

NO METALLIC DEPOSIT!

The kind of gas you buy has a direct connection with the bills you have to pay for engine repair.

For science now knows that most engine cylinder wear is caused by deposits remaining after combustion, and contamination. These cause wear, serious wear to pistons, cylinder walls and valves.

Amoco-Gas helps prevent this wear because it contains no harmful ingredients. It leaves no metallic deposit.

Moreover, Amoco-Gas can burn completely because it is all petroleum with no harmful ingredients added. This means more useful power, superior performance and mileage.

Use Amoco-Gas—for longer car life. There's nothing like it!

Gardner Races Hordes Of Bugs During Season

By ROBERT E. GEIGER
AP Newfeatures Writer
If you plant a vegetable garden the chances are that you and the bugs will be in a race to harvest it from the time the plants pop up until the end of the season.

There are several ways for you to win the race:

1. Choose disease-resistant varieties of vegetables when these are available.
2. After they are planted do everything possible to give them a good fast start in life. This means feeding them fertilizers; watering and weeding and—for city people—keeping dogs and cats away.
3. If bugs and disease appear, despite all precautions, it is time to man the duster and the spray gun, and fast.

Sometimes a gardener will have only a few hours notice that the bugs have arrived. Within a few more hours they can destroy or badly damage a whole crop.

Insect experts at the Department of Agriculture say there should be sufficient supplies of one type of insecticide or another for the home gardener this year.

They emphasize one precaution for the amateur gardener:

Remember most insecticides are poisonous to man if inhaled or taken in sufficient quantities. In handling, mixing and applying poisonous insecticides and fungicides, take special care not to inhale excessive quantities at any time, the department's pamphlet says. "Well designed respirators that afford protection to the entire face are available; therefore use these when such danger exists. After working with insecticides wash the hands or any exposed parts of the body thoroughly."

"Containers in which these materials are kept or stored should be plainly labeled and placed under lock and key, or at least out of reach of irresponsible persons or children."

These experts also say that unless the poison can be washed or stripped from a crop before it is eaten, certain poisons should not be used after foliage or fruit that is intended to be eaten has formed on the plant.

In other words, bean plants may be sprayed with such poisons before the beans themselves form. But after the beans are on the plant don't spray them with the poisons.

In this list of poisons for which special precautions are recommended are paris green, calcium arsenate, cryolite, barium fluosulfate, arsenic except those in the soil, tartar emetic, corrosive sublimate, calomel and DDT.

Besides poisons there are other ways to fight some insects. Small plants may be protected from all enemies except those in the soil by covering them with an inverted glass jar or a special hood purchased from a seed store.

Large insects such as beetles and caterpillars sometimes may be hand-picked from the plants, eliminating the need for poison.

Vegetable varieties bred to resist certain diseases are the gardener's best bet for solving the disease problem. There are some highly resistant varieties on the market, and many more that are known as disease-tolerant. These are not immune but are not so seriously damaged by some diseases.

Among the vegetables of which resistant varieties are available are cabbage, tomato, watermelon, beans, peas and potatoes. The agricultural college in your state, or your county agent, can advise you about varieties especially adaptable to local conditions.

One of the greatest bargains available to the home gardener is the government's booklet on insecticides, known as Miscellaneous Publication No. 605, "A Vegetable Gardener's Handbook on Insects and Diseases."

It may be bought from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D. C. for 15 cents. (Please do not write this newspaper or the Associated Press.)

Americans Save Tanks In Korea

Big tanks cost the taxpayers a lot of money—more than $100,000 apiece. Salvaging one from behind Communist lines is expensive, too. Sometimes it costs lives. The Chinese know that tanks are easy to repair and they usually try to burn them or blow them up during the darkness. Recently American artillerymen have found a pretty good remedy for this. Every few minutes—roughly 12 times an hour—they drop a single round of 155 millimeter shell over the tank, triggered by a fuse that detonates the shell as it nears the ground. The effect is to splash the tank and the area around it with hot steel every few minutes, discouraging any Chinese from getting near it.

Next morning the returning tanks may find the tank's paint scratched a little bit but it usually is otherwise unharmed. The shells cost $100 each. The total cost of an all-night shoot is about $15,000 but it's still good insurance—its roughly one tenth the cost of a new tank and new tanks are hard to get these days.

Terrorists Use Racket Malaya

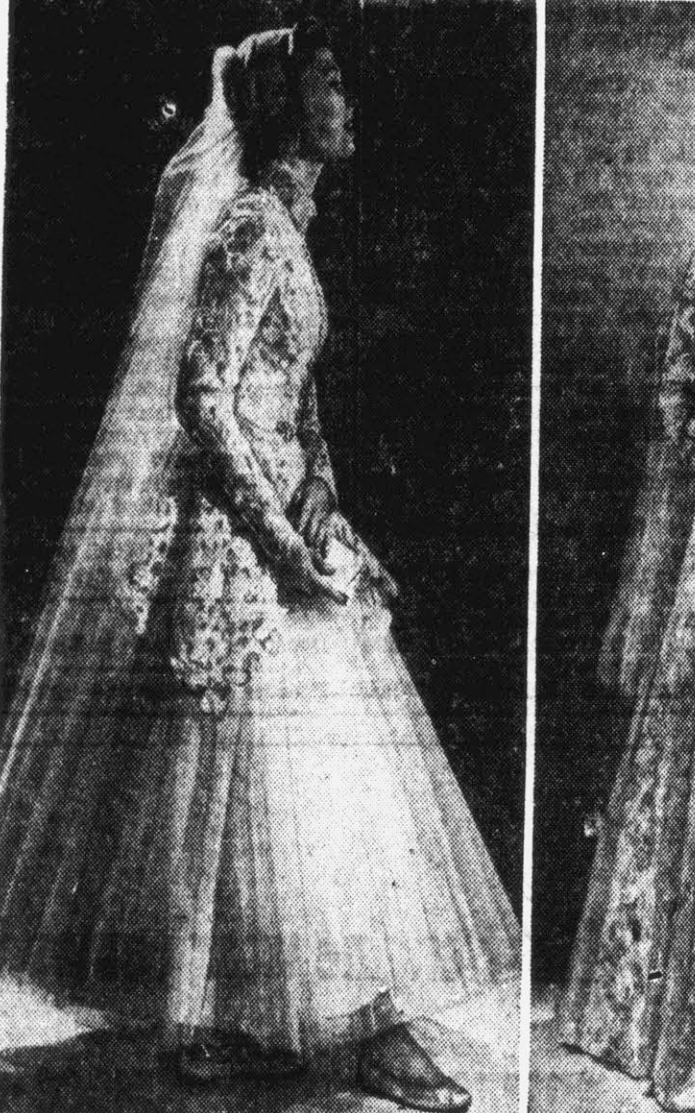

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaya—(AP)—Communist terrorists worked a profit-able "protection racket" in the village of Jenderam in the southern part of Selangor State before it was raided by British troops and police. Secretary of Defense D. C. Waterston said the Reds collected $4,000 every month from the 1,600 inhabitants of the village. They even tacked notices to the door of each home telling dwellers how much they had to pay—or else, the secretary reported.

British authorities have rounded up all the villagers and transported them to a detention camp for sorting out to find out which ones should be prosecuted for Communist collaboration.

Wide Choice For Wedding Belles Of 1951

CONVERTIBLE BRIDE . . . Her gown of sheer white Swiss organdie converts to a strapless dance frock after the ceremony, by cutting off the train and removing the little cape. Scroll lace applique trim.

BRIDAL SUIT . . . This wedding gown of net and lace has a long-sleeved lace jacket which may be removed later to reveal a strapless evening gown. The bride wears a diamond clip instead of flowers at her waist, has bluish pink net cap and veil.

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Fashion Editor
The mid-century bride has at her command an enchanting variety of materials and styles for that most important dress of her lifetime.

Her future may be uncertain, in this era of ominous shadows of war, but at least she is assured of the beautiful wedding dress of her dreams, whether her budgets be large or small.

She may choose, for instance, a gown of nylon net and lace—a fabric unknown to brides of only a few years ago, which has a special crispness and cloudlike quality.

She may want to be a traditional bride in lace over satin, or she may choose cobweb-sheer white voile or starched chiffon or silk organdie—all available in today's munificent fabric market.

She may prefer sheer Swiss organdie, trimmed in fine imported lace, for a summer wedding.

She may look to the practical side, and plan a gown that will do duty later as a dance frock—a strapless gown of lace and net with long-sleeved lace jacket.

She may want a gown with a train and wear a long veil, or she may have an ankle-length wedding dress, if she prefers.

She may choose a simple style which can be converted to use as a party dress, or she may have a gown that will be passed on to her daughters and granddaughters as an heirloom.

The choice is unlimited, and it's up to the bride to decide.

Yugoslavs Stand In Long Lines To Buy Their Goods

BELGRADE—Queues are a standard feature in this capital city from dawn until after dark. People get up early to stand in line for the bread and milk rations—even for newspapers. Long after dark they stand and wait for tickets to the movies or the theater or for a bus home.

Yugoslavs have been queuing up ever since the communists took over their planned economy a country hard hit by war's ravages. Western observers are struck by the long—and generally silent—queues.

Sometimes the planners themselves are also struck and burst out with impatience against the waster of time.

One such outburst occurred recently in Borba organ of Marshal Tito's Communist Party.

Borba estimated that in Belgrade alone at least 47,000 manhours were spent daily by people waiting in line only at the capital's 282 tobacco shops. This estimate was based on an average wait of ten minutes per person at a cigarette kiosk. Actually, many people stand in such queues at least an hour and even then often must accept other brands than those they desire.

Borba's estimate of the time spent in cigarette queues can be multiplied many times by all the queues existing around the capital and the rest of the country. The Communist organ claimed that much of this waiting was unnecessary. It complained that many smokers were choosy and wasted time trying to get their favorite brands. It charged, furthermore, that some people purposely wasted hours waiting for popular brands in order to peddle them in the black-market or barter them for food.

But the big fact behind the ever-present queues is that this is a land of extreme scarcity of consumer goods and extremely high prices. It is a land where thousand of people have had to sell their valuables to keep above water—to pay, for instance, eighty cents for a single egg in the free market.

People here have become so queue-conscious that they often join a forming line without knowing what's available. They'll stand for an hour in line and learn only when their times comes at the window what's available.

Paris, Not Moscow Is Home Of Bearded Men

By EDDY GILMORE
AP Newfeatures
PARIS—You can sight more beards in Paris on one day than you can on the streets of Moscow in a month.

This isn't meant to prove anything more. But Moscow is usually associated in foreign minds as the spiritual home of the beard. This isn't meant to prove anything more. But Moscow is usually associated in foreign minds as the spiritual home of the beard. The French truly go in for hirsute adornment. Here you can all kinds.

In Russia one can see all kinds of beards, but you have to be on the lookout for them. And you won't encounter them in one day or a week. It might take you a month of searching.

Does France have fewer razor blades than the Russians? Are there more barber shops in Russia? It should be pointed out that Peter the Great—an enemy of the beard on other people—did something about beards. He once imposed a tax on beards and made people pay for their facial fixtures. That might have had something to do with it.

It is true that Russians shave a great deal. During the war when foreign correspondents were taken to the Soviet-German front it was very rare to find a Russian officer or soldier with as much as a day's growth of beard.

Shaves are very cheap in the USSR. They cost the average Russian about the same price as six small boxes of matches and barbershops seem to be as abundant as samovars.

The French shave cost about the same price as ten small boxes of matches, but the barber shops are not so evident as they are in Moscow, Leningrad, Kiev, Kharkov, or Minsk.

Because of the extreme cold in Russia one would assume that beards should be very handy things. They help to keep the face warm and who needs a scarf when he wears a beard?

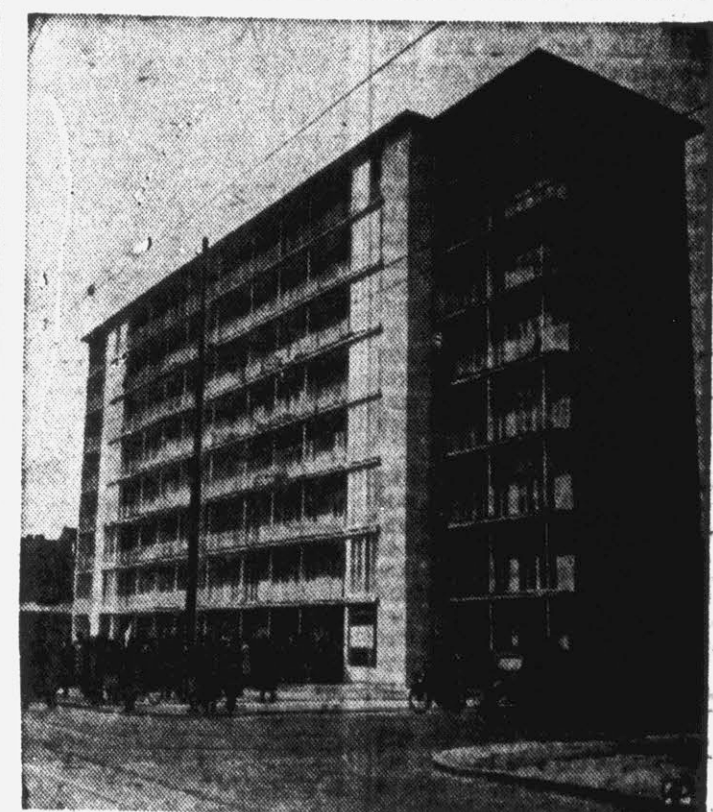

France, on the other hand, is nothing like as cold as Russia so it would seem that climate has nothing to do with it.

Karl Marx—who sported a real muf—had great effect on Russian thinking, apparently he had little on Russian manners of facial adornment. Engels and Lenin likewise wore beards.

Of course a great many famous but no matter how much you comb the evidence, it appears that Peter the Great's beard tax is really responsible for the lack of them in Russia.

In any case the fact stands out—there are more beards in Paris, a city of about 5,000,000 than there are in Moscow, a city of nearly 6,000,000 or 7,000,000.

John Wilkes Booth was shot to death by Sgt. Boston Corbett near Fredricksburg, Va., in 1865.

Has Notable Record In Oratorical Work

Rodney Fulcher, Greenville High School student, has been named fourth ranking student in the nation by the National Forensic League with 669 NFL points to his credit.

Fulcher's 669 Forensic League points have been scored by his representing Greenville High in forums, congresses, radio broadcasts, civic club speeches, interscholastic tournaments, and debates.

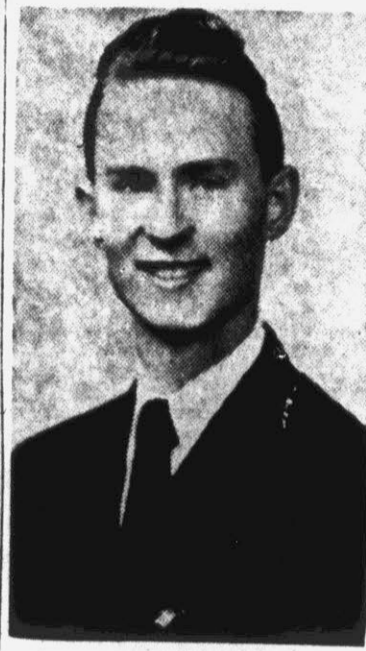

He has a .750 "batting average" for debating in the NFL tournaments against students from Tennessee, West Virginia, and North Carolina schools. For the record, contain 20 district tournament debates with 12 victories and four losses. His record has 144 entries representing that number of interscholastic speech activities during his four years of high school participation.

During his freshman year in high school, he was recognized in the NFL national magazine for being one of the seven students in the United States to score 100 points for speech as a freshman.

His first achievement was winning first place in the safety oratorical contest sponsored by the Traveler's Protective Association. In the spring when he was a ninth grader, Fulcher debated with Fredrick Brooks and reached the NFL Appalachian District Debates finals in Princeton, W. Va. As a sophomore he lost a three to two decision in the state triangle debate finals at Chapel Hill. Three top achievements of his junior year were: First place in original oratory in the Maryville, Tenn., tournament; first place in original oratory in North Carolina as Pitt county's delegate to Boy's State; and as a finalist in the American Legion Oratorical contest for North Carolina.

In debate, his highest achievement was his defeating the Iowa state championship debate team in the national tournament before losing to Texas, the 1950 national champions.

Woman Dies By Electrocuting

Earline Williams, 20-year-old Negro woman who lives on Mrs. Fannie Whichard's farm, two miles north of the Greenville-Stokes highway, was electrocuted by a fallen electric wire while walking along a dirt road yesterday about 6:30 p. m.

Pitt County Coroner Griffin H. Rouse said Earline Williams and Viola Wilkerson, Negro, were walking along a curve in the road when an electric wire leading from a pole on the road to a field broke at the pole in the field. The wire whipped toward the road, striking Viola Wilkerson, but shocking her.

The coroner said the wire then struck Earline Williams, knocking her to the ground, killing her instantly. The live wire burned the woman about the arms and legs and a foot, burning to a crisp one of her shoes.

The fallen wire was from a line that carries current to Leens.

Charges Assault Near Railroad

Annie Mae Atkinson, 27-year-old Negro woman whom Greenville police arrested for being drunk last Saturday night, now charges Larry Clemmons, 20-year-old Negro youth with raping her Saturday night at a lonely spot along the Atlantic Coast Line tracks shortly after dark.

Late yesterday the woman requested police to issue a warrant for Larry Clemmons, Negro, charging him with raping her. They arrested Clemmons last night. He denies the charge.

Included in the report from the agricultural committee was a statement from Pitt Farm Agent S. C. Winchester in which he said the local artificial insemination program for dairy cattle is progressing better than other similar associations in the eastern part of the state. The local association, he said, has approximately 425 animals enrolled and results of the artificial insemination are 60 per cent to 75 per cent effective.

Omar Bradley . . .

(Continued from page one) of State Department objection, although there were differences over Formosa before fighting broke out. 5. The "first intimation" the Joint Chiefs had that Red China was intervening in Korea in force was when MacArthur asked on Nov. 6 for authority to bomb the Yalu River bridges.

6. The Chinese Nationalist troops now on Formosa have "very limited capabilities" and "would be of limited use in offensive operations" if they were brought into the fight against the Chinese communists as MacArthur suggests.

7. He favors economic sanctions against Red China but opposes a naval blockade — as advocated by MacArthur — because it "can be taken as an act of war" and would not be effective unless all United Nations members joined in it.

8. The United States "might stand the chance of losing some of our allies" if it carried the war to Red China.

9. Russian forces stationed in Asia "have the capability of causing us a great deal of difficulty, to say the least."

MacArthur had argued that, because of supply difficulties, Russia could not undertake any major offensive in Asia.

10. "Taking on Red China is not a decisive move, does not guarantee the end of the war in Korea, and may not bring China to her knees. x x x my own feeling is x x x victory over Red China would be many years away."

Big Guessing . . .

(Continued from page one) Russia has an agreement to go to China's assistance if the latter is attacked. Up to this point China can't claim she's been attacked. And that leads directly into the two arguments:

1. The Truman Administration says—we're fighting in Korea to stop Communist aggression. And we're going to keep on fighting until the Chinese Communists quit because they've been convinced they can't win there.

—We're doing it in a limited way—for instance, by not bombing Manchuria—because we don't want to give Russia an excuse for coming in. After all Russia, not China, is the greatest threat. And the greatest danger from that threat isn't in Asia at all, but in Europe.

—If Russia got into the Asian war she'd probably try to overrun Europe where we have our strong allies. We and they have been trying to build up defenses against a Russian attack in Europe in the future.

—Those defenses are far from ready. Marshall himself said we don't have enough strength in Europe to stop the Russians there. Loss of Europe would leave us almost alone. Further: Russia then would have Europe's great industrial and manpower resources to use against us.

—Our European allies don't want us to do anything in Korea which would bring in Russia. So, for all these reasons we're fighting a limited Korean war.

So much for the Administration's limited Korean war.

2. MacArthur's viewpoint.—The Truman way of fighting the Korean war may go on endlessly, costing us in the end far more in lives and supplies than it would if we widened the war.

So he suggests: bombing the Manchurian bases, putting a naval and economic blockade on China, and using Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist troops, now bottled up on Formosa, against the Chinese Communists.

He doubts that Russia would come in. If she did, he doesn't think Russia could put up much of a fight in Asia.

When do the Trumanites think their way will end the Korean fighting? No one can say. Why does MacArthur think his way would end the fighting? He can't say definitely, although he said he would look for a speedy end under his plan.

Nurses Rescued Babies In Blaze

JACKSON, Miss. — (UP)— Cooled-headed nurses picked up about 20 new-born babies and carried them safely from a fire which swept the fourth-floor nursery of Baptist Hospital last night.

And when the evacuation was completed, some of the nurses pitched in and helped firemen handle the water hoses.

"Those nurses were wonderful," hospital executive assistant J. P. Gramham said. But most of the nurses didn't hear the words of praise.

They already had tucked the babies in beds in another part of the 266-bed hospital, the city's largest, and were busy with mops and rags cleaning up the soot and water.

Every fire company in the city answered the alarm and quickly controlled the blaze, believed to have started in a faulty wall socket.

Fifteen rooms on the fourth floor were damaged, but the only casualty was an adult patient, who fainted from excitement. She was treated and returned to bed.

The nurses carried out one crippled child, bed and all. They had so much to do, they didn't even find out who reported the blaze.

"We were just too surprised to check," one said. "Somebody called from the fourth floor and said the walls were hot. Then somebody else called the fire department, but we don't know who it was."

Non-Stop Flight No Record, Says Official Board

NEW YORK — (UP)— Max Conrad, whose non-stop flight from Los Angeles to New York set an unofficial record for light planes, but not an official one.

Conrad, 47, set his Piper Pacer down at La Guardia Field yesterday, 23 hours and four minutes after his Los Angeles takeoff.

The previous record of 30 hours and 47 minutes remained on the books as official, however, because the National Aeronautical Assn. did not time Conrad's flight.

Another hitch was that Conrad overloaded his plane with enough gasoline to put the Pacer in the next category, where a record of 4,960 miles was set by the late Bill Odom.

Conrad did not seem to care about breaking records. He said he undertook the around-the-clock flight to celebrate the forthcoming birth of his 10th child in September.

"I really didn't expect to make it," Conrad said. "I've just been wondering where all my gas came from for the last eight hours."

Commissioners To Talk Budget
