Britain's Oilmen Quit Iran Fields

Negotiating Mission On Way Back To London After Breakdown Of Talks; British Expected To Leave Way Open For Resumption If Compromise Possible

LONDON (UP)— Britain began pulling its staff workers out of Iran's oil fields today a few hours after negotiations to settle the dispute between the two countries collapsed.

Lord Privy Seal Richard Stokes and his British negotiating mission were on their way back to London by plane following 20 days of fruitless talks with Iranian officials.

Despite the breakdown of talks, Britain was expected to leave the way open for their resumption, provided Iran agreed to compromise on the vital issue of British management of the nationalized oil fields.

LONDON—(UP)—Britain announced tonight it intended to hold onto the great Abadan oil refinery in southern Iran and would use force if necessary to protect British personnel there.

The foreign office here was scheduled to issue a statement which was expected to reiterate Britain's desire to resume negotiations.

In the meantime Britain was reported to have moved warships up the Persian Gulf from Bahrein to Basra to a point nearer the big Abadan refinery. She now has 10 vessels in the area.

Before stepping on his plane, chief British negotiator Richard Stokes predicted that loss of oil revenues would deal a "catastrophic blow" to Iran's already impoverished economy. He urged the Iranian government to reconsider his proposals.

W. Averell Harriman, U. S. presidential adviser, dashed Iran's hopes that he might once again bring the two parties together in their dispute over oil nationalizations. Harriman told newsmen he had no new proposals to put forward and expected to return shortly to the United States.

Stokes paid courtesy farewell visits to Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi and Premier Mohammed Mossadegh before driving to the airport with Harriman.

There, the British negotiator told newsmen:

"We shall be ready to resume discussions. The oil industry is of such vital importance to Iran that I cannot believe any Iranian government would wish to destroy it."

He said the key issue which caused the break yesterday revolved around the future of more than 3,000 British personnel in Iran's oil industry.

"Without their knowlege and experience, little oil would flow and a catastrophic blow will have been dealt to the prosperity of Iran," he said.

Anglo-Iranian negotiations broke off yesterday over Britain's insistence that a British general manager run the production end of the Iranian Oil Co. and thus protect the British staff involved.

Observers expected the outlawed Tudeh (Communist) Party to capitalize on the collapse of talks, perhaps by calling for Soviet technicians to run the industry in place of the British.

At least one Communist aim has been realized—the British negotiators were returning to London without a settlement.

The Tudeh Party had agitated throughout the oil crisis for the British "imperialists" to go home. The Communists were joined in this cry by extreme nationalists.

Superior Court Term To Begin Monday Morning

Thirty-Seven Cases Set For Trial; 12 Indictments Are Scheduled

The fall term of Pitt superior court will open here Monday morning at ten o'clock with Judge Quincy Nimocks of Fayetteville presiding.

Scheduled for trial are 37 cases while 12 indictments have been scheduled for presentation to the grand jury. Those set for trial are, in the main, older cases on the docket while others are comparatively new, having received true bills from the grand jury this year.

At the present time the docket is heavy laden with untried cases, due in part to the usual summer layoff of court terms. Two hundred and 26 cases remain on the docket now, including those for trial and grand jury hearing next week, and will be tried in succeeding terms of court during the fall and spring terms. Many have been put on since the beginning of the year, although the majority concern defendants who have been tried but failed to meet the judgments handed down and have had capiases issued for their arrest.

Those cases set for grand jury hearing are:

Breaking, entering and larceny—Alfred E. Hardy; Josephus Corbitt; Willie David Richardson, and Arlander Barnhill (same bill); Benjamin Randell, John Wesley Hardison and Robert Elton Taylor (same bill);

Assault with deadly weapon with intent to kill—Thomas Hardy, Jr., J. B. Tucker;

Assault on a female—Alfred E. Hardy;

Forgery—Wayne Canady;

Crime against nature — Laurie Taylor, Sr., Howard W. Peele;

Burglary — Arthur Deen Anderson;

Larceny—Lonnie Jones, Jr., and Wilbert Moore (same bill).

Cases for trial number: 13 indictments of illegal possession of liquor or illegal sale of liquor, 12 indictments for drunken driving; one indictment for resisting arrest, one indictment for worthless check, two indictments for non-support, and one indictment each for assault with a deadly weapon, drunk, and violation of the motor vehicle law.

Other weeks of superior court scheduled for the fall term are: week of September 10, civil term; September 24, civil term; October 8, mixed term with judge to be assigned; October 22, civil term; October 29, mixed term; and November 19, special criminal term.

The regular fall term of court would have begun Monday of last week for the trial of civil issues. However, at a previous meeting of the county Bar Association the members voted to cancel the term for lack of cases to be tried.

'Ike Can Win' On Either Ticket

NEW YORK (UP)—Dr. George Gallup says Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower probably can win the 1952 presidential election on either the Republican or Democratic ticket.

Gallup commented on Eisenhower yesterday before sailing to attend a conference of his European polling organizations.

Non-Suit Motion Denied For Hit-Run Indictment

Manslaughter Indictment Against Greenville Man Is Non-Suited; Lanier Takes Stand For First Time This Morning

KINSTON—Judge Leo Carr this morning denied a motion for non-suit by defense attorneys in the hit-and-run indictment against J. Con Lanier, Greenville attorney and tobacconist.

The motion was made by Albion Dunn, also of Greenville, after state's evidence in the highway death of Willie Henry Tripp November 25 last year seemed to defense counsel as circumstantial.

Carr denied the motion, saying, "It seems as though this case is for the jury." Yesterday's events saw a non-suit in the manslaughter indictment which originally had been brought against the former Pitt County state legislator.

This afternoon's proceedings are expected to center around arguments to the jury by the State and defense counsel. It is expected that the State will present two arguments and defense attorneys three.

Lanier took the stand for the first time this morning, stating some of his background and also the events immediately before and after Tripp was killed on the highway between Kinston and Greenville at Grainger Station.

He testified that at the time he recalled hearing "a thud" and thought he had hit "a dog, a brick or a stick.' He was traveling about 55 before he reached Grainger, he said, and had slowed down to about 45 at Grainger.

Previously several character witnesses appeared in Lanier's behalf, including June Rose, Lee Folger, Jr., B. B. Sugg, and W. Z. Morton of Greenville; Carl T. Hicks of Walstonburg; and J. Y. Joyner and others of Lenoir County.

Earlier in the morning session Eugene Williams of Grifton took the stand and stated that he and another Grifton man were in Tripp's company before he met his death. Williams said Tripp had been drinking and during the course of the evening the three were involved in an "altercation."

Lanier testified that his automobile did not run off the highway and that he continued toward Greenville. He said that at the time of impact his defroster was on inside the car and that because of the noise he thought he may have hit a dog. It wasn't until the following morning, he said, that he noticed the dented fender and the broken door handle on his car.

Upon reading of the hit and run highway death in the Monday morning newspapers, he said, he called highway patrolmen in this area to report that he may have been the man who hit Tripp.

Tobacco Prices Still Reflecting Poor Quality

Local tobacco prices yesterday continued to reflect the poor quality of leaf being offered on warehouse floors as the second day average jumped only slightly to $48.50 per 100 pounds.

Sales were very light during the day and all floors were cleared by the lunch hour. Poundage bought amounted to 299,434 for a total of $145,209.56. Supervisor of sales W. L. Whedbee said the day was one of the lighest ever seen here in recent years.

Since the average remained for the second day in the $48 range, Whedbee pointed out that inferior grades of tobacco are still being offered for sale, predominantly early primings, tips and a large amount of nondescript tobacco.

And although eyebrows may have been raised in eastern North Carolina concerning Greenville's lower-than-most-markets opening day average, Whedbee pointed out that the $48.10 figure was the official figure for the market "instead of misleading estimates of poundage and average which are sometimes used by other markets when averages are low."

Meanwhile, today's sales continued light with most floors cleared by noon. However, tomorrow's sale is expected to increase considerably in volume of tobacco offered, since farmers have had a chance to grade more of their leaf and ready it for market.

Whedbee stated he expects to have full sales day beginning toward the middle of next week, continuing until the close of the season.

Parley Break-Off Claimed Only 'Temporary' Rupture

Allies Brace For Expected Attack

Counterblows Awaited After UN Assault Which Inflicted 9,000 Casualties; Red Planes May Be Ready

By ROBERT C. MILLER
United Press Staff Correspondent

8TH ARMY HQ, Korea (UP)— United Nations forces braced along the 135-mile Korean front today for an expected Communist offensive after killing or wounding 9,000 Reds in a week-long assault near the center of the line.

An all-out enemy attack including 1,000 Red planes was expected to follow close on the heels of the Communist termination of the deadlocked Korean armistice talks.

The Communist radio in Peiping only a few hours before the break had warned that the Allies can look for "more and heavier blows" if the cease-fire talks failed.

All available evidence indicated that the Reds had completed their buildup of 600,000 or more reserves and front-line troops before breaking off the armistice conference.

North Korean Premier Kim Il Sung last week threatened heavy blows against the Allies in the air as well as "annihilation" on the ground if the truce talks failed.

The threat indicated the Chinese Reds were prepared to throw their 1,000 first-line planes into the fray on a large scale for the first time.

However, Lt. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, commander of the 8th Army, said last week that his forces are ready for any eventuality.

His South Korean forces gave the Reds a foretaste of what is in store for them in a "limited offensive" on the east-central front during the past week.

A special communique reported that the South Korean 1st Corps and South Korean elements of the 10th Corps killed or wounded an estimated 9,000 North Korean troops in the "most severe action on the U.N. front since early June."

Farther east, South Korean troops still were fighting to wrest the northernmost and westernmost hills of a ridgeline west of Kansong from the Communists.

Peiping Radio Indicates Expectation Of Resumption, Possibly Even Today; Earlier Confusion Apparently Due To Linguistic Difficulties And Misunderstanding

TOKYO, Friday (UP)—The Communists broke off Korean armistice negotiations Thursday, alleging that an Allied plane bombed the Kaesong neutral zone. But a Peiping broadcast said the Reds called off negotiations for Thursday only and indicated they expected a prompt resumption, possibly even today.

Here and at U.N. command cease-fire headquarters below Kaesong the Communist complaint was denounced as faked—"fraudulent" and "a frame-up."

For the moment, the entire situation was confused.

It appeared that the confusion was the result of a misunderstanding due to the difficulty of communicating in different languages, English and Korean and Chinese.

A Red liaison officer summoned U.N. liaison officers to Kaesong and notified them at 2 a.m. (11 a.m. Wednesday EST) that the cease-fire talks were "off from now on," it was announced. At least, that was what the U.N. liaison men understood the Red liaison man to say.

But the Chinese Communist Peiping radio, broadcasting tonight in the Japanese language, quoted the Communist liaison man as having told the U.N. men:

"I must inform you that this incident is one of extremely serious nature. Acting on orders from our chief delegate, I inform you that all meetings will not be held on the 23rd and that our side reserves the right to present all kinds of demands."

Thus, if the authoritive Peiping radio was correct, it seemed possible the Communists might ask another meeting at Kaesong Friday and present their "demands."

Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, supreme U.N. commander, retorted in a statement to the Communist bombing complaint that no U.N. planes, air force or naval, were in the area at the time of the alleged attack.

U.N. authorities charged flatly that the alleged bombing of Kaesong was a fake, staged by the Reds for their own mysterious purposes.

As the day wore on, evidence began to pile up that the Communists intended only to suspend, rather than terminate, the truce conference.

Developments included:

1. A broadcast by the official Chinese Communist radio at Peiping said the cease-fire talks had been "suspended for Aug. 23," and made no reference to a complete breakdown.

2. A United Nations truce delegation spokesman said he was in no position to say whether the interruption was "complete and final," nor could he say whether Kaesong is still considered a neutral city.

3. Radio communication was still open between the Communist truce delegation in Kaesong and the U.N. delegation's advance base at Munsan, 15 miles to the southeast, with normal half-hourly checks being made.

4. There apparently has been no formal communication from the Communists on interruption of the conference on a level above the liaison officers.

5. Chief U.N. negotiator Vice Adm. C. Turner Joy and the rest of the Allied truce team remained at Munsan awaiting further orders, and a spokesman said he knew of no plans to break up the advance base.

6. An Allied liaison officer met a Communist liaison officer at Pan Mun Jom, just inside the Kaesong neutral zone, at 9 a. m.—seven hours after the Reds announced the break—and handed him without incident a lengthy Allied rejection of all previous Communist complaints of Kaesong neutrality agreements.

Some U.N. sources believed the Reds may have broken off the talks temporarily just to test American reaction to the possible resumption of all-out warfare in Korea.

The Communists obviously hoped, these sources said, that pressure from Americans at home and from other members of the U.N. would force the Allied delegation to yield to Red demands for a cease-fire line along the 38th Parallel.

The talks have been deadlocked since July 27 on this issue, and even a four-man subcommittee has been unable to find a compromise solution. The U.N. has rejected the parallel as a cease-fire line on grounds it would mean an Allied retreat of 30 miles or more to indefensible positions.

Even if the Reds should propose a resumption of the cease-fire talks, the U.N. command's attitude remained in doubt.

The U.N. command flatly accused the Communists of faking evidence of an air raid on Kaesong so as to have a pretext on which to break off the cease-fire talks.

A spokesman said an on-the-spot investigation showed the Red charges to be fraudulent.

The U.N. command statement said moreover that the suspension of the meetings obviously required a high-level decision "which could scarcely have been secured" in the brief interval between the alleged raid and the liaison officer's announcement.

"The availability of this decision to Col. Chang (the Communist liaison officer) confirms the fraudulent nature of the incident," the statement said.

"The total lack of damage and wide distribution of the planted evidence suggests strongly that the metal scrap might have been dropped by a Communist aircraft with very small explosives such as grenades to mark the drops."

McCarthy Blasts Truman In Reply

Claims President Joined 'Leftwing Chorus' Of Smear

WASHINGTON (UP)— Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R-Wis) accused President Truman last night of joining "the leftwing chorus" in erecting a "smoke screen of smear" against him.

McCarthy made his charge in response to Mr. Truman's "scandalmongering" speech on August 14 in which the chief executive inferentially criticized McCarthy's campaign to uncover Communists in the federal government. McCarthy's radio speech was the first of four which he will deliver over the major radio networks in rebuttal.

"Those of us who are engaging in the difficult and unpleasant task of digging out the dangerous undercover Communist agents in government ... must first break and destroy the smoke screen of smear which is the Communist method of discrediting those who are willing to do this task," McCarthy said.

"The president himself joined in this smear and shouted all the same names that have been coined by the Daily Worker and leftwing elements of the press and radio," he said.

Nine More Killed In Alaskan Crash

Burst Out Of Rainclouds, Ablaze And One Wing Missing

ANCHORAGE, Alaska)UP)—An Air Force C-47—one wing missing and afire—roared out of the darkness of an Alaskan rainstorm and crashed within 100 yards of a Civil Aeronautics Administration tower, killing nine men, the CAA said today.

The CAA said that four bodies had been recovered and that the other five men aboard could not possibly have survived.

The plane was in radio contact with the CAA only one minute before it burst out of the rainclouds and plowed into the emergency landing strip. The plane disintegrated on contact.

Richard M. Cross, the CAA radio operator who spoke with the plane, said the pilot reported he had been flying at 11,000 feet and asked permission to change altitude.

"At 8:22 p.m. (1:22 a.m. EST) I called the pilot back to okay the change in altitude," Cross said. "At that time he gave no indication whatsoever that he was in any kind of trouble."

"Then at 8:23 p.m., the plane roared over the CAA quarters like a ball of fire. It was burning and had lost a wing. It was fluttering and turned over and over.

"There was not much sound of an explosion. Just sort of an instantaneous burst of flames. Wreckage was scattered all over the runway. It hit only 100 yards from the CAA station."

The crash brought to 68 the number of persons dead or missing in Alaskan air crashes since July 21, the worst month in territorial aviation history.

Three Injured In Auto Accident

Hospitalized When Car Struck Ayden City Dump Truck

AYDEN—Three persons were sent to the hospital this morning when their automobile was in collision with the Ayden city dump truck near Ayden swamp.

Highway Patrolman Paul C. Whitley, investigating officer, listed the injured as: Mrs. H. L. Noell, 49, of 1007 De Merius Avenue, Durham eye injury and injured forehead; Nada Williams, 40, 302 Oak Ridge Avenue, Fayetteville, minor injuries; and Mrs. David M. Williams, 50, of Godwin, who suffered a broken left arm and cut over the eye.

Whitley stated that the accident occurred around 8:45 this morning as the city garbage truck, driven by Walter Samuel Hamilton of Ayden, was attempting to make a right hand turn.

The Buick automobile driven by Ruth N. Williams of Godwin was totally demolished while only moderate damage was reported to the city truck.

The truck was struck in the right rear, turning it around, but did not turn over.

Both vehicles were headed in the direction of Greenville at the time the accident occurred.

Greenville Has Fewer Municipal Employees

(Special to the Reflector)

NEW YORK — In proportion to its population, Greenville has fewer people in municipal employ than have most cities in the country. This is shown by the U. S. Department of Commerce following a survey of 1,228 cities with populations greater than 10,000.

On the municipal payroll in Greenville, as of the beginning of the year, were 191 employees, exclusive of teachers and other school workers. This was equivalent to 11.2 employees for every 1,000 local residents and, as under the average found in the other cities, 13.2 employed per 1,000 population. For dents and as under the average found in the other cities, 13.2 employed per 1,000 population. For cities under 250,000 in size the rate was 11.9 employees per 1,000.

The payroll in Greenville for this staff, which includes 18 temporary and part-time workers, amounted to $34,600 per month. It represented a smaller tax load, in proportion to population, than was borne in most other cities for the purpose.

Divided by the population of Greenville, the payroll amounted to an assessment of $2.04 a month for each resident of the city. Nationally, the per capita cost of meeting municipal non-school payrolls was $2.87 a month. Among the cities of less than 250,000 the cost averaged $1.98 per capita.

Wages received by Greenville employees, taking into account all except school personnel, were lower than in most other communities. Local earnings averaged $181 a month, compared with $208 a month nationally. Among the large cities, above 250,000, earnings were $280 a month.

As of last October, reports the Department of Commerce, city governments employed 1,311,000 persons, including teachers, and had a payroll for the month of $290,000,000.. These figures, it states, "reflect a continuance of recent years' gradual trend upward in city employment and faster growth in municipal payrolls."

Two Perons Are 'Drafted' For Nov. Elections

BUENOS AIRES —(AP)— President Juan D. Peron and his dynamic blonde wife, Eva, were hailed today as running mates in the Nov. 11 presidential elections.

They told wildly cheering throngs yesterday they would "abide by the will of the people."

The Peronista party and leaders of the government-controlled General Confederation of Labor (CGT) sounded a "draft call" at a monster mass meeting.

Opposition parties are prevented by law from forming a coalition to fight the powerful Peron political machine.

Aldermen Okay Street Work In Brief Meeting

The Board of Aldermen yesterday gave the go-ahead on curbing and guttering on Evans Street between the Norfolk and Southern Railroad crossing and 16th Street.

A petition was submitted to the Board by citizens of the area requesting the construction to be paid by them on a pro rata basis. The project will involve about 600 feet of curbing and guttering 300 on each side of Evans.

The board also received bids on a new truck for the Street Department. They were turned over to the street committee for awarding.

Civil Defense Outlay

Despite Warnings By Civil Defense Administrator Caldwell And President Truman, Congress Cool Toward Big Appropriation; Exact Outlay Not Yet Settled

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Early last January, when this country was in a dark and worried mood, congress passed the Civil Defense Act.

This act made possible a broad program of cooperation between the federal government and the state and cities in many fields, such as building air raid shelters, training people, setting up warning signals, and so on.

But that was the time when we were taking a pasting from the communists in Korea and the country was jittery, not knowing what to expect next. The mood seems to have changed.

President Truman and Millard Caldwell, boss of Civil Defense, asked Congress for $535,000,000 to carry on the program this next year. The house acted this week. It cut the amount requested $469,745,000 by voting only $65,255,000 for the government's civil defense program.

The main reason given in the house: Caldwells program is "unrealistic" and "we cannot provide all that is necessary for civil defense without too much strain on our resources."

Said Caldwell, still smarting from disappointment: "Civil defense xxx should be supported xxx or killed outright and we should quit harassing the public."

This cut isn't final, of course, unless the Senate also approves. It hasn't started to consider the money for civil defense yet. But it will next week, when it listens to Caldwell and his aides.

No one expects the Senate to give Caldwell all he asked. We won't know the final figure until House and Senate finally get together and agree on some one amount.

Of the $65,255,000 voted by the House, about $50,000,000 must be used for supplies in case of an air raid. Most of it will be medical supplies. Under the head of supplies Caldwell asked for $200,000,000,

But since $50,000,000 of the $62,255,000 must go into supplies—if the House action is agreed to by the Senate—that will leave only $15,000,000 for everything else in the government's civil defense program.

Manufactured Incident

Reds In Korea Have Resorted To Old Nazi Trick To Break Off Cease-Fire Talks; Faked Air Raid Crudest Yet; Too Obvious To Fool Anyone

By HOMER JENKS

The Communists resorted to an old Nazi trick to break off the Korean armistice conference.

The trick is the manufactured incident.

The Nazis introduced it on Feb. 27, 1933, when they set the Reichstag building on fire and blamed the Communists. That gave them a chance to make wholesale arrests of Red leaders and clinch Adolf Hitler's seizure of power.

Hitler used manufactured incidents of persecution of Sudetan Germans as an excuse to move into Czechoslovakia. He rigged incidents in the Danzig Corridor as a pretext to attack Poland.

The Communists have used the same tactics in their gobbling of Eastern Europe.

But the faked air raid in Korea is probably the crudest Communist application yet of the manufactured incident.

The Reds solemnly radioed the United Nations truce team's headquarters in Korea at 11:30 p.m. yesterday that an Allied plane had just bombed and strafed the neutralized conference city of Kaesong.

Vice Adm. C. Turner Joy, the chief Allied delegate, immediately dispatched two of his liaison officers to the scene.

The two officers arrived by jeep in Kaesong just before 2 a.m. Col. Chang, the Communist liaison officer, was waiting for them with a group of Communist newspaper correspondents.

Chang led the two American officers to the "evidence" of the raid. It consisted of several depressions in the ground, none deep enough to be considered a bomb crater, and a number of scraps of metal.

Most of the metal had rivets in it. It obviously was of a type used neither in U.N. bombs nor napalm tanks. Rather, it appeared to be fragments of wrecked aircraft.

Moreover, there were no furrows in the ground around it such as would have been ripped out by fragments of an exploding bomb. Some of the metal scraps were just lying on the surface of the ground. Others appeared to have been pushed in a few inches.

The Allied liaison officers concluded that the whole incident was

ECC Graduates Wed On Sunday In Formal Rites

The wedding of Miss Marian Grey Ward, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hobart Ward of Nakina, North Carolina, and Lt. Charles David Rice, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Rice of Greenville, North Carolina, was solemnized Sunday afternoon, August 19, at two o'clock in the Nakina Baptist Church, with the Rev. Robert Carter of Conway, South Carolina, officiating, using the double ring ceremony.

The vows were exchanged before a setting of palms and ferns with tiers of cathedral tapers in seven-branched candelabras. At each side of the altar were arrangements of floor baskets with white flowers.

Prior to the ceremony Miss Evelyn Hyatt of Washington, North Carolina, presented a program of nuptial music. Miss Jacqueline Bussy of Hallsboro, North Carolina, soloist, sang Grieg's "Ich Liebe Dich" and D'Hardelot's "Because." The traditional wedding marches were used and Claude Debussy's "Clair de Lune" was played during the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of Chantilly lace over satin. The basque bodice was styled with long tapering sleeves and double lace Peter Pan collar. The ballerina bouffant skirt had a scalloped hemline. Her veil of bridal illusion was fingertip length and was attached to a lace Juliet cap and she carried a wide satin prayer book topped by a white orchid and showered with ribbon and stephanotis.

Mrs. Wilbur M. Smith, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Mrs. R. N. Walsh, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Neil Ward, sister of the bride, were bridesmaids. Mrs. Smith's dress was blue lace over taffeta and was fashioned with a fitted bodice and an off the shoulder neckline. She carried a nosegay of pink and blue chrysanthemums. The bridesmaids wore identical dresses of pink lace over taffeta and fitted lace jackets. Their hats were pink lace cloches trimmed with flowers and they carried nosegays of pastel flowers.

The best man was the bridegroom's father, and ushers were Wilbur M. Smith and Hugh Ward, brother-in-law and brother of the bride.

The bride's mother wore a dress of navy silk crepe trimmed with lace and a purple orchid corsage. The mother of the groom wore a dress of rose nylon crepe with brown accessories and a corsage of a purple orchid also.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held by the bride's parents at their home, and later the couple left for a wedding trip. For traveling the bride wore a navy silk voile trimmed with white embroidery and white accessories. She wore pinned to her shoulder the orchid from her bridal corsage.

Mrs. Rice graduated from Winterville High School and East Carolina College, receiving her B.S. degree in 1949. She was vice president of her class and was voted the best all-around student during her senior year. She has held a position with the Beaufort County Welfare Department as assistant case worker for the past two years.

Lt. Rice graduated from Greenville High School in 1945 and served two years in the United States Navy during World War II. He graduated from East Carolina College in August of 1951, receiving his M.A. degree. He received his commission as second lieutenant in the U.S. Air Force in May, 1951. He is now stationed at Randolph Field, San Antonio, Texas.

Out-of-town guests present for the wedding were Mrs. A. N. Inman, Jacksonville, Fla., Miss Peggy Honeycutt and mother of Clinton, N.C.; Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Taylor, Greenville, N.C.; Mr. and Mrs. Benny Johnson, Mr and Mrs. Leroy Starks, J. L. Inman of Whiteville, N. C.; Miss Allene White, Charlotte, N.C.; Miss Ellen King St. Pauls, N.C., and Mr. and Mrs. W. Decus of Tabor City, N.C.

Killer Hurricane Blowing Self Out

TAMPICO, Mexico —(AP)— The killer hurricane that raged over tropical seas all week taking more than 150 lives and causing millions of dollars in damage, was blowing itself out today in the mountains of Mexico.

The storm—described as the worst recorded in Mexico—spent its final fury over the oil port of Tampico yesterday. At least one person was killed here and the damage was expected to run far above $1,000,000.

Twenty-seven persons were officially reported injured here—unverified reports placed the casualties as high as 300.

Twice the fierce winds hit Tampico with destructive blows—first when the hurricane's front roared over, then when its back force followed up the mid-day calm of its central "eye."

The hurricane, which began its murderous rampage over Jamaica last weekend, killing some 150 persons there, hit Tampico full force. Its velocity measured up to 160 miles an hour.

Entertains For Recent Bride At Shower Party

Complimenting Mrs. A. D. Umphlett, the former Virginia Simpson of this city, Mrs. Aubrey Taylor and Mrs. Kenneth Strayhorn entertained on Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. Taylor.

Guests were invited for the hour of 8:00 p.m. for a dessert bridge and surprise kitchen shower. The home was beautifully decorated with assorted summer flowers, mostly carrying out the color note of bridal green and white. Each of the five tables was centered with white tapers gracefully tied with green ribbon and sprays of fern. Mrs. Umphlett found a cream glamellia corsage at the place designated for her.

Bridal ices, decorated cakes, nuts and mints were served upon the arrival of the guests. During the progressions of bridge which followed, iced drinks and nuts were served.

Mrs. Ed Sawyer compiled the highest score and was awarded a prize. Mrs. R. C. Pearce Jr. was given the consolation gift and the floating prize was claimed by Mrs. M. W. Aldridge.

As a delightful surprise to the honoree, a dishpan attractively arranged with numerous kitchen utensils, gifts from the guests, was presented to her.

Mrs. Howard Simpson, mother of the honoree, was a special guest for the refreshment hour.

The other prisoner back in custody was identified as Robert Farmer, 31, of Lincolnton, Route 1. He was arrested in Atlanta, Ga., following his escape last Saturday from a Macon County road gang.

Research Need In N. C. Discussed By Gov. Scott

FUQUAY-VARINA —(AP)— North Carolina needs a good research program if the state is to continue to hold the leadership in tobacco.

This was asserted yesterday by Governor Scott as he delivered the principal address at a big Farmers Day celebration here. Scott told the gathering that "plans are underway now to secure the funds going, remember, it's not just a matter of how much tobacco we produce but of producing what the buyer wants."

The Farmers' Day program included dedication of a new $50,000 municipal building, a parade, a beauty contest, and sports events. A number of other state officials, including Secretary of State Thad Eure, were on hand.

Scott touched lightly on three big programs of his administration —rural roads, schools and rural telephones. He said: "Many of you now have phones who didn't have them before. Let's help the rest of the people get them."

He reiterated a plea for development of North Carolina's rivers, and urged the crowd: "When the time comes for us to pick a new leadership, let us pick one that will go forward, not look backward."

"You hear cries of socialism in state government," the Governor declared, "and North Carolina has done a lot of socialistic things. But everything we've done of a socialistic nature the people of this state would all be in favor of doing again."

Apology Is Due To Barking Dog

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (UP)— Lavern Basler, 17, wondered today how to apologize to his pet dog, Peggy, whom he cuffed for climbing up on the bed where he was smoking a cigaret.

The light blow knocked embers off the cigaret and started a slow mattress fire. Later, Peggy's barking awoke Basler and his father, who found the house in flames and ran with Peggy to safety.

Home Ec Teachers Meet To Map Year's Program

The vocational and non-vocational home economics teachers of Pitt County met recently to plan a program of work for the coming year.

The afternoon session of the meeting was spent on the program planning. Topics for the programs were approved and included community and group recreation, standard and publicity for home projects, adult ducation, child care, home nursing, refinishing furniture, and lighting in the home.

An evaluation of last year's work was given during the morning session in order to see what part of the study in the group had meant most to the teachers in their classroom activities. The evaluation was also given to aid the teachers in determining the type of work needed for the coming year.

Each teacher present gave a report on the group meeting which she attended at the North Carolina Vocational Teachers Conference in Chapel Hill this month. The reports covered such topics as community and group activities in recreation, home care of the sick, spiritual values in family living, textiles, and health in the state and home.

During the morning session officers for the coming year were elected. Betty Hansinger of Greenville was elected chairman and Mrs. T. L. Kraft, Jr., of Ayden was named vice-chairman. Other officers named were: Elsie Seago, Greenville, assistant vice-chairman; Mrs. Floyd Hendrix, Grimesland, treasurer; Mrs. Sara Perkins, Chicod, hostess; Betty Hansinger, FHA advisor; Alya Taylor, Winterville, secretary; and Mrs. Marguerite Pierce, Belvoir, and Billie W. Perry, Bethel, reporters.

The county, district, and state FHA rallies were discussed at the meeting and the group also discussed the booths for the Pitt County Fair.

Mrs. Hendrix, the hostess, and her mother served the group lunch at which time Dr. McNiel, head of the home economics department at East Carolina College, and Alice Strawn, teacher trainer at East Carolina College, joined the group. During lunch a handpainted bowl was given to Mrs. Kraft, a recent bride.

'Honest Mistake' In Twin Deaths

PIERRE, S. D. —(AP) —"It appears like an honest mistake and it doesn't look as if any action will be taken."

This was the statement of State's Attorney Martin Weeks, Jr., after conferring yesterday with Attorney General Ralph A. Dunham about the deaths of two persons Aug. 15. They died after injection of the wrong drug during an experiment with sedatives at the University of South Dakota.

Weeks pointed out that an inquest is in recess pending results of analysis of body tissues of the two victims, Mrs. Ardys Pearson and Jack Clifford.

Dr. Louis F. Michalek, university researcher, told a coroner's jury last week he picked up a wrong vial and injected methadon instead of demerol during the test for pain-killing reactions of the drugs.

Two County Youths Taking Active Partln Boy's Town

By MARTHA S. FORBES

According to recent reports from a local visitor to Boys Town, Nebraska, Pitt County's two members of the community are doing well and are very happy as citizens of the nation's most famous place for homeless boys.

Hafey Carlos (Pete) Jolly of Grifton who went to Boys Town in June, 1949, and Pete Avery of near Ayden, who became a citizen there in October of last year, are this community's link with the place where homeless boys from all over the country, regardless of race or creed, find love, shelter and physical surroundings which are incomparable.

Pete Jolly, who will celebrate his 17th birthday on Sunday, is a rising Senior in the Boys Town High School. He takes an active part in all activities there and holds down the regular position of third baseman on the B.T. baseball team. Young Pete, the son of a blind father who was unable to provide for him and a younger brother when the home was broken, is also a counselor in the "small boys" cottage, and helps the senior advisors in keeping the youngsters busy and happy. He has expressed a desire to join the Marine Corps upon graduation, and in his own words, he wants "to fight to preserve for boys everywhere the fine and decent way of living" which he has found in Boys Town. His younger brother is in an orphanage, and his father keeps in touch with them as best he can.

But young Pete misses personal contacts from fellow Pitt Countians, though he realizes that quite a number of local people regularly contribute to the support of the fine work which Father Wegener is carrying on out there.

Pete Avery, whose sister, Winifred Avery, employee at Saslow's Jewelers, has just returned from visiting there, is a husky 160 pounder now. He was a spindly lad of 14 when he reluctantly parted from his sister last fall. Now he's tall and stalwart and is as happy a youngster as can be found anywhere.

The sister reports that the training and environment there is incomparable. The boys are housed in cottages and dormitories according to age groups. Each house has a reading and study room, a music room where the young lads can relax and enjoy radio or phonograph music, a television room, and large, comfortable sleeping quarters.

Boys Town has its own schools, gymnasiums, swimming pools, ball fields, bakery, laundry, theatre, chapel, store—in short, it is a complete town within itself. The citizens elect their own mayor and board of aldermen and govern themselves entirely. The population is almost entirely all male, with just a few "outside" women who work in the administration building, in the laundry and in the dining hall.

Each citizen, in addition to attending school, is assigned daily duties. Some of the "duties" are recreational or job-training instruction, such as work in the wood-working shop, in the printery, newspaper office, or such things as ball practice, band practice, supervision of various chores, etc. But each boy is a willing and cooperative worker.

Then again there is some leisure time during which the boys fish, swim and boatride in the summer or ice skate and go sledding in the winter. Or if their mood is quieter, they can relax in the reading or game rooms or, as mentioned before, enjoy music and television.

In short, everything is provided for their physical comfort and character training, and according to Miss Avery, they are the happiest looking 900 boys to be found anywhere.

Incidentally, while she was visiting there, she was the guest in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Breci. Mrs. Breci is the former Doris Brown of this city, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Brown. Mr. Breci is a former citizen of Boys Town and was one of its mayors. At present he is attending the University at Omaha, Nebraska, which is only 11 miles away, and is also serving as counselor for one of the boys dormitories.

The citizens of this county who drop these kids a card or who ever so often send a contribution to Father Wegener for the maintenance of this outstanding place, can be satisfied that their expressions of interest are helping to make a decent life possible for 900 deserving lads.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLAS

THE SIN OF BEING A GOOD NEIGHBOR

You will probably say, "There must be a mistake here, either by the writer or by the typesetter. Surely it cannot be a sin to be a good neighbor."

Yes, it certainly can be a sin if we are nothing more than a good neighbor, for there are sins of omission as well as sins of commission. The Commandment, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," begins with the declaration, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul and with all thy mind." The Christian life does not consist in love for our neighbor alone. It consists in a love for our neighbor which is the outgrowth of our love for God.

But why bring this up? Because there are a lot of people today who believe that being a good neighbor comprises the whole of ethical values. To be a bad neighbor of course is a very positive sin—a sin of commission—but to be only a good neighbor and not to tie up this virtue with faith in the unseen God is a sin of omission. Ethics which does not stem from religion soon withers, and religion which does not come to the fruitage of sound ethics soon dries up and rots in the ground of the world's life.

The great commandment is a two-fold commandment: love God and love man. To try to obey one without the other is to commit a sin of omission.

Catching Up With The 20th Century

The use of electricity which we hold so common in powering dozens of home appliances, a power available for scores of years to the majority of American citizens, a basic element in Twentieth Century Living, will some day soon be available to hundreds of homes in Pitt, Craven and Beaufort counties who are without.

Few people pause to marvel at the luxury, now a "necessity" of flipping a switch to change night into day, to preserve foods by freezing or chilling; a magic switch that can heat, cook or operate appliances that make for easier living. It's too commonplace to give a second though; and doing without electricity is something we remotely attach to some far-off, remote land or age.

Yet there are homes and families who have waited for years to enjoy those "simple" luxuries we tak for granted.

At least those homes adjacent to the power lines, given a go-ahead Tuesday night by the Greenville Utilities Commission, don't have to wait much longer.

Suppose the low bid was higher than original estimates pointed to . . . would the bids have been any lower a month from now? . . . six months from now? . . . a year from now? With shortages and an indisputable rise in costs in progress (and certain to continue for an indefinite period of time) would it not have been more foolhardy than wise to further postpone this needed development?

To The Reflector, decision to proceed with the undertaking appears to have been desirable and practicable. And the ordering by the Utilities, in advance, of materials for the project is further evidence of sound judgment. Men of such foresight are deserving of commendation and appreciation by the public whom they serve.

Relatively speaking, 242 miles of power lines is not a lot of power lines. Yet, in the area which will be served, it represents a momentous occasion and an undertaking that is truly great. It took eighteen months to get the ball rolling on this project, and now that it has started, nine-tenths of the difficulties have been surmounted.

Two New Diamonds In Tarheelia's Crown

Executive Director George W. Gillette of the State Ports Authority told the members of the North Carolina Press Association last week that the port construction work the state is doing at Morehead City and Wilmington are a boon to the industrialization of North Carolina, and vital weapons for the nation's defense.

The Reflector and most of the other newspapers around the state agree heartily with Gillette's statement.

The days are past when gigantic ports like New York and San Francisco will be constructed. They are finding in the water traffic the same problem most cities have found in motor traffic . . . there is too much congestion in the large ports. They afford too choice a target for possible atomic attack. The trend in port construction is swinging to smaller more efficient ports; and North Carolina is belatedly, but nevertheless actively striving to create for itself two modern seaports.

The $7,500,000 the state legislature has provided for the project is a relatively small sum, but it will be adequate for the fine beginning which already has been made.

With industry already moving to the South in large proportions the ports at Morehead City and Wilmington will make North Carolina even more inviting to industrial organization which are looking for new sites away from congested northern cities, and yet near good transportation facilities. Then too, the port facilities at the two coastal points should afford North Carolina as a whole more favorable freight rates which the state needs and should have.

Within a few months the new installations at Morehead City and Wilmington will be ready to receive ships even though the ports project will not have been completed.

It will not be many months before North Carolina begins to feel the tangible boost the two improved seaports will give the economy of the state.

News Behind The News

WASHINGTON—Republicans in Congress are trying to make a record for economy in view of the fact that a housewife now spends $3.21 in marketing for food that would have cost her only a dollar in 1939.

The recent fights to slash the Foreign Aid Bill and to trim the regular budget won public attention everywhere. But simultaneously with making current newspaper headlines on savings, G.O.P. strategists here are storing up ammunition on other subjects for the election campaign which will run with accelerating speed from now until November 1952.

The Republican National Committee and the special Senatorial and House Campaign Committees have a triple-headed problem. They are out to win the Presidency but they must also regain both the Senate and the House. Otherwise the new man in the White House might suffer the fate of Herbert Hoover, whose hands were tied by a hostile Congress even though the nation was sliding into the great depression.

UNDERDOG—Chairman Guy George Gabrielson and his bullet-molders are determined to engage in a slugging match this time. Dewey, convinced that he had it in the bag, sincerely feared that a bitter campaign would disunite the nation on the eve of possible war. So he talked brotherly love. Truman on whistle stop trips talked more like an alderman in a ward rough-and-tumble—and walked off with the championship belt.

G.O.P. strategists theorize that in a given year the bulk of the voters either votes strongly for someone or violently against him. They argue that the public voted against Hoover in 1932 and for Truman, the underdog, in 1948. They think Truman's popularity is at low ebb, so they will keep on belting him.

ATTACK—Some may say that they blasted Roosevelt again and again and again but the attack method did not pay off. The explanation offered is that they unwisely slammed him for things the public approved of—Social Security, WPA, labor legislation, farm aid. They plan to plaster Truman with the corruption and Communism issues—two conditions which decent and loyal run-of-the-mine voters certainly abhor.

The Senate Crime Investigating Committee has just ended its public hearings in which racketeers, gamblers and other scum were exposed. It will make its final report around Sept. 1 and recommend legislation. This will furnish the G.O.P. with a text-book on crime issues.

By no means were all the underworld's big shots examined. Some other probe is bound to be suggested to find missing witnesses and other malefactors.

GRAFT—Republican spokesmen will soon crisscross the country in an organized effort to keep the public from forgetting about the links between crime and politics. Many thousand copies of the "Scandalous Years," an article published by Look Magazine, have been reprinted by Gabrielson's committee and will be distributed to precinct workers all over the nation.

It describes the frauds, immorality and crime of recent years together with alleged tie-ups between Administration figures and city underworld bosses.

An indication of what the campaign will be like is a Taft leader in Alaska who has stamped on every envelope of his voluminous out-going mail the slogan: "Get rid of graft. Vote for Taft." That $9,000 natural royal pastel mink coat will be pointed to again together with other questionable doings of Washington insiders.

MILITANT—Regardless of whatever thunder McCarthy has on tap or however critical some Republican leaders may become of his jungle method of fighting, the G.O.P. intends to keep alive the Reds-in-government issue.

They will argue that the Administration, though acquainted with the charges against the Hiss espionage outfit as early as 1941, failed to act. They will repeat the stories about Harry Dexter White, a former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. Julian Wadleigh of the Trade Agreements Section of the State Department, William Remington of the Commerce Department—top officials stained with red.

And they will ask, "Which party has been most alert and militant in opposition to Reds in government?"

Unless there is a landslide, Republican strategists realize they will have a tough job electing a G.O.P. Senate and House. The House is now 234 Democrats; 199 Republicans. The Senate 50 Democrats, 46 Republicans. Nearly everyone of the 19 Republican Senators facing re-election will have to fight hard; they have no Southern nest eggs.

CONTROL—Such powerful figures as Bricker, Ohio; Cain, Wasnington; Ives, New York; Jenner, Indiana; Kem, Missouri; Knowland, California; Lodge, Massachusetts; McCarthy, Wisconsin; Martin, Pennsylvania; Smith, New Jersey; Thye, Minnesota and Williame, Delaware come from industrial states where the Democrats and affiliated labor leaders are well organized.

To capture four more seats the Republicans' best chances are against Benton, Connecticut; Chaves, New Mexico; Kilgore, West Virginia; McFarland, Arizona; Moody, Michigan; O'Conor, Maryland and O'Mahoney, Wyoming—Democrats from states where Republicans in recent years have had periodic success.

Republicans realize that they have a tremendous organization job ahead if they are to control Congress. About 45 million potential voters failed to cast ballots in 1948. By grass-root organizational effort, the Gabrielson crowd hopes to get a slice of these stay-at-homes.

FOLEY, ALA., ONLOOKER: "When the people—at least, when a majority of the people—of this country decide they wish to make a change in the policies which are daily causing bad matters to become worse, those policies will be changed. But the people themselves must bring the change. So long as our people regard the government as a benevolent and doting parent, rather than as a personal responsibility, just so long will we continue to head toward a completely socialistic state."

Me And My Shadow

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

Since I've done my share of kicking Harry Truman, today I'm going to pat him on the back, and at the same time complain about Congress. Harry vetoed a bill that I think should have been vetoed, and Congress passed it over his veto.

Uncle Sam, as he should, pays good pensions to disabled veterans who can show that their disability is in some way connected with their military service. However, the new bill that Congress passed over Harry's veto provides that pensions of $120 a month will be paid to certain disabled veterans whose disabilities are in no way connected with military service. This bill will eventually cost the government $400 million a year.

The power that sold this bill of goods is the House Veterans' Affairs Committee, headed by John Rankin of Mississippi. Harry vetoed the bill because he thought it was a barefaced grab of public money. He said that veterans with disabilities not connected with military service should be cared for under measures that apply to the whole population, not merely to a special group.

Everybody agrees that above all, Truman is a politician. He probably will be a candidate for re-election. Therefore, you have to give him a pat on the back for having the guts to stand up against the veteran's lobby, standing up for what is right.

Congress could have easily let the bill die after the veto, but John Rankin's committee unanimously recommended that the bill be re-passed. Rankin hollered, "I am unalterably opposed to balancing the budget on the veterans."

The House repassed the bill by a vote of 318 to 45. The 318 included 166 members of Truman's party. It included 152 Republicans whose party is going to the people next with two main points in the platform:

1. Economy.
2. Morality in Government.

Since I'm a veteran, from the selfish point of view I enjoy veteran's benefits. But no veteran should have any benefit to which he is not entitled. The government has already come all around breaking its back for the veteran. And the politicians keep right on yelling for more.

Plenty of those politicians who voted for that bill know that it's a bad one. Privately, plenty of them will admit it in so many words. It just makes it rougher to pay a dollar in taxes when you know that part of it will be spent unfairly.

And I thank you.

Around Capitol Square

Raleigh, N. C. By LYN NISBET

REGIONAL — Action is expected at a meeting scheduled for Wilmington next Monday night looking toward organization of a regional council to promote the development of southeastern North Carolina. Preliminary surveys made by Marion Shuffler of the state department of conservation and development, at request of local leaders, indicate considerable interest in the venture throughout the eight counties of Bladen, Brunswick, Columbus, Duplin, New Hanover, Onslow, Pender and Sampson. The proposed organization will seek to promote general development of the entire area along recreational lines, with perhaps major attention at first to industrial promotion. The area already has a recreation and travel promotion agency in the South Eastern North Carolina Beach Association, which has attracted nationwide attention through sponsorship of the annual fishing rodeo.

PATTERN — There is growing trend toward co-operative regional efforts to supplement local community activities. The Albemarle Association in the northeast, the Western North Carolina Associated Communities in the southwest, the sandhills organizations in the central part of the state, have domonstrated the effectiveness of joint endeavor.

WARNING — Those with experience in other regional activities are ready to warn sponsors of new organizations that the greatest danger lies in expecting the sectional group to take over the whole job, to replace rather than supplement and encourage community efforts. Each neighborhood has peculiar problems and special advantages. Rivalry among them is inevitable; in fact it is desirable. One function of the regional set up is to keep the rivalry friendly and to prevent community jealousy from interfering with sectional progress. Another danger point noted by experienced hands at the game is impatience. If smokestacks and payrolls do not materialize in every town during the first year, there is disposition for participating community leaders to lose interest.

SCOTT — Many of those who were inclined to laugh off the idea that Governor Scott might be a candidate for lieutenant governor next year are changing their minds. The probability of such a race increases every day. Meantime, there are a lot of wisecracks being made about the prospect. One oldtimer suggests that if Kerr Scott presides over the senate and Eugene Bost of Cabarrus over the house, the general assembly may continue in session until Labor Day. Bost is currently rated the leading prospect for speakership. Duuring the past two sessions of the legislature he was named by Governor Scott as one of the bitterest foes of the administration in the whole assembly.

CONTROL — Another wisecrack has to do with statements often made in the past that the lobbyists sought to control the legislature by electing the lieutenant governor and speaker. One fellow said that heretofore the lobbyists had elected one man to control fifty senators, but if Kerr Scott should be chosen lieutenant governor the lobbyists would have to elect fifty senators to control one man. That retains the fifty-to-one ratio, but reverses it, he said.

PROSPECT — One result of the minor boom for Scott as lieutenant governor has been to revive pressure upon Frank Taylor of Goldsboro to get in the race. Taylor is speaker of the 1951 house, culminating many years as a member of the legislature. He incurred the wrath of Governor Scott in 1949 when he as chairman of the appropriations committee failed to follow the governor's recommendations for greater spending of public money. Numerous times during the sessions of 1949 and 1951 and since, Governor Scott has been extremely caustic in his criticism of Taylor. A contest between the two for lieutenant governor, which carries with it presidency of the senate, would present a clearout choice to the voters.

SPEAKERSHIP — That development would almost certainly bring about a similar contest for speakership of the house, with Bost carrying the banner for the conservatives and Roy Taylor of Buncombe as color bearer for the so-called liberals. Most observers agree that a primary campaign between Scott and Taylor for lieutenant governor would relegate other candidates into the background, might even take the spotlight off the governor's race. The issues would be more clearly drawn than would be the case among other candidates for lieutenant governor. Roy Rowe of Pender and J. C. Pittman of Lee are presently regarded as most likely entrants. Neither can be classed as pro-Scott, but they would not provide the keen division that a Scott-Taylor contest would assure. Undoubtedly the speakership race, which would get underway only after the primary, would be influenced by results of the voting for governor and lieutenant governor.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

THE TRUMAN PROGRAM
(Wilson Daily Times)

Somehow we wish we could feel that the Truman group were in earnest in its efforts to better America, but we can't. Its members tell us that Congress lifted controls at the end of the war whereupon prices rose rapidly. But they don't tell us that the President had already told labor it might have increases. They tell us, too, that they want to expand medical care; but they don't tell us that, to do it, we must have regimentation. They tell us they want extend the protection now given to industrial workers for farm workers; but they don't tell us about the resistance that would entail on the farms.

In a way, it's like Socialism. Indeed, if the truth were known, it is Socialism. But it works best on paper. If the Truman program were adopted to toto, we'd have more thousands of bureaucrats checking on about everything we do. It would in a large measure wipe out our individual rights, placing us completely at the mercy of those bureaucrats. In many ways we're there now. To stir up a mess, all any employe has to do is to say that he's not being paid the minimum wage established by law. Whether he's right or wrong, a galaxy of bureaucrats will swarm over a plant poring over records that ordinarily are of no concern to them.

Over in Asheville the other day, the assistant Secretary of Labor Ralph Wright, defended the Truman program, including its non-essential spending. But did he get his ideas across? Truman is not a liberal; he's merely a politican who knows how, through federal spending, to get votes. Some Americans, we know, like it. But they're not the ones who must foot the bill. When we analyze the program carefully, however, we find that it's hurting not those who pay the bills alone, but those who receive, as well. For the latter can't live off each other. When the former run out, as they have in Britain, we'll all be in the same boat. What, then, will be left to tax?

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER

A little bit more optimism has been permeating business this week. While there is no expectation that sales will reach the volume they did during panic buying earlier this year, there are a few signs that sales will rise to better levels.

Sales almost always rise in the fall of the year, but belief that sales can make more than seasonal gains is growing stronger.

The textile market has been picking up. Earlier sales had been off so much that one trader remarked, "It couldn't be worse if EVERYBODY was away on vacation. Most observers regard the upturn cautiously. That big cotton crop and somewhat lower wool prices tend to keep trade buying conservative.

Tanners also report an upturn in orders, indicating better prospects for shoes and leather goods.

Department store sales, a bellwether of retail trade, have been running behind year-ago marks but they have been closing the gap. Sales for the week ending July 21 were 23 per cent behind the same week last year; during the week of July 28 they were 21 per cent behind, during the week of August 4 they were 14 per cent behind and during the week of August 11, the last for which figures have been reported, they were only 8 per cent behind.

Some retailers are figuring on a rise in credit sales over and above increases being caused by easier terms. They point out that late last year and early this year many families, in fear of shortages, used their credit to the limit. But with income rising, most families have reduced their balances to the point at which they are in a position to take on new obligations.

That there is plenty of spending power to be tapped is indicated by the rise in personal income payments and the rise in savings. It is also indicated in an incident in New Jersey. A store there picked up $1,000,000 worth of fire-damaged stock from a Richmond, Va., department store and offered it for 40 cents on the dollar. Eighteen thousand shoppers showed up and the merchandise was pretty well cleared out by mid-afternoon.

SOAP MAKERS NEED A NEW FORECASTER

One day recently leading soap manufacturers reduced their prices, explaining that costs of raw materials were down.

That day the prices of tallow and grease went up.

The soap cuts won't last long.

SPEED GLAMORIZES PERSONAL GIFT

When a prospect visits a Southern California auto showroom he is, quite naturally, asked his name and address. When he leaves, he is given a handful of matchbooks bearing his name and address.

During the visit the salesman slips the prospect's name and address to an assistant who imprints the matchbook covers in a back room.

URGES LESS EMOTION IN MERCHANDISING

What is good advice for jewelers should be good advice for other merchants.

Jewelers have to learn to live with uncertainty, W. D. Evnas, Elgin Watch sales manager, told the American National Retail Jewelers Association meeting in New York.

The ups and downs of the last 14 months are only a sample of what is to come, he said. Building up inventories on every war scare and liquidating them on every peace move is neither sound nor necessary, he said. Keeping merchandising operations on as normal a basis as possible is the best way to preserve the economy, he added.

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK —(AP)— Rosie the Riveter today is more likely to be a Mrs. than a Miss.

Why are American mothers swarming back into defense factories again in numbers reminiscent of Second World War days?

In the last war many women felt it was a patriotic duty to go to work in defense industries. Now many feel that way again. Others want to earn money to get more luxuries for themselves or a better deal out of life for their children.

"I guess with most of us it is a mixture of patriotism and a desire to help out our families," said Mrs. Margaret L. Packer.

Mrs. Packer, a pleasant-featured, hazel-eyed woman of 42, has five children. She looks and talks like any average housewife, and she is typical of millions of mothers who now are working again in America's expanding defense plants.

"Two thirds of the women in the plant I work in are married," she said, "and of those, two-thirds have children under 14."

She has two married daughters and a son, Donald, who is in the Navy. Still at home with her are two younger daughters, Verna, 14, and Donna, 4.

Mrs. Packer is employed by the Pratt & Whitney Aircraft plant at Hartford, Conn. She worked there from 1942 to 1945 as a lathe operator. She was pleasantly surprised, when they called her last May, to find they wanted her for a better post. Women were being hired on exactly the same basis, and at the same rate of pay, as men.

She was immediately made one of five women instructors who train mixed classes of new men and women employes how to operate the machines that stamp out airplane parts. It is exacting work. At first there was some grumbling among the men at being taught by a woman.

"I showed them how I could operate the machines," Mrs. Packer said shyly, "there weren't any more objections.

"I've found the men very nice to work with. They are more nervous at the start and make more mistakes than women. But they are easier to train and learn faster."

She earns up to $350 a week, including overtime, and works from 3:30 p.m. until midnight. Her husband, Chauncey, a skilled craftsman, is employed by the same firm from 7:30 a.m., until 3:30 p.m.

"Sunday is about the only real time we get to see each other, Except coming or going," said Mrs. Packer, smiling.

But she says that working outside the home hasn't disrupted her household, because all pitch in and do their share.

"Verna—she's in high school now—is a great help to me," she said. "She gets most of the meals and helps take care of her sister. We divide the housework. And my husband takes care of the lawn and the garden."

Mrs. Packer feels that only in such a way can the problems of the outside-working wife be solved.

"There has to be a lot of cooperation in the family," she said firmly. "Each must help the other. But if they do, everything is all right, and it is worthwhile.

"I've had no difficulty, and we've been able to do more things for the children. It is that way with most of he women I've talked to. So long as there is unity in the home, there is no trouble."

In the plant that employs her one out of every three machine operators is a woman, the same ratio that existed in the last war. Mama is back in overalls again —for the Duration.

Letter To The Editor

Dear Sirs:

A person can hardly help himself from comparing the State of Carolina with the man who will peek through a knothole in a fence to see a ball game instead of paying his fare.

Television is a popular thing all over the country, people love and enjoy it. But how much are the people of North Carolina enjoying it? The people of North Carolina are doing the same as the man peeking through the knothole. What television they do get they can't thank North Carolina for it for what it got comes from another state—Norfolk, Va.

There is no state where the people are so stretched out through the country; they may be called shut-ins. What a blessing it would be if North Carolina had a station near Greenville so that all the section around here would benefit by it.

I believe our Governor, Senators and Congressmen have shown mighty little interest in it for the people.

Washington Letter

By SIGRID ARNE
(For JANE EADS)

WASHINGTON — You have read about the poor little Korean waifs whom warm-hearted American GIs pick up on the battle line.

The kids are bathed, de-loused, fed and loved. Shirts are cut down to clothe them. But finally comes the day when the U. S. outfit has to move into battle. The waifs—by now company mascots—can't go along. They have to be sent "back". There are heart-tearing scenes.

The children—after months of hungry wandering—have found the security of big hearts near the battle line. Weeping, they throw their chubby arms around one GI neck after another. Even the GIs weep. But the kids "go back".

What happens to them? They are now going to "Happy Mountain", near Pusan, a place literally held together with prayers. It is a couple of ramshackle buildings that house an orphanage and a clinic that has just "growed" as the American soldier tried to take care of childish misery. It houses all sorts of little waifs in addition to the much-loved mascots of the various GI units.

"Happy Mountain" often receives a plane from the battle line with many such youngsters aboard, terribly wounded.

"Happy Mountain" is run by Capt. Clifford G. McKeon, from Perth Amboy, N. J. He says: "I am not a religious man. But I am certain we have existed so far only through faith and prayer. I have seen my cash balance go down to three cents, but every time something pulls us through."

For a while they had no medical supplies. One day Army Nurse Mary Kuhn, of Kansas City, led a small group of sister nurses into the place, their arms loaded with supplies.

Koreans have never had a children's hospital. They are making what gifts they can. But the real "Daddys" of "Happy Mountain" are the GIs who come back to see how their mascots are doing. They bring money from the men who are still up on the line, reassure their own special tikes that they are not forgotten and then fall to with hammer and shovel. Right now "Happy Mountain" is getting a small annex through the work of men on leave.

Circus Fact: Elephants Perform Best For Women

Everyone knows that elephants are intelligent animals, and the fact that they perform better for women than they do for men, proves it beyond a doubt. And, when one looks at the girls who present the huge beasts in the rings of the King Brothers Circus, coming to Greenville, Wednesday, August 29th, for afternnon and night performances at the circus grounds near the Farmer's Warehouse under the auspices of the Exchange Club there just can't be any argument about it for the girls are very, very attractive and they know their job.

Mary Lake, pictured above with "Ol Marm"—said to be nearly 100 years old, is a girl who knows elephants. She can make them do their stuff and like it — like her, too, and you'll agree after you see her in the center ring as she puts them through their paces.

More than 700 people comprise the personnel of the big show this season with literally scores of internationally known stars and features, headed as they are by the renowned Cristiani Family of bareback riding marvels, with Lucio, conceded the greatest riding comedian in all circus history

Other headliners include Hugo Zacchini, the man who is shot from the mouth of a giant cannon; Truzzi, Europe's juggling sensation; La Louisa, the breath-taking aerial star from France; the Ortans Troupe, spring-board acrobatic stars; Vicente Barragan, the suicidal aerialist from Italy; the Sabatiny Troupe, high-trapeze performers, and many others from among the 200 men and women erenic stars and performers.

The performance will begin at 2 and 8 P.M. with the main gates opening at 1 and 7 p.m., and for the convenience of circus patrons, a downtown ticket office will be in operation show day at the Bissette Drug Store at 416 Evans Street.

Cooling Shower

Nearly an inch and a third of rain fell here yesterday afternoon to cause a precipitate drop in temperature, Mrs. Carl E. Maiden, local observer for the U. S. Weather Bureau, reported.

Highest temperature here during the afternoon before the storm was 92 degrees. Lowest last night, 69, and at 8 a.m. today it was still 69.

Yesterday a year ago, the highest temperature here was 89 degrees. Lowest that night, 67, and at 8 a.m. next day it was 75. No rain that day.

The sky was overcast during the forenoon today, with indications of more rain.

Penny Shortage Noted By Banks

Shortages now include pennies even through there is no shortage of copper.

The Philadelphia Mint is operating on a 60-hour week and the Federal Reserve Bank in Richmond is getting $60,000 in pennies from the mint each week. However, it seems that there are more pennies being used incident to odd prices of merchandise, sales tax, parking meters, piggy banks, etc.

There is no real shortage as more are being minted than ever before. It just means that more are being used and they cannot be minted fast enough to supply the demand. Another reason for the shortage is that some neglect depositing or disposing of pennies as fast as they accumulate.

Banks are asking that people who have a supply of pennies, take them to the bank for exchange and keep them moving as the banks are sometimes unable to get what they need for the merchant's use.

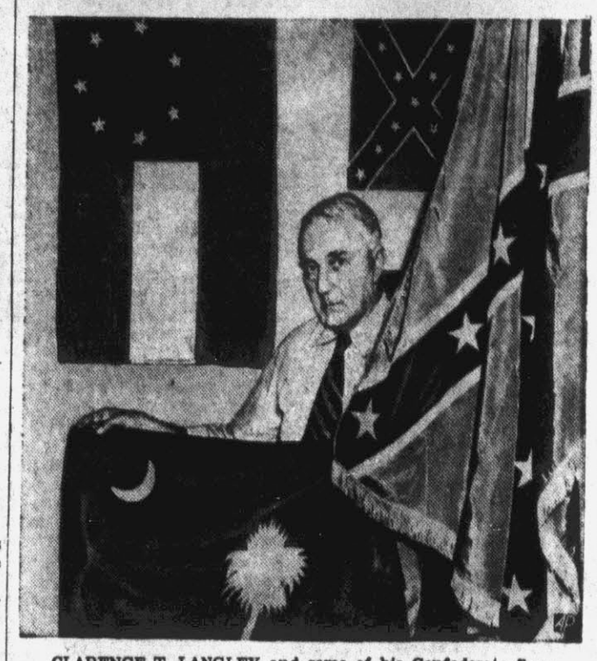
Rebel Yell In Yankee Territory



CLARENCE T. LANGLEY and some of his Confederate flags.

By AUSTIN ADKINSON
AP Newsfeatures

COLUMBIA, S. C. — The Flag of the Confederacy waves over a lot of Yankee territory now, courtesy of Clarence T. Langley.

Confederate flags in various sizes are fast-moving items in Langley's flag workshop and story here.

Helping to revive interest in the Southern flag is the training at nearby Fort Jackson of the 31st (Dixie) Infantry Division.

Originally an Alabama-Mississippi National Guard outfit, the division now is laced liberally with Yankees. Its flag is the Confederate Stars and Bars.

And a transplanted Yankee, as any Southerner can tell you, often works up more interest in the South and Southern lore in a short stay than some natives do in a lifetime.

Of course there always is some local demand for Confederate flags. This apparently has been increased by the flag fad the soldiers started.

Langley finds the two-by-three foot battleflag the most popular of the banners he makes here. This has the familiar whitestarred blue cross on a red field.

Death Came At Predicted Time

REDWOOD CITY, Cal. (UP)—When Mrs. Edythe Hanson, 32, got out of the hospital a month ago, she made this prophecy:

"I shall die at 11:45 on Aug. 21."

Her friends and neighbors laughed it off. Nevertheless, a number of callers dropped by her house last Tuesday noon "just to see how she was." Mrs. Hanson was still alive.

"You see," they told her. "You're just imagining things."

Mrs. Hanson smiled, but said nothing.

That night about 9 o'clock, Mrs. Hanson went to sleep. She never awoke.

"I called the doctor," said her husband Marvin. "at 11:45, he pronounced her dead."

Hanson said his wife was a "woman of great faith and people with such faith have premonitions not given to others."

Courtesy Pays; Drivers Freed

CHICAGO (UP)—An Alphonse and Gaston act freed two drivers of auto accident charges.

John Hanskiewicz, 48, appeared in auto safety court yesterday, to tell about a crash between his car and another auto.

"It was all my fault," he said. "I plead guilty."

"No, no," shouted Theodore Lebow, 59. "It was all my fault."

Judge William V. Daly figured both couldn't be guilty and dismissed the case.

Teachers Assail Discrimination

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (UP)—The AFL American Federation of Teachers took a stand today opposing racial discrimination among its own locals.

In a resolution passed at its 34th annual convention, the federation notified 44 of its 500 locals that they are violating the constitution of the national body in refusing membership to Negroes.

Polio Strikes Entire Family

FORT WORTH, Tex. —(AP)—A family is in a hospital polio ward here.

Mrs. Lester Huelon Collier was stricken five weeks ago. The next day her four-months-old baby son was brought to the hospital. Two days later the father joined them.

Collier is in an iron lung. The wife and baby are in adjoining rooms.

Uses Movies To Influence Solons

WASHINGTON (UP)— President Truman has unveiled a new White House wrinkle for pushing legislation—a movie party for Congress, complete with pretty girl ushers in pastel evening dresses.

The success of the new technique remains to be established because its first use last night drew a comparatively small congressional audience.

Mr. Truman got the idea for the movie party when he saw the stark, realistic film shot by the Army Signal Corps in the Kansas and Missouri flood country. The president, engaged in getting a $400,000,000 flood relief fund through Congress, thought the senators and representatives might learn a lot from actual scenes of the multi-billion-dollar disaster.

He asked members of Congress to join him last night at the Interior Department auditorium to see the 40-minute film. The invitations were relayed to the members by Speaker Sam Rayburn and Vice President Alben W. Barkley.

The setting was well nigh perfect for a movie. The auditorium was comfortably air conditioned and pretty girls from the Bureau of Mines served as usherettes. The upcoming House recess and the last-minute nature of the invitation worked against the President, however, and the 800-seat theater was less than half full.

Of a less-than-400 audience, fewer than 100 were members of the House and Senate, although they helped out the crowd by bringing along their families.

Michigan Air Is Sent To Texas

MARQUETTE, Mich. —(AP)—The Chamber of Commerce of Marquette, where it's almost always cool, gave a sample today to heat-ridden Texas.

Marquette's C of C sent to Fort Worth's Chamber of Commerce by air express a cylinder containing "clean, pure, cool, washed Lake Superior air."

"Please use it freely," said an accompanying message, "for relief of your hellish temperatures."

The common American firefly flashes at approximately six-second intervals.

East German Police Are 'Fed Up' With Slavery

East German Rose
AP Newsfeatures

FRANKFURT, Germany — An "I'm fed up" feeling is growing in the Soviet-trained People's Police of East Germany. Four or five members of this red force flee across the border daily to freedom in the west.

Each new arrival claims he will be followed by hundreds and perhaps thousands of others. During June, 137 deserted. Most of the deserters are membes of the regular Eastern police force. But some police-army also are bolting.

What makes them risk their lives to scamper to West Berlin or Western Germany? A U. S. High Commission survey tells the story of the typical deserter as based on interviews with 1,500 former People's Policemen and members of the police-army, now refugees in West Berlin.

Fear and an incurable hunger for political and personal freedom apparently are the main reasons influencing desertions. Specific complaints include:

Too much Communist ideological indoctrination, suspicion about former residence in the west, failure of the People's Police command to fulfill pre-enlistment promises of leave and promotion, and harsh discipline.

Deserters have recently cited a new general order—No. 201—under which People's Policemen with relatives in the west can be discharged. Existence of these relatives is checked through spies and by examining mail.

Reading material for the police is restricted almost entirely to Communist pamphlets, magazines and newspapers. It's a major offense for the police rank-and-file to be found with western literature or listening to RIAS, the American-sponsored Berlin radio station.

Indoctrination classes, discussions, newspaper-reading sessions and self-study courses occupy three to five hours of the People's Policemen's day, week in and week out.

Estimates of the monthly cost of written propaganda for a People's Policeman average about 16 per cent of his wage. He has to pay this 'voluntarily," after the fashion of Nazi-sonsored welfare collections.

The National Geographic Society says some sturgeon spend their entire lives in fresh water.

Only One Child Left On Storm-Swept Isle

BLASKET ISLAND, Ireland —(UP)— Only one child is left on this storm-swept Atlantic island and he wants to leave.

Gerry Kyne at the age of four has suddenly realized that he alone is young on an island of ruins, old folks and tiny cottages whose huge peat fires must burn the year round.

There are no shops, doctors or priests. The boy has heard only rumors of movies, automobiles—even of the traditional Irish dances.

His playmates are his two grandfathers, the seagulls, the rabbits and the sheep.

Gerry soon must start school and there is no school. The government cannot station a teacher here just for him.

Transport to the mainland is so dangerous, few inhabitants ever leave this "last outpost of the Celtic empire."

"I want to go to New York," Gerry says. It seems he once saw a picture of the skyscrapers of Manhattan.

Gerry's parents, the island's other 26 inhabitants and, for that matter, the Dublin government, are worried over his desire to leave.

Young men for generations have been threatening to depart but never could do so because somebody had to stay to tend the old. Now there is only one child left.

Free Repair Job On 'Stolen' Car

CHICAGO —(UP)— Chester Dober reported to police that his car had been stolen.

Two hours later he found it where he had parked it but in better mechanical condition. Brakes, clutch and steering gear had been adjusted.

Then Gust Jamy, a mechanic, appeared. Jamy explained he had had an order to repair a car like Dober's. He got the wrong one. Jamy said there would be no charge

Claim Dancing Is Divorce Cause

The South African Dutch Reformed Church said today that 75 per cent of today's divorces begin on the dance floor.

In a memorandum the church blamed "sex stimulation" in modern dances for causing divorces. Among unmarried persons, it said, dancing degrades man "to the level of animals and stands condemned in the light of Christian ethics."

Air Strikes Open Final Phases Of War Games

FORT BRAGG, N. C.—(UP)—Flashing air strikes marked the Carolina war games today as the 9th Air Force sought to lay open the Aggressor to a massive airborne and ground offensive that will wind up the "Southern Pine" maneuver this weekend.

Having achieved a 4 or 5 to 1 superiority over Aggressor's air arm, U.S. commanders cut down their air defense effort and offered half the day's planned flights for close support of the 28th and 43rd Divisions.

On each mission today, planes circled over the front awaiting target assignments for 45 minutes to two hours. The shorter period was for F-84 Thunderjets, the longer for F-51 Mustangs. F-84's also provided air defense against possible strikes by the Aggressor's dwindling Air Force.

B-45 jet bombers and F-51s hit at enemy air fields, marshalling areas and communications as the effort to cut off forward aggressor elements mounted.

Whether the available airborne firepower is used fully and effectively depends to a large extent on the division commanders and their operations officers. Some observers felt that a need for more thorough training in air-ground operations was evident in the two National Guard divisions yesterday.

While ample fighter planes were available, few requests for close support missions were relayed to the Army-Air Force joint operations center which allocates air power.

Divisions are responsible for gathering target information from forward observers, deciding between artillery and airplane targets and speedily requesting air strikes through Army communication systems. Once planes are assigned, Air Force controllers at the front direct them to targets selected by Army officers with whom they work side by side.

On the ground, meanwhile, the Aggressor began another attack on the U.S. lines, possibly hoping to throw off balance the superior forces being gathered against them. Before dawn, three battalions, one of them armored, hit the front held by the 109th Regiment of the 28th Division, a Pennsylvania Guard outfit. The maneuver plan indicated a day-long fight would result in perhaps a three-mile withdrawal by the regiment.

Popped His Gum Once Too Often

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill. (UP)—Hugh Fiala popped his bubble gum once too often and landed in court.

He pleaded guilty yesterday to charges of being intoxicated and ramming his car into a telephone pole while blowing bubbles.

Mails Neckties In Mute Protest

NEWARK, O. (UP)—William L. White, an engineer, said he was mailing President Truman an "old necktie" today in protest to a proposed 25 per cent federal tax on cravats.

White termed the tax, "diabolical." He said he had already sent "year-old ties" to Sen. Ralph Flanders (R-Vt) who proposed the tax, and Sen. Robert Kerr (D-Okla) who seconded the measure.

White said he was "fed up" with the administration and mailed the president the tie so he could "start another haberdashery after 1952."

Alaska Flier Is Showing Profit Carrying Fish

TAKUTAT, Alaska —(AP)— Carl Omdahl, a bush pilot, makes a comfortable living flying what probably is Alaska's only "fish-lift."

The stocky little pilot with the bushy Van Dyke flies freshly-caught Sockeye salmon from the ocean beach 60 miles to the Bellingham fisheries cannery here. He has been "flying the fish" for three seasons now and considers it a profitable venture for a bush pilot.

The cannery guarantees Omdahl $6,000 per season, plus 10 cents for each fish he totes in. The cannery also pays all of his flying expenses.

"I can carry up to 175 fish each trip and I make up to seven trips a day," he said. "I've got about 10,000 to my credit now and should total more than 30,000 when the season ends Sept. 20."

WORK PAYS WELL

A bit of fact figuring and it's seen that Omdahl takes in about $9,000 for three months work

"Some people think I'm crazy to be flying fish around all day," Omdahl said. "Maybe they're right. Sometimes late in the season the weather gets bad and I have to use the surf line as a guide to find the beach. I always keep the engine running so we won't get caught by the tide."

His plane, or "fish-wagon," is a battered BT-13 basic trainer with the rear cockpit paneled in sheet metal to carry the fish. The plane is equipped with dual-wheeled landing gear to permit landings and take-offs on the loose sands of the beach.

The salmon are caught in setnets in the Dangerous, Situk and Lost Rivers in the Yakutat area. From there they are jeeped to the beach and tossed into Omdahl's plane and flown to the Yakutat airport. The pilot gaffs the eight-pound-plus fish into a trailer and uses a jeep to tow them two miles to the cannery in town.

A descendent of Norwegian stock, Omdahl does not come by his flying skill accidentally. He carries yellowed clippings in his wallet telling of his uncle, Oscar Omdahl, who piloted the explorer Roald Amundsen on his polar flight in the '20s.

Omdahl has a wife and two children living in Petersburg. In addition, he has two airplanes, a hangar, a small apartment house and a profitable flying school.

He's debating now whether to take his summer earnings and spend the winter in the sunny south.

The state of Travancore is at the southern tip of India.

Sea Scouts With An Eye For Beauty

At first glance it looks as if Miss North Carolina and her pretty friend have been taken in tow by a group of sailors, but a closer look will establish the fact that the Sea Scouts of Greenville and Plymouth have their own eyes for beauty. The photo was taken at Morehead City recently when the local Sea Scouts arrived there on a week's cruise. Lulong Ogburn (center standing) and her unidentified friend (center foreground) seem as happy over the situation as the Sea Scouts. Included in the group are Greenville Sea Scouts Dickie Newell, Billy Tripp, Jimmy Phelps, Fred Haar, Bob Langston, Ronald Duffin, and Cledith Oakley.

Blames Congress For Meat Price

WASHINGTON (UP)— The administration passed the buck to Congress today for an impending change in meat ceilings that will hike retail beef prices one to two cents a pound within 60 days.

Price Controller Michael V. DiSalle conceded unhappily that the housewives will be paying more for beef in the nation's butcher shops this fall, instead of getting the 10-cents-a-pound cut he had planned.

The meat packing and slaughtering industry got a green light for the new price boost at an all-day meeting with DiSalle's Office of Price Stabilization aides yesterday. They were scheduled to confer with him today on other changes in meat regulations—mostly on enforcement measures—required by the new controls law.

OPS officials said housewives can blame the coming beef price rise on the controls law which Congress passed last month and which President Truman signed reluctantly on a "this or nothing" basis.

It was the first time administration spokesmen have raised the cry of "Blame It on Congress" during the current political battle over inflation controls. Observers believed it would be heard again and more loudly between now and the 1952 presidential election.

Mr. Truman is scheduled to send Congress a message this week asking for amendment of the controls law. He wants restoration of DiSalle's authority to impose quotas on cattle slaughtering as a weapon against black marketeering, and repeal or modification of two provisions in the law passing on increased production costs—both direct and indirect—all the way from the manufacturer to the consumer.

DiSalle and Economic Stabilizer Eric A. Johnston discussed those proposals at a closed meeting of the House Banking Committee yesterday. Committee members indicated afterwards that the proposed changes haven't a chance of passage.

As for the beef price increase, DiSalle's aides said the packers and slaughterers had to get it because the controls law requires that they maintain their customary profit margins.

Glass 'Sandwiches' To Protect Historic Papers Of Early U. S.

WASHINGTON —(UP)— Scientists of government and industry, after years of research, are completing plans for a big ceremony on Constitution Day, Sept. 17. The nation's two most important documents will be placed in glass sandwiches.

The documents are the original engrossed and signed manuscripts of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States. The sandwiches are an adaptation of the modern picture window, a window consisting of two panes of glass sealed with a dead-air space between the panes to provide maximum insulation while permitting you to look through to the out-of-doors.

To seal the historic documents inside such a glass sandwich, the Library of Congress and the Bureau of Standards first had to take several precautions. Foremost consideration had to be given to a process requiring a minimum of heat to avoid injuring the documents.

Government officials were assisted by technicians of the Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co. who perfected the special technique of hermetic sealing to be used. The temperature to which the documents will be subjected during the sealing operation was determined in the company's laboratory.

It already has been tested by a trial sealing of a facsimile of the Declaration of Independence, just to be on the safe side.

The facsimile has had a workout in all respects. The glass enclosure was filled with helium to an exact amount. The humidity in the enclosure was fixed precisely. The glass was selected to ensure air-tight conditions.

Special backing substance for the documents was provided to compensate for moisture absorption during different seasons of the year. A suitable filter was selected to eliminate harmful effects of light radiation.

Finally, the Bureau of Standards selected a leak detector. If anything did happen to change conditions inside the glass enclosure, they will know about it. Any change in the composition of a gas can be observed by measuring the change in its thermal conductivity.

So the nation, in the 175th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence is about to attain complete protection of its historic documents.

"Every resource of science and technology," said Luther H. Evans, Librarian of Congress, "has been applied in the effort to make these precious documents as permanently secure as the principles they proclaim."

Jungle Cleanup Goes On In Malayan War

KUALA LUMPUR —(AP)— Fifty-one Communist terrorists, regarded as key men in the Malayan jungle war against the British security forces, have been killed since Jan. 1.

A spokesman for the British director of operations said "more and more leaders have been killed because police and military patrols are daily armed with more accurate information" on terrorists' jungle hideouts.

ON THE HOUSE

By DAVID G BAREUTHER, AP Real Estate Editor

ITS GETTING to be much more difficult to build or buy a house than it was a year ago.

More cash is needed. You have to pay the mortgage off in shorter time. Interest rates are higher. And so monthly payments are larger.

On top of this prices have gone up.

The change has not been as drastic for older houses as for new construction, but it is noticeable.

Three major factors in this change have been:

1. The Federal Reserve Board's Regulation X, tightening up on the amount of credit a bank can allow for home buyers.

2. The Treasury Department's boost in interest rates on government bonds, which as been reflected in other interest rates.

3. Inflation—higher building costs and therefore higher values placed on all houses because of the reproduction factor.

THE RESULT IS that if you want to buy a new house today, and it is priced at $10,000, about the best you can do is to pay $1,300 in cash and agree to pay $57.42 monthly on a 20-year $8,700 mortgage at 6 per cent. Those monthly mortgage payments do not include taxes, insurance or other fixed charges.

If you are in the market for a new house selling at $25,000, you need $12,000 in cash—50 per cent of the price—and $82.50 monthly to pay off interest and amortization on a 20-year mortage at 5 per cent.

Chances of getting a mortgage for a longer term than 20 years are gone. And if you are 50 years old you'll procably have trouble getting a mortgage for as long as 20 years—which further increases your monthly payments.

In some localities interest rates even exceed 5 per cent. Around New York City, where mortgage interest ranged between 4 and 4½ per cent a year ago, 5 per cent is becoming the going rate, with some cases higher.

USUALLY YOU can buy an older house on somewhat easier terms. Regulation X, which requires as much as 50 per cent in cash where the price of a house is $24,500 or more, does not apply to older homes. But lending institutions always have been more conservative in making loans on older properties. It all depends on the individual case.

Normally, mortgage loans on older houses range between 65 and 75 per cent of the appraised value. The appraised value may average about 90 per cent of the price. But that is a rough average, depending on what price is asked. The appraised value is determined by reproduction cost, condition of the property, obsolescence, neighborhood, and various other factors.

The result is that an older house, priced at $25,000 may be appraised at $22,500, and the bank may lend 70 per cent on that, or $15,750—which is more liberal than the Regulation X loan on a new house of that price.

But an older house priced at $10,000, if appraised at the same ratio of 90 per cent, would have an appraised value of $9,000. If a bank lent 70 per cent on that, the mortgage would be for only $6,300—which is far less than permitted by Regulation X on a new house at that price.

THE PURPOSE of Regulation X was to bring about an orderly decline in the volumn of new building in order to divert men and materials into the defense program and the same time to check an inflationary bidding up of prices for materials.

It is beginning to cut into building activity in big city areas, where mortgage commitments made last year are being used up. The Long Island Home Builders Institute in New York City's most active suburban building field reports new house jobs down as much as 50 per cent from a year ago.

But the Federal Reserve Board admits that prices have gone up since Regulation X. The board stated in Washington that "demand for housing was greatly stimulated and prices of both new and existing houses rose, with the advance being somewhat greater for new than for existing houses."

YET IT MIGHT have been a lot worse. Norman Strunk of Chicago, executive vice-president of the United States Savings and Loan League, estimates that construction costs and prices of new homes have risen about 10 per cent since Regulation X became effective.

"However," he observes, "if the government-guaranteed and insured mortgage programs had been permitted to continue on the same basis as before the Korean War with extremely low or no down payments, it is entirely possible that this increase would have been another 25 per cent by now."

The National Geographic Society says whales travel the same sea lanes in annual migrations.

Cornell Offers Cheaper Homes

ITHACA, N. Y. —(UP)— Cornell University has started a project that may make it easier to get a pre-fabricated home.

The university opened a year-long study of methods to step up the flow of mass-produced units from the factory to the family. The project will seek to find better ways of distributing the products.

The study is being made under a $24,250 grant from the federal housing and home finance company.

OUTCAST OF DESTINY

PAUL EVAN LEHMAN

Chapter 16

He was silent until the bartender had fetched their drinks, then he said in an outburst of frankness, "Know what I think? I think Jack plans the jobs for all three gangs."

"What makes you think that?"

"Well, they never conflict and each outfit sticks to one branch of the business. It looks to me as though one man is managing the whole show and Jack's the natural choice."

"Bright boy! Keep on guessing if it amuses you. Or are you trying to pump me?" Her voice had hardened slightly. He had gone as far as he dared.

He said, "Pump you? My gosh, no. Just idle curiosity, I reckon. Well, here's luck!" They drank and he got up and moved away.

Uncle Jim Ferguson had returned from his gold-buying trip and was at the bar. They had a drink and Brent reported on Judy, telling of the fight with Shotgun. Ferguson said, "Cuthbert's a bad man to tangle with Tex. I don't care for him myself but I manage to get along with him. I'm certainly obliged to you for taking care of Judy, but watch out for Shogun."

Biff Williams came into the saloon, and a few minutes later Jack entered. He went to his accustomed place at the end of the bar and presently Brent strolled over to join him.

They were talking casually when hoofbeats sounded outside and a moment later the swinging doors parted to admit three men. Brent recognized them as members of Shotgun's highway gang. They walked stiffly as though weary from hard riding and their faces were pinched and grim. They went to the bar and ordered drinks.

A hush fell over the Palace; something had gone wrong and every person there sensed it. Jack walked along the bar, his agate eyes on them. He said, "Drinks on the house, boys. Looks like you ran into trouble."

One of them said, "I'll say we ran into trouble! Kaintuck got killed and Shotgun and Gleason are bein' patched up by the medico."

They drank and Jack said, "Have another and tell us about it."

"Ain't much to tell. We stopped the stage where we was supposed to. The guard grabbed up his rifle and Shotgun let him have both barrels from that blunderbus of his'n. Danged near cut him in two. At that we'd have been all right if we'd taken the specie box and beat it, but Shotgun figered we might collect a little extry from the passengers. He had 'em lined up and was goin' through 'em when they hit us.

"It was a posse followin' the stage. A bend in the trail hid them from us and Shotgun forgot to send somebody back to watch. They hit us suddenlike and started pumpin' lead before we could reach the hosses. Kaintuck got it through the head right off, and Shotgun and Gleason while we was runnin'. Gleason was drilled through the hip and Shotgun got it in the arm."

Jack asked in his toneless voice, "Get the specie?"

"All we got was out of there. Its' a wonder more of us wasn't killed."

Shotgun's riders went out to get something to eat and Brent walked over to where Judy and Lil were sitting. He had seen Biff glance in their direction several times and guessed he was waiting until Judy was alone before joining her. By beating him to it Brent hoped to save her annoyance.

Judy gave him a smile and said, "Sit down, Tex. And you don't even have to buy me a drink if you don't want to."

"But I do want to, provided it's something milder than whiskey."

"She's on a tea diet, "said Lil, "but I'm still soakin' up whiskey. You can buy me one if you feel like it."

He signaled the bartender and sat down. Judy said, "Lu looks as though she isn't very happy about your sitting here Tex. She's taken a dislike to me and sometimes I think it's because of what you did for me the other night. I hope I haven't—" She broke off.

"Come between us? You haven't. I hardly know her. She's probably sore because you have something she hasn't. You're fresh and unspoiled and a lot prettier than she is or ever will be."

Judy's eyes shone and she put a hand impulsively over his. "Honest, Tex, do you think so?"

He looked into her warm brown eyes. "I told you once and I'll tell you again; I think you're the sweetest kid God ever put on earth."

Their glances held and Lil eyed them shrewdly, her gaze going from Tex to Judy and then back again. She said abruptly, "If you are in love with her, Tex, why don't you marry her and get her out of this joint?"

With a conscious effort, Brent regained control of his emotions. In love! Not in ten million years. There was no room in his heart for love until he had squared the debt he owed his father and Col. H. disengaged his hand and his face hardened. "You're loco, Lil. I can't afford to fall in love. I'm an outlaw; I can't dodge handcuffs and rolling pins at the same time. But I do think that Judy ought to get out of Destiny."

"Where would I go?" asked Judy quietly. "I have no home, no friends out here, and none back East that I'd want to go to."

"You could go to some town where you could find decent work."

He felt Judy's intent gaze on him and refused to meet it. At last she said, "No, I'll stay here long enough, Tex; give somebody else a chance." The hand was like an iron clamp and Brent was helpless while he remained seated.

He drawled, "You may be right, Biff. Excuse me, Judy." The hand was removed and he got up. He turned to face Biff and said, "And again you may be wrong. I don't like big, heavy hands on my shoulders."

"You don't, huh? well then I'll put that hand somewhere else."

They were standing less than two feet apart and Biff's movement was lightning fast. His fist came up in a powerful uppercut aimed at the point of Brent's chin and all the power of his heavy frame was behind the blow. Brent, knowing that something like this must come, jerked his head aside and Biff's knuckles raked across his cheek with such force that he went staggering sideways; but even as he moved he sunk a short left to the pit of Biff's stomach and heard the gasp of agony that was forced from the man's lips.

Brent caught his balance with his weight on his right foot, thrust towards Williams and hit him on the jaw with a powerful right. Williams stumbled and fell over the next table; its legs gave under his weight and he went down on top of it. Brent's gun whipped out and covered him even as he grabbed for his own Colt. Brent drawled. "I reckon you'd better not try it."

Strong Military Reserve Bill Is Nearing Action

WASHINGTON (UP)—House military leaders said today they still are hopeful of shoving through Congress before adjournment a bill to create a powerful military reserve.

Thy said the bill, if enacted, will assure a "ready reserve" of trained, equipped men, with few dependents, who can be called to the nation's defense on short notice in any kind of war emergency.

An armed services subcommittee which has been working on the bill for weeks quit yesterday until Sept. 17, because of a 19-day House recess which starts today.

But the chairman, Overton Brooks (D-La), said today he thinks the subcommittee can finish its work in a few hours when it reconvenes, that it can get immediate ndorsement of the full committee, and then can push the bill through the House without controversy.

It then would go to the Senate. Brooks siad the bill will prevent repetition, in another Korean-type emergency, of the haphazard calls to duty about which reservists and members of Congress have complained bitterly to the Defense Department since Korea.

Under present plans all men called for draft duty or Universal Military Training would go into the reserves after active service. They would remain in the reserves for a period which with their active duty would total eight years.

Reserves would be divided into ready, standby, and retired components. They would be called to duty in emergency in that order.

The subcommittee left one main issue unsettled: Whether to give the president authority to call off the ready reserve on his own authority. It has agreed that the standby and retired reserves can't be called except when Congress declares war or a national emergncye.

Japanese Spend More Than They Earn In Month

TOKYO —(AP)— Japanese are spending more than they make. At least they were in May, and the sharp increase in cost of utilities, rice, bread and other necessities since then—without widespread boosts in wages—indicates they still are.

Figures on the income and outgo of Japan's 84,100,000 (June 1 estimate) population were compiled by occupation officials in General Ridgway's economic and scientific section.

Income of city workers' families, including the head of the household and all others picking up pin money regularly, averages 15,026 yen a month. That's $41.74 American. Expenditures per family average 15,188 yen per month. That's $42.17 American.

Police And Fire Jobs Combined

Chicago —(UP)— Policemen and firemen spend as much time taking pregnant women to hospitals and rescuing cats from treetops as they do catching criminals and putting out fires.

For that reason there's a trend among small cities to combine police and fire departments in a single municipal department, according to the International City Managers Association.

In its public management journal, the ICMA said most of the calls coming into police and fire stations are for assistance that either department could give.

One communication system can serve the needs of both departments, the ICMA said, and one staff can handle records and clerical work for both.

Commuters Ride In Cruiser Fleet

PORT SULPHUR, La. —(UP)— About 400 commuters operate the Grande Ecaille sulphur mine of Freeport Sulphur Co., in the marshy area of the Mississippi delta country. It is accessible only by water.

There is no rush-hour traffic to jar jangled nerves. For the 10-mile half-hour trip twice daily the company maintains a fleet of Diesel-powered cabin cruisers. Each boat can accommodate 50 persons—all in well-cushioned seats.

Jacques Romano Can 'Turn Off' His Pulse; Exudes Anesthetic

United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK (UP)— Jacques Romano is a pleasant little man with a full head of gray hair, iron-band muscles, shell-rimmed glasses, false teeth which he designed himself after having all his good ones pulled just so he could design false ones, a brain and pulse which he can turn on and off at will, and fingers which he says exude a local anesthetic.

His toes do too. Right through his shoes.

He is 87 years old. At the age of nine he tried to hang himself because he was dejected about what the future might hold. Now he expects to live to be 120, at least.

Some days he feels he may never die at all.

He rises at 6 a.m., works all day, eats six dates for lunch, walks board-straight, breathes by exhaling instead of inhaling, goes to cocktail parties where he drinks whisky and plain water, exercises by playing solitaire 15 minutes every evening while squatting on his haunches like an oriental, he writes until 1 a.m., and goes to sleep on a very hard mattress.

He looks 57, nstead of 87.

"Feel my muscles," he said. They were hard as rock.

"I'm going to be 88 my next birthday, and I never exercised in my life but when I walk I get more exercise than anybody. I hold myself up straight, like this," he said, walking as if he were a tin soldier, "and that tenses my body and legs. When I walk, instead of trying to inhale a deep breath, I always exhale all my breath. That gets rid of the impurities. The lungs inhale automatically after the exhaling.

"I'm recognized by medical people as one of the healthiest persons anywhere. I have to walk two miles before I begin to feel exertion. The squatting on my haunches every night keeps my legs supple. (Here he kicked his legs like a chorus girl.)

"I never eat more than one meal a day—most people in the United States die from overeating. I sleep on a hard surface because a soft bed enlarges your liver and softens your brain. But mostly I'm healthy because I never let myself be annoyed by anything."

There are some things about Jacques Romano that make a person wonder.

He was born in Europe of wealthy parents. He left home at 14 and tramped all over the world. He was a camel driver in Africa, a Buddhist priest in China, a commander in a South American revolution, lecturer on psychic subjects, and 51 years ago was a camera firm executive. Now he has his own chemical business.

He says everybody emanates rays, but he can concentrate his.

"Hold out your hand," he said. He pointed an index finger at the reporter's palm and said: "Do you feel a breeze?" The finger was about two inches from the palm. There was a definite, cool-breeze feeling. Romano did the same with his toe, leaving his shoe on. Same breeze.

He spread his arms, shoulder height. "Feel my pulse," he ordered. It was strong and steady at the wrist of the left arm. "Now watch," he said, "I'll turn it off." The pulse stopped dead. Romano said he could do that with either arm, or any part of his body. He has total control of his body.

"Put your ear to my stomach," he said. There was no sound from within.

"Now," he said, "I'll tell my stomach to turn over my food." There was a noisy flopping and splashing from within.

Romano said he learned how to turn his brain off, make it a blank, while he was a camel driver. He can also turn his finger-ray on and off, and he claims he can anesthetize a spot about the size of a dime with it, good for pulling teeth. He didn't demonstrate that.

But the breeze is certainly there. You can feel it plain as day.

Coffee Ration In Germany Is Cut

HEIDELBERG, Ger. (UP)—The United States army has decided to cut its coffee ration for American soldiers in a major blow against black-marketing.

European headquarters announced that the post exchange quota would be two pounds a month instead of four, starting Oct. 1.

Coffee brings 8.50 marks (about $2) a pound in the illegal market, or more than twice what it costs in the post exchanges and commissaries.

Two Weeds Are Damaging Fields

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. —(AP)—Thousands of dollars are being spent to eradicate the menace of toad flax and the lafy spurge. These hardy perennials are a pretty sight and they decorate many gardens in western Canada, but they are damaging in grain fields.

Many farmers in western Manitoba have been driven off farms rendered useless by these weeds. Chemicals won't kill the flowers of these weeds. In farm fields, it takes three full years of summer control.

Accidents Are Grim Child Killers

By DAVID TAYLOR MARKE

This year accidents will kill approximately three times as many children between birth and age 14 as will any disease. Last year accidents killed more than 13,500 in this age group.

These figures are from the office of Arthur S. Johnson, Vice President and Safety Engineering Manager of the American Mutual Liability Insurance Co. of Boston.

"It's a national tragedy to lose more than 13,000 children each year through accident," Johnson insists. "Particularly when, in most cases, deaths can be traced directly to either unsafe practice or lack of safety education among parents."

Last year accidents killed 8,000 children under five years of age. After motor vehicle accidents, the largest single cause was suffocation, he says. Burns came next. Investigation of acciden' after accident in these categories revealed that parents had left the victims unattended or left dangerous home appliances within reach of these youngsters.

"We can't restore these lives to distraught parents," Johnson says "but other parents can avert similar tragedy by remembering a few rules of common safety if they have children in this age bracket."

Never leave an infant unattended when he's in the bath. The seconds it takes to answer the doorbell can mean an accidental drowning. Make sure he cannot reach electric cords and outlets, hot water tanks, the sewing machine and open stairwells.

Pin his bedclothes at night so it will be impossible for him to slip underneath or pull them over his head.

Strap him in the high chair and carriage with a belt that can be locked in place.

It's not enough to keep matches out of reach. Many a parent doesn't smoke, but a child can be scalded to death by leaving the handles of pots and sauce pans within his reach.

The child must be taught to look both ways if allowed to cross the street alone on the way to school. His play must be off the highways and in yards or in enclosed public places. Parents should not only teach the safe way but should discipline the child if it is necessary.

Hitching rides or taking scooters and bicycles into the street is often fatal.

Many of the deaths by suffocation can occur in the open, when children detach metal eyes from dolls or wheels from trains and put them into their mouths. Johnson warns. Buy dolls and animals in which the eyes are stitched in and made only of thread.

Johnson advances this rule of thumb in selecting toys: be certain it conforms to the age and mental capacity of the child; when old enough, give your child complete instruction on its use and point out the hazards from misuse.

The parent has the responsibility of selecting the correct, safe toys for the child.

TEEN TALK

Dear Judy:

A new school year offers a wonderful opportunity to wipe the slate clean. All the little bad habits we formed during last school year showed perhaps that we're just weak Annies under the skin.

The best way to strengthen character is by self-denial, hard work and taking a cheerful attitude toward chores. Think about the easy groove you slipped into last year, and then make a firm resolution to be a tougher character this year. For instance:

1. Did you find that you couldn't resist a date, even if it was for the night before your big examination? And, that you'd rather take the risk of failing than losing the man of the moment?

If that was your weakness, make a firm resolution that school comes first. After all, there always is another man around the corner, but you can't always retrace your steps if you've lost the opportunity to get a good education.

2. Did you get in the habit of letting laundry pile up? Instead of doing your underwear and stockings every night did you let your wash accumulate until you had nothing clean to wear?

It is much easier to wash a few things every night, even if you must keep your eyes open with toothpicks. Once wash accumulates, it might be a long unpleasant chore to do the laundry.

3. Did you keep the family in debt trying to keep up with the Jones girls? Every time Mary or Sally Jones got a new dress or unique accessory, did you write home to complain to Mom that you were being cheated.

Clothes do not make the girl. Even if you show up in a flour sack, you will be popular providing you are a nice person, anyway. It is pretty silly to worry Mom and Pop who have plenty of other bills.

4. Did you get your own dates or did you wait until another girl showed up with a boy, and then try to take him away?

Some girls never can manage to get dates for themselves, and even if a good natured girl rounds up a blind date for one of these dateless Susies, she is not satisfied. Usually, she likes the other girl's boyfriend better than the one she is dating.

If you get a reputation for that sort of piracy, you'll have trouble getting dates at all. Remember that most school girls depend on brothers of class mates for dates, and if you get a reputation for being a date thief, you'll be a pretty lonely lassie.

5. Did you depend on your roommates to do your chores? Sometimes the other tenants will do your share, just because they can't bear untidiness. Don't think they do your job because they like you, especially.

Make a habit of doing your little room chores as soon as your crawl out of bed in the morning. It is easy to pick up, make the bed and dust while you are still almost sleep.

6. Did you develop a blase attitude toward life, because you became acquainted with a cynical clique?

Actually you should stick to your own guns when it comes to making decisions which affect your manners or morals. If you've been accustomed to going to church, do not let others persuade you not to go. Young people are likely to think that part of being grown up is avoiding pre-school good habits whether it is church or sending birthday cards.

7. Did you indulge in gossip more often than good wholesome chit-chat?

People get hurt by gossip, especially within the confines of a campus. If you've made a habit of carrying every story you hear, and perhaps embellishing it, make a resolution to imagine yourself in the spot of the person you are maligning, and perhaps you will change your tune.

Here's Why He Was Called 'The Name'

SINGAPORE —(AP)— They called him "The Name" aboard the French liner "Andre Lebon".

That was because Monsiuer Mougammadoucossoumarecar usually couldn't find space enough to write his name on chits. A French Indian businessman, he was among passengers from Saigon bound for France when the vessel arrived here recently.

LOGIC IN THE FIELD

MEMPHIS, Tenn. —(UP)— J.F. Hewlett, sheriff's deputy, wondered why a field hand worked wearing his overcoat in 90 degree heat. The man unbuttoned his shirt to show his winter underwear. "It's cooler this way," he said. "The sun can't get through."

Age Of Fish Disclosed By Marking On Sales

By DION HENDERSON
AP Newsfeatures

People who think they can tell the age of anything by its teeth are kind of up against it when it comes to fish.

Not that some fish are not well stocked with snappers, as anyone who has lost knuckle hide to a musky or northern can testify. But teeth don't help.

With fish, it's scales that tell the story. Not the same scales that tattle on plump dowagers. With fish the telltale scales are those along the side just below the dorsal fin.

Any inquiry into a fish's tender years must necessarily come under the heading of entertainment, because most of us don't have the measuring or magnifying tools to get really scientific.

At that, you can have some fun with your own catches. A pocket sun-glass will be of some help and you many find out information useful in other trips if you learn anything about comparative size of fish the same age in different waters.

Here's the general idea. Separate a scale and hold it up to the light. Put your pocket lens on it if you can. Notice that the scale is marked with rough circles — something like a tree stump.

Then notice that the circles show irregular breaks, or separations. Those breaks are the year-marks (called annuli). You can count them like the growth rings on a tree.

The reason for them is the same as for the wide-narrow alternations in wood. In spring, when nutrients are available in quantity, the rate or growth soars with a consequent widening of the space between the year marks.

Shells Are Still Deadly Menace

ROME —(AP)— War, six years after its end, still takes a deadly toll of children in Italy.

The average number killed annually picking at or playing with hand grenades, bombs and mines is 1,400—three or four every day. An intensive campaign has been started by the National Organization for Accident Prevention to cut or eliminate this slaughter. The organization has distributed thousands of posters showing a boy about to touch a half-buried shell.

A frantic mother in the background shouts: "No, death is there, 'sie."

Nearly 14 Million Checks Written In U. S. Each Day

NEW YORK —(AP)— Almost 14,000,000 checks are written and cashed every day in the United States, covering approximately 90 per cent of all the exchange of money.

Once you cash or deposit a check to your account, machines take over, sorting, listing, endorsing or canceling in one operation. The International Business Machines Corp., builders of commercial electronic "brains", reports that one operator at a check proof machine averages 1,461 checks per hour.

In one New York bank alone, an average of more than 302,000 checks are handled daily over the entire year.

Suicide Attempt With Faulty Gun Proves Futile

CHICAGO (UP)—Walter H. Fett, 52, went into the washroom at the Weather-seal of Illinois, Inc., where he was employed as a clerk. He took out a gun and placed it to his head.

He pulled the trigger. The gun clicked, but did not fire. Again he pulled the trigger and got only a click. Twenty-five times he pulled the trigger.

Disgusted, he ran into the street and stopped a passing policeman.

"Give me your gun and let me do a good job. I don't want to live," he told the policeman.

He was taken to Bridewell Hospital yesterday, where he told attendants that he was having financial troubles.

Bird May Lose Hamburger Diet

BOSTON —(UP)— Miss Donna Gibbs, 17-year-old Mattapan resident, says her pet bluejay, George may have to go on a diet unless the price of meat comes down.

The bluejay was picked up injured on a street by Miss Gibbs, who took it home and nursed it to health. Along with rice, corn and fresh vegetables, George has a liking for hamburger steak—medium rare, please.

George goes out of doors but makes no effort to fly to freedom. Instead he perches on Miss Gibb's shoulder, the same spot he occupies evenings when she's in the house watching television.

Brazilian Scouts Open Gateway Into Jungles

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil —(UP)— A group of Brazilians has completed an eight-year penetration of the central Brazilian jungle.

Their work opens the way for direct air service between Miami and Rio de Janeiro. It will cut flying time between those points by several hours.

Defying savages, wild animals and disease, the Roncador-Xingu expedition of the government-sponsored Central Brazil Foundation has laid its 12th air strip in the heart of the jungle on the Tarnajoz River, a tributary of the Amazon.

The achievement climaxed a 1,000-mile trek across some of the world's wildest virgin territory and completed a chain of air strips from Goiania, in Goias State. Strung on a diagonal line, they are designed to permit straight flying from Rio de Janeiro to Manaos on the Amazon opening the immense central Brazil area to civilization.

Eventually, this will bring commercial flights over the shortest route from the United States, eliminating the longer line around Brazil's huge "hump." For the time being, however, the air strips will be used only by Brazilian army planes on special missions.

The first of the jungle air strips was opened by the expedition at Aragarcas in 1942. Recently the Central Brazil Foundation's headquarters were transferred to Aragarcas to shorten the expedition's supply route and begin actual colonization of the area.

The latest base at Tapajoz, on the 7th parallel south of the Euator and 58 degrees west longitude, appears destined to become the hub of north-south and eastwest It is only 1 hour 40 minutes flying time from Manaos, capital of Amazon State.

Other strips are located strategically at points on the upper Xingu River., Xavantina, Garapu and Kuluena, this last one near the spot where semi-savage Kalapalos the British explorer Col. Percy Faucett 26 years ago.

Never numbering more than 24 men, the expedition was able to advance only seven months each year. The rest of the time they were marooned by torrential rains which caused rivers to overflow and turned tens of thousands of jungled square miles into lagoons.

Given by the first administration of President Getulio Varagas the task of opening the unmapped wilderness of the Brazilian hinterland, the Central Brazil Foundation called on Col. Flaviano de Mattos Vanique, noted Indian scout, to head the small army of explorers.

Orlando Vilas Boas, one of three brothers in the group, is the present head of the expedition, having succeeded the late Mattos Vanique.

The pioneers defied savage Indians, wild beasts, huge boa constrictors and, most feared of all, fever-carrying mosquitoes.

Central Brazil Foundation's president, Arguimedes Pereira Lima, said with the transfer of his headquarters to Aragarcas, this spot, not yet on the maps, will become the base for the second phase of the foundation's task: The laying of highways to connect the air strips which, he said, are soon to be connected with one another by radio.

Siam Silk Industry Revived By Colonel

BANGKOK — A former American army colonel with a flair for fashion and a handkering for life in Siam has revived this kingdom's dying silk industry.

Lt. Col. James H. W. Thompson, 45, landed in Siam—now officially known as Thailand—at the end of the Pacific war in 1945. At that time he was with the cloak-and-dagger branch of the U S. Army, the O. S. S., and he called Greenville, Del. "home".

Siam, having been lined up with a defeated Japan, was at a low ebb economically. Her industry of silk weaving had disappeared The only traces were an occasional hand loom pushed into the corner of a peasant's hut and a few leftover pieces of woven material.

It was the strange Oriental elegance of the old silk that inspired Thompson to quit the government service and gamble on building up a private business.

He started on a small scale, helping import cocoons and financing the purchase of gold and silk threads and good dyes for villagers who worked in their homes in the back country. Outlet for the handwoven silk was a counter in a small retail shop in Bangkok.

Today some 3,000 Siamese are engaged in the fast-growing "cottage industry", and Siamese silks have made a bright splash in the fashion and theatrical worlds.

Hundreds of yards o Siamese silk are used in Broadway's current musical, "The King and I," which has a Siam setting A Siamese scene in another New York production, "Mike Todd's Peep Show", boasted costumes of silk from Siam as well as tunes by the country's king.

A shop exclusively for Siam's fabrics has been opened in New York. Top American dress designers including Charles James, Valentina, Hattie Carnegie and Tina Leser, have featured the silk. Color photos of the fabrics are popping up regularly in U. S. magazines of fashion and interior decoration.

Paris designers put in big orders for silk from Siam, but the shipments were blocked by the French government which has regulations against the import of textiles that might compete with France's own silk industry.

Americans have gone in for rough-textured silks with a "hand-woven look" and brilliant colours, according to Thompson. In contrast, British buyers have favored more dim, conservative shades and soft weaves.

Siam's silk has caught on because it is as exotic as the kingdom itself. Some hues are so bright and iridescent they make new Western shades such as "Shocking Pink" look muddy mild. One amazed designed described a piece of the silk as "rich, brilliant and mellow—all at the same time."

Traditional motifs traced in gold and silver thread go back ten centuries and show early Hindu influence from India. Some tartans—originally used by the Siamese for sarongs — are so strikingly like those from Scotland that the erroneous story has grown up that the designs were filched from Scottish missionaries.

Two new plantations for nurturing silk worms on mulberry bushes have been started in northeastern Siam. The weakly defended corner of the kingdom would likely be one of the first areas overrun by the Chinese if they decided to invade Southeast Asia. It is a region where other foreigners have been reluctant to start business.

But Thompson and those working with him are optimistic. And there is a general atmosphere of peace and well being in Siam which is rare for Asia these days —and perhaps a bit unreal.

Seek Weather Data In Glaciers

YAKUTAT, Alaska —(UP)— The Arctic Institute of North America is extending its studies of the Seward-Malaspina glacier system in the St. Elias Mountains near the Alaska-Yukon border this summer.

Researchers are trying to determine whether glaciers act as barometers to climatic variations, their influence on air pressure and winds, flood control and water supply and the mechanics of ice flow.

The institute this summer is concentrating on the Malaspina glacier. In 1950 and 1949, scientists investigated mainly in the upper reaches of the Seward glacier.

Last year the ice of Seward glacier was measured by radar to a depth of 1,975 feet.

BREAK BREAKS HABIT

BRAZIL, Ind. —(UP)— A young factory worker was broken of the habit of taking a hardboiled egg from his lunch and cracking it on his forehead when fellow-workers substituted an uncooked egg.

ENVOY NAMED— Thomas Whelan, St. Thomas, N. D., farmer and business man, was nominated by President Truman as Ambassador to Nicaragua. Whelan is a Republican.

Draft Problem In Selecting Twin

HARTFORD Conn. —(UP)— A Solomon was needed by the state appeal board to rule in the case of twins who applied for draft deferment.

Both Donal I. and Edward W. Oppenheimer were employed on their father's farm. The rules specified that only one dould be deferred.

Their dad was asked who was more valuable at home. He couldn't say.

Finally, the board tapped Donald because he signed up for the draft just ahead of his brother and therefore had a lower order number.

Boasted Himself Into Murder Rap

TULSA, Okla. —(UP)— A little boasting got Eugene Monroe, 20, in a lot of trouble here.

Tulsa police picked him up on a misdemeanor charge and considered him a routine prisoner until they intercepted a note he tried to slip to another prisoner dsecribing himself as "the hottest thing in Tulsa."

Sure enough he was.

A check with the FBI showed his fingerprints matched those found on a venetian blind in the apartment of a Tulsa rape-murder victim, the number one unsolved case in town.

Heating Spoils Fun For Skaters

BOSTON —(UP)— For years one of the popular winter pastimes in Boston has been the skating on the artificial lagoon on the public garden.

In late years there has been little skating, the ice usually being too soft. Some thought that winters were getting milder.

However, officials have come up with a new explanation for the "poor" ice. They believe oil soot from converted heating systems in the city's buildings falls on the ice and makes the surface mushy.

ALL POLISHED UP

EAST HARTFORD, Conn. —(UP)—Philip Sanborn, 36, has polished up his memory and nine police cruisers to boot. A judge ordered Sanborn to wash the police cars as punishment for reporting his own machine stolen after forgetting where he had parked it.

Elks Take Opening Game Of Little League Play-Offs, 2-1

James Hudson Bats In Winning Runs

City Playoffs Begin At Little League Park; Championship To Be Decided This Week; Trophies Sunday

By MELVIN LANG

The Elks took the first game of the city play-offs for the Little League championship yesterday, by edging the Exchangites, 2-1.

Catcher James Hudson doubled in both runs for the Elks in the third. Bob Bilbro led off the inning with a walk and was caught at second base on Charles Rumley's grounder. Oscar Stoneham singled to send Rumley to third, with Stoneham taking second on the throw-in. Hudson then slammed the ball far into the outfield to bring both runners home.

Rumley received credit for the win although he was relieved in the top of the fourth by Ike Riddick. Rumley fanned one and passed a like number in the three innings which he worked. Riddick struck out three and did not issue a walk in three innings.

George Nichols and Francis Nunn divided the pitching chores for the losers, with the defeat charged to Nichols, the starter. He isued two free passes while whiffing three, and Nunn fanned two and walked three. The duo of Exchangites held the Elks to but two scattered hits.

Nichols led the losers at bat with two singles in two times up. Angus Duff collected a double and Charles Smith rapped out a single.

Hudson and Stoneham collected the Elks hits.

The Elks reached the finals by defeating the Jaycees in a playoff game for the second half championship Monday afternoon. The Exchangites garnered a berth in the series by beating the same Elks club in a play-off game for the first half crown.

The second game of the series will be played this afternoon. If it is necessary to play the full five games of the best of five series, the championship game will be run off Sunday afternoon at 3 p.m. Championship and runner-up trophies will be presented Sunday afternoon at 5 p.m. at the Little League park.

Lausche Is Top Choice For Czar

NEW YORK—(UP)—Gov. Frank Lausche of Ohio probably will be elected baseball commissioner at the next meeting of major league club owners in Chicago Sept. 20, it was learned today.

Lausche's selection from a group of five surviving candidates has been made almost certain because another man in that group, Warren Giles, president of the Cincinnati Reds, had thrown his powerful support to him, it was learned.

Giles is understood to have realized that he himself cannot win the necessary 12 out of 16 votes needed for election, because American League owners are wary of picking a long-time National Leaguer. Accordingly, he has given his support to his fellow Ohioan, Lausche.

When told in Columbus, O., that his election was practically certain, Lausche snapped quickly, "No comment, no comment, no comment."

Farmville Takes Semi-Finals In Bright League

FARMVILLE — Farmville's Red Sox clinched a spot in the finals of the championship play-offs of the Bright Belt League last night by defeating Pinetops for the third time in a row, winning out 8-2.

Red Sox manager Norman Clark hurled the victory, allowing but six hits and fanning nine batters. Pinetops used a total of three pitchers to stage a futile attempt to stop the Farmville power.

Farmville will now meet the winner of the first half of the series now being played by Ormondsville and Macleafield. Ormondsville has a chance to win that portion of the play-offs tonight, as they are leading at the present time, two games to one.

Catcher Ralph Britt led the winners at bat with three singles and one double in four times up, for a perfect evening at the plate.

Farmville sewed up the outcome of the game with a pair of runs in the second inning and a trio in the third. The Red Sox finished with three markers in ninth.

Gene Cobb led the losers at bat with two safeties, including a two-bagger, in four times at bat.

Farmville collected 12 hits, good for its eight runs, and made one error. Pinetops garnered but six hits and committed four errors.

The final series will begin immediately after the semi-finals close, with one night of rest interrupting the schedule.

Maxim Wins Heavyweight Fight Over Irish Bob Murphy In 15

By JACK CUDDY
United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UP)—Joey Maxim, the apparently lusterless light heavyweight champion whose boxing brilliance suddenly half-blinded challenger Bob Murphy, was ready to defend soon "against whoever can assure us the most money."

The black-haired, glittery-eyed Italian from Cleveland was practically unmarked after his upset decision victory over southpaw Murphy before 9,525 at Madison Square Garden last night.

And he faced the world with such new confidence, after his first defense of the 175-pound crown, that he was willing to tackle any of the three prominent challengers: Don Cockell of England, Bob Satterfield of Chicago and Harry (Kid) Matthews of Seattle.

Manager Jack Kearns said, "We favor no one." But it was apparent from his pre-fight negotiations that he leaned toward a Sept. 25th fight with Cockell at London.

London was a lucky city for Maxim. It was there that he wrested the title from Freddie Mills on a knockout 19 months ago. And it is there he can make the most money in a title fight. Challenger Cockell was introduced from the ring last night.

Maxim went into the ring a 13-5 underdog last night for his first defense against red-haired Murphy of San Diego, Cal., who had knocked out 55 of his 65 professional opponents.

Cleveland Joey was regarded as "washed up" because of his severe beating in his last fight by heavyweight Ezzard Charles at Chicago on Memorial Day. He was "hog fat" at 181 1-2 pounds for Charles.

But last night, at 173½, he looked like a genuine champion as he gave Murphy one of the worst beatings of his career. His lightning left jabs had the ex-sailor's right eye completely closed by the eighth round. And the game Irishman had to fight the last half of the 15-rounder peering through his left peeper.

Murphy, 174 1-2 pounds, started off as if certain of adding Maxim to his kayo victims when he gave the champion a body-beating in the first round and knocked him into the ropes with a left hook and brought blood to Joey's nose.

But then Maxim took command with his left jabs and solid right uppercuts and straight rights.

Phillie Manager Back Next Year

Philadelphia —(AP)— Robert R. M. Carpenter, Jr., president of the Philadelphia Phillies, says he hasn't talked over a 1952 contract with Manager Eddie Sawyer but he intends that Sawyer manage the club next year.

Rumors have persisted here for weeks that Sawyer might be moved up to general manager and that the Phils are seeking someone to replace him as field pilot.

The 1950 National League champions have floundered all season and now are having trouble staying in the first division. Attendance is off by 250,000 paid admissions from that of last year.

'Bring Up The Yankees' Cry Of Cleveland Tribe

CLEVELAND (UP)—"Bring on the Yankees" was the cry today by the high-riding Cleveland Indians and a quarter of a million happy fans expected to see the "do-or-die" three-game series between the two top teams in the American League.

Fresh from three wins in a row over the Washington Senators, the Indians were a cocky crew as they faced the Yankees this afternoon in Municipal Stadium.

Bob Lemon, "a much improved pitcher," was Manager Al Lopez' choice for the first game, and two other members of the Tribe's "big four" were set for tomorrow night and Saturday—Early Wynn and Mike Garcia.

In Sunday's equally important doubleheader against the Boston Red Sox, Lopez had 20-game winner Bob Feller scheduled and Steve Gromek, who won yesterday's thriller in a six-inning relief stint.

Should Lemon come through today, Lopez indicated he may use him instead of Gromek if necessary on Sunday.

The Indians front office said it expected a quarter of a million fans for the New York and Boston games in what it called a "little world series" weekend.

Lloyd Mangrum Is Leading Golfers

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (UP)—Lloyd Mangrum, and a determined gang of golfers who have been trying to match his earnings all season, tee off today in the $15,000 Fort Wayne Open.

Mangrum, sporting a 1951 money-winning spree of $21,078, hoped to add $2,400 to his kitty by repeating his 1950 triumph in the first annual tourney sponsored by the Professional Golfers Assn.

But nearly ever body who has hounded him across the country all season came to try heading him off—Jim Ferrier, Dr. Cary Middlecoff, and Jack Burke Jr., whose winnings are above $10,000 this year.

The tourney opened with an 18-hole round over the rolling, gully-crossed Elks Country Club course, a par-72 layout.

All-Stars Split Doubleheader

WILLIAMSTON — Greenville's softball All-Stars split a twin-bill with the Williamston Stars here Tuesday night, winning the nightcap, 10-6, while dropping the opener, 8-4.

Joe Dudley led Greenville at bat in both contests, with two safeties in the first and two for three in the second game.

Whitey Auld slammed out a home run in the second game for Greenville. Auld went the distance on the mound for the losers in the first game.

Dan Gordan hurled the Greenville victory in the second contest. Tommy Ellers caught both tilts.

The same clubs are scheduled to play in Greenville Friday night at 8 p.m. at Guy Smith Stadium. Admission is free.

Indians Take 6-5 Game As Avila Homers In Fourteenth

By CARL LUNDQUIST
United Press Sports Writer

In the pulse-pounding pressure of extra inning combat where the champ often becomes a chump, it was the wild-eyed, front-running Indians by a wide margin over the Yankees today.

As the American League race reached its most furious pitch in a three-game series between the pace-setters beginning this afternoon in Cleveland, the Indians had to be the best bet to win any close ones.

Thus far, Cleveland has won seven out of eight extra-inning games, while the Yankees have lost three of the four overtime games they played.

The pattern the teams set yesterday was the same they have followed all season. Cleveland, coming brilliantly from behind, won a 14-inning, 6 to 5 victory from Washington on Bobby Avila's game-breaking homer.

But for the Yankees it was a sadder story. The supposedly pressure-tested champs, off to a four-run lead in the first inning, gradually let Detroit pull even, then blew the duke in the 12th when Johnny Groth lined a hit to right with two on to give the Tigers a 7 to 6 win.

The Indians thus went into the big series with a two-game lead. Moreover, in the futile Yankee bid for victory in Detroit, they used up two of their best pitchers, Tom Morgan and Allie Reynolds, in relief.

Reynolds and Morgan both had been out of action with sore arms and it was of little consolation that they were in shape to work again.

Morgan who had pitched seven innings of hitless relief ball, blew up in the eighth when Dick Kryhoski doubled and George Kell was safe on an error by Phil Rizzuto. Pat Mullin, long a menace to Yankee pitchers, hit a three-run homer to tie the scor at 6-6 and snd th game into extra innings. Reynolds was the victim of the final uprising and suffered his seventh defeat.

Cleveland, on the other hand, trai' ! 5-2 until the seventh when Dale Mitchell, who suddenly acquired long-distance hitting muscles this year, blasted his 10th homer with two on to tie the score. Earlier, Luke Easter hit a homer for the Incians.

In other American League games, the Red Sox beat the Browns 3 to 1 in 13 innings, and the A's swept a twi-night twin bill from the White Sox 5 to 2 and 8 to 1.

Brooklyn won a pair of tense 10-inning struggles from the Cardinals, 4 to 3 and 8 to 7, to go eight games ahead of the Giants in th National. The Giants, running their winning streak to 11 games topped the Reds 4 to 3, while the Phillies blanked the Cubs 4 to 0 and Boston edged Pittsburgh 5 to 4 in 10 innings.

The Dodgers maintained their incredible mastery over the Cardinals as reliever Clyde King was credited with both triumphs to give him a 14-5 mark for the season. Brooklyn now has 14 straight wins over St. Louis and 16 out of 18 for the season, assuring the best year in history against St. Louis. The previous high in Dodger victories over St. Louis in a season was 15.

Gil Hodges smacked a single to drive in the winning run in the afternoon opener, while in the night contest, Jackie Robinson drilled a hit down the left field line, his fifth of the game to break it up. The Dodgers came from behind to score three runs in the ninth and send the second game into extra innings. A run in the eighth of the opener, deadlocked that one.

Gus Z..nial smashed two homers to lead the A's to their sweep of the White Sox and take over the American League lead with 27.

Sooners Shelve Split-T Offense In 1951 Season

NORMAN, Okla.—(AP)—National Champion Oklahoma will shelve its famed split-T offense at times this fall in favor of a spread formation that scatters players half way across the football field.

This startling revelation comes from Head Coach Bud Wilkinson whose Sooners rode the split-T through 31 straight victories before they stubbed their toes in the 1951 Sugar Bowl game.

"We don't intend to discard the split-T," said Wilkinson at a preseason news conference, "but we won't be able to take the ball and ram it down the throats of the opposition as we have done in the past.

"So, a lot of our plays will be run from a spread formation. And we will do a lot more passing than ever before."

As Wilkinson explains his newest brainchild, it will resemble the double wing, with the ball carrier standing alone about nine yards straight behind the center. The balanced line will be spread wide, measuring some 27 yards from end to end.

The team will go into the formation from the huddle and the ball will be snapped without a shift. The defense won't know whether the play is going right or left, whether it will be a run or a pass. Even the man with the ball won't make up his mind whether to run or pass until after the play starts.

Mrs. Page Leads In Amateur Event

ST. PAUL, Minn. (UP)—A North Carolina housewife who was U. S. women's golf champion in 1937 today threatened to stage a comeback and sweep to another title in the wide-open 1951 Women's National Amateur tournament.

Mrs. Julius A. Page Jr., who as Estelle Lawson was the talk of the women's golf world in 1937, was showing golfers half her age her heels as play reached the quarter-final round. She is the only former champion left in the field of eight.

The Greensboro, N. C., star, who said she is "doing pretty well for an old lady," was matched today against 19-year-old Patricia Ann Lesser of Seattle, Wash.

In the other lower-bracket quarter-final, Mary Ann Downey of Baltimore, Md., who never has won a major title, was matched against Claire Doran of Rocky River, O.

In upper bracket matches, Grace Demoss of Corvallis, Ore., faced Edean Anderson of Helena, Mont., in one match, while Dorothy Kirby of Atlanta was paired against Jane Nelson of Indianapolis.

Artist Looking For Spirit Of Kansas City

KANSAS CITY —(AP)— Norman Rockwell, popular magazine cover artist and illustrator, arrived here recently to start on what he himself termed "his most challenging assignment — to captuure the Kansas City spirit".

But it's no ghost hunt that's facing the 57-year-old artist. Instead it's the first attempt to portray in oils the courage of this city. It was this courage during the recent flood disaster that caught Rockwell's attention at his Arlington, Vt. home and caused him to offer his services to the city.

Armed with camera and sketchbook, the Vermont artist gathered impressions here for a painting to sum up this spirit. Rockwell will complete the painting in his Vermont studio but he decined to estimate how long it would take him. "The impressions came so fast that I haven't had time to assimilate them," he pointed out.

Navajo Indians use chromium ore scrapings to paint their faces yellow for ceremonial dances.

Klan Stepping Up Carolina Activity

LEESVILLE, S.C. (UP)— Klan leader Thomas H. Hamilton said today the Ku Klux Klan is stepping up its activities in the Carolinas and that a full-scale organizational drive is underway in North Carolina.

Hamilton, grand dragon of the Association of Carolina Klans, also said in an interview that he was appointed a lieutenant colonel on Gov. Herman Talmadge's honorary staff when Talmadge became the Georgia governor in 1948.

He showed a reporter the commission signed by Talmadge hanging on the wall of his klan headquarters here.

Hamilton said he was an official of the Georgia Ku Klux Klan under the late Dr. Samuel Green when Talmadge appointed him to his staff shortly after taking office. Hamilton was then an Augusta grocery store operator.

The klan endorsed Talmadge in his 1947 battle with ex-Gov. M.E. Thompson. And Dr. Green, boss of the Georgia klan, revealed before his death in 1948 that he was also a member of Talmadge's honorary staff.

Hamilton said he has 22 klan meetings currently scheduled in North and South Carolina. He said a number of these will be in North Carolina.

A Klan rally complete with a cross burning and mask wearing was staged last Saturday night in Columbus County, N.C., just across the South Carolina line. Officials had threatened to arrest klansmen if they appeared masked, but no arrests were reported.

"I foresee the klan covering the United States again like it did in th 20's and 30's," Hamilton said.

Caldwell, the day before the House voted, said not one city in the U. S. "has even approached the point where it could withstand an atomic attack now."

If he thought this would keep the House from knocking his plans to splinters he was mistaken.

Nor were two members of the House itself—Melvin Price of Illinois and Henry M. Jackson of Washington, both Democrats—able to sway the other congressmen with sharp warnings.

Both are members of the congressional Atomic Energy Committee whose members get secret information from government agencies on Russia's atomic progress.

Both spoke against the big cut in civil defense.

Altitude Record For V-2 Rocket Set Wednesday

WHITE SANDS, N. M. (UP)—A new altitude record for V-2 rockets was set when the Army sent one of its latest missiles soaring 132 miles over the earth's surface yesterday.

The rocket went 15 miles higher than any other V-2, but fell three miles short of the Navy Viking rocket's altitude record of 135 miles set at the proving grounds here Aug. 7.

The Army V-2, larger and heavier than the Viking, built up a speed of 3,800 miles per hour before reaching the 132 mile mark. It remained suspended at the same level for about five minutes before dropping back to earth 42 miles north of the firing platform.

The record trip was the first of a series of firings by the Army's 25-man rocket team of enlisted personnel.

Leaf Grades Show Rise

By UNITED PRESS

Better quality offerings began to flow into Eastern belt tobacco markets today and early sales reports indicated a slight general increase in prices.

First-hour sales at Wilson, Kinston, Greenville and Rocky Mount—the four biggest markets in the belt—all reflected $1 to $2 increases above yesterday's levels.

E. G. Johnston Jr., Rocky Mount sales supervisor, said more offerings were reaching warehouses today and he expected to see volume climb steadily from now on. Early sales indicated an average somewhat above $53.50, he said.

At Wilson, prices held fairly steady and reflected only slight increases above yesterday's levels. Kinston market officials estimated a general average of about $54 per hundred pounds for the first hour of sales, and noted improved quality of offerings.

Border belt price levels held about steady, and all markets expected a full day of sales. Volume was fairly heavy throughout the belt. Quality held up at the improved levels indicated earlier in the week, and prices ranged from $17.50 per hundred for poor nondescript up to $70 and $71 for a few baskets of best lemon leaf offerings. Practical top was about $66 per hundred.

Eastern belt sales yesterday showed increases of from 50 cents to $2 per hundred over earlier prices, but a few grades recorded losses. Volume was still very light on nearly all markets.

FALSE ALARM

WABASH, Ind. — (UP) — When the Long Lake bathhouse was closed for the day, a locker basket filled with a boy's clothing remained. Worried police spent two days dragging the lake because they feared the owner had drowned. The mystery was solved when Don Brown, 16, admitted he forgot the number of his locker basket and left the lake in his bathing suit.

Japan's Royalty Now Embroiled In Divorce Scandal

TOKYO (UP)—Japan's once sacrosanct royalty was embroiled today in the first divorce scandal of its history. The nation's press was making the most of every spicy detail.

The scandal revolved around two blood relatives of Emperor Hirohito who were happily married for 25 years until another man entered the scene.

The husband, former Prince Haruhito Fushimi divorced Princess Hanako Kanin on grounds of incompatibility Aug. 6.

But when the press dug into the story, he admitted going "half crazy" upon finding his wife behind a cloakroom door with wealthy, bald Toyotaro, 52, a Cambridge University graduate.

"I saw them as I should never have seen them," he said.

Truman Prepares Controls Note

WASHINGTON (UP)—The White House announced today that President Truman has completed a message to Congress asking for stronger price control legislation. It was expected to be submitted formally to the lawmakers later in the day.

The administration already had passed the buck to Congress for an impending change in meat ceilings that will send retail beef prices one to two cents a pound higher within 60 days.

Egypt Releases Impounded U. S. Merchant Ship

PORT SAID, Egypt (UP)—Egyptian authorities released the 7,258 ton American merchant ship Paul Revere last night after she had been detained 12 hours by customs authorities for allegedly violating the Suez Canal blockade against Israel.

The ship was permitted to sail with her cargo intact. She had been blacklisted in Egypt for allegedly delivering cargoes to Israel. A ship blacklisted is not allowed to take on cargoes or stores at any Egyptian port.

The Paul Revere was impounded for transporting goods from the Egyptian Red sea port of Abou Zeneima, authorities said.
