

Searing Heat, Blinding Smoke And Dangerous Winds In Costly Fire

The second major fire loss of 1951 hit Greenville yesterday as flames swept the J. J. Perkins Lumber Company destroying between $125,000 and $150,000 worth of buildings, equipment and lumber. There was no insurance on the loss. Greenville firemen poured more than a million gallons of water into the fire which they battled all yesterday afternoon, last night, and on into today. They brought the fire under control late yesterday afternoon, but large stacks of lumber engulfed by the flames continued to burn today. (Reflector Staff Photos).

Greenville firemen hastily erected make-shift barricades like the one pictured above yesterday afternoon to protect themselves from the intense heat of searing flames which shot hundreds of feet into the air from the Perkins Lumber Company fire. The firemen fought desperately for several hours to keep the flames, driven by a strong wind, from spreading to tobacco storage warehouses, the National Carbon Company plant and the Full Fashioned Hosiery Mill. Approximately 75 feet separated the buildings from the plant and the Full Fashioned Hosiery Mill. Many firemen and volunteer workers received blistered faces and arms from the blazing stacks of lumber. (Other pictures on page six.)

Lumber Yard Fire Controlled After Twelve Hours Of Fighting Inferno

Loss Estimated At Between $125,000 And $150,000; More Than One Million Gallons Of Water Used In Combatting Blaze; Nearby Warehouses And Plants Endangered But Unharmed

A raging fire which began about 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon swept through the J. J. Perkins Lumber Company here causing damage estimated between $125,000 and $150,000.

It was the second major fire loss the city has suffered since the first of the year. In February, the fire at the Carolina Sales Corporation offices caused damage estimated at $150,000.

Regular firemen and volunteers fought for 12 hours yesterday afternoon and last night to bring under control the flames which were driven before a strong south-west wind.

For several hours after the fire broke out in the lumber yard, it threatened to jump a 75-foot railroad clearance and engulf four large tobacco storage warehouses, the National Carbon Company plant and the Full Fashioned Hosiery Mill.

Firemen managed to confine the fire to the lumber yard, however, as they poured more than a million gallons of water into the blazing inferno. Fire Chief George Gardner said it was one of the largest fires in the history of the city, and demanded almost twice the amount of water which was used to extinguish the large warehouse fire in Greenville some 15 years ago. He was high in his praise of the volunteer firemen and other citizens who helped battle the flames. "I'm just glad that wind never got directly in the south," Gardner declared. "The buildings were about as hot as they possibly could be without catching."

A 'Dubitante' Opinion

Justice Felix Frankfurter's Opinion Of Radio And Television In General As Well As Color TV; His Doubts And A Refutation By A Six-Year-Old Boy

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON — (AP) — When Justice Felix Frankfurter leans forward on the Supreme Court bench to read an opinion or discuss a case with the lawyers, he sometimes gives the impression of a teacher addressing class.

This isn't odd. He once was a teacher. He was professor of law at Harvard before going on the Supreme Court. He has a very high forehead and he's very impressive and precise in his manner of speaking.

Still, from reaching his opinions, I think he must often get impatient waiting for short and familiar words to jump out of his pen. He's not alone in this, as you can see from reading the opinions of some of the other justices.

They, too, frequently have trouble making words march one, two, one, two across a page like simple little peasants who wouldn't, and couldn't, confuse anybody.

Yesterday, when the majority of the court gave an opinion clearing the way for color television, Mr. Frankfurter had doubts about the wisdom of rushing things like that. And he said so by heading his own opinion with one word — "Dubitante," meaning he has doubts.

He not only had doubts about the wisdom of the decision but appeared to have doubts about such gadgets as radio and television anyway. And he expressed his misgivings about both.

(This puzzled me a bit since I was under the impression radio and TV are here to stay and I can't see why it's going to make things worse for us to have color TV instead of just black and white. Besides, with color you can see football jerseys better and know who's winning.)

As for radio, the Justice said: "by making... (man)... a captive listener it may make for spiritual impoverishment. Indiscriminate use of the radio denies him the opportunities for reflection..."

I guess Mr. Frankfurter's friends must have different "bits from the people I know. I know they used to listen to their radios a lot, when they first got them. Then they got fed up on some of the

Sinatra Split

NEW YORK — (AP) — Singer Frank Sinatra will get a divorce so he may marry actress Ava Gardner, the New York Post's columnist Earl Wilson reported today.

In a copyrighted story in the Post, Wilson said Nancy Sinatra "in a series of quiet, friendly dignified talks" in Hollywood with her husband decided to give him his freedom.

Britain Accepts Iran Oil Seizure

Agrees To Accept Nationalization Under Some Conditions

LONDON — (UP) — Britain agreed today to accept "some form" of nationalization of Iran's oil industry but ruled out any unilateral action by that country.

This was disclosed to the House of Commons by Foreign Secretary Herbert Morrison as the government mapped a program of drastic gasoline rationing if Iran seizes the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company.

Morrison read an official statement which in effect bowed to the fact that Iran has decided to take over the Middle East's greatest oil fields.

Morrison insisted that Iran cannot nationalize her oil industry unilaterally. But it was now clear Britain had backed down from her stand a month ago when she denounced nationalization as "expropriation."

"His Majesty's government is still anxious to see this dispute settled by negotiation," Morrison said, "and their offer to send a special mission, if that would help, still stands."

"Moreover, as His Majesty's ambassador in Tehran has informed the Iranian government, while His Majesty's government cannot accept the right of the Iranian government to repudiate contracts, they are prepared to consider a settlement which would involve some form of nationalization, provided it were satisfactory in other respects."

First Jet Ace Returns To U.S. From Korea War

SAN FRANCISCO — (UP) — Capt. James Jabara, history's first jet ace, returned to the United States today, more eager to embrace his honey-haired wife than to talk about his feats in Korea.

Jabara arrived early today from Tokyo. As he stepped down the runway, his wife, Nina, rushed to him and threw her arms around him.

The 27-year-old airman tore off his cap, kissed her soundly and placed a violet-colored lei around her neck, seemingly in one motion. With Jabara grinning, Mrs. Jabara tried to repair the damage to her lipstick.

"They told me it was supposed to stay on," she said, "but maybe they don't mean for your husband."

Deferment Test For Thirty-Eight

Three-Hour Examination Given College Students Of Vicinity

Thirty-eight college students showed up at East Carolina Saturday to take the examination that allows them to become deferred from Army duty.

Of that number all were white from the vicinity of Greenville. The comprehensive examination was three hours in length and was administered by a neutral proctor.

Dr. Hazel Taylor of the college Education Department stated the reaction among the students to the exam was varied. Some of them, she said, finished in a short time and thought the questions were easy; others required the entire three hours and stated the questions were hard.

The number taking the test, she continued, was far below what college authorities had expected. They were told to prepare for about 500. However, many more students are expected to take the test in June than showed up Saturday.

Dr. Taylor attributed the low number to the fact that many students

Pitt Principals Wind Up Year's Work, Plan Ahead

The principals of Pitt county schools met yesterday afternoon to wind up the year's work and map plans for next year.

The principals carried on routine business and discussed the use of the buildings during the summer, inspection for fire hazards, inventories, the opening of the books for auditing, and mapped bus routes for next year.

A diploma contract was renewed with Clint W. Lee Company, Seattle, Washington, at a rate of $2.25 for each graduate in each county school.

The following teacher allotment was read: White schools: Belvoir, 16 elementary and 6 high school teachers; Bethel, 8 elementary and 3 high school; Stokes, 7 elementary and 3 high school; Pacolus, 10 elementary and 3 high school; Cmesland, 12 elementary and 5 high school; Chocod, 15 elementary and 6 high school; Grifton, 9 elementary and 3 high school; Ayden, 15 elementary and 6 high school; Grifton, 9 elementary and 3 high school; Ayden, 15 elementary and 6 high school; Winterville, 13 elementary and 5 high school; Arthur, 7 elementary and 2 high school; Farmville, 16 elementary and 10 high school; and Fountain, 8 elementary teachers.

Colored schools: Belvoir-Falkland 16 elementary; Bethel, 15 elementary and 5 high school; Stokes, 10 elementary; Pacolus, 9 elementary; Grimesland, 15 elementary and 5 high school; Grifton, 7 elementary and 7 high school; Ayden, 17 elementary and 6 high school; Winterville, 20 elementary and 5 high school; Arthur, 6 elementary; Farmville, 19 elementary and 7 high school; Fountain, 6 elementary.

The number of teachers allotted to the county is based on the attendance during the seventh month in each school. The state Board of Education figures the allotment for the county by a formula. Pitt county has been allotted 363 teachers for next year.

T. R. Ainsley, who has been connected with the Hall School near Clinton for a number of years, will take the principalship of the Grimesland High School in place of L. V. Godwin, who has resigned to accept a position in the Asheville City Schools.

Miners Trapped In Pit Explosion

Nearly 80 Entombed; Some Bodies Found By Rescuers

EASINGTON, England — (AP) — A violent explosion entombed 79 miners early today deep in the Eastington coal pit. Hours later rescuers recovered eight bodies and brought one injured miner to the surface.

Teams of rescuers toiled in non-stop shifts to move tons of rocks and debris shaken loose by the blast 900 feet underground in hopes of rescuing alive the 73 men still trapped.

By early afternoon rescue parties had driven through more than 300 yards of debris. Mining officials said the face, where it is believed the majority of men are trapped, was another 700 yards away.

Fresh air was being forced through neighboring seams in hopes it would filter through to the men.

The violent blast blew two men clear of the tumbling debris. One said he was lifted and tossed 60 yards down the tunnel. Another said he as thrown 20 to 30 yards.

Cause of the disaster was not known.

NEW YORK — (AP) — All financial and commodity markets throughout the United States will be closed Memorial Day, Wednesday May 30.

Silent Press?

NEW DELHI — (AP) — Prime Minister Nehru said today it would be better for the war-threatened world if national leaders and newspapers held their fire during the next critical few months.

In a speech defending his proposed amendment which would restrict press freedom in India, Nehru said:

"We live in a perilous age. It will be good if all statesmen of the world controlling the destinies of millions of people keep quiet for a few months. Better still, if the press of the world keeps quiet for a few months. This will advance the cause of peace."

Pitt Power Line Work Advancing

Advertising For Bids Expected To Begin This Week

Progress on beginning construction of the 300-odd miles of REA power lines in Pitt, Craven and Beaufort counties is right on schedule, according to a statement from Utilities superintendent Martin Swartz today.

Advertising for bids on the project should be begun this week, he said, and construction should begin toward the middle of June.

Swartz said the money for the project should arrive here before the week is over, "giving us the green light on advertising for bids."

At the present time the bonds are in Washington and have been bought by the Treasury Department at two percent interest. All the necessary correspondence between the Utilities, REA and the state Local Government Commission is in order, he stated, and as soon as the money arrives here the Utilities will go ahead with its project.

The plan for extending the Utilities' lines to the power-less areas of the three counties was first projected by the Commission in December of 1949. About two months ago the Commission approved the final proposals from REA concerning the financing of the project.

Post Office To Close Wednesday

The local Post Office will be closed on Memorial Day, Wednesday, May 30. All windows will be closed and there will be no service on either rural or city routes.

Parcel Post throughout the city will be delivered as usual and there will be a collection from all mail collection boxes in the city beginning at 4:00 p.m. For anyone needing postage stamps there is located in the Post Office lobby a non-profit stamp vending machine.

Eddie Cantor Resting In New York Hospital

Report Revised

Due to an error in computing percentages, the Pitt county chapter of the American Red Cross reported Saturday that Fountain did not gain their quota in the recent fund campaign. It was ascertained later that Fountain was the only town in the district to attain and surpass their quota.

Allies Penetrate Red Resistance

Air General Is Under Fire For Alleged Criticism

Senator Says Air Chief Just As Critical Of UN Policy As MacArthur

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, testifying in the Senate's MacArthur inquiry, came under sharp fire today from Senator Hickenlooper (R-Iowa) who declared that Vandenberg has been just as critical of Korean policy as Gen. Douglas MacArthur ever was.

Hickenlooper said it raised the question whether Vandenberg should resign or be removed as Air Force Chief of Staff.

Vandenberg in return denied that he had disagreed with any United Nations policy as to Korea.

He acknowledged writing in a magazine article last March that U.S. air power was made just about useless "when the United Nations in an effort to avoid a diplomatic rupture with the Chinese Communists halted offensive action at the Yalu River."

But he told Hickenlooper: "I was explaining a result from military action. I was not advocating it."

Hickenlooper contended that Vandenberg's comments, published in "Air Force" magazine, together with other statements he said he would produce later, were "just as critical of U.N. policy as anything that General MacArthur ever said."

Vandenberg was in the witness chair for the second day before the Senate Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committees. They are investigating MacArthur's dismissal from his Far Eastern commands and the policy differences involved in the dismissal.

On yesterday, Vandenberg said that as a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff he concurred in the decision that MacArthur should be relieved.

Today, Hickenlooper told him: "Now let me ask you this, because you recommended or concurred in his (MacArthur's) withdrawal, shouldn't you resign your commission or get out of the service or be recalled for criticizing U.N. policy?"

"And I am not advocating that, general, bear in mind, but I am saying that you concurred in General MacArthur's recall on the basis that there was a cumulative disagreement with policy."

"Now what about your own situation, and I think there are some other statements we can bring up where you have been in disagreement with policy."

Vandenberg said his published statement "is factual when you consider the point of time to which I was talking."

"At that time," he said, "the United Nations forces were up close to the Yalu. There was very little distance between the Yalu and the front line where air power could operate against them, and I was simply making a factual statement that when that condition occurs, your air power is relatively ineffective."

CONTINUES COOL
The highest temperature in the Greenville area yesterday afternoon was 85 degrees. Lowest last night, 51, and at 8 a. m. today it was 56. A slight drizzle of rain fell during the past 24 hours.

ROKs Advance Six To Twelve Miles Over Rough Terrain; Resistance Is Mounting; Hand-To-Hand Fighting In Some Areas; North Koreans Battle Fiercely

TOKYO, Wed. (UP) — Allied forces smashed through mounting Communist resistance in Korea Tuesday, advancing six to 12 miles over rugged terrain.

South Korean troops spearheaded the United Nations drive by plunging 12 miles up the east coast to capture the key road junction of Kansong, 26 miles north of the 38th parallel.

The ROKs ran into little or no resistance as they raced up the same route they took before being driven back by the Chinese Communist offensive last winter.

On other fronts, however, the Allies were meeting with new resistance from the army they chased out of South Korea last week. Hand-to-hand fighting was reported in some areas and convoys of Red supply trucks began streaming southward again to main Communist assembly areas.

On the Central Front, North Koreans holding open the last escape route for Reds, trapped below the Hwachon Reservoir battled fiercely against American units driving to seal off a mountain trail around its eastern end.

Hand-to-hand fighting raged over miles of wooded country south of Yanggu, on the eastern end of the 12-mile-long reservoir. The North Koreans counterattacked at 4 a. m. Tuesday and the fight still was going on under a broiling sun at 1:30 p. m.

The North Koreans were resisting more bitterly than the Chinese who have fought in this sector. "Those Koreans stick in their holes and fight a lot longer than the Chinese," one officer said. "We've been throwing grenades back and forth at each other all day."

The South Korean seizure of Kansong gave the Allies control of the end of the road from Inje to the East Coast. U.N. troops to the west of the ROKs advanced as much as 4,500 yards below Yanggu, against stiff opposition.

Eighth Army spearheads struck north all along the 120-mile front, gathering up scores more prisoners as they went. They had won back nearly all the territory lost to the Reds during the enemy's abortive spring offensive.

The Chinese and North Koreans made frantic efforts to restore their line. They rushed reinforcements south and threw counterattacks against the advancing Allies in some sectors.

The heaviest resistance was on the approaches to Yanggu, at the eastern end of the Hwachon Reservoir. Seven miles north of the 38th parallel, an estimated Communist regiment contested an American advance there.

U.N. task forces scored the day's biggest gains on the western and west-central fronts above the 38th parallel. They overwhelmed Red rear guards and swept ahead 3,000 to 9,000 yards on the Seoul-Chorwon road and in the Yongpyong and Yonggong sectors.

Farther east, they overwhelmed and captured 80 enemy rear guards southwest of Allied-held Hwachon. Another 100 Reds, by-passed in the swift Allied advance earlier this week, surrendered northwest of Chunchon.

It was in this same Chunchon sector that the 8th Army wiped out two by-passed Chinese divisions during the previous three days. The

Two Historic Events

The Story Of How This Columnist Learned A Secret 35 Years Ago And Couldn't Break The News Because Of Censorship; Another Occasion Of A News Scoop

By DEWITT MacKENZIE

This time in May, 35 years ago, I was carrying about the secret (there goes the Old Man, reminding again) xxx.

As I was about to remark, this time in May, 1916, I was carrying about the unpublished knowledge that the long and anxiously awaited battle between the British grand fleet, under Admiral Sir J. R. Jellicoe (later Lord Jellicoe), and the German high seas fleet, under Admiral Reinhard Scheer, was about to take place.

I was attached to the London Bureau of the AP, and a stern British censorship precluded mention of this historic meeting that was one of the events upon which the outcome of the first World War might depend. As a matter of fact I was one of a very few people who had the secret, and the way I stumbled onto it was more than passing strange.

My lodgings were just off Hyde Park in a quarter where stood many of London's old residences. Among them was the home of Admiral Jellicoe. In their midst was the little shop run by the old tobacconist who for a generation had served that staid neighborhood with tobacco and snuff. And of course he was the recipient of all the secrets and news of that area.

The tobacconist and I got to be quite pals, and so I wasn't surprised that day in May when, after glancing over his shoulder to be sure we were alone, he whispered: "I've got a tremendous piece of news for you."

With that he related how Jellicoe had made a hurried trip back home from the grand fleet to see his wife. This devoted couple had gone to the little church nearby and there, accompanied by the rector, they had knelt at the altar while the famous Admiral prayed for divine guidance in the great battle which was about to break. Then Jellicoe rushed back to his post.

"You see what that means, of course," said my tobacconist. "The big naval engagement is about to take place."

Well, I hurried to the AP bureau and told my chief the story. But there was nothing we could do about it. The censorship wouldn't

Piano Pupils Presented in Recital

Mrs. Karl V. Gilbert presented her piano pupils in a studio recital Monday evening, May 28. The program was in two parts. Those performing in part one were: Bryce Cummings, Mary Gaskill Harrington, George Lay White, Elizabeth White, Margaret Ruffin, Melissa Whichard-Judy Jolly, Jane Perkins, Nelson Blount, Sally Beard, Sylvia Bonner, Margaret Evans, Pete Eaton, Curtis Patterson and Ruth Evelyn Topping.

In part two Mrs. Gilbert presented two Greenville high school seniors, Catherine Clark and Barbara White, each of whom played a group of five compositions.

Barbara White Hostess To Members Of Senior Class

Miss Barbara White was hostess at an informal open house to the members of the Senior class of Greenville High school and their dates on Sunday evening between the hours of 9:00-11:00 p. m. following the baccalaureate sermon at the high school.

The young people were greeted at the door by the hostess and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. White. They were invited into the home which was decorated with flowers in colors of red and white, which are the class colors. Fuchsias, roses, lilacs and daisies were used on tables and the mantel in the living room to carry out the class color theme.

In the dining room where they gathered for refreshments, the table was laid with a lace cloth over red satin. The centerpiece was a bowl of red and white flowers with candles on either side tied with red and white ribbon.

A great deal of imagination and ingenuity were used in the attractive ways in which the sandwiches were spread. Some had the letters "GHS-1951" on them; others were rolled to resemble a diploma and were tied with red ribbon. The napkins had handwritten congratulatory messages penned on them, and the rest of the refreshments, consisting of punch, cookies, cakes, nuts and candy carried out the same idea of graduation days.

The young people filled the house and overflowed onto the porch and into the back yard, where another refreshments table was placed. Here a record player was kept in constant motion, and the guests enjoyed singing, games and conversation, which consisted mostly of reminiscences and plans for the future. Many of the seniors had thoughtfully brought their annuals along and were exchanging signatures and sentimental doggerel.

Shortly before midnight they took their leave reluctantly, with another pleasant memory added to the conclusion of their high school days.

Gift Of Silver Presented To Miss Coates

On Tuesday night, May 22, the teachers of the Training School honored Miss Dora Coates, member of the Education Department at East Carolina College, who was retired at the end of the spring quarter, at a dinner party at Sallee's in Washington.

They motored down about 7:00 and enjoyed a delicious seafood dinner. During the dinner hour the teachers presented Miss Coates with a beautiful silver vegetable dish.

In making the presentation, Mrs. Ellen Carroll, seventh grade teacher, paid a glowing tribute to Miss Coates. She said, "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." This you have done through constant service for your friends. These friends are the children whom you have taught, the college students who have been so diligently guided by you, the administrators under whom you have labored, and the teachers who have traveled along the path of duty with you. It is to show our love that we present you with this gift."

There were fourteen people present for the dinner.

student at ACC. Miss Quinerly took part in the college play and was elected to the position of secretary in the Stage and Script Club which is a dramatics organization at the college.

Mrs. Addie McCotter and Miss Mary Dawson McCotter are now occupying their new home on Gordon Street extension.

Mrs. Jake Worthington is recuperating at her home here after a minor operation and is reported to be doing satisfactorily.

Mrs. George C. Sugg, Mrs. Cecil Cobb and George Gardner Sugg spent the weekend in Greensboro to attend the finals at Greensboro College. Miss Margaret Sugg, a daughter of Mrs. Sugg, was among those receiving degrees on Monday. From Greensboro she will go to New York City for a week's stay and will be accompanied by Miss Dorothy Glenn Sugg who was also in Greensboro for the exercises, having gone there from Pinehurst where she attended the Bankers Convention in session there.

Bill Jackson, who has been attending E.M.I. at Salemburg, has arrived to spend the summer vacation at his home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Tyson and son Otham were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Newman Lewis at Penderlee.

Jimmie G. Tripp Dies Suddenly Today

Tripp of Richmond, Va., and a sister, Mrs. Hattie Lee Humphry of Richmond, Va.; and 11 step-grandchildren.

Funeral Set For Rev. W. Brunson

REV. Wm. H. BRUNSON

AYDEN.—The Rev. William H. Brunson, pastor of the Ayden Christian Church for the past 29 years, died at his home in Ayden Monday morning at 11 o'clock after several weeks of serious illness.

He was born at Holly Hill, S. C., on April 18, 1876, the son of the late P. J. and Laura Ann Brunson. During his 52 years of pastorate, he served only three churches, Russellville, S. C., Charleston, S. C., and his present pastorate in Ayden. He was very active in all civic and religious activities, being a charter member of the Ayden Rotary club, holding an honorary membership in the Masonic Order, past president of North Carolina, past president of Pitt County Ministerial Association, and a trustee of Atlantic Christian College.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Rosa Lee Wilder Brunson; a daughter, Miss Louise Brunson of the home; two sons, G. Keith Brunson of Greenville and William D. Brunson of Charlotte; five sisters, Mrs. W. P. Russell, of St. Stephens, S. C., Mrs. Cora B. Copeland of Jacksonville, Fla.; Mrs. W. O. Dantzier of Eutawville, S. C.; Mrs. W. D. Barnes of Brunswick, S. C.; Miss May Brunson of San Diego, Calif., and five grandchildren.

Funeral services will be conducted in the Ayden Christian Church on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock by Dr. R. Ray Lindley, president of A. C. College. Dr. H. G. Haney, pastor of Eighth Street Christian Church at Greenville, and the Rev. J. L. Goff of Williamston, and interment will be in the Ayden cemetery. The members of the official board will serve as pall bearers. The body will lie in state in the Ayden Christian Church from 10 o'clock a. m. until the hour of the funeral.

John L. Speight Celebrates Birthday

Mr. John Speight celebrated his 75th birthday May 27, 1951, at the home of his son, Henry F. Speight, of Greenville, Route 5. A picnic lunch was served on the lawn for the family and guests. Among the guests were: Rev. and Mrs. Willard Watson, Rev. C. D. Patterson and son, Curtis Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Dudley, Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Stokes, J. Nat Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Powell, Jr., and family, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Fuller, Miss Elsie Briley, Mrs. Nannie Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Carrow and Mr. Sidney Garris.

Mr. Speight is the father of nine children, grandfather of 30, and the great grandfather of nine, all of whom were present with the exception of a few. Mr. Speight was remembered with gifts from his family and friends.

The diet of Australian tribesmen includes ants, caterpillars, cicadas and snakes.

HOMES FOR AMERICANS

DESIGNED for eight-inch solid masonry construction with light-weight concrete blocks, this ranch style cottage can be built with or without a basement. The alternate plan shows how the living room fireplace is moved to make the chimney available for heating equipment in space that would be used for cellar stairs. The garage is lengthened a few feet to provide additional storage space when basement is eliminated. This is plan 5-C62 by Elmer Gyleck, architect, 120 South Grove Ave., Elgin, Ill. The house covers 1,018 square feet without breezeway and garage, and contains 17,300 cubic feet when built with basement (12,200 cubic feet without basement). These figures are used as guides in estimating costs locally.

Perry-Edmondson Vows Spoken In Formal Ceremony

BETHEL — In a ceremony marked with dignity and beauty, Miss Ola Nell Edmondson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mance Marvin Edmondson of Bethel and Delton Elget Perry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Jackson Perry of Bailey, were married Saturday afternoon, May 26, at five o'clock in the Bethel Methodist Church.

The Reverend Nicholas W. Grant, pastor of the church, officiated, assisted by the Reverend William M. Howard, Jr. of Chapel Hill, a former pastor. A program of wedding music was rendered by Mrs. W. R. Hunnicutt, organist, and Mrs. T. R. Andrews, Jr., soloist. Mrs. Andrews presented the following numbers, "Because," "I Love Thee," "Through the Years" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The wedding vows were spoken before a background of palms, ferns, Cathedral Candles and floor baskets of white gladioli and snapdragons.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a wedding gown of ice blue slipper satin fashioned with a nylon yoke, crushed bertha outlined with satin rose buds, and long sleeves extended into ruffles over the hands. The dress featured a fitted bodice with miniature buttons down the back and a bouffant skirt which fell into a circular train edged in ice blue illusion. The finger tip veil of imported illusion fell from a covered satin bandeau ornamented with a cluster of rose buds. She carried a white orchid and showed with tube roses and fern.

Miss Janie Edmondson, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were: Mrs. William Earl House, Mrs. Clayton Purvis, and Miss Anne Whitehurst of Bethel, and Mrs. Bill Stroud, cousin of the bride, of Ayden. All the attendants wore dresses of white stoles, fitted waists, and long full skirts of net and rose buds in their hair and carried arm bouquets of red roses.

Honorary bridesmaids were: Miss Jane Kugler and Mrs. Tony Capehart of Washington, Misses Martha Hauser of Asheville, and Mrs. L.L. Andrews, Jr. and Mrs. D. C. Carson, Jr. of Bethel.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Edmondson chose a gown of blue, matching accessories, and wore a corsage of red roses. Mrs. Perry, mother of the groom, was attired also in a blue dress and wore a corsage of pink roses.

Mr. Willard Jackson Perry was his son's best man and usher. He wore a tuxedo, and carried a sword. Bobby Perry of Bailey, brother of the groom and John Rook, Jr. of Wilmington, N. C.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Greeting the guests at the door were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Barnes of Opelika, Alabama and Mr. and Mrs. David House of Bethel. Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Smith introduced the guests to the receiving line which was composed of the bride and groom, the parents of the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. John Rook, Jr. invited the guests into the beautifully appointed dining room where Mrs. S. C. Whitehurst and Mrs. J. C. Whitehurst seated at either end of the table served bridal ices and cakes. Punch was served by Mr. and Mrs. Grover Whitehurst. Rev. and Mrs. N. W. Grant presided over the register; while, Mrs. D.L. Whitehurst of Pittsburgh, Pa. and Mr. J. L. Brown received in the gift room. Goodbyes were said to Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Gurganus. Others who assisted in receiving and serving in the house and on the lawn were: Mrs. Emma Berry of Pittsburgh, Mrs. J. D. Homingway, Mrs. Clara Roberson, Misses Janice Roberson, Toddy Smith, Joyce Beverly, Jeane Cullifer, and Mrs. Julian Smith, Mrs. R. L. Goodall, Mrs. W. P. Thigpen, Mrs. W. A. House and Mrs. J. L. Brown.

Immediately after the reception, the bride couple left for an extended wedding trip to New Orleans. For traveling the bride wore a summer suit of luggage tan, matching accessories, and the orchid lifted from her prayer book.

Mrs. Perry is a graduate of Bethel High School. She attended Greensboro College and at present is a student at East Carolina College in Greenville.

Mr. Perry is a graduate of Bailey High School and of the Highway Patrol School of Chapel Hill. During World War II, he served with the United States Infantry in Germany. At present he holds a position with the highway patrol and is located at Bethel where the couple will reside.

Since the announcement of their engagement, Mr. and Mrs. Perry have been attended many courtesies, among which were: a luncheon on the day of the wedding given at Respass-James in Greenville by Mr. and Mrs. J.C. Whitehurst and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Stroud of Ayden; a rehearsal party following the wedding rehearsal, given by Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Gurganus, Mr. and Mrs. D. T. House, Jr. and Mrs. Clara Roberson. Dinner by Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Gubler of Farmville, Mr. and Mrs. Grover Whitehurst, and Mrs. J. A. Edmondson of Bethel; and Coca-

Cola hours by Mrs. Dennis Hardy and Mrs. D. C. Carson, Jr., by Mrs. S. C. Whitehurst and Mrs. W. J. Smith, by Miss Susie Eason of Tarboro, by Mrs. W.R. Hunnicutt and Mrs. T. R. Andrews Jr. and by Mrs. William Earl House, Mrs. Clayton Purvis and Mrs. L. L. Andrews, Jr.

Semi-Centi Club Has Final Meeting

The Semi-Centi Book Club met for its bi-monthly meeting at the home of Miss Eloise Warren at 115 East Eighth Street Tuesday, May 22nd. The home was beautifully decorated with profusions of mixed spring flowers.

For this last meeting until September 1951, a specific program was not planned. However, Mrs. G. C. Frye introduced various interesting topics for lengthy discussions concerning the programs and hostesses for another year. A book was drawn by each member of the club to be kept for her individual library.

At the conclusion of the business session and drawing of books Miss Warren, assisted by her mother, Mrs. W. E. Warren, served a delectable refreshment course, consisting of cookies, pimiento cheese sandwiches, and iced lemonade.

Following the refreshment course Mrs. Frye, who is leaving for Chapel Hill, and Mrs. Paul Waldrop, who is leaving for Wilmington, were showered with numerous memory gifts from the members.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLAS
A STATEMENT TO PONDER
"From earliest childhood I have learned to see in Jesus the supreme example of one who loves his neighbors and expresses that love in actions that count, who knows that people can find their souls by losing themselves in something of great value; who will die rather than deny the truth in favor of the popular view held by his most respected contemporaries. That Jesus' spirit lives so vitally in men today, makes me hope that by following in his footsteps in my small way, I, also, may live forever."
"Go out and help someone. Lose yourself in doing something for others. Get interested in helping the other fellow solve his problems, and you won't have time to worry about your own."
Who wrote this? You will no doubt reply that it appears to have been written by a clergyman. But this is not correct. It was written by the president of one of the largest steel companies in the United States, who, before he held this position, was an admiral in the navy.
Very fortunately, religion today is losing its professional status. It used to be that only ministers and a few conspicuous lay leaders spoke in terms such as this. But today the businessman and others are talking in a quiet unassuming fashion about religion and the influence of Jesus on modern life.

A Day Of Honor Is A Day Of Mourning

The spirits of the dead whom we honor on Memorial Day must be anything but honored by the spectacle of more lives carelessly thrown away each year on the occasion of observing their holiday.

Memorial Day, or Decoration Day, was first observed in 1869. Since that date, it has become an annual event marked by the accidental death of thousands of celebrants.

Its origin is ascribed to Gen. John A. Logan, commander in chief of the G. A. R., who proclaimed the first such holiday or ceremonial tribute to the graves of the war dead in 1868. Since that time, Memorial Day has come to connote a day of honor to the dead of all wars.

Memorial Day became a day for outings, picnics and a general festivity. People relaxed, and in their laxity forgot to take ordinary precautions against accidents.

Now a lot of people die... and die needlessly, on Memorial Day. The National Safety Council has announced that they look for 110 persons to be killed in highway accidents alone tomorrow.

Is that a fitting commemoration of America's war dead?

Will a life, or a hundred lives, thrown away by carelessness add to the luster of Memorial Day?

There is a real danger that the basic thought of the day will be overwhelmed by the mourning of so many families for the lives lost in "celebrating." Instead of a day of honor, it becomes a day of sorrow.

America's list of war dead is even now being lengthened by the blood of battle. Honor these dead by remaining alive.

Three Is No Longer A Crowd

There are numerous needs which are requested in the tentative city budget being prepared for 1951-52, but no item is more urgent than the request for two additional full-time men for the fire department.

To deny the request of the fire department would truly be false economy on the part of the city.

Greenville, a city of no less than 17,000 people and $19,000,000 property valuation, has three regular firemen on duty at all times... the same number of firemen it had on duty at all times in 1928. It is true that in the past 23 years the total personnel of the fire department has more than doubled—to the present staff of seven full-time firemen—but the additions to the fire department personnel have lagged far behind the growth of the city.

From 1928 until 1941 there were two firemen and Fire Chief George Gardner on duty at the fire department 24 hours a day. In 1941 the city officials decided (with the help of the insurance rate authorities) that at least one more driver in addition to the chief should be on duty at the fire station at all times. So another driver was added and the city had three men and the chief in the regular fire department.

During the 1945-46 year the two-platoon system was instituted in the fire department and two more paid firemen were added to the city payroll; thus enabling the department to have three firemen on duty and three off duty at all times in addition to the chief.

In the past five years the personnel of the department has remained the same, despite the fact that the city limits have been expanded to include Hillsdale, North Greenville, the Bama, Cooperfield, Long Acres, and Brookgreen, not to mention the property already in the city limits which has been developed into residential or commercial property.

The citizens of Greenville have thousands of dollars invested in six major pieces of fire fighting equipment plus a rescue truck at the fire station. Yet the city has only three men on duty at the station at all times to move the seven pieces of equipment if they are needed.

Just how logical is that sort of operation?

For almost a quarter of a century the number of full-time firemen in Greenville has been lagging behind the needs of the city. The time for catching up is long overdue.

National Whirligig

News Behind The News

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON—American petroleum interests could probably solve the western world's grave difficulties in Iran within a few weeks, if their intervention were not stymied by British pride and Washington's willingness to play second fiddle to London in the turbulent Middle East. In the opinion of many diplomats and military men, this area offers a more likely origin of World War III than Korea.

It is generally agreed that Iranian Nationalists will not negotiate with the British for the negotiation of new oil leases. In view of recent anti-American demonstrations in this once friendly country, our government is now tarred with the same brush as our allies. We are hated almost as much because we have supported their position.

DISASTROUS—The loss of this oil would be a staggering blow to us, for it fuels the Anglo-American fleets in the Mediterranean. It also supplies many Marshall Plan countries in Europe. With Iran, they would suffer so severely from petroleum scarcities that they might become easy prey to Communist promises, as has China.

Contrary to general opinion, the Russians do not need this oil for their own use in order to deal us a heavy thrust. The mere loss of it would be disastrous, even if it did not go to their industries and military forces. However, unless we can settle with Iran, a large amount could be shipped by planes and tankers to the Soviet.

CONFLICT—Should the British decide to send troops to enforce their demands, Russia will undoubtedly invade Iran under terms of a 1921 treaty permitting her to do so. That could easily mean a global or another local conflict in an area more distant from us and disadvantageous to us than far-off Korea.

Any compromise involving American oil firms is barred by our State Department's veto. American interests have agreed under Secretary Acheson's persuasion not to open talks with Iran. London has served notice that it would regard such intervention as an unfriendly act, for the British government owns almost half of the Anglo-Iranian Company.

CONTRAST—Both our State Department and 10 Downing Street fear that, if neither the British nor the Americans are allowed to extract, refine and buy Iranian oil, the job will surely fall to the Russians now looking across the northern border.

Iran lacks the finances, the technicians, the managers and even the tankers for the task. Without revenue from this source, which is the country's main support, Iran will become a more desperate porcupine than it is now.

American companies' record in oil-rich Saudi Arabia offers a bright contrast to political and commercial bungling by the British. Their policy of "enlightened selfishness" has prevented any disturbances there or any interruption of the flow of fuel.

ROYALTIES—Last January, Aramco increased oil royalties to King Ibn Saud from 22 to 50 per cent. In addition, it has undertaken a vast "point four" program at its own expense, improving the natives' living and working conditions. Other U.S. firms have done the same thing in Venezuela and other South American lands.

Aramco is owned 30 per cent each by Standard Oil of New Jersey, Standard Oil of California and the Texas Company. Socony-Vacuum owns 10 per cent. With Aramco's heavy taxes, the new lease gave Saudi Arabia a 50-50 profit split.

Here is what Anglo-Iranian was paying to oil-producing states from each dollar of profit: Iran, 29 cents and no taxes; Iraq, 32 cents and no taxes; Bahrain, 28 cents and no taxes; Kuwait, nine cents and no taxes; Qatar, nine cents and no taxes.

LATE—British oil men complained that Aramco's action would precipitate demands for larger royalties in these adjacent areas. They expressed resentment at "damn Yankee generosity." They said that our higher wages and interest in the natives' welfare was "ruining the racket." Their prophecies came true more quickly than they had expected, which helps to explain their present predicament.

Anglo-Iranian has now agreed to boost royalties and pay taxes, but it appears to be too late. Premier Mossadeq's extreme Nationalists and the Communists Tudeh Party have inflamed patriotic passions until the poverty-stricken people seem willing to cut off their nose to spite their face. They march toward economic freedom, though it means starvation, with fanatical denunciations of the West.

DANGERS—London's bar to immediate American intervention is understandable, as is Mr. Acheson's. But if the British are thrown out entirely, the whole western world may lose this strategic product, as well as the permanent good will of this bridge between the European and Asiatic continents. The nationalistic clamor for nationalization of oil has already spread to Egypt.

Under such circumstances, the British would be better off if American interests managed the properties under a percentage arrangement.

Besides its threat as a possible World War III starting-point, the Iranian difficulty combines with our Korean dilemma to chart future dangers facing us around the world from the contagion of nationalistic awakenings. Anti-American riots at Teheran and elsewhere reveal that we have become identified with the British, the French and the Dutch as "imperialists" and "colonial exploiters."

Selected Shorts

Thirty years ago Woodrow Wilson, a President who was also a distinguished historian and a profound student of government, said: "The history of liberty is the history of the limitation of governmental power, not the increase of it. When we resist the concentration of power, we are resisting the process of death, because concentration of power is what always precedes the destruction of human liberties."

The Oily Bird

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

How did the MacArthur incident affect President Harry Truman? For more than a month Mr. Truman kept his mouth shut whenever possible, and when he did speak, the speeches were "careful." But last week Harry seemed to be himself again; in fact, he was almost as cocky as he was during the 1948 campaign. He started to fight back, like Politician Truman himself.

He began with a morning speech in the Hotel Statler's big grey and white Presidential Room. After only a minute or so of following a prepared text, he laid it aside, began to bounce on his heels, and spit out his off-the-cuff speech.

Harry's audience was about 1,000 delegates to the sixth annual National Conference on Citizenship. The delegates applauded him often, when he encouraged him even more to forget the text. He used it only as an outline and went on extemporaneously. He praised General Marshall and the Joint Chiefs, complained about "special interests" trying to evade price controls, and people he called "pull-backs," who are trying to cut down defense expenses. When Harry started talking about Senator Robert Taft every word was sarcasm.

He said, "The suggestion was made by one Senator, the other day, that we ought to cut down the goal for our armed forces by a half million men. And this same Senator wants to go for an all-out war in China all by ourselves. At a time like this such a cut would not only be foolish, it would be downright dangerous."

Mrs. Billy Moore of Greenville, the former Maribelle Roberson, is now Senator Taft's secretary in Washington. Her comments on the Truman statement might give me another story.

On another occasion last week, Harry put on his white tuxedo for the Capital's Armed Forces Day dinner. He said, "While we sit here tonight, partaking of food on white tablecloths and enjoying ourselves in other ways, men are baring their breasts for liberty. You must quit your bickering here at home, you must quit playing petty politics."

Of the Korean war, he said: "We are fighting for time... for us. There is always an emphasis on the casualties in Korea... But did it ever occur to you that they will be one small drop in the bucket from one of those horrible bombs of which we talk so much?"

"Think... think... think," he said in a low voice that was almost shaking, "what a responsibility your President faces. If you would think, and think clearly, you would get behind me and help me win this peace... It is up to you."

And I thank you.

POWER—Announcement that Carolina Aluminum Company at Badin is expanding capacity to meet national defense needs and that a contract for sufficient electric power has been signed with Carolina Power and Light Company as of January 1, 1951, brings some new angles into the political-electric power debate. It serves to emphasize the question frequently asked, whether major concern has been electrical power in North Carolina or Raleigh. That has been a major question ever since the state and federal governments first sponsored rural electrification programs in 1935. In that connection it might be appropriate to note for the record that North Carolina, during the administration of Governor Ehringhaus, enacted a law setting up an REA program several months before the national congress authorized a national REA program at instance of President Roosevelt.

HISTORY—It might also be appropriate to note that state and national governments have been in existence for many years before the late Dr. Gil Wylie and Benjamin (Buck) Duke started development of hydro-electric power in North and South Carolina with main thought for extending facilities into undeveloped rural areas. In the early teens the Duke interests were sponsoring rural prophecy. But even these events could not prevent fulfillment. There seems now little point in arguing over who gets credit for what. Government power folks contend private enterprise has failed to meet the full challenge, but they cannot deny that private enterprise moved in years after government had failed to do anything about conditions.

CONTROL—The basic question now seems to be whether private management of government agencies will control the production and distribution of electric power. There is difference of opinion as to whether there is immediate shortage of power in this area. There is no controversy over the fact that presently available power is not adequate for future potential needs. As demand for power increases, production of power must increase. Governor Kerr Scott, Secretary Oscar Chapman and other advocates of public power say private enterprise cannot meet the demands and government must take over the job. Louis Sutton, speaking as president of Carolina Power and Light Company and head of the Edison Institute, national association of electric power people, is joined by other private enterprise advocates in claims that they can do the job in the traditional American way. The run-of-mill citizen doesn't care much who does it, just so the light burns or the motor burns when he punches the button on the wall. And the average citizen feels sure that will happen. It has up to now, and there is no reason he can see why it won't keep on happening.

CONCERNED—Actually, this average citizen, the John Doe and Joe Doak type of fellow, gets a bit peeved when he hears and reads so much stuff about whether Kerr Scott or Louis Sutton will get the credit for lighting up his house and running the little motor that grinds his chicken feed. If there is need for more electricity and Veeco wants to generate it, why not let Veeco do it? If there is not a power line into some community, why should a privately managed company object to the government subsidizing one. If there is a line, why the heck should the government take tax money to build another one. What he wants is electricity enough to provide lighting and domestic power for his home at a reasonable rate, and to supply current for the industrial plant where he and members of his family work. He doesn't give a hoot who produces or distributes this current or who gets credit for "progress" in development of the country.

MANY SIDES—So it seems there are many sides to this question, and when one phase is settled it opens up others of equal or greater importance to a balanced economy. For that reason it is particularly fortunate that the North Carolina utilities commission, at instance of Governor Scott, is launching an exhaustive study into all phases of the electric power situation in this state. It is not reasonable to expect that results of this survey will provide answers for all the problems, but the study should establish a sound base for future planning by both government and privately managed power generating agencies.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

COLD FACTS
(Washington Daily News)
Cold facts do not support the theory that the war in Korea is a United Nations affair.

We have only to look at the casualties of figure out that this is a war involving the United States and communism. Before the present offensive started the United States had suffered in killed, wounded, missing, and captured about 63,000 men.

The other nations of the United Nations are only giving token support at the most. Perhaps Southern Korea has a sizeable number of troops in the field, but outside of that number America has suffered more casualties than the total number of troops being furnished by other nations. We believe that statement to be a correct one.

Yet, we are so careful to call this a United Nations war if America has to do the fighting, have its men killed and wounded, have its families distraught from the heartaches brought on by war, it seems to us that we would care less to us that the sentiment of the United Nations is and more what the opinion of the American people is.

After all, it is our flesh and blood doing the fighting. It is our boys who are leading the way, being killed, and suffering all the hardship of war. While some of the other nations talk about help, the cold fact remains that Beaufort county could furnish about as many soldiers as the other countries of the United Nations with the exception of course of South Korea.

It is shocking to us when we speak of this war as a skirmish or local engagement when in reality there are so many of our boys losing their lives. To those boys who are fighting, the war is real—real and grim in all its savage pain. Our boys are doing a great job and deserve far more credit than we are giving them. The struggle in brief is one being carried out by the United States in the name of the United Nations.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER
Television auctions, which started in NYW ro whikt a55 - r started in New York with a $5,000,000 sale in one week, are running into trouble in other cities. Both manufacturers and rival retailers are objecting to them on the grounds that they are wrecking what is left of the TV set price structure.

They are especially jittery since the Supreme Court decision on "fair trade" laws, which makes the laws unenforceable except where retailers have signed pricing agreements.

In Baltimore, a heavily advertised auction by an overstocked dealer was called off a few hours before it was to begin. Representatives of one manufacturer had worked far into the night to persuade the dealer to call it off. Everybody said the action was voluntary.

An auction in Brooklyn ran into more difficulties. One distributor took 7-column ads in newspapers warning the public to beware of auctions and to make sure sets purchased had not been tampered with and carried manufacturers' serial numbers. The auction itself was constantly interrupted by rival dealers, who questioned the age of sets offered and wholesale prices quoted.

Other manufacturers and dealers made such forceful objections to the auction that the dealer complained to the Federal Trade Commission that he was being made the victim of a conspiracy in restraint of trade by a "large pressure group of television and appliance distributors, manufacturers and dealers."

Meanwhile, the auctioneers who had conducted the original $5,000,000 a 1w qweh h lws bwfore the license commissioner on complaint of a dealers' association, which alleged wholesale misrepresentation.

Still another auction at Key-point, N. J., was called off. The explanation given was that there was a confusion over the date and that it may be held later. Auctions have been held in a few other cities without incident, although without the good wishes of either manufacturers or other dealers.

A Sioux Falls, S. D., dealer in appliances, conducted an auction of refrigerators, washers, ironers and ranges by advertising mail. He used a full-page newspaper ad offering eight times to highest bidders. A coupon at the bottom of the ad was to be used for entering bids and the highest bidders got the items.

FIGURES IN FALL
WILL BE SLIM

"Feature slim hips and rounded bosom," advises Stores, the publication of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, after its semi-annual corset survey in advance of the corset market week beginning June 18.

"The fall figure will be grim but natural—no longer pencil-slim," the magazine says. "The popularity of lighter garments, wired bras and the strapless idea will continue. Nylon will be concentrated in those numbers that most benefit from its use."

Other tips to buyers are: Buy narrow and deep, but don't stockpile. Stress fitting service and brand assortments in ads. Put life in promotions. Select promotional items carefully.

7,618 MILES OF PIPE
EXTENDING GAS LINES

Current extension of natural-gas pipelines will take added facilities to 150 cities of more than 125 cities of more than 50,000 population, the fourth annual pipeline survey of the Gas Appliance Manufacturers Association shows. A total of $680,000,000 is being spent to add 7,618 miles of pipeline and applications for 15,866 miles more, involving $643,940,000 are pending before the Federal Power Commission.

NOT A BLACK MARKET
JUST A BIT SPOTTY

Have you seen those somewhat mysterious ads offering scarce materials and inviting replies to box numbers? Well, the National Production Authority has seen them too.

Scouting black markets, it investigated. The advertisers fell into three classes. One consists of junk dealers, primarily offering World War II surplus. An offering of a large quantity of nails turned out to be several thousand kegs which had been on Okinawa five years. The second class consists of small fabricators with surpluses after changing their product or going out of business. The third class consists of dealers who haven't got what they offer. But if you give them a certified check, they'll start looking for the material.

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK —(AP)— Every one who truly believes in a world at peace has cause to weep for joy today.

The news from Korea should set a bell of hope ringing in hearts everywhere that yearn for a war-free earth ruled by law instead of brute power.

For mankind has found its best formula and instrument yet to gain that long goal. The formula? It is the pattern of ultimate unity now still only dimly projected by the United Nations. The instrument? It is the international police force—the first world army.

Its dramatic stand in breaking the backbone of the latest massive Red Chinese offensive gives a new and vital meaning to the blue and white banner it fights under. That blue and white flag itself means more. And its army means tremendously more. And for the final international peace.

When the first United Nations troops went into action eleven months ago, they were often ridiculed as a police force and doubted as an army. It was a force that had to build itself up in defeat and retreat, and it had many critics in its own homeland as well as in the councils of the enemy.

It went into Korea to repel communist aggression and restore order. But for many months of sea-saw battle up and down that forlorn peninsula it had to fight for its own life. Its big problem was to keep from being chewed up and spit out by the Red Tiger of North Korea and the Red Dragon of China.

Today it has matured into a great army, composed of a union of a dozen or more nationalities. They still speak different languages. But they have been welded together by sharing a dream of turning the spinning earth into a place of general harvest instead of general hate. These men have learned to respect each other because they have fought side-by-side for the same ideal.

The smashing of the Red drive this time is more than a defensive success. It is a mighty victory for the United Nations army and its purpose. That army has been able to do more than merely repel Red aggression. It is now CHASING the Red aggressors back across the lonely hills they came from.

Thousands of disheartened and disillusioned communist Chinese are surrendering en masse—for the first time. They have learned the daring firepower of freedom. This is significant to all. It may mark the real turning of the tide, the teaching to the men who rule Red China and the men who rule Red China.

Russia, too, that crimes against another country's liberty no longer pay in the twentieth century.

Capitalistic countries already have learned that very bitter lesson. If the communist countries now learn it also—well, then universal peace becomes more than a glimmering promise.

Red China may still want a post-graduate course in this type of instruction. But it appears her shattered armies will be unable to mount another giant offensive for months. In that time the United Nations army will renew its own might. The bigger the offensive it has been able to go—and their casualties have mounted by the scores of thousands.

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON—Quicker than the drop of a hat box, Mrs. Jean Foster Dulles is ever-ready to accompany her ambassador to accompany to any corner of the world. Back just a few days from a brief trip to Tokyo, her third visit to the Far East in less than a year, she was packing to take off on a more extensive journey when I called the other day.

The ultimate destination is London, where roving Ambassador Dulles will discuss the Japanese Peace Treaty with British officials. Mr. Dulles, a Republican, is director of this government's efforts to combat a treaty as quickly as possible against Russian opposition. His last trip to Tokyo was in February. He also held Pacific defense talks in the Philippines, Australia and New Zealand.

"That time I carried two bags of luggage," Mrs. Dulles told me. "But usually I travel light, and it's no effort at all to be ready when I get the go-signal. The clothes I take with me depend on the season wherever I happen to be going. In February it was winter in Tokyo and summer in Australia. I had to plan for both."

Mrs. Dulles' traveling wardrobe usually consists of a couple of coats and hats and several different dresses of silk, wool, and cotton to suit all occasions. She says she finds dresses more practical than suits and easier to pack.

While her husband is busy with conferences and various meetings, Mrs. Dulles says she gets in a little sight-seeing and visits with wives of diplomatic representatives and friends she knows in whatever country she finds herself. She always comes back with gifts and items she's bought.

Recently she brought back a new expression—"go-down." She explained to newsmen that a go-down is sort of "cultural deep-freeze," a concrete building which Japanese families have near their homes where they keep their treasures and extra kimonos until wanted. Since every Japanese lady of consequence redecorates her house once a month, even to changing pictures on the wall, a go-down is almost a necessity for storing the paintings and other objects not in use.

Before going to London Mrs. Dulles and her husband planned a brief rest at their hunting and fishing camp at Main Duck, an island they own on Lake Ontario. From there they will fly to Tucson, where the ambassador will speak at the University of Arizona. Thence to Britain.

Immanuel Baptist Church Dedicates Pastor's Home

On Sunday afternoon at 4:00, the members of the Immanuel Baptist Church held a dedicatory ceremony at the parsonage, located on East Tenth Street. The occasion marked the final clearance of the debt against the home, which was begun in October, 1947. The estimated cost was approximately $20,000.

Greeting guests on the entrance walk and registering them were Mr. and Mrs. Tom Henderson, while Mr. R. H. Evans, chairman of the parsonage building fund, and Mrs. Evans welcomed them into the home.

Mr. Tyson Bilbro, superintendent of the Sunday school, and Mrs. Bilbro, president of the Woman's Missionary Society, introduced callers to the receiving line composed of the Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Nelson, pastor of the church, and daughter, Beverly, Rev. and Mrs. Grady Burgess and son Samuel, Baptist missionaries of the Roanoke Association, Mr. J. O. Derrick, chairman of the Board of Deacons, and Mrs. Derrick, Mrs. W. R. Smith, charter member of the church, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Toothman, assistant directors of the Youth Fellowship.

The home was gracious and hospitable with numerous arrangements of multi-colored summer flowers which were used throughout all the rooms, which were thrown open for the occasion. In the living room, the mantel featured a center bowl of yellow and pink roses flanked by triple candleabra holding yellow tapers. On auxiliary tables, lavender larkspur added a note of simplicity and dignity.

In the dining room aqua and pink were emphasized in the selection of mixed flowers on the center of the table, which was laid with a white cut work cloth placed over aqua satin. Aqua candles were used in silver holders on the table and buffet.

In the other rooms of the home, tastefully arranged larkspur, foxglove, sweetpeas and various other flowers added spots of color wherever they were placed.

Preceding the reception, a short, impressive dedication service was held. The pastor, Mr. Nelson, expressed for his family their appreciation for the lovely residence and for the kind and generous spirit which it manifests. He said, "We are grateful for the faith and courage it represents knowing that it is indicative of the splendid character of the people."

Taking part in the service were the Rev. Leon Russell, pastor of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church and president of the Greenville Ministerial Association, who made a few remarks concerning the importance of the home; the Rev. Richard E. Hardaway, pastor of Memorial Baptist Church, who read two poems by Grace Noel Crowell about the beauty of the home and home life; Mrs. Mave Doll, who sang a solo, "Bless This House," accompanied by Mrs. Howard Bodkin; and the Rev. L. G. Burgess, who made the prayer of dedication.

Following this service, guests were invited into the dining room by Mr. and Mrs. R. O. Everett, where Miss Lella Higgs presided at the punch bowl. Assisting her in serving strawberry sherbet, nuts, pink and white cakes, cheese straws and pink and white mints were Misses Doris Broadhurst, Eloise Warren, Bernadine Ballance, Sara Jones, Alice Rowe, Mrs. James Mathis and Mrs. Amy McLawhorn.

At the door to the terrace stood Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bodkin, who invited guests to the punchbowl out there, where Mr. and Mrs. Everett Stafford were presiding over the refreshment table.

Mr. and Mrs. Mave Doll stood at the foot of the stairway to invite the guests to the rooms on the second floor, where they were welcomed by Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Buchanan. Showing the guests into the recreation room in the basement were Lindsey Wilkerson, W. C. Eagles and L. S. Howe. Goodbyes were spoken to Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Willard and Mr. and Mrs. James Clark.

Serving on the refreshment committee for the reception were Mesdames Lindsey Wilkerson, J. C. Paige, Wendell Smiley, Hollie Van Dyke, Gilbert Peele, G. B. Jones, Pattie Clark, and L. S. Howe.

The flower committee was composed of Mesdames Charles Wilkerson, W. S. Stafford, Gilbert Peele and H. L. Hodges Sr.

TEEN TALK

(Dear Judy)
A Newsfeature
Young adults keep themselves busy whether they are interested in stamps or horseback riding. Here are some highlights of teen-agers.

Spotlight on Fashion... New fluorescent materials have gone to the feet as well as the head. You'll see Susie Smart wearing shoe aces of neon red or a hat of fire orange or a jacket of arc yellow or signal green. These colors, which the army adopted during the last war so that they could be visible for several miles, sure do make a gal stand out. Boys are wearing sportswear emblazoned with leaping leopards; roaring lions or sailing clipper ships of these day-glow colors. Some young moderns hold dances with spotlights which make their costume motifs shine. Above all, these fluorescent day-glow colors make good safety apparel for summertime. They are ideal for hunting or for cycling hostellers.

Attention Girl Scouts... The Pakistan Association of Girl Guides will send representatives to the 1951 International Encampment of Girl Guides to be held near Stevenson, Washington (July 17 to August 6). This brings to 12 the number of countries sending teen-age guides to the pioneer encampment. Australia, Brazil, Canada, Colombia, Costa Rica, Guatemala, Haiti, Mexico, the Netherlands, Philippines and the Netherlands West Indies will be represented. Representatives of the Girl Scouts of the U. S. A., hostess movement at the encampment, will come from 31 states, the District of Columbia, Canal Zone, Hawaii and Alaska. All the girls (about 100) will camp in pioneer style—living in tents, cooking their meals over open fires, and exchanging camp skills developed and practiced in their various countries and regions.

Hot-Rod Headache... New York car owners under 21 years of age will be required to carry automobile liability insurance beginning July 1. The law was enacted to cure reckless driving by teenage "jalopy" owners. Owners under 21 can't get a license unless they carry at least $5,000 liability insurance for injuries to one person and at least $10,000 to cover injuries to more than one. The bill's preamble stated that there was a steady increase in the number of motor vehicle accidents and that a startling number of these accidents involve youthful drivers and that... "Their reckless disregard for public safety and the rules of traffic has contributed enormously to the increasing accident rate." This doesn't solve the problem of life and limb being in jeopardy, however, so how about it kids—let's observe the safety rules.

Sing Something Simple... Like opera, for instance. Met tenor Felix Knight advises would-be songbirds to take their choice of an opera coach instead of a popular-song coach, if they want to learn to warble. Opera training he says, gives the voice more control and power, and enables you to sing all types of music, be it opera, light classical or popular. Early training should be in harmony, composition and possibly piano—the basic instrument. Dramatic study will provide experience and ease of movement. A voice education takes several years, sometimes ten or fifteen. You'll need stick-to-it-iveness advises Felix. Although part of his own musical education was achieved with scholarships, he also worked in many jobs to get enough money to pay for lessons. It's worth it, he says, although he offers this advice: "If you're already convinced that operatic training is most desirable, remember not to train your sights and voice only at the opera." There are very few singers, he says, for whom opera pays the rent.

Dancing Daughters... Have teen-agers lost interest in dancing? The answer seems to be "no" in spite of bandmaster Freddy Martin's recent meeting with New York high school editors to find out why fewer kids hit the light fantastic. The teen sters pointed out to Mr. Martin that kids still like to dance, but they too have been hit by the shrinkin' dollar. Instead of dancing at places where "name bands" perform most teen-agers were dancing to records at home or to bands composed of high school students.

Ships Avoiding Ports Of China

SINGAPORE —(AP)—The newspaper "Singapore Standard" says many European captains and officers of ships taking valuable cargoes from Hong Kong to Red China have started their own "unofficial" boycott of Communist ports.

The reason for all of this, said the "Standard," is that the officers are "disgusted" with their treatment by Chinese Communists and are now refusing big salaries and bonuses to sail to Red China ports. It quoted unnamed captains and officers as saying that upon arrival in Red China ports, they usually were invaded by swarms of officials, heavily armed, who check and re-check the ship, officers and crews.

The newspaper said foreign officers are closely questioned about their entire life history and at the slightest excuse are accused of insulting the Red "Peoples' Government." Many written apologies are demanded, followed by hours of further questioning and "corrective indoctrination" lectures.

Commencement

Commencement exercises will be held at C. M. Epps Negro High School, on West Fourth Street, Wednesday night at 8 o'clock. Diplomas will be awarded to the largest graduating class in the history of the school, Prof. W. H. Davenport said.

A special program of music will be presented. Friends of the school are invited to attend.

Modern Home Took 6 Years To Finish

AP Newsfeatures
PHILADELPHIA — The walls hang like window curtains. Heat comes from the sun. Floor to ceiling windows cover the entire front of the unusual house built by and for Mr. and Mrs. T. Harry Milliken.

It took four years for Architect John Dickey to draw the plans and two years to build. Dickey explains: "We began with the floor. Then the roof slabs were placed on the earth in such a way that the frost could buckle them all it pleased and they'd drop back in shape again."

Milliken decided on the "different house" six years ago—and insisted he'd build it himself.

Nothing was too unconventional for planners Milliken and Dickey to consider, provided it would cut down work for a one-man construction gang. And provided, too, that it made sense scientifically. Bricks and mortar were rejected as "too slow and too expensive," Milliken said. He is an assistant research director at Houdry Process Corporation, an engineering firm.

After the floor was put in place on the big lot in suburban Moylan, a workman—with the Millikens themselves assisting—built two cement-block interior anchor walls. Eight steel posts wired with magnesium anodes to prevent rusting were connected to the anchor walls. Prefabricated steel beams were attached to the posts.

The roof came next, laid atop the steel beams. Mrs. Milliken did the caulking and covered it with three coats of aluminum paint.

The walls, light and inexpensive, were hung from the beams instead of being built up solid from the ground. They were made of an interior layer of plywood, an exterior layer of stainless steel. Says Dickey:

"This house is the only one I know of, except two experimental models in Massachusetts, that is heated entirely by the sun."

A so-called "solar pick up" was built in the backyard. It's a contraption that looks like a group of television antennas.

"Plastic lenses focus the sun's rays on three pipes filled with anti-freeze," Dickey explained. "Electric motors keep the 300 square feet of lenses facing toward the sun."

The sun-heated anti-freeze heats the house this way: It is pumped through 15 tons of Glauber's salt stored in long tanks beneath the floors. The colorless, crystalline sodium salt melts as it is heated, absorbing enough warmth for seven sunlit days. Air circulating around the tanks picks up heat, as in furnace, and the heated air is blown under the floors.

The floor-to-ceiling windows, too, provide heat through the sun's rays. In summer an overhang shuts out the sun. Mrs. Milliken says: "I was skeptical about the long windows at first, but now I agree they certainly do make sense." Mrs. Milliken was also suspicious—at first—of the foot pedals that turn the water on and off in the kitchen and bathroom.

Dickey estimates the unusual house cost about $20,000, including built-in furniture. He adds: "But it would have cost at least $45,000 if it hadn't been for the owners' manpower."

Twenty-Two In First Aid Class Finish Course

AYDEN—Twenty-two Negro women in Ayden completed a first aid course and received first aid certificates on May 21.

The following women received certificates: Mrs. Mary Austin, Mrs. Mary Garrison, Mrs. Mildred Slaughter, Mrs. Mary B. N. C. Merchants Elect President

ASHEVILLE (UP)—T. S. Wolfe of Mount Airy today was named president of the North Carolina Merchants Association at the group's 49th annual convention here.

Wolfe, former first vice president, was elected to succeed Jacob Winstead of Rocky Mount as some 300 delegates went into the second day of discussions on merchants' problems.

Ben Douglas of Charlotte, regional director of the Office of Price Stabilization, said in a speech yesterday that "we expect to have very few enforcement cases in this state as far as price controls are concerned."

Douglas told the merchants that "we don't like price controls any more than you do, but something must be done about inflation."

Douglas and other price control officials conducted a panel of discussions to help merchants with their price control problems.

Joseph F. Leopold, Texas industrial relations adviser, lashed out at cooperatives as "big businesses which operate under the guise of helping the farmer." He said cooperatives are in competition with private business.

W. G. McCargo of New York, chairman of the executive committee of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, said price controls have failed in their purpose "to keep prices down."

Although oysters are edible all months of the year, hot weather shipping problems helped the legend that they could not be eaten except in months, the names of which contain an "R."

Local Lions Won Five N.C. Awards

The Greenville Lions Club won five awards at the State Lions Convention in Winston-Salem recently and a report to the club was made at last night's meeting.

Awards to the local club included the State Blind Activity Award, District Blind Activity Award, District General Activity award, and the District Honor Roll Plaque. All delegates attending the convention made reports to the members.

George E. Perry, professor of music at East Carolina, entertained the group with several selections on the piano including several novelty vocal numbers.

Francis Jordan was presented the 100 Percent Secretary award by District Governor O. E. Dowd.

Marvin Aldridge, manager of the club's Little League team, reported the progress of the team and Mitchell White, softball manager, gave a report on the team. President Larry Averette presided.

Dairy Food Test Opens Thursday

The county dairy foods eliminations will be held May 31 and June 1 at the home demonstration lab in the Agriculture building.

The elimination contest held on Thursday will be for junior 4-H club members and will feature dairy foods demonstrations by teams and individuals. The winners of the eliminations contest will attend the Northeastern district dairy foods contest on June 19 and 20 and the county winners will give demonstrations at the meeting of Home Demonstration clubs during the month of June.

Girls participating are being coached by adult leaders and senior 4-H Club girls and the agents. Seventy-five girls are entering the contest and the judges are Sue Brickhouse and Anne Parker, home demonstration agents. The purposes of dairy foods demonstration are: To teach the value of milk; to show various ways of getting milk into the diet; to develop poise in the girl through demonstrations; to develop self-confidence and ease in talking before a group of people; and to show to others the simplicity of learning through doing.

Higher Fares

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The South's major railroads — 27 of them — asked the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday for a boost of ten per cent in their passenger fares.

Their joint petition said an increase is needed to meet higher operating costs.

Passenger fares in the South were last boosted in 1948. Eastern Lines got a 12½ per cent increase in November, 1949, but Southern and Western Railroads did not join in that case.

Scenes From Yesterday's Big Lumber Yard Fire In Greenville

Flames leaped skyward as Greenville firemen fought their way toward the roaring inferno at J. J. Perkins Lumber Company yesterday afternoon. A stiff wind fanned the fire which spread rapidly through the lumber yard and for a while threatened nearby tobacco storage warehouses, the National Carbon Company plant and the Pull Fashioned Hosiery Mill. The firemen in the photo above shielded themselves from the intense heat with doors, tin and pieces of wood. (Reflector Staff Photos.)

Stack after stack of lumber went up in smoke and flames as the high southwest wind yesterday fanned the fire at Perkins Lumber Yard. Firemen managed to keep the fire from spreading to nearby buildings, but the lumber mill was almost a complete loss.

Three volunteer firemen (left foreground) concentrate the water from their fire hose on the wall of the National Carbon Company building which was threatened yesterday afternoon as fire raged through Perkins Lumber Yard. The fire started shortly after 1 o'clock and was fought by firemen throughout the afternoon, all last night and today.

Military And Police Pistol Teams To Shoot

Pistol teams from the Cherry Point Marine base, Kinston police department and Troop A, State Highway Patrol, will come here tomorrow to compete in pistol target matches sponsored by the Greenville police department's pistol team. The local police will be host to the visiting military and law enforcement marksmen, Police Chief Guy C. Langston said.

The matches will be held at the Greenville police pistol range near the airport, across Tar river, tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Next Wednesday, June 6, the Kinston police department will send a pistol team here to compete with the Greenville team. On Wednesday of the following week, June 13, the Camp Lejeune Marine Air Station will send a team here to compete with the Greenville police pistol team.

Target matches are being held in preparation for the pistol shooting tournament at Carolina Beach on August 2 and 3, sponsored by the North Carolina Police Executive Officers' Association during its annual convention.

Color Television Still Is In Future For Public

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Color television programs by the Columbia Broadcasting System may be started legally in about a month, but it probably will be much longer before they reach much of the public.

The Supreme Court decided the legal phase of the question yesterday, but big obstacles remained in the way of any substantial switch of TV programs from black and white to color.

Meanwhile, black and white programs will continue for the some 13,000,000 set owners.

There are two big obstacles to color TV: 1. Most of the major setmakers have expressed dissatisfaction with the CBS system, preferring instead the rival method developed by the Radio Corporation of America (RCA).

2. The defense mobilization program is taking an increasing share of many metals which are essential to production of TV sets and broadcasting stations.

No sets to receive color are on the market now and it probably will be several months before more than a relatively few are available.

CBS officials in New York said they would shortly expand their color TV broadcast schedule in New York, and within a few months they expect to be producing a "substantial schedule."

RCA said it would go ahead with public demonstrations of its own color method, which was rejected by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) in favor of regular color telecasts with the CBS technical method.

It was this FCC action which the Supreme Court upheld yesterday, 8 to 1. The majority said FCC's decision was not arbitrary or against the public interest "as a matter of law."

The chief objection to the CBS system voiced by RCA and major setmakers is that it is not compatible with present black and white receiving sets. That means present sets cannot receive CBS color signals without adding extra equipment.

Day At Camp For Girl Scouts

Members of Girl Scout Troop 19 spent the day at Camp Hardee last Saturday with their troop leaders, Mrs. B. B. Suga, Jr., and Mrs. Geraldine Wilkerson.

The girls took lunches and had a picnic lunch on the beach. They did every thing that is expected of a camper—swimming, hiking, and games.

Those taking the trip were Ellen Gibson, Annette Bunn, Mildred Bowden, Dorothy Coltraine, Ann Ellington, Alma Hagans, Jean Henderson, Rose Moye, Georgia Merritt, Betty Lou Merritt, Yvonne Russell, Mickie Sumrell, and Mary Lee Beverly.

NIGHT TRAINING

NEWBURGH, N. Y. — (AP) — Night training in plane spotting will be given to 210,000 civilian volunteer members of the ground observer corps in a 36-hour exercise set to start Saturday morning, June 23.

Twenty-three states will participate. North Carolina is one of them.

Ninth-Inning Homer Earns Kinston Win Over Greenville

Visitors Take 8-6 Victory After Pitching Duel Which Saw Teams All Tied Up Until Backo Connected

A 345-foot homerun by Steve Backo gave the Kinston Eagles an eight to six ball game over the Greenville Robins last night. The score was tied when Backo delivered his towering blow. There was one base-runner on when the game-winning homer came.

Up to this point in the game, Alex Zych and Paul Jones had tangled in an old-fashioned pitchers' duel. Both hurlers had been supported by fine defensive play from their teammates.

Zych allowed a total of 12 hits but kept them spaced effectively and was not in serious trouble except for the sixth inning when the Robins reached him for three runs. The short right-hander struck out eight in pitching the victory and walked five.

Jones was equally as tight in the clutches until the late stages of the game when he tired. In eight and two-thirds innings he was touched for 10 hits. He walked seven men and fanned six.

Vince Lautao and Pete Piestrak led the Greenville batting with three safeties apiece. Piestrak tripled in the ninth to push Manager John Stresa across with the final Robins run. Catcher Eddie Celardo had two hits to help them.

Backo led the winners at bat with three for three, including a single, double and a homerun. The Robins will play in Wilson tonight.

The game last night was played before approximately 350 fans. The local Little Leaguers were the guests of the Greenville management.

Exchange Club Nine Is Leading Little League

Defeat Of Kiwanians By 10-7 Margin Provides Grasp At Top Of Loop; Winners Helped By Big First Frame

Ralph Johnson pitched the Exchange Club into first place in the Little League yesterday afternoon with a neat eight-hitter, winning over the Kiwanians, 10-7. He needed help in the form of George Nichols in the fifth inning when he tired.

The Exchangers got off to a fast start in the first inning when they pushed seven runs across the plate. They scored the runs on four walks, an error, and three hits. The big blow of the inning was a double by Nichols.

In the four and one-third innings in which he pitched, Johnson struck out three and issued only one free pass. Nichols struck out three and walked one in his brief tenure on the mound, and was not reached for a safety.

Catlette was the losing pitcher, going the route of the regulation six inning tilt. He struck out five and walked five. He was touched for 10 hits.

Bullock and Nichols were the big boys at bat for the Exchangers. Each had two safeties in three times at bat.

Folger and Bamitt led the Kiwanians at bat, with two for three.

The Kiwanians will meet the Elks in a single game this afternoon. Starting time is scheduled for 5:30.

Regis Is Ready

It was the annual block "M" dinner in the cafeteria at Manhattan College and the Jasper athletes who had so ably represented their Alma Mater on the athletic fields were awarded their letters and lauded by the distinguished speakers assembled. Regis King was one of the lucky athletes, receiving awards for basketball and baseball.

King is an impressive youngster standing six feet, five inches. He is captain-elect of the basketball team and a pitcher on the baseball squad. Baseball is his first love. As a schoolboy in Syracuse, he had flock of big league scouts following him in hope of getting his signature to a contract. Some of the offers were in six figures and very tempting. Mrs. King declined to give her son permission to sign until he had at least completed his college education.

Regis is a junior at Manhattan and hopes one day to become a doctor. He would lead a willing ear to a proposition to play professional baseball after graduation and expressed the desire to meet Dr. Bobby Brown, the Yankees' third baseman, to learn how he managed to complete his medical studies while playing baseball for the Yankees. We promised to make arrangements for the meeting. Dr. Brown's earliest convenience. The very next day King stepped out and pitched a no-hit, no-run game against the Kings Point Maritime Academy to make the choice of arranging the meeting doubly easy.

Faster Engines, Sleeker Cars In Indianapolis Race

INDIANAPOLIS — (AP)—Faster engines and sleeker automobiles, plus the lure of $200,000 in prizes, produced the swiftest of all fields for the 500-mile Motor Speedway. The 33 drivers to qualify, Walt Faulkner of Long Beach, Calif., did his 10-mile qualifying test at 136.872 miles an hour, and the slowest, Bill Mackey of Indianapolis, did 131.473. Twenty of the cars that qualified in 1950 were slower than that.

The qualifying average was 133.570, compared to 131.045 in 1950. If there are any favorites in this speed-saturated field they are Chet Miller and Duke Nalon, making up the Novit team in cars that reputedly cost $150,000 each. Others highly regarded are Johnny Parsons, the 1950 winner; Mauri Rose, twice a winner and holder of an additional co-championship, and, of course, the tiny Faulkner. The forecast for tomorrow was fair with only occasional clouds. Race drivers dread wind that often whip the tiny cars out of control. And the race would be halted if rain makes the track slick.

This race is a strange and hazardous pursuit of fame and money. Only 33 cars can start, and this year 35 others were shut out. Their owners spent thousands and got nothing. The cheapest car racing probably costs $25,000, and shipping costs, plus gasoline, tires, and a pit crew makes even a qualifying run cost an additional several thousand.

Only the winner can hope for substantial rewards — perhaps $50,000 in prizes. However, Wilbur Shaw, a three-time winner, and now the speedway president, says victory should be worth $150,000, to any enterprising man—advertisements, endorsements, appearances, and so forth.

Enters Finals Of Golf Tournament

Ercell Webb entered the finals of the Greenville Golf Club Championship Tournament with a win over Reynolds May Saturday afternoon. This will be the fourth time that Webb has entered the finals. He has never won.

Seventy-one golfers qualified for the tournament. The qualifiers were divided into flights of 16 each. The men with the top scores in the qualifying round were placed in the championship flight. The remaining portion of the field made up four flights, according to their respective scores.

Ted Cassidy defeated Ray Masten to reach the finals of the first flight. He will meet the winner of a semi-final contest between Ben Harrison and Bruce Baker.

The second flight will feature Red Corbett and Major Baucum. Dale Gidley will meet Larry James Jr. for the championship in the Hodges and Max Minges in the third flight.

Troy Dodson will play the winner of a match between Troy and the fourth flight.

W. L. Allen will meet W. Z. Morton Tuesday afternoon to determine the opponent for Webb in the championship finals.

The finals will be a 36-hole affair. Eighteen holes will be run-off Saturday afternoon. The remaining 18 will be played Sunday.

Gift Of Tuba Blanks Memory

"What, oh what, is that woman's name?"

Red Sox Showing New Life; Have Won 8 Straight

Boston — (AP)—Boston's revitalized Red Soxers have won eight straight games and while so doing have blasted out 91 hits for 137 bases. Is that terrific slugging the bases for Steve O'Neill's belated success?

"It certainly is not," replies canny Casey Stengel, whose champion ship New York Yankees are the Soxers' latest victims.

"Those Red Sox always hit in Fenway," Stengel points out. "They have made eight, 10 and even more runs but generally not as many as their pitchers gave up. Now O'Neill has his fingers straightened out and they've been very stingy with the opposition."

After much painful experimenting, O'Neill finally has decided to lock up such oldsters as Ellis Kinder, Walt Masterson and Ray Scarborough as tightly as possible in the bullpen and string along with the young flinging set.

For First Time In 30 Years White Sox Are Leading Loop

By JOE REICHLER Associated Press Sports Writer

For the first time in 30 years, Chicago's White Sox are able to look down upon the entire American League—and that includes the world champion New York Yankees.

A momentous 4-2 homecoming victory over the St. Louis Browns last night, before 23,138 whooping fans, zoomed the Pale Hose to the top. It climaxed a spectacular 12-game winning streak, all but one on the road.

The Sox got outside assistance when the Red Sox nosed out the Yankees, 3-2, in Boston.

Not since 1920 have the White Sox enjoyed—all by their lonesome—such a lofty perch as late as Decoration Day. They were on top for two days in 1937—June 8-9—but were forced to share the lead with the Yankees.

Victorious in 18 of their last 20 games, the Sox today hold a 24 percentage point bulge over the Yankees—727 to 703.

Saul Rogovin threw a two-hitter at the Browns as his mates clubbed loser Duane Pillette for eight of their nine hits and all their runs in five innings.

Mel Parnell, Red Sox ace southpaw, surrendered nine Yankee hits but was tough in the pinches to register his fifth victory, two of them over the Yankees.

Bobby Doerr's sixth home run of the season, with a mate aboard in the second inning, was the payoff wallop.

Reasonably rapid Robert Feller spun himself another shutout, his second in succession, as Cleveland whipped the Tigers in Detroit, 9-0. The 32-year-old right-hander, who shut out Washington with two hits in his last appearance, yielded six hits and struck out three.

Brooklyn retained its two and and a half game edge in the National League race, shading the Phillies, 4-3, in Philadelphia. A home run by Carl Furillo in the top of the ninth snapped a 3-3 deadlock and handed the Phils their fifth straight loss.

The St. Louis Cardinals blew a 5-2 lead to Pittsburgh but came back in the last half of the 10th inning to eke out a 6-5 victory when Red Schoendienst singled with two out and the bases loaded.

Warren Spahn snapped New York's four game winning streak with a seven-hitter as the Boston Braves defeated the Giants, 4-1. Bob Elliott started the Braves rolling with a two-run homer in the first inning. Sheldon Jones was the victim.

Rain washed out the scheduled games between the Philadelphia Athletics and Senators in Washington and the Chicago Cubs and Reds in Cincinnati. All games were played under the lights.

In games through Sunday, the 145-pound second sacker had notched .362 as the Sox crested on an 11-game winning streak thru the east.

The leading 10 batters are topped by Ferrin Fain, Philadelphia's first baseman, with .386.

Youths Explore Sewer System

ANAHEIM, Calif. — (AP)—When police got a report that childish laughter was coming from a closed manhole cover on a downtown street, they pried up the cover.

In the sewer below they found five Anaheim boys, ages 13 to 14, who said they had hiked more than a mile underground after entering a storm drain on the edge of the city. They said they were just doing a little exploring. After explaining that sewers should not be used for playgrounds, the officers released the boys to their parents.

Abrams Leading National In Hits

NEW YORK — (AP)—Cal Abrams of Brooklyn continues to burn up the National League with a .451 batting average in games through Sunday.

Slugging his way around the west at a .607 clip, Abrams came home to Ebbets Field as the established Dodger left fielder.

With seven hits in 13 trips during the week, Abrams added 29 points to his average.

The SIREN of SILVER VALLEY

By PAUL EVAN LEHMAN

Chapter 32

Jeff removed his hat and ventured a peep over the back of the sofa. They were facing each other midway down the room, staring hard into each other's eyes, both faces hard and uncompromising.

"So it's to be a cash settlement, is it? Just how much cash, Sam?"

"One thousand dollars and other valuable consideration."

Jeff saw her lips curl. "Why, you cheap chiseler! If you think you can settle for less than half your utter insanity. And you better snap up the offer right quick or I'll make it a seventy-five, twenty-five split."

"You'll take one thousand dollars and like it?"

"I will like hell!"

"Then you'll hang for Dan Denton's murder?"

"Why, you filthy louse! I was warned that you'd try to pin that on me! Well, you can't do it. I—"

Sam raised his hand. "Keep your voice down, you fool!"

"Keep my voice down!" She was quivering with rage but she had sense enough to obey. "Why should I? What have I to fear? All I've got to do is tell what I know and they'll hang you by the neck until you're as dead as a salt mackerel!"

His smile was evil. "And I'll make your words sound like the desperate ranting of a woman who murdered her husband! You fool, I can prove that you killed Dan Denton beyond any reasonable doubt."

"You can't prove it because I didn't do it!"

"Don't be so simple. You were alone at the ranch with him. The crew was working up at the other end of the valley. Jose and Maria had gone to town. Dan was still at the house when they left."

"And Dan had gone when you arrived! You found me there alone. At least that was your story."

"Which you backed up. And you can't change it without making yourself a liar."

"And you can't change it for the same reason!"

"I don't have to. I met Jose and Maria just outside of town; they had driven slowly. I rode slowly. You had plenty time to do it before I got there."

She was moving about, glaring at him, biting at her nails in her nervousness. "Proving that I did it will be another thing. You can't prove it because I didn't do it."

"You've a lot to learn, my dear. There is plenty evidence that you are a cheap two-timer, using your charms on Walt Kirk and Ben Dowd and Jeff Payne to get what you wanted. I'll say that you used me, too. I'll be very indignant and I'll conjure up a picture for folks to contemplate. Your background, a cheap showgirl without a dime, playing up to a man old enough to be her father—well, not quite; you're thirty, you know, even if you look twenty—beguiling him into marrying you. You and that you wanted to learn to drive, and Dan, pleased at your interest in ranch work, hitching up, then he alone at the ranch. You asking him to hitch up a wagon for you, saddling his horse. He ties the horse to the tailgate and sits beside you to show you how to handle the reins. You drive proudly out on the range. Then you shoot him and push him off the wagon. You turn his horse loose and drive back. I can even say I saw you drive into the yard as I was crossing the valley."

"You devil! That isn't proof! The proof comes later. I suggest looking the wagon over; it wasn't burned in the fire. I think they'll find traces of blood on the seat. Blood from a chicken or a steer, but who'll know the difference? And then they'll find the Derringer you shot him with in the ruins of the ranch house. Evidence, my dear. Evidence of murder against Dan Denton's young widow who was just so greedy she couldn't wait until he died."

Jeff was listening intently, his head above the back of the sofa. It was all coming out, the whole sordid story. He had forgotten his caution in his interest and excitement, but the two were so intent on each other that they did not glance in his direction.

Dianna was looking at Cooper and her face was not pretty to see. Her lips moved but for a while no words came from them. At last she managed it. "You—your monster! You killed him yourself, you know you did! You never showed up at the ranch at all; you rode down along the creek and waited for him! You shot him in the back and left him there!"

"Of course I did." His voice was smooth even pleasant. "But the only way they'll ever find it out is by your telling them, and then you condemn yourself as an accessory before and after the fact, and where would that leave you? They wouldn't hang you; you're much too pretty and you'd probably have the prosecuting attorney pleading for you before the trial was over. But they'd put you away in the pen for life and you wouldn't like that a bit. I think you'd better take the thousand and call it a deal."

She continued to stare at him, quivering with rage and futility. And suddenly she raised her hand and slapped him hard on the cheek. He stepped back, and for a second Jeff saw murder in his eyes; then his contorted features smoothed out and he laughed shortly. "Just for that," he said, "we'll reduce the offer to five hundred. Sit down at the desk and sign."

He walked over to the desk, gliding like a stalking panther. He took some papers from an inside pocket and spread them on the desk. On the wall behind the desk was a mirror and he glanced in it, but at that angle he could not

Bible Inspires Stalin Eulogy

BERLIN (AP)—Johannes Becher, poet laureate of East Germany, has written a new poem to eulogize the Soviet Union, and it seems to have been inspired by the Bible.

Becher's latest work is a 300-page-long tome dedicated to Stalin and entitled "Star of Never-Ending Glow."

It amounts to a parallel with the Star of Bethlehem. In an explanatory preface, Becher draws the comparison himself by suggesting that the Soviet Union has only one message for the world, and that is "peace on earth."

He doesn't add the traditional "to men of good will."

The depression holding the Pacific ocean has been called the scar left when a mass was wrenched free to form the moon.

The "new" world has the oldest mountains.

Tom And Jerry Going To Bat For UN In Movies

By GENE HANDSAKER

HOLLYWOOD—Once there was a pugnazious fat cat named Tom. One day a thick juicy steak fell off a passing truck. Tom tried to seize half of it for himself, leaving only a quarter each for his pals, a mouse and a dog. They got into such a terrific fight that the steak was knocked into a gutter and down the drain. For wanting to hog the most, Tom got none.

Fans will recognize in this a Tom and Jerry cartoon—on of a whole series of movies which, it appears, will go to bat for UNEXCO. While cartoon characters warn humorously that greed and aggression don't pay, other films will carry, to faraway places, messages on health, education, science, and culture. And 1.12 other lands will send us their films 6.75 on these subjects.

6.00 Fred Quimby, Tome and Jerry's producer, told me about it the other day. He represented the Hollywood 4.27 movie industry at a film conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization in Paris for six days in 8.25 April. Quimby, who looks like a 1.50 successful banker and owns six 9.00 Oscars for M-G-M short subjects, 3.75 which department he heads, was 6.00 invited by a UNESCO official to be the representative.

24.75 Eighteen nations were represented, including France, England, 29.20 Germany, Italy, Denmark, Egypt, 4.87 and Yugoslavia, but not Russia. 17.80

Discussion centered on: (1) Exchange of existing government, university and entertainment films bearing on health, education, science, and culture. (2) Pictures to be produced for the UNESCO program. UNESCO writers in Paris will prepare scripts. "All motion picture companies are friendly to the UNESCO program," Quimby said.

"The man from India wanted pictures on health," he added. "Many expressed interest in obtaining the health films produced by Walt Disney for the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs."

Quimby flipped through a catalogue of Hollywood films now used in American schoolrooms and said, "I have recommended that these be made available to UNESCO. The included movies on vitamins, first aid, vaccines, smallpox, childbed fever, insulin, sleeping sickness, and retreating waterfronts to prevent bubonic plague."

The whole idea, Quimby said, is to try to make for a better way of life.

Fisherman Dies On Tar River

FARMVILLE — M. L. Little, 63-year-old painter of Marlboro, near here, died suddenly of a heart attack while fishing from a rowboat on Tar River, near Grimesland, Sunday afternoon.

Pitt County Coroner Griffin H. Rouse said Little appeared at the fishing ground, half a mile above Grimesland, in "bow of a motor boat piloted by Otis Baldree of Farmville. Baldree left and Little started to fish with a hook and line. It is not known how long he had been fishing when the heart attack ended his life. Baldree later discovered him slumped over the side of the rowboat, his head and shoulders in the water.

Baldree called the Greenville fire department and firemen notified the coroner and sheriff. Coroner Rouse said Little died of natural causes and that there will be no inquest.

Funeral services will be held at the home Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. L. B. Manning, Free Will Baptist minister, will officiate. Burial will be in Hollywood Cemetery in Farmville.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Desie Walwright Little.

Radar-Directed Fire By Red Gunners Effective

By ELTON C. Fay
WASHINGTON (AP)—Modern, electronically-aimed anti-aircraft guns—and not the spectacular Russian designed MIG 15 jet fighters—are taking the heaviest toll of American planes in the Korean war.

Of the more than 200 U. S. Air Force planes lost to enemy action in 11 months of war, the great majority has been downed by fire from the ground—everything ranging from rifle fire to heavy flak.

The Red's ground gunners, using radar-directed weapons, have hit B-29 bombers at altitudes well above 30,000 feet in air raids during recent weeks.

This radar equipment, like the planes the Chinese and North Korean forces use, is presumed of Russian manufacture and much of it probably was copied from the substantial amounts of radar equipment given the Soviets by the U. S. and Britain during World War II.

The quality of Communist anti-aircraft work raises a question, like that involving the enemy jet fighter planes, about who operates the radar-controlled guns. Highly skilled technicians, not usually found among the peasant soldiers of Asia, are needed to operate and keep radar aiming equipment in repair.

Information reaching here indicates that radar-directed flak batteries are not merely isolated affairs, spotted around at strategic points. One North Korean target

Suspect Blazes Deliberately Set

VIRGINIA — (UP)—Fire thought to have been deliberately set destroyed seven buildings early today in this small town which straddles the North Carolina-Virginia line.

It was the second time within a week that fire has broken out in the town, which has no fire department of its own. Early Sunday morning an unoccupied hotel went up in flames.

Police Chief Gerald Ellison said both fires apparently were deliberately set. Damage in today's fire was estimated at between $50,000 and $60,000.

Fire departments from Roxboro and Oxford, and from South Boston, Va., answered the alarm, but could do little because of the lack of water facilities.

The offices of the town's only doctor, Dr. A. P. Bohannon, were destroyed along with all his equipment and supplies. A furniture store, a drug store, a hardware and general merchandise store and three warehouses also burned. Today's fire broke out directly across the street from the hotel which burned Sunday.

"The wind can blow through the whole block now," said Chief Ellison, who owned the hotel.

He said ten major fires have destroyed a good part of the small town within the past 15 years.

"People are really beginning to get worried now," he said. "It looks like we've got a real fire bug on our hands. At least he hasn't started on homes yet."

Price War Provides Bargains For Buyers

NEW YORK — (UP)—Millions of subway shoppers pitched in to help themselves today to bargains they hadn't seen in many a year with the city's biggest department stores firing the first rounds of a giant price war.

R. H. Macy Co., the world's largest department store under one roof, let go the first salvo with a double-page ad in this morning's newspapers announcing in two-inch high type:

"Now you can buy 5,978 'price fixed' items at less than price-fixed prices—at Macy's."

The ink was hardly dry when Gimbel's department store, almost as big and just across the street, declared through its controller, William Gorman:

"If Macy's cuts prices, we'll go right along with them. It looks like we are in an old fashioned price war."

Bloomington's, another large department store, announced it would not be undersold. Hearn's department store said "if there is a price war we'll be right in the middle of it."

Gimbel's and Macy's have been battling each other in newspaper ads in recent weeks over the question of standard brands. It started when Gimbel's was named "Standard Brands Store of the Year."

Macy's let it be known it was more interested in keeping prices down than selling standard brands, and that it sponsored its own special "name" brands at a low enough price.

And Macy's decided to take advantage today of last week's U. S. Supreme Court anti-fair trade decision by slashing 6 per cent from the retail prices of nearly 6,000 products. The store's 11,000 clerks worked late hours last night changing some 1,000,000 price tags.

Macy's President Richard Well Jr. said if competitors followed suit he would chop another 6 per cent off prices "as quick as you can say knife."

The fire began. A horse and a mule owned by the lumber mill lost their lives in the raging inferno.

Allies . . .

Allies captured a record 5,028 prisoners and killed or wounded 12,974 other Chinese in the three-day campaign.

The 8th Army sent strong armored task forces probing north from Hwachon, seven miles above the parallel, while other columns to the east struck through enemy rear guard to the south bank of the reservoir.

On the east-central and eastern fronts, a task force pushed north-east from Inje, five miles above the parallel, through harassing enemy fire. American elements in the Hyon area advanced 7,000 yards with little or no enemy contact.

Red groups of up to 2,000 cut off on the east-central front still were trying to break through to the north, however. With all major escape highways cut, they were scrambling over high mountains.

Front-line officers said the hills swarmed with small groups of Reds. They were surrendering in ever-increasing numbers as their desperate situation dawned upon them.

However, the Communists appeared to be making efforts to restore their line. Hundreds of enemy vehicles were spotted from the air moving south down both western and eastern Korea during the night.

B-26 light bombers and land-based Marine fighters attacked at least 225 of them. One B-26 destroyed 15 trucks and damaged 10 others in a 50-truck convoy. Another damaged five out of 15 vehicles in a convoy.

Marine fliers destroyed 19 trucks and damaged seven in convoys moving south just behind the lines.

programs and only listen once in awhile now.

But Mr. Frankfurter was particularly worried about TV, and what it can do to our future. He seemed to be referring to TV as "the new barbarism parading as scientific progress."

He was really disturbed about a statement made by some college president, whom Mr. Frankfurter didn't name. It seems this man, thinking about what people could get from TV, suggested the time may come when people won't have to know how to read.

That may come true, sure enough, although a lot of people wouldn't read much anyway and right now, when TV is still young, just one book would give some people such a splitting headache they'd run over and turn on TV to relieve the eyestrain.

There's still a chance the Justice is wrong and it will work just the other way around.

Just two nights ago I met a policeman who had his six-year old son with him. The boy was wearing long pants and looked sharp. I talked with him. He was sharp. His father said: "He knows a lot of words."

I asked what grade he was in. The father said: "He hasn't started school yet. But he spends two hours a day listening to TV. He picks up a lot of words. He asks me. I don't know half of them. So he runs and looks them up in the dictionary."

I just mention this because there is a boy who's not afraid of reading but he never gets a chance to see Supreme Court opinions so he still doesn't know Mr. Frankfurter is doubtful about his future.

But I bet if Mr. Frankfurter appeared on TV just once and used "dubitante," while the cop's kid was listening, the boy could run and look it up right away, and maybe then he'd shut off TV and sit in a corner to figure out by himself just what Mr. Frankfurter had in mind.

War, had visited Jellicoe on the Admiral's flagship and then had proceeded by the warship Hampshire on a mission to Russia. On June 5 we got a tip that the Hampshire had struck a mine and that Kitchen-er was lost.

I telephoned a government official whom I knew personally and asked if there was confirmation. I had no expectation of getting a positive answer, especially since telephones weren't in favor those days with British government officials for transmission of news. It therefore was with amazement that I got a reply in crisp and definite terms:

"I regret to say that the report is true."

So the censorship in a way did even up things in the matter of these two historic events which came within a few days of each other this time 35 years ago.

Knife Wielder Fined $50 In Police Court

In Police Court Monday, Judge J. W. H. Roberts found Thurman Matthews, colored, guilty of assaulting Melba Dupree, colored, with a deadly weapon (a knife). He fined the defendant $50, costs deducted.

Testimony was that the altercation occurred at 409-A West 12th Street.

W. J. Little, convicted of speeding, paid $20.

Drunk: Burt Nichols, 30 days in jail, sentence suspended on payment of $15; M. D. Lassiter, $15; Ernest Phillips and George M. Brown, both colored, each paid $15.

Attorney John R. Barker acted as solicitor for Eli Bloom, who was out of the city.

Man Drops Dead While At Work

Charlie Green, a Negro man employed by the Greenville Utilities Commission, dropped dead while at work late yesterday afternoon.

Green died right after he had jumped onto a truck and was joking with one of his fellow workers. According to one worker with him, Green was leaning against the side of the truck when he died.

He was taken in the truck to Dr. Smith's Clinic and Dr. James Smith said he died of natural causes. Coroner Rouse said no inquest would be held.

Green's age was given as "in his sixties" and his address was given as Allen's Alley, Greenville.
