MacArthur And Acheson 'Clash'

General Denies Favoring Coalition Of Reds And Nationalists In China; Acheson Disclaims Plan To Make Eighth Army 'Scapegoat'

WASHINGTON (AP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Secretary of State Acheson clashed at long range today over far eastern policies.

MacArthur, the ousted Pacific Commander, denounced as a "prevarication" any intimation that he favored in December, 1945 a move for a coalition of Communists and Nationalists in China.

Acheson, testifying before senators for the eighth day on policies in connection with MacArthur's dismissal, challenged a contention by MacArthur's aide that Washington wanted U. S. troops withdrawn from Korea last winter "and made a scapegoat for some political advantage."

MacArthur said in a telegram from New York to Senator Knowland (R-Calif.) that U. S. efforts "force" the Nationalist government in China "into a political alliance with the Communists" was "one of the greatest blunders in American diplomatic history, for which the free world is now paying in blood and disaster."

Acheson has defended the 1945-46 efforts by Secretary of Defense Marshall to bring about a coalition government in China. Acheson gave the committee a Dec. 1945 message signed by MacArthur, Adm. Raymond Spruance and Lt. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer urging U. S. aid for China as a basis for negotiation "to bring together and effect a compromise between the major opposing groups in order to promote a unified China."

Knowland wired MacArthur that this "implies that you favored a coalition government between Chinese Communists and Republic of China."

In a sharply worded reply, MacArthur said "any inference drawn from anything I have ever said or done that I sponsored a compromise which would favor the forces of Communism at the expense of the forces of freedom and would affect a political coalition of such diametrically opposed and irreconcilable forces is a prevarication without color of factual support."

The exchange between Knowland and MacArthur was not gone into immediately when the hearing resumed today, but on another matter Acheson said that a statement by Maj. Gen. Courtney Whitney, MacArthur's aide, on May 11, was not based on facts.

Senator Sparkman (D-Ala) noted that Whitney had said that until last January 13—the day President Truman sent a letter to MacArthur—MacArthur believed Washington officials wanted our forces evacuated from Korea and made a scapegoat for some political advantage.

Sparkman said Whitney called the January 13 message "the government's first clear statement to MacArthur to hold in Korea."

"Do you know of any facts that would warrant any such statement as that?" Sparkman asked Acheson.

"No, sir; there are no facts to my knowledge, and I would go a considerable way in saying that no such facts exist," the Secretary of State replied.

"Nobody here you know of wanted Korea evacuated and the Eighth Army made a scapegoat?" Sparkman pressed.

"Not in the slightest degree whatever," Acheson replied.

The doctors will conduct operations and clinical examinations on the patients of a medical color television program at next week's convention of the American Medical Association. The telecasts will originate at Atlantic City Hospital.

Russian Air Activity In Berlin Skies Worry Allies

BERLIN (AP)—The Soviet Air Force has stepped up jet plane activity over Berlin to the point where allied fliers are growing concerned with their own safety in the air, it was learned today.

The Red force is now posting with the four-power Air Safety Center daily flights of jets from the Schoenfeld Field, on the outskirts of the city, without bothering to give details.

The Americans, British and French at the center have asked the Russians a number of times, to give more details for the sake of safety without results.

The Soviet officers merely list "jet flights" from Schoenfeld "all day long" without giving the altitude, the time, nor the number of

Probe For Lobby

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Truman was reported today to have authorized government agencies to cooperate in an investigation of the so-called "China Lobby."

A Democratic Senator who asked that his name not be used said Secretary of State Acheson had carried this information to the closed-door Senate inquiry into the firing of Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Acheson was said to have told Senators that he talked the matter over with the President and was authorized by that and all Federal agencies would be willing to cooperate in such an inquiry.

Acheson said the State Department as well as other agencies had considerable information but that much of it was regarded as hearsay.

Advices Reduced Newsprint Use

WASHINGTON (UP)—The world newsprint shortage could be solved if publishers in the United States and other countries would cut consumption by about six percent, according to Chilean Ambassador Felix Nieto del Rio.

Del Rio, whose country faces newspaper restrictions because of a newsprint shortage, estimated that U. S. publishers use 6,000,000 of the 8,000,000 tons of the annual world newsprint production.

"If publishers in the United States and other countries generally made a little sacrifice to world newsprint needs," he said, "the problem would be solved."

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UP)—Washington and Lee University and the University of Sewanee each were $50,000 richer today through emergency gifts made by Mrs. Alfred I. DuPont.

President Francis P. Gaines announced the grant to W&L yesterday. He said it was to serve as a "cushion against falling enrollment."

The gift to the University of the South at Sewanee, Tenn., was announced by Bishop Frank A. Juban of the Episcopal Diocese of Florida at commencement exercises today.

Congress Asked To Remove Price Control Of Meat

Retail Meat Dealers Warn Of Shortages And Black Market

CHICAGO (AP)—A group of the nation's retail meat dealers—noting dwindling supplies of beef—has urged Congress to remove price controls on meat.

The appeal by the dealers was made as sale of beef cattle at the country's 12 major livestock markets this week slumped to a three-year low. A spokesman said the dealers feel the controls will mean a continued scarcity of meat and illegal markets.

The week's dull cattle trading by the big packers resulted in a virtual shutdown of slaughtering operations in many plants. Many farmers and feeders refused to send cattle to market under government price regulations. Packing industry spokesmen said the butcher shops will feel the full effects of the beef scarcity next week.

The meat dealers' appeal to Congress was disclosed by George Nepl, executive secretary of the National Association of Retail Meat and Food Dealers. Nepl said the association represents about 70,000 dealers across the nation.

Nepl said he and other association officials had filed briefs with Senate and House Banking and Currency Committees and the Senate Small Business Committee in Washington, asking Congress not to extend price controls on meat and livestock when they expire on June 30.

"Meat dealers are afraid that if this thing is allowed to continue we will not only have a meat shortage but also a very bad black market," Nepl said.

"The controls are curtailing meat production. We thought they might work when they were first proposed, but now we see that we were wrong."

At the same time the American Meat Institute, representing more than 95 per cent of the packing industry, said a country-wide survey showed that 95 leading beef producing plants this week dressed 76 per cent fewer cattle than in the same week a year ago.

No one could explain what occurred to cause eight planes to crash from a formation of 34 at the same time. The Air Force quickly dropped a curtain of secrecy over its investigation.

County folk in a 25-mile radius north and west of Richmond were horrified as they saw broken planes tumbling out of the sky.

Harold Martin, a personnel officer of the Perfect Circle Corporation, said the two planes crashed within a minute and both burned. The third pilot killed crash-landed his plane near Mooreland, 25 miles northwest of Richmond.

Two pilots who survived crash landings said the flight was streaking along above a thunderstorm, but both said the storm was not the cause of the tragedy. They could not say more.

Capt. Bryce E. Long, of Edmond, Okla., 29-year-old veteran of air battles over Europe, told a reporter he was flying above the storm when his power plant exploded.

Capt. Long was unhurt in the crash of his plane near Straughn, due west of Richmond. He went to a nearby farmhouse, shaved, changed clothes and returned to guard his wrecked fighter.

Capt. Robert Jackson, 36, Austin, Texas, who suffered face lacerations as he brought his plane down at Boston Airport, south of Richmond, told a reporter he was flying about 15,000 feet and above the storm when "I decided to land."

Capt. Jackson said he couldn't say why he made the decision, except that "it wasn't the weather."

The planes based at Bergstrom Air Force Base, Austin, Texas, were enroute from Wright-Patterson Field, Dayton, Ohio, to Selfridge Field, Mich. Flying between 600 and 600 miles an hour, they were ten minutes out of Wright-Patterson when they crashed.

There were 71 planes in the group, flying in flights of 37 and 34. The eight which crashed were part of the second flight.

Search For Missing Diplomats Steps Up

LONDON (UP)—Tone of three telegrams ostensibly sent by two missing British diplomats to their families in England came from Rome, a Foreign Office spokesman said today.

The Rome telegram was sent in the name of Guy Burgess, 40, a Far Eastern expert formerly assigned to the British embassy in Washington, to his mother. It apologized for his "silence" and said he was "embarking on a long Mediterranean holiday."

The original of the telegram, recovered in Rome, was not in Burgess' handwriting, the Foreign Office spokesman said.

At the same time, a highly-placed French official ruled that two telegrams sent from Paris in the name of the other missing diplomat—Donald D. MacLean, 35, head of the American section of the Foreign Office—was not written by an Anglo-Saxon.

One telegram sent in MacLean's name informed his American-born wife that he "had to leave unexpectedly." The other, to his mother, said that he "was quite all right" and told her not to worry about him.

First reports had said that all three telegrams were sent from Paris. All three arrived in England Thursday.

The spokesman said Foreign Secretary Herbert Morrison would make a statement in Commons Monday on the two diplomats. They were suspended from their Foreign Office posts as "absent without leave" following their sudden disappearance in France May 26.

The spokesman declined to comment on speculation ranging from a theory that the men were trying to flee through the Iron Curtain to Russia to one theory that they were lured to Paris and kidnaped.

However, he reiterated that no Foreign Office documents were missing and added:

"If anyone thinks that Mr. MacLean knew the secret of the atom bomb, I can assure them he did not. In the nature of his work, he dealt only with questions of a political character."

Nevertheless, both men were believed to have full knowledge of secret British-American exchanges on such subjects as the proposed treaty, the Korean war and a Japanese peace treaty.

Stock Yards Empty, Beef Shortage Threatened

Cattle ranchers kept the bulk of their livestock off the market Thursday because of prices—and here's how the huge Chicago stockyards appeared. Nearly every pen is empty. The threat of a widespread beef shortage has become more acute. Packers contend they can't pay the prices demanded by stockmen and still comply with government price ceilings on meat.—(AP Wirephoto).

Eight Thunderjets Fall Out Of Skies

'Not The Weather' Say Survivors; Air Force Veils Probe With Secrecy; Three Pilots Die In Crash

RICHMOND, Ind. (AP)—Eight F-84 Thunderjets fell out of the sky near Richmond yesterday in the biggest mass crash in the history of jet aviation.

Three pilots died as their speedy Air Force fighter planes crashed and burned, and two others were injured. Two rode their damaged planes to crash landings without injury, and one parachuted safely.

The Air Force withheld names of the dead pilots pending notification of relatives.

No one could explain what occurred to cause eight planes to crash from a formation of 34 at the same time. The Air Force quickly dropped a curtain of secrecy over its investigation.

County folk in a 25-mile radius north and west of Richmond were horrified as they saw broken planes tumbling out of the sky.

Pointed Appeal

LONDON (AP)—Gen. Omar N. Bradley said today the United States would welcome more participation in the Korean war by other countries.

The chairman of the U. S. Combined Chiefs of Staff told a news conference that President Truman's administration is running into political opposition on the question.

"We're always being asked how much help other countries are giving in Korea," he said.

At the same time Bradley said the U. S. was aware of the big forces Britain is using to fight Communist terrorists in Malaya and other areas of the Far East.

He said no more talks than usual on the possibility of a new cease fire attempt in Korea were going on between Britain and the United States.

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Chairman of the U. S. Chiefs of Staff, discussed a possible cease-fire proposal with the British in London yesterday. There was speculation that it might be announced if and when the 8th Army drives the Communists out of the "iron triangle" in central Korea.

Front dispatches reported increased signs of Communist preparations to pull out of the strategic Chorwon-Kumhwa-Pyongyang triangle for a new defense line hinged on Wonsan, 80 miles north of the 38th parallel.

United Nations columns converging on the twin bastions of Chorwon and Kumhwa at the base of the mountain-ringed triangle forged ahead up to three miles yesterday against decreasing Communist resistance.

They wedged into the enemy's final line of defense south of the turtledove Communist "Y" guards screening the reported withdrawal.

New 'Cease-Fire' Offer Suspected

Milk Production By Pitt Dairies Steadily Grows

Over 3.5 Million Pounds Of Milk Produced For County Last Year

Privately owned dairies in Pitt county have reached a maximum production of milk during the past year, according to a report made this month, designated as Dairy Month.

The 21 dairies in the county and two dairies outside the county have produced 3,584,542 pounds of milk for Pitt citizens, at a price of $209.27.75. The average price per pound is about six cents.

Most of the dairy herds are made up of Guernsey cows, with Jersey and Holstein also prevalent in the herds. S. C. Winchester, county farm agent reported yesterday artificial breeding in the county is progressing and the first calves, as a result of this type of breeding, are expected to arrive about the last of July. The first artificial breeding in the county was started last year.

Listed below are the dairies which furnish Pitt county with milk the number of pounds produced and cost of milk produced: A. R. Barnhill, 229,982 pounds, $13,823.71; Norman Coward, 134,115 pounds, $7,758.78; Greenhill Dairy, 326,717 pounds, $17,915.02; W. H. Gurganus, 23,868 pounds, $5,455.90; and Harvey Dairy, 380,344 pounds, $20,977.14.

W. B. Rodman, 535,388 pounds, $33,617.70; B. A. Steadman, 420,229 pounds, $22,834.38; T. L. Little, 154,082 pounds, $8,354.15; G. C. Rice, 20,756 pounds, $1,079.41; H. F. Compton, 87,592 pounds, $5,227.98; H. B. Randolph, 110,294 pounds, $6,276.67; Allen Mazingo, 1,775 pounds, $92.74; E. M. Tyson, 270,577 pounds, $13,447.87; J. T. Clark, 68,242 pounds, $3,836.42; and H. H. Robertson, 28,701 pounds, $1,530.95.

Jasper Sutton, 17,698 pounds, $951.39; C. A. Forbes, 86,102 pounds, $5,078.90; B. W. Barker, 115,268 pounds, $6,946.00; C. B. Spain, 107,968 pounds, $5,263.59; D. G. Grimes, 25,177 pounds, $1,491.11; Pecan Grove, 260,550 pounds, $14,874.03; and Roy Mayne, 61,901 pounds, $3,893.78.

Dal Cox, 105,289 pounds, $5,682.71; W. A. Gravelly, 4,325 pounds, $201.14; J. W. Rawls, 21,311 pounds, $1,316.59; Beatty Cr. mery, 3,422 pounds, $191.98; and T. H. Fleming, 10,769 pounds, $662.24.

These sources said, however, that no final decision has been made, and it is uncertain when final action will be taken.

Mr. Truman was reported having trouble finding a qualified person to take over the board.

From the White House point of view, Gray would be a logical choice for the directorship. The president called Gray for special assignment last Fall for a study of the nation's long-range international economic policy.

Gray made the special study after he was named as Army secretary to become president of the University of North Carolina.

The propaganda panel would operate under the National Security Council's top ranking officials from the Defense and State Departments, Central Intelligence Agency and other government agencies.

It was reported that the Defense and State Departments would be represented by their number two men—Deputy Defense Secretary Robert A. Lovett and Undersecretary of State James E. Webb. The CIA representative probably would be its chief, Gen. Walter Bedell Smith.

Reports from various towns in the county said the rainfall last night was welcomed by the farmers but they were still looking for more.

Grimesland reported a light shower last night in the town and vicinity. Comments from tobacco growers termed the rain as "wonderful, but more rain would help the crops."

Grifton noted a fairly heavy rain which covered much territory and more than it has had all spring. Everyone was reported as "very happy" because it helped the crops.

A heavy shower fell in Ayden last night and covered a rather general territory. Farmers welcomed it but are still wishing for more rain.

Winterville termed its rainfall as "light," both in the town and nearby.

Honored For Big Blood Donations

W. Weber, 50, Haddonfield, N.J., a World War I veteran, has been honored as the champion blood donor of the United States.

Weber gave his 86th pint of blood at a Red Cross blood center last night shortly before accepting a bronze plaque from Anthony E. Mats, international president of the Firemen and Oilers Union (AFL).

Many readers of my column send me charts and figures showing how prices have temporarily been controlled in the past, but they forget we are now living in an entirely new economic age. During his Administration, President Roosevelt destroyed the Gold Basis for our dollar bills. This Gold Basis prevented prices from going too high. Now the only thing that can prevent prices, wages, real estate, etc., from staying up is either "a reduction in the supply of printing press money," or a business bust. Surely the price of gold will again be marked up.

Don't buy now for hoarding. Prices will not skyrocket. There will continue to be enough necessary goods. On the other hand, don't wait for lower prices on goods you really need. Buy naturally; save naturally; and live naturally. Be neither a hoarder nor a speculator; be neither a scripper nor a waster; be a God-fearing, sensible citizen and insist upon quality even if you must buy less.

Work Begins On County School Repairs Program

The county school maintenance division began work last Monday on its general repair program in the county schools, and 15 additional men have been added to the crew of workers.

A general overhaul, such as plumbing repairs, minor electrical repairs, and reconditioning of heating systems will take place in the schools during the summer. General repair work will be done on furniture and locks on doors and windows in all schools in which it is needed.

Exterior work will be done on windows and doors at county schools in Bethel, Chicod, and Winterville. Interior painting will be done at Farmville and at Bethel Negro school.

A fire escape is to be installed at Grifton and Ayden elementary schools and an agricultural shop is under construction at the Ayden school. An additional room will be added at Haddock's school for Negroes.

Major Development In Korean War Appears In Offering As Marshall And Ridgway Confer; Signs Increase Reds Pulling Out Of Strategic Area

By ERNEST HOBERECHT United Press Staff Correspondent

TOKYO (UP)—A major development in the Korean war seemed imminent today as U. S. Defense Secretary George C. Marshall conferred with Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway behind closed doors.

Marshall's visit to the 8th Army coincided with slackening Communist resistance in Korea and Anglo-American talks on a "cease-fire offer to the Chinese Reds, it was said.

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Chairman of the U. S. Chiefs of Staff, discussed a possible cease-fire proposal with the British in London yesterday. There was speculation that it might be announced if and when the 8th Army drives the Communists out of the "iron triangle" in central Korea.

They wedged into the enemy's final line of defense south of the turtledove Communist "Y" guards screening the reported withdrawal.

At the same time, 33 B-29 superfortresses and B-26 light bombers dropped nearly 300 tons of fragmentation bombs on the "iron triangle" for the second straight night.

Communist resistance increased on the east-central and eastern fronts, but still was characterized as a delaying action. One North Korean company broke through the Allied line northeast of Inje, but the gap was closed several hours later.

Marshall began a lengthy conference with Ridgway at the issue of Tokyo headquarters following an air tour of the fighting front with him yesterday.

They talked in Ridgway's office from 11:55 a.m. until 1:10 p.m., then went to the American embassy for lunch and remained there all this afternoon.

Marshall insisted the purpose of his visit here was only to see the 8th Army, but speculation persisted that it portended some major new development in the war.

Observers pointed to the coincidental cease-fire talks in London and the recent testimony of Gen. J. Lawton Collins, U. S. Army Chief of Staff, before a Senate committee that a "definite new directives" for the Korean campaign was being prepared.

Woman Reports Big Gem Theft During Absence

NEW ORK (AP)—Jewels worth $40,000 have been stolen from a prominent Portland, Ore., business woman, police reports in the second big gem robbery in three days on Manhattan's swank East Side.

Mrs. Frank G. Tasker, wife of an Oregon lumberman, is the owner of the Bedell Department Store chain in Oregon. She told police she found the jewelry missing when she returned here from a nine-day business trip to North Carolina.

Police said yesterday that Mrs. Tasker had stored the jewels in a trunk left at the Mayfair House on Park Avenue. She returned here June 5 and discovered the loss the next day after reopening the trunk, police said.

Mildly Worried About Her Son

The chief of police at Springfield, Ky., who delivered the telegram, wrote prison officials that Mrs. McElroy finally has come in to ask about her son's health.

At the heart of ANY town

At the heart of any town ... at the center of any city ... along the lanes of any rural settlement ... wherever men live and labor and search for happiness—there you will find the Church.

It has always been so since the time of Christ—even in the days when men paid with their lives for being Christians ... when cellars were chapels, and catacombs were hiding-places for the faithful.

So deeply has the Church imprinted its truth upon the life of our country that none—not even the man who tries to live without religion—can visualize an America without the marks of Christianity. Our heritage of freedom, our dream of peace, all of our treasured blessings and sacred hopes were born of the teachings of our Church, of the faith of our fathers.

Attend, join, support some church. Your spiritual riches can never be taken from you; they can be lost ONLY THROUGH NEGLECT.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL ... ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

In a ceremony at Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church Thursday afternoon at 4:30 Miss Frances Rosemond Aman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an ivory satin gown fashioned with a fitted bodice with a lace yoke and an off the shoulder satin collar, long pointed sleeves, and a full skirt extended into a long train. The full-length veil was caught to a pointed crown of net and seed pearls. She carried a white orchid in a prayer book showered with stephanotis.

For traveling the bride chose a lavender suit with white linen cuffs and collar with white accessories. She wore the orchid lifted from her prayer book.

After a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Ward will reside in Raleigh where Mr. Ward is enrolled in summer school at State College.

THE DAILY REFLECTOR June 9, 1911

There is an old saying that if you kill a snake in dry weather and hang it up it will bring rain very soon. A snakeologist called on The Reflector and urged that we say something along this line, so that the snake hunters can get busy and bring some rain. He also gave the following list of snakes with the kind of weather each will bring if killed and hung up according to the regulation:

Rattlesnake... cyclone. Moccasin or popper leaf, thunder storm or hail. Bla' runner, rain. Any other kind, uncertain showers.

According to the above we would urge the hunters to be careful on the rattlesnake line, as a cyclone is not wanted.

Pinehurst Church Scene Of Worsley-Cole Morning Rites

MRS. RICHARD KILLIAN WORSLEY (Photo by Lewis Studio)

Saturday morning, June 9, at the Sacred Heart Catholic Church of Pinehurst, Miss Mary Jane Cole became the bride of Richard Killian Worsley at a Nuptial Mass.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Reid Cole of Sanford. Mr. Worsley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Randolph Worsley of Greenville.

The ceremony was performed by the Reverend James Tevin of Sanford. Miss Frances Campbell of Pinehurst, and Mr. John Von Canon of Sanford, soloists, and Mr. Richard Jewell of Sanford, organist, presented the wedding music.

For the wedding ceremony the church was simply decorated with vases of white gladioli and astors banked with greenery. The family pews were marked with white flowers and ribbons.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white taffeta, styled with taut bodice featuring tiny self-covered buttons from the scalloped V-neck to the pointed waistline. The short sleeves were also scalloped, and the full skirt, fashioned with a scalloped panel of imported lace, flowed into a cathedral train. She wore gauntlets of the imported lace and the finger tip French illusion veil fell from a matching lace cloche. She carried a white prayer book topped with an orchid and showered with streamers.

Miss Betty Reid Cole was her sister's maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Ann and Bernadine Worsley, sisters of the groom. All wore gowns of sheer white organdy velvety over aqua taffeta. The gowns were styled with a sweetheart neckline and a sash of the taffeta tied in a large bow at the back. The skirts, worn over hoops, were floor length. They wore matching mitts and headbands, and each carried a bouquet of mixed flowers with matching streamers.

Honorary bridesmaids were Miss Mary Alice Wilkins, Mrs. Rowland Hopper, Mrs. Bill Wyatt of Sanford, Mrs. Bevin Cameron of Farmville, Mrs. Allie Melton, Jr. of Pinehurst, Miss Virginia Daniels of New Bern, and Miss Rosa Lee Brake of Rocky Mount.

James R. Worsley, Jr. of Washington, D. C., brother of the groom, was best man. Ushers were Bill Wyatt of Sanford, Charles Younce and John T. King of Boone, and Larry Posey of Greenville. Serving as acolytes were Carl and Jerry Worsley, brothers of the groom.

Following the wedding the bride's parents entertained at a wedding breakfast at the Carolina Hotel in Sanford in honor of the bride and room and their guests. Later in the afternoon the bride couple left for a wedding trip and upon their return will make their home in Greenville. For traveling the bride wore a dress of sheer navy with matching accessories of navy and white and the orchid lifted from her prayer book. Mrs. Worsley was graduated from Sanford High School, attended Queen's College and was graduated from East Carolina College, Greenville, in 1950. She was a member of the Alpha Delta Pi Sorority at Queens. For the past year she has been a member of the high school faculty of the West Edgecombe School in Rocky Mount. Mr. Worsley graduated from Greenville High School, received his degree in industrial engineering from North Carolina State College, and has done graduate work in business administration at the University of North Carolina. He is a member of the Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity. Mr. Worsley is now associated in business with his father, who is a certified public accountant.

Not Much Rain, But It Did Help

It wasn't a heavy rain last night... not as much as farmers of the area really needed, but it helped. The clouds which gave so much promise gave forth with only a mild "drizzle"; the clouds are still there, however, and so is the promise.

As a general rule, folks disregard the import of regular rainfall until the cycle is broken. Then the shortage is keenly felt and anxious eyes turn skyward in silent prayer.

Today the earth is moist, there is still a promise of more rain, and part of those prayers have been answered.

News Behind The News
 By RAY TUCKER

Every Saturday this veteran Washington newspaper correspondent devotes his column to answering readers' questions of general interest about national and international policies and personalities. Questions may be sent direct to Ray Tucker at 6306 Hillcrest Place, Chevy Chase, Md.

WASHINGTON—"Now that President Truman's military advisers have finished their attempted rebuttal repudiation of General MacArthur," writes H. O. of Brooklyn, "what does Washington think of the whole performance? Forgetting partisan politics, and thinking only of the nation's best interests, how does MacArthur's strategy stack up against the Truman-Acheson-Marshall program?"

HONEST—Answer: That is a large and difficult question, although it has been asked in one form or another by many readers who have written me. Some are ardent partisans of General MacArthur, a few back the Administration. But the majority honestly are confused, and wonder where the truth lies.

Frankly, insofar as the details of the strategy of warfare in Korea are concerned, it seems to me the Administration's most honest witness—namely, Air Chief Vandenberg and Naval Chief Sherman—gave full support to several of MacArthur's plans.

They confirmed reports that a more aggressive campaign against the Chinese Reds, as proposed by the ousted commander, was rejected by the White House because of objections from our United Nations Allies, especially Britain. In my opinion, both Vandenberg and Sherman stand closer to MacArthur than they do to Truman or Acheson.

But they allowed themselves to be overruled, first by U. N. objectors and then by President Truman and Secretary Acheson. If they had the intestinal stamina of a Denfield or a Wedmeyer, they would resign and blow their tops!

ENDORSED—Keeping in mind General MacArthur's various suggestions on how to win the Korean "police action," let us see how closely much of the Vandenberg-Sherman testimony conforms with the MacArthur program:

General Vandenberg said that he favored the plan of "hot pursuit" of Russian planes, which still obtain "sanctuary" in Russia-controlled Manchuria after sneak attacks on our air forces. But this MacArthur proposal was turned down by the White House, according to General Vandenberg, because our United Nations friends, who are giving us only nominal aid in Korea, feared that it would offend Stalin.

Admiral Sherman endorsed the MacArthur plan for a naval blockade of Red China. In his opinion, it would deprive the Chinese Communists of war materials and weapons, or force Russia to drain itself of arms it may need for a war in Europe or elsewhere.

But, Sherman added, our U. N. allies oppose an iron-clad blockade, and we cannot enforce it alone.

ESSENTIAL—Every witness, even including Secretary Acheson, now agrees with MacArthur that Formosa is essential to our defense frontier in the Far Pacific. They disagree only on the means for keeping it in our possession or in that of the enemy.

Only last year, President Truman tried to "kill" the MacArthur message to the Veterans of Foreign Wars because the General advocated this same idea. Until recently, the official State Department attitude on Formosa was that as a U. N. member, we would vote against giving it to Red China, but that we would not use our veto to prevent this island from falling into the hands of China-Russian Communists.

EXPENSIVE—"The government now asks us to save and gather scrap metal for the war effort," writes R. I. of Casper, Wyo. "Then why did we leave millions of tons of scrap, in the form of tractors, road equipment, tanks, trucks and even unopened and unloaded automobiles, overseas after World War II—in both Europe and the Far East?"

Answer: We did leave millions of tons of scrap material overseas—scrap which is now selling at tremendous prices. In fact, hundreds of trucks left on tiny islands in the Pacific were bought by speculators, brought back to this country reconditioned and sold back to the government for fancy profit. The same thing happened with respect to abandoned material in Europe.

The only explanation I can get is that it would have been too expensive to bring this stuff back to the United States. We also thought that it would be useful to overseas countries in their postwar recovery. And, of course, domestic manufacturers of these articles—especially trucks and tractors—lobbied on Capitol Hill against the reimportation of competing vehicles.

The only real answer to this question, as it is to many similar queries, is that old bromide we used to hear in France during World War I: C'est la Guerre!

MISCONCEPTION—"Is it true," explodes M. A. of Shepport, La., "that our Secretary of State, Dean Acheson, was born in Canada?"

Answer: For the benefit of M. A. and many other inquirers, it is not true. The misconception derives, perhaps, from the fact that Dean's father was born in England, migrated to Canada and became the Chaplain of Company K of the Queen's Own Rifles. He married a member of the Canadian whiskey family, the Gooderhams. Gooderhams is Dean's middle name.

Father Acheson came to this country in the early twenties, and became a distinguished Episcopal bishop at Middletown, Conn. Dean was born there about two years after his father came to this country.

Dean was a classmate of mine at college. I shall profit him in minutes.

 BRIGHTON-PITTSFORD, N. We Have "Days" For Everything Else

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JP

In the entertainment world two of my favorite performers are Bing Crosby and Arthur Godfrey. Last week both of them were in the news, for acting like the "average man, down to earth, which as far as I'm concerned is what makes them great performers.

The night clerk in a Vancouver hotel took one look at a strange man in a beard, dungarees and cowboy boots and refused him a room for the night. Just in time, the girl behind the cigar counter saw that underneath it all was Bing Crosby, dressed for a fishing trip. Immediately Bing was put in a comfortable suite.

Arthur Godfrey says his formal education was limited to "one short year at Hasbrouck Heights High School" in New Jersey. But last week Arthur was awarded an honorary Doctor of Science degree at Rider College in Trenton, N. J. After receiving his degree, Dr. Godfrey began giving advice to the students: "Do not try to conquer the world. Remember the more you earn, the more you pay in taxes. You can't become wealthy today."

However, Arthur neglected to tell the students that he's making close to a million a year. Even after taxes, he's wealthy, even if he doesn't admit it. Stop and think it over. Have you ever seen a rich man who would admit that he has a cent to his name? For some reason the wealthy just like to make a game of convincing people that they are broke. Actually, it's a form of misrepresentation, but at the same time it's also a form of modesty, so you can't condemn the rich man too much.

Also of interest in the news is the story of the reconstruction of the White House. Thousands of souvenir collectors are anxious to get one of the "White House kits," which range in value from 25 cents to $100. The smallest kit consists of one piece of hand-split lath twelve inches long; the largest kit provides enough brick or stone to face a fireplace. Other kits:

- No. 1: enough yellow pine to make a gavel. No. 2: enough to make a cane. No. 3: a piece of old stone and an old lath nail.
- No. 4: and most popular: a piece of stone and an old square nail.
- No. 5: (suitable for plaque): piece of old pine, old nail small piece of stone and old copper wire.
- No. 6: small piece of old metal.
- No. 7: small piece of old pine.
- No. 8: piece of old lath. No. 9: small piece of stone. No. 10: old brick.

By last week, the address "Souvenirs, Fort Myer, Va.," had received 45,000 inquiries, had mailed out 16,000 kits and taken in $29,500. The deadline for orders in June 30th, so if you want a Souvenir from the White House, you had better write today. After June 30th, the rest of the junk will be preserved for distribution for the official White House family. So if you know Harry Truman, you can wait and probably get a piece of junk free.

And I thank you.

FISH—The Commercial fisheries committee of the state board of conservation and development went fishing last fall—and caught some undesirable in its nets. Main objective was to rewrite the accumulated mass of general and local statutes affecting the industry so as to eliminate duplications and repetitions, and to place many of the local and temporary "laws" in province of the ordinance-making power of the C and D board instead of cluttering up the law books with them. Result was three or four general statutes, in lieu of dozens of special-local acts, thus simplifying administration. Trouble is, the rewriting went too far. Inadvertently, the new acts eliminated several of the revenue-producing provisions of the old statutes along with many of the obsolete and duplicative regulations. As a consequence that inadvertent department of conservation and development, with complete voluntary co-operation of certain commercial fishermen, has devised a temporary policy of collecting revenue to support the commercial fisheries program which is non-legal rather than illegal. In other words, there is no specific legal authorization for the policy; neither is there any specific ban against it.

COMMON—Such confusion and necessity for extra-legal devices is not unusual in transition periods when long established laws are being condensed and brought up-to-date. It happened when the consolidated board of education took over control of the public school system from half a dozen other boards. It happened when the state insurance laws were completely re-written five or six years ago. Difficulties were enhanced and made more obvious in the commercial fisheries law re-writing because of the sudden death last fall of Roy Hampton, chairman of the C and D board and long time head of the commercial fisheries division.

BREAK—Hampton was a nationally recognized authority in the broad fields of marine life and commercial fisheries. The C and D board felt secure in leaving most of the problem to him, and he devoted major part of his time and ability during the year 1950 to revision of the code as it affects technical, taxation and administrative phases of the laws covering commercial fishing. After most of the public hearings had been held, and after he had accumulated the essential information upon which to base the new laws, Roy Hampton died. Others of the committee had the information, but they lacked the background knowledge gained through lifelong experience with the industry. That made an unfortunate break in the chain of circumstances, but the job had to be carried on. Recommendations which had been made were put into the new law. These include repeal of several license fee and tax items on the taking of oysters, shrimp, fish and other seafoods covered by previous statutes. It is generally believed that the Hampton plan called for further re-writing of some of these revenue-producing clauses. They were inadvertently omitted when the new laws were prepared.

POLITICS—There was an element of politics involved in the statutory revision. Questions arose about continuing or increasing autonomy of the commercial fisheries division, and about degree of the director and the board of conservation and development. In effort to work out these details and conciliate all factional groups, it was easy to overlook specific items about how much tax should be levied on a particular type fishing boat or net. Result was that special provisions for taxing some types of shrimping equipment, and the tax on sale of shrimp, oysters, crabs, clams and other shellfish were repealed. The tax levied upon trawl boats was not changed. So that brought further completion of a trawl boat, since long established custom had been to license many small shrimp trawlers under the section that has been repealed.

COMPROMISE—Faced with that situation, the board of conservation and development, through Director George Ross and the commercial fisheries committee, and with co-operation of the persons and firms engaged in capturing a commodity for the market, has adopted a compromise policy. License fees are being accepted and receipts schedules prevailing under terms of the laws in effect prior to the 1951 general assembly. That appears to be a sensible approach to the question. The fishermen do not expect or desire to operate without paying reasonable license fees, and the department cannot operate efficiently without revenue derived from that source. On the other hand, many of the fishermen contend they cannot pay the fees required by the unrepealed sections, and stay in business, and the department admits it cannot enforce those provisions.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER
 The enormous, sprawling, door-to-door business today faces a multi-million-dollar fight for survival. Its sales, running $1,400,000,000 a year, are in danger. This week the United States Supreme Court upheld an Alexandria, La., city ordinance prohibiting house-to-house selling unless the salesmen have been requested or invited by the householder.

This marks the end of one phase of the struggle between municipalities and thousands of companies selling products by ringing doorbells. For many years, towns have tried to curb bell-ringing salesmen. Most of the laws have been knocked out on the grounds that they interfered with interstate commerce. In 1931, the town of Green River, Wyo., enacted an ordinance prohibiting such selling without invitation. It has been copied by many other Wyoming towns and municipalities in other states, including Alexandria. A magazine salesman, arrested there brought the case to the high court and lost. The justices, six to three, held the ordinance neither interfered with interstate commerce or violated the freedom of the press.

Already merchants in many cities and towns have begun pressuring officials to adopt the "Green River" ordinance. In many places they are being supported by housewives. There are many fine companies specializing in door-to-door selling but, like all great industries, it has attracted a fringe of sharpies who have cheated housewives. The industry has tried to police itself, sometimes with the nudging of Better Business Bureaus, but never completely eliminated suspicion.

Now, door-to-door companies face battles with voters and councilmen all over the country to prevent enactment of restrictive ordinances. This will mean hiring attorneys, publicity men and other spokesmen and it will involve other costs.

Where battles are lost, the companies have another scrap ahead of them to make sales despite the ordinances.

That can be done. It is being done today in Wyoming and in other restricted areas. The knack of it is to get householders to invite salesmen to call. Coupons in newspaper ads asking for demonstrations, distribution of postcards to the same end, contests and phone prospecting have all worked.

However, while these techniques have been successful in the selling of appliances, encyclopedias and other goods at those price levels, the cost of promoting activities may be burdensome in selling low-priced items such as can openers, trinkets and the like.

MANUFACTURERS' PMS ARE QUESTIONED
 Another branch of the government is cooking up trouble for some businesses.

The Federal Trade Commission, after long discussions on this matter, is now circulating a suggested code of trade practices in the cosmetics industry. One of the provisions is "that it is an unfair practice for a manufacturer to pay a retailer's salesperson to push the manufacturer's line. This practice is common in other industries. It leads to the question: if it is wrong for a manufacturer to pay a salesperson to push one brand of perfume, isn't it equally bad to pay one "PM's" or "spiffs" to push furniture, bedding, or any other product.

In fact, if the cosmetic industry approves of the prohibition, it is likely to be urged in other industry codes.

PROMOTER FEARS
 "Something ought to be done about press agents," the Old Promoter remarked. He pointed indignantly to an item in a gossip column. "Here's another flack who has planted an item saying his theatrical client has made so much money that now he just endorses his paychecks over to the Treasury."

"Oh, I don't mind old gags," the O. P. said. "You ought to know that by this time. But what I'm sore about is that some blamed Congressman may read this and write a law making us all turn over our paychecks to the government and then have the government pay everybody just enough to live on."

We did not embarrass the O. P. by asking how long it has been since he drew a paycheck. DEPRECIATION BASE HELD FAULTY Government depreciation allowances for tax purposes are unsound, Prof. Pilson W. Kelly, former government depreciation expert, said at a Fordham University symposium. Present regulations permit an annual charge-off based on the actual cost of a machine. Instead, he argued, it ought to be based on a percentage of the current value of the machine.

A company setting aside 5 percent of the cost of a machine for twenty years would not have laid away enough to replace it at today's prices with the accumulated funds.

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK (AP)—Dad only tried to woo one dog in his life—and he lost.

He had a wonderful way with dogs, and he was proud of it. He loved them, and they loved him. But they had to take him on his own terms.

He was a big-hearted man, generous beyond his own good. But he had a practical man's view toward both his children and his dogs. He thought they should obey him. That was his first and last law in dealing with them. He was an easy taskmaster, and if they obeyed him everything was fine. If they didn't—well, trouble and lightning.

For a long time there was a kind of race as to whether Dad would end up with more children or dogs, the children stopped at five, and the dogs won. Of half dozen or more around.

Dogs would follow Dad home, instinctively liking him. People would give him dogs. And Dad would buy dogs—any dogs.

"They keep away burglars," he'd say defensively, and it did no good for Mother to point out it would be cheaper to let an occasional burglar ransack the house than to go on feeding so many dogs. As a matter of fact a burglar did get into our house one night, and we figured later one of our dogs piloted him up the stairs.

Dad had beagle hounds. He had pointers. He had Irish setters. He had bulldogs. He had a long line of fox terriers. He even had a gigantic Great Dane. And what do you think the first thing she had? Puppies.

All these dogs shared a happy canine paradise with Dad. They would do anything, he said. Then one evening he brought home a Chinese Chow puppy, and it promptly bit him. That began the feud.

From the start the Chow would not obey Mother, Dad, or their four sons. But for our little sister, Dolores, he would do anything. He had only one heart to give, and he gave it to her utterly. And for no one else in the world did he have any use whatsoever.

He quickly grew into a powerful, beautiful, cinnamon-tawny animal. He refused to associate with the other dogs, and he was as grouchy and bad-tempered as an old English lord with the gout. A few of the braver dogs that tried to tangle with him soon gave that up as a lost cause. Ching was a king in battle. He never sought a fight, and never lost one.

Month after month Dad tried in every way to win over Ching. He couldn't understand why any dog boycotted him. Ching would romp happily by the hour with Dolores, but snarled if Dad put out a friendly hand.

Dad tried to bribe him with juicy bones, and Ching wouldn't buy. He tried to make him jealous by playing with the other dogs, and Ching would get up and trot boldly away. If he gave orders, Ching just glared at him.

Once Dad whistled to him and Ching turned and looked at him, then deliberately sat down and looked the other way. Dad became so angry at this snub that he stepped forward and punted him about ten feet—the only time he probably ever kicked a dog in his life. Ching merely turned around and gave him a cold stare that said in dog language: "Peasant."

Dad was so furious he was going to give Ching away on the grounds he was dangerous and might bite the neighbor children. But Dolores put her arm around Ching and wept, and he got to stay.

Ching died as gloriously as he had lived. One morning we came out and found him dead in the front yard, his fine head buried in his cinnamon paws. If he had been ill, it was his own secret.

Because our sister loved him so, Dad gave Ching a decent Christian burial, but he never forgave him.

"I always thought that dog had a sneaky oriental look," he'd say whenever Ching was mentioned in a later year.

And Dad never again brought home another dog. He wouldn't risk the second hurt of having another dog that didn't love him. Dad liked to be Dad—to his dogs as well as his children.

WASHINGTON—Unusual graduation exercises were held here at a college established in 1864 by an act of Congress at the instigation of President Lincoln.

The principal address was given in sign language, as 29 of the students who received degrees after the four-year course in liberal arts and sciences were deaf. An oral transcription of the speech was given simultaneously by the college dean for the benefit of 11 hearing persons, who received M. A.'s after a year's training in teaching the deaf.

The national institution, Galludet College for the Deaf, is the only one of its kind in the world, says Dean Irving S. Pusefield. Dr. Pusefield, who has been associated with the college for 36 years, says some 3,000 deaf college age men and women have attended the school since its founding. More than 1,000 have received degrees and gone out in the world to teach, enter other professions or to marry and establish home.

About 350 men and women have completed the highly specialized teacher-training course set up in 1892. One of these is a 1951 graduate, attractive Miss Bernarr Kasemri, a member of the royal family of Thailand. A hearing student in the normal training department, she plans to return to her native land to set up a teaching program for Thailand's deaf children.

Dr. Odie W. Underhill, deaf Gallaudet graduate of the class of 1908 and now head of the vocational system of the North Carolina State School for the Deaf at Morganton, gave the principal address. Degrees were conferred by the college president, Dr. Leonard M. Elsted.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

DAINGEROUS GROUND
 (Williamston Enquirer)

The farmers of this nation are again treading on dangerous ground. Reports state that 352,000 farm mortgages, having an aggregate value of one billion and seven hundred million dollars, were recorded in the nation last year. The speed on the debt road was clocked as being the fastest for any year since the early thirties when crop brought in little money, and the only cash to be had was that gained through the mortgage. Farmers stepped up the debt by seven percent last year in the number of mortgages and increased the amount by eighteen percent. Repayment in 1949 and 1950 were smaller in previous years, leaving the farm debt the first of this year greater than in previous years.

Farm land increased in price but not necessarily in value by twelve percent last year, and most of the purchases were financed via the mortgage route.

Business analysts, while they could be wrong, have a point when they say that the period of bountiful crops is not likely to continue indefinitely. Many farmers have by their own actions maneuvered themselves into a precarious spot, and one crop failure.

The day of speculation is spent, and the farmer who would value his future might do well to start hedging in a big way.

Famed Inland Seining Beach Draws Many Spectators

Idle Now, Grimesland Seine Beach Has Long History Of Profitable And Big Catches

By JOHN SPINKS, JR.

The sign reads: "All game fish caught in net will put back in river. Cigarettes 20 cents. Boats for rent." The word net is about the only indication an outsider would have that he is at the Grimesland Seine Beach. But a Pitt countian would know immediately that he is at the site of one of the most famous and oldest inland seining beaches in North Carolina and the only one on Tar River.

The first sentence on the sign that stands upright on the corning house applies only during the spawning season. The other two notices apply all during the year and the revenue from both supply the beach caretaker with a trifle to carry him through the months when the seine isn't in operation.

The narrow beach with its scale-strewn sand, its upright cypress trees hung with Spanish moss that overlooks the eddying waters of the river is quite a place. It's quite a place for sight-seeing and also for hook-and-line fishing. Right now it's pretty much on the leisurely side. There is no activity except for an occasional farmer who puts down his coin for one of the several flat-bottomed boats and oars out into the channel in quest of nytling that will bite a wet hook.

But come February the activity will pick up considerably—so much so, in fact, that at times between then and June 1, the beach attracts spectators numbered in the thousands.

That is the time the shad, herring, rock and perch begin coming up the river to spawn and they keep coming through the middle of the summer.

Then they go back down stream to open water for the winter. But that trip up is what the seine operators are interested in and during the main part of the swimming exodus they capitalize on it.

Ozell Moore, the present owner of the seine beach, told this writer the other day the hauls he has made during the four years since he bought the property have made it worth his while to work three months in the year and fish for his own pleasure the other nine. Moore, a native of Grimesland, took over the beach in 1947 after spending most of his 46 years working in stores scattered throughout the county and elsewhere.

He bought the property from Mrs. Tom Andrews of Bethel, one of the daughters of W. E. "Lige" Proctor who took over the seine in 1899 and began making it a profitable business.

Moore's hauls during the four years have averaged a bit under 900 pounds or a count of 1,800 perch, shad, rock and herring—mostly the latter—each. That many average pounds are taken in each of the 22 hauls he makes in a working day. Some of the hauls he sells to the highest bidder on the shore before the seine is put out and the rest he sells himself, either fresh or canned ("corned").

Ever since the turn of the century when Lige Proctor, father of J. Knott Proctor, present Greenville postmaster, took over the beach, it has been a lucrative enterprise. Proctor didn't need the money from the seine to support himself or his family but he used a major portion of the fish that were caught to stock his general store in Grimesland. Once he caught a huge sturgeon that definitely would not have been for sale in his own store. Rather it would have gone up north for the price it would bring from the domestic caviar market. It is not known just what happened to that fish but residents of Grimesland recall that Proctor hauled it into town from the river on a mule cart and showed it around to interested townspeople.

It was intimated by one of the town fathers that the residents appraisers that day seemed to adhere to the later-day doctrine of Robert R. Reynolds that "caviar ain't nothing but fish eggs anyhow" and let it go at that. But it was a big fish, all right and the largest ever hauled in—before or since.

Proctor bought the beach and adjoining farm land—180 acres in all—from Olivia Blakeley in 1899 for $5,000. He and his brother J. O. Proctor operated it until Lige died after the first World War and it was passed to his heirs to operate or to sell. It has been known as Proctor's Seine Beach ever since.

Not much is known of Olivia or L. M. Blakeley nowadays nor their

This placid area of Tar River is the aftermath of three months of seining for shad, rock, herring and other fish at the seine beach located just below the Grimesland river bridge. family. They seem to have come to Pitt County from another state and farmed the land adjoining Tar River. Since no accurate account of the earlier history of the seine beach is available, it is believed that Blakeley started the operation some time in the 1860's. He seems to have depended on the revenue from the seine for his family income more so than he did off his farming operations for when he sold it to the Proctor Brothers, the farm was in a bad state of repair.

J. L. Williams, a present resident of Grimesland, remembers vaguely Blakeley and his crew of seiners at the beach. He remembers they worked all day and night during the season and made some pretty good hauls, one of them worth $7 to a bidder on the beach. But most of the hauls were worth between three and four dollars which was the amount paid to Blakeley before he hauled in the net.

Concerning the pay-before-haul proposition that Blakeley practiced, Williams recalls that mostly persons from outside this section of the state bought the "pig in a poke" and the others standing around just bought individual fish.

But that is the buying method still practiced at the beach. A bidder indicates to Moore that he'll take the next haul that comes in, puts down his money and stands back to see if the take was worth it. Sometimes it is and other times it isn't. But most of the time there are several shad and rock in the net in addition to the herring which make up the bulk of the haul.

The seining operation nowadays attracts many cars each day, Moore said, and he has seen days when more than 3,000 people have visited the beach, either to buy fish or just to watch. And it is an interesting operation to watch. Called "bunting the seine" (and nobody knows where the term came from), the net is 150 yards long which allows the boatmen to put it out across the river, float it downstream, and then skirt it across half the river on the way back to the corning house. At mid-stream on the down-stream leg, it is attached to a rope that is wound on a motor windless and is pulled in. The fish are trapped in the 33-foot depth of the net and as the loop gets smaller, they are pulled out on shore. At that time the bidder gets his first look at what he bought 25 minutes previously.

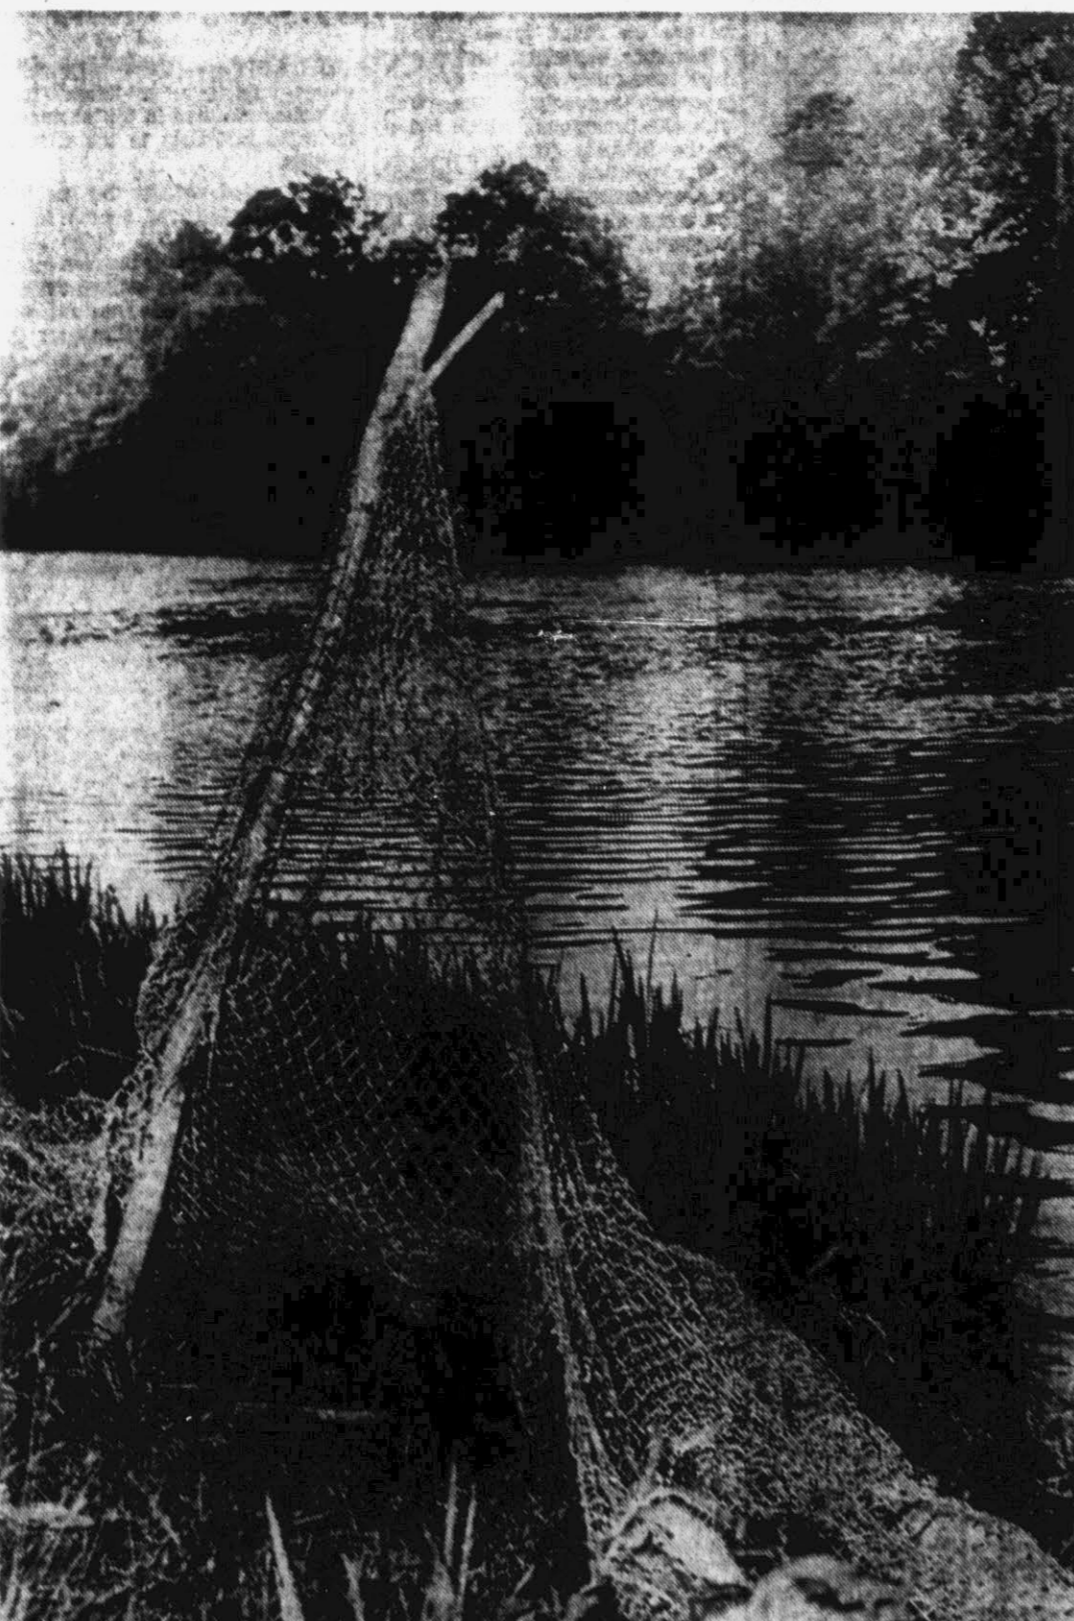

The 1951 season, which ended last Friday, was the best Moore has ever had, and probably the best season in the history of the seine. He couldn't estimate how many pounds were hauled in during the three and a half months but more shad were taken than at any other time, he said. Working seven men for about eight hours a day (or however long it takes to bunt the seine 22 times), he made a good profit from his corning operation and also from the complete hauls he sold. He figures the cost per week is about $260, including salaries, repairs to the net, materials for corning and other miscellaneous items.

At any rate, it's a good business, he says, particularly if one likes fishing. And he's a sport about it, too, indicated from his sign concerning the throw-back of all game fish. Although he is required by law to do that, he reasons that maybe he'll catch one of the big fellows during the months he is fishing for the fun of it.

THIEF PAMPERS HIS TASTE PARKERSBURG, W. Va.—(UP)—An unidentified thief stole 25 pounds of spaghetti from the Trinity parish house. The next night he robber returned—this time to make off with several gallons of spaghetti sauce.

Shown here is a section of the 150-yard net stretched out on the beach to dry.

Here is another section of the net as it is drying to the sun after a haul. It is 33 feet deep and is leaded at the bottom to hold it off the river floor. Several round cork floats are strung along the top side to keep it from sinking.

Local Man Decorated For Service In Korea

Lieut. Johnny Corey, son of B. R. Corey, 204 Summit street, is shown here receiving the Bronze Star in Logistical Command headquarters at Camp Kyoto, Japan. The accompanying citation stated the decoration was awarded for his "outstanding service" while serving with the Tactical Air Control squadron in Korea. Corey was wounded last September in Korea and was brought back to a Japanese hospital where he was treated for wounds received. He was one of the first Pitt County natives to be wounded in the fighting in Korea.

Carrier Boys At Weiner Roast And Business Meet

Four of the Daily Reflector's Little Merchants are shown proudly displaying their new T-shirts, presented to them at a weiner roast given for them yesterday by The Reflector. Following the event, in which some 14 pounds of hot dogs were eaten, the boys were presented with the shirts. A meeting was held at which time emphasis was placed on increased service to the customers served by the carriers.—(Reflector Staff Photo by Roy Hardee.)

Over 40 Daily Reflector paper boys from Greenville and nine nearby towns were feted at a weiner roast given by The Reflector yesterday on Tar River at the home of Heber Tripp. The event is one of several such outings held yearly by the circulation department of The Reflector, to promote better understanding among the Little Merchants and to help speed-up and improve the service being rendered to the patrons of The Reflector. A total of 30 boys were present from Greenville with carriers also from Griffon, Ayden, Winterville, Farmville, Fountain, Stokes, Bethal, Grimesland and Vanceboro in attendance. After feasting on hot dogs and all the trimmings for more than an hour, during which time more than 14 pounds of the "franks" were disposed of, together with crate after crate of soft drinks, a business session was held by Circulation Manager J. E. Kesiah. Kesiah told the boys that the meeting was being held to stress the importance of the Little Merchants giving good service to The Reflector's customers, which would aid both the customers and the boys. "The people need to understand that you are the business man who buys his product and then sells it to others. If you do not make prompt collections, then you are the loser and no business can operate in that manner," the circulation manager told the boys. "Collections must be made promptly and at a regular set time in order to help the customer and yourself. 'Above all,' Kesiah pointed out to the youngsters, 'be polite and considerate in serving your customers and results will be beneficial to you and the paper.' Following the food and business session, all of the boys were presented with summer T-shirts, carrying the name 'The Daily Reflector Carrier'.

Vic Raschi Gives Yanks New Hope Of Besting White Sox

By CARL LUNDQUIST
United Press Sports Writer

When they needed him the most "Old Mr. Park Chops" came through once more for the Yankees and gave them new hope today of catching up with the explosive first place White Sox.

That's quick Vic Raschi, the meat-on-the-table ace of the Yankee pitching staff, a guy many managers would make first choice if they had to pick a hurler to win just one vital game for them.

Raschi, a cut-em-down competitor who is merciless against a pitcher when the stakes are high, yet a big-hearted sentimental guy who supports a blind brother and a little french war-orphaned girl he never has seen with the money chips he rakes in for the Yankees, was at his best last night in a seven-inning, 4 to 2, victory.

The stakes were high—the way he likes 'em. He started out slowly, got into first inning trouble, then got himself behind, 2 to 0 in the third by serving a home run ball to slugger Eddie Robinson after a pop-fly double to Nellie Fox, which was the result of some confused Yankee fielding.

But after that he simply padlocked home plate. The White Sox, no quitters, put men on base time after time, but could do nothing about it.

He struck out six batters, mostly at crucial moments, and wound up winning his ninth victory against just three defeats. Moreover, it was the 13th triumph of his career over the White Sox, who have beaten him just twice.

By winning this big opener of a four game set before 53,940 fans, the largest crowd ever to see a big league game in Chicago, the Yankees cut the White Sox first place lead to 3-1-2 games.

Co-hero with Raschi was the youngest Yankee, Mickey Mantle, who pulled him out of trouble in the first inning when Fox singled and whizzed to third as the fourth ball on Eddie Stewart was a wild pitch. That put runners on first and third with none out, but Minnie Mizeo filed to Mantle and Mickey short-circuited the rally by throwing out Fox at the plate. How damaging the inning might have been was demonstrated when Robinson followed with a single that sent Stewart to third but Raschi bore down to get Al Zarilla on a weak grounder.

Mantle also figured in the first of a pair of two-run rallies that gave the Yankees their margin. Bobby Brown walked to start the fourth and scored on Johnny Hopp's double. Mantle singled in Hopp with the run that made it 2-2 and in the fifth the Yankees put the issue beyond doubt.

Jerry Coleman's single, Raschi's sacrifice, and Gene Woodling's single scored what became the winning run, while a sacrifice by Phil Rizzuto and Brown's single wound up the night's scoring as Ken Holcombe lost a tough six hitter. It was the first Chicago loss in a night game this season.

At Cleveland Bobby Feller won his eighth game, 7 to 1, from the Red Sox while Dizzy Trout pitched the Tigers to a 9 to 2 decision over the Athletics. The Senators led the Browns, 4 to 1, after four innings when their game was rained out. In the only National League game, the Cardinals edged the Braves, 2 to 1, while Pittsburgh at Brooklyn, Chicago at New York and Cincinnati at Philadelphia were rained out.

Feller, a calculating pro of the Raschi stripe, pitched seven-hit ball for his fourth straight victory. His battery-mate, Jim Hegan, drove in four runs with a grand slam double and a homer and Dale Mitchell accounted for two more with a homer.

Riddick Hurls Two-Hit Ball To Handcuff Rivals

Riddick pitched the Elks into undisputed first place yesterday with a two-hit, 6-3 win over the Exchanges. The young righthander handcuffed the losers all through the game, striking out nine and passing only five. He also starred in the hitting parade, collecting one of his team's five hits and batting in two runs.

A single run in the fourth clinched the game for Elks. James Hudson led off by reaching base safely on an error and went to second on Harrington's fielder's choice and another error. B. Bilbro then singled the winning run across.

George Nichols went the distance for the Exchanges. He gave up five hits, while whiffing six and walking two.

Stoneman led the Elks batting with a single and a double in three times at bat. The losers were led by Dick Evans and Bobby Whitehurst with one hit apiece.

The Tigers gave Trout a 9 to 0 lead, scoring eight runs in the third on seven hits, a hit batsman, a walk, sacrifice, and error. Trout and Johnny Groth each drove in two runs with hits in the big inning. Trout gave up nine hits for his third victory.

Usually reliable Bob Elliott went to pieces at third base, making three errors and letting a questionable hit by Stan Musial get past him as the Cards defeated pitcher Max Surkont on two unearned runs.

Rookie Joe Fresko pitched six-hit ball to win his sixth game and his fifth in a row. Walker Cooper hit a ninth inning homer to deprive him of a shutout.

Irish And Army To Go Along On Television Ban

NEW YORK —(UP)—Tom Hamilton, chairman of the NCAA's steering committee on television, said today that Notre Dame and Army will go along with the experimental ban on television of college football games during the 1951 season despite an attempt by the University of Pennsylvania to "blackout" the NCAA.

Hamilton said Col. Orin C. Krueger, athletic director at West Point, had assured him last night that Army would not break with the NCAA on the television question. He also said that Notre Dame athletic director Ed Krause had told him privately that Notre Dame would go along with the NCAA and that he "expected Notre Dame to make its position official soon."

Hamilton made these points in outlining the NCAA's position in the television squabble: 1. "Notre Dame and Army will not break with the NCAA. Army may play Pennsylvania this year but not if the game is televised. Col. Krueger's position in the matter was mis-represented recently because of a facetious remark."

2. "Pennsylvania has arbitrarily set itself up as a group of one to take unfair advantage of a peculiar situation. I believe that they have other interests at heart besides the welfare of their athletic program."

3. "Pennsylvania has requested a hearing but has failed to take advantage of its opportunity to submit a proposal. This opportunity has been open to all colleges since the NCAA's meeting in Dallas on Jan. 13 and will be open until June 28. There is no need for a special hearing since the machinery for any college to be heard has been established since Jan. 13."

4. "Pennsylvania stated its case on Jan. 13 in Dallas and was heard completely in a spirit of fairness. But the colleges voted, 161 to 7, to go along with the NCAA's one-year experimental and limited ban."

5. "Pennsylvania has attempted to blackmail the NCAA and take unfair advantage of it, by referring to the NCAA's program as a ban. It is not."

6. "The NCAA's only object is the preservation of athletics—no other. But we are bucking enormous forces which have other interests at heart and which, in many cases, have easier access to the public to state their positions, than do colleges."

7. "The basis for the NCAA's one-year exploratory program was a report by the National Opinion Research Center which conducted a study of four years of attendance figures at football games all over the country. As an example, the report showed a 25 per cent decrease in attendance at games

Robins' Demise Marks End Of Long Story Of Noted Greenville Ball Teams

Sport Slants By Pap

Greenville has had a long record in baseball world. Old timers in this district remember when Greenville was playing in 1905 in semi-pro ball. Since that time some type of baseball club has represented Greenville in the league play.

Kinston, Grifton, and Ayden provided competition for Greenville as far back as 1911. They played in the Coastal League, so-called because of the connecting railroad over which the opposing players traveled to reach the game-site of the day.

The first taste of professional ball came to Greenville in 1928. Six teams—Wilmington, Fayetteville, Goldsboro, Kinston, Rocky Mount, and Greenville—formed the old East Carolina League, a Class D organization. They operated for two seasons but because of the great distances which it was necessary to travel in order to play each other, the league folded in 1929.

For the next three years Greenville did not participate in any form of organized ball. Ayden, Kinston, Snow Hill, and Greenville combined to form the fore-runner of the present Coastal Plain League. That name has stuck down to the present. Greenville finished second that year. Kinston defeated the Greenies in the first two games of the play-off series, but Greenville recovered and took the next four games to win the championship.

One of the outstanding players that year was a catcher by the name of Ty Wagner, now a prominent business man in Greenville. He represented Greenville on the first Coastal All-Star team.

The local club moved up a notch in 1935 to finish first in the standings. Ayden defeated the Greenies in the semi-final of the play-offs. This 1935 club is reputed to have been one of the best in Greenville history.

Wagner again made the All-star team. He was joined by first baseman Johnson and pitcher Barley. In 1936 Greenville had another outstanding season, finishing second in regular season standings. They were again defeated by their neighbors, the Ayden Aces, in the semi-finals. Ayden went on to take the championship that year.

One of the most famous ball players ever to perform in a Greenville uniform was Wayne Ambler, considered by many to be the best second baseman to ever play in the Coastal loop. He and pitcher Holland made the league team in 1936.

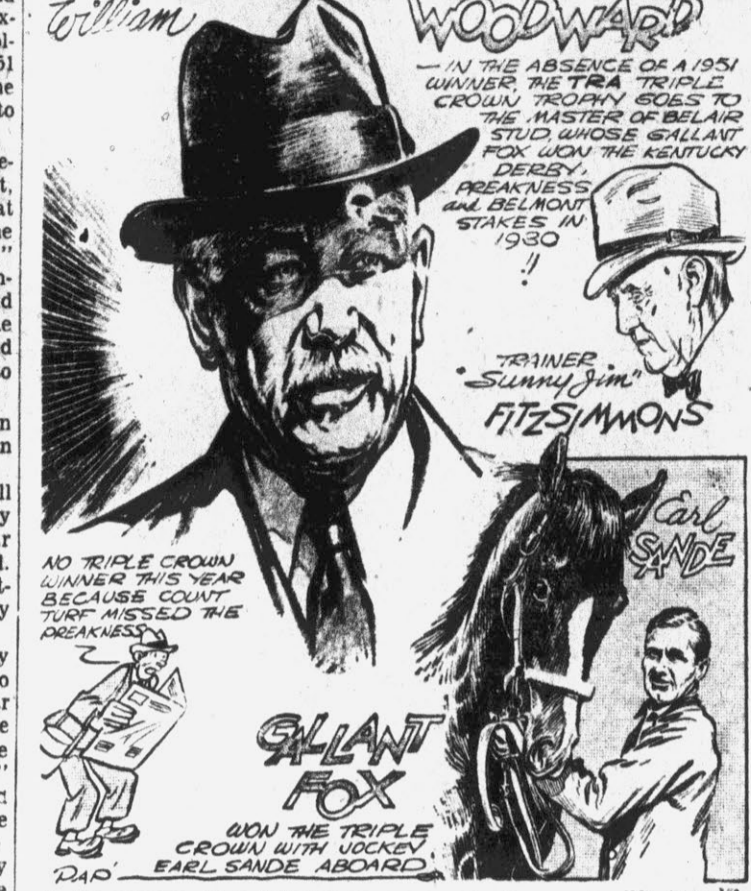

The Coastal Plain became professional in 1937, and for some reason the Greenies dropped to seventh. They did not place a man on the all star team. Frank Thompson led in the absence of a 1951 winner, the Thoroughbred Racing Association Triple Crown Trophy will go this year to William Woodward, owner of the Belair Stud, whose Gallant Fox accomplished the feat of winning the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes in 1930 to become the second of eight thoroughbreds who have won the American Triple Crown. As the spring racing season started no less than 31 horses were potential Triple Crown winners. Only six were eligible when the field for the 77th Kentucky Derby went to the post on May 5, and their chances blew up in the dust raised by the flying hooves of Count Turf. Count Turf was not entered in the Preakness.

William Woodward is perhaps one of the most thoroughgoing sportsmen in the history of American turf. Elected a member of the Jockey Club in 1917, he served as chairman of that oldest of racing's administrative bodies from 1930 until he retired in 1949. Belair Stud's record of 12 horses which have won $100,000 or more speaks well for the Woodward theory that "on the quality of its mares depends the success of a stud."

In addition to his racing activities in this country, William Woodward has for many years maintained a racing stable in England and each year sends home-bred yearlings abroad as "ambassadors" for the American thoroughbred.

The possibility of playing two nights a week under the lights at Guy Smith Stadium brought about a great deal of discussion. It was finally decided to have Recreation Director Warren Carroll investigate the possibilities of the park.

The managers also voted to allow a college team sponsored by the Varsity Shell Station to enter the league.

It will be his duty to supervise the play of each game and to check the eligibility status of each player. It will also be his duty to meet with the umpires of a protested game to decide the final outcome. His decisions will be final in all instances. The managers reorganized themselves and wrote a constitution and the by-laws under which they would which were not televised in the same district. This trend is typical.

Hamilton said he "did not want emotion to enter into the discussion" but that forces "have gone so far as to question our legal ground."

"We have sound legal counsel, too," Hamilton said. "And we know we are on sound legal ground."

Hamilton explained that yesterday's emergency meeting was held in order "to acquaint the public with the background which led up to the NCAA's decisions."

"Our position had been roundly misrepresented," he said. "There are many interests involved in the problem. We are trying to find a way for college athletics and television interests to live together. Our primary interest is the preservation of college athletics."

"It is regrettable," Hamilton continued, "that one college should arbitrarily appoint itself a group of one to oppose the common good and take unfair advantage of a peculiar situation for its own selfish interests."

Drivers Trained By Tough Policy

DETROIT —(UP)—Detroit's widely-publicized "get-tough" traffic policy resulted in jail sentences for 3,234 motorists in the first 12 months.

"The drive against the reckless and careless driver seems to be paying off," Traffic Judge John Watts said. "The pedestrian problem still remains. I believe drivers are becoming more careful and realize that an extra drink for the road may mean jail."

"The pedestrian remains careless, heedless and forms the biggest traffic hazard. We have proposed a program which will bring all persons given tickets for pedestrian violations into court."

Rumors Persist Bill Veck To Buy St. Louis Browns

ST. LOUIS —(AP)—Reports persisted today, despite denials by the principals, that the long-rumored sale of the St. Louis Browns to Bill Veck is nearing completion.

There have been recurring reports the club would be sold almost from the day that Bill and Charlie DeWitt assumed control of the club two years ago.

But never have they flown so thick and fast.

There were several different versions, but they jibed on these two points: The sale to Veck, former owner of the Cleveland Indians, may be completed at any moment, or already has been completed, and the Browns will remain in St. Louis.

Contacted in Chicago, Veck smilingly asked reporters: "Why should I buy them? Now that the White Sox acquired Don Lenhardt (from the Browns) I can see the St. Louis Club here."

But the Milwaukee Journal said Veck told it in a telephone conversation that only a few details on the transaction remained to be worked out. The newspaper quoted Veck as saying, "For a while at least we will try to buck the Cardinals in St. Louis."

The DeWitt brothers were besieged with inquiries.

them at the plate with a .314 average. The 1938 season ended with a twelve-game winning streak for Greenville. They missed the play-offs by only one game, finishing in fifth place. Rube Wilson was the manager that year and led the team at bat with a .549 percentage. John Heavener was right behind with .333.

Don King led the mound corps with a 16-6 record. He was selected for the loop team on his outstanding play.

The city of Greenville built a stadium and gave it to the ball club to use for expenses. It was named Guy Smith Stadium, after a man who had devoted much time and given much money to the club.

The Greenies celebrated their new stadium with the regular season championship. They again lost in the semi-finals this time to Kinston.

Three members of the club made the All-star team. They were H. M. Christopher, Clarence Allen, and Don King.

Alex Daniels, who batted .337, led the league in runs batted in with 120. This mark stood as a record until the last three years.

Fred Gault's 20-1 record with a seventh place team led the league. He was chosen for the All-Star team in 1940.

Greenville bounced back into second place in 1941. Wilson defeated them in the finals of the playoffs, four games to two. This was Rube Wilson's last season as manager.

Halley Wilson, Harry Jenkins, and Charles Scogg each batted in the 30's. Howard Long had an outstanding pitching record of 16 wins and four losses.

The war years of 1942-45 interrupted the Coastal Plain schedule. The league disbanded until 1946, when they resumed operations.

The 1946 Greenville club was managed by Virgie Payne, finishing sixth. That year he had a great shortstop that year in Ray Carlson. At the end of the year he was sold to the Chicago Cubs for the figure of approximately $5,000. Carlson led the league in total hits, tied for the doubles lead with 33, and was second in stolen bases with 32. Another standout was Verne Blackwell, who led the league in runs batted in with 114. Both boys made the All-Star team.

1947-48 were dismal years for the Greenies as they finished last both years.

Pappy Williams' 1949 team was the best that Greenville has produced since the war. They finished fourth in the final standings after a heated race with Goldsboro. They defeated Kinston to win the playoff championship.

Williams was the second-best batter in the league with a .335 average and led with RBI's with 123. John Tepedino led the league in runs scored and was third in the batting race with 319.

On the Greenville Robins—a new name management had taken over control of the club and changed the name—finished sixth under Manager Randy Heflin. John Bakist led the batting with a .301 average.

The Robins were in seventh place before their resignation from the league this week.

Greenville has finished in first place three times in fourteen years in the Coastal Plain. They finished second three times; four and fifth once; and sixth, seventh, and eighth twice each.

MUTE TESTIMONY TO FURY OF WAR—A shattered tree stands like a gaunt sentinel before the war-wrecked remains of a bridge over the Han River, a natural barrier on the western front in South Korea.

A Tribute To Our Firemen!

When fire breaks out at four o'clock in the morning, your alert hook-and-ladder guardians are instantly on the job. Heroically, and oftentimes tragically, these brave men in helmets think only of YOU, your family, and the protection of your property. The fireman is an integral part of our City Government. He must be always physically fit. He must respond without hesitation at the clang of the bell. Night and day, summer and winter, he must be on call to fight the flames and scale the towering ladder. He is a man of ACTION, upon whom all of us depend. We salute his bravery and commend his faithfulness!

Chapter 9
The waiter removed the empty glass and set the sixth vino down.
He judged Jigger, dropped a check before him ostentatiously, and then gestured to the forest of standees lined around the walls.
A chair scraped beside him and Jigger stirred. "Hiya, Red," he said chidingly, showing his wristwatch. "You're late." It was 9:30.
Red said darkly, "I was detained."
Jigger grinned. "What'd Prescott want with you?"
"The story of my life!"
The waiter returned and set

Shrine Clubs And Sudan Sponsor 'Water Follies'

A form of entertainment never before witnessed in this section will be seen at Riddick Stadium in Raleigh June 13-18, inclusive, under the sponsorship of the uniformed units of Sudan Shrine Temple. Sam Snyder's production, "Water Follies of 1951" will make only one stop between its showing at the State Fair, in Dallas, Texas, and an engagement in Toronto, Canada, and that stop will be Raleigh.

The two and one-half hour show will furnish something for everybody. Essentially an aquacade, it is featured by high production values, the stage and water ballets, beautifully costumed and featured by some unusual lighting effects. Close cooperation among the various Shrine Clubs in Sudan Temple, working through committees and otherwise, has featured the arrangements for the show. The uniformed units, which will sponsor the Raleigh performances are made up of Sudan Shrine Temple Band, the Chanters, the Oriental Band, the Drum and Bugle Corps, the Arab Patrol, the Provost Guard, and the Wrecking Crew.

The water show will bring with it to Raleigh not only a cast of more than fifty, but two huge portable pools, including the world's largest swimming pool and the world's largest diving tank. The pool is 35 by 75 feet in surface, and five feet deep. The diving pool is 45 by 35 and eight feet deep. The stage is 35 feet square, the entire set-up being more than half the length of the football field. Full orchestration will mark the performances.

Incidentally, it takes 80,000 gallons of water for each performance to be put on. There will be a show every night during the Raleigh engagement, except on Sunday. The opening will be preceded by a long parade on June 13. On June 16 at 2:00 p. m. there will be a matinee for children.

BOBBY BURNS RELIC OWNED
SYRACUSE, N. Y. — (UP) — Young James R. Chitt lays no claim to being a poet. But he does possess something most poets would like to have—a small box in which Robert Burns, Scots bard, kept his letters.

World populations began to grow rapidly about 1650 after the end of the 30 Years' War.

Rescue Youth From Drowning

Quick action by a local boy, Thomas C. Rowlett (left) and his buddy, Claiborne Troups, prevented the death of an unidentified boy by drowning. The accident occurred on May 28 at the Enlisted Men's Swimming Pool, U. S. Naval Station, Key West, Fla.

Rowlett, of 503 East Fourth street, and Troups, saw the boy jump into the water of the swimming pool. They noticed that the boy sank immediately below the surface and, unaware that he could not swim, they turned away. When the boy's head appeared above the water edge he yelled for help, they promptly jumped, fully clothed, into the pool. They supported the child between them and brought him to the edge of the pool. He suffered no ill effects from his plunge.

Rowlett is presently attending the Fleet Sonar School at Key West. He is attached to the USS Basilone.

Local Kiwanians Host To Farmville

In their meeting last night the Greenville Kiwanis Club was host to the Farmville club in an inter-club meeting. This custom of inter-club meetings is being carried out by the Greenville club this year in an effort to get better acquainted with the members of our surrounding clubs and to promote better fellowship between members of the various clubs.

The Farmville club had charge of the program and Frank Allen, chairman of the inter-club relations committee, presented a musical program. It consisted of vocal solos and duets and piano solos by Miss Carolyn Roebuck, Miss Willie Ray Harper, Mr. Robert Everett Roebuck and Mr. Jack Williford.

The 26 members that attended from Farmville were headed by their president, Charles Edwards, who announced that they were bringing rain and that it would follow a little later on. His prognosticating seemed to be rather good because just as the program ended a light drizzle started.

The attendance prize was won by Bill Whedbee and Leo Jenkins paid a nickel for each year of his age on the occasion of his birthday.

Narcotics Probe Set In Florida

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A new Florida investigation was in the making today as the Senate crime committee pushed ahead with its narcotics probe and laid out another legal snare for big-time gamblers.

It was learned that the committee is taking another look at the affairs of Miami Sheriff James Sullivan, who was reinstated a few weeks ago by Florida Governor Fuller Warren.

The crime committee announced meanwhile, that it will hold a closed hearing next Tuesday at the U. S. Public Health Service for narcotic addicts at Lexington, Ky. Questioning of patients there will mark a further step in the groundwork being laid by the committee for a spreading probe of the drug traffic. Similar hearings recently have been held at State institutions in Maryland.

The committee, still drafting legislation to carry out its recommendations for striking at organized crime, introduced a bill yesterday to ban the use of the mails or interstate telephone, telegraph or radio to make or pay off bets.

SIGN WARNS DRIVERS
CHICAGO—(UP)—A luminous sign warning motorists to reduce speed is improving traffic safety in suburban River Grove, Ill. The sign is painted in fluorescent paint and has ultra-violet lights shining on it.

STEEL YIELDS TO GLASS
TRENTON, Mich.—(UP)—When a freight train jumped the track near here a gondola car loaded with large sheets of plate glass was tossed on its side. The steel car was battered but not one of the sheets of glass was even cracked.

More than half the workers of the human race are farmers or farm workers.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A Senate economy bloc has served notice that non-defense government agencies probably will have to tighten their belts in the fiscal year starting July 1.

The coalition easily won two tests in votes yesterday on the first fiscal 1952 appropriations bill to come before the Senate—the $2,528,338,000 Labor-Federal Security measure.

Funds for the office of the solicitor in the Department of Labor were cut by $94,445, about eight per cent. Ten Democrats and 37 Republicans voted for the reduction proposed by Senator Douglas (D-Ill.).

An additional $400,000 was pruned from the item of salaries and expenses for the office of Secretary of Labor. This cut, sponsored by Senator Williams (R-Del.), amounted to 28 per cent. It was adopted by a standing vote.

Many more votes are scheduled for Monday. The pending business then will be an amendment by Senator Ferguson (R-Mich.) to cut all Federal personnel items in the Labor - Federal Security bill by 10 per cent. He estimates this will save $11,731,000.

The Senate Appropriations Committee, before sending the bill to the floor, put in a five per cent cut on all salary items. Ferguson seeks to add another five per cent to that.

Senator Douglas had 20 other amendments to offer which he estimated would knock about $50,000,000 out of the bill. Some of these conflict with the Ferguson plan because they affect personnel.
