House Economic Controls Bill Tougher Than Expected

Legislation Still Falls Short Of Administration Demands; Measure Labeled An Invitation To Black Marketing And Cost Consumers Millions

WASHINGTON (UP)—The House passed a price and wage control bill today that was tougher than administration leaders had expected, but which fell short of President Truman's demands.

The House passed its price and wage control measure at 12:10 a. m. (EST) after a marathon session lasting more than 14 hours.

In the final round of voting, the Republican-South Democrat coalition fell apart somewhat after having lost things its own way for several days.

Economic Stabilizer Eric A. Johnston said he hoped a Senate-House conference committee would "repair the damage and provide the economic weapons to battle inflation."

With the present controls law scheduled to expire on July 31, the conference committee will have to work next week in an effort to reach speedy agreement on the many differences in the Senate and House bills.

The Senate bill provides, among other things, for controls to be continued through February 1952; the House would continue them through June 1952.

During the final hours of voting there were 14 roll calls—the House finally needed administration votes to knock out of the bill some amendments which Democratic leaders argued would result in higher prices for food and scores of other items.

The amendments previously had been approved on a tentative basis. But these administration victories largely were offset by losses on other controversial amendments.

For example, the House, like the Senate, refused to permit any further rollbacks in beef prices, although the 10 per cent rollback already in effect will be allowed to stand.

Similarly, both House and Senate refused to give Price Stabilizer Michael V. Disalle authority to set monthly quotas on slaughtering of meat animals.

Disalle maintained that he had to have this power to keep meat out of the black market and in legitimate channels.

Here is a thumbnail summary of the key provisions in the Senate and House bills:

N.C. Lawmakers' Voting Records On Controls Bill

WASHINGTON (AP)—The following composite roll-call shows how N.C. House members voted on major amendments to and passage of the Economic Controls Bill.

The numbers at the head of each column represent the following issues:

1. A two-year ban on imports of fats, oils, peanuts, butter, cheese and other dairy products in competition with domestic products.

2. A ban on livestock slaughtering quotas.

3. A ban against the President acquiring and operating defense plants.

4. A limitation on price rollbacks of farm commodities, including beef, to 10 percent of the May 19 price level.

5. A ban against a requirement that price ceilings reflect a profit to processors on all types of animals processed.

6. A freeze of wage and price ceilings at July 7 levels for the next 120 days.

7. A requirement that price ceilings on all goods must reflect a "reasonable profit" based on 1946-49 profits.

8. Passage of the bill.

The symbols used in the roll-call are: Y for a yes vote; N for a no vote; PF for paired for; PN for paired against, and dashes for those not recorded.

Battered Levees Still Crumple To Flood Pressure

CREST SWEEPS DOWN ON ST. LOUIS METROPOLITAN AREA; CITIZENS FIGHT ON

ST. LOUIS (UP)—The Mississippi River flood crest battered through levees in northern St. Louis County today and swept down on this metropolitan area of 1,700,000 persons.

Swollen by the flood waters of the Missouri, the crest was expected to reach 40.5 feet here late today—the highest since 1944.

Sewage covered streets in the waterfront section eight inches deep, and Mayor Joseph M. Darst warned of possible contamination to drinking water.

The St. Louis Flood Assn. said that damage here may exceed the $9,000,000 mark in the floods of 1947. Damage already has passed $2,000,000, the association said.

The flood has covered 2,000,000 acres of land and driven 518,000 persons from their homes in Kansas and Missouri according to the chief of Army engineers, Maj. Gen. Lewis A. Pick.

A 5,000-acre tract at the triangular junction of the Missouri and Mississippi Rivers just north of here is completely under water.

"It looks like a muddy lake flowing along," a Red Cross worker said.

Water from the worst flood in a century poured over the Broadway levee despite the efforts of men, women and children to bolster it, and swept 10 feet deep into West Alton, Mo.

More than 200 residents of the community stubbornly refused to leave their homes and moved into the upper floors to escape the water.

Army engineers appealed for volunteers to join soldiers sandbagging the Chouteau-Nameeki-Venice levee protecting 3,000 acres of farmland on the Illinois side of the Mississippi.

They were doubtful that their efforts would strengthen it enough to keep the water out.

Britain Tightens Security Curtain

LONDON (UP)—A Foreign Office official has been suspended on security grounds and a British atomic scientist has been refused permission to make a "friendship" visit to Moscow.

Precautions have been taken to prevent either man from leaving the country.

A Foreign Office official today that one of its officials had been suspended and that the scientist had been forbidden to leave for Moscow said neither could be identified at the moment.

The identity of the diplomat was a mystery.

But there seemed no doubt that the scientist is Dr. E.H.S. Burhop lecturer in atomic science at the University of London.

A Foreign Office spokesman insisted there was no connection between the suspension of the diplomat and the refusal to let the scientist out of the country.

Nor was there any connection, he said, with the still mysterious disappearance two months ago—possibly behind the iron curtain—of British diplomats Donald D. MacLean and Guy Burgess.

Dr. Burhop was one of a group of 20 Britons who were scheduled to leave London by plane today for a "friendship" visit to Moscow under auspices of the "Anglo-Soviet Friendship Society."

Reds Given 4-Day Recess To Study Allied Ultimatum

Groundwork Laid For Starting On Swimming Pools

Will Be Built In Most Populated Areas; Action Up To Aldermen

The Planning Board and the Recreation Commission yesterday started the ball rolling toward construction of a white and a Negro swimming pool, both to be located in the most populated areas of the city.

At a joint meeting in the afternoon, both bodies approved a recommendation from E. R. Martin, city planner and recreation consultant, for the location of the pools and passed the issue to the board of aldermen for further action.

The white pool would be located in the vicinity of the Little League ball park and the Negro pool would be built in the vicinity of the new Negro grammar school. Both locations are calculated to be in the most thickly populated sections of white and Negro residential districts.

If the aldermen approve the recommendations from the planning and recreation groups, it will mark the first time Greenville has ever had a swimming pool for Negro patrons. Also, approval will eliminate the present downtown white poolists from further planning as a swimming area.

Actually, Martin proposed that the city construct two white pools, the second one to be located in the western part of the city. However, no action was taken along that line, due primarily to the fact that development of population growth is toward the east.

It was understood that if the second white pool is built, it will depend in a large manner on how much residential development there will be in the neighborhood of Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Location of the actual pool sites in the two recommended sections will be left up to the engineers if and when the aldermen approve the issue.

Planes Again Hit Gathering Reds

Airmen Dare Blinding Rains To Carry Main UN Punch

8TH ARMY HQ, Korea (UP)—U.S. warplanes dared the blinding rain of Korea Saturday to smash at Red troops concentrated across the front for a feared summer offensive.

Radar and ground-control kept the 8th Air Force bombers and fighters on the beam for 120 sorties during the day, at Communist troops at the front and airfields to the rear. The air strikes kept up until darkness combined with the rain and thick fog to make flying impossible.

Prayers At Tobacco Auction

Unidentified farm women pray for high prices just a few minutes before tobacco auctions opened in a warehouse at Valdosta, Ga. They are the usual hustle and bustle that go with the opening of the markets. The ladies' prayers were not in vain. Opening-day prices throughout the Georgia-Florida belt averaged $3 to $5 per hundred above last year's opening-day average of $51.37 per hundred. (AP Photo).

Regional Planning Talk Brings Follow-Up Moves

GREENVILLE C-OF-C TO APPOINT STEERING COMMITTEE TO GET PROGRAM UNDERWAY; SEVEN MUNICIPALITIES REPRESENTED

By JOHN D. SPINKS, JR. Representatives from seven eastern North Carolina municipalities, meeting here last night to discuss regional planning, passed the bill to the Greenville Chamber of Commerce to appoint a steering committee in order to get the proposed program underway.

Meeting in informal session at the city hall last night were chamber of commerce managers, city planners, aldermen, city managers and editors from Greenville, Rocky Mount, Washington, Farmville, Tarboro, Kinston and Grifton.

Approximately 30 persons from those towns heard Eugene R. Martin, an Atlanta, Ga., city planning consultant and architect, lay down a program which can feasibly be followed in establishing a regional plan of community cooperation.

The meeting was called by the Greenville Chamber of Commerce in response of discussing other municipalities' ideas concerning how best the section of the state can profit from the multi-million dollar defense and industrial spending in this area.

No action as to the formal of steering committee was taken last night. However, by a unanimous vote of the persons at the meeting, Greenville Chamber president V. Badger Johnson was authorized to make committee assignments in the near future. It was understood that members of the committee would come from all towns and cities affected by the governmental and industrial spending.

Martin cited several examples of such a program as it is being carried out in other sections of the country. Foremost one in the South is the Western Carolina Council, located in South Carolina in the vicinity of the Savannah River Atomic Energy Project at Aiken, S. C. Eight counties in that section, he said, joined together recently to map out plans by which all phases of their development could be enhanced by the defense spending.

Communist 'Price For Peace' Rejected By UN Negotiators

Enemy Apparently To Seek Advice From Peiping And Moscow Before Giving Answer That May Break Off Cease-Fire Talks

PEACE CAMP, Korea (UP)—The United Nations gave a final "no" Saturday to Communist demands for withdrawal of foreign troops as a price for peace in Korea and the Reds were granted a four-day recess to study the ultimatum.

It seemed obvious the Reds would seek even money from Peiping and possibly Moscow before giving the answer that may break off cease-fire talks and plunge the Korean war into the bloody combat of new offensives.

The U.N. agreed to the recess until Wednesday after Allied chief delegate Vice Adm. C. Turner Joy put the issue squarely to the Reds and told them "with an air of finality" that the agenda items already approved should be accepted if the conference can get on with the job of ending the war.

United Press Vice President Frank H. Bartholomew reported from Kaesong: "The correspondents were waging even money that there would be no more cease-fire sessions in Kaesong."

Bartholomew said the feeling there was that the high commands of both sides might handle matters directly "unless the Communists decided to recede from their stated positions."

But, he reported, a Communist news agency representative said the Chinese negotiators were adamant in their demand for withdrawal of foreign troops as a condition for peace.

Informed sources in Washington predicted that the Korean talks will get "back on the track" after the Reds consult the "masterminds in the Kremlin." Officials said they were not alarmed by the Red move for a postponement and one said the foreign troops issue would be broken.

The showdown meeting ended after 1 hour and 11 minutes of talk which grew so loud the delegates could be heard by newsmen 25 feet away.

The Communist team led by North Korean Gen. Nam Il, who showed strain and nervousness while the Chinese delegates took a leading role in the talks for the first time, appeared to leave for Pyongyang, the North Korean capital.

A U.N. spokesman, Brig. Gen. William Nuckols, said there was "some" progress made Saturday and Nuckols said that Nam Il used a "more reasonable" tone in the discussion. He warned, however,

New Carolina Warehouse Site For Farmers' Day Festivities

Further plans for Farmers Day, to be held here August 15, developed rapidly this week when the warehouse where the event will be held was named.

New Carolina Warehouse, located on Dickinson Avenue about one mile from Five Points will be the site for the 1951 event, general chairman Allan Powell, Jr., announced. Warehouse owner Floyd McGowan has allowed the use of the house which will allow several thousand square feet more of floor space than last year's event.

Also, a radio show, conducted by Fred Fletcher of the Tobacco Network, has been scheduled for mid-morning in downtown section. Fletcher, who did much toward bringing in the crowd early last year, will be back with a new show. Called "Tuning In With Fletcher," the Raleigh radio station manager will set up his variety performance on Evans Street in the vicinity of Five Points.

According to Powell, Fletcher's show will begin the Farmers Day program and it is hoped that the downtown, open-air event will serve to bring the rural people into town early in the morning.

Naming of the warehouse was withheld to this date due to the late scheduling of the radio show. Powell said. Also several warehouse sites had to be considered due to the necessity of plenty of room coupled with enough parking space to make its location feasible.

Meanwhile, exhibits space in the warehouse is about 80 per cent taken with more than $2,000 contributed by merchants, for either booths or through goodwill contributions. At the present 20 booths have been subscribed and the merchants will begin setting up their products in them August 14th before the beauty contest and dance.

This year for the first time a booth will be operated for the sale of cold drinks and sandwiches. It will be open all day and will be operated by the county Recreation Commission, proceeds to go into the Commission's treasury. All drinks and sandwiches will be sold at cost, it was learned.

The booths are being decorated by professional men, both of whom are connected with the management of Escape Hotel, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., site of the beauty queen's week-long stay as first prize. Jack Finch and Joe LeMayne, decorators, will be on the job in the warehouse at any time to help the merchants get their booths in order.

At the present time they are in the process of constructing the booths in preparation for the merchants' moving in.

Loan Is Granted To Franco Spain

WASHINGTON (UP)—A loan of $7,500,000 by the Export-Import Bank to Spain's national railroad boosted that country's credit to more than $30,000,000 today—but none of the money has been touched.

Announcement of the railroad loan—seventh loan in a series since Feb. 13—was made by the bank yesterday. Although the money may be drawn as soon as Spain contracts for the purchase of goods covered by the loans, all of it still is in the bank.

The Foreign Office said its diplomat was suspended "as a result of certain inquiries."

There were unconfirmed reports that the scientist worked in the United States at one time and had special knowledge of a method of separating uranium 235 from commercial material.

Merchandising Termed Solid Investment If Groundwork Good

By ROGEE BABSON NEW BOSTON, N. H.—I have invested the bulk of my savings in the stocks of merchandising companies. This probably is because of the advice of my good father who owned the leading "dry goods and variety store" in Gloucester, Massachusetts.

My Father's Advice "Don't be a manufacturer and be dependent upon one location and one product with accompanying labor troubles. Don't be content to be always working for others. Start out by being a salesman of investments insurance or merchandise with the ultimate goal of having a business of your own. In other words, be a middleman or shopkeeper, free to grow and to serve."

The above was my father's advice and he would sometimes add, "The live merchant who cleans each year and puts half his profits back into the business can't help but succeed. But remember, Roger, that the best floor covering is the footprints of the owner!"

What About Merchandise Investments? First, I would advise a young man to have a store in a small city. Likewise, I advise investors to put their money into helping to build up a local independent store, rather than in the stock of any big department store of some large city. If you can't invest money in such a local store, then buy stock of one of the good chain stores operating in your town. It may be one of the grocery chains like the A. P. or one of the variety stores like Penney, Woolworth, Kresge, Grant, McCrory, McLellan, Newberry, Murphy or Green—although some of these stocks seem pretty high priced to buy now.

Large department stores have prospered the past few years through the sale of furniture, electric refrigerators, television sets and other household goods which are not carried by the variety stores. When, however, hard times or a crop failure come, department store sales fall off sharply; while the variety store sales often increase. Besides, having stores in many different states, as do the chains, gives the advantage of diversification both of merchandise and locality. Most such chains have excellent management and no debt. The stock of all are listed on a Stock Exchange; if you buy into one which has a store in your own community, you can keep an eye on what it is doing.

What About Inflation? Dollars may decline in purchasing power until they reach 25 cents. If World War III should come, dollars could go even lower. Hence, it is common sense to have your money in good merchandise rather than in cash or government bonds. But, insist upon investing in those stores with an annual turnover of four to seven times a year, and which charge off to zero every article held more than one year.

The live merchant—chain or independent—has nothing to fear if he follows the above rules, using his profits to improve his store and buying only quick-selling goods. Or, he can use his profits to open another store in an adjoining community, putting in charge there of the best clerk in his present local store. This not only makes a success of the new branch, but also serves as an incentive to all employees. Such a policy will soon make you a chain owner.

A Word To Children Let me add a word of advice to young people—boys and girls—merchandise rather than in cash or government bonds. But, insist upon investing in those stores with an annual turnover of four to seven times a year, and which charge off to zero every article held more than one year.

No 'Espionage' Evidence Seen In Oatis Trial Record

WASHINGTON (AP)—The full record of the trial and conviction of Associated Press correspondent William N. Oatis in Communist Czechoslovakia has been received by the State Department from American ambassador Elsie O. Briggs in Prague.

Department officials said today that it showed no evidence of what any government in the world outside the Iron Curtain would call espionage. Oatis, who was arrested April 23, was sentenced July 4 to 10 years imprisonment on a charge of spying.

The Oatis case is unique among trials of foreigners in the Communist countries, Department experts said, because the record shows so clearly that the defendant was judged guilty of doing well the job which he had been officially admitted to the country to do.

Throughout the bulky transcript of the testimony the Communist prosecutor treats routine news inquiries from Associated Press offices in New York and London as "instructions" for espionage. Oatis is "used as the head" of an espionage network. His news reports, though published for the world to read, are referred to as if they were secret dispatches to a hostile government.

Indict 12 Mississippians For 'Selling' Federal Jobs

JACKSON, Miss. (UP)—A special federal grand jury report disclosed "job-selling" indictments today against 12 pro-Truman Democrats in Mississippi, including state leaders who handled patronage during the 1948 State Rights revolt.

None of the 12 has been arrested but three have made bond and the other nine are expected to do so by Monday. They must appear before the U.S. commissioner in their home districts to arrange bail.

Most of the 12 are named in the alleged conspiracy to make cash a requirement for a federal appointment also figured in the earlier Senate sub-committee investigation which laid the groundwork for the grand jury inquiry.

They included Frank Mize, chairman of the state Democratic executive committee, and former national committeeman Clarence E. Hood. Federal Judge Sidney Mize, Mize's brother, normally would have presided over the grand jury investigation. But he excused himself.

The special 22-man jury has been at work on the case since July 9. It adj. on Wednesday after hearing 17 witnesses and its findings were made public late yesterday.

U.S. District Attorney Joseph Brown said the indicted men will be arraigned Sept. 5 at the next federal term of the Southern Mississippi district federal court. It is normal procedure in the state to hold up such arrangements for regular court terms.

In addition to the conspiracy charges, the 34-count indictment cited five of the group for perjury in connection with testimony at Senate hearings in Jackson and Washington under subcommittee chairman Clyde R. Hoey (D-NC). Sen. Karl Mundt (R-SD), a member, said the group had uncovered "vicious rackets."

Mississippi's Democratic senators, Job Stennis and James O. Eastland, made the job-selling charges which brought the investigating committee here. A series of committee witnesses told of "contributing" anywhere from $300 to $1,000 to the state party in return for post office jobs and for Office of Price Stabilization positions which never existed.

BURLINGTON—(AP)—Beauty went on parade in Burlington today as 25 of North Carolina's prettiest girls flashed their loveliest smiles and put their best foot forward—all with an eye to the title of Miss North Carolina of 1951.

The parade this morning was through the downtown business district, and featured, in addition to the Miss North Carolina aspirants, last year's Miss America, Yolande Betbeze of Mobile, Ala., and Carolyn Edwards of Leakeville, Miss. Miss North Carolina of 1950.

The two-day pageant began last night when half of the contestants were judged for beauty, the other half for talent.

This afternoon, those judged for talent last night were judged for beauty, and the other half judged for talent. Personality and poise also figures in the judges' final decision.

The winner of the 1951 title will be crowned tonight. Along with the title, the winner also will receive the right to represent the state in the Miss America contest at Atlantic City.

She will also be given a week's vacation in St. Petersburg, Fla. The two runnersup will receive loving cups.

The contest is sponsored each year by the North Carolina Junior Chamber of Commerce.

DuPont History Related To Club

FARMVILLE—Brent Nunnally, member of the engineering department of the DuPont Company, outlined the growth of DuPont at a meeting of the Farmville Rotary Club.

Nunnally began when the DuPont Company was first organized in 1802 up to the present. He said the purpose of the first DuPont plant, which was built on Brandywine Creek, was to produce a better grade of gun powder which now represents less than one percent of the company's business. He said the Dacron plant near Grifton will be the first one of its kind in the world.

Dr. Paul Jones, program chairman, turned the meeting over to Bobby Rouse who introduced Nunnally.

James Rouse was presented the attendance prize at the meeting in which club president Jesse Moye presided. Charlie Fitzgerald will be in charge of the program next week.

Resource-Use Studies Devoted To 3 Aspects Of Vital Subject

Members of the Resource-Use Education Workshop at East Carolina College have directed their interests during the past week especially to resource studies in agriculture, forestry, and wild life.

Studies in agricultural resources were directed by Dr. David S. Weaver, director, Cooperative Extension Service, State College, Raleigh. Dr. Weaver pointed out, graphically and statistically, agricultural potentialities of the South, and particularly of North Carolina. He showed those provinces of agriculture that are most neglected and that stand in need of the immediate attention of the educator. He stated that in North Carolina 75 per cent of the land is producing only 25 per cent of the farm income and that so much of the state's agricultural effort is devoted to growing money crops that the state is not even beginning to feed its own people.

He further pointed out that only 15 out of every 100 people in the state live on the land and that this ratio will greatly widen within the next few years. Such a trend, he said, is eminent evidence that in the future our farms will have to be turned over to the most intelligent people. The aims of resource-use education, he concluded, is to develop proper educational an intelligent and persistent group of citizens who will move rapidly in the right direction, not individually but as a group.

The entire session Wednesday was devoted to on-the-spot forestry studies. Led by Richard Morin and David Marx, Management Foresters of the N. C. State Department of Conservation and Development, and Dick Rankin, Farm Forester of the New Bern District, the workshop group spent the morning in a nearby woods studying first-hand problems of forest culture and care. The foresters urged workshop members to teach in the classroom appreciation of the tree and to emphasize the need of farming the woods.

Win Donat of the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission conducted the final studies in the out-

RALEIGH—The Eastern Carolina Office of Price Stabilization will send a team of business analysts to Rocky Mount on July 24 who will be located in the Chamber of Commerce office to explain various OPS regulations and to assist people of this area in preparing reports, R. A series of field trips to cities in eastern Carolina by OPS representatives under the auspices of chambers of commerce and merchants associations is planned as an OPS public service.

The Eastern Carolina OPS is anxious to cooperate with the people in every way. Director J. G. Clark said, "and it is our purpose to help businessmen with their reports and to explain the regulations applicable to their businesses."

The Rocky Mount visit is planned to serve people in this immediate vicinity and the following counties: Nash, Edgecombe, Pitt, Halifax and Northampton.

After the meeting supper was served by the ladies of the Presbyterian Church.

Scott Dedicates New Bern Bridge

NEW BERN—(AP)—Dedicating the new $1,260,000 Neuse River bridge here yesterday, Governor Scott repeated his belief that the "go forward" program for more and better roads, telephones and power service.

While he suggested the program for his successor, Scott had no suggestion as to who the man should be.

"There are already eight candidates in the field for my job," the Governor joshed, "and I'm hacking all of them."

The mile-long span across the Neuse will carry traffic on Highway 17 and governor should continue next year 55. It took nearly 20 months to construct and cost nearly $1,260,000.

Business and civic leaders and local officials from Craven County and surrounding areas took part in the dedication ceremonies.

THINGS TO COME
GEORGETOWN, S. C. (UP)—Low-flying planes have given residents of this area a look at what may be expected in the jet age. The backwash from the planes blew a roof off a tenant house and toppled 20 pilings for a beach house which had been set in fresh concrete.

The Girl Next Door

By Peggy Gaddis

Chapter 8
Marcia Eldon had been accepted by "dith's friends, who were the town's most representative women. Accepted politely, if not too cordially. There were reservations on both sides. Marcia accepted their hospitality politely. But after the first few occasions on which she had been—as they all knew, though no one admitted it public—on trial, the other women relaxed a little.

"The afternoon when Betsy had tried to make her peace with Peter, and had left her gift of the dog, Marcia was driving her gray coupe out toward the end of the city street. Seeing Betsy trudging along, her head down, her brown-tipped slippers scuffing miserably at the dust, Marcia slowed the car and leaped out.

"Going in, way?" she called.
Betsy flung up a startled head, and Marcia saw the glimmer of tears on her cheeks.

"I—no, thanks. I'm going home," stammered Betsy, and turned her head away.

"Then hop in and I'll drive you," invited Marcia, swinging open the door. "It's too hot to walk. Besides, I'm lonely. Be a good girl and join me in my miseries!"

Betsy lacked the strength or the composure to argue, so she climbed into the coupe and Marcia drove to the next corner and turned. Betsy sat huddled, her eyes straight ahead. Marcia glanced at her curiously.

"Want a shoulder to cry on?" she asked.
Betsy flinched, but said nothing. "It's a man, of course."

Betsy flung her companion a defiant glance, but Marcia smiled and said:
"When a pretty girl walks along the street in tears the answer is always a man."

"What's the good of being pretty when the man you ever cared about can't see you?" Betsy demanded.

"Oh, I wouldn't worry about that, chick. First thing you know, he'll snap out of it and his eyes will be as blue as—"

Betsy shivered. "He won't ever snap out of it. He's—he's blind," she whispered.

"Oh, you poor chick. I'm terribly sorry I didn't dream it could be anything like that," said Marcia gently.

Betsy was struggling with tears, and as they turned into the street

"There! You see? What you needed most of all was good food and light conversation," said Marcia, smiling.

"You're a pretty, swell person, Mrs. Eldon."

"Not Mrs. Eldon, Betsy—in heaven's name! My name is Marcia!"

"Thanks, I'll remember."

It was not until Marcia had removed the trays and Marcia was relaxed, a cigarette in her hand, that she looked at Betsy and said quietly:
"Want to talk about it? Or would you rather I just kept quiet?"

A Tribute To Our Newsboys

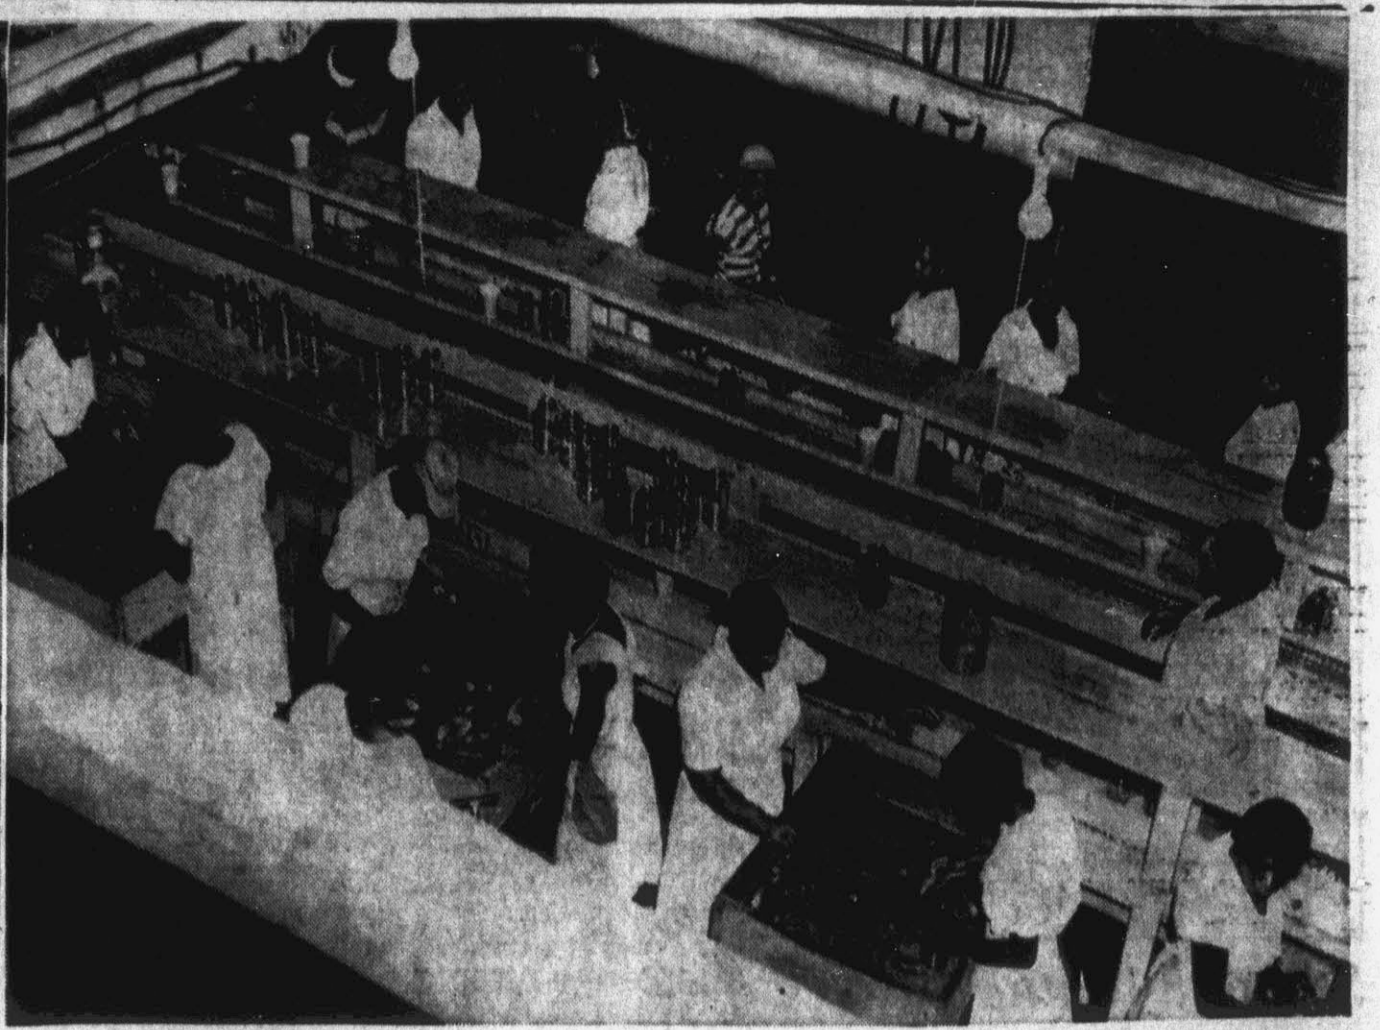

The eager-faced lad who stands on the corner in all kinds of weather selling newspapers is, in every sense of the word, an American businessman. He is up bright and early and on the job late at night. Nobody backs him with capital or confidence. He supplies all this himself... and banks solely on his own alertness and salesmanship. Your newsboy may deliver your newspaper to your door. If so, he is even a more astute businessman, for he not only throws his papers at countless front porches, but doubles back regularly to make collections. Yes, the newsboy is an American institution. Keep up the good work, youngster. We're ALL behind you!

The large vats shown above are brine containers, into which bushel after bushel of cucumbers are placed after being received at the Ayden pickling works. The tanks, having a capacity upwards of 500 bushels each, are kept full the year round. It is from these vats that the plant maintains its operating supply of cukes for its year 'round canning. To the left rear of the picture may be seen a portion of the packing building. (Reflector Staff Photos By Roy Hardee).

A view of the Demain Food Inc. plant, located in Ayden, taken from above the working area, gives an idea as to the area occupied by the plant for its operations. Workers line both sides of the assembly line belts, filling jars with cucumbers, which in turn are placed on moving belts carrying them to the next step in preparing them for shipment from the plant.

Demain Pickle Factory Is Industrial Boon To County

Corporation's Business Volume In 1950 Amounted To $650,000

By CHESTER WALSH
AYDEN—The Demain pickle factory at Ayden represents one more aspect of "big business" in Pitt County, important agriculturally and as an industrial plant. In terms of dollars, its business volume last year amounted to $650,000 in the ten southern states wherein the firm's goods are marketed.

President of the corporation is Seymour Demain; Seymour Demain is vice-president, N. H. Gottlieb, secretary and treasurer. All three officials have made their residences in Ayden.

The plant's output includes sweet, sour dill and kosher pickles; various pepper relishes and pickled onions. These products have wide distribution in the company's present marketing area.

Demain Foods, Inc., bought 115,000 bushels of cucumbers from Pitt County farmers this summer, which is a lot of cukes. Measuring it another way, a bushel of cucumbers is estimated as weighing fifty pounds; which means the factory bought 5,750,000 pounds of cucumbers from Pitt growers this summer.

The plant employs 150 workers, two-thirds of them women. The workers average from $30 minimum to $80 a week in wages for a 10-hour, five-day week, and never less than 70 workers are employed. The factory works on a year-round schedule. Plans provide for the production of 2,000 cases of pickle and relishes a day.

The plant manager, the man responsible for meeting production schedules as well as a host of other details, is Bill Griffith.

Nearly all of the plant's workers are Negroes. Their jobs are good the year 'round, and many of them have been there since the factory was established in 1946.

"Our turnover in labor is very small—about 5 per cent," said H. Gottlieb. "We are at the peak of our season now, and have plenty of workers and a waiting list of men and women. Harvesting of the tobacco crop does not take away any of our workers. They know they have steady jobs in our factory and we believe they appreciate it.

"All workers use the time clock and are paid accordingly. When they work more than 40 hours we pay them the time and a half rate. In addition, we pay worthy employees bonuses at the end of the year. To encourage pleasant relations between employer and employee we allow a short rest period in the mornings and afternoons. They are a happy and contented crew and many husbands and wives are on the payroll," the official stated.

Demain Foods, Inc., came to Ayden from Freehold, New Jersey, and established the factory in 1946. "We came to North Carolina because we believed we could obtain a better quality of cucumbers and a more efficient type of workers, and we are here to stay," Gottlieb said.

The pickle factory covers many acres on the suburbs of Ayden.

The hundred and sixty mammoth cypress and redwood brine tanks for curing cucumbers now contain about 70,000 bushels of them.

The company makes contracts with farmers in January to grow a certain acreage to cucumbers. They require them to use highly tested seed and provide seed at a reasonable cost. The State Department of Agriculture approves the contract. Farmers plant the cucumber seed from April 10 to 15, and harvesting of the crop usually starts the first week in June though the crop was late coming off this year.

Harvesting of cucumbers runs through a period of from five to six weeks, and revenue from sale of cucumbers for pickle provides farmers with ready money for years ago.

The company maintains grading stations at various places in the county and buyers are there to complete the deal. The grading machines now in use are approved by the National Pickle Packers' Association.

Big trucks bring bushel baskets of cucumbers to the factory. When they are unloaded and checked they are placed in the brine tanks, according to size, for curing. The Demain plant uses the modern packing method and pasteurizes all its products.

From the time the cucumbers are immersed in the big salt tanks until they are bottled as pickles or relish, a constant system of testing is made.

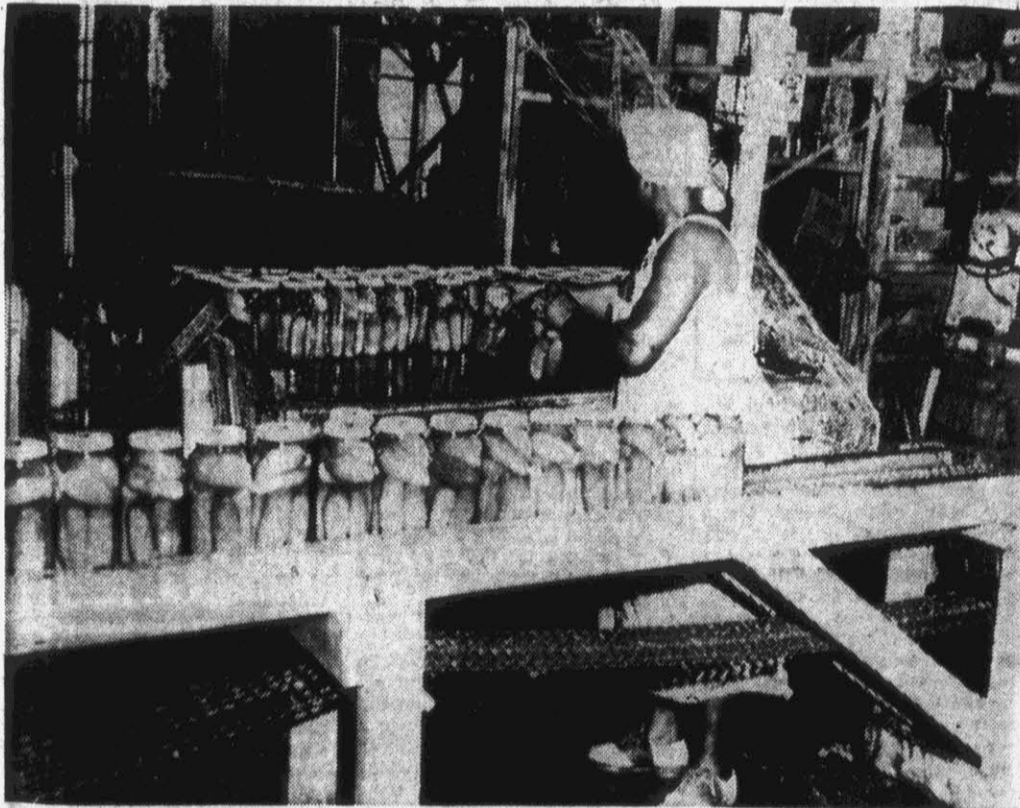

Cukes are taken from the brine as needed, and after the jars are capped they go through an automatic "cooker" and are pasteurized and cooled. The cooker and pasteurization unit was installed four years ago.

Pickle containers—pint-size to gallon glass jars—travel on an endless belt to an automatic labeling machine. From there they are packed in cases and move into the shipping room; conveyor belt then transports the cases to trucks at the loading door.

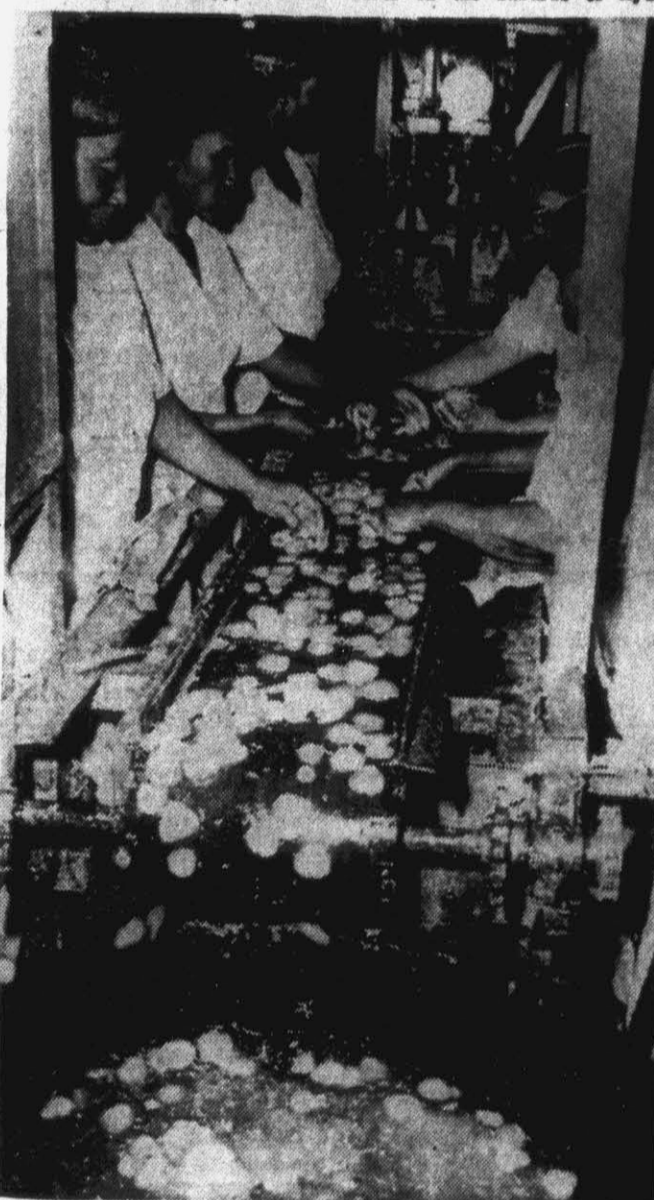

"The men and women engaged in this work are skilled and highly trained for it", a company official explained. "Many of them can fill in any position required".

Assembly lines feature the manufacture and bottling of pickles in the plant. No lost motion is discernable at any stage of the operation. Inspectors check every jar several times in the various stages of processing, and sanitary measures are closely adhered to by the handlers.

During the afternoon rest period this reporter talked with some of the Negro men and women, many of whom have worked at the plant for several years. George Carr leased his small farm to a tenant, and has been working at the pickle factory for four years. Henry and Charles Braxton, brothers, have been working at the plant for three or four years and expressed satisfaction with their jobs.

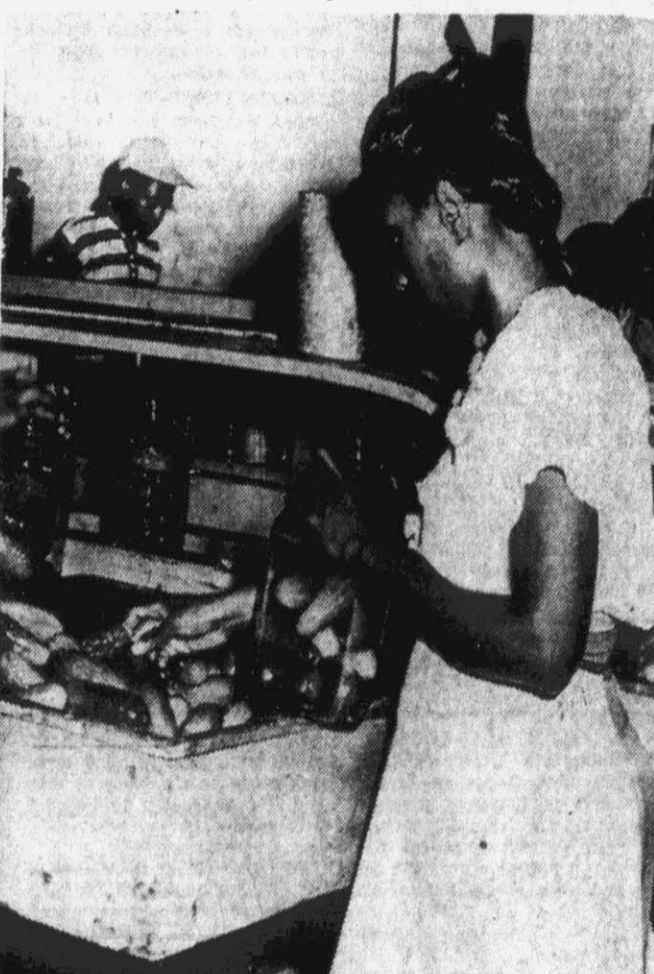

End of the line for the finished project is shown above. Here the newly canned pickles are being taken from the washing belt after they have been cooked with heat applied there upwards of 165 degrees. From here the jars are sent to the packers, who label and carton them for shipment to market.

Workers grade and inspect for defects slices of cucumbers which have just gone through the slicer. After being washed and desalted the slices are then ready to be packed.

Growing of cucumbers on a contract basis means extra cash in the pockets of many Pitt County farmers at harvest time. Cukes for operation of the Ayden plant come wholly from Pitt County farmers who bring in loads such as the one shown above Rayvon Haddock of Chapman's crossroads, unloads a portion of his father's crop, which had just been brought to market. After being received here the cucumbers are graded for size, weighed and the farmer paid.

Above, a worker packs a gallon jar with cucumbers in a short period of time, placing the filled jars on the moving belts in the rear which carries them to be filled with liquid and capped.

Negro workers start the task of emptying one of the large vats filled with brine and cucumbers as the cucumbers are needed in the packing plant. When the cucumbers are received at the plant they are graded and selected, after which they are placed in large brine vats such as the ones shown above, where they remain until they have seasoned enough to be used by the packers.

After the cucumbers have been removed from the brine vats they have to be desalted, until they have only enough brine in them to meet standards set by the company. Here a worker dumps salted-up cukes into the desalting baths.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLAS
WHENCE TRUE WISDOM?

The wise men who came out of the East were on the strangest mission man ever set out upon. Their friends must have thought them three fools.

First they were following a star, and what a crazy thing that is to do. Again they claimed that that star was leading them to a Babe. Well, if they were going to make that long journey in search of something valuable, why not hold out for something worth while? At that time there were tens of thousands of babies being born every day, just there are now; and what was one baby more or less? What foolish dreamers these men out of the East were.

Yes, but that Babe changed all the calendars in the world. He changed the course of human history. In his person was to be found all that kings and emperors had sought for in vain.

What is wisdom? It is the right use of information. It is the ability to use facts. We live in a world which has more facts at its disposal than any preceding age. But is this a wise age? Are we as wise as were three men from Persia who started out to follow a star and find a Babe?

God has strange ways of both hiding his wisdom and of revealing it. And wise indeed were the men who recognized the hand of God in the heavens and in history.

Bright Prospects For The Eastern Belt

The opening day's sales on the Georgia-Florida tobacco belt lead encouragement to the prospects for strong prices on the eastern belt when the markets open here about on August 21.

The Georgia-Florida belt was $54.11 which the eGeorgia-Florida belt was $54.11 which was an increase of $2.74 per hundred over the opening in the belt last year. In the evaluation of the price it must be considered that the opening average this year was almost $10 per hundred above the average government stabilization price for the crop.

If the same trend follows in the eastern Carolina belt, the farmers can look for an opening average somewhere near $60 per hundred since the average stabilization price for the tobacco in this belt has been set at slightly over $50.

Although the prospects at present are bright for a high price on the eastern Carolina markets this year, the farmers must remember that a lot of things can happen during the next four weeks which could seriously affect the price for tobacco.

A sudden shift in the trend of international events could vitally affect the foreign demand for U. S. leaf tobacco. If the tobacco factories become flooded with leaf from the long selling hours in the Georgia-Florida and the border belts, that could be reflected in a weak opening on the market openings in the eastern belt. Likewise, if prices continue high in Georgia, the possibility that the government may slap a ceiling price on tobacco can not be ruled out entirely.

At the outset, the prospects for a good year for the tobacco growers are excellent. We surely hope the prospects become a reality.

Some Hardships Are Unnecessary

A lot of the squalid living conditions and exorbitant rentals we read about, that are imposed on servicemen living near their training camps, could be avoided by a little common sense.

The subject has been gone into by congressional committees during World War II and the present mobilization period; expensive remedies, much eyebrow-raising and shocked opinions have resulted, but no "cure" effected.

Natural sympathies lie with the men who have been called into service and brought their families with them. They pay heavily in terms of money, unhealthy housing and discomfort for the satisfaction they find in having their loved ones with them.

And the hardships involved are not the serviceman's alone; his wife and children share them with the consequent strains upon their health and family ties.

How much better it would be, if men called into uniform left their loved ones in their own homes or apartments where living costs are cheaper and the living quarters are more suited to their needs! Love may be blind, but on occasion it certainly appears extremely shortsighted.

A Stern Warning For Compliance

The first two North Carolina enterprises have been called on the carpet by the Office of Price Stabilization for failure to comply with the OPS regulations.

A court order has closed a restaurant in Greensboro and another in Thomasville for failure to comply with the controls regulations the OPS has set up.

The court action by the OPS office is an indication that the controls officials, in North Carolina at least, are earnest in their efforts to bring compliance with the controls.

The action in closing the restaurants will not only serve to bring cooperation from the two concerns against which the action was taken, but it likewise is a stern warning to other enterprises of the state to comply with the regulations.

Every Saturday this veteran newspaper correspondent at Washington devotes his column to answering readers' questions of general interest on national and international policies and personalities. Questions may be sent direct to Ray Tucker at 6308 Millicent Place, Chevy Chase, Md.

WASHINGTON—"Why does a Senate committee continue to drag out the so-called Kefauver crime investigation?" asks Mrs. S. J. of Bridgeport, Conn. "I am afraid it may become a dull anti-climax that will destroy the benefit of the televised expose of political crooks and their official friends. Incidentally, what has this inquiry accomplished in tightening the laws against organized crime?"

Answer: The O'Connor rerun of the crime picture may yet surprise us, for the Kefauver group could have established more definite links between the politicians and the criminals in many states and cities.

So far, however, the revival has been about as important, interesting and productive as most revivals. It's hard to obtain witnesses as picturesque as Virginia Hill and Mayor O'Dwyer every day.

PUBLICITY—The general impression here is that Senator O'Connor of Maryland seeks publicity that will insure his reelection in 1952. By replacing veteran Senator Tydings with a Republican and electing a Republican Governor last November, my state of Maryland may be classed as doubtful. If 1952, when Mr. O'Connor must run again, shows an anti-Democratic trend, he may become only a one-term member of the Senate.

Moreover, other members of the committee—Messrs. Tobey, Hunt and Wiley—got a hot taste of newspaper, magazine and television publicity, and they enjoy it. Like movie stars, politicians are saps for photographs and headlines.

So far the only concrete result has been enactment of a bill banning shipment of slot machines in interstate commerce. Neither the White House nor the Department of Justice seem too concerned over the general problem of crime. In fact, Congress is equally indifferent.

DIFFERENT—"When Theodore Roosevelt was President," observes S.H.D. of Lansing, Mich., "the mock trial of William Oatis and Robert Vogeler, as well as their imprisonment on phony charges, would not have taken place. The rights of a U.S. citizen would have been protected in any foreign country. What has caused the change?"

Answer: The answer to this question is not so simple as it seems. I agree that Mr. Oatis and Mr. Vogeler were indicted and convicted on trumped-up charges. It is natural for us to insist, as Theodore Roosevelt did when a Moroccan bandit named Raisuli kidnapped a naturalized American named Perdicaris that Washington demand immediate release under penalty of military action.

But world conditions today are quite different from what they were in Theodore Roosevelt's time. We procured Mr. Vogeler's release by giving extraordinary concessions to Hungary. We may have to resort to the same strategy on behalf of Mr. Oatis.

UNPREPARED—"For us to threaten or bluster or to take military action might precipitate World War III, and without doing any good for the immediate victims."

It could mean the loss of millions of lives to save one from prison. And we are told every day by President Truman, Secretary Acheson and Defense Secretary Marshall that we must suffer these insults because we are utterly unprepared to back up our threats in the only language Stalin understands.

As Washington realizes, the Communists aim to cheapen and humiliate us around the globe. The Vogeler and Oatis affairs, the Iranian seizure of British oil, and forcing us to negotiate at Kaesong instead of on a neutral Danish hospital ship, are all designed to make a monkey out of Uncle Sam in the eyes of a world audience.

But this poker game of prestige isn't finished yet. And Uncle Sam has usually wound up with a winning hand. Don't sell him short!

SHOCK—"How many civilians," asks F.H.D. of Cullen, La., "are there in total government service? And what is the approximate pay roll of these employees?"

Answer: The latest figure, which is as of May 31, is approximately 2,400,000 federal civilian workers. But additions amount to more than 1,000 daily, which has inspired a movement in Congress to impose a ceiling of 3,000,000.

The present pay roll, May figures, is about $8,500,000,000. It seems to be heading toward an all-time record of $10,000,000,000. These totals, of course, do not take into account the several millions working for counties, cities, states and other governmental units.

Congressional shock over this situation has sparked a demand for personnel cuts. However, I am skeptical over the success of this movement. For the first and fundamental law of government, no matter which party is in power, is to grow and grow.

TIP-OFF—"Who is financing Tom Dewey's Far Eastern trip?" inquires M.S. of Brooklyn, N.Y.

Answer: A weekly magazine for which he will write a series of articles on his return. Incidentally, although it may have no political significance, several of the editors of this publication are good Democrats. This has strengthened the suspicion that the New York Governor may be prepping himself for a possible appointment as Secretary of State under Truman, when Dean Acheson steps out next fall. The slant which Mr. Dewey takes in his articles—pro or anti-Administration—may be a tip-off.

SOMERSET, PA., DAILY AMERICAN: "Indeed, the time has come when to avert the inevitable conclusion of the policy that has been pursued in Federal and state matters since the late Harry Hopkins set forth the slogan, 'Tax and tax, to spend and spend, to elect and elect,' the people must stop the wild government spending."

"The prospective rise in prices indicates that the country is confronted with the problem of keeping the inequities of inflation to a minimum."—Sumner H. Slichter, Professor of economics, Harvard University.

MAIN ISSUE OVERLOOKED—Williamston Enterprise: Republican Governor Luther Youngdahl of Minnesota has been named to the federal bench.

Almost endless comment has followed in papers across the nation and back again, but in few of them were the qualifications of the man for the judgeship even mentioned.

Possibly it is to be assumed that the vote-getting Republican is an able jurist, but the appointment was not discussed from the point of ability. The political angle was exploited to the most minute detail.

STRANGELY QUALIFIED (Washington Daily News): It is so seldom that when a man is offered a position and says "I don't think I am qualified," that such a statement is refreshing.

That very humility tends in a certain sense to make the man strangely qualified for the position which has been offered him. It is with this thought in mind that we think of Walter Anderson who leaves to State Bureau of Investigation to accept appointment as head of the North Carolina Prisons system.

Mr. Anderson succeeds John Gold who resigned to become city manager of Winston-Salem.

Often a man receiving an appointment thinks only of the job and what it means. He doesn't always think about his own qualification. Mr. Anderson has proved his self a capable man with the FBI. There is every reason to believe he will acquit himself well in his new position.

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

The more we know about Joe Stalin, the more alarming the world situation seems. Yesterday I saw a speech that Joe made some time ago that clearly states what he has in mind. On this occasion Joe was talking about our Marshall Plan.

"You must understand," he said, "what the Americans intend with this Marshall plan. The Americans are determined not to allow the Western European powers to become mortally weakened. They are determined, on the contrary, to renew the strength of the European powers. This is for several reasons.

"First, the Americans wish to strengthen and re-enforce their own economic structure. The American ruling groups know as well as we do that they 'cannot avoid a terrible depression. Yet they wish to postpone this collapse by all possible means. One method is to send their surplus goods to Europe. Thus, for Czechoslovakia to accept these goods from the United States would be to help to postpone the inevitable economic collapse of the United States. This is not in the interests of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics nor of the allies of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

"A second aim of the Americans in putting forward the Marshall Plan, is to insure their economic and political domination over Western Europe." It is the American intention, he continued, to create "positions of power," (a phrase that he used repeatedly) in Europe and Asia.

"The achievement of these aims by the Americans, would of course harm the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and would therefore harm the allies of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. Our first task must be to tear down the power positions of the United States in both Europe and Asia. Once this is done, England and France will be too weak to resist the pressure."

"We must do everything possible to accomplish this aim," Stalin said, but he emphasized that the process must be a gradual one. "No steps must be taken so important and so far-reaching in their consequences as to arouse public opinion in the United States as did Pearl Harbor."

From the sound of those statements by Stalin, it must be clear to him, and other men in the Kremlin, that their aims cannot be reached without world war. Is Stalin willing to pay this price? That, my friends, is the question we have to face. If he can get what he wants without it, the natural answer would be no. But you and I know that he'll never get it.

And I thank you.

RAPID CITY, S. D. —(AP)—Snakes and people are like most relatives. They have a lot in common—but they often don't get along well together.

Earl Brockelsby, a 35-year-old war veteran, has found, however, that people are still more eager to see snakes than snakes are to see people.

And he has made a profitable career of introducing them to each other. Here on the edge of the Black Hills where dinosaurs used to roam through petrified forests and hot dog stands he has built the largest collection of reptiles in America.

"People have a natural interest in reptiles," he said. "Even those most terrified of them like the thrill of seeing them."

He started his Black Hills reptile gardens in 1936 with 400 'snakes' to him by a reluctant banker.

(Editors note: in 1936 all bankers were reluctant.)

With the 400 he managed to gather 100 snakes. He went out into the hills and caught most of them himself. He put them in a hut so small that even today it wouldn't sell for more than $10,000 if we were next to an army camp. He uses it now as a kitchen.

Brockelsby didn't nick anybody. Only 4,000 people stopped that first year to see his snakes. But in this world a smart man can parlay anything. Earl did it with snakes. Year after year he added more reptiles. He advertised. He began selling souvenirs.

The war slowed him somewhat. He spent nearly three years in the Army, mostly overseas. But last year 200,000 people paid their way into his snake gardens.

And today? Earl tells his story slowly and chooses his words, because he feels he doesn't need to brag.

"We have 1,300 reptiles, more than any public or private zoo in this country," he said. "And we have the largest souvenir store in America."

It stocks of items ranging from Japanese-made ash trays to home-manufactured gold earrings, Canadian moccasins, and scarfs from Brooklyn.

Earl, a tall, slim man who likes to drink the knowledge of living, collected snakes as a kid for fun, studied geology because of his thirst for knowing, and once thought he would spend his life in the scientific study of hypnosis.

He has turned what he knows of hypnosis to practical ends—the selling of snakes and souvenirs.

The 400 hut he started with 15 years ago is now an 11-acre estate of several buildings with a capital value of at least $200,000. And it grosses roughly about a quarter of a million dollars a year. He manufactures and ships souvenirs of the Black Hills and South Dakota, bad lands to at least 20 states. He has about 35 employees and the sales girls in this store are among the highest paid in the land.

Around Capitol Square

Raleigh, N. C. By LYNN NISBET Daily Reflector Bureau

TOBACCO — Forty years ago tobacco did not represent as large a part of North Carolina's agricultural economy as it does now, but even then it was recognized as important enough to justify expanding research work. So a branch experiment station was established at Oxford, which has been operated since 1912 as one of the state's important test farms. Needs for further research grew and other stations have been established in Columbia, Forsyth, Pitt and Wake counties. In recent years Duke University has moved into experiments with Turkish type tobacco in connection with state and private farms. Burley tobacco gets attention at the state farms in Ashe and Haywood counties. But for the overall tobacco research program, major field experiments are conducted at the farm near Oxford—while most of the technical laboratory work is done at central experiment station on the State College campus at Raleigh.

FACILITIES—Physical facilities at the Oxford farm are considered reasonably adequate for the job. These facilities include 330 acres of land, about half of which is used for plot and field tests of tobacco, including processes. There are nine acres of "common" tobacco for experiments in curing processes. There are nine dwelling houses for working personnel and thirty-odd other buildings for the multi-varied operations incident to growing, cultivating, harvesting and marketing of fine-cured tobacco. Centerpiece of the structures is the commodious brick office and laboratory building erected by the federal government in 1939 and not counted in the state inventory which two years ago listed value of the farm at $128,379.

INVENTORY—That inventory was based on cost at time of acquisition of building. Conservative estimate of present value range above a quarter million dollars. The annual operating budget of $42,000 reported by the state department of agriculture does not include anything for salaries of specialists, experts and technicians from State College and Washington who supervise the experiments.

OPERATIONS—This is a tobacco test farm and everything is fitted into that program. Such work as is done with livestock pastures, cover crops and grain, is carried on solely because of its relationship to crop rotation and land resting as these items affect tobacco growing. That doesn't mean the operations lack variety. There is, for instance, an irrigation project where careful check is made of the cost and effect on yield when water is artificially applied to tobacco fields. This project is too new for authoritative recommendations. It has not been determined whether the cost and the chance of spreading disease by use of water from streams and farm ponds are fully compensated by greater yields.

BUGS — Then there are the "bug-catchers," handled in cooperation with other government agencies, including REA. The idea is to attract moths into bags for later killing before they lay the eggs which produce horn worms. Another phase of this program is the large gauze pen where moths are impounded and potted tobacco plants are placed. When the tobacco leaves are loaded with eggs, they are taken to the laboratory and exposed to various kinds of insecticides, in effort to determine most effective methods of control.

PACK HOUSE—Farm Manager J. N. Carr, who came to the farm in 1947 and has supervised most of the post-war development, is particularly proud of the ultra-modern pack house, where the leaf tobacco is "ordered" and graded. The frame building is fully insulated and there are no windows. Aluminum foil on the walls permits the humidifiers and artificial lighting to control temperature and humidity and to simulate all degrees of outdoor light. These controlled conditions make it possible to grade tobacco with respect to fine points of color and texture of leaf. Admittedly there is need for further study in curing the leaf. More about that some other time.

BREEDING—Principal work at the farm is in breeding tobacco plants and developing new types, more suitable to prevailing and changing conditions on North Carolina farms. The test-plots contain more than three hundred and fifty types and crosses, each of which is thoroughly tested under widely varying conditions of soil fertilization and cultivation methods. Out of these 350 types and crosses may come one or two, maybe none and maybe a dozen, recommended types.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

IN this day it would be refreshing to learn what an appointment was made on the basis of merit and, for once, say to the dogs with politics.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER
Credit sellers believe that relief from Regulation W is in sight. They are convinced that Congress will write specifications into the Defense Production Act that will ease—though not eliminate—the Federal Reserve Board's restrictions on credit terms.

Senators and Representatives have been under considerable pressure from business interests for relief. While other factors are also to blame, most industries resent credit blame Regulation W for recent declines in sales. High down payments and shorter terms, they say, have eliminated families making less than $70 a week from the installment market.

But two additional factors are stimulating Congress to action. The hope of peace in Korea is causing Congressmen to believe that all controls should be less severe; they have shown that their handling of amendments to the Defense Production Act. The second factor is the FRB's obdurate attitude on controls. Many Congressmen feel that the Board's reconsiderations of the regulation have been farces; that the B Board had made up its mind in advance and that appeals by Business leaders and members of Congress have given no real consideration.

Furthermore, many believe that credit controls should be handled like a faucet; that they should be tightened when goods are scarce and eased when goods start to pile up as they have now.

Congress must act on the Defense Production Act before the end of this month. The original bill, the authorization for practically all controls, expired June 30 and was continued for a month to enable Congress to re-shape it?

Easing credit controls might do much to stir up furniture, television and appliance sales. It may also help auto sales, although many observers believe that an increase in demand will soon balance the decreased output.

PROMOTER CRITICAL OF POSTAGE RISE
"The Senate hasn't shown much imagination in increasing postage rates," the Old Promoter announced in his knowledge all manner. Increasing postage rates on post cards from 1 to 2 cents may not bring in any more revenue. I for one will just send half as many post cards, except when I can use a post-card instead of a letter, which will be 4 cents for the new rates.

"On the latter postage, I think Congress ought to raise the rate to 10 cents for all letters containing bills, or announcements of mother-laws' coming-visits, and cut the rate to 2 cents on all letters containing checks or invitations to cocktail parties. In fact the government gets so much in taxes on beverages, cocktail party invitations should go free."

"Listen," we said "if you expect any free cigars, you'll have to do better than offering warmed-up old jokes. This is an office, not a television studio, you know." But on his promise to do better, we gave him an 8-cent Fumo del Diablo.

GOVERNMENT AGENCY BACKS MODULAR PLAN
Adoption of the modular method in home building design will reduce housing costs, the Housing and Home Finance Agency says in publishing a 54-page booklet, "The Modular Method in Dwelling Design." In the modular method, all design and building parts are in multiples of four inches, thereby permitting greater standardization of doors, windows, plaster board, etc. The booklet is available from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington 25, D. C., for 30 cents.

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS
WASHINGTON — Mrs. Beng H. Con came to the United States to get some ideas on fighting inflation and juvenile delinquency and extending social welfare programs in her own land, Malaya.

As one of two women members of the first legislative council of the Malay Federation, she has a voice in the making of laws she hopes will benefit the people of Malaya.

The pet Chinese woman, English-speaking Mrs. Con is the wife of a doctor practicing in Penang and mother of Peter Peh Tchin, now studying law in London's "Inner Temple," and James Peh Seng, attending public school at Badingham College, Leatherhead, Surrey.

Mrs. Con arrived early in June under sponsorship of the Economic Cooperation Administration to attend the World Assembly for Moral Re-Armament at Mackinac Island, Mich. In Washington she has spent much time with officials of the Children's Bureau, the Public Health Service, Office of Education and other agencies.

Mrs. Con is completely sold on the MRA movement and told me it is bridging the split between the Chinese and Malay communities in Malaya and prevented a potential civil war when the two communities organized in opposition to each other after World War II.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL ... ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake, (2) For his children's sake, (3) For the sake of his community and nation, (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

Greenies Play Pinetops In Two Game Series In Effort To Make Play-Offs

Greenies Play In Pinetops Today; Return Home Tomorrow For First League Games Under New Manager

Greenville will attempt to continue its upward movement in the Bright Belt League tonight and tomorrow in a two game series with the third place Pinetops entry. Manager Bill Phillips, new mentor for the Greenies, has hopes of winning both contests in an effort to qualify for the league playoffs. Greenville is at present playing in sixth place, one game behind Fremont and three and a half games behind fourth place Macclesfield.

Phillips, who took over the managerial reins when Jack Boone resigned to enter the University of North Carolina, has designated righthander A. J. Rose to start in Saturday afternoon's contest in Pinetops. Left-hander Johnny Foell will probably take the hill Sunday for the home contest at Guy Smith Stadium.

Rose has compiled a 1-2 record with the Greenies, including a decision over the league leading Ormondsville nine. The young hurler has given up only four earned runs in the three contests, with all of them coming in a game with Macclesfield last week. His other defeat came at the hands of the Farmville Red Sox, by the score of 7-6. The Red Sox scored six unearned runs on miscues by his teammates to take the game in the late stages of the contest.

Foell has appeared on the mound in two contests, as a starter once and in a fireman's role in the other. The Greenville outpump won in his only start against Macclesfield, 5-2. He appeared as a reliever against Ormondsville.

The addition of Sparky McCaskill to the Greenville line-up has added a great deal of defensive power. McCaskill, who performed at second base for the Roanoke Rapids Jays last season, will also bolster the locals' batting attack when he returns to his normal playing condition. He had not participated in baseball this year before coming to Greenville.

Pinetops Strong
Pinetops will present a formidable foe on the playing field for the Greenies.

Third-baseman Peck Stokes heads the potent batting attack with a batting average of .341. He is followed by the individual batting by Horace Jefferson and Emmett Williams, with .310.

Stokes, who is also leading the club in the homerun department, is also one of the better fielders.

Red Sox Score 2 Runs In Bottom Of Ninth To Win 9-8

FARMVILLE — Farmville continued to move upward in the Bright Belt League last night with a victory over Macclesfield, 9-8.

A two run rally in the last inning gave the game to the Red Sox. Norman Clark began the inning by singling and was followed by a walk to the next batter. Millard Webb ended the contest with a game-winning double to score both runners.

Farmville used four hurlers in racking up its 16th win in the last 18 starts. Harvey Lee Webb started and was relieved by Bill Harrington in the third, followed by Clint Provost in the fourth. Carl Shirley came into the game in the ninth inning and received credit for the win.

Farmville will play Ormondsville tonight in a battle for first place in the league. Manager Norman Clark is slated to start on the mound for the locals. A large crowd is expected.

Score by innings:

Macclesfield 021 500 0-5 10 3
Farmville . . . 400 100 102-9 11 1

Walcott Receives Wild Celebration

CAMDEN, N. J. —(UP)—The echoes were just subsiding today from the wildest celebration in Camden's history — a 200,000-fan tribute to new heavyweight champion Jersey Joe Walcott.

Mayor George Brunner estimated that many persons turned out yesterday to line a two-and-a-half mile parade route as Jersey Joe returned to his home town.

About 7,000 of that number were jammed around city hall, where the dusky, 37-year-old ring warrior told the "I promised the Lord that if I won would dedicate my life to the youth of America. I will keep that promise."

About 4,000 fans met Walcott's plane from Pittsburgh at Central Airport, breaking through police lines with such enthusiasm that they separated Jersey Joe from his wife as they greeted each other with a kiss. Then began the 50-car motorcade to city hall.

Converts Doug Morgan Hurls Second No-Hitter

Converts Doug Morgan Hurls Second No-Hitter

Righthander Doug Morgan hurled his second no-hitter last night as he defeated the Wreckers, 5-3, in the Junior League.

Two runs in the fifth inning clinched the win for the Converts as the Wreckers were going down for the first time this season.

Doug Strickland started the rally by doubling. He advanced to second base on a fly-out and then took third on a passed ball. Randolph Tripp singled to score Strickland and scored himself a few minutes later with the winning run on an error on Billy Boyd's long fly.

Morgan struck out a total of seven men in the seven inning contest, but six walks kept him in constant trouble. He aided his own cause with a triple and a single in four times at bat.

Jerry Phillips went the route for the losers and was tacked for but six hits, including two triples. Phillips walked three batters while fanning four.

All of the Wrecker runs were unearned.

Score by innings:
Wreckers 001 001 0 3 0 4
Converts 100 121 x 5 6 4
Batteries: Phillips and Sideris; Morgan and Tyson.

Nation's Amateur Golfers Tee-Off

AP Newsfeatures
BETHLEHEM, Pa. — The nation's top amateur golfers will compete over one of the longest courses in the history of the USGA when they tee off at Saucun Valley in the 51st national amateur tournament.

The layout measures 6,979 yards. The Minneapolis Golf Club, scene of the 1950 event, stretched 6,656 yards while at Oak Hill, Rochester, scene of the 1949 event, the yardage was 6,800.

Three par fives make the beautiful Pennsylvania course a tough one. The first hole stretches 316 yards over a hill and through a narrowing fairway.

The second par five is the 586-yard sixth hole, a dog-leg to the right. The drive must go 175 yards before reaching the fairway. If your second shot is weak it might catch a gravelly sand dune, often called "one of the longest traps in creation".

Third par five is the 15th. It probably will go down in amateur records as the longest. It is 612 yards.

Five holes on the par 71 course cross creeks. The layout has 73 traps.

The No. 1 amateur is listed for Sept. 10-15.

"It may wind up being a putter's tournament," says home pro Ralph Hutchinson. "The hole is not in the bag just because you're on green. There's still a battle to sink your putt."

In other words, the greens are tricky.

Smashing Debut
SINGAPORE — (AP)—The Swedish Angel, the 380 pound wrestling man from Europe, made his debut in Singapore with a resounding crash. He fell backwards on his opponent, Charlie Gammage, within a few minutes after the opening bell and thereby flattened his foe for the evening. Gammage was sent to the hospital with varied injuries.

FISHING'S GOOD
ST. JOHNS, Nfld.—(AP)—Reports from Newfoundland's south coast rivers this year show an extra-large run of salmon. Among catches at Mitchell's Point, Long Harbor, were salmon weighing 30 and 17 pounds.

Stan Musial Has Lead In National

Stan Musial Has Lead In National

NEW YORK —(UP)—Stan Musial, the veteran Cardinal outfielder who is so good that his hitting ability is taken for granted, has quietly been setting up his fifth National League batting championship.

While rookie hitting "sensations" have been moving in and out of the majors on a feast of press notices and a diet of curve balls, Musial has been strengthening his grip on the lead he took from Jackie Robinson of the Dodgers midway in June. He added eight points during the past week and was hitting .376 in official statistics which included Thursday's day games.

Robinson and Richie Ashburn of the Phillies have been battling for the runner-up spot and Musial's steady hitting indicated they might have to be satisfied with the struggle for second. Robinson, batting .354, was 22 points behind the St. Louis star. Ashburn was hitting .352.

John Wyrostek of the Reds remained fourth in the National with a .342 average and Ray Campanella, the Dodger catcher held on to fifth spot with his .327.

In the American League, 1949 batting champion George Kell moved from seventh into a first place tie with Ferris Fain of the Athletics. Each was hitting .334.

The junior circuit batting race was just as close as its pennant struggle and Gil Coan of the Senators was close behind the leaders with a .332 average. Orestes Minofo of the White Sox was just a point further back at .331. Ted Williams of the Red Sox, who was fifth with .327, was only seven points behind Kell and Fain.

In the other individual offensive departments, Williams remained the major league leader in run-batted-in with 91. Ed Robinson of the White Sox was second with 73.

In the National, Duke Snider of the Dodgers led with 65 and Wally Westlake of the Cardinals was next with 63.

Gil Hodges of the Dodgers continued to lead the majors in home runs with 28. But his prediction that Ralph Kiner's chances of catching him were better than his own chances of breaking Babe Ruth's single season record became a possibility. Hodges homered in the All-Star game on July 10 but he hasn't hit one in league play since July 6. Meanwhile, the Pirate slugger hit three Wednesday against the Dodgers to boost his second place total to 23. Gus Zernial of the Athletics led the American with 23.

Preacher Roe of the Dodgers, who won 12 games while losing two, had the best record among the regular major league pitchers. However, Bob Feller of the Indians and Vic Raschi of the Yankees each had won one more game than the Dodger lefthander. Feller had a 13-3 mark and Raschi was 13-4.

The U. S. S. R. is an extensive fur producer and its rivers and seas are abundantly stocked with all types of fish.

Four Clubs Separated By 5 Points For American Lead

Four Clubs Separated By 5 Points For American Lead

By JOHN GRIFFIN
United Press Sports Writer
Four teams were in a virtual tie for first place today as the American League girded itself for the most spectacular pennant race in its 50-year history.

Only .005 percentage points separated the first-place Boston Red Sox and the fourth-place Cleveland Indians. The Red Sox led with .598, followed by the White Sox with .596, the Yankees with .595 and the Indians with .593.

The log jam reached its height when the Yankees and Indians eked out 1 to 0 victories over the Browns and A's respectively last night and the Red Sox and White Sox lost. The Tigers beat the Red Sox 6 to 1, and the Senators upset the White Sox 2 to 1.

Pitchers who helped themselves with their bats were responsible for the Yankee and Indian victories. Tom Morgan pitched a three-hitter and started the Yankees' winning rally with a single off 12-game winner Ned Garver with two out in the eighth inning. Ingres by Phil Rizuto and Bobby Brown followed to produce the run.

Mike Garcia was Cleveland's hero in a brilliant pitching duel with Sam Zoldak. He allowed only four hits as he scored victory No. 12 and the Indians' 19th in 24 games and also started the Tribe on the way to its run with a single in the 10th inning. Garcia was forced by Dale Mitchell but Mitchell scored the big run on Bobby Avila's double.

Meanwhile, the Red Sox and White Sox were playing their parts to perfection to create the four-way scramble.

The Tigers rose up to batter Chuck Stobbs and his successor for seven singles and five runs in the fourth inning. Then Marlin Stuart, who was making his start of the season, throttled Boston's sluggers with six hits to preserve the victory. It was Boston's sixth loss in 11 games on the current Western swing.

Lon Kretlow shut out the Senators for the White Sox for eight innings but Eddie Yost singled in the ninth and Gil Coan, who had a perfect night with four hits, doubled to drive in the tying run. The Senators shoved over the winning run in the 10th on singles by Mickey Vernon and Sam Mele and an infield out.

The Brooklyn Dodgers beat the St. Louis Cardinals 5 to 2; the New York Giants defeated the Cincinnati Reds 11 to 5; the Philadelphia Phillies shaded the Chicago Cubs 4 to 3 in 11 innings, and the Boston Braves downed the Pittsburgh Pirates 11 to 6 in National League games.

Preacher Roe won his 13th game as the Dodgers knocked out Max Lanier, an old Cardinal nemesis.

Sam Maglie, who had failed in four previous tries for his 13th win finally got it when the Giants knocked out Ewell Blackwell in the first inning and went on to pound out 12 hits.

Jim Konstanty received credit for his fourth Philly win when Richie Ashburn singled with the bases filled in the 11th inning.

The Braves collected 15 hits and chased Vernon Law from the box before he could retire a man in the first inning as Warren Spahn won his 10th game. Ralph Kiner hit his 24th homer for the Pirates.

Ike Riddick Shuts Out The Jaycees With Only 2 Hits

Ike Riddick Shuts Out The Jaycees With Only 2 Hits

Righthander Ike Riddick celebrated his return to active participation in the Little League by hurling the Elks to a 2-0 shut-out over the league leading Jaycees.

Riddick, who has been confined to bed with mumps, held the losers to only two hits, both singles in the third inning. He struck out eight and walked but one to record his fourth win.

A singleton in the first inning proved to be the winning run for the Elks. Charles Rumley singled to begin the bottom of the frame. Merrill Bynum fanned and then catcher James Hudson delivered a long double to score Rumley.

Hudson added an insurance run in the fourth. The stocky receiver singled and took second and third on passed balls and then scored on an error by the Jaycee catcher.

J. E. Arnold started on the mound for the losers and was charged with the loss. He was lifted in the bottom of the first with one out in favor of Hudson Miller.

Score by innings:

Terms Defense Buildup A Swindler's Paradise

WASHINGTON—(UP)—Sen. Karl E. Mundt (R-SD) said today that the defense buildup has turned the United States into a "swindler's paradise."

Mundt, a member of the Senate's Permanent Investigating Committee which revealed the fantastic confidence game operations of Samuel D. Mason, told newsmen that Mason's activities may be only one of a series of "swindle schemes" going on throughout the country.

During two days of committee hearings, Mason—a paunchy, peg-legged New Yorker—was accused of fleecing five victims of almost $850,000 by promising them government business or leases on "surplus" federal buildings when government agencies "moved us out of ground to escape atomic attack."

The committee has turned its records over to the Justice Department and the Bureau of Internal Revenue for action. Mason admitted yesterday that he has not filed an income tax return since "before 1929."

Mundt agreed with committee investigators who said that Mason evidently was a "lone wolf." But he said the investigation also may have opened up a "Pandora's box" of similar confidence schemes.

"If Mason could think up a scheme like that, I think others must have too," Mundt said. "This may be only one link in a whole series of swindle schemes playing upon the stupidity and naivete of some people about their government."

Mundt proposed that the committee issue a report on the Mason investigation, pointing out to the public that (1) there are no successful "get-rich-quick" schemes involving government operations, and (2) legitimate bargains in government contracts are available to anyone.

"The public must learn," he said, "that it is unnecessary and unwise to hire an influence peddler or a go-between to do business with the government."

Mundt and committee chairman Clyde R. Hoey (D-NC) agreed that, so far as the committee has no evidence of any additional swindlers. But both said they would keep a close watch on "influence peddling" in Washington.

Paid One-Fifth Of All Taxes In Fiscal Year

WASHINGTON—(UP)—New York, the nation's most populated state, paid nearly one fifth of all taxes collected by the federal government during fiscal 1951, the Bureau of Internal Revenue reported today.

Nevada, the least populated state, stood at the bottom of the list. It paid only about .0061 per cent of all federal tax collections.

The figures were revealed in a detailed breakdown of where the government got $49,000,000,000 in taxes during the year ending June 30. More than half of it—$28,000,000,000—was paid by individuals in the form of income taxes.

Corporations paid $14,000,000,000, and the remainder came from miscellaneous forms of federal revenue, such as excise taxes.

Collections in each of the groups were the largest on record. In the preceding fiscal year, tax revenue totaled $38,000,000,000.

Ran Away Over Baseball Error

PORTLAND, Me.—(UP)—Darryl B. Roos, 19, said today he ran away from a nearby reformatory because he made an error playing baseball.

"I was on first base and this other guy made a wild throw and I missed it," he said. "I figured it was my error and I blow my stack. I'm a temperamental guy. I got sore. That's the reason I walked away."

Furthermore, he added, "They're all down on me at the reformatory because I'm the only Red Sox fan."

Roos will be returned to the reformatory today.

FAVORS EMBARGO HONG KONG

NEW YORK, July 20.—(UP)—New York's Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, said upon his arrival today on a tour of the Far East that the economic embargo against communist countries should be continued "whatever happens in Korea."

Area Cooled

Thursday night's thunderstorm cooled the temperature in the Greenville area and the highest the mercury ascended in the tube yesterday was 89. It had been reading in the 90s for a week.

Highest temperature here yesterday was 89. Lowest last night, 69, and at 8 a.m. today it was 79, high for that time of day, Mrs. Carl E. Maiden, local observer for the U.S. Department of Commerce, reported. No rain.

Yesterday a year ago the highest was 95. Lowest that night, 72, and at 8 a.m. next day it was 76. No rain that day.

Today a year ago rainfall totaled 1.18 inches. July of last year was a wet month.

Finds Evidence Gas Price Fixing

RALEIGH—(UP)—Atty. Gen. Harry McMillan said in a general report released late yesterday that there is enough evidence of price fixing to indict major oil companies in the state.

McMillan also recommended that some state agency be given the power to set maximum wholesale prices for gasoline.

The report was a result of a State Bureau of Investigation probe into gasoline price wars in some parts of the state. Gov. Kerr Scott had asked the attorney general for the investigation after small independent dealers complained that the price wars were designed to run them out of business.

McMillan said the Texas Oil Co. started the price war in Alabama for the announced purpose of "meeting competition of the independents." He said the independent dealers usually sell gasoline for two cents less than the major oil companies.

"The investigation contains ample evidence to prove all the facts as to the pricing of gasoline in the state and the method of doing business," he said.

There seems to be no question but that Esso Standard Co. fixes the price of gasoline in all areas in North Carolina except those in which the present price war is being carried on," McMillan said.

He added that the SBI investigation showed all major oil companies in the state charge the same wholesale prices except in sections where there is a price war.

North Carolina is being gouged in the price of gasoline outside the price war areas, McMillan said. He said gasoline costs more in one and one-half cents more in the state than in any other state along the Atlantic seaboard and "we have been unable to secure any explanation of it from the oil companies other than the arbitrary prices fixed."

Two 'Steps' For Economy Drive

WASHINGTON—(UP)—Economy notes:

1. Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D-Ill) suggested that the government put mailmen on tricycles. He said they could move more quickly and save time and money that way.
2. The State Department stopped using red ink for "hold for release" warnings on news releases. The spokesman said red ink required two mimeographings of releases.

Shirley Pays Up Parking Fine

WASHINGTON—(UP)—Police did a "double take" in the best Hollywood tradition when a pretty young housewife turned up to forfeit a $5 fine for parking too close to a fire hydrant.

The woman gave her name as Mrs. Charles Black, paid her fine and left. Police didn't wake up until several hours later that she used to be Shirley Temple of the movies. She has been living here for several months with her Navy officer husband.

CAB Delves In Pasture-Landing

RICHMOND, Va.—(UP)—Civil Aeronautics Board investigators said they would continue "at least" through today the inquiry into the cow pasture landing of an Eastern Air Lines Constellation near here.

Cab officials who questioned the five-man crew for four hours yesterday indicated the weather was to blame for the forced belly-landing Thursday, and airline executives said they were confident nothing was mechanically wrong with the four-engine transport.

NOTHING DAUNTED

SEATTLE, Wash.—(UP)—Jess W. Mattox, 35, who lost his right hand and part of his forearm when a grenade exploded during World War II in the South Pacific, makes his living painting flagpoles and tall chimneys.

Randolph Scott and Janis Carter are co-starred in the brand new technicolor adventure hit, "Santa Fe."

Only Squalls In Suspected Storm

MIAMI—(UP)—A "suspected" area in the Gulf of Mexico investigated by a Navy hurricane-hunter plane was nothing but a wave of rain squalls, the weather bureau reported today.

The plane found no indications that a tropical storm was brewing.

ed with the Savannah River Project in a planning capacity, pointed out to the group that it is best to follow the examples of other communities when seeking to establish a regional plan of development. Too, it is difficult to establish such a program as a governmental function, he said, because the chances are it will bog down when persons in the area are told what to do by legislative action. It has to be a self-operated and self-propelled undertaking, he said.

"Legislative authority leads to centralized control which most of us in America are trying to avoid," he said.

Archie McLean, Rocky Mount banker, made the motion to turn the undertaking over to a steering committee. Discussion on that evolved into a proposal by R. Graham Doster, manager of the Rocky Mount Chamber, to form the committee of the several Chamber managers in the vicinity. Another proposal by Ashley Putrell, editor of the Washington Daily News, suggested forming the committee from at least one commissioner from each county and an alderman from each county seat.

However, both proposals went by the board as the formation of the committee was turned over to Johnson.

Martini's statement of the need for regional planning met with unqualified agreement from several spokesmen during the discussion period. Willard T. Kizer, manager of the Greenville Chamber, stated it "should have been done 20 or 25 years ago."

Further approval locally came from F. F. Hendrix, Pitt commissioner, when he described this area as "having to live with industry."

"Industry is not going to set down here without seeing what we have. The thing is are we going to be able to live with it when it comes? Are we going to present our possibilities to industry or is it going to have to find out for itself?"

Martini's statement of the need for such a program was described by the possibility of losing the most important resource—"human re-against being "too optimistic" about the Communist attitude because of its "very fine shading."

Admiral Joy, Nuckols said, proposed that the agenda items so far agreed upon be accepted as a complete program for formal armistice talks.

These have been announced previously as calling for a truce on "as is, where is" basis. This would leave the U.N. holding its present front line, some places 20 miles north of the 38th parallel, and would rule out any debate on the "Reds" desire for withdrawal of foreign troops.

After Joy spoke the Chinese made their first move in the talks. They asked Joy to review his opening remarks about the agenda. Joy did so.

"The Chinese conferred animately amongst themselves," Nuckols said, "and then through an interpreter gave a message to Nam II."

Nam II then suggested the recess—apparently a specific Chinese Communist desire.

price ceilings was continued. However, there could be no further rollbacks in beef prices, as DISA had planned, and farm commodities could not be brought under control if they still are below parity.

Rents—Rent controls would be continued, but landlords would be permitted to raise rents 20 per cent above levels of June 30, 1947. Rent controls could be extended to some areas not now controlled.

War—Neither the House nor Senate bill would make any change in the present policy of wage stabilization by the Wage Stabilization Board.

Credit—Credit controls would be relaxed on automobiles by the Senate, and on automobiles, television sets, radios, other appliances, and furniture by the House. In general, smaller down payments would be required and more time would be given to pay the balance. Johnston said, "The amendments prohibiting slaughter quotas and the two scheduled beef rollbacks will alone cost the consumers hundreds of millions of dollars in higher prices. This action is an open invitation to black marketers."

Before passing its bill, the House knocked out a provision which administration spokesmen had denounced as a fraud. This provision, sponsored by Rep. James C. Davis (D-Ga.), proposed to clamp a four-month freeze on wage ceilings and non-farm price ceilings.

It would not have covered farm "modities which are not up to parity. Most are below parity at present."

Mrs. L. R. Taylor and Miss Mary M. Bradley attended an interracial institute held at Shaw University last Tuesday and Wednesday.

Mrs. Taylor was sponsored by the Missionary Society of the Immanuel Baptist Church and Miss Bradley from her own Junior Department of Sycamore Hill Baptist Church.

The conference was statewide and was largely attended.

Among the speakers were Miss Cora Parr Thomas and Miss Minnie C. Lyon, missionaries to Liberia. Also Mrs. W. Y. Byers of Durham who beautifully discussed the calendar of prayer and stressed much concentration on prayer at all times.

Called to witness China was discussed fully by Miss Roberta Pearl Johnson. She is a missionary to China.

Miss Mary E. Debnam discussed the study of Missions through the women's convention.
