Easy Terms Set For Jap Treaty

'Peace Of Reconciliation' Unveiled By U. S. And Britain; Pact Permits Rearing And Restores Defeated Empire To Status Of Equality In World

WASHINGTON (AP) - The United States and Britain as co-sponsors formally unveiled today a "peace of reconciliation" with Japan they expect to be signed by some 50 nations.

Ambassador John Foster Dulles, in charge of negotiations for the U. S., said it was still hoped Soviet Russia would join in the settlement. But he gave notice the other nations otherwise will make peace without Moscow.

The treaty, which Dulles termed "unique" in history, is due to be signed at San Francisco the week of Sept. 3. It strips Japan of its pre-World War 2 overseas holdings, but permits the Japanese to remain in and other major respects restores the former defeated empire to the status of a sovereign equal in the free world.

The signing is to be followed by a U.S.-Japanese pact permitting the U. S. to retain troops and military bases in and near Japan, pending the future creation of a system of collective security for the Pacific. A three-way security pact among the U. S., Australia, and New Zealand and a separate commercial treaty between this country and Japan are parts of the general settlement.

The revised draft is the product of more than a year's negotiation with the other principal Pacific Allies in which Dulles took the lead as the U. S. representative. He predicted it will be "generally acceptable to the 50-odd nations at war with Japan."

"No one will be 100 percent satisfied but almost everyone should be about 95 percent satisfied," he said in a statement.

Dulles listed as unique the direct negotiations by which the terms were worked out without a general peace conference, the restoration of a free Japan without any attempt to impose permanent restrictions, and the principle of collective security under the United Nations. By this arrangement, he said, "there will be a combination of U. S. and future Japanese forces, and perhaps others, so that it would be materially impossible for Japan to wage a war of revenge."

Dulles, Republican adviser to Secretary of State Acheson, termed the widespread agreement on terms "striking evidence of unity" among the U. S., Britain and France.

ROME (UP) - The Italian government is bitterly disappointed that Italy has been subjected to a far harsher peace treaty than the one proposed for Japan, informed sources said today.

Italy, Italy reminded, was a co-belligerent with the Allies in the latter stages of World War II while Japan was an enemy nation throughout the war.

Cotton Export Allocation Upped

WASHINGTON (UP) - Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan yesterday announced an increase of 1,000,000 bales in the 1951-52 preliminary cotton export allocation.

An initial allocation of 2,500,000 was announced June 12. The July cotton estimate, showing a 58 per cent increase in cotton acreage, apparently prompted the increase.

The Stumbling Block

Use Of 38th Parallel As Line Of Demarcation In Korea Means Retreat For U. N. Troops; Communist Proposals Good Propaganda Material

By HARRY FERGUSON

You can't see it or touch it, but the 38th parallel is something the negotiators are going to stumble over several times before they agree to a cease-fire in Korea.

The invisible line that runs just north of Kaesong already has been tossed into the negotiations by the Communists. They have proposed that both armies withdraw about six miles from the parallel and leave a 12-mile neutral strip across central Korea.

On the face of it that looks like a fair proposition. But not when you take into consideration the present battle line. The customary procedure in cease-fire negotiations is to freeze the rival armies in their tracks. Both sides agree not to advance and, in some cases, not to attempt to reinforce their positions for the duration of the armistice.

If the communist neutral strip proposal were accepted, the United Nations Army would have to retreat along almost the entire battle line. The last push made by the U. N. Army carried it north of the 38th parallel from Kaesong on the east coast all the way across

Fire Department Must Wait For Required Money

Will Not Receive Personnel This Year To Meet Underwriters' Terms

Greenville's fire department apparently will not receive this year the additional personnel needed to meet the fifth class specifications submitted to the city early this month by the North Carolina Fire Insurance Rating Bureau.

Mayor Lester D. Page said this morning, however, that he had talked with Chief Engineer R. Kenneth Scott of the rating bureau, and he believes Scott "will go along with us on that to keep the fifth class rating through this year."

The fire committee of the board of aldermen yesterday voted to recommend to the board that additional expenditures on the fire department be limited to the addition of one paid fireman to the present force of seven men, and the addition of 500 feet of hose.

The fire underwriters advised the city that eight full time firemen should be added to the personnel of the department and 5,000 feet of hose should be purchased if the city is to remain in the fifth class rating bracket.

If the city drops to the sixth class rating it will mean the fire insurance rate of mercantile buildings, stock and equipment will go up five cents per hundred.

The addition of the one man to the fire department and the purchase of the 500 feet of hose are covered in the original $37,500 budget tentatively set for the fire department for the 1951-52 fiscal year. To add the eight men to the department, and to purchase the amount of hose recommended by the rating bureau would have cost the city an extra $23,000 for this fiscal year.

"We are going to try to stay within the $37,500 budget, the committee set up to start with," the mayor said. "If we made any more improvements we would have to raise taxes and the committee doesn't think that is the thing to do at this time." He added that he is of the opinion more improvements can be made in the fire department next year.

The city's finance committee met with the mayor this morning at 11 o'clock and gave its approval to the recommendations of the fire committee.

Final action on the matter is expected to be taken tomorrow night at a special meeting of the board which Page said he is going to call.

Tobacco Acreage To Be Announced

Announcement of tobacco acreage under cultivation in the county will be forthcoming next week, PMA officials said yesterday, due to the fact that about 40 per cent of the farmers have overplanted their allotments.

At the present crop reporters of the PMA office are busy supervising the destroying of the overplanted acres throughout the county. Frank Parker, PMA official in charge of crop measuring, said most of the excess will be plowed under by the end of next week.

The 40 per cent excess is not high, Parker said. Highest excess amounted to about seven acres, he said, with most of the smaller allotments overplanted only a few tenths of an acre.

Farmers who are in excess are advised to put up a deposit within five days after receiving notification from the PMA committee. The deposit pays for a reporter to witness the plowing under.

Unless he makes the deposit, the farmer must sell his tobacco on a red card this fall.

A-Bomb Proof Warship Ready For Duty At Sea

LONDON (UP) - Britain has commissioned her first warship built to withstand atomic blasts and protect her crew from radiation, naval sources said today.

The ship, the Relentless, is a destroyer with its superstructure converted to put almost the entire crew under cover a' action stations. It has an operations room equipped with a periscope which permits the captain to see the entire area around the ship.

This would permit the vessel to enter an area where an atomic explosion had taken place without exposing the crew.

Pleas Guilty To 28 Of 30 Charges

NEW YORK (AP) - Salvatore T. Solazzo, ex-convict and alleged master fixer in the college basketball scandal, today pleaded guilty to 28 counts of a 30-count indictment charging bribery and conspiracy.

General Sessions Judge Saul S. Street set Oct. 4 for sentencing. Solazzo is liable to a maximum term of five to 10 years in prison on each of the 27 counts of bribery, and one year on the conspiracy count.

Cease-Fire Negotiations Broken Off By United Nations Command

Red Korean Halts Newsmen At Line Drawn By Bayonet

Editor's Note: This is a dispatch about the convey which ran into trouble today a mile inside Communist lines and brought Korean armistice negotiations to a halt. Frank H. Bartholomew, United Press president in charge of the Pacific area and a veteran war correspondent, went to the Far East to cover the cease-fire talks.

RED COMMAND POST, Korea (UP) - A junior North Korean officer drew a line with a bayonet across a muddy Korean road today and warned 20 Allied correspondents not to cross it.

Nine miles to the north lay Kaesong, city of the cease-fire talks. South of the bayonet line were 17 United Nations vehicles carrying correspondents, communications and service personnel.

And directly beside the bespectacled North Korean officer were 15 Chinese troops with sidearms. As the scene became tense by the minute, a truck from Kaesong rumbled in with Chinese troop reinforcements—this time carrying rifles.

The Korean officer refused to let the convey through until the 20 correspondents—first to head for the truce talks with U.N. permission—were removed.

Convey commander Capt. Henry McAllister of Hamburg, N. Y., refused to bow to Communist orders. He gave the Reds half an hour to get new orders. When they were not forthcoming, he ordered the convey back to its advance U.N. base 11 miles to the south.

Once, when he became excited, the one-eyed Chinese made pushing motions with both hands as McAllister. But he did not touch him in two other (stere) incidents, Chinese troops came at straggling groups of correspondents on the run, but each time, as the Red soldiers drew closer, they slowed down to a walk.

The correspondents were given thorough insight into the point, previously debated among them, whether Kaesong was in neutral territory or in Communist hands with U.N. forces entering behind white flags and only by Communist permission, in effect using force.

Twice, the North Korean junior officer drew his bayonet across the road. Each time, he grew more nervous.

It was apparent he was not acting independently. A pocket-marked, one-eyed Chinese officer ran the show, first indirectly from the background, and later by standing alongside the Korean officer and relaying orders.

The North Korean drew his bayonet line first when some newsmen moved behind him. He ordered all U.N. personnel to stand back behind the line. Then he told all but the U.N. liaison officers to return to their vehicles.

The correspondents stepped behind the line but declined to return to their truck. One photographer heard a baby crying in one of four hatched huts on the left side of the road through the window.

The one-eyed officer rushed over at the head of the 15 Chinese infantrymen. There was an ugly moment.

Just then, the truck bringing additional Chinese troops with rifles roared in and the troops hopped out. The correspondents wasted no time in returning to their truck.

No trouble had been anticipated when the convey left its advanced base. The trip was uneventful until the convey moved one mile inside Communist lines.

Each of the 17 trucks and jeeps flew a white mullin flag attached to its right bumper.

The convey ground to a halt when the North Korean officer, standing in the middle of the road, waved it down.

McAllister hopped out of the lead jeep, followed by his interpreter. There was a sharp exchange.

"He says he has instructions not to let the correspondents pass," McAllister's interpreter said slowly. "The rest of the convey may

Issue Of Press Representation At Kaesong Causes Rupture; Next Move Left To Communists; No Indication When Talks Will Be Resumed, But Impression Felt That Break Is Temporary

MUNSAN, Korea (AP) - The United Nations broke off cease-fire negotiations today over the question of press representation at Kaesong after Red guards challenged part of a U.N. convey.

The allied command put the next move up to the Communists. Up to 10 p.m. tonight (7 a.m. EST), a U.S. Eighth Army communiqué said, the Reds had not replied to an Allied ultimatum that U. N. peace convoys pass unchallenged.

There was no indication when talks would be resumed. Sessions scheduled for today were cancelled after Communist guards refused to let a truck load of 20 newspapermen pass a check point with a U.N. convey.

Vice Adm. C. Turner Joy, chief U.N. delegate, said there would be no more cease-fire talks until the Reds agreed that "my convey, bearing the personnel of my choosing, including such press representation as I consider necessary, will be cleared to the conference site."

Joy ordered the entire 17-vehicle convey to turn back from the Red check point where the newsmen were halted.

The U.N. commander, Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, said it was "all or nothing."

The five Allied armistice negotiators did not leave Munsan Thursday for their scheduled sessions in Red-occupied Kaesong, 12 miles away.

They won't return, Joy announced, until the Reds permit the U.N. party, as selected by U.N. representatives, to proceed intact.

Joy informed North Korean Gen. Nam Il, head of the Communist cease-fire delegation, in a strongly worded dispatch sent to Kaesong by helicopter.

General Ridgway informed the Communists Wednesday that the "presence of a selected number of newsmen at a conference of such major importance is considered an inherent right by members of the United Nations."

At that time he said flatly they would be "an integral part of the United Nations command delegation to any and all future sessions beginning 17 July."

Thursday morning the Communists replied that they would like to have press representatives—but not yet. The convey, including newsmen, already was on its way.

When armed guards insisted, politely but firmly, on cutting the newsmen out of the convey, all vehicles were ordered back and talks were broken off.

The general impression here was that the break was temporary.

The opinion among many military men and some correspondents was that the whole situation was the result of a Communist misunderstanding, although delegates have been arguing over press representation since talks started Tuesday.

There was a feeling that talks might be resumed later in the week.

Admiral Joy's message to General Nam made it clear the U. N. is ready to go on with the cease-fire talks, but insists on deciding for itself who shall be in the allied party.

General Ridgway, Admiral Joy and Lt. Gen. Sir Horace Robertson, Commander of British Commonwealth troops in Korea, spent three hours in conference after the convey was halted. Their meeting ended 20 minutes after the helicopter returned from delivering Joy's message to General Nam.

Earlier, as the convey was starting out, Ridgway had said the cease-fire meetings developed "no serious friction." It was too early, he said, to tell whether they might be successful.

Allies Drive Deep Into Red Sector

Patrols Active; Red Build-Up Cause For Pessimism

8TH ARMY HQ, Korea (UP) - Nearly half a million Communist troops massed behind a steel ridge on Korea's west-central front today but hand-hitting U. N. patrols punched as much as seven miles into enemy territory to the east.

8th ARMY HQ, Korea, Friday (UP) - United Nations infantrymen were reported "heavily engaged" in a close fight today against Communist troops on the central front where the Reds are building up a force of nearly 500,000 men.

Front reports said U. N. high command levels were "pessimistic about the military situation" in the face of the Red build-up.

Supreme commander Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, keeping close to the bogged-down armistice talks in Kaesong, was alert to the danger of a doublecross on the fighting front. He was in close contact with front-line posts.

The powerful Red forces strung out in the west-central sector numbered 400,000 and front reports said "more are coming in" steadily.

Heavy weapons, supplies and big self-propelled guns trundled up to the front area.

To the rear, but not far, the Reds were rushing a fresh string of air-strips to completion to accommodate jet fighters.

The continued appearance of Russian-built MIG 15's over North Korea, despite their steady losses in combat with U. S. Sabrejets, fostered belief the Communists were trying to get all the air combat experience possible.

Front action was limited but U. N. patrols were still punching into Red defenses everywhere, primarily to test enemy buildup.

On the central front patrols got within 2 1/2 miles of Pyongyang, the apex of the former iron triangle now in Allied hands, without meeting opposition. Near Kumhwa, an enemy group was beaten back in a strike at a U. N. outpost and in another short fight a U. N. patrol pulled back.

The broadcast heard in Tokyo by the Japanese Kyodo news agency, quoted a Chinese Red New China news agency correspondent under a Pyongyang dateline. The correspondent was said to have talked to the Red negotiators.

The broadcast said the talks were suspended "without taking into due consideration our formal reply."

This apparent meant the Communist reply to Vice Adm. C. Turner Joy's request that Allied press representatives be permitted to visit Kaesong.

"The American delegates arbitrarily brought in their news correspondents," said the Peiping broadcast. "It therefore seems that there is doubt whether the Americans have sincerity in the peace talks."

WASHINGTON (AP) - There's mixed feeling in this country about a prospective Korean armistice; people will be glad if the shooting ends, because it would save lives, but some are deeply bothered.

If an armistice is reached near the 38th Parallel, they ask, is that what we spent all the American lives and dollars for—we've whipped the Chinese and they still hold all North Korea?

Can we ever be sure of peace while the Communists have North Korea? Or some time again will they try another invasion, South of the 38th, with all this for us to do over again?

The questions are good and real. Because they are, they show that any armistice will be an uneasy one. Some obvious answers to them can be attempted but only time can show whether they're right.

Was It A Victory?

Popular Feelings Mixed Over Prospective Armistice. Real Peace Is Uncertain; Allies Not Ready For Final Showdown In Europe Now

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) - There's mixed feeling in this country about a prospective Korean armistice; people will be glad if the shooting ends, because it would save lives, but some are deeply bothered.

If an armistice is reached near the 38th Parallel, they ask, is that what we spent all the American lives and dollars for—we've whipped the Chinese and they still hold all North Korea?

Can we ever be sure of peace while the Communists have North Korea? Or some time again will they try another invasion, South of the 38th, with all this for us to do over again?

The questions are good and real. Because they are, they show that any armistice will be an uneasy one. Some obvious answers to them can be attempted but only time can show whether they're right.

We didn't go into Korea to take over the whole country, says Secretary of State Acheson, expressing the views of the Truman Administration.

We went into Korea, he said, solely to stop the aggression of the Communists who invaded South Korea by crossing the 38th. Now they've been pushed back beyond the 38th. Therefore, armistice at the 38th is a victory.

(To which the Communists probably say: "Sour grapes. When MacArthur marched through all North Korea he would have occupied the whole country if the Chinese hadn't come in and pushed you back below the 38th.")

You may feel that Acheson's idea of victory is pretty poor, that we should thoroughly beat the Chinese who attacked us and drive them out of Korea altogether. And that there can be no Korean peace until Communism is crushed in all Korea.

But there appear to be only three answers to what to do in Korea, so you would choose:

1. Settle for the armistice at the 38th?

2. Continue fighting at the cost of more American lives, perhaps indefinitely, if we didn't widen the war against the Chinese? The Truman Administration wanted to be long argument on the government's motion for revocation of bail.

Unless Judge Ryan's ruling is upset on appeal, it will remain in jail until they can obtain bail from other sources.

Defense counsel said it was impossible to get commercial bonds to go bail on the defendants because of their "political unorthodoxy."

The U. S. Senate's Internal Security Committee subpoenaed Field to appear at a closed session here (1:30 P.M., EST). Among other things, the committee planned to question Field about the bail of the civil rights congress poster for four missing top Communist leaders.

NEW YORK (AP) - Fifteen indicted Communist leaders were back in jail today after a federal judge cancelled their $175,000 bail.

Judge Sylvester J. Ryan disqualified a Civil Rights Congress, which had posted $175,000 of the bail, from further activity as bondsmen in any case in his court.

Demand Rising Fast For Tobacco Hands In Pitt

Prices Range As High As $10; Employment Office Claims Drop; DuPont Work Is Thinning Labor Ranks

The call from green tobacco has gone out to seasonal workers in the county and the daily exodus from towns to the fields will be in effect for the next six weeks.

Prices for the laborers range as high as $10 for primers in some parts of the county while others report a maximum of $8. Shed hands, or "handers" and "tyers" are receiving about $2 less than the primers' wages.

The work began in Pitt's tobacco crop about two weeks ago, grew steadily in demand through last week, and it is expected that by the middle of next week every available man and woman seeking employment will be working toward getting the crop in.

A report from William B. Dillingham, manager of the Employment Security office here, states the number of claimants will be less than 100 next week, 12 months at any time in the past 12 months. Already he has an order for 140 green tobacco hands for Monday which he'll be able to supply.

However, requests from other counties for workers cannot be supplied, he said.

"All I'm interested in is the Pitt crop," he said.

Other counties are requesting construction workers from the ranks of the unemployed, on record in the employment office, he said. "I'd like to fill those orders but until the tobacco is taken care of,

I'm not interested in anything else."

Word from Grifton, where the DuPont construction cutting heavily into the tobacco workers' ranks, has it that field hands are at a premium. W. I. Bissette, fertilizer dealer there, reported the price range in some areas is $5 and $7 for shed hands and primers and in others is $5 and $8.

"We're just trying to stop it at that price," he said. "It's going to be an expensive crop of tobacco to get out and the farmers are going to have a hard time of it."

He reported that workers are being imported from Pamlico County to help get the crop out of the fields. And Grifton's DuPont housing project is taking some of the workers away from the fields in which they ordinarily have worked in years past, he said.

Meanwhile, Dillingham said the employment ranks were out of last year, he said, the ratio of employees to jobs available was pretty well balanced.

Warehouse Again Will Go On Sale

Original High Bid Of $151,000 Raised By B. B. Sugg

Original high bid on the public sale of Gold Leaf Warehouse went by the board yesterday when B. B. Sugg pushed the figure to $158,000.

The warehouse will go on the block at public auction again July 26.

Tuesday's high bid of $151,000 was offered by M. G. Raynor, co-owner of the 76,000 square-foot warehouse located just inside the city limits on Charles Street. Sugg, who with Guy V. Smith owned part of the house, upset Raynor's offer by $7,000.

According to statute, an upset bid after public auction requires ten percent of the remainder of the original offer. Sugg presented a check for $7,000 yesterday afternoon, the clerk said.

According to D. T. House, Clerk of the Court, Tuesday's auction constituted the largest public sale held in Pitt County in the last several years. There were three bidders with the sale beginning at $23,000.

Report Farmers Day Fund Now Is Over $1,200

Contributions for Greenville's Farmers Day had reached $1,224.50 this morning according to a report from the finance committee.

Finance Committee Chairman John G. Fleming said the people who have been contacted for contributions to the annual event are responding generously, but he added that the individual soliciting teams are moving slowly. "We would like very much for the teams to see the people they are supposed to contact and to make their reports to the Chamber of Commerce office as soon as possible," Fleming stated.

The goal set for the finance committee of Farmers Day this year is $4,500.

Allan T. Powell, Jr. general chairman of the event, commented today, "I think everything is coming along very well."

Society Meets

On Monday night the Woman's Society of Christian Service met in the church with Mrs. J. T. Oglesby presiding. She opened the meeting with prayer and read the purpose of the W. S. C. S.

Mrs. Sam McLawhorn, Sr. conducted the devotional, reading from the fifteenth chapter of Matthew. She used as the meditation, "Be It Unto These Even As Thou Wilt." The hymn used was "Take My Life and Let It Be."

During the business session reports were given by various committees, and plans made for a supper to be had in the near future.

Mrs. Glendel Tucker, Miss Hazel Patrick and Mrs. Julius Chauncey were asked to plan for the M. Y. F. reorganization.

Mrs. H. L. Wettingham was in charge of the program of the evening and used the hymn "Spirit of Life," reading between each stanza appropriate verses of Scripture. Her meditation theme was "Come Unto Me." After prayer the benediction was said. During the social hour, Mrs. J. L. Quinley and Miss Hazel Patrick served angel cake, ice cream and salted nuts.

Dinner Party Given
 On Tuesday night Mrs. Robert Mewborn entertained at a delightful informal dinner party at her home here. Guests were members of her afternoon card club and her sister, Mrs. Brunelle Minges of Silerburg. Lovely bowls of garden flowers were used throughout the home. In the dining room the table was laid for eight. A silver bowl of roses flanked by tall candles in silver holders made a pretty centerpiece.

After supper bridge was played at two tables with Mrs. L. L. Mewborn and Mrs. H. F. Quinley compiling highest scores. They were remembered with gifts, as was Mrs. Minges. Other players were Mrs. W. I. Blasette, Mrs. Glendel Tucker, Mrs. Alton Chapman, Mrs. Tom Gower, and Miss Marie Chapman. Personal.

Mrs. Nannie E. Quinley is a patient at Memorial General Hospital in Kinston, having been admitted on Saturday. Mrs. Quinley is reported to be doing as well as could be expected. She suffered a bone fracture in a fall.

Mr. and Mrs. Billy Phillips, who resided until recently in Raleigh, are now making their home here for the present with Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Blasette.

Misses Ruth and Dolores Stinquist of Newport News, Va., are visiting Mrs. W. T. Smith for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Jarvey of Clayton, Dr. and Mrs. A. M. Hammond Jr., and daughters of New Bern were guests during the weekend of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Gower.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Pike and son, Donald, Mrs. Maggie Jackson, and Miss Jean Barrotti of Oklahoma City are visiting relatives in this vicinity for some time. At present they are guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. McCotter.

Mr. Oakley Reynolds of Vinton, D. C. is a guest in the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Patrick.

One of the largest national military parks is at Chickamauga, Ga., near Chattahoochee, Tenn., marking the site of the battle of Chickamauga in the Civil War. It covers 8,127 acres.

Miss Joyce Corbett, August Bride-Elect, Feted at Shady Banks

WASHINGTON—A pretty summer party took place yesterday at noon at the Campbell home at Shady Banks, when Mrs. John Campbell and Mrs. Howard Parquerson entertained informally for Miss Joyce Corbett of Greenville. Miss Corbett's marriage to John Mayo Jr. of this city will take place August 4.

Guests were received in the spacious home beautifully arranged with a profusion of summer flowers and invited on the broad veranda overlooking the Pamlico River.

During the refreshment period delicious party dainties, with iced bottled drinks, were served buffet style in the dining room. The central table was lovely with a cloth of sheer blue organza and an arrangement of white gladioli with pastel flowers. Large silver trays of attractive and tasty party foods were placed about the table.

Miss Corbett was presented a corsage of white carnations by the hostesses, and Mrs. Campbell's wedding gift to the honoree was silver candle holders.

Invited guests included Miss Corbett, the bride-elect; her mother, Mrs. R. E. Corbett of Greenville; Mrs. Milo Smith, Mrs. Lindsay Savage, Miss Mary Eakes and Miss Jean Hilton, all of Greenville.

avoid widening it to try to avert immediate World War III.

3. Or make all-out attack on the Chinese, as MacArthur suggested, even if it meant Russia might come in on their side, risking World War I.

This is the administration's position: the real struggle against Communism is against Russia in Europe; there we have our most important allies; and they and we are still not ready for world war.

If we got into such a war, starting in Asia, we'd have to split our strength between Asia and Europe. In Europe Russia might be able to overrun our allies. Without them we'd be practically alone in the world.

The Korean adventure has had some disadvantages for the Russians who didn't have to lose a man in Korea since the North Koreans and Chinese did the dying. Our stand there undoubtedly upset the Communist timetable of conquest; and the shock of the invasion drove this country and its allies closer together and into rearmament.

But Russia, which suggested the armistice, stands to get some advantages from it and perhaps make up lost ground:

W. A. Dunning of Bethel holds a 44-inch rattlesnake he killed Tuesday on a road near Bethel. The snake had nine rattlers and one button.

Because we'll be uncertain of Communist intentions in this uneasy armistice, if there is one, we will have to keep a large part of our armed force in Korea, perhaps for years; with so many of our best troops pinned down in Korea, the Communists may try another move elsewhere. In short, it won't cost them a dime to immobilize our only battle-trained troops.

And in this uneasy period the Russians may hope, and work, for other benefits: a slackening of allied rearmament or maybe a split among the allies.

The only reply to a person looking for some simple, single solution to the Korean mess is this: there is no simple answer.

Stumbling . . .

tween North and South Korea by agreement among the allies of World War II—back in the days when America and Russia were great and good friends and it never occurred to anybody except Stalin that they would be at each other's throats in a few years.

Most of the nations making up the U. N. coalition army probably would approve a buffer strip along the 38th and would be willing to let the propaganda fall where it may.

some concession from the Reds in return for yielding on the neutral strip. In other words, our side wants something it can use as counter-propaganda against the blast that is expected to go around the world when the U. N. soldiers turn their faces south and start marching.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLAS
A CLEAN RECORD
John G. Gough was a great lecturer on temperance and moral matters seventy-five years ago. His eloquence thrilled millions of people.
He died one evening a few minutes after finishing an address at a young people's rally. He had just told them the story of a man who aspired to be the governor of his state. This man in his youth had been involved in some scandal. His friends came to him just before he was to be nominated for the governorship and asked him whether or not, if he received the nomination, he could defend himself against these charges of scandal. He replied that he could not, and therefore he had to step aside and let someone else receive the nomination.
John B. Gough ended his address with these words: "Keep your record clean." A few minutes later the noted lecturer died on the platform where he uttered these words. They were his closing words to the youth of his generation, and they are good words for the youth of all times to ponder.
A mistake is a terrible way of keeping up its punishment. It stalks us through the years. There may be a lot of injustice in this but there is plenty of reality. Watch your step, young fellow. Watch it every day. "Keep your record clean."

The People Made Him A Hero

Another one of California's heroes has been given a jail sentence.
He isn't one of Hollywood's suave lovers or even one of the silver plated cowboys. He's a pug who came from far away Brooklyn and slugged his way into the key position in the West Coast underworld. But his popularity is the envy of many a publicity seeking rascal.
The government has finally caught up with Mickey Cohen and sentenced him to five years in prison plus a heavy fine for income tax evasion.
Whether Cohen will escape serving time for one of his crimes, or escape the $10,000 fine which he has been given by the court remains in the balance while the process of justice grinds the case through higher courts.
It seems uncanny that an underworld figure with the reputation of Cohen could rise to the heights of popularity that Cohen has with the common folks. Perhaps it is because he's a fighter, perhaps it is because other factions of the underworld have made repeated attempts on his life without success. But where are the peoples' senses of values when they turn to hero worship over a gangster?
The California authorities afforded the gangster a personal body guard only a couple of years ago, and the officer was killed by bullets which were meant for Cohen. The citizens of the state actually cheered Cohen on one occasion after he had been taken into court and then found not guilty of the charges against him.
The new prison sentence which has been slapped on Cohen by the court in Los Angeles adds another chapter to the illustrious life of the once small-time book-maker.

Another Look At The Hoover Report

About a year ago folks in Pitt County were taking a great deal of interest in the report of the Hoover commission and its recommendations for making needed reforms in the federal government's method of doing business.
A great many letters were sent from Pitt County to Washington urging the reforms be adopted. But today, two years after the report was made, only a fraction of the reforms have been instituted.
The government is still well wrapped up in its endless stream of red tape throwing money out the window at every turn.
Perhaps citing a few instances of waste in government will refresh the memories of those who are prone to forget quickly where their tax dollars are going.
The Army Quartermasters office in the usual year-end spree of spending, to make sure there is nothing left in the budget, included among its items: $219,646.98 for athletic equipment including 2,624 golf clubs, 30,000 golf balls, and another order for 15 sets of fishing tackle at $520 each.

The Air Force following World War II leased a bomber plant to a private concern for $25,000 a year. The private concern quickly found a customer who paid $117,000 a year for a sublease on the plant. The customer was the government's Commodity Credit Corporation.
A department head in Memphis instituted simplified working methods which enabled him to get rid of 12 of his 26 employees. As a result he was threatened with demotion because he had fewer people working under him, and therefore in the government's eyes, his job was of less importance.
It continues to be next to impossible to rid bureaus of incompetent workers. Because of the system of hearings and other red tape, one department had to keep for an extra 17 months a stenographer who could not do the typing or take the dictation required.
The Senate Appropriations Committee decided to get one copy of all federal government publications for one year, and actually had received 83,723 publications before it gave up the task for lack of space to put the material.
The post office department alone handles some two billion pieces of franked mail annually from government agencies. It would cost a private concern $60,000,000 to send that many three-cent letters through the mails; and yet the government is wondering why the post office stays in the red.
Dust is rapidly gathering on the Hoover report; but if the representatives will go back and brush the dust off the Hoover report, perhaps they can shake out much of the dust which is causing the federal government to be an inefficient, uneconomical operation.

National Whirligig
News Behind The News
By RAY TUCKER
WASHINGTON—The Senate revolt against White House leadership on such major questions as higher taxes and economic controls makes even more doubtful the renomination of Vice-President Alben W. Barkley on a 1952 Democratic ticket, whether President Truman runs again or steps aside for a substitute. Not since the days of Charles G. Dawes has the upper chamber been so out of hand and uncontrolled.
The Kentuckian's age—he is 73—had already led the Missouri faction, which fully expects Mr. Truman to seek another term, to hope that he would agree to close his long public career at the end of his present incumbency. But his inability to preserve even a semblance of party discipline among the elected leaders of his body has produced a definite coolness between him and the man in the White House.
The weekly conferences between Mr. Truman and his Congressional leaders have been short and snappy affairs of late. The head man has shown his anger several times over their failure to get on such routine bills as appropriations. Naturally, he is especially upset over the rebellion in the chamber where he once served.
INSURGENCY—Mr. Barkley's friends think it unfair that the responsibility for senatorial insurgency be held against him. They point out that no single individual could achieve legislative successes in the face of the coalition of conservative Republicans and Southern Democrats, especially when they are marshaled by such shrewd tacticians as Senator Taft of Ohio and Senators Byrd and Russell of Virginia and Georgia, respectively.
President Truman, however, has the memory of service under a Vice-President who could round up a majority under conditions almost as difficult as those which confront the present, more easy-going No. 2 man. He remembers the days when a rough Texas with a shrill voice by the name of John Nance Garner used to wheedle or force the unruly Senators into line for "the boss."
Mr. Truman finds it hard to realize that he is not a Franklin D. Roosevelt, and that Mr. Barkley is not a "Jack" Garner.
NOMINEE—Selecting a possible running-mate for President Truman, however, the White House advisers discover, is almost as difficult as picking a presidential nominee if the Missourian disappoints his crowd by refusing to run again. For various reasons the near and far prospects seem intent on making themselves politically unavailable.
Chief Justice Vinson is the individual more frequently mentioned, but it is doubtful if he would forsake his lifetime assignment. In fact, some of his friends doubt that he would leave the Supreme Court even for a presidential nomination. Moreover, he has written or concurred in several decisions that might handicap him, especially with organized labor.
WILLING—Senator Kerr seems to be running for the V.P. honor, but he has several strikes on him. He spearheaded the Administration attack on General MacArthur even beyond the call of political duty, including his personalities.
His leadership of the movement to exempt natural gas from federal regulation also made him the target of the Mayors of a score of populous cities, which would not endear him to their millions of consumers.
Senator McMahon of Connecticut is also willing, but, like Mr. Kerr, he has not helped his chances in the investigation of alleged Communist influence in the State Department or in the MacArthur hearings. In both instances he served as active defense lawyer for the Truman-Acheson forces.
He was also a ring-leader in the abortive attempt to elect Senator O'Mahoney of Wyoming as Senate Majority leader over the candidate of the influential Southern faction, Senator McFarland of Arizona.
AFFRONT—The friends of three relative newcomers to bigtime politics have organized tentative movements for them, but it is hardly likely that a Truman-controlled party or convention would nominate them for first or second place. They happen to stand high on the White House black books.
Senator Paul H. Douglas of Illinois was too sympathetic to the purposes behind the Fulbright RFO and the Kefauver crime inquiries. At the present moment he heads the committee seeking to frame a code of ethics for public officials, which Mr. Truman regards as a personal affront. In short, the professorial reformer and the man from Missouri do not talk the same political language or belong to the same club.
AVAILABLE—Senators Fulbright and Kefauver are even less popular around the White House. It was the Arkansas member who, after the Democratic reverse in 1946, suggested that Mr. Truman name Governor Thomas E. Dewey as Secretary of State, and then resign to go to place his arch-enemy in the White House. This was before the new succession law was enacted.
Mr. Kefauver's offense is that his "revelations" of alleged ties between Democratic politicians and the underworld, especially in Chicago, are held responsible for the party's 1948 losses at the polls. Moreover, he had the nerve to upset Memphis Boss "Ed" Crump with his senatorial victory, which was a forerunner of his independence as a member of the Senate.

Somebody Told Me
By L. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.
Last night I said to Wife Rachel, "Got to hurry up and knock off my column tonight. Tonight is the night for murders on the radio, and I'm just in the mood to listen to them."
"Which ones for tonight?" she asked.
"The Fat Man, Mr. District Attorney, The Falcon, Rocky Jordan, Rogue's Gallery, and to top it off, Crime Does Not Pay."
To this, W. R. said, "I quit. Goggs'll retire to the ironing board."
Rachel has a definite point. Why should any one with normal intelligence want to listen to murders, particularly a peace-loving man like me? Probably the answer is lack of normal intelligence.
According to a statement made by radio officials there are 114 murders committed on the radio every week. You can bet your

Around Capitol Square
Raleigh, N. C. By LYNN NISBET
NEIGHBORHOOD—The good old word "neighborhood" has become almost obsolete. It is not unusual now for families to be unacquainted with the people who live next door on the adjoining farm. In some places the meaning of neighborhood is retained and its implications practiced. Duplin county gave a demonstration of this fact Monday night when a thousand or so residents of the county and several dozen outside friends gathered around an old fashioned picnic table at the spring near the courthouse at Kenansville, after were joined by another thousand to hear Governor Scott speak and participate in a square dance on the broad village street in front of the court house. The governor's speech has been pretty widely publicized, but it was essentially the same speech he has made many times before. The setting was distinctive.
UNITY—The word "neighborhood" implies commonality and the whole Kenansville affair implied unity of purpose. It was sponsored by the newly formed Duplin Industrial Council which has the objective of promoting agricultural industrial and social development of the county. Governor Scott was invited to represent the state's participation in that development through the building of better roads and school houses and aid extended through the department of agriculture and the division of commerce and industry. The people of the county turned out in grand style to celebrate achievements and renew pledges for continued efforts toward great development. It was not a political rally, a fact emphasized by notable absence of State Senator Rivers Johnson and Representative Bob Carr as well as other well known political figures of the section. Business men representing chambers of commerce and civic clubs were prominent among the visitors, including top brass of the Wilmington chamber. The whole idea was unity of purpose and objective, not only for Duplin county but for the entire southeastern area of the state.
PROGRESS—The leaders directed attention mainly to the future and the need for further effort, but they were able to report substantial progress. In addition to huge installations at Wilmington, Acme, Wallace, Grainger and other points, it was noted that numerous small industries have been established during the past few years. Dupont, Reigal pulp and Stevens textiles accounted for the multi-million dollar enterprises, but there was equal or greater pride in the numerous locally sponsored establishments adding to regional payrolls. The picnic table tied to the scene of the agricultural and culinary status of Duplin. Statistics probably could be obtained as to how many hams and chickens, how many dozens of eggs, how many pounds of barbecue, what quantity of pickles and condiments, were on that table. It doesn't matter; there was enough for everybody with a lot to take home.
DEMOCRACY—Someone suggested it would be a good idea to send a picture of the picnickers and the square dancers, with accompanying sound recording, to Joe Stalin and his folks. It was a practical demonstration of real democracy. On the speaker's stand Governor Scott was ac-

North Carolina's senior senator, Honorable Clyde Hoyt, lost his fight to eliminate from the appropriation bill for the Interior Department an item of $342,026 put therein for the alleged purpose of surveying the need for a transmission line from Buggs Island Dam to Kinston and for construction of a transmission line from Clark Hill Dam to Greenwood, South Carolina.
The amount sought for the survey from Buggs Island is only $23,820. The South Carolina portion of the appropriation was $318,020 and both senators from that State reputedly opposed Senator Hoyt. The Free Press doesn't know about the necessity for taxpayers providing a transmission line from Clark Hill Dam to Greenwood, S. C. It's of the opinion, however, that private power companies already supply that section and that the expenditure of $318,000 of the taxpayers' money is "undefensible expense," as we stated in an editorial a few days ago.

There's no need for any survey from Buggs Island to Kinston. It has been pointed out several times in this column that the Carolina Power & Light Company, owned by 30,000 stockholders—North and South bottom dollar that the networks wouldn't put 114 of the things on the air if they weren't in demand.

This statement will probably shock you even more: Bad movies, according to the critics, are most in demand by the American public. The ones that the critics would call corny are the biggest pay-offs at the box office. But this factor is worth considering: Plenty of critics have seen so many movies that they have gone sour.
Regardless of the weather tonight, I'm sure of hearing my murders bell-clear. If you like radio, there is no reason that you can't get bell-clear reception from the four major networks: NBC, CBS, ABC, and Mutual. The answer, of course, is FM radio.
Even if you don't like murders, the radio has plenty to offer when you have the four mafor networks at your fingertips. Generally speaking, radio reception in Eastern Carolina, particularly in Greenville, is bad. But with good reception through FM, radio is the cheapest entertainment money can buy.

Most FM sets have been sold on the strength of their reception of sports. A station like WPTF in Raleigh, for example, will carry the regular NBC network program on its AM station, at the same time carry a sportscast of a basketball game. However, the sports angle is only one advantage of FM. Regular network shows are carried on the FM stations, too.
After reading this, W. R. commented, "What you doing, selling FM sets on the side?"
"Nope, but I hate for someone who likes good radio to miss an opportunity to get good reception."
And I thank you.

corded honors befitting the chief executive of the state. In the crowd around the table and later on the street, Kerr Scott was just another goodfellow, accorded the same but more courtesy than any other guest. He had to pick it and reach for his own food in competition with everybody else. Incidentally, the governor says he came out all right on that reaching contest; he didn't leave there hungry! There was unanimous agreement with Mayor Johnson's statement later in the evening that if anybody left hungry it was his own fault. Such gatherings are not unique in North Carolina and in their atmosphere of competitive cooperation may be found the strong roots of genuine democracy as be'ved in and practiced by Americans. Maybe the fellow had something in suggesting a sound-movie of the occasion for use in less favored parts of the world.
MARKETING—The marketing system for farm crops, especially perishable foodstuffs, was indicated by J. Y. (Stag) Ballentine, commissioner of agriculture, at a specially called press conference Tuesday. Ballentine blamed the system for the erroneous belief that farmers are getting too large a share of the food consumer's dollar, and the further belief that farmers are recipients of special favors by the government. Part of the fault, he thinks, lies with government itself in failing to keep marketing research up to production research, and part of it rests upon "private enterprise which also has failed to do an adequate job of processing and distributing foods between the farm and the dinner table.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER
The whole business of honor awards to products and best-dressed women has come up for re-examination.
Three weeks ago, Earl Lifshay, managing editor of "Retailing Daily," was called upon to present the first three awards of the Industrial Designers Institute, which went, incidentally, for a coffee brewer, a chair and an electric shaver. Mr. Lifshay said he was glad to present the awards because they "were one of the very few that were genuine," and added that "the market place has been deluged with products boasting all kinds of medals, awards and certificates."
He said he was amazed that manufacturers who take pride in the integrity of their product would play up a phony award in their advertising. "The art striking at the very fundamentals of sound business by parading deceit in the guise of truth."
A few days later, the Association of Better Business Bureaus, which has long kept an eye peeled for awards given for a consideration, passed a resolution condemning phony awards and said they were the means of using advertising to fool the public.
Other Better Business Bureaus have jumped in on the fight. The National BBB has sent out a report on "Charm Institute" which, it says, is an adjunct to a publicity firm that later solicits winners for publicity work, although the awards are not contingent upon retaining the firm and there is no consideration for the award.
The NBBB has also been firing questions at the Fashion Academy awards which, it says, solicits scholarships from winners. Again, there is no suggestion that a contribution plays any part in the award decisions; in fact, the Academy says it has refused to consider products when manufacturers have hinted they will grant a scholarship if they get an "honor."
Emil Alvin Hartman, director of the Academy, told "Advertising Age" that he is so annoyed by manufacturers who can qualify and pay for the franchise. Meanwhile, the trade and advertising press is making an issue of the whole matter of awards and some manufacturers who have won them in fair competition may be doubtful about how far they can go in bragging about their honors.

Hal Boyle's Column

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—Are women habit-forming?
The evidence is that—in this world—they are to the average man. One way or another, one habit leads to another.
The two most popular habits between men and women in this age and day are marriage and divorce. Some deep students of our society worry because divorces have increased in this country.
Well, so have dogs, people, picnics, marriages, and the number of cases of poison ivy. If you will honestly look over your own lives, or those of your parents, you will easily see why there have been more opportunities to have picnics. Everything else follows.
Marriage in the formative period between adolescence and senility, it is the poor man's device for sharing his loneliness and responsibility and blame for being so pitiful.
The best tribute to marriage is that those who divorce turn again to marriage. Certainly the men I know do. They get rid of one woman, they can't get along with, they immediately turn to the problem of trying to get along with another woman with fresher problems.
An example:
A friend of mine, despite his wife's proven charms—her dextrous hair, her dull eyes, her vixen memory, her complaining long-cherished ailments—has suggested attractions over for the boyish pleasure of being alone.
For a few great days he felt less like a piece of feminine real estate and enjoyed the sensation of being young and irresponsible again.
But what happened? His secretary stubbornly objected it was bad enough for him to pay his ex-wife's alimony demands; he insisted he demand custody of his child. He did. Then, to insure a mother for his child, he gallantly married his secretary and agreed to care for her three children by a previous marriage.
Naturally, of course, he then had to hire another secretary.
And, being an ordinary man, this is the problem he says he faces practically every day now:
"I am walking along looking in the windows and I meet my former wife and she says she needs $50 to buy a house dress. I peel off the money and she is gone before I realize I am no longer married to her."
My present wife then comes along pulling one of her own socks by his left hand. She says she needs $25 to straighten his right dog tooth to make him more acceptable to our neighbors. Well, I give her my last $25 bucks.
"And then what happens? I come back to the office and my new secretary wants to write airmail to her boy friend and complains the stamp account is overdrawn $10, and how did the office ever get in this shape anyway?"
And then he gave his conclusion:
"Never marry a girl, never divorce her, never hire her in your office—in fact, better don't meet her at all—and then you'll never have to trade her for another woman as long as you live."
The real moral is this: Picking up dumb bells in this world is like picking up peanuts. It's hard to stop after the first one.

Washington Letter

By FRANK CAREY
(For JANE EADS)
WASHINGTON—Col. Amos R. Koonits thinks a lot of gold-birds pulled the wool over the eyes of Army psychiatrists during World War II.
Lt. Col. Stephen W. Ranson admits there were a lot of gold-birds but says they didn't get away with much—and that there were plenty of really severe psychiatric cases who required treatment and got it.
Koonits, an Army surgeon during the war, is sure in the Maryland National Guard Medical Corps. Ranson is one of the Army's top psychiatrists.
Koonits, writing in "Military Surgeon" magazine, declared that a "credulous attitude" by psychiatrists "enabled many men to escape from combat zones who should have never been away from the front line."
Ranson, in an article in the "Armed Forces Medical Journal," asserted that in the North African campaign, there was "indiscriminate evacuation" of psychiatric casualties and "wastage of manpower." But he declared that "sound administrative and organizational policies were afterwards instituted in Italy and Europe with dramatic success."
Key to the Army's policy, he said, was treatment of psychiatric casualties "as far forward as possible." Emphasis was placed on such things as promoting in the patient "the expectation of full return to duty."
Ranson asserted: "Psychiatric casualties will be the inevitable result of the present fighting in Korea. We must apply the hard-won lessons of World War II in their treatment."
(The Army surgeon general's office says that during the last war, 60 per cent of all neuropsychiatric casualties were returned to combat duty after rest and treatment.)
Koonits, in his article, criticizes another Army surgeon for "saying that psychiatric casualties might be expected to be heavy in the Korea war, due to the nature of the war."
"Every war in which men stand up and shoot at each other is apt to breed psychiatric casualties, and this is especially true when there is a possibility of a psychiatric evacuation from the scene of war," he said.
Ranson declared that the Army could deal with malingering "gold-birds" who just could not get up, or who got lost or misunderstood orders when an attack was just getting underway.
But he also declared that real psychiatric casualties occur under combat and that they require treatment, and sometimes evacuation from the war theater.

MacArthur Urges No Defense Cuts

NEW YORK —(UP)— General Douglas MacArthur said today the United States will be "caught like a motor in a trap" if it cuts its armed forces while the cold war with Russia continues.

In an interview with Lowell Lintpus, reporter for The New York Daily News, the five-star general said the Russians would be quick to take advantage of any reduction of U. S. arms.

MacArthur said that it would not be appropriate for him to comment on the Korean cease-fire negotiations.

HIT BY TOMBSTONE SAVANNAH, Tenn. —(UP)—

Levie F. Jart, 9, was reading the inscription on a tombstone in the cemetery when the tombstone fell over on him and broke his leg.

SAVANNAH, Ga. — (AP) — James W. Horning, Sr., whose son was killed in Korea, has ordered a stone memorial fashioned to place near the highway in a Savannah suburb.

This inscription is being carved on the monument:

"In memory of 19-year-old James Waring Horning, Jr., USMC, killed in action December 2, 1950, Yudam-Ni Chosin Reservoir, Korea.

"The incompetent, greedy, confused politicians elected in 1948 were responsible for this boy being murdered in Korea."

ON THE HOUSE

By DAVID G. BAREUTHER, AP Real Estate Editor

Rare is the man who can live in a house for any length of time without needing at least one saw.

Shelves must be put up; a crooked sapling may have to be cut down, and often there is an attic to be finished. These are among the jobs that any of us are likely to tackle for the fun of it if not because of the expense of hiring things done nowadays.

So you want to buy a saw. Your hardware dealer probably will assume that you want a general purpose crosscut saw, but he might ask you if you want a rip saw, backsaw, bucksaw, compass saw, keyhole saw, coping saw, power saw, or any number of other saws. So it's a good idea to know something about saws.

For instance, if the clerk asks you "What number?" you won't want to answer "Oh, one will be enough." He will be referring to the points per inch. You'll find that rip saws, for cutting down with the grain, have large coarse teeth—usually 5½ points to the inch. Crosscut saws, as their name implies, for cutting across the grain, have finer teeth. A good all around household crosscut saw has 8 points or more per inch. The eight point saw. This is a shorter stubby tool 12-point saw will do finer work, but calls for more elbow grease.

When you get into the hobby of making furniture or installing built-ins in your home you'll find that cabinet work requires a backsaw. This is a shorter stubbier tool with a rigid metal molding along the top edge of its blade. This stiff back and the fine teeth of the backsaw make for smooth and accurate work. These saws range from 8 to 18 inches in length with 12 to 16 points to the inch. Most commonly used, however, is the 12-inch size with 14 points to the inch.

As with all fine tools, a saw should only be used for the purpose for which it is designed. Don't expect a crosscut saw to serve as a rip saw, or vice versa, or—perish the thought—to cut through a nail!

Any saw is essentially a series of fine chisels. The teeth are designed and sharpened to gouge out small particles of wood. They are set—that is, bent outward alternately to one side and the other—to leave a kerf, or cut, slightly wider than the thickness of the blade. This prevents the saw from binding. If the teeth are not set evenly, bent out at the same angle on each side, the saw will tend to run out of line. If the teeth are not jointed properly—that is, evened to a uniform height for the entire length of the blade—the saw will tend to jump in its kerf.

To use a crosscut saw properly, grip the handle firmly with thumb and index finger pointing down the blade on each side of the handle. This grip will steer the saw in a straight line. With the teeth to guide the start. Don't try to start with a downward stroke, but draw the saw upward several times—slowly, to avoid jumping. Violation of this rule invites a sliced thumb.

Never try to saw down the center of a line you have measured off. You have to allow for the thickness of the kerf, so cut carefully on the waste side of the line. Saw with as much of the length and only the middle part of the saw wears the teeth unevenly and calls for a rejoining job much sooner than necessary.

For a rejoining job much sooner than necessary, a crosscut saw at an angle of 45 degrees from the surface of your work—a rip saw at 60 degrees. You will notice that a crosscut saw cuts on both the up and down strokes. This is because of the angle at which the teeth are filed. The front edge of a crosscut tooth has an angle of 15 degrees; the back edge 45 degrees, making a total of 60 degrees. The rip saw tooth presents a much straighter face to the wood, with its 60 degree angle divided 8 degrees for the back. It cuts on the down stroke only.

Always keep your saw wiped with oil and then wiped fairly dry. A good saw can last you a lifetime if you give it the right care. Hang it by its handle in a safe place where children will not bump against it.

Chief Orders Strict Enforcing Of Laws

Workshop Begins At East Carolina In Resource-Use

Greenville police have orders to strictly enforce motor vehicle and traffic laws, Police Chief Guy C. Langston said today.

"We made a thorough analysis of traffic accidents here, and on that survey, we found violations of traffic ordinances are the primary causes of many accidents," Langston stated.

"Orders have been issued to the police to enforce traffic regulations. Wherever it is reasonable to do so, police will warn offenders, but where there are flagrant violations the offenders will be cited to Police Court. This policy is being carried out by all personnel of the police department and we believe ultimate results will be good," the chief said.

"We sincerely request the cooperation of motorists and the public generally to help us to improve traffic conditions and make Greenville a safe city.

"We are looking forward to the time when our school boys and girls will be adult drivers, and we are asking parents of today to set an example in careful driving for the drivers of tomorrow."

Directed by Dr. Austin D. Bond of the East Carolina department of science and Mrs. Mary Sue Foyville of Raleigh, visiting faculty member, the workshop will be in session through August 17, when summer session will end.

The East Carolina President pointed out to workshop participants Thursday that the school should be primarily interested in improving the quality of human living. The school plan, he said, should be a community center, and all resources of the community should be included in the total school curriculum. Education is life, he stated, and its purpose should be to bring children into contact with the learning and culture of the past, and with the functional and environmental realities of the present.

The three R's are now supplemented, he told his audience, not only with visual and auditory aids of instruction but also with all other learnings necessary for vocational or professional and civic education. Once a background for community living was sufficient, he pointed out. Today, he said, the background must have global perspective.

He insisted that in the guidance and instructional program all materials, peoples, and other media should be utilized to assure a great deal of literacy and to foster appreciation of the community, the state, and the nation and of other peoples of the world.

Active participation in school organizations and in community life, including both public and private agencies, is essential, Dr. Messick maintained, if our way of life is to be safeguarded. He cautioned, however, against focusing too much attention on world problems to the neglect of community needs.

"Guide children properly in living adequately and happily in their own environment," he said. To become actively engaged in community affairs is the first requisite, he continued, for state, national, and world citizenship.

"Don't build a wall around your school for six hours a day, and then lock it up for the other eighteen," he advised. "The teacher with vision is an active citizen of the community, and she motivates the same kind of participation from

To Give Answer On Prison Job

RALEIGH, N. C. —(AP)— SHI Chief Walter Anderson has promised to say tomorrow whether he will take the $9000-a-year job of state prisons director.

He was out of town today on business, but he announced before his departure that he would give his answer tomorrow.

Meanwhile, Capitol Hill speculation maintained Anderson will decline the post, which pays $1,650 more a year than he is now receiving.

State Highway Commission Chairman Dr. Henry W. Jordan said yesterday he was hopeful Anderson will accept the post which John M. Gold is leaving. Gold will become Winston-Salem's city manager. His resignation is effective Aug. 1 or 15, depending on when a successor is available.

Jordan was asked yesterday if he thought Anderson would be secure in the prison job when another governor takes office. He replied: "I believe any governor would welcome the opportunity to have a man of Anderson's stature serve as head of the prison system."

Anderson is a member of the Prisons Classification Board.

Steel Bridge Is Affected By Sun

HACKENSACK, N. J. —(UP)— A steel drawbridge over the Hackensack River near here suffered "sunstroke" yesterday.

Summer heat in the high 80's made the bridge swell so much it would not close after it opened for a passing oil barge.

Traffic was blocked while the fire department sprayed tons of water on the span until it shrank enough to fit.

Smallest Potato Crop In 70 Years

RALEIGH, N. C. —(AP)— North Carolina's 1951 sweet potato crop looms as the smallest in 70 years, according to the Federal-State Crop Reporting Service.

The agency estimated yesterday that the crop will produce only 4,400,000 bushels, a drop of 35 per cent from the 1950 production. The 1951 estimate is based on reports from farmers as of July 1.

Growers indicated that only 40,000 acres of sweet potatoes will be harvested in the state this year. This compares with the 1940-49 average of 67,800 acres.

The agency attributed the small crop to the growers' difficulty in disposing of last year's crop, disappointment with prices received, and increased acreages for cotton, tobacco and peanuts.

Meanwhile, the Tar Heel hay crop is estimated at 1,156,000 acreage is expected to total 67,000 and to produce the largest crop on record. This acreage is 22 per cent larger than the previous record of 55,000 acres set in 1950.

The soybean crop is estimated at 410,000 acres. This is a decline of about two per cent from last year.

Family Of Four Die In Auto Fire

BRIDGEPORT, N. H. —(AP)— Four members of a Rhode Island family, two of them small children, burned to death last night in their car which had been rammed by a truck and set aflame by explosion of a gasoline tank.

A 15-year-old girl, fifth passenger in the automobile, was thrown clear of the blazing wreckage but suffered serious burns.

The crash occurred at the entrance to the Bridgeport-Chester, Pa., Ferry. Flames shooting upward 30 feet as a spare gasoline tank on the big tractor-trailer exploded, trapped the four victims.

In Underwood Hospital, Woodbury, N. J., June McBride, of Hopkinton, Mass., told authorities those killed were Mr. and Mrs. Albert Karch and their daughters, Deborah, 5, and Susan, 3, of 19 Hornet Ave., East-Greenwich, R.I.

She said the Karches had been visiting her parents in Massachusetts and were taking her to an aunt in Annapolis, Md.

The truck, owned by the Kent Transfer Company, Elkton, Md., was driven by Michael Sharick, Elkton, who was not seriously hurt. Police said Sharick told them the truck brakes failed to hold as he moved into the line at the ferry toll gates.

Heat and fire are commonly known as the "bread grains."

Pay For Idleness Is Not Taxable

LONDON —(UP)— Actor Sir Laurence Olivier earned $42,000 for not working and, what's more, it's tax-free.

Olivier was paid by the Two Cities Film Co. to stay out of movies which might compete with their production of "Henry V" which starred Olivier.

A chancery court ruled yesterday the $42,000 was not subject to British income tax because it represented "a very special case in very special circumstances."

'Old Home Town' Can Be Improved Say Youngsters

PIERRE, S. D. —(UP)— The "good old home town" can be improved, in the opinion of 450 South Dakota high school juniors.

A community survey questionnaire was given to the students, who were a cross-section of the state's youth.

Most critical of their communities were students from the smaller towns.

They deplored the lack of community co-operation and good recreational facilities. They also reported snobbishness, selfishness and racial intolerance as community weaknesses.

Other criticisms:

"Too many bars."

"The men of distinction in our town indulge in too much liquor."

"Lots of talk — no action."

"Too many social organizations like bridge and sewing clubs taking time from more important ones like PTA and auxiliary."

"Excess of money in the treasury—not being used to better the city."

"Weak control over youth, but parents and businessmen still won't support worthwhile projects."

"Too much managing by the same ones."

Will Celebrate In A Big Way

DURANT, Okla. —(AP)— Some birthday parties are in parks, some in homes, some in back yards and some at the movies.

But Gov. Johnston Murray of Oklahoma will have his 50th birthday party July 21 at Southeastern State college here.

Girls On Skates Speed Industry

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. —(UP)— Three messenger girls at the Douglas Aircraft plant here have been equipped with roller skates to speed up delivery of blue prints to engineers.

Phyllis Cook, June Singer and Betty Romanowsky deliver the prints in less than half the walking time by sailing down long corridors on wheels. The system permits engineers to spend more time working and less time looking for data.

Most of the youths believed their schools' gymnasiums, faculties, courses of study and physical plants could be improved.

The greatest wish of the youth of all communities was for swimming pools within easy distance. The youth of smaller towns also wanted tennis courts, roller skating rinks and recreational centers.

Most students were satisfied with their church youth groups. A majority reported they attended church regularly.

Compressed Air Engine Idea Has Been Revived

CHICAGO, Ill. —(AP)— A compressed air motor that would drive a car at speeds of 100 miles an hour may be a development of the future.

Paul L. Franck, of Washington, D. C., who has been working in the field of compressed air motors for nearly 30 years, seeks the original drawings of a model invented by Louis C. Kiser 26 years ago.

The Decatur man, a former locomotive engineer, built his invention from a Ford motor converted along the principles of steam engines.

Kiser tried to organize his own manufacturing firm. He and his partner ran out of money before operations got started. Kiser was so discouraged he sold the invention and moved to Arkansas where he died in 1927.

Picketing Takes Unique Twist

OMAHA —(AP)— A "catch-as-catch-can" variety of picketing turned up in a dispute between a union and an Omaha dairy.

The General Drivers and Helpers Union (AFL) dispatched pickets in automobiles to trail Alameda Dairy Co. trucks. When the trucks stopped at a store, the picket jumped from his car and began parading around the truck.

The dispute involved the union's efforts to organize Alameda workers.

Wallet Survives Bus Ride 'Solo'

BLOOMINGTON, Ill. —(AP)— The bus pulled out of the station with H. E. Holmes' wallet containing more than $1,000 still on the seat he occupied.

At 4 a. m. the bus station employees got in touch with the sheriff's office, the sheriff's office got state police headquarters at Pontiac. At 4:37 a. m. the state police reported they found the billfold on the bus. It contained $1,050 in money orders, a $25 check and between $25 and $30 in cash.

A half hour later Holmes picked up his money.

JUST ORNAMENTAL
SPENCERTOWN, N. Y. —(UP)— For years, residents here wondered why the three-faced clock in the tower of St. Peter's Church did not tell time. The reason became clear when the state police reported they found the billfold on the bus. They found that each set of hands was carved from one piece of wood.

Seek Improved Teaching Of Science In Schools

To discuss ways of improving the teaching of science in the secondary schools of North Carolina, a number of teachers and school administrators will hold a conference Thursday, July 19, at East Carolina College.

A series of talks, exhibits arranged by teachers of science in various high schools of the eastern part of the state, and a visit to the East Carolina greenhouse are scheduled among chief events.

Dr. Charles W. Reynolds, director of the college department of science, has announced the program for the day. He will serve as chairman at both morning and afternoon meetings. The conference programs will be presented in the auditorium of the science department in the Flanagan building. Meetings are scheduled from 9 a.m. until noon, and from 2 to 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Henry A. Shannon, state advisor in science and mathematics, and O. E. Dowd, principal of the Greenville High School, are among speakers who will discuss science teaching in the public schools Thursday morning. Dr. I. E. Ready, superintendent of schools in Roanoke Rapids, will lead a discussion of topics suggested by these talks and by the conference theme.

Exhibits arranged by science teachers in several high schools of eastern North Carolina will be presented at the afternoon meeting, and will form the basis of discussion among those present. Floyd Collins, teacher of science in Wilson; Homer Van Parker, Jr., principal and science teacher in the Bear Grass school; and Frank Toothman of the Greenville High School faculty will be among those participating in the program.

Dr. Mary G. Caughey of the East Carolina department of science is in charge of arrangements for a visit by conference members to the college greenhouse. The uses and values of a greenhouse in the teaching of science will be pointed out.

Honesty Wins Commendation

KENOSHA, Wis. —(UP)— Daniel Raffone, 12, broke a store window by accident and won himself a reputation for honesty. Police noticed the broken window and found a note nearby signed by the boy. The youngster admitted breaking the window and said he would turn himself in the next day.

Pig Roots Out Lost Timepiece

RED OAK, Ia. —(UP)— John Nelson has a soft spot in his heart for one of his pigs. Nelson, who farms near here, lost his watch about a year ago while working in a field. Recently he was looking over some of his pigs when he noticed something dangling from the mouth of one of them. Sure enough, it was his watch.

He did instead of a scolding. Dan got a commendation for his honesty.

Weather Contrast

The highest temperature in the Greenville area yesterday was 91 degrees. Lowest last night was 62, and at 8 a.m. today it was 74. No rain. Yesterday a year ago was a rainy day here. Nearly an inch and a quarter of rain fell. Mrs. Carl E. Maister, local observer for the U.S. Weather Bureau, reported. Highest temperature here yesterday a year ago was 88 degrees. Lowest that night it was 70, and at 8 a.m. next day it was 70.

Women 'Canning' Airplane Engines

"Kelly Katics" are helping build Air Force engines here. They are women employees of Kelly Air Force Base.

Women who a few months ago were baffled by vacuum cleaners are now installing engine valves, rewiring ignition systems and operating lathes—after intensive training, of course.

They're "canning" engines. After final inspection, the engines, ranging from little ones for trainers to the huge power plants for the B-36, are "canned" for shipment or storage.

Explorers Find Rich Fossil Bed

EL CENTRO, Calif. —(UP)— The Imperial Valley desert, once the floor of an inland sea, gives promise of being a rich hunting ground for ancient fossils and early Indian relics.

Ira Huffman, president of the Imperial Valley gem and mineral society, said newly discovered beds in the desert had yielded bones of ancient mammals and a number of large oyster shells.

Another society member reported finding the skull of a horse or burro on the route presumed to have been taken by the Spanish explorer Juan Batista de Anza in 1774.

Huffman said the fossil grounds were the best he had seen in 20 years of exploring the desert.

Giant Yugoslav Power Plant Near Completion

JABLANICA, Yugoslavia —(UP)—Ten thousand men and women are toiling night and day, seven days a week, in this strategic mountain valley to complete what is expected to be the second largest hydroelectric power station in Europe.

Yugoslav planners claim that in 1953, due to start operating, it will be surpassed only by Russia's monster Dneprostroy in size and power. It will furnish throughout Bosnia and Herzegovina. The huge underground power plant, blasted out of solid rock in the side of a towering cliff, is almost completed.

The tunnel which will bring water to the six monster turbines (only three will operate at the beginning) is also near completion.

Plant Invisible

Outside the power plant and the only part which will be visible, rises the dam, half complete. It will stretch between two high cliffs and block off the narrow gorge of the swift-flowing, glacier-green Neretva River to back up a lake 18 miles long and more than 210 feet deep.

In other parts of Yugoslavia big construction jobs are limping along being temporarily halted because of a shortage of labor. Here there are no complaints. This is a priority undertaking and workers are funneled in from all over the country.

All up and down the Sarajevo-Mostar highway (Jablanica is about two-thirds of the way from Sarajevo to Mostar) the motorist sees dozens of other bustling construction sites.

New Factories Rising

New factories are shooting up, ready to use the power from Jablanica.

The biggest project of all, an immense aluminum plant in Mostar, will be built as soon as large amounts of power begin to flow. Yugoslavia then will be able to process its own huge reserves of bauxite instead of exporting them in the raw state.

A glance at the map, or a drive through this wild mountain area, makes it easy to see why such priority is being given to the power plant.

Militarily Safe

Militarily speaking, this is the safest spot in the whole of Yugoslavia. It is near the heart of the "Bosnian redoubt," to which the Yugoslav Army would retreat if it should be driven out of the open plains to the east and northeast.

To reach Jablanica, an enemy would have to fight its way for many miles through narrow mountain valleys, only a few of them with any kind of roads.

Even from the air it would not be easy to knock out this plant. Only the most accurate of pinpoint bombing could touch the dam in its narrow gorge, and the rest of the plant is located under tons of rock. In addition the air approaches are barred by a jumble of sharp peaks.

Rabies Germ Is Suddenly Fatal After 3 Months

NEW CASTLE, Ind. —(UP)—Eighteen-year-old Barbara Mercer was attending an outdoor high school physical education class last April when a stray dog ran up and bit her.

She didn't tell her parents about it—just put a bandage over the wound. When she complained of a sore throat, she believed it was polio.

Barbara died yesterday and when doctors investigated they found the cause was rabies. They said the germ had lain dormant in her body for three months.

Corpse on the Town

By JOHN ROEBURT

Chapter 35
 Jigger asked, "What happened when you offered her your love?"
 "She laughed," Scott said, and the memory burned in his face. It was Jigger's first sight of the side of the professor that could fit the role of murderer and persecutor.
 "When did you decide to murder her?"
 "Then."
 "Just like that?—You decided that rather than surrender her to Leighton you'd murder her?"

Scott shook his head slowly. "I didn't decide, or think. I just killed the laugh." He shuddered as from an inner chill. "I didn't know I was strangling her."
 "But then you made a conscious decision— You decided to frame Merle Leighton."
 "He was responsible for what I'd done— It was he who murdered her."
 "Come now, Professor, that justification's a little thin. Leighton had a right to romance a pretty girl."
 "He was a trifle, a married man seeking sport." Scott's eyes enlarged Jigger's as though the condemnation of Leighton was of surpassing importance to him.
 Jigger said, "Leighton was way out of bounds, I agree. But you delude yourself about your motives. You wanted more of the girl than you admit, even before Leighton's appearance on the scene. There was something more to your motivation— Something as sick as the wish of an old man to inflict his passions on a girl more than two generations younger. As sick, Professor, as the romantic fiction you write for the sex pulp magazines."
 Scott crept deeper into his chair as Jigger continued, "Saying that just her youth attracted you, that you wanted to share harmlessly in small moments of it, is sheer rationalization. It goes a lot deeper. You got something when you snoped into her emotions and love revelations. You lived those emotions, and in effect, they gratified you. That was the measure of your lust. You had no real intimacy with the girl, but you killed her as a rejected lover. You didn't actually know Leighton, nor for obvious reasons, were you ever really in competition with him. Yet you saw him as a successful rival and marked him for murder— And murder, mind you, by a slow, fiendish torture. You first confronted him with a murdered mistress. The you began to drop clues, so that he could know no peace. And today, you hanged him."

 "First a look of inexpressible sadness, like a child's, then Scott asked querulously, "I'm not sane?"
 "I'm afraid not."
 "Scott's mouth trembled. "They'll commit me?"
 "I doubt that. More likely you'll be convicted and executed." Jigger paused contemplatively. "You plotted too subtly and well, not to be judged legally sane. You watched that first night in the rain, then phoned the police so that the body would be discovered. You left the note in the letterbox, so that the true identity of the corpse would be found out—" Jigger stopped, and asked, "When did you put that note in the letterbox?"
 "In the morning."
 Jigger nodded. "After the police had searched the box— That's how I came to find it. No, Scott, your cold, thought-out method makes you legally sane, a certainty for the District Attorney to get a capital conviction. The way you staggered the leads, doled out the clues, played me against the police—" He stopped and looked at Scott curiously. "Why didn't you involve Leighton all at once— Make that first note read to Susan Hunter from Merle Leighton?"
 There was no answer. The query was superfluous — Scott had long ago decided to let Jigger, answered it by his deed.
 Jigger said pregnantly, "Enjoy the slow agony you know Leighton was experiencing?"
 "Widening slowly, as though suddenly aware of something. An expression came into his face, and Jigger had his second look at the side of the man which fitted the role he had played. Now it was obvious, well within belief— This Scott was utterly man of his crimes."
 Jigger said, "When you called Prescott a while ago, did you confess?"
 "No."
 "Then I suggest you do now." Jigger looked at him shrewdly. Scott was fumbling in a pocket.
 Jigger said, "Do you really want some minutes?"
 Their eyes met in a long look, then Jigger said, "But you'll call Prescott!"
 Scott nodded thankfully, reassuring him.
 Jigger went to the door. At the door he called out goodbye. Red closed the door behind them.
 Hurrying through the hall of the musty Chelsea dwelling, Red said, "You're compounding a suicide, hackle."
 Jigger said equivocally, "We don't know that. One guess what Scott went into his pocket for."
 On the street over lighted cigarettes, Red said, "Playing The Almighty is getting to be a habit with you, like smoking."
 Jigger exhaled, and watched smoke rings diffuse into the atmosphere with intense concentration. "I couldn't get rid of the notion," he said morosely, "that Scott was the last man I wanted to see in a police line-up."

Byrd Raps Administration For Failings In Leadership, Morals

WASHINGTON — (UP) — Sen. Harry F. Byrd (D-Va.) angrily blasted the Administration today for reaching a point where Congress is considering plans to "rewrite the 10 commandments" to lift the moral levels of government. In a new attack upon President Truman, Byrd also charged that the Chief Executive failed to supply the leadership necessary to encourage cuts in federal spending by reducing non-defense programs.

Byrd's latest criticism was contained in a bitter reply to the Administration's defense of President Truman's $68,400,000,000 spending budget for the current fiscal year. It was a statement inserted in the record of the Senate Finance Committee alongside recent testimony of Assistant Budget Director Kimer B. Staats. The committee questioned Staats about spending plans to see how much of a tax increase is needed to balance the budget.

While he had some praise for the Budget Bureau, Byrd refused to accept its arguments. He hit at Mr. Truman in response to Staats' statement that big cuts in federal spending mean major cuts in the killing of programs set up by the laws of Congress.

"Of course, there are big program issues," Byrd agreed. "Of course, tremendous reductions can be made in elimination of programs specifically prescribed by law. But the Chief Executive has some responsibility of leadership in such reductions. To date such leadership has not been manifest. I do not recall any suggestion as to the repeal or the curtailment of any such programs by the Chief Executive since we started postwar astronomical budgets."

Instead, Byrd said, there has been "a stubborn and persistent recurring demand, backed by high powered, expensive propaganda" for new "gigantic" programs for "socializing" agriculture, medicine, education and housing.

He also had some comment on Staats' statement that the budget cannot be balanced simply by better management. Byrd recalled that Congress raised the pay of top level officials two years ago in the hope that better administrators would improve efficiency. He reminded that Congress has approved most of the Hoover Commission proposals for government reorganization.

"And yet," he said, "disregarding all of the global responsibilities we have assumed, including defense of half the world, strictly domestic expenditures, which should be coming down, continue to rise. Even more shameful is the fact that the situation in the federal government has reached such a point that the Congress is now considering a proposal to set up a commission to rewrite the 10 commandments with special application to government officials in an effort to raise the government from the moral depths to which it is accused of having reached."

Wanted Man Is Held In Virginia

James Arthur King, 36-year-old Negro laborer, who is wanted by Greenville police on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, has been apprehended in Newport News, Va.

A warrant charges King with assaulting Eulish Chapman, Negro, 1209-B Greene Street, with a rifle. Police quoted the woman as saying King shot her during a fit of jealousy and that they had been living together four or five years. The bullet fractured the woman's hip bone. She is a patient at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Police said King disappeared after the shooting. Detective N. H. Byrd traced him then to Newport News, Va. where Virginia authorities arrested him.

Chief Guy C. Langston and Detective Byrd will go to the Virginia city tomorrow and bring King here.

Malik Complains Of 'Hooliganism'

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y.—(AP)—New York City police today investigated complaints of "hooliganism" outside the Park Avenue headquarters of the Russian delegation to the United Nations.

Soviet delegate Jacob A. Malik wrote U. S. Leleage Warren R. Austin July 3, saying about 20 persons demonstrated there June 30. He said they shouted hostile remarks, scratched delegation limousines and accosted persons entering the building.

Acting Soviet Delegate Semyon K. Tsarapkin wrote Austin this week that a group of 60 to 80 persons repeated the demonstration last Saturday.

Flood In Kansas Takes Five Lives

TOPEKA, Kas.—(AP)—High waters swirled over Kansas today in the state's most disastrous flood leaving at least five persons dead and thousands homeless.

Five, and possibly eight persons, were missing. Swollen rivers surged far beyond their banks into scores of communities. The waters swept many areas in eastern and central Kansas that have been flooded and reflooded during the last two months of heavy rains.

The army engineers office at Kansas City estimated damages at $85,000,000 from the present and recent floods along the Kansas River and its tributaries.

British Cool To Harriman Effort

By UNITED PRESS
Presidential trouble-shooter W. Averill Harriman faced a British "cold shoulder" today as he prepared to go to Tehran to try for a quick British-Iran accord in the oil dispute.

The British ambassador to Iran, Sir Francis Shepherd, rejected any idea that Harriman would mediate the crisis and said there was "not much use" in Harriman's coming because of Premier Mohamed Mossadeq's insistence that any talks with the U.S. envoy would have to be "within the framework" of Iran's oil nationalization law.

In Washington, administration sources said the special envoy's efforts would be directed primarily to interim oil producing measures rather than attempting a long range settlement although this might develop during the negotiations.

Harriman scheduled a last-minute round of conferences with President Truman and Secretary of State Dean Acheson before boarding a plane for Iran. The White House said last night he will leave Washington within 48 hours.

Today Mossadeq warned the Iran parliament that world peace was threatened by the World Court's decision on the oil crisis. He also said losses in revenue because of the crisis had left Iran in "a critical state of inflation" and demanded passage of three finance bills to meet the emergency.

Mossadeq had rejected earlier the court ruling that the now-nationalized Anglo-Iranian Oil Co. should continue to operate the Iranian fields and the Abada refinery—the world's biggest—under a five-man Anglo-Iranian board charged with working out a program for future operation.

Health Service Reports Polio Rise

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A 10 per cent increase in the number of polio cases last week was reported today by the Public Health Service.

New cases totaled 467 compared with 231 for the preceding week. For the corresponding week a year ago, 478 cases were reported. "No section of the country showed a marked increase during the week," the service said.

"In fact, three sections—New England, South Atlantic and Pacific Regions—reported fewer cases." The cumulative total since the seasonal low week this year is 2,026, compared with 2,525 for the corresponding period last year.

Apartment Causes Disturbance

CHICAGO—(AP)—Police remained on duty all night near an apartment building in suburban Cicero after a disturbance last night as a negro family prepared to occupy one apartment.

But the negro bus driver who rented the apartment told Cicero police he would not move his family into the apartment. His message was broadcast by police to a crowd of some 3,000 which milled around the area of the three-story building at 6139 West 19th Street.

Grant Additional New Buildings At East Carolina

East Carolina College has received approval from the United States Office of Education of the Federal Security Administration to build a home management house to be used by the home economics department and an addition to Ragsdale Hall, dormitory on the east campus, according to F. D. Duncan, college business manager.

Plans for the two projects have been drawn by James W. Griffith, Greenville architect. Arrangements preliminary to the beginning of construction work are now being made.

Contracts for the new home management house are now being signed, Mr. Duncan states. It is expected that within the next several weeks construction will begin. Bids for the addition to Ragsdale Hall will be received within the next 45 days, Mr. Duncan has announced. It is hoped, he says, that construction will begin immediately after bids have been accepted.

The new home management house will be located on the west campus in the wooded space back of Wilson Hall, student dormitory. The building will front eastward and will face the new dormitory-apartment residence for teachers now under construction. The home management house will be a two-story brick structure harmonizing in design with the new building for teachers.

The addition to the facilities of the college home economics department will be used to train students in the arts of homemaking. Accommodations will provide two units in which groups of students will live each quarter while learning by practical experience how a home should be managed. Instruction and practice include the care of the house, its furnishings, and equipment; making a family budget; the use of household equipment; meal planning, marketing, and food preparation; and entertainment of guests in the home.

One unit of the home management house will provide the accommodations of a home of moderate size, and will include a living room, a dining room, a kitchen, and a breakfast room on the first floor and four bedrooms and two baths on the second floor. The other unit, providing such facilities as a refrigerator, a small home or apartment, will be made up of a living room, a kitchen, two bedrooms, and a bath, all located on the first floor. These units, in which home economics majors will receive training, will offer practical experience in managing households for families with different incomes. One bedroom and an office will be used by the teacher in charge.

The addition to Ragsdale Hall will be a wing added at the rear of the building on the east side. It will match in design the existing west wing of the building and will be separated from it by an outdoor court and garden spot.

The new wing will include thirty rooms and provide space for sixty women students. The roof of red tile will match that on the central structure and the west wing of the present building. Floors in the addition will be covered with asphalt tile, and each room will be equipped with a lavatory.

Ragsdale Hall was built as a dormitory for teachers and has been used by women members of the faculty since its completion. When the new apartment-dormitory for teachers is completed, Ragsdale Hall will be used as a dormitory for women students.

Mr. Duncan reports progress in construction work on the new building for teachers, which was begun in the spring of this year. Tunnels for heating, light, and power equipment have been laid. The foundation of the structure has been built, concrete for the first floor has been poured, and brick work on the first-floor level is now in progress.

Adjutant General Asks Retirement

WINSTON-SALEM—(AP)—J. Van B. Metts will request that he be relieved of the duties as Adjutant General of North Carolina effective July 31. He is a Major General.

The Twin-City sentinel said today that the information was contained in a memorandum dated yesterday and sent to officers of the National Guard through the state.

General Metts' decision was said to be dictated by the facts that he already is past the age of retirement and has served 31 years in the North Carolina National Guard.

Red Korean . . .

(Continued From Page One) proceeded but the correspondents must turn back or remain here if they so desire—pending word from Kaesong that an agreement has been reached between our superior officers and theirs."

I asked the Korean through an interpreter to identify himself. The Korean said he was under instructions not to give his name or any information whatever except that the correspondents were not to pass press train at 7:27 a.m. for Kaesong. Shortly after Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway spoke to the reporters on the Kaesong road some miles from the base camp. He told the correspondents then:

"No serious friction has as yet developed during the talks but it is of course too early yet for positive statements."

Forty minutes later, the convoy struck the road block.

Demand Rising . . .

(Continued From Page One) brought into Pitt to help out. One farmer, Dillingham said, had acquired 17 Georgia hands but could use 30. However, he had to transport them up here and has to house and feed them during the season.

Concerning the rising price of getting the crop into the barns, more than one man has had an early-morning truck load of workers stolen from him when they were offered more money.

One report has it that a man stopped to get a cup of coffee because weaving was so important to Great Britain that Edward III in about 1350 ordered the Lord Chancellor to "sit on a wool sack" as a reminder, a custom which prevails to this day.
