'Big Five' Peace Talks Viewed As Possible If Korea Efforts Succeed

European Diplomats Think Far East Will not Soon Flare Up Again

LONDON—(UP)—Top European diplomats said today they believe Russia will ask for a Big Five peace conference if the Korean cease-fire efforts are successful. Their opinion is that fighting in the Far East will not flare up again once a Korean cease-fire is achieved. They said Russia has indicated by her own initiative that she has "had enough of that tactic."

Russia's Big Five meeting would include Communist China and the Soviet Union would prefer to discuss not only an over-all Far Eastern settlement but German rearmament and American bases as well—if she could draw the agenda.

European observers think the United States would flatly reject any conference with Red China participating. European feeling is that American public opinion would revolve if the Korean war were concluded at the price of a Chinese diplomatic victory.

The Middle East is considered the most likely spot for any possible new and overt Russian pressure. Russia has played a waiting game in Iran, although a large-scale British military intervention there could easily bring Red Army troops into Northern Iran.

But Britain has demonstrated she will not risk such an action unless forced to the extreme.

Thus Russia's Kremlin planners are expected to follow a course of instigating the Middle East countries to make more nationalist demands. Iran is expected to revive her claims to Bahrain Island off the Arabian coast. Egypt probably will begin clamoring for a 50-50 deal in Suez Canal operations.

Most diplomats agree the most troublesome point of all is the shaping of a strong West European defense force under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Russia is mainly concerned with German rearmament, according to diplomats. U.S. High Commissioner John J. McCloy has returned to Germany from Washington with obvious instructions to move more rapidly in fitting Germany into the defense scheme for Western Europe.

Many observers in Europe feel that revival of a strong German Army is the one step that could tilt the delicate balances in Moscow in favor of risking World War III. The Atlantic alliance strategists think the danger of war will reach its maximum in 1953—the atom bomb and all things considered. The danger still will be great in 1954 but will ease off as the combined Western strength makes a communist victory unlikely.

Meanwhile Moscow radio is expected to hammer a new propaganda "peace" offensive—with particular emphasis on German rearmament.

Who Won The War?

This Is Jumping The Gun, Cease Fire In Korea Not Yet A Certainty, But Red Reporter Has Already Claimed Victory For North Korea; Up To History

By HARRY FERGUSON

By HARRY FERGUSON

United Press Foreign News Editor

If and when a cease-fire is proclaimed in Korea, the big question will be: Who won the war? Moscow has answered that question in advance. The Communists won it and we lost it. The North Koreans and the Chinese Red Army conquer in Moscow's opinion. It is safe to predict that no matter what happens from now on nothing is going to change their opinion.

Even before the United Nations and communist negotiators met for their first cease-fire talks, the communist propaganda drums began to throb. An unidentified reporter in the North Korean capital of Pyongyang wrote a story explaining all about it. He sent it to Moscow where all the newspapers published it.

"Having suffered reverses in an effort to seize North Korea by force," his dispatch read, "the government of the United States official" expressed a desire to cease hostilities and ordered Ridgway to begin negotiations with the commander-in-chief of the Korean People's Army."

There is no reference in the communist propaganda to the fact that the Red forces in Korea have suffered casualties of approximately 1,900,000 in one year. No reference to the fact that two powerful offensives by the Communists this spring were thrown back with heavy losses in men and equipment.

No reference to the fact that the cease-fire negotiations were set in motion by a communist—Jacob Malik, Soviet delegate to the United Nations, who opened up the matter with a broadcast saying a negotiated peace was possible.

If this war ends where it began—along the 38th parallel—impartial historians may deprive the Communists of some of the victory laurels which they now are busy awarding to themselves. But the propaganda designed for consumption inside the communist nations never will change. In their history books the United Nations Army always will be on the losing side.

U.N. soldiers at the front already have become interested in history's

Flames Mushroom From Exploding Gas Tanks

Russian Strategy Carefully Studied

Mild Optimism Over Progress Of Korean Parley But No Belief Political Problems Can Be Settled For Long Time

WASHINGTON—(UP)—Congressional opinion still varied today on the Korean truce talks, and American officials still studied the possibility they might be a smoke screen for other Russian moves.

While the Russian-prompted talks go on, State Department officials carefully studied the possibilities of Russian strategic moves in such trouble spots as Iran and Yugoslavia.

There was mild optimism that the talks would produce a cease-fire, but there was no disposition to believe that the political problems of Korea could be settled for a long time.

In Congress, Sens. Harry P. Cain (R-Wash.) and Robert S. Kerr (D-Okla.) took opposite stances on the peace talks.

Cain thought a truce at best at the 38th parallel would be a defeat for the United Nations. But Kerr retorted that a truce along the pre-war borders of North and South Korea would be a victory.

Cain thought a truce at best would only be temporary. He warned that the Communists may use a truce to "re-group and build up" for another big offensive.

The possibility, of course, worries government military and political leaders.

United Nations circles in New York were encouraged today by signs of progress in the Korean peace talks.

Warren R. Austin, chief of the United States delegation, said, however, that "we must make no premature inferences. Now is the time to stand fast, firm in our faith."

Grand Jury Check-Up On Gov't Job-Selling

JACKSON, Miss.—(AP)—A special U. S. grand jury convened here today to investigate a "vicious job-selling racket" a Senate subcommittee says was conducted by pro-Truman Democrats in 1949.

A Senate Subcommittee on Expenditures, after investigating published charges, reported it found there had been "brazen, widespread and open" sales of post office jobs by officers of the Mississippi Democratic committee and others.

The Mississippi Democratic Committee was a rump pro-Truman committee formed when the regular state Democratic party bolted the Truman ranks in 1948 to support the States Rights ticket.

U. S. District Judge Allen Cox of Oxford presides over a special term of court for the investigation. Judge Sidney Mize excused himself. His brother, Frank Mize, of Forest, was chairman of the Mississippi Democratic Committee.

The Senate subcommittee reported it found that Curtis Rogers, secretary of the committee, Frank Mize, and Curtis Beasley, former secretary of the committee, used political power "to extort contributions from persons seeking federal appointments in Mississippi."

Plan Financing Of Farmers Day Committee's Task Begins With 'Kick-Off' Breakfast

Financing this year's Farmers Day will get underway tomorrow morning when the finance committee meets for breakfast at the American Legion dining room.

Under the direction of committee chairman John G. Fleming, the 50 members will proceed immediately after breakfast to merchants and other businessmen in the city in the solicitation of funds.

According to a statement from the chairman, this year's solicitation will be made once and one time only. All the money to be raised for the August event will be solicited this week from the merchants who want to set up booths in the warehouse.

Afterwards, they will not be called upon for any further funds, he said. In 1949 and last year the money was raised through two and three drives.

The contributions will pay for booth space in the warehouse in which the merchants will display their products. Each booth will be 20 feet wide and 16 feet deep, selling for $40. Two booths will cost $80, Fleming said.

A professional decorator has been employed again this year to decorate the warehouse and will also help the merchants decorate their booth space.

It was learned from general chairman Allan Powell Jr. that many merchants will contribute free prizes to the Farmers Day crowd. Some of the prizes will be a television set, radio, refrigerator, a ton of fertilizer and other articles.

The kickoff breakfast will be at eight o'clock.

Bail Provided

NEW YORK—(AP)—Cash bail of $10,000 was taken to the federal courthouse today for Frederick Vanderbilt Field, but federal prosecutors indicated there might be some delay in releasing the "angel" of numerous Red activities.

Field was taken to the federal house of Detention Friday on a 90-day contempt of court sentence. He spent the weekend in prison because friends couldn't raise bail during the Saturday-Sunday bank holiday.

Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan sentenced the wealthy, 46-year-old great-grandson of Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt after he refused for a third time to tell the court who contributed to the $80,000 bail of four fugitive communist leaders.

Seeking Clue To Gas Explosions

Damage Estimated At $5 Million; May Be Even Higher

NEWARK, N. J.—(AP)—Authorities sifted the twisted, scorched rubble of a sprawling propane gas storage plant today for a clue to the cause of a series of rocket-like explosions Saturday.

Six separate federal, state and local agencies sent investigators to the 82-acre tank farm, still too hot to explode through more than 24 hours after the initial blast.

The 11 men injured in the holocaust, only one remained on the danger list today. He suffered first, second and third degree burns fleeing from the Warren plant.

One lone tank blazed stubbornly yesterday despite a constant stream of water played into a gaping hole in its side by one of 11 fire companies kept at the scene.

Around it, like broken toys, lay most of the blasted 70-foot long cylindrical tanks facing this way and that as if kicked off their foundations by any angry giant.

All told 75 of 135 tanks filled with highly-combustible cooking gas blew skyward in a series of awesome explosions that sent tongues of orange flame 2,500 feet in the air and were heard 20 miles away. Each of the tanks held 500,000 cubic feet of propane gas.

Truman Asks End To State Of War With Germany Soon

Infestation By Boll Weevil Has Rapid Increase

Farm Agent Looks For 33 Percent Infestation In Pitt Next Week

Infestation of boll weevils in the county cotton crop is increasing and all signs point to a possible 33 percent infestation by next week.

According to a weekly weevil checks made by county farm agent S. C. Winchester, evidence of weevils in untreated fields is rapidly increasing while infestation in treated fields is going down.

Pitt and adjoining counties have not been as hard hit so far this year as counties in the Piedmont section of the state. However, Winchester was of the opinion that that is no reason for farmers to be idle.

"They had better treat right now rather than waiting for the damage to be done," he said.

Reports from the cotton growing counties throughout the state indicate a smaller infestation of the weevil this year, whereas last year proved to be a weevil's heyday. According to the agent, any farmer who doesn't poison his plants can expect to make between 200 and 250 pounds of lint cotton at the end of the season. Last year the average production in unpoisoned fields was less than 50 pounds.

But the agent pointed out the fact that the farmer who treats his fields right now can expect to make more than a bale per acre. Treatments cost $2.50 per acre. And that, multiplied by six treatments, make it worth the farmers' while to apply poison now, he said.

Last week's weevil check showed 10.5 percent of infestation—an increase over the previous week. Winchester stated it can reasonably be estimated that next week's infestation will rise to 33 percent.

Last week's infestation in poisoned fields was 2.4 percent—a decrease over the previous week. He stated that this percentage will come down as the treatments are continued in the fields.

Swift Red Jets In Aviation Day Show Program

MOSCOW—(UP)—Five late-model Soviet jet fighters roared through the overcast skies of Moscow so fast yesterday that Western air attaches at the Aviation Day exercises could not give adequate descriptions of them.

The five new models were unveiled in the most interesting post-war airshow put on by the Soviets. They flew low over a reviewing stand which held Marshal Josef Stalin, but went so fast observers were unable to describe them except in most general terms.

Stalin, wearing a cream colored summer marshal's uniform, looked sun-tanned.

U. S. Air Force Col. Frank James agreed with other Western air attaches it was the best and most interesting show since the war. The attaches said they saw enough in the 500-plane armada to confirm that Soviet aviation had made great strides since the war.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Where are they, those magnetic and golden-throated men, the giants of Senate oratory like Webster, Calhoun and Clay who made the heart leap with their eloquence?

Those three, and there were others, have been dead a hundred years. No one in the Senate now can match them for oratory.

From all the Senate speechmaking of the past 20 years who can remember a single phrase that sticks in the mind like this one, picked at random from Webster: "Liberty and union, now and forever, one and inseparable?"

True, crowds still jam the Senate galleries for debates on great issues. But the seldom memorable speeches are mostly matter-of-fact statements, and almost never start a fire. Mainly the debates are arguments, bickerings, questions, palavering over points.

And a filibuster, which also draws crowds, is not oratory at all but a physical endurance contest. The filibusterer isn't trying to persuade but to obstruct. He talks to wear out the opposition. And his speech is a hash of un-

Action Would Not Affect Allied Occupation Program; Chief Purpose Is Psychological

WASHINGTON—(AP)—President Truman asked congress today to end the state of war between the U. S. and Germany.

The action would not affect the allied occupation of Germany. Its chief purpose would be psychological. Germans would no longer be considered enemy aliens and would regain such normal rights as the right to sue in American courts.

Mr. Truman's request was made in identical letters to Vice-President Barkley and House Speaker Rayburn.

Mr. Truman said that ending the state of war "will give the German people a new demonstration of our desire to help bring them back to membership among the nations of the free world."

"It will represent another and logical step on the road which leads towards the eventual restoration of German independence," the President added.

Mr. Truman handed the letters to the congressional leaders at their regular Monday morning conference with him at the White House.

Along with the letters he submitted a draft of a joint resolution declaring that the state of war which began December 11, 1941 shall be ended on "such date as the President shall by proclamation designate."

Mr. Truman said the resolution also should provide that this country may continue to seize German property, under the provisions of the Trading With the Enemy Act, in spite of the technical end of the state of war.

German property which was in this country up to the end of 1946 is subject to seizure so that the proceeds can be used to pay claims arising from the war.

Discussions began last year among most of the western allies on the question of ending the state of war. In September, the U. S., British, and French governments announced their intention "to take the necessary steps in their domestic legislation to terminate the state of war with Germany."

In today's letters, Mr. Truman said Russia "has actively prevented the growth of a representative democratic government in a unified Germany, and has thus made impossible for the time being the arrangement of a final peace settlement."

Dewey Sees Frontlines Of Korea Battleground

A FRONTLINE COMMAND POST, Korea—(AP)—Thomas E. Dewey toured the frontlines of Korea today.

Wearing Army khaki, combat boots and a green field cap, the New York governor hopped between command posts and advanced positions on the west, central and east-central fronts.

At some points Dewey was north of the 38th parallel, old political boundary between North and South Korea.

On the western and east-central fronts he flew over Red territory. Allied artillery was firing when he arrived on the western front.

He also heard the thunderous fire of 105 mm artillery when he visited the U. S. First Marine Division late in the day.

Dewey began his second day on this war shattered peninsula at the war room of U. S. Eighth Army headquarters. He sat in on a regular briefing with Lt. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, Eighth Army Commander.

The Governor wound up the day at U. S. Tenth Corps headquarters. A blue-helmeted Army band greeted him with "Sidewalks of New York."

He inspected an honor guard of U. S. and South Korean troops before he had dinner with the Corps commander, Lt. Gen. Edward M. Almond, and his staff. Dewey stood by as the field artillery dropped shells into the area north of Chorwon, western anchor of the old Red iron triangle. The governor visited three U. S. Army Corps headquarters—the First, Ninth and Tenth—and their commanders.

related things, since he can skip without a trip from the Bible to a recipe for pot likker.

I asked a man—perhaps the greatest living authority on Congress, although he doesn't want his name used here—why there are no more Websters who can single the American spine?

In the first place, he said, he thinks oratory is getting to be a lost art, like lengthy letter writing. Of those now in the Senate he'd put first for Orator—Matthew Neely, West Virginia Democrat, because he admires Neely's ready fund of poetic and classical allusions.

And he can think of only three outstanding Senate speakers in the past 30 years or so: Claude Pepper, Florida Democrat, who was beaten in the 1950 elections; Senator Borah; and Senator LaFollett the elder.

Women In The Church

Following a scientific study to determine Cincinnati's area of greatest need, the Greater Cincinnati Council of Church Women have established in the Findlay Street area the Memorial Community Center which opened in June under the directorship of Robert A. Harvey. The new center, which will be operated from the Council's annual budget, merges community services formerly conducted by the women at the House of Friendliness and the Parkway Day Care Center. The social welfare programs of the Cincinnati Council cost about $45,000 per year.

The missionaries in Hissar, in the Punjab, India, recently conducted a "food exhibition" in the city—"a balanced meal" (without the usual Indian foods) being the piece-de-resistance. The chief purpose of the efforts, says Miss Lily Swords, of Newark, N.J., missionary in Hissar, "was to present meals in which no cereals or only small amounts are used. India's staple foods are rice and wheat: rice in the south, and wheat in the north. But India is short of these and other cereals. The wheat ration has been cut to 9 oz. for an adult, and to 4 1/2 oz. for each child per day. The poor people's diet includes very little other foods. So government, with the aid of official personnel and non-official women's groups, is trying to change the attitude of the people towards their food choices and encourage them to use a larger variety of non-cereal foods. This is difficult for the poorer groups because the cereals are still the least expensive for the amount of food received."

Johnny Long (above), a favorite band leader among young Americans, will bring his orchestra to East Carolina College for a dance Monday evening, August 6. The social event will be sponsored by the Student Government Association of the college.

A North Carolinian who was born at Newell near Charlotte and educated at Duke, Long has been starred at every major college in the South and at all of the Big Ten schools. His itinerary often includes as many as five school dates in a single week. The fact that more than 300 schools have hired him during the past six years indicates his popularity with the college-age crowd.

His band is a show in itself. Featured with the orchestra are vocalists Peggy Barrett and Jimmy Sedlar and drummer Floyd Sullivan. The Long Shots and the Long Glee Club will also be on hand for the East Carolina dance.

Driver Arrested In Stokes Wreck

STOKES—Two vehicles were involved in an accident at the railroad crossing here early Saturday afternoon resulting in the arrest of one person.

No one was injured in the accident which caused heavy damage to the car and truck involved.

Highway Patrolman Paul C. Whitley, investigating officer, charged Herman Franklin Benson, of 1211 Market Street, Washington, N. C. with passing at an intersection.

According to Whitley's report, the car operated by Benson was attempting to pass a truck driven by William Hassell Gurganus, of Stokes, at the time Gurganus was making a left turn.

Damage to the Benson car was estimated at $400 with about $50 to the Gurganus car.

The accident was the only one reported in the county over the past week end.

Stone Age Civilization In Twentieth Century

PORT MORESBY, New Guinea. —(UP)—Seven natives of the untamed Mokolkol tribe in New Britain are recounting experiences which rival the imaginative writings of H. G. Wells.

Late last year they were living at a Stone Age level with their tribe in isolated mountain jungle country.

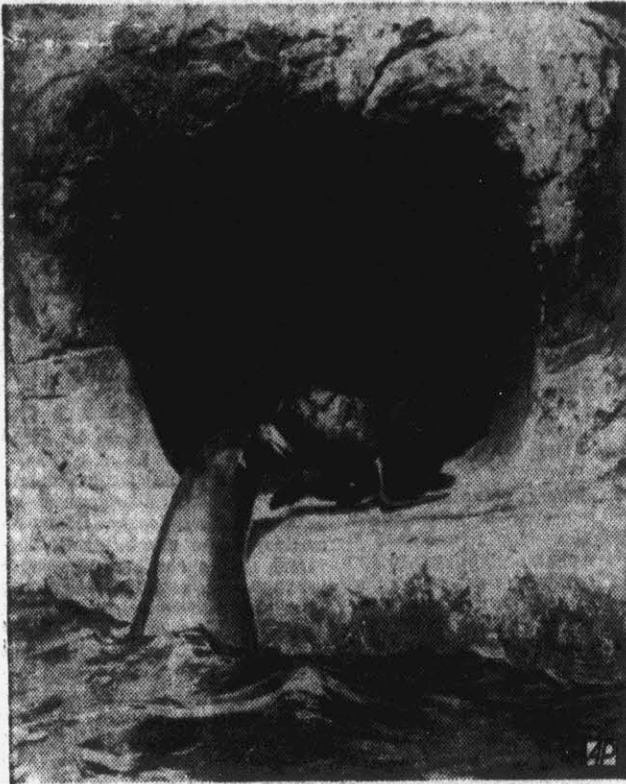

All they knew of civilization or the outside world was represented in the steel axes which they obtained by murdering coast-dwelling natives.

Then an Australian government patrol entered their village, and seized two warriors, a woman and four children before the others of the clan escaped into the jungle.

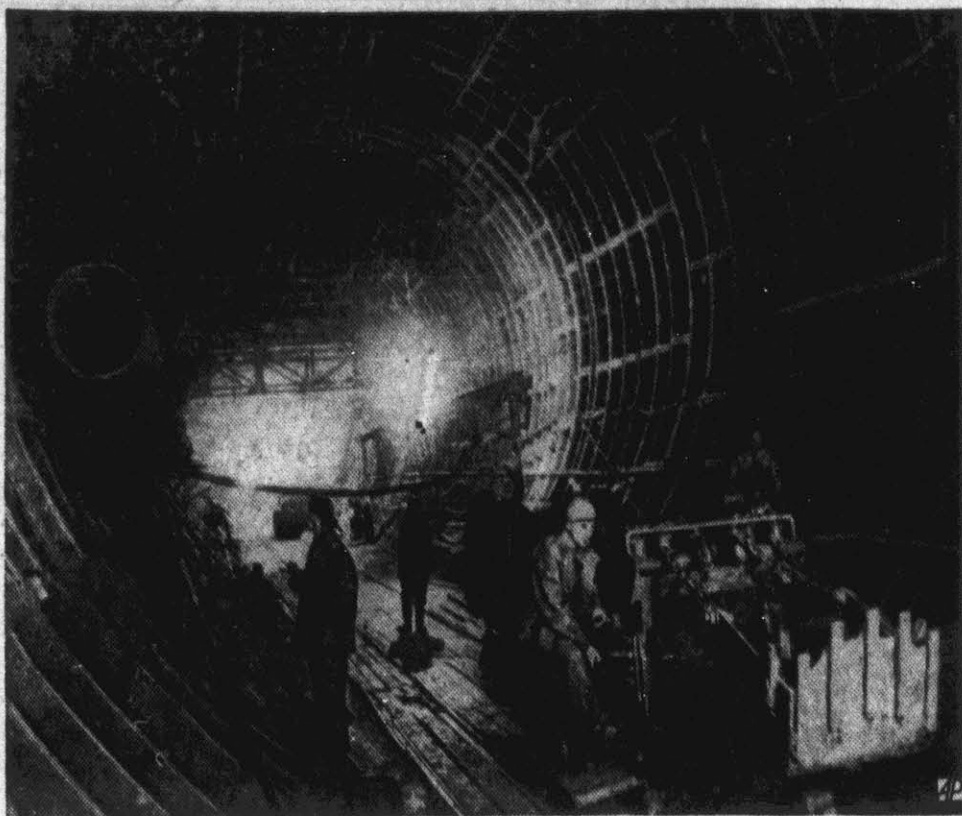

Taken to Rabaul, instead of being killed as they expected—the usual tribal sequel to a raid—the party was taken to the town of Rabaul as wards of the Australian administration.

They travelled to their amazement in a ship without sails or paddles, saw strange noisy things which moved without legs, fire flare from a sliver of wood, and which talked and made music.

In a matter of days they had passed from the Stone Age to the Atomic Age and perhaps most surprising of all, saw people of different tribes living peacefully together. They were told of something called the "administration" which amazingly regarded killing as a crime instead of an achievement.

Clamor for Axes
Unknown natives taught them strange words, but while the men seized on the word "axe" and thereafter only clamored for their possession, the woman learned quickly and taught the knowledge she acquired to the four young children in her care.

After six months of beholding endless wonders and many long talks with the interpreters, the party was escorted home to a wildly delirious welcome by their friends and relatives. They have promised to cease their murderous raids on neighboring tribes and to abandon their nomadic life and build a permanent village.

All three adults now hold a key position in the tribe by reason of the government gifts of priceless axes and knives which they distributed.

Patrol Coming Again
How much of the government's wishes they will get across to their friends is a matter of conjecture, but they know that another patrol will visit the tribe in six months time.

It is just possible that they will influence the group to cease raiding and wandering. Raiding was previously their only means of obtaining axes, and wandering was necessary to avoid possible vengeance raids.

In the months and years to come the Stone Age Mokolkols' impressions of the twentieth century world will become known through their trial legends, for these primitive people have amazing memories and recount the history of their people in ceremonial dances and story-telling.

Clear Wreckage Of El Capitan

UTICA, Ill. —(UP)— Railroad crews cleared wreckage today of the Santa Fe's streamliner El Capitan which jumped its tracks near here Saturday night injuring 19 persons.

Ten cars of the streamliner were derailed and overturned as the train sped from Chicago to Los Angeles.

Three hundred passengers left stranded by the wreck were picked up by a special Santa Fe train yesterday to continue their trip to the West coast.

Cause of the wreck has not been determined.

Disabled Vets Paint House For Blinded 'Buddy'

DETROIT —(UP)— Andrew Wydro, 54 year old veteran of World War I, wanted a new coat of paint on his house, but because he was blind, had a bad heart and lacked the necessary $100 to pay the painter's bill, he thought he wouldn't get it.

Yesterday, 12 younger World War II veterans showed up at the Wydro home with paint, ladders and scaffolding and set to work.

After they had finished and left, Wydro was told who his benefactors were. One had only one arm, another was paralyzed on his left side, and a third had a crippled back. All 12 were members of the Disabled American Veterans organization.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLAS
SO WHY WASTE TIME?

Be not anxious.
Thus said our great Master Himself. But how is it possible to obey such a command?
Who can be otherwise than anxious in a world under which diplomats and munition makers have set a charge of dynamite? Who can avoid anxiety in a world where all the former ways of doing things are being rapidly changed? How can it be expected of men that they will face the possibility of unemployment and industrial blacklisting because of age and not get worried? Who can think of his business, his bank account, his debts, or his securities and not toss about considerably at night?
Yet viewed simply from the commonsense standpoint, it certainly does no good. Physically and mentally we reduce resistance by such tactics, spiritually we damage our faith, socially we spoil happiness for ourselves and others. We might just as well go along with a happy smile and take life as it comes every day. To do otherwise is to wreck our happiness and not improve our case in the least with all our worries.
Someone has said, "Anxiety does not empty tomorrow of its sorrows; it empties today of its strength." And the good John Wesley once said, "I dare no more fret than I dare curse and swear."

Aggression Must Not Be Made To Pay

The United States must keep a watchful eye upon her friends as well as her enemies during the negotiation of the Korean peace settlement.

The Chinese communists may want peace in Korea. It is not unlikely, however, that in the settlement of the Korean conflict they hope to win through diplomacy a prize they have long desired but have not been able to acquire—Formosa.

Chances are that Great Britain, France and some other members of the U. N. would agree to giving to the communists the island off the Chinese coast. Of course they will have to appear reluctant enough to soothe somewhat the hard feelings it would create between them and the United States; but they could play the role well.

But what if the communists should demand Hongkong or a portion of French Indo-China as part of the price for a permanent settlement of the Korean conflict. What a howl would go up from Britain and France. How quickly the necks of Britain and France would bow up while the hair gristed and lusty lungs shouted for more Americans dollars and men to prevent such global robbery.

How quickly the British and French attitude of appeasement toward the Chinese communists would change into one of stern bargaining.

Too many members of the United Nations are willing to pacify the communist lust for more land by giving up small bits here and there. The fallacy of the action, however, is that the appeasement doesn't satisfy the communist lust... it only whets the appetite for further conquests.

For the United Nations to give up Formosa to the Communists in the Korean settlement, or even allow the Chinese communist a seat in the United Nations would be a grave mistake for the free world. It would prove the communists have gained indirectly by military aggression two of their foremost goals.

Comes The Revolution? You're Living In One!

Americans live in probably the most revolutionary government known to Man.

Democratic and republican forms of government have existed before, but they lacked an essence of stability and so withered away.

Absolutism, whether by tribal chiefs, king, emperor or dictator, is the "conventional" society the world has known. When that form of government was overthrown it was such a revolution as rocked the rest of the world... was regarded with suspicion and distrust, and absolute rulers frequently united to "hold the line" against new encroachments of what to them was a dangerous trend.

In its relatively brief existence, the American republic has witnessed many changes in the ideals attributed to its own government. There will be more changes in the years to come; but it is important to note that such changes have come about in the past (and presumably will in the future) by the will of the majority of governed people. In effect, our revolutionary concept of government is in a constant state of fluidity... always seeking an even more desirable society in which to live in.

Originally, the American people fought for independence from tyranny. That was Revolution!

Having won their freedom, practical government was first left to a loose federation. Later that federation was discarded for more unity and a strengthened central government. That was Revolution!

Even then, the spirit of change continued. Slavery was abolished and an even greater power emerged in a new national capital. That was Revolution!

There followed a period of the developing of great individual fortunes and what conceivably could have led to economic slavery of the working classes. Another "revolution," slowly but effectively halted the trend.

We, today, are living in the midst of another "revolution" which has been going on for a number of years; that is the greater distribution of our nation's wealth. On every hand you see evidences of its success. How far it will go is anybody's guess.

Americans live on Revolution. They thrive on it.

And why? Because it comes from within, and its goal constantly moves upward.

The irony of our age is that a dictatorial regime poses as "revolutionary" and promises a major stride toward the better life to which all aspire.

Actually they represent a throwback to a medieval concept discarded long ago by men who would be free.

News Behind The News
By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON—The Truman foreign policy and rearmament program have enrolled so many Wall Street figures, influential industrialists and big business men in the service of the Administration that the Republicans will enter an expensive presidential election year with an unprecedented shortage of cash. Ironically, the same thing happened in 1944 and 1948, and for the same reason.

GOP bigwigs smile, albeit grimly, over the strange situation. Not since the days of Andrew Jackson, perhaps, have the domestic policies of any two American Presidents aroused the antagonism of the conservative business community so violently as those of Franklin D. Roosevelt and Harry S. Truman. Never have the taxes and other burdens on industry and finance been so heavy.

RELUCTANT—Nevertheless, it is probable that there are more representatives of the so-called "interests" and "economic royalists" and "members of well-stocked clubs" serving under Mr. Truman than ever worked for such Chief Executives as McKinley, Taft, Harding, Coolidge and Hoover.

Yet, almost to a man, they approve his general international approach so highly, even though questioning operational details, that they are reluctant to assist his political enemies.

Indeed, many have cited their services at Washington as reason why they should not be called upon to campaign or to contribute against him or his party. It offers a convenient way of saving the money they would normally shell out to GOP money-raisers.

BIG-TIME—The list includes such big-time lawyers and corporation directors as John Foster Dulles, Thomas C. Finletter and Dean Acheson; such industrialists as Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson, Stuart Symington, Averell Harriman, C. B. McManus and William McClellan Martin. There are only a few of the more notable golden figures.

Although several old-time Democrats appear here, such as Messrs. Acheson, Harriman and Symington, they have connections and influence with men of the other side of the political street because of their legal and industrial background.

"PROSPERITY"—The traditional sources of Republican reinforcements are drying up for other reasons. Despite high taxes and production costs, the nation's manufacturers and business men have been making unequaled profits since the F.D.R. transformed the United States into an "arsenal of democracy" in 1940-1941.

Portmanteau and current rearmament contracts assure this same sort of "prosperity" for several years. Their general attitude toward politics is best expressed in the question frequently asked of Republican money-collectors: "Why should I rock the boat?"

In a sense, this kind of bread-and-butter support of Mr. Truman by this group is no compliment to the man in the White House. Together with Southern Democrats on Capitol Hill, they generally approve of the Administration's foreign program, while turning up their noses at his proposed domestic "reforms."

RESENT—But the President's "fair deal" has been stalled in Congress for three years, and there appears to be no chance of its enactment. Under the pressure of foreign demands, he himself seems to have lost interest in it.

Indeed, Mr. Truman's social, economic and humanitarian program began to fade away almost simultaneously with the arrival of the members of his "war emergency cabinet" at the Capital.

Several spokesmen for the ballot-box elements which supported both Franklin D. Roosevelt and President Truman in the last five presidential contests—labor, farmers, racial groups, independents—have commented bitterly on this unproductive legislative stalemate. They resent the influx of "Wall Streeters."

SHUDDERS—This paradoxical situation gives shudders to GOP leaders as they approach 1952. It reminds them too vividly of the 1940, 1944 and 1948 elections. They note that it is this banker-lawyer-industrialist type which backed both Wendell Willkie and Governor Thomas E. Dewey, and which now advances General "Ike" Eisenhower as a possible Republican nominee.

What GOP strategists dread is the possibility that, if this group can obtain an Eisenhower nomination, with Mr. Truman as his opponent, they will give even less help to the Grand Old Party than they are giving now.

"SOLDIERS"—The number of "typewriter soldiers" at the Pentagon increases every day. At the present rate, almost a full regiment of uniformed men will be enrolled soon in the public safety brigade.

As of May, there were 3,022 civilians and military personnel engaged in advertising, press agency and general public relations in the armed services. Of these, 2,235 were in uniform. The annual cost is $10, 109,109.

The budget program for the 1951 fiscal year would boost the total to $325, of whom 2,941 would be soldiers. The pay roll would jump to $13,406,015.

Who Can Claim Victory?

Around Capitol Square

Editorial, N. C.

Daily Reflector Bureau

COASTING—Two former members of the general assembly from widely distant counties and your reporter, each coming from a different direction, converged at the south entrance to the capitol and after exchanging greetings started discussion of the political situation in North Carolina, especially with reference to the next governor.

The reporter said the political machine was coasting right now, not making much speed and presenting few new developments from day to day. One of the others said in his opinion it wasn't even coasting; apparently it had been put under the shed until cooler weather. Another said in his mountain country there was a good deal of interested talk, very little overt activity. He had an idea the mechanics were tinkering with the engine. After talking with these two men in Raleigh and with numerous others on recent trips ranging from Fontana to Nag's Head, your reporter stands by his appraisal that the thing is coasting.

LEADERS—There is almost unanimous opinion that William B. Umstead of Durham is and will continue in the role of leading candidate. Many people think he will win the nomination, many others think he will not, but in practical political parlance all agree Umstead is the man that must be beaten before anybody else can claim the office. Most likely opposition will be headed by Capus Wayne of High Point, ambassador to Nicaragua, who is expected home within a few days for a month's survey of the situation. It is rather generally conceded that if Wayne does not enter the race himself, he will have a lot to say about who will be Umstead's chief opponent.

There is nothing new in this situation. It has prevailed for several months, and seems to justify conclusion that the whole business is just coasting along. Every automobile driver knows that these coasting periods afford best opportunity for viewing the scenery. And the active politicians are doing that.

UNCERTAINTY—So it is that while consensus among those with whom your reporter has talked recognizes Umstead and Wayne as captains of their respective teams, the manipulators are not depending entirely upon them. The major branches of the Democratic party in North Carolina are called conservative and liberal, for lack of better designation. Admittedly the terms are far from accurate, but for purpose of this discussion will be accepted. Such acceptance imposes necessity of casting Umstead in the conservative role, Wayne in the liberal. Anybody who knows the two men and their political philosophy knows that in many respects Umstead is more liberal than Wayne and Wayne is more conservative than Umstead. That's one reason the situation is so hard to analyze. Another difficulty is the east-west rotation policy and peculiar location of the dividing line. Both Umstead and Wayne live in the industrial piedmont. The eastern third of the state count both as westerners, while the western third count them both as easterners. There is definite probability that when the population center is established on basis of the 1950 census both Durham and High Point will be each of north-south line drawn through that point. If the line is drawn diagonally from northeast to southwest, following roughly the coastal and mountain range directions, High Point will be close to the line—probably a shade west of it.

BALLOONS—With all these factors in mind the would-be makers of governors have been sending up trial balloons for numerous other possible candidates. These balloons have borne the names of men from all sections of the state and represented all phases of relative liberal-conservative political philosophy. Such as Thad Eure of Hertford county, secretary of state; Stog Ballentine of Wake, commissioner of agriculture; Brandon Hodges of Buncombe, state treasurer; Sam Ervin of Burke, associate justice of the supreme court; Hiden Ramsey of Buncombe, newspaper publisher and member of the state board of education; Harry Caldwell of Guilford, Master of the State Grange; Kerr Craig Ramsey of Rowan, former speaker of the house or representatives; Hubert Olive of Davidson, former superior court judge and chairman of the state board of elections; Dan Moore of Jackson, superior court judge; Kay Kyser of Orange, nationally famed entertainer; Henry Jordan of Randolph, chairman of the highway commission, and other lesser known citizens.

INEFFECTUAL—These trial balloons didn't prove anything much except that even the folks who are accustomed to pulling strings behind the scenes aren't sure now which string to pull. A glance at the home addresses of the balloonists shows that most of them live in the same central part of the state where Umstead and Wayne have residence. Analysis of their records shows the difficulty in bracketing any of them as either liberal or conservative, because each of them has outstanding elements of both philosophies. Evidence available for consideration at this time seems to justify prediction that the next governor will be nominated and elected without regard to place of residence or previous classification as a liberal or a conservative, but on the basis of what kind of man the voters think next May or June will best serve the public good for the next four years. So we get back where we started, to the premise that political thinking in midsummer of 1951, is "just coasting along."

What Other Papers Are Thinking

YOUR "TAKE HOME" PAY
(Kannapolis Independent)

The important thing to any salaried man or wage earner is his "take home" pay—the amount of money he actually receives, after all deductions, when each payday comes around.

The government, through taxes, is cutting down our "take home" pay more and more.

A magazine published by a Southern power company touches on this when it said, on this when it said, "Socialist planners try to sell their plans for government-inp business on the idea of 'something for nothing'."

"Socialized medicine, Federal owned power, government built steel plants and U. S. financed transmission lines all come from the same hopper."

"The man who pays is the wage earner, through direct and indirect taxes, and through withholding deductions which cut down his 'take home' pay. The taxpayer is learning that the 'something for nothing' means that he must pay 'something for nothing,' and he'll keep right on paying more and more until he rises to put a stop to Socialism in any guise whatsoever."

The way to work for "take home" pay is to protect your "take home" pay by the strictest kind of governmental economy—Federal, state and local—and to oppose government in business, whether that business be banking, the production of electric power or anything else that could and should be done by taxpayer private enterprise. Otherwise the socialists and the "spend, spend, spend" boys will clip our "take home" pay right down to a bare subsistence figure.

INDEFENSIBLE EXPENSE
(Kinston Daily Free Press)

The Free Press has had numerous comments regarding the proposed distribution by REA of current to be generated at the Ugg Island Plant, Government constructed on the Roanoke River just across the state line in Virginia.

This paper has opposed any expenditure of tax money for extension or distribution lines in Eastern Carolina on the ground that such expenditure is unnecessary and would be unjustified.

The Carolina Power and Light Company, which already has facilities for generating power in Eastern Carolina about ten times as great as the Ugg Island project will be, has proposed to the REA that it would purchase the entire output of the Ugg Island Plant, Government over its transmission lines, which are already constructed, to Kingston or any other points in Eastern Carolina. The price for the purchase of the current at the plant and for the delivery of such current to the municipalities in Eastern Carolina to be fixed by the Government—and in mutual agreement with the Carolina Power and Light Company officials.

According to a special dispatch from the Erwin News Service in Washington, which serves this paper, a Senate Appropriation Sub-Committee has approved funds for a survey of transmission line needs between the Roanoke River and localities in Eastern North Carolina.

The Free Press submits that there is positively no justification for any expenditures of tax money either for surveys or construction of transmission lines, which will parallel lines already provided by private companies like the CP&L.

In this connection it should be kept in mind that the Carolina Power and Light Company is largely a North Carolina company. It has about 30,000 stockholders who are individual citizens of North and South Carolina and some other states. To spend money to render a service which is already being rendered by private concern much more efficiently than any Government controlled or sponsored organization can possibly be expected to do, will not only be depriving these stockholders and citizens of their justified dividends, but would be taking out of their pockets in additional taxes money to pay for an alleged Government service which is not necessary.

In its final analysis the Ugg Island production of power is a mere bagatelle in comparison with the needs of power in Eastern Carolina for the industrial renaissance which is in sight. As beforepointed out in these columns the first unit of the steam plant put into service by the CP & L Company near Goldsboro two weeks ago will generate about five times as much current as the Ugg Island project and within 12 months the CP&L plans to have a second unit which will double the capacity there.

Let's practice true democracy in this case and quit our socialist tendencies.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESNER
The Federal Reserve Board's 1951 Survey of Consumer Finances might have been subtitled, "The Consumer is a Tough, Price-Conscious Customer."

The survey, based on 1,400 interviews in 66 sampling areas in January and February, showed that while more consumers had greater earnings than at any time since the war, and that four out of every ten consumers expected still higher incomes consumers were planning to be more cautious in their spending.

Highlights from the survey: Thirty-two per cent felt they were better off than a year earlier; 29 per cent felt they were the same, and 37 per cent felt they were worse off. (Two per cent were uncertain or not ascertained.)

Of those making more money than a year ago, 53 per cent figure they are better off; 26 per cent, about the same and 21 per cent, worse off.

For the first time since the war, the percentage of consumers with liquid savings had risen, from 66 to 72 per cent.

While 4 out of 10 expected higher incomes this year, only 1 of 10 expected lower incomes.

The number planning to buy houses this year was unchanged from a year ago, but consumers were much less definite about their plans, and a large number planned to buy existing houses rather than build new ones.

The number planning to buy autos this year is substantially fewer than a year ago.

The number planning to buy other durables was about the same, except for a slight increase in the number wanting radios, and a decline in those planning to buy television sets. However, buying plans were again less certain.

A total of 67 per cent expected a general rise in prices; 9 per cent thought they would be the same or higher; 16 per cent expected no change; 1 per cent expected a decrease; no change; and only 3 per cent expected decreases. The rest were uncertain.

The surveyors reported: "In the absence of incidents setting off new waves of scare buying or of price or income developments not anticipated by consumers, the survey indicates that the demand for a major summer goods will be substantially small in 1951 than the annual rate of purchases in the second half of 1950."

FACTORIES REPORT
CIVILIAN DEMAND OFF
Sixty per cent of companies responding to a survey by "Mill

Factory" reported that demand for their civilian products had dropped off in the last month or so. Of these, 97 per cent plan to cut production; 43 per cent plan to keep producing at maximum rates. Most (82 per cent) thought the situation was a short time condition.

As to prices at the end of the year, 44 per cent expect them to be higher; 2 per cent, lower, and 54 per cent, about the same. EXPENSE RATE-RISE
BURDEN IN MILLIONS

Increases in rates being sought by Railway Express Agency would cost one store alone more than $100,000 a year, the National Retail Dry Goods Association says. It is opposing the increases. The total cost would be "millions of dollars," it adds. As an example, it says that the rates from New York to Atlanta would be from 8 to 100 per cent higher, depending on the weight of the shipment.

The NDRGA told the Interstate Commerce Commission that if an increase is necessary, it would prefer a flat surcharge per shipment, for a year only, and that department and specialty stores be given reductions for large and consolidated shipments.

PERCH QUESTION
PUZZLES BUREAU

A perch is something a bird sits on. But what is an ocean perch?

The Food and Drug Administration seized a shipment of Pacific Coast frozen filets labeled "ocean perch." New England fishers charged they were misbranded, claiming "that variety is the only ocean perch, that the New England variety isn't an ocean perch either; that the only true ocean perch occurs in European waters. The Pacific fishers answered westerners agreed to label their filets "Pacific Ocean perch," and there the matter rests until the Administration decides what a perch is.

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK (AP)—It has been years since many an American husband has seen his evening meal.

This is because of a growing desire by wives to dine by candlelight.

After a struggle of nearly 14 years against this odd feminine preference, I'd advise any young married man:

"If your bride insists on eating by candlelight, do as she says. Argue never kill her why."

That was the mistake I made. I asked too long and too often and finally I got the bitter truth. But I will say I put up a stubborn fight.

The first night I came home and sat down to a candlelit table, I asked in honest innocence:

"What's the matter? Is the drug store out of light bulbs?"

"No," said Frances. "I just think it's nicer this way."

"But a man likes to see what he's eating," I objected. "What have you got against electric lights? Are you sure your mother wasn't frightened by an early picture of Thomas A. Edison?"

"Listen, you junior Mark Twain," said Frances, "you might as well get used to candlelight now, because you are going to be eating by it a long time. So kindly shut up about it."

I thought this was just a phase brides went through, a kind of romantic hangover from the honeymoon. And I had the idea I could easily kid her out of it. (Believe me, if he were a man a brick for every wrong idea I've had about marriage, he could build a tower taller than the Washington Monument.)

So the next night I showed up at dinner time with a lighted lantern. Frances simply blew it out, and the rest of the meal was rather chilly.

The following night—how silly can one husband be?—I opened a first aid kit, laid out some gauze and iodine by a candlestick and said:

"Then I forked up some grub, bit down—and immediately began to splutter wildly.

"What'd you put on my plate?" "I think you'll find it is gravel covered with chicken gravy," said Frances. "You like tricks? I like tricks, too."

That ended the tricks. Then it became my chore to light the candles. Every evening, just as I got comfortably settled behind the newspaper, Frances would come over, hand me a packet of matches and say, "All right, Rover, it's time to do your work."

Well, you know how small raindrops in time will wear down big mountains. I got so I detested those two candlesticks. But every time I demanded to know why we had to eat by tallow power, Frances always said:

"Oh, it's just nicer."

The other night I asked her "Why?" for the 4,677th time.

"You finally asked into the bathroom, turn on the electric light, and look at yourself in the mirror."

When I came back, she said: "Did you take a good look?"

"Yes, dear, but—" "Well, Rover Boy," she said, "every morning since 1937 I've had to wake up and look at your face in the bright sunshine. Do your mind too much if I'd rather see it at dinner by candlelight?"

Silently I struck a match and lit the two tall candles, and we sat down to the table.

"Now," said Frances cheerfully, "isn't this really nicer?"

As I say, don't press a wife too hard on why she likes things a certain way. Sometimes it's better never to know.

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON—An army travels on its stomach, but what goes into the stomach of the men who often travel by air? So the Army Quartermaster Corps, recently assigned the responsibility for loading and landing air-borne supplies of all kinds in Korea—from combat rations to trucks and 135 millimeter howitzers—has set up a school at Fort Lee, Va., to train men in all phases of air supply.

Some 30 men are enrolled in the first three-months' course and 100 are scheduled to receive training in the second. These men are especially trained to pack materials and load them in Air Force planes, to lash them properly to planes and expertly handle the tricky process of ejecting these supplies by parachute.

Airport supplies must be paratroopers as well, for after supplies are ejected expensive aircraft equipment must be recovered to be used again. They must also be on hand on the ground to help troops assemble aircraft supplies.

Normally the Quartermaster units only drop supplies to Army units, but they are ready to help any outfit in a pinch. When the Marines were surrounded by Chinese troops at the Chosin reservoir, QMC airdrop mission dropped some needed supplies—including a bridge.

Now on active duty in Korea is the latest thing in military units—the 8081st Quartermaster Air Supply Company under Capt. Cecil W. Hespelhorn. It boasts the dropping of some 8,000 tons of supplies in one month.

Officers in Korea say tactical commanders now are willing to push assaults which without the airdrop they would have hesitated to do. The GI has learned he does not have to fear outrunning his supply.

"During the Chinese offensive and Eighth Army withdrawal in Korea, time after time when the men lost their supplies and were completely cut-off they faced either annihilation or surrender," one officer reports. "But every time when the situation was darkest ammunition, medical supplies and food arrived by air."

The airdrop will be increasingly important in any war theater, the Quartermaster Corps believes.

Greenies Beat Ormondsville By 5-2; Take 22-9 Trimming In Sunday Game

Locals Outscored League-Leaders Handily Saturday Behind 7-Hit Hurling Of A. J. Rose; On Sunday, It Was A Different Story

By MELVIN LANG

Greenies and Ormondsville divided a pair of games over the weekend, with Greenies taking the game Saturday night, 5-2, and the league leaders exploding for 22 runs and a 22-9 victory yesterday.

The strong right arm of little A. J. Rose was the difference in the first game. Rose allowed Ormondsville but seven well-spaced blows and did not give up an earned run.

Three runs in the bottom of the fourth sewed the contest up for the Greenies. With one out, Jim Corbin and B. E. Ricks singled in succession. Tom Boyd hit a slow grounder to pitcher Doug Bruton and when Bruton attempted to get Corbin going into third, all hands were safe as the Greenies catcher slid in under third baseman Ed Couche's outstretched hands.

Brownie Tripp's hard grounder was error'd by the shortstop with the bases loaded. Corbin and Ricks both scored. Boyd took second base. Tripp followed with a single and scored Boyd when the Ormondsville catcher dropped the ball when Boyd piled into him at the plate.

Two errors by the Ormondsville line produced another run in the fifth. A walk to Ricks, sandwiched by singles by Lou Collie and Boyd, plated another runner.

Ormondsville took an early lead in the third when they pushed two runs across. Doug Bruton, who led off the inning by singling was forced at second by Jimmy Boyd. After Manager Gariand Little had popped out to the shortstop, Stuart Tripp gained life on an error. Big Sam Stiel then lifted a long triple into deep centerfield to score two runners. Stiel died on third as Ed Couche then slid out to Jones in left-field.

Rose's win was the first for the Greenies in the Bright Belt League, as they lost their first five games after taking over the Sandy Cross franchise two weeks ago.

Ormondsville unleashed its batting power Sunday to slug out a one-sided 22-9 win over the Greenies. Three home runs featured the 19 hit attack thrown up by the Green County lads.

Four runs in the initial stanza provided an idea of what was to come. Barry Jones and Red McDaniels walked to begin the onslaught. Stuart Tripp then collected the first of two twin-baggers of the day to score both runners. Tripp scored a moment later as Ed Couche lifted a high drive 340 feet over the leftfield fence.

James McLawhorn came through with the second circuit drive in the second inning. McLawhorn's homer, a grand-slam affair, cleared the 345 feet mark by a wide margin. Tripp poled the third and final homer for the winners in the fifth inning. Two men were on base when the husky outfielder slammed the ball over the 350 sign. Tripp, who is athletic coach at Ayden High, collected two doubles and a circuit drive during the afternoon to bat in five runs.

Leon Jones collected his first home run of the year for the Greenies in the sixth. Jones' blow came with the sacks full of Greenies. Bill Phillips and Lou Collie each collected three singles for the losing Greenville nine.

The next game for Greenville will be Wednesday night when they play host to Macfield in a league contest.

Ormondsville will take on the strong Camp Lejeune Marines in an exhibition contest Tuesday night in Farmville.

All-Star Teams Set For Classic Event

By LLOYD NORTHAUD
United Press Sports Writer

DETROIT (UP)—Don Neascombe for the National League and either Ed Lopat or Ned Garver for the American are expected to be handed the starting pitcher assignments today for tomorrow's All-Star baseball classic.

Manager Casey Stengel of the American and Eddie Sawyer of the National make their choices from the eight hurlers available to each. Righthander Neascombe of Brooklyn has won 12 games and lost four this season to all but "Inch" the National job before the 52,000 expected at Briggs Stadium.

Stengel's choice of a starter appeared more difficult but he figured

Dodgers Figure Pennant In Bag

By MILTON RICHMAN
NEW YORK (UP)—"We're in!" That was the ecstatic pennant cry of Brooklyn's defiant Dodgers today as they savored their substantial eight-and-a-half game lead over the rest of the pack and envisioned World Series checks that can't possibly be cashed until October.

"Who is going to catch us?" asked pitcher Ralph Branca, somewhat more quiet and reflective than the rest. "This is my third season with Brooklyn and overall, it's the greatest club I've ever seen."

"No one will catch us," he answered his own question, "not unless we suddenly come up with a whole flock of injuries."

The Dodgers have ample reason to rejoice. They recently made a clean sweep of their three-game series with the Giants and now boast a 4-0 lead in the National League.

"I can't remember ever having such a big lead," said star pitcher Gil Hodges. "This is the best position we've been in since I joined Brooklyn several years ago. I don't see how we can miss now."

Brooklyn centerfielder Duke Snider was equally optimistic. "I hope they don't catch us, I tell everybody," he said, "but deep down in my heart I don't see how anyone can."

Snider saw room for improvement, however.

"I'd feel better if we had a 10-game lead," he smiled. "I remember when I was with Montreal in 1948 we had an 18-game lead. Man, what a feeling that was. Brooklyn called it up on Aug. 4 of that year and a few days later, Montreal clinched the pennant."

Here and there among the Dodgers, some conservative souls would strike a cautious note. Like outfielder Andy Pafko, for example.

"Sure, everything looks good," he admitted, "but there's a long way to go. I tell you this much, though: I'd rather be leading the league by eight and a half games like we are than be trailing by the same number. It gets awfully discouraging trying to overcome a bulge like that."

ed on either Lopat, who has won 11 and lost four, or Garver, the lanky right hander of the St. Louis Browns and the hard luck pitcher of the circuit with 11 wins and four defeats on the last place team.

Should Stengel nominate Lopat to start, there was little doubt that Garver would be the top relief choice for the fourth, fifth and sixth innings. After that it could be Freddie Hutchinson, Detroit; Mel Parnell, Boston; Bob Lemon, Cleveland; Bob Schantz, Philadelphia; Conrado Marrero, Washington or Randy Gumpert, Chicago.

Sawyer perhaps has greater all-around mound strength, inasmuch as he's picked eight pitchers without regard to teams while Stengel picked one from each team. In addition to Neascombe and Roberts, he has such stars as Sal Maglie and Larry Jansen of the New York Giants, Brooklyn's Preacher Roe, Ewell Blackwell of Cincinnati, Warren "Jahn" of Boston and Dutch Leonard of Chicago.

The rest of the starting lineup for both teams was pat, picked by the fans in a month-long vote. Stengel will have on the field first baseman Ferris Fain, Philadelphia, second baseman Nelson Fox and shortstop Chico Carrasquel, Chicago; third baseman George Kell, Detroit; catcher Yogi Berra, New York; and outfielders Dom DiMaggio and Ted Williams, Boston; and Vic Wertz, Detroit.

Sawyer's enforced starters will be catcher Roy Campanella, first baseman Gil Hodges and second baseman Jackie Robinson, Brooklyn; shortstop Alvin Dark, New York; third baseman Bob Elliott, Boston; and outfielders Stan Musial, St. Louis and Richie Ashburn and Del Emnis, Philadelphia.

The American League has won 12 and the National League five in the past 17 All-Star games, but only once has the National League triumphed in an American League park. That was last year in Chicago when the Nationals won a 4 to 3 decision in 14 innings, the only overtime game of the series.

Commissioner Of Baseball Search Reaches Stymie

DETROIT (UP)—Baseball's publicized search for a new commissioner ran into a perfect stymie today as major league club owners sought first to determine what they want in the successor to A. B. Chandler.

There were no recommendations from the four-man screening committee picked to nominate the new commissioner at the National and American League meetings preceding Tuesday's annual All-Star game.

Instead, there was discussion outside the hall of officials' meetings about what type of commissioner baseball might want.

"I don't see how we can pick a commissioner until we have clarified what his duties are, and decided what we want in a commissioner," one owner said.

Little League Star

Charles Stator has established himself as one of the better players in the Little League. He has struck out an astounding total of 53 batters, a feat which requires the skill of an extraordinary hurler.

Charles is 10 years of age and has two more seasons of eligibility left in the Little League. He has two brothers playing ball in the city recreational system right now.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Stator. They reside on the Falkland highway, just outside the city limits.

Exchange Club Topples Elk Nine By 4-3 Score

Angus Duff rapped off his fourth hit of the day and singled across the winning run in the last inning Saturday to give the Exchange Club a Little League victory over the Elks, 4-3.

Going into the sixth and final inning the score was tied at three all. Francis Nunn began the inning by flying out to the outfield; George Nickols was then struck by a pitched ball and Charles Smith went down swinging on a third strike. Dick Evans came through with a single to put Nickols on third with the winning run. Duff then delivered his game-winning blow into left-field.

The Elks had tied the game up with a singleton in the top of the same inning. Mike Riddick led off with his second double of the afternoon. He was advanced to third on Oscar Storcham's infield out and then scored on brother Ike Riddick's single.

George Nickols was the winning pitcher, going the route of the game. He allowed only six hits to the hard hitting Elks crew, and struck out one. He did not issue a walk.

Charles Rumley started on the mound for the losers but was relieved by Ike Riddick in the last of the third. Riddick was charged with the defeat.

It was the first appearance in several days on the playing field for Riddick. He injured his foot last week on a piece of glass.

Red Sox Only One Game Out Of First

Trade Winds Carry Boston To Heels Of Pace-Setting White Sox; Yanks Low-ered To Third Place Position

By STAN OPOTOWSKY
United Press Sports Writer

A trade wind blew the Red Sox into second place in the American League today, one game out of first.

It was no great deal when the Sox got Gloyd Vollmer from the Senators' last year. He was rated a so-so outfielder, and the Sox took him in a trade simply because his right-handed long-ball hitting might be tailor-made for the short Fenway Park left field fence.

The fruits of that bunch bloomed today, however. Friday, Vollmer batted in two runs with a triple as the Sox beat the Yankees 6 to 2; Saturday he smashed a grand-slam home run as the Sox beat the Yankees 10 to 4; and yesterday he completed the series sweep as his two-run homer put the Sox ahead for an eventual 5 to 3 win.

The upped the Sox to second place, nudged the Yankees down to third and only the failure of a ninth inning Browns' rally against the White Sox kept the Browns from going into first. The White Sox needed three pitchers in the ninth to save their 5 to 4 win.

Boston now has won six straight and 11 of the last 15.

Cleveland, meanwhile, kept only four games out of first with 3 to 3 and 10 to 2 wins over Detroit on Larry Doby's extra-bases barrage, while seven-hitters by Connie Marrero and Sid Hudson gave Washington 3 to 1 and 8 to 2 sweep over the A's.

Brooklyn stepped out eight and a half games in front of the National League race when Jackie Robinson's 10th inning homer beat the Phils 6 to 4, while Sid Gordon's 10th inning homer beat the Giants for the Braves 6 to 2. The Pirates beat the Cards 6 to 2, then lost to them 9 to 8, while the Cubs and Reds were rained out.

The Yankee collapse was the big news, however. Vic Raschi was nursing a 3 to 0 lead with two out in the fifth when Lou Boudreau homered after Ted Williams' single, and in the sixth the Sox went ahead for their ninth win over the Yanks in 13 games when Vollmer homered after Billy Goodman's single.

Chico Carrasquel and Eddie Stewart singled, and Bob Dillinger hit a long fly for the White Sox' winning run in the eighth, but it took a tense ninth inning to subdue the Browns. Jim Delsing opened it with a double off reliever Joe Dobson. Marv Roberts came in to pitch them, and walked pinch-hitter Ned Garver. Enter Luis Aloma for the Sox. Fred Marsh bunted out on the third strike and Sherman Lollar hit into a double play.

Doby hit his 12th and 13th home runs, a triple and a double to drive in six runs, as the tribe beat the Tigers for the 12th and 13th times.

The Elks had tied the game up with a singleton in the top of the same inning. Mike Riddick led off with his second double of the afternoon. He was advanced to third on Oscar Storcham's infield out and then scored on brother Ike Riddick's single.

George Nickols was the winning pitcher, going the route of the game. He allowed only six hits to the hard hitting Elks crew, and struck out one. He did not issue a walk.

Charles Rumley started on the mound for the losers but was relieved by Ike Riddick in the last of the third. Riddick was charged with the defeat.

It was the first appearance in several days on the playing field for Riddick. He injured his foot last week on a piece of glass.

aldrin

at lowest cost per acre

Here's exactly why:

Greatest coverage... just one pound of aldrin as a dust or spray controls the pests on 4 acres of maturing cotton. That's power!

Lowest cost... compare aldrin costs per acre of control with any other insecticide and you'll find that aldrin-izing is real economy.

Lessons risk from rain... aldrin gets in its lethal punch so quickly that most of its kill is completed within a few hours. Even if it rains the day after aldrin-izing, you don't have to re-do your work.

Three-way kill... no matter how aldrin gets to the weevil—contact, eating, fumigant action—it dies. That goes for thrips, tarnished plant bugs, rapid plant bugs, cotton fleahoppers and grasshoppers, too.

Local Pastor Leaving For Session In Europe

The Rev. Leon Russell, pastor of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church, will leave tomorrow for New York, from where he will sail on July 13 for a two months' stay in Europe.

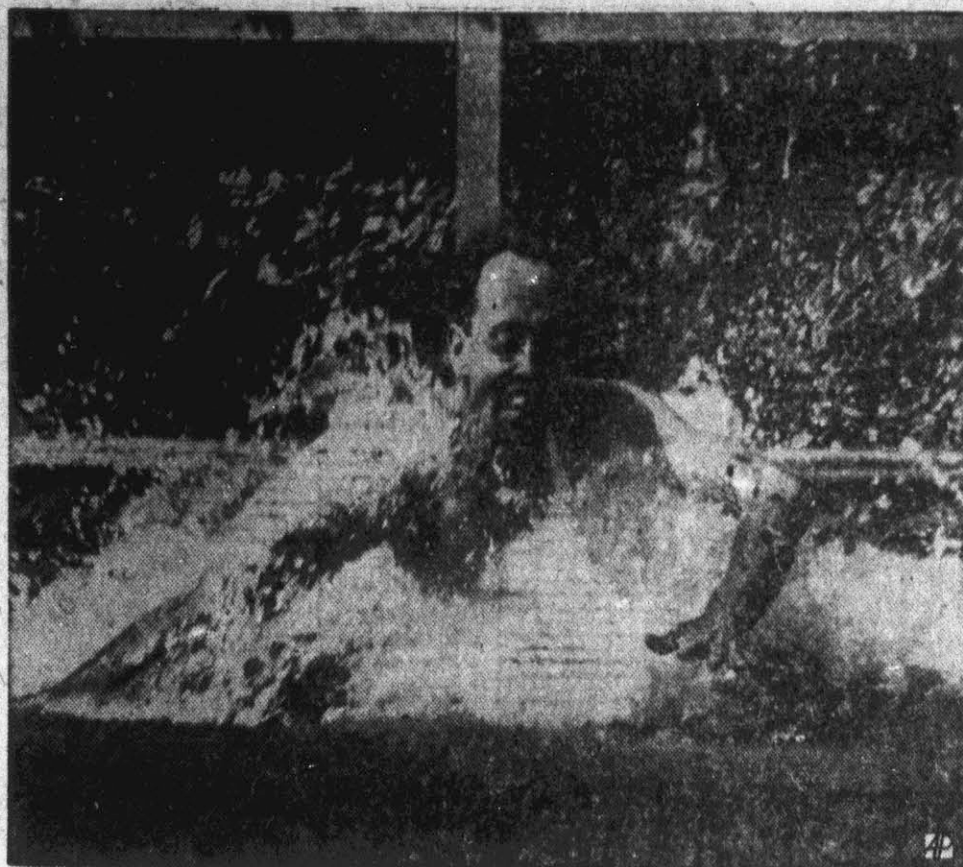

Mr. Russell was appointed in the early spring as one of two alternate delegates from the North Carolina Conference to attend the Ecumenical Methodist Conference. This Ecumenical Conference, which is held once every ten years, is a meeting in which Methodists from all over the world are represented, and its purpose is to bring about a closer unity among Methodists everywhere.

While in Europe for the Conference, Mr. Russell and other delegates attending will take guided tours in England, France, Switzerland, Germany, and Belgium to visit Methodist churches and historical shrines. In these places they will observe the work that is being carried on by the various groups and serve as representatives of American Methodism.

The tour is under the auspices of the International Methodist Historical Society. The members will spend two days in Paris, visit Geneva, Interlaken, Lucerne, Zurich, Munich, Berlin, Frankfurt, Brussels, London, Oxford, where the Conference is to be held, and Bristol.

The members of the tour will sail for home on September 8. Mr. Russell will be accompanied to New York by his wife and Rev. and Mrs. W. L. Clegg of Burlington. Rev. Clegg is also a delegate to the Conference. The two delegates will embark for Europe on Friday aboard the Mauretania, and their wives will return home the latter part of the week.

News that the 433rd, which is mainly from northern Ohio, is going to Europe was received with elation. Most of the men agreed with Col. Harry W. It is quite an honor for a Reserve outfit and we will do our utmost to fulfill our mission."

DDT-Proof Insects Have Deadlier Fate

NEW YORK —(UP)—Science had bad news for flies and other insects today.

It was particularly bad news for the type of housefly that has built up resistance to DDT, the most potent of all insect killers.

DDT now has a partner, another chemical substance that works together with DDT. The resulting "marriage" of the chemicals gets rid of DDT-resistant flies. The combination also might be effective in killing tough rats.

The combination was reported by scientists of the United States Public Health Service at Savannah, Ga., in the official publication of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The scientists tried out numerous DDT-chemicals with DDT, and discovered that one known as dimite, with a technical abbreviation of DMC, appeared to be the best.

They mixed DMC with DDT in varying amounts. They reported "very high kills" from a combination of 100 parts of DDT and only 10 parts of DMC. The mortality rates, however, were not increased by putting more DMC in the mixture.

Thus, only a small part of DMC was found necessary to give DDT the extra potency against the house fly. DMC alone was not fatal to female houseflies.

The scientists said the combination when applied on the surface in field tests gave poor results, but when used in a water mixture and sprayed as a mist, it killed highly-resistant houseflies.

Corpse on the Town

By JOHN ROEBURT

There was a draught of air, then the door closed behind Red. His expression was solicitous as he came toward the bed slowly.

Jigger smiled fondly, grateful for the concern. "No tears, Red. I'm ninety-nine percent okay."

Red unconsciously lowered his voice. "Who gave you your jumps?—There was nothing about it in the papers."

"Rumely. He was walking me to my murder after Leighton fed me mickies. I pulled him down into a cellar just in time. How'd you find me here?"

"I pulled a switch," Red grinned. "I began to follow Prescott around." His face knotted. "Who are the police charging with the murder?"

"Leighton." "He confessed?" "To assassination with the deceased, to mutilation of the corpse, to felonious assault on the derelict, but not to the murder. Prescott's on his way now to take care of that little detail."

"Will he?" "Prescott might. He's ruthless—He can probably get Leighton to confess to the assassination of Lincoln."

"You don't think Leighton did it?" "Jigger shook his head. "Why not?"

Jigger remained silent, busily carting furnishings from the crowded to the unfilled areas of his mind. "Stuff in my special, close experience in the case. For instance, I want to know who phoned in the original tip, and why? The police gloss over it, ascribe it to Arens, even though he denies it while admitting virtually everything else."

A moment later, Jigger resumed. "The motive behind the phone tip is clear enough, someone wanted the corpse to be discovered by the police."

Red looked unimpressed and Jigger said, "Follow the thought, Red! I'm not suddenly just remarking on something that was obvious from the start. The circumstances of the police's first discovery of the body suggests an obvious why, sure. But there was a deeper reason for the phone tip—A guy inherent in the motivation for murder itself."

Red said seriously, "You trying to argue that the murderer himself wanted the body discovered?"

Jigger hesitated, loath to commit himself to the conclusion too absolutely. The concept was too overwhelming! Finally he said, in a manner of thinking aloud, "Arens advertising the fact of a corpse to the police doesn't sit well with me. In talking Leighton's scheme for disposal of the body, Arens would increase his own jeopardy—Police solution of the murder would expose him as a black-mailer."

Jigger shook his head. "Arens was too much of a sharpster to play it that way. He had enough on Leighton already, enough advantages, for successful blackmail, even with no corpus delicti, no murder case." He paused, considering a detail suddenly standing alone in a free space in his mind. "Our truest measure of Arens was his willingness to play along with Leighton's attempt to ring in a substitute Susan Hunter. In fact, Arens undoubtedly motivated the hoax, when he reported my surprise visit to his studio to Leighton."

Red said, "Okay. 'Im satisfied it was Arens.'"

Jigger continued. "And the others implicated—Who else would want the corpse exposed to the police? Certainly not Matthew Hunter or his flunkies Rumely. Identification of the corpse meant their ruin. And not Willie, plotting somehow in his disordered mind to give his hated father-in-law his just deserts—I thought of that possibility in a wild moment while holed up here—" Jigger made a gesture, dismissing it. "Too devious a game for a man of Willie's infirmity. And too devious too, for an Aunt Penny, even if I could dream up some hidden motivation. None of these people, Red, and certainly not Leighton. Discovery and identification of the corpse meant his whole life."

Red looked somber. "You're running out of actors." "There was a quiver in his tone. Jigger looked at him curiously. There was a sudden compunction in the skinny fellow, an anxiety etched deeply on his face. He stared at Red understandingly—He knew the same emotion himself. An emotion, like a sense of dread, that had haunted the outlines of his own thinking all during Prescott's recital, and since.

Red said, "We're down to the last member of your cast—Better go slow."

Jigger nodded involuntarily, but understanding fully what Red meant. Go slow was a reprieve from a climax painful in its anticipation. Go slow and be sure, was what Red meant.

"Go back," Jigger began quietly. "Read the signposts that brought us along the road to Leighton. First, that phone tip establishing the murder. With the murder established, a half-dead derelict—up to then just a mystery victim in a public hospital—becomes an integral part of the case. The murder and the attempted murder become two parts of the same pattern. Then a note materializes, revealing the initials of an alias used by the murdered girl, and also revealing the first initial of a man who later becomes a prime suspect. Jigger's eyes shadowed.

"We'll have to skip over the question of how that note in the letter-box was overlooked by the police, how it came into my possession first. We just don't know. Jigger went on. "Then came matching initials in a community newspaper's Public Notice column. Initials that led us to an important phase of the murdered girl's past. And there, at the Downtown School the victim took on actual identity for us, became an actual personality. There we found the lead that sent you to the Laura Spellman House, where you uncovered the biggest lead of all—The girl's origin and people."

Red objected. "It wasn't so clear a line as all that."

"Sure it was confused. But we were then ploughing inside the case. The note and the Public Notice item gave us our first real wedge—in fact, without that Public Notice, we couldn't take one step forward. Our one big uncertainty at that stage was whether Sally Woods was actually the case. Red mulled it over. "That talk with Willie Hunter and Rumely outside the morgue set up a foundation we did a lot of building on."

"True, and I don't deny it. But in the rush of later developments, it became a secondary thing—As secondary, say, Matthew Hunter's role in the actual murder of his daughter." Jigger shook his head. "The truth is: Even if we hadn't met Willie Hunter that day, we yet would have found ourselves in (To be continued)

TEL AVIV —(AP)— Forty seven delegates representing 15,000 pupils from 25 schools in Israel met in conference in the coastal plain town of Hederah to demand more modern instruction from their teachers.

They did not oppose the central role the Bible is playing in Hebrew schools but they said—except in so-called "religious schools"—the Holy Book of the Books should be read and explained primarily from historic, scientific and literary aspects.

They also charged their school curriculum with neglecting biology, psychology, sociology and history of art.

Russian-Built Jet Shot Down In New Air Fight

8th ARMY H.Q. Korea—(UP)—U. S. Sabrejets shot down one Russian-built jet today in the third straight day of aerial combat over North Korea.

Allied warplanes resumed their attacks on the Red supply route north of "neutral" Kaesong in the lull between Sunday's preliminary cease-fire talks there and the start of the formal armistice conference tomorrow (today EST).

On the ground, United Nations fighting men launched hard-hitting but small attacks described as "limited offensives." The Communists struck back with battalion-sized assaults at U.N. troops who won control of high ground.

Allied planes were in the air around the clock. Soviet-built MIG-15's, who lost three planes to U. S. fighters Sunday, came back for more today. They tried to hit B-29 Superforts bombing the communist airfield at Sinanju but were too late to stop the bombers or escape intercepting F-86 Sabrejets.

The MIGs lost one plane before withdrawing. There was no report of loss or damage to the U. S. fighters.

Other Superforts hit an enemy barracks near Hungnam on the east coast while a flight of F-51 Mustangs pounded enemy supply concentrations at Mulgaeri, 32 miles northwest of Kaesong on the main enemy supply route to Pyongyang, the Red capital. South of Pyongyang and north of Sariwon, dive-bombing Mustangs cut railroad lines.

The Pyongyang airfield north of Pyongyang was hit by two flights of American and South African planes.

U.N. night fliers reported that nearly 3,000 enemy vehicles were "moving in all directions" on North Korean roads Sunday night. Bad weather hampered attacks on the vehicles which have been moving south from Manchuria as a communist force of 350,000 men was reported "holding up strength just behind the front line."

Ground fighting went on all across the Korean front except in the west where activity halted because of the cease-fire talks.

U.N. troops plunged through heavy mortar and artillery fire to take important high ground in a "limited offensive" south of Kumsong on the eastern front. After 3 1/2 hours of close fighting, allied troops drove the Reds out of the bunkers.

J. D. Manning Dies Suddenly

J. D. Manning, 63-year-old farmer of near Falkland, who had been ill a long time, died at his home Sunday evening at 7:45.

Coroner Griffin H. Rouse said Manning, who had been treated by a physician some time, had a dizzy spell while sitting in a chair in his yard and fell to the ground. He died before a physician arrived. No inquest will be held.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Daisy Manning; four sons, L. W. Manning of Rocky Mount, J. D. Manning of Rocky Mount, and W. W. Manning of Old Fort, N. C. Also surviving are two daughters, Lucille and Rachel Manning of the home; one sister, Mrs. Mary Reddick of Williamston; two brothers, John and W. L. Manning, both of Williamston.

Showdown Near On 'Get Acheson' Drive Of GOP

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Chairman Cannon (D-Mo) of the house appropriations committee today predicted a "close fight" on a republican move to cut off the pay of Secretary of State Acheson.

The showdown on the "get-Acheson" drive in the house comes next week when the annual money bill for the state department is considered. Tied in with the bill are funds for the commerce and justice department and the federal judiciary.

"It will be a close fight; I don't know if we can beat them," Cannon said in an interview.

He was referring to an amendment drafted by Rep. Phillips (R-Calif) to cut off Acheson's salary to try to force the secretary to quit.

Order End Of Hospital Strike

MINNEAPOLIS—(AP)—Striking hospital service workers were under orders today to return to their jobs at ten Minneapolis hospitals but four hospitals said they would not rehire some of the strikers.

District Judge D. E. LaBelle signed a temporary order Saturday calling on Local 113 of the AFL Building Service Employees Union to halt picketing at the hospitals. Although the court did not instruct them to do so, union officials told the 800 strikers to report for work.

Labor Leaders To Chat Fight

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Leaders of the most organized labor scheduled a meeting today to chart the strategy of a last-stand fight for tough price control legislation.

The United Labor Policy committee, made up of leaders of AFL, CIO and independent unions, was expected to issue a statement denouncing the ban on price roll-backs in the present 31-day extension.

Offers Adviser In Iran Dispute

WASHINGTON—(AP)—President Truman offered today to send Averell Harriman to Iran to help try for a settlement of that country's oil dispute with the British government.

Mr. Truman said the conflict threatens "a collapse of oil operations" which would be "a disaster." He declared that "the time available is running out."

delegation also lent hope that the negotiators would be able to stick to military problems and avoid political issues.

The five-man liaison teams charged with arranging the Tuesday conference, held their Sunday meeting in a once-palatial private mansion on the northside of Kaesong while armed Red guards patrolled the grounds.

The preliminary talks lasted six hours and Ridgway's headquarters said they were "harmonious."

The preliminary talks arranged for the time, place, transportation and communications for the formal armistice conference.

There was no handshaking and no saluting at the meeting or parting of the U.N. and communist teams.

Offers of vodka, beer, candy and water to the negotiators were turned down, reported Col. Andrew J. Kinney, Air Force officer from Atlanta, Ga., who headed the allied team.

Kinney called the preliminary meeting a "100 per cent success" and said the first non-belligerent meeting of Allies and Communists since the Korean war started was held with an air of "military courtesy—which is another way of not being exactly hostile."

Kinney said there were some disagreements at the preliminary talks but issues were "clarified and mutually understood."
