British Cabinet Accepts Iran Oil Nationalization If Condition Met

Insist On Having Voice In Processing And Distribution Of Oil

LONDON T.—(UP)—The Cabinet decided today to accept in principle Iran's nationalization of the nationalization of the Anglo-Iranian Oil Co. on condition that Britain has a say in the processing and distribution of oil supplies, it was learned.
The compromise plan also stipulates that Britain has a right to intervene in the oil dispute because she holds most of the stock in the oil company, informed sources said.
The chief concern is to maintain a free flow of oil from Iran to the West and to assure "a certain degree of control" over the Abadan refinery, largest in the world, these sources said.
As the Cabinet discussed the crisis, the British Foreign Office, Treasury and the oil company conferred on appointment of a mission to be sent to Tehran to try to negotiate a settlement.
The mission is expected to leave by the end of this week. It was certain to include at least one of the government-appointed directors of the company.
Informed sources said the Cabinet is prepared to go a long way to settle the dispute with Iran amicably. But the government's attitude was said to have stiffened in that it is not prepared to accept unreasonable demands, such as independent Iranian action in the oil fields.
There were no moves to resume payment of advance royalties to Iran, at least until there are signs the dispute is going to be settled. Britain's royalties to the Iranian government are paid each spring and in August. The spring payment was made. In addition, Britain was paying monthly contributions as advance payments.
Britain made advance payments of about $14,000,000 in February and more than $5,000,000 in March. Further payments should have been made at the rate of about $5,000,000 a month, but the April and May payments were withheld.

Censorship Of War News Taken Over By General

TOKYO.—(UP)—Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway's Supreme Command will take control of all censorship of Korean war news, June 15, it was announced today.
At present, all war news originating in Korea is censored there by U.S. Army headquarters and sometimes re-censored in Tokyo before it is relayed to the United States.
Supreme Headquarters censors in Tokyo also censor all war news written in the Japanese capital.
Ridgway's censorship division—officially known as the Press Advisory Division—disclosed the abolition of "double censorship" in a statement signed by Lt. Col. Walter J. Preston, Jr., of the Tokyo censorship office.

Returns Not In, Claim Victory

BERLIN.—(UP)—Impatient communist officials proclaimed a plebiscite triumph today without even waiting for the polls to close.
They said an overwhelming majority in East and West Germany voted for a German peace treaty in 1951 and against remilitarization in a three-day plebiscite. The polls close tonight.

Fear Not Ours Alone

If It's Any Comfort To Americans, Stalin And His Cohorts Have More To Fear From A-Bomb Than We; They Don't Talk Much About It In Public

United Press Foreign News Editor
All Americans who are looking over their shoulders for fear an atomic bomb is about to fall on them can take comfort from the fact that Stalin and the Russians are worrying about the same thing. They don't discuss it in the newspapers, on the radio and in the living room like we do, but it is a genuine fear.
Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko of Russia handed a note yesterday to the representatives of America, Britain and France. Stripped of diplomatic language, what it said was: "If you want to end the cold war let's talk about getting rid of the bases of the United States established in Europe."
He didn't say so, but primarily he meant air bases—places from which our planes, carrying atomic bombs, could take off for Moscow, Leningrad and Stalingrad. The Russians saw enough of America's military aviation in World War II to have a healthy respect for the ability of our pilots to make their bombs fly to a target and unload their bombs.

Chinese Abandon Outer Defenses

Reds Fall Back Nearly Two Miles After Relentless Attack By Mud-Caked Allies To Stronger Positions

TOKYO, Wednesday.—(UP)—The Chinese Communists suddenly abandoned the outer bastions of their Chorwon line in central Korea Tuesday before a relentless attack by mud-caked Allied infantrymen.
After fighting furiously for every trench and bunker of their positions guarding their "iron triangle" redoubt, the Reds in the afternoon fell back nearly two miles to a stronger line. Allied troops made gains of 3,000 yards or more in their wake against light, scattered resistance.
The Communists started breaking contact shortly before noon and pulled back in what an 8th Army communique called a limited withdrawal.
Chorwon is the southwestern point of the triangle bastion. At the southeastern point, the United Nations troops were reported locked in a stalemate battle for the anchor town of Kumhwa.
Heavy fighting raged all along Kumhwa's southern approaches, fierce Red resistance limited Allied gains to 500 yards.
Foul weather, the Communists' great ally, deserted them Tuesday. Allied light bomber, fighter and artillery spotter planes swarmed over the enemy lines through breaking clouds.
Other bloody fighting was reported above Yanggu, Inje and Han-

Big Meat Packers Reducing Production

Lay Off Hundreds Of Workers; Claim Dwindling Supplies Of Cattle Priced Too High For Ceiling Compliance

CHICAGO.—(UP)—Swift, Armour and other big meat packers cut production and laid off hundreds of workers today because they said dwindling supplies of cattle were priced too high for ceiling compliance.
At Chicago, Swift Co. world's largest meat packer, slaughtered no beef at all today and laid off almost all of its more than 200 beef slaughterers.
Farmers sent still fewer cattle to the nation's 12 major livestock markets, and trade was reported slow with prices steady. Prices on some animals rose 50 cents a hundred pounds at Chicago.
Cutbacks and layoffs were announced by Armour, John Morrell & Co. at Ottumwa, Ia., and Oswald & Hess, Denholm Packing Co., and Pittsburgh Provision & Packing Co., at Pittsburgh.
Armour announced the layoff of 100 beef dressing employees, or half the department's normal force, at its Chicago plant which is the world's largest packing house.
Oswald & Hess discontinued beef slaughter entirely. The company said there was not enough cattle available at OPS prices.
Wilson & Co. said it had cut beef production "substantially" but had imposed no layoffs yet.
Morrell told its salesmen to stop selling beef because it could not buy any under the ceiling prices.

Describes Vast Production Plan

NORMAN, Okla.—(UP)—The United States has geared its economy to produce in two years what normally would be produced in 10, according to Eric Johnston, head of the Economic Stabilization Program.
In a commencement address for 2,104 students at the University of Oklahoma, Johnston said the U. S. is meeting its "riskiest hour" by developing defense production surge "that an aggressor... will count 10 before he speaks."
"We can't talk turkey to communism with a feather duster," he said.

Still Growing

Postoffice receipts for the month of May were larger by $333.29 than in May, 1950.
In May, 1950, the receipts totaled $10,178.01 with the largest amount being taken in during the last half of the month. The total for May of this year was $10,511.90 with the first half of the month topping the second half.
The sale of stamps was the largest collector of revenue with postage meter machines, box rent, and non-metered machines taking in a large portion of the receipts for last month.

Education Board Maps Calendar

The Pitt county Board of Education had a short but busy meeting yesterday afternoon and drew up a tentative calendar for the school year, 1951-52.
The calendar calls for the opening date of school next year at August 28 and the closing date in 1952 as May 21. The board set aside Wednesday, December 20, as the beginning of the Christmas holidays and named January 1 for resuming school after the holidays.
The calendar also called for a day in October to be set aside for teachers to attend the Northeastern District NCEA and a day will be set aside in March or April for the State NCEA meeting.
Members of the board approved a request from the Winterville School Board to use $1,600 from a special fund of the Winterville District in which to pay a school librarian and pay part of the salary of a commerce teacher.
The purchase of a lot from the Whitfield heirs adjoining the campus of the Grimesland Negro School was approved by the board. The lot is to be used as a part of the campus.

Margaret Does Deep Curtsey To British Royalty

LONDON.—(AP)—Margaret Truman, an American commoner, performed a deep curtsy upon meeting the two daughters of Britain's king at a party which wound up early today.
Guests at the dinner given by U.S. Ambassador and Mrs. Walter Gifford had wondered how great the president's daughter would greet Princess Elizabeth and Margaret.
Margaret met the princesses at the head of the stairs at the ambassador's Princes' Gate residence. Accepting royal protocol in such matters, she dropped quickly into a skilful curtsy.

Conscientious

KNOXVILLE, Tenn.—(UP)—Postal inspectors revealed here today that a conscientious thief, who raided a mail box, paid his victim's utilities bill and returned a savings bond which also was included in the haul.
Inspector M. D. Roadman said a government check for $112 was taken along with the bond and light and water bill.
He said the victim, R. B. Dick, of Knoxville, recently got a receipt from the utilities bill and the bond in the mail.

Negroes Win In Law School Test

GREENSBORO.—(AP)—The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill must now admit four Negroes to its law school.
The move was made necessary yesterday by the United States Supreme Court's denial of a petition to review the case involving the university and four Negro law school students.
The negroes are students at the North Carolina College Law School in Durham. The four are residents of this state and sought to transfer to the law school at Chapel Hill.
Judge Johnson J. Hayes held in Middle District Court last summer that the Negro law school in Durham and the one in Chapel Hill were substantially equivalent, that the state had not denied equal opportunity and that each school had advantages over the other. The Negroes appealed the case to the Circuit Court of Appeals.
The Circuit Court remanded the case to Middle District Court with the direction to Judge Hayes that he grant relief to the four Negroes.
The Supreme Court decision leaves the Circuit Court opinion in effect.

Armed Services Recruit Thirty-One From County

Pitt County teen agers show an overwhelming preference for enlisting in the Air Force rather than the regular Army.
Out of 31 youths who enlisted in the services during May and five days of this month, 25 went to the Air Force and the remainder went to the Army.
Recruiting sergeants could give no specific reason for the larger number, but stated the Air Force just seems to be more popular with teen agers than does the Army.
Five boys from Winterville enlisted yesterday and were shipped to Fort Bragg early this morning. They were Charles Glynn Smith, William T. Nobles, Bobbie Curtis Craft, Edward Carlton Buck and Harold D. Nobles, all for the Air Force, and Fred Wagner, Greenville, Army.
Other enlistments in June were:

Polio Time Approaches And Case Figures Rise

NEW YORK.—(UP)—The polio "season" is approaching and the number of cases reported so far this year is about the same as the same period in 1950.
Last year 33,309 cases were reported, some 20 per cent fewer than the 42,173 cases reported throughout 1949.
The hot summer months are generally regarded as the polio "season" because the disease usually picks up momentum in the incidence rate during that time. Scientists cannot explain why, but there are theories that polio virus spreads more rapidly when the weather is hot.
The latest statistics from the U.S. Public Health Service show that the number of cases increased slightly in the week ending May 25, as compared to the previous week. Eighty-eight new cases were reported during the week ending May 26. Of the 88 cases reported, 11 occurred in Texas, 14 in California, seven in Arizona, and five in West Virginia. No other state had more than five.
For the same week in 1950, 102 cases were reported, of which 39 were in Texas, nine in California, seven in New York six in Iowa and five in Arizona.
The U. S. Public Health Service points out that since March 15—usually the low point in polio incidence—648 cases have been reported as compared with 747 for the same period in 1950.
However, the 1950 peak in the number of cases did not arrive until late in the summer.

H. Horton Rountree Is Chosen Pitt Solicitor

By JOHN SPINKS, JR.
The county commissioners yesterday accepted the resignation of one man and appointed another to the position of solicitor of County Recorder's Court.
Charles Whedbee, present solicitor, presented his resignation to the board held for several years. The board appointed H. Horton Rountree, Farmville attorney, to fill Whedbee's unexpired term. Rountree's term will end June 30, 1952.
In presenting his letter of resignation, Whedbee stated he was doing something that he had never thought he would do and did not want to do. His resignation is effective July 2, the day he takes over the bench as judge of Greenville Recorder's Court.
Rountree presented an application for the job during May. He graduated from the University of North Carolina Law School last June and was admitted to the State Bar last summer.
W. N. Moore, assistant tax collector for the county, also presented a letter of resignation to the board. Moore, a Greenville resident, has been with the county tax office for the past three and a half years. His resignation is effective June 30.
J. T. Dupree, vice chairman of the board, presided in the absence of M. Brown Hodges, chairman, who is ill.
The board also:
Appointed Ferrell Morgan constable of Falkland Township.
Let a contract for $1,200 to Globe Hardware Company for painting the third floor of the old Pitt General Hospital.
Approved a petition of abandonment of a graveyard on the Falkland highway. The graveyard is on the property of Mrs. Emma Evans, who was one of the petitioners. It was presented by the State Highway Commission division office here for the purpose of moving the graves in order that the highway project between Greenville and Bruce can obtain the necessary right of way. Thirty persons are buried in the plot.
Voted to meet again June 18 to approve the budget for the next fiscal year.

Scattered Rain Over Pitt Areas

Showers in various parts of the county yesterday afternoon raised the hopes of farmers for their parched crops and was welcomed by city dwellers as a relief from the heat.
About one-fourth inch of rain fell in Stokes late yesterday afternoon and Bethel had enough rain around 5 o'clock to settle the dust.
Grimesland was showered only slightly between 5 o'clock and 5:30. Rain between Pactolus and Stokes and between Pactolus and Greenville helped those areas a great deal. Pactolus had some showers last week.
On June 4, 1950, there was recorded 1.23 inches of rain in Greenville and the temperature was 80 degrees. This year on June 4, the high was 90 degrees and it dropped to 70 degrees during the night.
Mrs. Carl Maiden, weather forecaster, said there were signs of rain late this afternoon and tomorrow.

Four Killed By Exploding 'Dud'

TOKYO.—(UP)—A U.S. scrap iron dealer and three curious children were killed today when a wartime aerial bomb exploded while bargaining for its purchase was in progress. Three others persons were injured.
A woman found four small bombs on a beach. She offered them to the dealer. He was inspecting them in his scrap yard, with the children looking on when one of the bombs exploded.
The board also:
Appointed Ferrell Morgan constable of Falkland Township.
Let a contract for $1,200 to Globe Hardware Company for painting the third floor of the old Pitt General Hospital.

Noted Conductor Koussevitzky Dies In Boston

BOSTON.—(UP)—Lovers of classical music mourned today the death of Serge A. Koussevitzky, 76, retired conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.
Koussevitzky, an early refugee from Russian bolshevism, died last night of a virus infection. He had conducted the Boston Symphony for 26 years before retiring last year.
Only his wife, Olga, was at his bedside when he died, for Koussevitzky had attempted to conceal his condition to avoid cancelling his plans to conduct the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., later this summer.
They had been found guilty in 1949 by a trial jury in New York of conspiring to teach overthrow of this government by force. This is an ABC on how the Supreme Court reached its decision.
The first amendment to the constitution guarantees everyone the right of free speech. It says: "Congress shall make no law...abridging the freedom of speech..."
Just how free can speech be? Unlimited? Does the constitution mean that Congress, elected by the people, has no right to pass a law protecting their government from persons advocating its overthrow by force?
The court has recognized that free speech can't be unlimited. It has been the court's problem through the years to protect the government and at the same time safeguard everyone's freedom of speech as much as possible.

Reds Object To Familiar Hails

VIENNA.—(UP)—Supposedly good Communists in Hungary are greeting the girls with cries of "Hi ya, honey!" instead of the proper salutation of "Freedom!" a letter writer to the Budapest Red Trade Union newspaper complained.
"It is of common occurrence," a factory worker wrote, "that the comrades greet the comrades with the usual 'Hello!' or 'Hi.' Aside from this shame, it may even happen that the comrades say 'Hi ya, honey!' or on leaving the girls say 'Ta la, baby' or even 'Toodie-oo!'"

Korea Armistice Left Up To U.N.

Scott Declares N. C. Unable To Fill Road Demand

RALEIGH.—(AP)—Governor Scott asserted today that pressure for new North Carolina roads, especially by-passes around cities and towns, is getting terrific.
He told a news conference that if the state had available now all $10,000,000 the Powell City Street Aid Bill provides during the next two fiscal years, it still would be impossible to fill the state's demands and needs.
The Governor said the road building program will be slowed down appreciably by the shortage of war materials. This is especially true, he added, of steel for bridges and metal culverts.
Commenting on the steel shortage, Scott declared: "We've got a thousand or more bridges in the state. At least 300 of these should be condemned."
Scott told newsmen the road building program is "doing as much as anything to balance the state's budget."

Logwoodsman Is Accident Victim

Thad Green, 28-year-old Negro logwoodsman, was instantly killed near Station's Mill yesterday when a tree fell on him.
Pitt County Coroner Griffin H. Rouse said Green and James Langley, Negro, were sawing timber. A tree fell against another tree. To release the victim timbermen sawed the supporting tree. When it fell it skidded down the leaning tree, hurling Green to the ground. It crushed his head and buried it in the ground.
Other workers sawed a six-foot log from the tree and rolled it away to release the dead man. The body was taken to Flanagan & Parker's Funeral Home. There will be no inquest.
The men were cutting timber for Linwood Briley on the J. F. Taylor land, near Station's Mill. The mill is on the Bethel highway, about six and a half miles north of Greenville.

Acheson Outlines Policy Despite Insistence That U. S. Should Be Free To Act On Its Own; Defends Korea Venture Without War Declared

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Secretary of State Acheson said today the United States will consult the United Nations before making any armistice in Korea. He held to this stand despite insistence from a Democratic Senator that this country should hold itself free to act on its own.
Senator Gillette (D-Ia.) tangled sharply with Acheson at the Senate's McCarthy inquiry both on the question of an armistice and on President Truman's right in the first place to send U. S. troops to Korea without congressional approval.
Under Gillette's questions Acheson said the U. S. commander in the field has the right to "bring about an armistice." But he said other U. N. members would be consulted.
Gillette said he doesn't agree that is necessary.
"I may say that I deplore your interpretation and repudiate it personally," he told Acheson.
Gillette insisted that the United States, given what Acheson said was "full command" in the field, could act "subject to a report to the Security Council and nothing more."
It was Acheson's fourth day of testimony at hearings by the Senate Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committees on the ouster of Gen. Douglas MacArthur from his commands. Acheson was dismissed from the witness chair for the day at 11:30 a.m. (EST), but was asked to return at 2 p.m. (EST) tomorrow. The day's hearings were on short notice so the committee members could attend a Senate session.
During his two hours of testimony today Acheson told the Senators:
1. The United States counts on convincing other United Nations members that the "Communists cannot shoot their way" into the U. N., rather than figuring on a veto to keep Red China out of the international organization. But he said that if the United States ever finds itself in the minority on the U. N. Security Council, it can ask the World Court to determine whether the veto could be used to bar the seating of new representatives of a nation which has been made a permanent member of the Security Council.
2. He thinks Russia had "complete domination" over the government of North Korea. He said: "It certainly trained that army, and it was an offensive army, armed for offense."
3. The bombing of Manchuria in his opinion "would have much more of a tendency to bring on a general enlargement of hostilities" than freeing Chinese Nationalist troops on Formosa to attack the mainland of China. This statement was in answer to questions by Senator Flinders (R-Vt.) about contentions that these two steps advocated by MacArthur might touch off a third World War.
In his exchange with Gillette Acheson stoutly defended President Truman's authority to commit a quarter of a million American troops to the fighting in Korea without congressional action. He said the President had constitutional authority to do it.
Gillette told him the people are "much disturbed and bewildered" by the Korean affair.
"Key were in to all of us thousands of letters and ask what we are doing in Korea," he said. "No war has been declared. Why do

Freedom Of Speech

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Freedom of speech was the main point involved in yesterday's Supreme Court decision upholding the conviction of the 11 top Communist Party leaders.
They had been found guilty in 1949 by a trial jury in New York of conspiring to teach overthrow of this government by force. This is an ABC on how the Supreme Court reached its decision.
The first amendment to the constitution guarantees everyone the right of free speech. It says: "Congress shall make no law...abridging the freedom of speech..."
Just how free can speech be? Unlimited? Does the constitution mean that Congress, elected by the people, has no right to pass a law protecting their government from persons advocating its overthrow by force?
The court has recognized that free speech can't be unlimited. It has been the court's problem through the years to protect the government and at the same time safeguard everyone's freedom of speech as much as possible.
This is illustrated in a famous decision, written by Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes in 1919, when the court upheld the conviction of a Socialist who, during World War I, sent circulars to draftees, urging them not to let themselves be taken into the armed forces.
What Holmes said, in short, was this: What a man says one time, when the government isn't in real danger, may be all right but not all right when there is danger. He said:
"We admit that in many places and in ordinary times the defendant in saying all that was said in the circular would have been within (his) constitutional rights. But the nature of every act depends upon the circumstances in which it is done...the question in every case is whether the words used are of such a nature as to create a clear and present danger that they will bring about the substantive evils that Congress has a right to prevent."
In 1940 Congress decided it had a right to pass a law, called the

After the business period the program consisted of reports from the state convention. Mrs. H. W. Winstead, Mrs. J. G. Lautares, Mrs. Van Fleming, and Mrs. G. B. W. Hadley made interesting reports and comments on the convention indicating the work and growth of the Patient Circle of the Kings Daughters and Sons in North Carolina.

The tea at the Governor's mansion and the banquet at the Sir Walter Hotel were among some of the entertainment features. But the most outstanding event of this convention was the unanimous election of Mrs. Clara Moye Shackell to the office of state president.

The members and guests were invited into the dining room where a delectable buffet luncheon was served consisting of salad, deviled eggs, sandwiches, pickles, cakes, hot coffee and iced drinks.

Miss Duke Fetes Brides Elect At Morning Party

Miss Frances Aman and Miss Frances Tucker, brides-elect of June, were complimented on Monday morning at 11 o'clock when Miss Joyce Duke entertained at a Coca Cola party at her home on Johnston street.

Fever few and pastel larkspur formed charming floral arrangements in the living and dining rooms. A bowl of variegated blossoms were used to center the refreshment table, from which iced drinks, canapes, hors d'oeuvres, pastries and nuts were served. The table was lovely with a white organdy cloth placed over the blue satin.

pally the Chinese communists entered the slaughter in Korea to gain world recognition, and to force the free nations to allow her to rest her bloody hands upon the United Nations conference table with the other nations of the world.

For that goal the Red Chinese troops still fight in Korea; and for that cause the communist leaders have placed 100,000 of their troops on the slaughtering block in the past several weeks. How much longer can they make such sacrifices? Will they abandon their suit for a place among the society of nations until their last man has fallen?

The Chinese communists should not be allowed a seat in the United Nations. If they are, the organization will have ceased to be an organization for peace and for the preservation of freedom in the world. The bloody hands of one of the world's greatest outlaws will have joined hands with his accomplice at the table of nations. The United Nations will have outlasted its usefulness to the world of men who created it with high hopes for peace.

Pressure from within the realm of free nations as well as from without is seeking for the Chinese communists that which they want most at the present time . . . membership in the United Nations. The pressure should be resisted with America's vast reservoir of military and diplomatic strength.

News Behind The News
 BY RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON—The termination of the civilian economy phase of the Marshall Plan, as described in this column yesterday, raises the overall question of what gain the United States has obtained from this multi-billion-dollar operation. In other words, do the millions of foreigners benefited directly or indirectly realize that their lot was improved through the generosity of the American taxpayers and their government?

It is fairly well established that the Marshall Plan has strengthened allied nations' systems of industry, transportation and agriculture to the extent that they can now cooperate more fully with us in rearming against the Russian threat of a European invasion. It is believed that American aid has kept several countries, especially France and Italy, from voting Communists into local and national power. We are now beaming it toward India.

PURPOSE—But do the average Britisher, Frenchman, Italian, Greek and all the other millions know that they might have starved, gone without employment and fallen back into medieval standards of living, perhaps, if it had not been for our bounty? Or do they believe, as the Russians have tried to propagandize, that our ulterior aim in furnishing these billions was to extend our "imperial sway" to the Old World?

This may seem like a selfish question, like a too material analysis of M. P. results. But if our aid did not make friends abroad for the United States and its world aims, it was a failure, despite the humanitarian accomplishments. It was a failure, that is, from our standpoint. For its basic purpose was to demonstrate to the world that our system of government and enterprise held out more hope for the common man than Josef Stalin's.

BUSINESSLIKE—First, it must be understood that the Marshall Plan was not a relief or a Hopkins-Ickes, WPA-PWA program. When Paul Hoffman took charge, he served notice on the "do-gooders" here and the "gimmies" abroad that it was to be strictly a businesslike undertaking. No frills, no ruffles, no flourishes. Here is how it operates:

Suppose a manufacturer in Leige, France, needed a new lathe to increase the efficiency of his plant. The machine was not available in France, and he had no dollars to buy one from this country. So, he contacted the French Ministry of Industry and explained his problem. He had to convince this agency that he could do more and better work, if he had an extra lathe.

After a careful survey, the Ministry submitted his request to our ECA mission in Paris. They checked, and found that the Leige applicant was deserving. Their recommendation was rechecked when it reached ECA headquarters at Washington. The French Ministry was then notified that enough dollars for purchase of the lathe had been made available here by ECA. The Leige man then deposited the equivalent amount of French francs with his government. After all this, the purchase became a private transaction.

OPERATION—The Leige manufacturer had probably had pre-war dealings with American makers of lathes. If not, American firms with representatives abroad or at Washington would get in touch with him, as soon as ECA issued notice to the effect that he had been authorized to buy. Shipment and delivery were likewise a private operation.

There was one other intra-government deal. The francs which he put up were deposited with the French government's bank, and recorded as "counterpart funds." The French government could then spend this money on domestic projects, but only after it convinced ECA experts at Paris that it would be used for constructive purposes, and not for boondoggling.

I have used a Leige maker of lathes as an example here. But the details I have given apply, whether the purchaser wanted to buy a refinery, machinery for an automobile plant, railroad equipment or any other article.

MISTAKEN—The same principles govern with respect to such consumers' goods as wheat for food and cotton for clothing, and these were two of our largest ECA commodities in the early postwar days. But the American taxpayer is mistaken, if he thinks that ECA agents dressed in red-white-and-blue, fancy ball costume symbolizing Uncle Sam peddled their necessities free from door to door. Here again it was a business proposition, as the present deal with Nehru's India will be.

As a rule, governments rather than private industries bought wheat. When they received it, Paris, Rome or Athens sold it to millers in various sections for transforming it into flour. The millers, of course, paid for the wheat, and charged their normal profit when they sold it to local bakers. The latter then sold loaves of bread over the counter, and they obtained their profit from their customers.

OPTIONAL—There was no charity involved, save in exceptional circumstances, and free distribution of this American aid was optional with the recipient governments. If some Frenchmen, Greeks or Indians were unable to buy this bread because of their poverty or distressed local conditions, it was presumably given to them free, as Harry Hopkins distributed relief during the depression.

This A-B-C explanation of ECA's operations shows that it was not a give-away. Salvation Army, Christmas-time adventure. It was a transaction involving great and small industries and governments, with a minimum of official interposition and intervention.

So, the question remains: Do the millions of people in Marshall Plan countries know the identity of their benefactors? In view of space limitation, I shall have to discuss that all-important question in a subsequent column.

No Man's Land

Somebody Told Me

By L. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR

Up until Sunday most of the flying I had done was in gliders. During WW II I was in the 13th Airborne Division and was subjected to flights in flying match boxes, as we used to call them. But the trip I took Sunday was quite different from the glider flights; it was pure pleasure.

Ray MacKenzie of the Greenville Equipment Company and I took off from the Pitt County Airport in his Aeronca two-seater at about 8:15 Sunday morning, flew to Morehead, up the coast to Ocracoke, had breakfast there, and returned to Greenville at 1:00, in time for dinner.

Frankly, 7:30 is a trifle early for me to be getting up on Sunday morning. When I rode down town en route to the airport, it amazed me to see the City Solicitor, Ed Bloom, down town. The reason he was up so early might bring on another column.

You can see plenty from 1,000 feet above the ground. The biggest surprise to me when we reached that altitude was that Kerr Scott has not, repeat, has not, paved every road in North Carolina. There is only a few unpaved ones left, however.

As soon as we leveled off I checked the dials in the plane: Air speed: 85; altitude, 1,000; oil pressure, 30; temperature, 180; revolutions per minute, 21,000; course, south 15 degrees. It seemed safe then, so I memorized the figures so I'd know when to worry.

The weather has been dry, but the young tobacco looked great from the air. The patterns that the plows make are seldom appreciated from the ground, but from the air they are plum artistic.

The Aeronca has a cruising speed of 90 MPH, which is increased or decreased by the wind. But the speed of the plane is only one factor that saves the time.

It's a great help to go "by the way the crow flies," instead of following a crooked highway. For example, if you've ever been to New Bern you know that you have to ride down to Bridgeton to cross over the river. By air Bridgeton is completely by-passed.

New Bern is proud of the fact that she is one of the oldest towns in the state. From the air, her age doesn't show up to much, except when you see the graveyard. Never have I seen such a big graveyard.

From New Bern we went on to Morehead. The contrast in the land below was interesting to note: Closer to Morehead, less land was cleared. In places, there was just a sea of trees below. At Atlantic Beach, we were surprised at the number of swimmers on the beach at 9:30 on Sunday morning.

This flight will be continued tomorrow.

And I thank you.

JUDGES—In re-appointing all eight special judges for two year terms, Governor Scott followed precedent of his predecessors, which he had ignored in two major respects in his first appointment two years ago. Governor Scott was the first chief executive to name the full authorized quota of eight special judges at one time, and the first to decline reappointment of a judge, except when it was deemed unnecessary to continue as many men on the special judges roll. Governor Cherry did not reappoint Judges R. D. Dixon and Jeff D. Johnson, because he decided the full quota was not needed. When Gov. Scott got around to naming special judges in 1949 he retained only two of the incumbents, Judges Sumner Burgwyn and George Patton. He did not reappoint Judges Luther Hamilton, Paul Edmonds, George Shuford, Charles Coggin or Peyton McSwain.

APPOINTEES—Of the original Scott appointees one died, Judge W. P. Horton of Pittsboro, and he was succeeded by Judge Howard Godwin of Dunn. The special judges reappointed last week were: Judges Susie Sharpe of Reidsville, George Patton of Franklin, A. R. Crisp of Lenoir and Harold Bennett of Asheville from the western circuit; Judges Gov. no Scott got around to naming special judges in 1949 he retained only two of the incumbents, Judges Sumner Burgwyn and George Patton. He did not reappoint Judges Luther Hamilton, Paul Edmonds, George Shuford, Charles Coggin or Peyton McSwain.

RECAP—Previous editions of the Manual listed from three to seven special judges as follows: In 1931 four, and 1933 three, appointed by Governor Gardner; in 1935 and 1937 three each year, appointed by Governor Ehringhaus; in 1939 and 1941 three each year, named by Governor Hoke; in 1943 seven, and 1945 six, appointed by Governor Broughton; in 1947 six and 1949 seven, named by Governor Cherry.

INCOMPLETE—The Manual listing does not include all of the special judges who served during the past twenty years. Some died or retired or were replaced by others, or the posts left vacant if the full quota was not needed. Well informed people around Capitol square recall that, there were a few times when eight special judges functioned for short periods. The first two years of the Scott regime is the only time the roll has been kept full all the time. Other prominent officials have failed to get their names in the biennial Manual because their service began and ended between publication dates of the book, which is issued during each general assembly. Senator Frank Graham, for example, was appointed after the 1949 Manual went to press, and was succeeded by Senator Willis Smith before the 1951 edition was compiled. The 1949 book records the election and death of Senator J. M. Broughton, but Graham was not named to succeed him in time to make the deadline.

PAYROLLS—The oft repeated claim that Eastern North Carolina does not have appreciable industrial enterprises, does not mean the area is a desert so far as regular payrolls are concerned. The biggest payroll in North Carolina is that of the United States Marine Corps with tremendous permanent bases at Camp Lejeune and Cherry Point, and smaller units scattered throughout the area. The biggest payroll in North Carolina is that of the United States Marine Corps with tremendous permanent bases at Camp Lejeune and Cherry Point, and smaller units scattered throughout the area. The United States Army has a payroll at Fort Bragg and auxiliary points larger than that of any single private enterprise in the state. Now the United States Air Force is moving in with prospective payrolls of uniformed and civilian personnel amounting to more than five million dollars a year. In addition to these direct payrolls, the incidental employment of thousands of people in private business establishments catering to customers created by location of these military establishments, will put many thousands of dollars into trade channels of Eastern Carolina.

AIR FORCE—Announcement has been made of selection of Kinston as the site for cadet flight training school to be conducted by Truman Miller and his Serv-Air, Inc., firm of Raleigh. This is one of nine proposed such schools to be established in the United States under the new plan of civilian training of air force pilots. There is occasion for pride that a North Carolina point was chosen for one of the schools, but the idea sought to be emphasized here is the payroll angle. First, there will be about a quarter million dollars spent in enlarging and equipping present facilities at the Kinston airport. Once the school gets going, presently scheduled for mid-November, it is estimated the annual payroll will be three million dollars a year, of which about $800,000 will be salaries of air force officers, the balance going to civilian instructors and attendants. It is practically certain that the air force will establish a training base at Raleigh-Durham airport, entirely under military control, and with an overall payroll comparable to or in excess of that at Kinston.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLAS

OBSTINATE AND HONEST

Major General William Heath, who served under George Washington, has been designated "that obstinate, honest man." To him Washington committed the enormous task of getting the colonial forces off Long Island when Sir William Howe was just about ready to gobble up the American army and put an end to the Revolution. Heath accomplished his task as perfectly as the Colonial army itself scarcely knew it was being moved, and the British were wide-eyed with astonishment when they discovered how thousands of troops had been snatched out from under their noses over night.

This man Heath had no brilliant military successes to his credit. He seemed to have only one virtue, and that was to obey orders implicitly. This he did at Long Island, and the result was that he saved the American army when it was more in danger of being wiped out than at any other time, probably, during the Revolution.

The world is full of Heaths, and a grand lot of people they are. They lack imagination, they have very little resourcefulness, but they know how to take orders from someone whom they trust and carry them out faithfully.

There are only a few Washingtons in world history. But even the great Washingtons have to rely on the laborious Heaths who are completely faithful in the hour of crisis.

Danger Lurks In The Cool Waters

In the summer days under the broiling sun, nothing is more natural for the youngster than to seek a shady spot in a cool stream or pond in which to escape the withering heat.

The youngsters of Greenville are not exceptions to the rule; but with the city swimming pool closed for an indefinite period, the situation presents quite a problem.

The most immediate solution to the youngsters' swimming problem is the tempting and treacherous Tar river. Other tempting offers for the cool delight of swimming come from the small ponds and streams in the vicinity of the city. But within each lies the danger of unpredictable water ready to snatch under the inexperienced swimmer.

The parents of Greenville should take precautions during these next few weeks to make sure their youngsters don't wander to the river or one of the other streams for unsupervised swimming. If precautions are not taken, the results may be tragic.

The Tar, with its eddies, whirlpools and uneven bottom is a dangerous place for even experienced swimmers. During 1949 alone, the river claimed the lives of at least six people in Pitt county, of whom three were boys 9, 11 and 14 years old. Fortunately during 1950 there were no drownings reported in the river near Greenville. If precautions are taken Greenville may be just as fortunate in 1951.

If the children must go swimming to escape the heat, find a safe place for them to swim, and be sure the swimming is supervised by a person who is capable of coping with an emergency should one arise.

Finding a safe place to swim, however, practically rules out the possibility of the river as a swimming hole.

Bloody Hands Across The Table

The peace rumors concerning the Korean conflict again are flowing thick and fast through the international circles, but the free world is only 100,000 Red Chinese closer to peace now than it was before the communist spring offensive began in Korea.

It was a year ago this month that the North Korean communists swept past the 38th parallel to conquer the Republic of South Korea. It was a year ago that the people of the United States saw their sons thrown into an undeclared war with rifles and grenades to fight against tanks and heavy artillery.

The North Koreans many months ago lost their bid for the conquest of land and people through invasion of South Korea. But a new foe of freedom, with a different purpose in mind, stepped into the conflict just as the North Korean forces collapsed.

Red China wanted neither territory nor captives from the Korean conflict. Both would have been welcome by-products for the greedy-communist hordes, but princi-

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER
 "The price war that broke out in New York after the Supreme Court knocked the props out from under the laws by which manufacturers could fix prices of trade-marked articles has created a good bit of hysteria in some quarters."

Let's see if we can clear up a few points.

John W. Anderson, president of the American Fair Trade Council, said recently, and will probably say again in a speech he is making in New York today, that "this fair-trade controversy is beginning to present a most incongruous alliance of Communist fronts and mouthpieces of monopoly, joined in condemning so-called price-fixing." It will be jolting news to thousands of housewives to learn that they had been playing into the hands of Joe Stalin and "mouthpieces of monopoly" when they scrambled for bargains. It will be a tough day for these girls when the red front comes out in favor of coffee for breakfast. The mouthpieces already have.

There have also been published fears that lack of fixed prices will ruin many small businesses. It is probably true that some of them will be hurt. However, ratio of fair-traded items to those not price-fixed has always been small; that's always been one of the principal arguments of the "so-called price fixers." Furthermore, small business men south, Texas, Vermont and the District of Columbia, where there never have been fair-trade laws.

Sales of breaded merchandise York have also led to fears that all business will suffer. Nonsense. Most, but not all, of the merchandise offered come from excessively high inventories. The price cutters have been using the Supreme Court decision for a double advantage. They are unloading heavy stocks, and when doing this at a loss they calculate the loss is less than getting stuck with the goods. And they are getting priceless publicity for the idea that they are keeping prices down.

Sales at losses won't continue long in New York or other places where price-cutting is attempted. After excess stocks are dumped and publicity possibilities thoroughly milked, prices will go up to old-fixed levels; others may. Unless normal margins prevail, stores will go broke. And business suicide isn't at all popular.

MANUFACTURER FORCED TO SELL TO PUBLIC.
 "The situation in the furniture industry is dramatized by the fact that a Los Angeles manufacturer opened his factory showroom to sell suites direct to the public at less than wholesale prices. 'I know this is going to wash us up with local dealers,' said the manufacturer. He added that he would probably have to redesign his lines. It was understood that lenders were pressing the manufacturer for $50,000 owed."

75 PERCENT OF MANUFACTURERS ARE MAKING PROFITS.
 Manufacturers, on the whole, are making profits. Of 250 manufacturing firms responding to a survey by "Mill and Factory," 79 per cent reported they were making a profit, 16 per cent were breaking even and 5 per cent were operating at a loss. A year ago, 39 per cent were making a larger profit, 40 per cent were making a smaller profit, 15 per cent were breaking even and 6 per cent were operating at a loss.

Increased cost of materials and higher labor costs were the most common reasons given by firms making less money. Only 5 per cent replied that they thought the government is doing a "good job in curbing inflation."

STORE TAKES UP TO 10 OLD SUITS AS TRADE-INS.
 Accepting men's old suits as trade-ins on new ones has become a number of stores recently. An East St. Louis, Ill., store set some kind of a record when it offered $5 each on up to 10 suits from each customer. Two customers brought in the limit of 10 old suits. Results were "wonderful," said Don Beveridge, who planned the sale (for A's).

Hal Boyle's Column

By HAL BOYLE
 NEW YORK (AP)—The Poor Man's Philosopher took a glance at his desk calendar and then sat down at his typewriter. He put in a piece of paper and typed this heading: "Advice To The 1951 June Graduate."

Then he leaned back and tried to look thoughtful, like a hen intently anticipating an egg. A moment later a pretty blonde graduate, class of 1950, came by. Noting his glassy-eyed stare, she paused and said:

"What's the matter, Aristotle, are you ill?"

"Of course not," said the Poor Man's Philosopher indignantly. "I always look this way when I am concentrating."

"What are you writing about today—children or small animals?"

"Neither," replied the home-made sage. "I am about to deliver myself to my annual message to June graduates—you know, a kind of invitation to the new world they are about to enter."

"What's the matter?" asked the philosopher, uneasily. "Don't you approve?"

"No, I don't," said the young blonde firmly. "Every year you give advice to the June graduate. So do at least 10,000 other columnists, editorial writers and commencement speakers. Then what happens? You all promptly forget them—every one of you."

"What do you suggest?"

"Well, why don't you give some good advice to college graduates who've been out six months or a year? Nobody ever thinks of them and their troubles."

"Such as?"

"Such as the problem of adjusting their ideals to the conditions of the market place," said the young lady. "In college I studied freedom of the press. What do I have to do with freedom of the press now? I type cards for a newspaper library index."

last as long. Don't give up, Jie, just keep on giving the best you have, and you'll get the final payoff you deserve."

The Poor Man's Philosopher then got up and went into the men's room. He looked at his balding head in the mirror.

"Why," he muttered, "doesn't someone give some advice to the college graduate of 1952?"

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON—Experience in World War II bombings in Britain and recent briefing on up-to-date English measures have given Mrs. Sarah Whitehurst some practical ideas for helping build our own civil defense program.

Special assistant to Millard Caldwell, head of the Civil Defense Administration, Mrs. Whitehurst, former president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, says the first big job is to make people realize that such a program exists. She says everyone must take part in it and that each individual should learn how to protect himself.

"It is a program that will educate the people how to take care of themselves," she told me. "The British claim that in an emergency 90 per cent of the threatened population can save themselves if intelligently informed."

A great many World War II bombing casualties were the result of fear and panic—also fire, because people did not know how to combat it, British defense officials told her.

The U. S. program, she says, is being built slowly but on a sound foundation. Every department of the government is coordinating in the project. The "blueprinting" is being done here and state and local governments probably will follow pretty much the same set-up.

Several schools for training civil defense officials and rescue workers will be set up after the manner of schools in England and Scotland, Mrs. Whitehurst says. Three of 30 pamphlets compiled by the defense unit have already gone out, and films will be issued to civic, school, health and other local groups. The pamphlet "Survival Under Atomic Attack" is a best-seller. Some 10,000,000 have been issued. Baltimore Boy and Girl Scouts issued reproductions of its details on illustrated placards from door to door.

Almost ready are pamphlets bearing such titles as "What You Should Know About Poison Gas," "Decontamination," "Fire-Fighting for the Householder," "How to Build a Simple Backyard Shelter."

Mrs. Whitehurst says there's no such thing as a woman's division in the new civil defense set-up. "In the case of emergency, men and women must work together," she says. "Women can do everything planned for men if they are qualified, except, perhaps the heavy rescue and fire-fighting work, though in Britain during the war some women did these jobs well."

"Women's organizations will be called in at a later date and briefed, but civil defense will not work with them as organizations. The groups are expected to work with the state CD officials."

What Other Papers Are Thinking

THE DANGER OF POWER
 (The Wilson Daily Times)
 "America is a powerful nation. In industry alone she has the capacity of the rest of the world. Slowly, we're becoming powerful in a military sense, too. We may not have the land army of other nations; but we control the seas and the air and we possess new weapons which have a fire-power far greater than any other. Our might could be our danger. Will we, because of that might, talk our way into a war? Similar power has hurt other nations in the past. France under Napoleon and Germany under the Kaiser stand out as two bad illustrations. Capable of meeting the best of them if left alone, they found that the other nations, fearing their power, 'ganged up' on them, wrecking their plans for conquest. For however powerful a nation might be, its leaders are capable of unwise decisions. Napoleon made one when he decided to attack Russia. The Kaiser made another when, through submarine warfare, he provoked the United States. Inherently there's a danger in too much power. It's something we should all look squarely in the face and recognize. For the knowledge that that power exists spurs many a man to make statements that he wouldn't have made without it. Russia is a shining example. Refusing to demobilize after the war, she frightened the world. It was that fright which caused the other nations to build up their power again and Russia some day may feel its effects. But let's hope that some American leader does not abuse what he has. Right now, it's too risky.

Psychiatry No Sure Bet To Clear Political Air

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Newfeatures Writer

A mid-western psychiatrist recently came up with the idea that all candidates for public office be required first to pass a sanity test.

I suppose in time to come, each of us will have his own psychiatrist just as we now have our own dentist or medical practitioner. But I doubt if the time is close when a man or woman with political ambitions will first have to win a clean bill of health, duly notarized.

Granted that psychiatry and psychoanalysis are important developments in our time and of inestimable help to suffering millions, I think a requirement of proven sanity would do nothing to improve our political climate.

As things stand right now, the voting public frequently complains about the over-all calibre of its public servants. Government officials complain about the difficulty of wooing successful men from private industry into federal, state or municipal employ where, for less money, they frequently find themselves targets for abuse.

If, in addition, these men and women find it necessary to prove to the satisfaction of a board of psychiatrists that they were in full control of their senses, I'm afraid public service, would prove one of the world's least attractive callings.

Psychiatrists, apparently, are a very ambitious bunch of people—or as a group they must be certain they hold the key to life's riddle. Maybe they do, but in fairly recent months I have encountered tered all manner of suggestions about using the science to pre-test all manner of things, ranging from the issuance of automobile operators' licenses to matrimony.

I'm conscious of the great good that the mental hygiene men and women of the nation are doing with individuals on one hand. On the other I shudder at what might happen if a group of them were given absolute control over phases of the average citizen's life.

As an old police reporter, I've covered many a homicide trial where the eminent psychiatric experts for the prosecution and for the defense split neatly into two camps, both with persuasive cases designed to show clearly that the defendant was manifestly completely loony or in full command of his reason at a given time. Obviously they both couldn't be right. And if it were a question of my being their pigeon in my search for a driving license, a husband, a spot on a production line or a seat on the town council, I just wouldn't play. The mere thought makes me nervous.

As a matter of fact, the whole project probably would blow up in smoke. In the first instance, the sanity test requirement would have to be set up by some group of lawmakers. These people would be untested for their own sanity. And who, then, would pick the examining psychiatrists? How would the examinee be sure his examiners were within the normal mental brackets? In my time I've seen some psychiatrists who acted in rather strange ways.

With the whole business of psychoanalysis and psychiatry the exact and somewhat mysterious science it still is today, it would seem more logical to let it age and mature a while longer. The mere suggestion that psychiatrists attempt to screen the heads of ambitious politicians brought, I am certain, loud laughter from the politicians themselves. As an old eavesdropper in smoke-filled rooms I know that their favorite expression is "Anyone who goes into politics must be crazy."

The April meeting of Circle No. Two was held at the home of Mrs. W. C. Jenkins. Mrs. J. T. Manning, Jr. presided. Eight members answered roll call. Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved as read.

A short business session was held. The circle voted to order another hundred bottles of vanilla. We'll be expecting your orders for vanilla, folks. The secretary was asked to write and get information about another child at the Southern Christian home since the one to whom we have been sending gifts has graduated. The circle voted to sponsor a "Tom Thumb Wedding" in June, the committee and date to be announced at the next meeting.

For the program we sang two hymns and Mrs. Jenkins read a very timely and informative article on prayer after which we went right into our Bible study.

At the conclusion of our study period our hostess served a very delicious plate consisting of a barbecue sandwich with slaw, deviled eggs, pickles, blueberry muffins and iced tea.

The May meeting of Circle No. Two was held Monday night, May 21 at the home of Mrs. Jesse Jordan in Greenville. The vice chairman, Mrs. J. T. Manning, Jr. presided. Minutes of last meeting were read and approved as read, after which we had roll call and collection taken. We were delighted to have Mrs. Raymond Smith with us. Even though Vivian has moved away she is still one of us.

A business session was held at which time a treasurer's report was given. Mrs. Amos Evans announced that she had ordered the vanilla but that it had not arrived. Plans were made for the Tom Thumb Wedding—the date, Wednesday, June twentieth. The wedding will be in the church and there will be a reception immediately afterwards in the community building. Please make your plans to attend. Mrs. Amos Evans, Mrs. W. C. Jenkins and Mrs. Travis Crawford were appointed as the committee in charge of the Tom Thumb Wedding.

We had a thirty minute Bible study period still continuing our study of John. In spite of the fact that there are many teachers who won't go into this book because they feel it too complicated unless one is a learned scholar we feel that we have learned a great deal. The two chapters for next meeting are nine and ten. We urge all our members and any visitors who will to study these two chapters and meet with us Monday night after third Sunday in June at the home of Mrs. Leroy James.

Mrs. Jordan served delicious home made banana ice cream and cakes.

A small group of us—nine to be exact—met at the County Home Sunday afternoon to sing and give a short devotional for those people who live there. It was a most inspiring service. It makes you feel mighty good to look into their faces and see the happy expression as they along with you sing praises unto God's name. We were delighted to have Mrs. G. A. Rouse of Farmville join us for the worship period. Mrs. Rouse was high in her praise of the singing.

* Don't forget the Daily Vacation Bible School. It will be held each afternoon this week from three till five o'clock. A good program has been planned and we urge the parents to get the children out there.

Several members of our Sunday School were unable to attend Sunday because of sickness. We hope they will soon be well and back in place next Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tucker, Mrs. Ethel Crawford and Mrs. Lizzie Vandford have recently returned from a trip to Florida.

Charges Facing Grand Dragon

COLUMBIA, S. C. —(UP) Grand Dragon Thomas L. Hamilton of the Carolina Ku Klux Klan faced federal charges today of sending defamatory matter through the U. S. mails.

A federal grand jury indicated Hamilton yesterday for mailing a postal card captioned "K. K. K. News" and containing statements "obviously intended to reflect upon the character and conduct" of newspaper publisher Wilton Hall of Anderson, S. C.

The rd. which was mailed to state Rep. Reese Fant, Jr., was unsigned but postal inspectors said they traced it to Hamilton.

Robins Edged In Tenth By Leafs After Hard Contest

Drop 11-10 Decision Despite Homers By Streza, Piastak And Guidice; Rocky Mount Also Had Three Homers In Batters' Game

Dolph Regelsky survived a barrage of twelve Greenville hits to struggle through a ten inning victory, 11-10. He was kept out of serious trouble several times with strikeouts. He struck out 10 men in the long contest.

Rocky Mount won the game in the last of the tenth. West Spain doubled with one away. Allen Fuller singled and Dick Gaudino popped out and Regelsky walked. Tommy Green then singled to score Spain with the winning run.

A total of six homers were hit in the struggle. Streza, Piastak, and Guidice had homers for the Robins. The Leaf four-batters were hit by Regelsky, Green and Frazier.

Jaycees Win Double Bill Over Kiwanians

By MELVIN LANG
The Jaycees defeated the Kiwanians in both games of a twin-bill yesterday, 13-2 and 5-1. The winners took the lead early in the games and held it all the way.

Four runs in the second inning of the first game clinched the game for the Jaycees. Two singles, three walks, and one error figured in the scoring.

They added extra insurance runs in the fifth inning when they placed nine runs. The big blow of the inning was a homerun by Miller.

J. Barnhill hit a homerun for the losers in the first inning. The bases were empty.

Three runs on four walks and one error accounted for 10 runs in the second inning of the last game to send the Jaycees ahead. Three runs and one walk, mixed with two fly-outs and one error, allowed three more runs to score in the third inning.

Marty Marion To Again Try Resume Playing

NEW YORK — (UP) — Manager Marty Marion of the St. Louis Cardinals, whose playing career seemed definitely over this year, is going to "give it one more try."

Sport Slants By Pap

Amazin' Mays

Willie Mays sold himself to the Giants fans when he poled out a terrific home run that cleared the top deck of the Polo Grounds in his first appearance at bat before the homefolks. Mays was brought up from Minneapolis by Manager Leo Durocher to give the Giants some sorely needed punch at the plate.

Mays was going like a house afire with the Millers this spring. When he was called up, Willie was thumping the ball at a .477 clip. His fielding and throwing earned the 20-year-old youngster high praise all around the circuit. He is rated every bit as good as a defense player as he is with the bat. Willie stands 5-foot-11, weighs 175 pounds and is extremely fast.

Manager Durocher saw Mays briefly at the Giants' training camp in Sanford, Fla., but it was enough to satisfy him that Willie had great possibilities. The Giants picked up Mays from the Birmingham Black Barons in the Negro League for $10,000. Mays was playing in the Polo Grounds where a Giant scout, Eddie Montague, was on hand to look over a first baseman. When the scout saw Willie in action he promptly forgot about his mission and quickly urged the Giants to sign Mays. Mays was still in high school at the time, so the Giant had to wait until he was graduated last June to complete the deal.

The one-time Mr. Shortstop of the National League will test his aching back and right knee in an exhibition against the Rochester Red Wings of the International League next Monday night.

The result will decide whether Marion will replace Stan Rojek at short for the Redbirds when the returns to St. Louis.

Rojek, a splendid shortstop in 1948, has been hitting .325 since he joined the Cardinals and Marion hesitates to bench him for that reason. But Marty feels that Rojek is not playing well enough defensively for the club to be a serious contender for the pennant.

Robins Fold Wednesday

Greenville will play its last game in the Coastal Plain League Wednesday night, according to a statement made by Business Manager John Pringle. Pringle stated that the Connecticut owners had decided not to put any more money into the Robins.

The reason given for the discontinuation of the Robins was the lack of attendance at the home games this season. Low attendances have plagued the Greenville management all year.

The question of disbandment has been hovering over the Greenville camp for several days now. It has been just a question of how long they could hold out.

President Ray Goodman of the Class D Coastal Plain League said today, "I know nothing about it." He stated further that no one has notified him of the folding of the Greenville franchise other than the radios and newspapers.

Greenville will play in Roanoke Rapids tonight. Roanoke will make the return match to Greenville tomorrow night.

Konstanty Given Role As Starter

PHILADELPHIA — (UP) — Jim Konstanty, baseball's most successful fireman of 1950, takes on a new relief role tonight.

He will make his first start in a regular season game with the Phillies to relieve a temporary shortage of front-line pitchers.

Manager Eddie Sawyer gave the bespectacled Konstanty the starting assignment against the Chicago Cubs because his big five of Jocko Thompson, Ken Heintzelman, Bubba Church, Robin Roberts and Russ Meyers are not rested enough.

"There's no special significance in the move," Sawyer said. "I just ran out of starting pitchers."

Konstanty, voted the National League's most valuable player last year on his record of 74 appearances, started a game as a White Sox only once before in the opener of the 1950 World Series against the New York Yankees last October. Big Jim lost the game 1-0 to Vic Raschi, who turned in a two-hitter.

Another Actress Escorted By Aly Khan In Paris

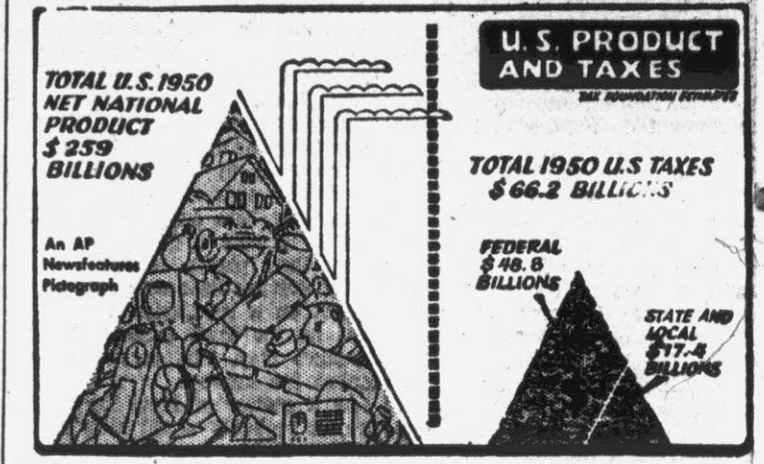

PARIS — (UP) — Prince Aly Khan led the beautiful blonde to the same dimly-lit table where he had once wooed Rita Hayworth.

The fashionable Paris night club audience immediately recognized the girl in the white, low-cut evening gown as another film celebrity—actress Joan Fontaine. Miss Fontaine and the wealthy prince danced cheek-to-cheek through the evening. Rumors bubbled up as rapidly as the champagne they were drinking on the week-end date.

Today, Miss Fontaine said: "The prince is very charming... we have been good friends for a long time."

Asked if Aly spoke at all of his wife, Rita, now contemplating divorce action in Nevada, Miss Fontaine said: "No, not a word."

Justice Department Moves To Smash Red Underground In U.S.

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Justice Department moved today to rout Reds from the underground and begin the final smashing blow at the American Communist Party.

The job may take several years. But the department, bolstered by the Supreme Court's ruling which will send 11 of the top Red leaders to jail probably within a month, has tagged 12,000 other Communists for possible prosecution.

The department got its unquestioned authority to prosecute when the court ruled yesterday that the Smith Act, which makes it a crime to conspire to teach or advocate the violent overthrow of the United States Government, is constitutional.

The 6-2 decision upheld the government's claim that the conspiracy with which the 11 defendants were charged and convicted under the Smith Act was a "clear and present danger" to the nation.

The decision did not outlaw the Communist Party but there was little doubt that the government now has the power to clean out the comrades in this country.

In New York, U. S. Attorney Irving H. Saypol said a grand jury for investigation and prosecution of subversives had been empaneled in advance of the Supreme Court decision and the evidence had been placed before it.

While not elaborating on predicted prosecutions, Saypol said "forthcoming action to be taken with the support of the Supreme Court's decision will be in a sober, forceful spirit."

The FBI has gathered evidence against 12,000 Reds, and the Justice Department's criminal division has files on each. Government attorneys are studying the files to determine which cases will be prosecuted next.

Eugene Dennis, general secretary of the American Communist Party and one of the 11 leaders facing prison, said last night that the party will ask the high court for "an immediate rehearing" on the decision. It was not likely the court would grant it.

Dennis said in an official party statement that "in an atmosphere of war hysteria the Truman court majority voted to substitute the Smith thought control for the constitution's first amendment."

Gilbert Green, Illinois party chairman and another of the 11 convicted Reds, said in Chicago that "we're here to stay." He added that the party will not go underground.

But the government has evidence that the Communists, apparently anticipating an eventual decision against them, already have been sending important party members underground. It was not expected they would be hidden for long.

To Start College Building In Fall

WAKE FOREST (UP)—Dr. Harold W. Tribble, president of Wake Forest College, said today the school hopes to start construction in Winston-Salem this fall in spite of new government restrictions.

Tribble said he had received no definite approval from Washington but had been "definitely encouraged" by conference with government officials.

He said the college would break ground in Forsyth County Oct. 15 for its chapel, and that the school hoped to have a minimum plant completed by 1954.

U. S. production of soybeans was about 1,000,000 bushels in 1920, but today runs around 300,000,000 bushels a year.

Oranges in California today are sold for more per year than the entire production of the famous California gold fields which brought the gold rush of 1849.

Dear Judge

AP Newsfeatures
You can have a very successful summer by learning to be a good sport. You'll surely have more dates than the girl who isn't congenial.

To fit this role you'll have to learn to accept some responsibilities. You can't climb up a tree every time you see an ant or a rabbit or a squirrel, and expect the boys to gather round and protect you. You will have to learn that you are on your own whether you are at the beach, in the country, or doing the town.

First of all, if you don't know how to swim, you'd better take lessons. It not only will insure you mere invitations, such as sailing and picnicking, but you won't worry your date to death when you are in bathing and he is swimming. A life-saving course is always handy knowledge in case of tuckered away so that you can emergency.

Some girls avoid swimming lessons and look pretty silly sitting on the beach while other girls are in the pool enjoying themselves with their dates. A languid Susie might appeal to some man, if she otherwise has loads of charm. But don't expect him to date you again and again, if you just relax on the beach while he swims.

You should be able to accept responsibilities when picnicking, also. Knowing how to start a fire is one way, and if you aren't a Girl Scout, get a boy friend to teach you how to start a blaze. Also learn how to put the fire out to prevent brush fires.

A first-aid course or book will prove invaluable in emergencies, as well as giving information on what to do about everything from snake bite to poisonous berries and leaves.

You can't expect the boy to do all the chores when he takes you out on a picnic. If the outing involves cooking outdoors, and you have't been asked to bring anything to yourself, at least be a good sport about gathering rocks, bricks and sticks for the fire, if he plans to build it. Offer to do the cooking, unless you suspect he is getting particular delight out of preparing the vittles.

It is a good idea to study the habits of a new group when you are invited out with them for the first time. If they like to ride horseback, surf ride, fish, play tennis or badminton, try to catch on to these sports. Don't be an "aw, let's not do that" date. The first thing you know you'll be sitting home waiting for the telephone to ring.

Sometimes it is possible to dislike a particular sport. In that case suggest a good alternative and the crowd probably will take

Chapter 5
The foot-toot of the Imperial's horn coursed through the noon-time crowd milling past the City Morgue. Red came up to the tab.

By the door watching, Jigger chided. "The show's inside."

"I was inside. Managed to hang on for an hour before I got the bum's rush."

"Who bounced you?"

"New York's finest."

Jigger smiled reassuringly. As an associate sleuth, Red needed constant replenishing with Vitamin W—Willingness.

"Catch anything inside?" Jigger asked.

"Dur' my hour inside, four people positively identified our late brunette."

"Anyone worth our attention?"

"Three of them were obvious phonies with some angle in claiming a corpse as a daughter, wife, or sister."

"How about the fourth?"

"A wife claimer. Hame's Willie Hunter. He came dashing in from out of town. After viewing the body he insisted she was his wife."

The levity had dropped from Red's tones. Jigger looked at him sharply. "Think this fellow's something?"

Red sat slowly. "I dunno. There was nothing about him as obviously phony as the others. His grief appeared to be the real thing. Only—" Red hesitated.

"Only what?"

"The looks of the guy, I guess. Rumped-up. Booby-hatch look around the eyes." Red shrugged.

"I'm probably wrong, and a slandering louse, but I got the impression of arrested development."

"Where is this Willie Hunter?"

"Hasn't come out yet. His story was beginning to build, when I got the heave-ho." What's with the Bellevue patient?"

"Sad." Jigger said meagerly. "I—uh, wangled a sketchy report from a nurse who thought better of blabbing halfway through our chat."

"Exactly how sad," Red said. "Don't spoon-feed me."

Jigger grinned. "Critical Ward. Spent the night in an oxygen tent. Plus the concussion he got, our friend as an advanced alcoholic amnesiac."

"Any chance of recovery?"

"Weeks, months that is—if he lives at all." Jigger shrugged.

"Anyhow, he's of no use to us, or to the police, as he is."

Red looked driven. "Can I buy, bribe, or bet my way out of this? Give you a running head start into the chaos you feed on, then go home to my typewriter?"

Jigger detected the hint. "Red, you've got something!"

Red reached into his pocket, grumbling. "I'm just tightening the noose around my neck, playing brilliant assistant like the masochist I am." He handed Jigger a newspaper or tear. "This was a hunk of sheer accident. I was hunting down an apartment listing."

Jigger frowned. "The Public Notice column?"

"Read the bottom block." Red instructed.

Jigger read: S. W. URGENTLY ADVISE YOU RECONSIDER, RE-

TURN. PROMISE OF GOOD AND GREAT THINGS CERTAIN. C. L. S.

ed waited for a reaction, then said, "Why the dead pan? S. W.'s also the initials on that note you snagged out of the mailbox."

Jigger looked doubtful. "It's an idea, but a little forced, improbable; there are probably enough S. W.'s in Greater New York to pack the Yankee Stadium."

"It's not Greater New York. It narrows down to Greenwich Village. I clipped the advertisement from the community weekly."

Jigger re-read the advertisement with new interest. He said aloud, "C. L. S.?"

"Ceil Lee Scott, a professor in narrative technique and creative writing at the Downtown Adult School. I stopped in at the newspaper office on my way to the Morgue."

Jigger smiled approval. "Nice pace, feller. Yet, even confined to Greenwich Village, the coincidence of the S. W. initials might mean we don't even know that the late Anne Brown and the S. W. of that mailbox are one and the same."

"And the Professor's S. W. might turn out to be a male midget, bald and 45. Futile, isn't it? Especially when you consider—" Red stopped abruptly, gesturing. "The body claimant number four exciting the Morgue."

Jigger looked, settling his gaze on a lean, humped figure, who walked with painfully jerking movements. He got out of the Imperial.

On the building steps Jigger confronted the man ceremoniously. "How do you do, Mr. Hunter."

The head worked to meet Jigger's eye as if isolated from the physical structure below. Enormously wide eyes trained themselves on Jigger querulously. The face itself was yellow and thin. It looked old, but not with age. The men held himself rigidly, his lips trembling.

Jigger said, "The press is interested in your problem, Mr. Hunter. Interested in—your wife."

The eyes glistened gratitude. He said, "She is Susan, my Susan. The voice had a nursery rhyme quality."

Jigger said, "Some—conventional details of appearance, huh? Identifying scars, dental work, things like that."

The face continued to dream. Regarding it uncomfortably, Jigger suddenly lost it. The dreaming face was screened-off by the body of a prodigiously fat man; his pig eyes, lost in a mass of face flesh, had a blind look. He wore a large brimmed hat, its design a compromise of Eastern and Western modes conjured up from the stone steps of the City Morgue, was uncanny stealth for a pachyderm.

Willie been telling you gentlemen about his wife?" There was a note of ridicule in the booming voice.

Jigger looked at the man distastefully. The man pulled his coat to one side, exposing a badge on his vest. His face glowed, "Rumely's name. Police Chief Ben Rumely. You men represent the press?"

Jigger nodded. A wet hand reached to him. Jigger touched it lightly, and the hand moved to Red.

"Always glad to meet gentlemen

o' the press." The pig eyes gleamed at Jigger. "I'm from Willie Hunter's home town, Lewiston. In fact, come to fetch him back." He twisted, exposing Willie to Jigger. "Like I been doing, eh Willie?"

First an involuntary expression like a child recoiling from remembered punishment, then Willie's face drew sullenly.

ON THE HOUSE

By DAVID G. BAREUTHER, AP Real Estate Editor

Bricks are one of the oldest of all manufactured building materials. They were in use long before the Bible was written. Maybe that's why it's hard to find any two persons who agree completely on how brick should be used. We've had too many years to work out combinations like cross-word puzzles, to paint bricks, glaze them, grind the face off and what not.

The result is some people think brick work is the most beautiful when it's what they call "natural." That is, unpainted and left for nature to take its course, with whitish efflorescent encrustations accepted. Others will say, "Wait a minute—not that efflorescence. It spoils appearances." And the next man comes along, whitewashes his brick house turns the firehouse on it, just to get the appearance of excessive efflorescence.

The white house with green shutters so captured the style in American colonial days that many owners of Georgian style red brick houses painted the brickwork white—and this practice still continues. In New York some years ago, Dorothy Draper, the decorator, wanted to achieve a smart appearance for a block of renovated apartment houses in the fashionable Sutton Place district on the East River front. She painted the brickwork black with white lintels and trim—a very attractive job.

Recently so-called "antique" brickwork has gained considerable favor. This means using second-hand bricks salvaged from buildings that have been demolished. They are used in any mixed up form in which they are received, with the facade punctuated by a few blackened burned bricks and old painted bricks, weatherbeaten white, yellow, or any color, scattered at random. People who like this say it doesn't make the house seem so new—and besides it's cheaper to buy used brick than produce such a pleasing informal appearance that they are often used for ranchhouse fireplace facings that extend from floor to ceiling. Sometimes the faces are rubbed down with emery cloth or ground down with carborundum to produce a softer tint.

Then modern architects have introduced another variation that makes old time bricklayers scratch their heads. Instead of having the mortar joints carefully tooled—that is grooved and smoothed—the mortar is allowed to extrude like the frosting that oozes out between layers of a cake. This produces a very rough facade with interesting shadow-casting possibilities.

Although such practice runs counter to the accepted theory of preventing brickwork from offering shelves and pockets for rainwater, Rudolph A. Matern, authority in small house design, used it effectively under a broad overhang on one of his popular Long Island houses.

However, one thing to remember in doing tricks with bricks, is that it's hard to change your mind. It's a good idea to think twice and then think again, because you're going to have to stick to your decision for some time.

For example, C. A. C. of Richmond, Va., wants to know how to remove paint from his brick house. That's a tough job. It can be done, but none of the methods are easy.

The most effective way is to sandblast. This calls for the services of experts equipped with pneumatic blowers. Skyscrapers often are cleaned in this way, but it is a cleaning method usually reserved for very hard surfaces—never used on marble, for instance.

It involves the blowing of fine sand against the face of the masonry to chip off the surface.

Another method is to wash the brickwork with caustic soda (sodium hydroxide), but this is a very dangerous operation. Caustic soda is so powerful that it is used to remove the hair from hides in leather making. So it's highly important to wear rubber gloves, goggles or a mask to protect the eyes and face and every precaution should be used to avoid splattering.

A much safer, even though more tedious method would be to use a strong and hot solution of trisodium phosphate (available under the trade name of Oaktite). Keep applying this until the paint is soft, then rinse well with clear water. It's a tiresome job, though. You may think you are making good progress because of the close-up appearance of the rough surface, then you step back and find the job is far from finished.

Once brick work is painted, the easiest thing to do is to see if you can't convince yourself that you like it painted.

Australian Politics To Feature Anti-Red Fight

By GEORGE McCadden
UNITED PRESS STAFF CORRESPONDENT
SYDNEY, Australia.—(UP)—The fight against Communism in Australia will dominate the legislative program of the recently re-elected coalition government of Premier Robert Gordon Menzies.

Armed with a new mandate, the Liberal and Country Party government will renew its fight against disloyal Communist activities in the commonwealth when parliament begins its new session June 12.

The government's detailed plans for enforcing its anti-Communist program have still to be worked out but it was certain the government will have to start from scratch again.

The coalition forced its original anti-Communist bill through the old Labor-dominated senate but a high court ruling nullified the law on the ground that the government lacked constitutional power in peace time to outlaw the Communist party.

Amendment Needed
To avert any similar ruling by the court, the government will have to amend the constitution to enable it to take whatever measures it deems necessary against the Communists at any time.

Menzies was expected first to ask the commonwealth's six states to delegate to the federal government power to deal with Australia's Communists. This appeal was likely to fail, since at least one of the three Labor-controlled states, New South Wales, was expected to reject it.

In that case, Menzies probably will ask parliamentary approval of a nation-wide referendum to amend the constitution and allow him to deal with the Communist threat to Australia's industrial life. Although the new parliamentary get a law compelling secret trade union elections, for which it believes elections, for which it believes it has authority already."

Union Election In Atomic Plant

OAK RIDGE —(UP)—The only workers represented by the CIO in the atomic energy center here will begin voting today on an AFL three major plants. The three-day election involved some 2,300 employees on the K-25 gaseous diffusion plant who have been affiliated with the CIO United Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers Union since 1946. The AFL petitioned the national labor relations board for another balloting in hopes it would win bargaining rights at the plant.

Germans To Revive Glider Sport

GLIDER FEVER grips West German enthusiasts as Allies permit gliding.

By HANNS NEUERBOURG
AP Newsfeatures
FRANKFURT, Germany—Fifty thousand West German glider pilots are going to soar again for the first time since the war.

Salt Finally To Complete Journey

SINGAPORE (AP)—The 8,000 ton cargo of salt which has been lying in the holds of the Red China-controlled vessel Hai Hsuan for the last 16 months is at long last to be sent on its destination in Japan sometime soon.

Formation of a West German tactical air force for European defense. Model flying also is again tolerated.

The new West German "Aero Klub" now has a membership of 17,000, and it is swiftly rising. The total of veteran glider pilots is 50,000. Soviet-occupied East Germany formally revived gliding a year ago, proclaiming it a mass sport for Communist youths.

Many West German gliding enthusiasts were invited to the Soviet Zone to fly there. Other West Germans entered foreign competitions. But those who stayed home meanwhile kept on building many kinds of models, including tiny, jet-propelled gliders.

Historically, gliding is as German as the Diesel engine or Frankfurters. A German, Otto Lilienthal, author of "Birdflight As A Basis of Aviation" was a pioneer in the field. He was killed in 1896 when his "Ikaros" glider crashed after a flight of 400 yards.

Smiths Rally To Share Windfall

CHICAGO (UP)—The Smiths are showing a special interest in the public administrator's office as a meeting place these days.

Germans remembered his theories and revived gliding in 1920 because the Versailles Peace Treaty prohibited motorized flying. In the same year, a German named Klemperer set the first gliding record on the Wasserkuppe, a famous soaring ground near Kassel. Klemperer stayed aloft two minutes and 22 seconds.

German Ernst Jachtmann still claims today the world record for soaring 55 hours and 52 minutes over the East Prussian Coast in 1943. But his record was declared invalid by the International Aeronautic Federation (FIA) because it was flown during the war.

Colored News

Miss Lillie Mae Clark, a 1951 graduate of Bethel high school, was the recipient of the $100 scholarship award given by the Les Amis social club of Greenville.

Miss Clark was chosen from a group of graduates by qualifying in scholarship character, possibility of attending college 4 years and worthiness. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mack Clark of Bethel and was a class officer for four years. Her school record has been exceptional.

In oratory she participated in the district finals and received "The World Peace" medal awarded by the University of North Carolina.

Miss Clark plans to enter State Teachers College, Fayetteville, N. C., in September.

Mid-Air Blast Wrecked Plane

JACKSON, Tenn.—(UP)—Three surviving crew members said today an explosion ripped apart their giant C-119 "Supercarrier" during a training flight last night and caused it to plunge to earth with four airmen still aboard.

The cause of the explosion could not be explained by the crewmen who were blown clear of the plummeting Air Force troop carrier and parachuted to safety. They were brought to a hospital here for treatment of minor cuts and shock.

Rescue workers recovered the bodies of the four victims in or near the wreckage early today in rugged hill country some 18 miles southeast of here.

Capt. Russell D. Brewington, Nashville, Tenn., the pilot, said the accident probably was caused "by some kind of explosion. All I know is I suddenly found myself in midair and pulled the ripcord."

Sgt. Joseph W. Bondo, Buffalo, N. Y., and S. Sgt. Elmer Horvath, Toledo, O., were the other survivors. Names of the dead were withheld.

Walter Wilson, owner of the farm where the crash occurred, said "The captain came up to me in a dazed condition. He had a deep gash on his head and told me he didn't know what happened. He said he guessed all the rest were dead."

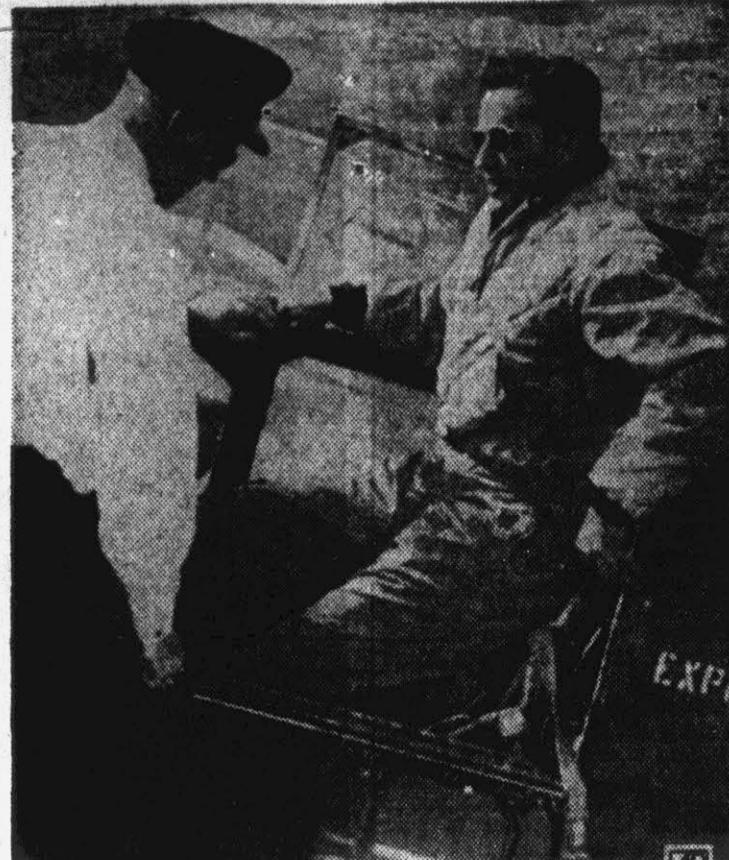

NEWS COMES FIRST

SEATTLE (UP)—W. Mrs. Fred Woessner, owner and publisher of the Meromine County Journal, Stephenson, Mich., suffered a leg fracture yesterday when she fell down a flight of marble steps and while waiting for an ambulance spelled out her last name for reporters.

On May 28 Mrs. Lemuel Clemons and Mrs. Bruce Ellison attended the commencement exercises at Shaw University, Raleigh, where Lemuel Clemons, Jr., their son and nephew, respectively graduated.

Mrs. Lemuel Clemons left June 1 for Bridgeport, Conn., to spend some time with her husband.

Freedom Of ...

(Continued from page one) Smith Act, which makes it a crime to conspire to teach forcible overthrow of the government. Nine years later the 11 Communists were found guilty of violating that law.

The Communists' lawyers appealed to the Supreme Court to throw out this conviction on various grounds but they particularly emphasized the question of free speech. They asked the court to rule this way:

The Smith Act is unconstitutional—that Congress had no right to pass such a law since it is contrary to the first amendment and limits freedom of speech—and that therefore the 11 should not be charged with violating it.

And they argued that the Smith Act is an "unabashed attempt to suppress political ideals." By that reasoning they asked the court to believe that the Communist Party is simply a political party, like the Democrats and Republicans.

But government lawyers argued to the court the 11 Communists were "conspirators" and "enemies of the state" and tools of Moscow, seeking to overthrow this government.

Yesterday the court ruled: 1. Congress has the right to pass such a law as the Smith Act to protect the government from armed rebellion. Said the court: "we reject any principle of governmental helplessness in the face of preparation for revolution, which principle carried to its logical conclusion, must lead to anarchy."

2. That the right of free speech is not an unlimited right but that its value must sometimes be subordinated to other values, such as preservation of the government unless the people as a whole by peaceful means, such as voting, wish to change it.

3. There was a clear and present danger from these 11 communists.

Fear Not Ours ...

But there is a quiet confidence in Washington that we are well ahead in the race to develop the most deadly weapon ever invented. We have more bombs and better bombers with which to deliver them. Moscow apparently knows that, too, because the whole trend of Russian foreign policy in the last year has been toward trying to persuade the West to stop rearmament. She is seeking time to catch up on the head start that scientists have given America.

The time may come when she will catch up, but in the meantime the fear of atomic attack is just as real in the Kremlin as it is in New York, Washington or San Francisco. Winston Churchill summed it up when he described the American atomic bomb as a "shield" which is protecting Western Europe from the Red Army. What Gromyko is trying to get us to do in Paris is put down the shield long enough for Stalin to get one to match it.

Korea Armistice ...

"I would like to ask that question: Without a declaration of war, what are we doing with a quarter million troops in Korea?" Acheson said: "I think that so far as the President's action under the Constitution of the United States is concerned, we are proceeding under his powers.

"So far as the United Nations is concerned, the resolution of the Security Council authorizes and requests, under the charter of the United Nations, assistance in carrying out the repelling of the armed attack on Korea."

Acheson also told how the United States abandoned, because of objections from other United Nations, a plan last November for "hot pursuit" of enemy planes into Manchuria.

Describe Activities Of Forensic League

By WYATT BROWN

The activities and achievements of the National Forensic League, which is one of the extra curricula activities at Greenville High School, were related to the Rotarians last night by R. B. Starling, a GHS faculty member and coach of the local NFL. Frederick Brooks, an alumnus and charter member of the chapter, and Rodney Fulcher, an outstanding member of the local chapter. The local NFL chapter was established in 1945 and was one of two in the whole State. Now there are quite a few throughout the State—eight in this immediate section.

Coach Starling was the first to speak. He pointed out that it is great to think but greater to be able to stand and think, and even greater to think while standing and expressing one's self with a reasonable degree of clarity. The coaching of youngsters in public speaking has been his civic contribution for as he explained it takes a considerable amount of time and travel.

Next to tell of the NFL was Frederick Brooks, a student at Duke University now but formerly a charter member of the local chapter of NFL. He related how the idea got going with six members. Since that time 127 Greenville High School students have qualified to be members, and many others have practiced public speaking but failed to make the number of speeches before audiences to be certified.

He told the Rotarians that of the eight NFL chapters in this section Coach Starling's efforts have contributed to their coming in. The National office of the NFL has honored Starling with a jeweled key for his work with NFL.

From small beginnings the NFL Congress held in Greenville each year has grown. NFL Tournaments have grown to involve several States. The Greenville chapter has promoted Freshman debating and that has grown until 48 freshmen participated this year. In concluding his remarks NFLer Brooks paid tribute to the contribution of Coach Starling to the NFL work and progress.

Then Rodney Fulcher told about the varied program of the NFL arranged that way to interest a maximum number of participants. He pointed out the seven fields of activity.

Group discussions, debates, extemporaneous speaking, dramatic interpretation, poetry reading, radio announcing, and finally original oratory. NFLer Fulcher pointed out debating as the most profitable since it involves research, choosing of material and presentation. Radio announcing he classed as most difficult—no audience reaction to help. But original oratory he characterized as involving the greatest labor since it involves research, choice of material, form, and delivery technique. In conclusion he exhorted the Rotarians to look upon the NFL as an opportunity for their sons and daughters to achieve greater development of their capacities for leadership in the community.

Winding up the presentation Coach Starling said Greenville has been most outstanding in debate, having won 20 out of 24. Brooks, he said, ended up high school with 610 speeches rating twelfth in the nation, and Fulcher has ended fourth in the nation with 669 to his credit. He said the success the chapter has experienced has been due to the general good training from the Greenville schools and the high calibre of student participating for the student is self-trained, he said.

Harper Darden was a guest of the Rotary Club last night. President Floyd Hendrix announced the appointment of the Rotary Committee to cooperate with the annual Farmer's Day to be held before the tobacco market opens. The committee is to consist of Hugh Winslow, Ty Wagner and Leon Roebuck. The Rotarians voted last night to accept the invitation of the Girl Scouts to be their guests at Camp Hardee on June 13th for dinner. The program was presented by Charles Bisette. Floyd Hendrix, Club president presided.
