Tobacco Quality Down, But Prices Generally Higher Asserts Thigpen

Outlook For Exports Is 'Strong' Says PMA Director; Plenty On Hand

WASHINGTON —(AP)— An Agriculture Department official said today flue-cured tobacco has generally been selling slightly higher for each grade this year than last, but the quality of the crop is down.

This is resulting in lower price averages for the marketing belts where selling is underway.

J. E. Thigpen, director of the tobacco branch of the Production and Marketing Administration, told a reporter the prospective 1951 crop of 1,399,000,000 pounds of flue-cured compares with estimated consumption for this year of 1,200,000,000 pounds.

He added that the addition to the total supply on hand which will result is needed to build up inventories of the domestic industry to bring them in line with increasing demand. It also is needed so that a sufficient supply will be available for export, he said.

The outlook for exports "is strong," Thigpen said. He added that the United Kingdom, which is this country's best foreign customer for flue-cured, is expected to buy over 200,000,000 pounds this year, compared with about 170,000,000 in the year ended June 30.

And, he added, more of this is being bought at auction markets than was the case last year, when a major portion of the United Kingdom purchases came from stocks on hand.

The marketing season is just about over in the Georgia-Florida fluecured belt, and selling is underway in the South Carolina and North Carolina Border Belt as well as the Eastern North Carolina Belt, which is the world's largest flue-cured marketing area.

Sales on the Georgia-Florida Belt through Aug. 27 averaged $46.22 a hundred pounds, compared with $48.31 for the 1950 season. However, on a grade basis, prices generally averaged $1 to $2 above last year. Some grades, however, ran lower this year.

In the South Carolina-North Carolina Border Belt the average price the first week was $48.76 a hundred, compared with $55.42 for last season. However, for the week ending Aug. 24, the average was up to $53.65 a hundred and the season average to $52.02.

The big Eastern North Carolina Belt started sales last week, with an average at the week's end of $[illegible]08 a hundred, compared with a seasonal average of $56.47 last year. More grades appeared to be selling below last year's prices than was true on other belts, though in general prices per grade appeared to be rising.

Price Increases Are Authorized

WASHINGTON—(AP)— The Defense Department announced today it is extending until Nov. 30 its trial policy of permitting draftees join the service of their choice even after they have taken pre-induction physicals.

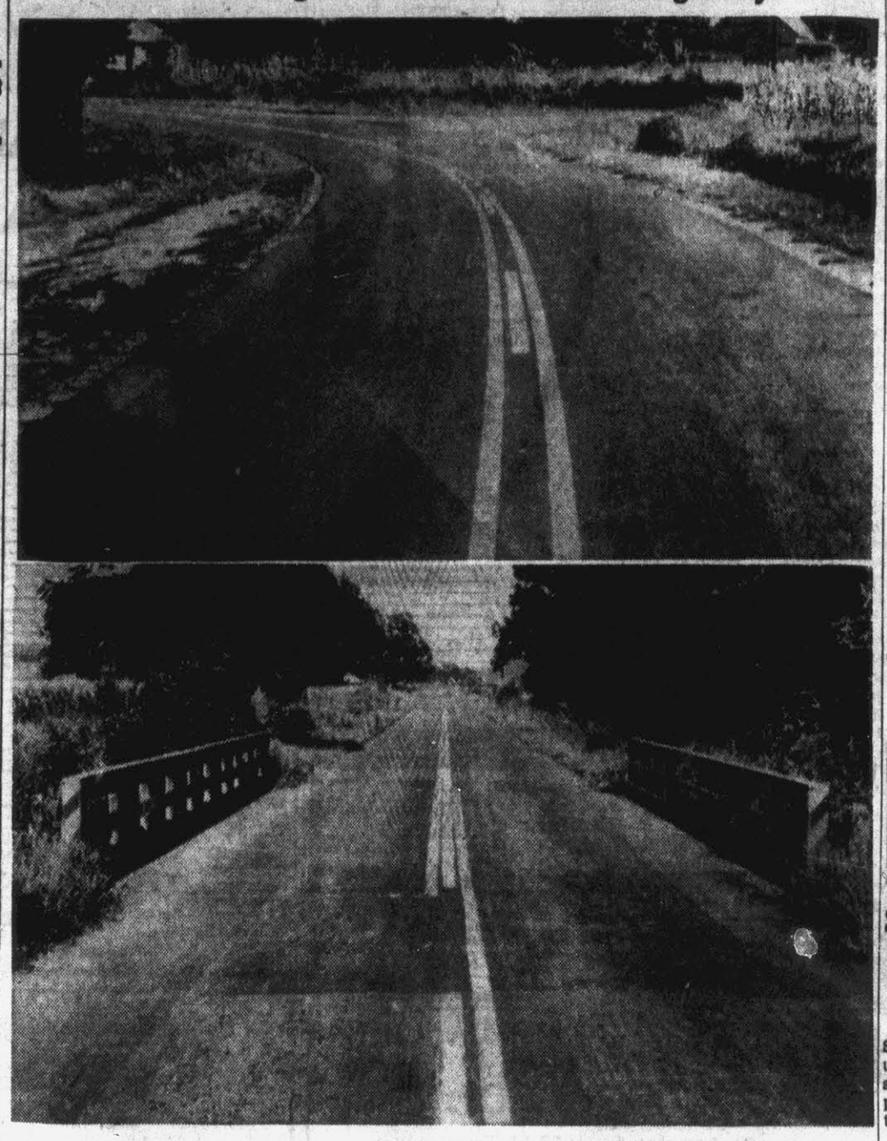

The Department said the experiment has worked out well thus far. Whether it will be continued beyond November, a spokesman added, depends on what happens during the next three months.

The second extension of the policy was to have expired today.

New Warning Lines Drawn On Pitt Highways

WATCH THOSE LINES ON THE HIGHWAY for they could save your life! All over Pitt County and the state, new and old highways have been given the new look with special yellow warning lines painted on them at danger spots. When a yellow line appears on your side of the road (such as in the picture at the top) that means that no passing is allowed until the line has ended. The lines may be warning the motorist about a blind curve or a bridge as in the bottom photo, or some other danger spots. The idea behind the warning lines is to help regulate the flow of traffic at dangerous places on the highways in order to cut down the rising highway accident rate. Heaviest Sales For Local Mart

Over 1,642,000 Lbs. Of Tobacco On Floors Thursday

Heaviest sales of the 1951 season flooded the Greenville tobacco market yesterday as farmers placed 1,642,200 pounds of tobacco on local warehouse floors.

The sale yesterday was 125,000 pounds heavier than the opening day's sale on August 21.

Yesterday farmers who sold tobacco in Greenville took home $791,186.47 for their offerings and the day's sale on the market averaged $48.18 per hundred pounds, according to the official figures.

"The offerings on the floors still consist mainly of low grade primings and tips, with a scattering of the better grades," Sales Supervisor W. L. Whedbee stated. "Practical tops are still $69 with the better baskets selling in the $70's."

Sales on the Greenville market were heavy [illegible] today, and heavy sales are predicted for Tuesday, September 4. The market will be closed Monday for Labor Day.

Policy Extended On Enlistments

WASHINGTON (UP)— Price increases for red salmon and holiday fruit cake were authorized today.

One Office of Price Stabilization order permits canners of Alaska red salmon to charge distributors about 6 1-4 cents more per can. Consumers will feel the increase in about three to six months.

Quick Verdict, Sentence In Pactolus Axe-Slaying

Tenant Farmer Given 20-30 Years After Nolo Contendere Plea To Second Degree Murder Charge

By JOHN D. SPINKS JR.
Reflector City Editor

William Henry Smith, Negro tenant farmer in the Pactolus community, was sentenced to 20-30 years in superior court yesterday afternoon for the axe slaying of George Joyner last Saturday night.

Judgment in the 36-year-old Negro's case culminated in one of the quickest murder and subsequent sentencings in the county's history. It came after his attorney, Sam B. Underwood, entered a plea of nolo contendere to second degree murder.

Solicitor W. J. Bundy did not ask for trial under the first degree murder indictment which was presented to the grand jury earlier in the week.

Smith was arrested late Saturday night after he had struck Joyner with an axe at a filling station in Pactolus. He said in his testimony yesterday that they had been arguing over $1.70 which Joyner had spent on Smith's automobile.

The axe struck Joyner in the left arm near the shoulder, nearly severing it from his body, and he died from loss of blood a few hours later in Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Smith told Judge Quincy Nimocks that Joyner "was coming at me" while they were arguing over the money and he thought Joyner had a knife in his pocket. Witnesses to the axing told the court that Joyner didn't take his hand out of his pocket. However, Smith said he was afraid of the man and had picked up an axe while he was backing away from Joyner toward the front exit of the station.

Smith's 12-year-old son took the witness stand and told the court that he, his father and Joyner had been riding in Smith's car about a week before the killing and Joyner had asked if he could use the car that night. Smith agreed, the boy said and when Joyner brought it back it had been damaged in several places.

Smith said later that Joyner demanded the $1.70 of him to pay for brake fluid that he (Joyner) had put in the car while he was using it. That was what they were arguing about, Smith said, when the incident occurred.

Judge Nimocks, who is presiding during the current fall term, adjourned this week's court at the end of the Smith trial. Reason for it is a district meeting of the Bar Association in New Bern today. All cases not heard this week were continued until the October 8 term of court.

Other cases heard and judgments rendered yesterday were:

Wilbert Moore and Lonnie Jones Jr., larceny; each pleaded guilty and were sentenced to six months on the roads.

Marvin Farmer, possession of non-tax-paid liquor; pleaded guilty, sentenced to six months, suspended on condition he remain of good behavior for five years and go on probation for one year.

Laurie D. Taylor Jr., burglary; nol pros with leave.

Shady Strickland, drunk driving, called and failed, capias issued for defendant's arrest.

Thomas Hardy Jr., assault with deadly weapon with intent to kill; jury verdict of guilty of assault with deadly weapon, sentenced to two years on the roads.

Charlie Beachum, drunk driving and driving after license had been revoked (two indictments); nol pros as to drunk driving, sentenced to 12 months on the roads in second indictment, suspended on payment of $250 and costs, further condition not to drive a car within two years.

Vayden Mathews, drunk driving and hit-and-run driving (two in-

Good And Bad News

Pact Signing, Continued Pressure On Czechs And Sabrejets In Europe Top Week's Good News,; Korea, Iran And India Provide Darker Side

By HOMER JENKS

Balance sheet for the week between good and bad news in the hot and cold wars:

GOOD NEWS:

1. The United States and the Philippines signed a mutual defense treaty. It was the first of a series of such pacts which ultimately may lead to a Pacific security arrangement paralleling the Atlantic Pact. The breakdown in the Korean peace talks has served to emphasize anew the constant Communist threat in the Far East.

2. The United States showed that it has not forgotten William N. Oatis, American newsman sentenced on the Fourth of July to 10 years in prison on a trumped-up charge of espionage. Both President Truman and Secretary of State Dean Acheson sharply reminded Czechoslovakia's new ambassador, Dr. Vladimir Prochazka, that no improvement in Czech-American relations can be expected while Oatis remains in jail.

3. The first squadron of U.S. Air Force F-86 Sabrejets assigned to defend Western Europe arrived in England after a flight across the Atlantic. It underlined America's determination to build up the defense of Western Europe regardless of the continuing war in Korea.

BAD NEWS:

1. Armistice talks remained suspended in Korea. Supreme U.N. Ridgway and Communist commanders swapped a series of sharp messages which added nothing new to the situation and left the door open for resumption of the cease-fire conference.

2. Both the United States and Britain let it be known that they have given up for the present trying to reach an oil agreement with Iran. This means that the West will have to find other sources to replace the oil it once got from Iran, while Iran faces possible bankruptcy from loss of an estimated $140,000,000 in royalties, taxes and wages formerly paid by the British owned Anglo-Iranian Oil co.

3. India found itself in the position of backing the Soviet bloc on opposition to the American-proposed Japanese peace treaty.

Farm Bureau's Associated Women To Join Campaign

Members of the County Farm Bureau's Associated Women last night joined forces with the men of the organization to make this year's membership drive the most successful in the county's history.

The drive, which begins September 11, will see the women of the Bureau working alongside the men in an effort to finish the job in two weeks. Goal for the 1951 campaign is 3,500 members.

The women met last night at Respess-Jones Barbecue House to formulate plans for the coming drive. And they heard chairman Arch Flanagan of Farmville ask them for their services in the drive.

Flanagan, who is now in his third year as chairman, urged the women to "prod us men" this year during the two weeks and complete the job in that time rather than dragging it out over several weeks.

Mrs. Irby Walker, executive director of the Associated Women of the state, was the featured speaker on the program and pointed out that the women are needed to help the men "carry on the responsibility that must be handled." She said that of 300,000 farmers in North Carolina, only 80,000 are members of the Bureau, asking "Can we speak for the farmer?"

She reiterated the fact that the Bureau in the 100 counties is a flexible organization—"it is not in competition with other county organizations or programs.' 'Having traveled throughout the state, Mrs. Walker informed the group that women are more interested in the Bureau this year than ever before and that they are "needed this year for the work as never before."

She urged that women be placed in positions of responsibility in the county organization, such as being members of the State resolutions committee and the commodity committees, taking charge of local community programs and handling the publicity for the country Bureau.

Later in the program, which included short talks by Bureau educational director William E. Little

'Bloody Ridge' Again Is Captured By Allied Units

8TH ARMY HQ., Korea, (UP)— United Nations troops fought to the top of a key hill on Bloody Ridge last night after a day of savage fighting and held their lines against desperate Communist counter-attacks on two other hills in the same sector.

The South Koreans captured the hill early in the 13-day Allied offensive north of Yanggu on the east-central front. The North Koreans recaptured it early this week.

Attacking without plane support, due to rain and low clouds, U.N. troops jumped off again Friday morning.

The Allied Combat Cargo Command disclosed that 220,000 pounds of emergency rations, ammunition and medical supplies were air-dropped Thursday to the U.N. forces fighting in the cruel mountains of East Korea. It was indicated that the drop was made to the troops on Bloody Ridge.

The Allies now held all three hills they had fought for, but the Reds were counter-attacking incessantly despite frightful losses.

Only patrol activity was reported from the rest of the 135-mile front.

The whole ridge erupted spasmodically in flame and smoke under thousands of Allied and Communist shells, bullets and rockets. United Nations artillery and planes killed or wounded 1,200 Communist troops in a 24-hour bombardment Thursday.

The battle of Bloody Ridge has been raging almost continually since Aug. 13, when the South Koreans struck from the south in an attempt to iron out a Communist bulge in the U.N. line.

No Indication Of Permanent Halt To Truce Parley, Asserts UN Spokesman

Crime Report Asks Unity In War Against Twin Evils

WASHINGTON —(AP) The Senate Crime Investigating Committee called on cities across the land today to band together in a war on organized crime and grafting public officials.

In a final report to the senate on its sensational 15-months-long inquiry, the committee told of "captive communities" held in bondage by the twin evils.

The committe goes out of existence at midnight tonight. But it strongly urged that congress carry on the crusade and that with federal help at only at the start a privately-financed National Crime Coordinating Council be created to keep "the searchlight of public vigilance turned upon crime and corruption."

The committee aimed stinging thrusts at Florida's Governor Fuller Warren and, by indirection, at William O'Dwyer, Ambassador to Mexico and former Mayor of New York.

The report also pictured Washington, the nation's capital, as a possible 'pivotal point for gambling operation of considerable size." There is evidence, too, the committe said, "of widespread traffic in narcotic drugs" in the District of Columbia.

The group recommended a new Senate committee make a "thorough investigation" of crime conditions here especially any tieups between criminal elements in the capital and adjoining areas.

The committee denounced "a startling increase" in drug addiction among the nation's teen-age youth, described dramatically at its televised hearings. It placed the blame on the same gangland which, it charged, runs "the lucrative field of illegal gambling, often operating under corrupt official sanction."

The evils it described, the report said, were found to be as deeply rooted in the medium sized cities as in the big ones, and named some names to back its point.

To help bring every weapon into action against criminals, the committee called for federal legislation to permit wiretapping by federal agents. With proper safeguards, it said tapping of phone lines would not encroach upon the privacy of the honest citizen.

Three Communist Complaints Of Neutrality Violations Being Investigated; Delegation Still Waits For Go-Ahead On Conferences

TOKYO (UP)—A United Nations spokesman today predicted resumption of the Korean armistice talks despite three new Communist charges of violations of Kaesong's neutrality.

"There is no indication today that there will be a permanent breakdown of the peace talks," Air Force Maj. James A. MacMaster told newsmen at the U.N. truce delegation's headquarters in Korea.

"We are still ready to meet with their delegates when they are agreeable."

However, there still was no official Communist reply to supreme U.N. commander Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway's proposal of Wednesday that the Reds end their suspension of the truce conference.

The Communists broke off the Kaesong talks Aug. 23 on grounds that a U.N. plane had bombed and strafed the Communist truce delegation's headquarters there the previous night. Ridgway denied that a U.N. plane had attacked Kaesong.

A dispatch from the U.N. delegation's advance base camp at Munsan, 15 miles southeast of Kaesong, said the U.N. command already was investigating these latest Communist complaints:

1. An Allied plane dropped a parachute flare above the Kaesong neutral zone at 3:40 a.m. Wednesday (12:40 a.m. Tuesday EST).

2. U.N. armed personnel" attacked the neutral zone near Pan Mun Bridge at 7:10 a.m. Thursday (4:10 a.m. Wednesday EST) and seven soldiers "invaded" the zone.

3. U.N. "armed personnel" attacked Communist military police Thursday near Chorgiam, a mile inside the neutral zone on the southeast.

(A Kaesong dispatch to the London Communist newspaper Daily Worker said South Korean troops armed with machineguns pushed within three miles of Kaesong Thursday and killed two North Korean military policemen in an exchange of gunfire.)

MacMaster reported that Lt. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, commander of the 8th Army, had ordered an investigation of the two ground incidents and the 5th Air Force is looking into the other complaint.

Discussing the Communist charges, MacMaster said:

"When there is an incident with validity, we will take action. So far, their charges have been invalid. In case of a valid charge, we would find those responsible and take immediate action."

The latest Communist protests were delivered by a Communist liaison officer to a South Korean liaison officer at Pan Mun Jom on the southern rim of the neutral zone Thursday.

A U.N. spokesman denied the Communist claim that a U.N. liaison officer had agreed on Aug. 16 that Allied planes would not fly over the Kaesong neutral zone.

The spokesman said Ridgway has guaranteed only that U.N. planes would take no "war-like action" in the sector.

Goldsboro Field Is Recommended

Senate Group Favors Site For Troop Carrier Wing Base

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The Senate Armed Services Committee unanimously recommended today reactivation of Seymour Johnson Airport at Goldsboro, N.C., for a two-troop carrier wing base.

Chairman Russell (D-Ga) said "the use of existing facilities at this field will mean a saving of between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000."

He called attention to the fact that Air Force recommended a $33,500,000 expansion of the Raleigh-Durham Field and that a House Armed Services subcommittee also recommended this expansion.

Russell said this controversial base required longer hearings than any other item in the approximately $5,900,000,000 military construction bill the committee hopes to send to the Senate today.

Russell pointed out that the selection must be approved by the House, Senate and President. When the House voted on this bill it did not include the North Carolina base.

Peron Advocates Economic Union

RIO DE JANEIRO (UP)—Argentine President Juan D. Peron say he wants an economic union of Brazil, Chile and his nation to guard against capitalism and communism.

In an interview with a Rio de Janeiro newspaper, Peron declared yesterday:

Fair Committee Discusses Plans

Chambliss Pleased With Midway; New Exhibit Hall Praised

The executive board of Pitt County Fair Committee met last night to outline plans for the coming fair which will be held here during the first week in Octo'

Norman Chambliss, manager of the fair here and in Rocky Mount, met with the committee and told them about the outstanding features of the Lawrence Greater Shows which will make up the midway.

Chambliss had just returned from seeing the fair in West Virginia where he said the attendance was over 400,000. He said he was highly pleased with the fair, especially the feature act which was a trapeze act performed 100 feet in the air.

The Lawrence Greater Shows has the usual line of shows and will bring at least 20 rides to Greenville for the County Fair. Chambliss expressed his idea of the fair by saying it had an outstanding midway and he was highly pleased with the fair.

In commenting on the new fairgrounds here which adjoins the airport, Chambliss said it had the nicest exhibit hall in the state with the exception of Raleigh, Charlotte, and maybe Shelby. The new exhibit building will be able to house more exhibits than the old one and nearly all of the exhibit space is already taken up, said James Worsley, secretary of the committee.

President Howard Moye presided over the meeting of the fair committee.

Foreign Aid Cut Beaten

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Senate today defeated, 41 to 31, a Republican-led attempt to cut another $500,000,000 from the economic phase of the multi-billion dollar foreign aid program.

Sen. Robert A. Taft (R-O) was among those who supported the reduction move. It was the first Senate test on the big aid program.

Four administration backers then offered another amendment to restore committee cuts in the bill and provide the full $8,500,000,000 foreign aid program requested by President Truman.

Ex-Convict Held In Wife's Death

Williamston Negro Bound Over For Superior Court Trial

Williamston—Police are holding without privilege of bail James Henry Williams, 24-year-old Negro ex-convict on the charge of murder of his wife last Saturday night.

At a preliminary hearing before Magistrate C. R. Mobley Wednesday night, probable cause was found and he bound Williams over to Martin County Superior Court.

According to Williamston Police Chief John Roebuck, Williams had just returned from serving six months in prison for assaulting his wife with a knife.

When he went to her home late Saturday night Williams allegedly attacked his wife, Hattie Mae Williams, with a paring knife.

Police said her jugular vein was severed and she quickly bled to death. Williams was covered with blood when arrested.

A neighbor Minnie Eubanks, Negro, told police Williams also threatened to attack his five-year-old daughter.

Sheriff M. W. Holloman of Williamston said this was the third murder in the county in less than three weeks.

Acheson Leaves For Pact Meet

The Secretary with 48 other members of the U. S. delegation, took off by special plane for San Francisco where the conference opens Tuesday. They were expected to arrive at 4:55 p.m. EST.

Jet Flies Ocean For New Record

BELFAST—(AP)—The Air Ministry said a British twin-jet bomber completed a trans-Atlantic hop from Ireland to Newfound today in a record-smashing four hours and 19 minutes.

The flight beat the previous time of four hours and 37 minutes, but it lost the race westward with the sun, which makes the swing in three and a half hours at a rate of 600 miles an hour.

Fulbright Will Support Truman

WASHINGTON—(AP)— Senator Fulbright (D-Ark) will support President Truman if he is the Democratic presidential nominee in 1952, the Senator said last night.

Appearing on a radio program (MBS "Reporters' Roundup.") Fulbright predicted victory for the Democratic ticket next year "based on the administration's record."

Who Is An Indian?

Even The Federal Government, Which Acts As Their Guardian, Can't Settle On A Definition Of An Indian; Background; Odd Conditions That Confuse

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON — (AP) — An Iowa cemetery refused burial to a soldier, killed in Korea, because he was not a member of the Caucasian race. He was an American Indian.

It's easier to explain the race from which the American Indians sprang than to answer what might seem a much simpler question: Who's an Indian?

Anthropologists agree Indians are of the Mongoloid race, which includes Chinese and Japanese, and that they came into North America from Siberia within the last 20,000 years.

Some Indians, like the Navahos and Apaches, are believed to have come here along the same route, over the Siberian Straits and down through Alaska, as recently as 900 years ago.

But there is no general agreement on who is an Indian. Congress tackled the question several years ago and was supposed to give a final answer. It never did.

Even government agencies—like the Census Bureau, which gathers figures on population, and the Interior Department's Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA), which handles Indian problems for the government—don't have the same definitions.

But isn't there some general agreement on who's an Indian, based on the amount of Indian blood in a man? For example: is a man an Indian if he has one-half, one-quarter, or one-eighth Indian blood? No.

Indian tribes themselves don't agree on that, for one tribe may accept as a member a man with one-half Indian blood, another if it's one-quarter, another if it's one-eighth.

The Census Bureau lists as an Indian anyone who says he is, provided he's accepted as an Indian in his community. But the BIA designates a man an Indian according to blood alone.

Generally, the BIA judges a man to be an Indian if he has one-quarter or more Indian blood and—if he also has an interest in property held in trust by the federal government.

Churches of Christ, Scientist

"Christ Jesus" is the topic of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science churches next Sunday.

The Golden Text is from John (5:19) "The Son can do nothing of himself but what he seeth the Father do."

Passages from the Bible include: "And these signs shall follow them that believe: In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues." (Mark 16:17)

And from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures' by Mary Baker Eddy: "The highest earthly representative of God speaking of human ability to reflect divine power, prophetically said to his disciples speaking not for their day only but for all time: "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also;" and "These signs shall follow them that believe." (p. 52).

Sees No Hope Of Revolt In Soviet

ASHEVILLE —(AP)— The Russian people like their communist form of government and any idea they may revolt is just wishful thinking.

That was the opinion expressed here yesterday by Demaree Bess, an American writer who lived in Moscow from 1934 to 1937. He is now an associate editor of the Saturday Evening Post magazine.

In a review of life in Russia in a speech before a civic club, he said the "partronage system in Russia has reached unbelievable proportions. Imagine the government having control not only of government jobs but every job in the country" with a black list which means starvation for those who displease the Kremlin leaders.

Doctors as a rule, Bess said, are fairly well treated. In recent months, regimentation of physicians has been eased to allow them to treat patients privately after hours for a fixed fee, he said.

Writers, he said, are a favored class, drawing the highest salaries and being treated with most respect. However, if they happen to get themselves out on a limb by misguessing what tomorrow's policy may be, they are given an assignment in Siberia where no one ever reads what they write, he declared.

Strength for the Day

RELIABILITY

BETTER THAN MEDICINE

The world has long been familiar with the story of Elizabeth Barrett, the young invalid languishing her life away on a couch and thinking how miserable she was. Then one day Robert Browning, the poet, called at her home, and life took on a new aspect. The romance and subsequent marriage of Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning brought together two of the richest personalities and two of the most fertile literary geniuses of the nineteenth century. As soon as she had something really to live for, Elizabeth Barrett soon recovered from her invalidism.

The same was true of Sophia Peabody. She was an invalid and her mother insisted on keeping her so. But this "invalid" fell in love with young Nathaniel Hawthorne and they were married. On her wedding trip she wrote to her mother: "Dear, dear Mother, every step the horses took, I felt better and not in the least tired. . . . It seems miraculous that I am so well." And Louise Tharp, who has written the book entitled "The Peabody Sisters," has this to say: "The invalid Sophia Peabody had ceased to exist. It was Sophia Hawthorne, a supremely happy young woman, who had stepped into a carriage and driven away."

Perhaps both Elizabeth Barrett and Sophia Peabody were really sick, but the "expulsive power of a new affection" certainly wrought wonders in the way of cure.

Love and new interests are much better for some ailments than medicine.

Imagine, Pitt County With Plenty Of Jobs

Unemployment in Pitt County at the present time is almost nill.

What a great boost it would be to the economic life of the individuals and to the county as a whole if the same situation existed 12 months a year instead of two or three.

Tobacco factories are humming with hundreds of employes at work, and they are still clamoring for more people to come to work. Construction is going on at a good clip and more people could be used if they were available. There are positions in various other fields which are vacant because workers are not available.

Think a moment how different the employment picture and economic situation of Pitt County will be four or five months from now. There will be literally hundreds upon hundreds of families throughout the county in which no member will have a steady job. The unemployment claims which at the present time are numbering 15 to 20 a week will climb steadily until they reach 700 or more a week.

Business generally will assume its usual off season pace.

What Pitt County needs is more year around payrolls particularly for the Negroes who are now forced to depend principally upon brief seasonal employment for their livelihood.

That is not a new idea. It has been voiced many times before, but little has been done to bring the idea into a realization.

Several small factories or other enterprises which could provide year around employment for a number of people who now work only a few months a year would be a great boon to the county. They could provide steady jobs for many who now work for two or three months in tobacco factories and then pick up odd jobs for the remaining months of the year.

The creation of these new year around jobs would greatly increase the earning capacity of the people of the county, and at the same time it would not cripple the great tobacco industry in the county.

The matter of securing for Pitt County the industries to provide this much needed boost to the county's economy is indeed a burning challenge to the Chambers of Commerce and other business and civic organizations in the county.

The State Needs Parole Reforms

The paroles system of North Carolina is one of the things of the state which definitely needs revamping. There are far too many persons who are sentenced by the courts, and after serving a token amount of the sentence are released on parole. Their actual punishment for crimes of which they have been found guilty is much more lenient than the crime deserves.

Paroles Commissioner T. C. Johnson admitted frankly that his office made a mistake in freeing on parole a man from the Piedmont section of the state, and in a short space of time allowing the man to be granted a pardon for his crime. It was only a short time before the man was back in court and found guilty of another crime. Johnson's excuse for the mistake was that he had based the parole on information he thought reliable, and the information had since proved unreliable.

It is only human to make mistakes, but in the hundreds of paroles granted in North Carolina the same mistake is being made again and again. Criminals are being given their freedom when they do not deserve it.

Steps should be taken to make such mistakes less likely to occur.

Actually does it seem reasonable for the state to spend thousands of dollars a year on courts which sentence individuals to several years in prison for their crimes, and then have the Paroles Commission set up so it may release the convicted individuals after they have served only a few months of their sentences?

Just punishments for crimes are set by the laws of the state. Even then the court is given a great deal of leeway to make the punishment more nearly fit the individual case. Is not North Carolina losing the actual purpose of the courts and the laws of the state when it allows the Parole Commission to practically nullify the sentences pronounced by the courts?

The state has instituted many reforms in its prison system during the past several years, and it is seeking to institute more efficient proceedures in its court system. It likewise should begin work immediately on the reforms which are needed in the paroles system now operating in North Carolina.

News Behind The News

WASHINGTON—The recent Congressional charges against the Army Engineers for deliberate misrepresentation of building costs on civilian projects and improvements represent another indirect effort by Interior Secretary Oscar Chapman to obtain control over all the nation's natural resources.

His backstage and persistent thrust for authority has already brought him into an open court clash with the Federal Power Commission, as recently described here.

His attempt to preempt Agriculture's jurisdiction over Forestry and the Rural Electrification Administration has precipitated a feud with a fellow-Denverite, Secretary Charles F. Brannan. But his most cherished objective has long been the Army's civilian building program, which includes flood control, power dams, rivers, harbors etc.

Mr. Chapman's ulterior motive is the expansion of Interior into what would be known as a Department of Natural Resources. In view of the fact that he is almost the only survivor of the early Rooseveltian faction of "national planners," with sincere but aggressive insistence on federal ownership and operation in this field, his latest demonstration of his intentions has aroused conservatives inside and outside the Administration, as well as many members of Congress.

• • • •

SYMPATHIZERS—Although the searching investigation of the Army Engineers' system of estimating and submitting costs to Congress was originally proposed by Representative Christopher C. McGrath of New York, the two Appropriations members who inspired and executed it were Chairman Clarence Cannon of Missouri and Representative John H. Kerr of North Carolina, who heads the subcommittee on Army Civil Functions.

Both are Chapman sympathizers, and their friendship with the Cabinet member has paid off. Missouri and North Carolina have been treated generously by Interior with respect to public development and improvements. Although Chairman Cannon cries periodically for economy, he invariably votes for fat appropriations for the Chapman program of public power.

• • •

PRACTICE—Recognizing the hidden purpose of the criticism of the Army's builders, Representative Gerald R. Ford Jr., Michigan Republican, will demand a similar inquiry into Interior's methods of underestimating the costs of its own building program. It is his belief that the Reclamation Bureau also tries to deceive Congress on the ultimate costs of its operations.

The fact is that "pulling the wool" over Capitol Hill economizers is an old and accepted practice on the part of officials of the executive branch of the government. As the Cannon-Kerr-McGrath study shows, 182 projects originally estimated by the Pentagon accountants to cost $2,638,517,000 will amount to more than double the first figure.

• • •

ESTIMATES—The same discrepancy will be found in Interior's estimates, if and when Chairman Cannon grants Representative Ford's demand for a parallel investigation.

Indeed, there is hardly a federal bureau which does not operate on the theory that, if it can wangle a preliminary appropriation by submitting minimum estimates, it can always persuade Congress to come across with more funds for "unanticipated expenditures."

Addressing a Washington conference of his field staff, Reclamation Commissioner Michael W. Straus ordered them to spend every nickel of their annual appropriations so that they could obtain larger amounts in subsequent years. He threatened to punish anybody who turned up with a surplus at the end of a fiscal year.

• • • •

TYPICAL—But the West Pointers really asked for the Congressional crackdown. Moreover, they convicted themselves in black and white by making the mistake of including confidential reports of inter-office telephone talks between the Portland District Office and the Office of the Chief of Engineers at Washington, Lieutenant General Lewis A. Pick. By inadvertence, they fell into the hands of the Congressional investigators.

In discussing construction of the McNary dam, Portland spokesmen informed General Pick's office that housing facilities for workers on the $49,000,000 job would cost $7,000,000.

So according to John J. Donnelly Jr., subcommittee counsel, "they decided to wait until the following year perhaps before they told Congress about that situation. They did not want to tell Congress because, as they agreed, Congress would 'fall dead.' "

As usually happens, the request for housing facilities, $7,414,000 worth, was submitted and approved.

This incident, which is typical of the manner in which almost all federal officials at Washington handle the taxpayers' money, under both Republican and Democratic Administrations, shows why the public debt, taxes and the 1952 budget have reached record figures, with no promise of prospective reductions.

When Is Releasing The Bird?

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

It amazes me to estimate the number of people who make a living telling other people how to live. The magazines on the stands will tell you how to take every breath if you want to be told.

The other day I saw one on how to sleep. "Rachel," I asked the wife, "do you think I should read this article on how to sleep?"

"You know the answer without asking me. You should read one on how to wake up in the morning." W.R. deserves all the credit for my arrival at work on time, so any information on how to sleep is sloughed off by us as a joke.

"Maybe," I said, "I should get one of those inner-spring mattresses so I can sleep better."

"You could sleep on a rail fence. If you slept any better you'd lose your job." W.R. had out-talked me, so I told her that I might have a reader who wants to know how to sleep, and formed a column outline.

If you want to sleep with your face down, do not use a pillow. In this position, a pillow tilts the neck too far back and may cause you to wake up with a stiff neck. If you have been sleeping on your face with a pillow, Dr. J. D. Wassersug says you should change your ways. It may keep you awake for a few months, but change.

Rush into your bedroom right now and check your bed. Some of the more expensive types are soft, but they might do you the most harm. A sagging bed allows, as the doctor says, "the muscles and ligaments of the upper part of the body to relax, but stretches those on the opposite side and tends to distort the abdominal organs and the chest. All innerspring mattresses and most bed springs have an undesirable amount of sag."

After reading all of those horrible things about your bed, how can you possibly sleep on it tonight? And what does the doctor recommend? The best mattresses are made of felted cotton or hair. Sponge rubber, if thick enough is also good. The best way to solve the bed problem is to get a good firm, hard mattress. Then between the springs and mattress, put a piece of plywood or board.

The doctor finally sums up how to sleep well for good health. All you have to remember is to sleep on a mattress that really rests your spine and does not allow it to sag or buckle. Use a pillow only to help keep the spine straight. Learn to sleep without lifting your arms high above your head.

To the authority's comments, let me add: Do a good day's work and you can sleep on a rail fence.

And I thank you.

DELINQUENTS — The one hundred counties in North Carolina had total ad valorem tax levies last year in excess of forty-six million dollars, of which better than 90 percent had been collected by June 30 of last year. Those figures are approximate, because records in the office of the state department of tax research show that eleven of the counties did not report on this particular item. The eighty-nine reporting counties list aggregate levies of $42,415,214 for the fiscal year 1949-50, of which there had been collected through June 30, 1950, latest date for which reports are complete, the sum of $39,432,762, or 90.6 percent of the total levy. The eleven counties not reporting on this item are Caswell, Cherokee, Cleveland, Columbus, New Hanover, Perquimans, Stokes, Wake, Warren, Watauga and Yancey. Since this list includes some big and some small counties, it is assumed that they would represent about ten percent of the total levies in all the counties and that the ratio of collection would be approximately the same as that of the 89 counties reporting.

PAID-UP — A considerable portion of these past due taxes have been paid since June 30 of last year, but the exact amount is not known. Tabulation prepared by the tax research department shows that for the five year period, including the tax years of 1945-46 and 1949-50, the total levies for the 89 reporting counties amounted to $164,116,904, of which there had been collected up to June 30, 1950, the sum of $157,295,766, or 95.8 per cent of the total levy. The tabulation further shows that for years prior to 1945-46 there remained some three million dollars of uncollected ad valorem county taxes in the 89 counties, making the total uncollected as of June 30, 1950, the actually large but relatively small amount of $9,894,846. Projecting those reported figures on 89 counties to the estimated total for the 100 counties, would indicate that there is something like eleven million dollars in past due taxes being carried on the books of the counties in North Carolina.

COLLECTABLE — How much of this is legally collectable is impossible to determine. The three millions accruing prior to 1945-46 is beyond the statute of limitation for forced collection. A considerable part of the nearly seven millions accrued within the past five years is uncollectable for various reasons, such as bankruptcy, death, removal of property and numerous others. It is conceded that a 96 percent collection rate for the five-year period is very good. The fact that only 1.3 percent of the 1945-46 levy remained uncollected on June 30 last year suggests rather careful follow-up on delinquents.

BREAKDOWN — For each of the five years Guilford county reported the largest total levy and Clay reported the smallest. For the 1949-50 year these figures were $3,821,766 and $43,417, respectively. Guilford also showed a high percentage of collections for that year, 97.3 percent. That record was tied by Union and beaten by Forsyth with 97.5 percent collections, Rockingham with 98.4 percent, and Madison which claimed top honors with 99.2 percent collections. Avery was at bottom of the list with a collection record of only 47.6 percent of the 1949-50 levy up to June 30 last year. Madison county, which has been in the headlines a lot of times because of local squabbles about county government, has the best record for tax collections throughout the entire five-year period covered by the report, with a delinquency percentage of only four-tenths of one percent.

EFFORTS—Seventy-four counties reported having tax sales during the calendar year 1950 in effort to collect delinquent taxes. Two counties reported no sales held, and twenty-four did not report on this point. Of the seventy-four tax sales held, two were in May, fifteen in June, three in July, nine in August, thirty-four in September, seven in October, two in November and two in December.

INDIVIDUALISTIC — The wide range in tax rates, valuation, aggregate levies, disparity in methods of collection and time of sales, indicates that county government in North Carolina is largely a matter of individual attitude of county officials. Despite statewide laws there is not much uniformity in tax practices of the one hundred counties.

The Voice Of The People

ENTERPRISERS SHOW SURPRISING INCREASE DURING PAST 10 YEARS

(Kannapolis Independent)

An idea of North Carolina's business growth during the past ten years may be had by comparison of state license tax figures for 1941 and 1951.

W. Cliff Pickett, head of the license tax section of the State Revenue department in Raleigh, recently revealed that his rolls carry 193,000 businesses of various types now. In 1941 he had 98,376 on the list.

Ten years ago license tax collections brought a little over $3,000,000 into the general fund. This year it is already more than $5,000,000— a tidy increase even after you allow for inflation.

Tobacco retailers paid $192,000 for their licenses in 1941. In 1950 they paid $297,000. (With the fees remaining the same, this indicates a large increase in the number of establishments.)

The story was the same in soft drink retailing. The state collected $148,000 from them in 1941, the total was $255,000 in 1950.

Dealers in radios and radio accessories paid $16,000 to the state in 1941. This year, they paid $35,000.

In 1941, the state collected $9,000 from pawn shops. It's getting $16,000 now.

Restaurants pay $1 a year for each of their seats. In 1941 the state collected $84,000 from that source. This year, it is collecting $177,000.

The biggest expansions were in loan agencies and in the service station, auto accessory and auto dealer fields.

In 1941 the flat license taxes paid by loan agencies brought the state $58,000. This year the loan agencies are bringing in $204,000.

In 1941, a total of $164,000 was collected from service stations, auto dealers and wholesalers and retailers of auto accessories. Those same sources are producing $616,000 this year.

Hotel license taxes netted the state $35,000 in 1941, $70,000 in 1951.

The significant thing in these figures is that they represent increases in the number of business enterprises opened—not increases in the total volume of business in the various fields. It speaks well for the courage of North Carolinians that so many ventured to open new places in these times of sticky government regulations.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER

State and county fairs are about to enter the last month or so of one of the most successful seasons in history. It is not because the stock is fatter or the mincemeat has more brandy, but because business has been rediscovering the rural fair.

This process of discovery has been going on ever since the end of World War II. More large corporations, and plenty of smaller country fairs are excellent places to sell things, especially those that need a bit of demonstration to put over.

There are still plenty of pens of fatted hogs and dime and quarters traps at the average country fair, but there is also a steadily increasing number of displays of washing machines, vacuum cleaners and other appliances. There are also more displays of home furnishings, furniture and long lists of other manufactured products. At least two brokerage houses have been using booths at fairs to explain the workings of the investment market.

The revenue from business exhibits has safely put the operation of many a fair into the black this year. By the same token, sales made at fair exhibits have kept many appliance merchants from running into the red.

The reasons for the growth of business exhibits at country fairs are not far to find. First, places where crowds gather are always good spots in which to sell goods. Second, farm income has been running very high since early in World War II and farmers have a new spending power. Dealers in tractors and other farm equipment have had to move over and share the market with dealers in toasters and other gadgets for the farmer's wife. And there has been plenty of buying power for all of them.

Farm income totaled $15,400,000,000 during the first seven months of this year, the Department of Agriculture reported. This is an increase of 17 per cent over the previous year. It was pretty close to the total receipts of $15,689,000,000 during the first seven months of 1948, which is the all-time high in the history of American agriculture.

REWARDING CUSTOMERS PAYS DIVIDENDS

A New York specialty shop rated its customers, giving them from "A" to "E" on total net purchases, "A" to "E" on returns, and "1" to 4" on promptness in paying.

Then it sent a letter to each of its customers rated AA1, about 3 per cent of the total, a special letter praising them for being such good customers and offering them a 10 per cent discount on purchases during a specific period.

It was a nice gesture. It was also good business. The best customers, who make fewer returns and pay quickest, bought $25,000 worth of garments during the period.

APPLIANCE PROSPECT DESCRIBED AS BRIGHT

'Business is getting better and fall and winter prospects are brighter than seemed possible two months ago,' the National Appliance and Radio Dealers Association says in a bulletin to members. Most encouraging of all, it adds, dealers are giving increasing evidence of ability to buy cautiously yet intelligently, and to move merchandise by selling rather than by price cutting.

FURNITURE INVENTORIES GETTING INTO LINE

Furniture dealers have been working off excessive inventories, judging by a report of the National Retail Furniture Association.

Its monthly survey showed inventories in July were 20 per cent larger than a year ago. However, that is the lowest inventory level since last December. July sales were 20 per cent under those for July, 1950. That's not bad considering that the 1950 month was at the peak of post-Korean scare buying.

HAITI AND PANAMA BEST CREDIT RISKS

Haiti and Panama shared the top position in the 46th semi-annual Latin-America survey of the Foreign Credit Interchange Bureau. Both countries ranked highest in both credits and collections.

Argentina, Paraguay and Columbia were the only markets classified "poor" in credits and "slow" in collections.

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK—(AP)— The average American wife can get everything she wants from the average American husband—except his attention.

Over the years a dense wall of fog rises between her vocal chords and his ears. No matter how many words she pours into the fog all she gets back is "Uh Huh" or a non-commital grunt.

And though the manly fellow may shower her with mink and diamonds, and endow her with progeny, the wife remains unsatisfied. She thinks conversation, like charity, should begin at home.

"You don't talk to me any more," she says accusingly.

Translated into English, this means, "You don't listen to me anymore."

But, granting that this is what she really has in mind, why does not the average husband listen to his wife? Why shouldn't a dirty old thing that grew up from rats and snails and puppy dog tails jump at the chance to converse with a fair creature made of sugar and spice and everything nice?

I asked several husbands this question. The first said, rather cynically I thought:

"Listen, I don't know why, but if you lived by a waterfall for 20 years do you think you'd still hear it? No."

Another replied, "To tell the truth, I don't remember anything my wife said to me since 1935." It turned out that what she had said then was: "Shut up!"

A third answered that he quit listening to his bride because all she did was make such despondent remarks as:

"Well, guess what happened to day? The laundry didn't come back." or, "That new butcher is getting awful fresh with me again. I wish you'd go to the store and put him in his place."

This husband said a strained silence had ensued in his household ever since he told her, "Honey, why don't you put your complaints to music and play them to me on a ukelele?"

A fourth marital old-timer said defensively, "That's why people have kids—so wives'll have somebody to talk to. Conversation is for couples that are still courting."

And a fifth said: "It's simple. The less you talk at home, the fewer the quarrels."

My, what bitter men!

And then I met a white-haired old gentleman, as wise as any man can be in the ways and whims of women, who said:

"My boy, there are only two sentences a man can say that really make sense to a woman. The first is, 'Will you marry me?' The second is, 'I love you.'

"When he has said those two sentences he is through with the art of conversation at home. The trouble is that women, who often don't mean what they say, always suspect that men never mean what they say. They want to be assured over and over again. If a man, no matter what his wife said to him, just answered 'I love you,' everything would be all right.

"I have followed that formula for 40 years, and I don't actually remember anything my wife has said in all that time."

When I asked him if it had been ever thus through history, he said:

"No. In the cave days there was more conversation. The husband went forth and slew a deer and hauled it home. He would brag and brag until the meat was all gone. Then his wife would hand him his club and say, 'Honey, go do it again.'

"Today, however, the average husband doesn't bring enough home to brag about and he wearies of hearing his wife say, 'Is that all?'

"A final point: Civilization is boring to many people. The husband is bored at work, the wife is bored at home.

"The difficulty that arises then is that a man, when he gets bored shuts up. But a woman—ah!"

And the old man shook his white head in sorrow.

Washington Letter

By SIGRID ARNE
(For JANE EADS)

WASHINGTON — The blue eyes of 80-year-old Mrs. Anna Metcalfe swept the faces of 111 women in the cafe at Ulsbach, Germany, late this spring. She had walked five miles to meet 100 other German women and 11 women from the U. S.

"It is wonderful to see German women meeting like this," she said. "I am so glad, for them and for Germany, that it is happening at last."

The meeting was part of a six-week experiment the U. S. Government carried on in the hope that Germany women would see new ways to take part in their government.

German women are extremely important to U. S. officials trying to turn Western Germany into a democracy. Women make up 68 per cent of the population and two thirds of the vote. But these officials have found German women held back by two conditions: (1) the traditional attitude of German men that women are indifferent workers and (2) remnants of the Nazi philosophy, which made women entirely subservient to men.

So the U. S. Government shipped 11 women leaders over for six weeks. They were a group that even American women would walk five miles to see:

Mrs. Arthur Anderson of the U. W. C. A., Mrs. Harold D. Dyke of the League of Women Voters, Dr. Dorothy B. Ferebee of the National Council of Negro Women, Mrs. Frederic Gilstrap of the American Association of University Women, Mrs. Philip H. Jones of the Associated Country Women of the World, Dr. Minnie L. Maffett of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Mrs. Marie C. Mengerson of the CIO, Miss Louella Beckmeyer of the National Council of Catholic Women and Mrs. Joseph Willen of the National Council of Jewish Women.

A two-day talk fest near the new German capital, Bonn, ended with this from one of the German women:

"The mere fact that you came at all proves to us that your hand of friendship was extended in good faith. We have clasped it in friendship, and that alone is a remarkable beginning."

Annual Youth Crusade At Jarvis Memorial Church Opens Sunday

By MARTHA FORBES

The Annual Youth Crusade for Intermediates, Seniors and College Age young people will begin at Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church on Sunday, September 2.

The theme for the week is "Our Mission In the World Today." Details for the program are being worked out by a committee of young people under the guidance and direction of the pastor, the Rev. Langill Watson. It is expected that the nightly attendance will average 100 youths each night.

Each night's program will consist of three parts—worship, instruction and recreation. The three parts are designed to make a satisfactory whole, and the devotional leaders, teachers and recreation leaders have been selected with careful fore-thought and particular emphasis on their fields of service.

The Crusade will open on Sunday night with a fellowship supper at 6:00 P.M. to be followed by an opening service of worship in the Sanctuary, to be conducted by the pastor.

On Monday night the topic for discussion will be "Our World At Half Past 1950"; on Tuesday night the subject will be "Faith In a Time of Crisis-But In What and Why?" Wednesday night the young people will discuss "Communism Challenges Christianity", while on Thursday the pertinent question will be "Who Am I—The Secret of Life." The last topic for discussion will be "Jesus Christ-Fact or Fiction".

On each night the group will gather for a combined worship service, which will be followed by a period of class instruction. For this the group will divide into three sections for discussion. Wyatt Brown, R. W. Tyson, Jr. and Langill Watson will lead the instructional period for the older youth. Ralph Flemi. Jr. will conduct the classes for the Senior group, while Jimmie Warren will be in charge of the Intermediates.

Devotional speakers for each night are Herbert Waldrop, Jr., Monday; David Whichard III, Tuesday; Lewis Evans, Wednesday; and Rufus Stark, Thursday. On Friday night, the worship period will be a service of consecration during which the Rev. Robert Seymour of Warrenton will bring the message.

Entertaining recreation has been planned for each night following the worship and instruction periods.

All young people of the community are invited to attend.

Brandon Hodges Considers Entry

RALEIGH —(AP)— State Treasurer Brandon Hodges of Asheville, a former state senator, is definitely a potential gubernatorial candidate.

"I am closer to running than ever before," he answered prodding newsmen yesterday. "I'm seriously considering running for governor," he explained so as to leave no doubt in anyone's mind.

If he runs in the Democratic primary next May, his campaign will call for the development of the state industrially and agriculturally, Hodges asserted.

Hodges, who recently returned from a tour of the west, declared: "I am becoming convinced there is a strong feling in North Carolina that the traditional alternation of governorships (from east to west) should be maintained."

Although several persons have sent out felers and others have indicated to their friends they are considering running for the governorship, only one man has announced publically he is a candidate. That man is Manley Dunaway of Charlotte, a perennial candidate for public office.

Highway Body To Meet At Manteo

Manteo, —(AP)— The The State Highway Commission, which usually holds its meetings in Raleigh, will meet in this coastal resort tomorrow.

The commission is expected to be asked to rais eits ban on doing the roadwork on non-highway stret systems within municipalities.

J. A. McDowell of Scotland Neck, a director of the League of Municipalities, is scheduled to appear before the commission and request that the ban be lifted.

Daniel Boone's Name On Turtle

KILLBUCK, O. —(UP)— Residents here have a "find" to mull over.

G. B. Lepley picked up a turtle, a two-pound, box variety, with "D. Boone, 1763" carved on its shell.

The possible authenticity of the carving is being debated.

The real Daniel Boone might have done the carving, since he was in the Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee area about that time when he was 29 years old. However, it isn't established that he got this far north in the 1760s, although the turtle conceivably could be a vagrant.

One of the most damaging bits of counter evidence is that box turtles usually live only 60 to 80 years.

Stunned

BONN, Germany—(AP)—German owners of foreign property seized by the Allies during the war were stunned today by news they have no chance of getting it back.

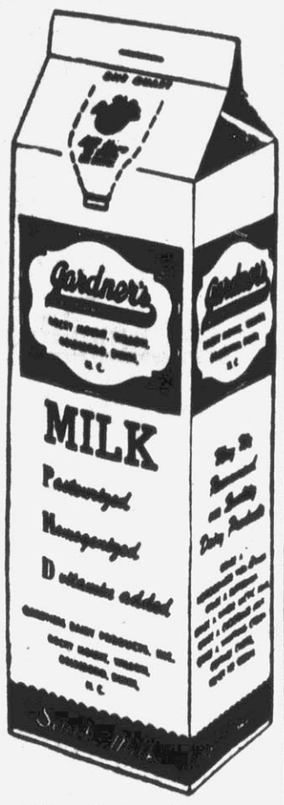

The western occupation powers—Britain, France and the U.S.—approved a new law yesterday giving clear title to persons who purchased former German assets from allied custodians of enemy property. Germans had hoped for restoration of their former property in allied countries.

Reactor To Cost About $500,000

RALEIGH —(AP)— North Carolina State College's nuclear reactor will cost close to one-half a million dollars.

Bids on the reactor, the first to be built outside the authority of the Atomic Energy Commission, were opened yesterday. The reactor will be devoted entirely to the peacetime development of atomic energy.

Low bids on th structure, which will include 14 laboratories and five underground rooms for special experiments, totaled $446,860.

No Clues Yet In Woman's Slaying At Chapel Hill

CHAPEL HILL —(AP)— State, local and county police sought a clue today to the brutal slaying of a 69-year-old Chapel Hill business woman.

The body of Miss Rachel Crook, operator of a fish market and remnant store here, was found near New Hope Chapel early yesterday. Highway Patrolman R. R. Thomas found the body. He said the face had been battered almost beyond recognition.

Orange County Sheriff Sam Latta, Police Chief W. T. Sloan of Chapel Hill and State Bureau of Investigation agents said last night they had not turned up any clues.

Captain William Blake of the Chapel Hill Police Department said the slaying presumably took place Wednesday night at the spot the body was found.

Miss Crook had been living here since 1930. She was a native of Union Springs, Ala., and owned an 820-acre plantation near there. She was the daughter of the Rev Davy Crockett Crook, a brigadier general in the Confederate Army.

Miss Crook attended Vanderbilt University, and later took her master's degree at Alabama Polytechnic Institute. She taught in high schools in Alabama and Georgia and was a faculty member of Lucy Cobb College at Athens, Ga., and Auburn. She had been working on a doctor's degree in economics at the university here at various intervals for 12 years.

She first entered business in Chapel Hill in 1946 and operated the village's first launderette.

Red Sox Beat Ormondsville, For Bright Belt Crown

Pete Piestrak Connects For Long Triple In Fifth; Jim Corbin Bats In Bill Sanderson With Winning Run

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Sports Editor

FARMVILLE — The 1951 Bright Belt League came to a dramatic climax here last night as Farmville's Red Sox won their fourth consecutive game in the series to take the league championship from Ormondsville.

The Red Sox scored six runs in the fifth and one in the eighth and then cut short a last inning rally by Ormondsville to take a 7-6 victory.

Manager Norman Clark hurled the win, allowing seven hits, although spacing them effectively. Clark struck out a total of 11 men during the contest, retiring the side in the ninth via the three-strike route.

Mark Herring led off the big fifth by working righthander Jimmy Byrd for a walk. Roger Thrift singled after Millard Webb flied out to the leftfielder. Thrift's singleton broke up a no-hitter for Byrd. Ralph Britt followed with the second Farmville hit, a single, to send Herring home with the first Red Sox run. Pete Piestrak then stepped to the plate and poled a long triple into the space between center and leftfield, scoring both Thrift and Britt, to send Farmville ahead in the contest for the first time.

Clark grounded out to the pitcher for the second out. Gaither Cline hit a sharp grounder to the Ormondsville shortstop, who bobbled the ball and then threw wild at first, allowing Cline to take second base and Piestrak to score the fourth run of the inning.

William Sanderson singled to send home Cline. Sanderson moved to second as the first baseman errored an attempted pick-off. Jim Corbin came through with a single to score Sanderson with the eventual winning run. Herring ended the inning by lifting a fly to the leftfielder.

Ormondsville scored early, taking a 1-0 lead in the first frame. With two out, Garland Little was safe on an error by the Red Sox second sacker. Sam Stell brought him home with a clean single. The losers scored again in the third on a three-bagger by Barry Jones and a fielder's choice by Little. A pair of errors and a single by James Ray McLawhorn produced another run in the seventh.

Going in to the top the ninth trailing, 7-3, Ormondsville quickly rallied for a pair of runs before Clark could retire the side. Barry Jones led off with a single and moved to second on an attempted double play on a grounder by McDaniels. Clark settled down to whiff sluggers Garland Little and Sam Stell in succession. McLawhorn lofted a high fly into rightfield and the game appeared to be ended, but the fielder dropped the ball, allowing Jones to score. Stuart Tripp was sent in as a pinch hitter for Bruce Meadows and promptly sent a clean single out over the keystone sack to score McDaniels. Ed Couche fanned to end the game.

Jimmy Byrd, pitching with only one night's rest, had a no-hitter until the fifth when Thrift connected for his single. Byrd was reached for seven hits. He walked six and did not struck out a man.

Pete Piestrak slugged out a pair of triples to lead the winners at bat.

Barry Jones collected a triple and single to pace the losers. Stell rapped out a pair of singles.

Ormondsville finished the regular season in first place, one-half game ahead of the Red Sox. Ormondsville defeated Macclesfield in the first half of the semi-finals while Farmville slapped the Pinetops nine.

Head Coach Bill Dole will take off the wraps of his 1951 edition of the East Carolina Pirates tomorrow night at 8 p.m.

At that time, Dole will send the Bucs, nearly 40 strong, through a scrimmage for the benefit of the public. H stated this morning that this will be the only time during the season that the public will be invited to attend the practice sessions.

Heading the list of returning lettermen are quarterback Sandy Ciller, who is expected to step into the spot vacated by Roger Thrift, Little All-American graduate. Jack Benzie, John Daughtery, and Jack Britt are the other backs coming back from last year's team.

The line will be bolstered by the return of nine monogram men, including ends Cecil Winslow, Bob Hodges, and Dwight Shoe; tackles Bill McDonald, and John McKenzie; guards George Graybill and Denr Smith; and centers Frank Madigan and Luke Taylor.

Pre-season forecasters have placed East Carolina at the top of the North State Conference.

The Pirates open the season on September 15, traveling down south to play Mississippi Southern, a power among the smaller Southern schools. Elon comes to Greenville on October 6 for the first conference game for the Bucs.

Saturday's scrimmage will take place in the college stadium.

Cleveland Drops To Second As A's Win

United Press Sports Writer

Jimmy Dykes, the little roundman of the Athletics, was making good today on a promise of two weeks ago in which he said, "Naturally we haven't got a chance for the pennant, but I'll bet we can decide who will win it."

His seventh-place Athletics, who have spirit and hustle to compensate for lack of championship talent, had just drubbed the Yankees by the unmerciful margin of 15 to 1, when Jimmy said that, and he promised that "there'll be more of the same."

Pointing out that the A's had plenty of games left with all of the contenders, he said that "we're going to have a lot of fun trying to knock all of them off."

What a prophet he turned out to be. At his first opportunity, he brought the Athletics into Cleveland and knocked the Indians out of first place by winning two out of three games, taking the rubber match, 6 to 2 yesterday as lefty Morris Martin, the rookie prize picked up from the Brooklyn Dodgers organization, pitched a steady eight-hitter.

It was the third time this year the lowly but lethal Athletics had knocked a team out of first place. They did it earlier to the White Sox and the Yankees and Dykes can hardly wait now until Labor Day when his boys take on the Yankees in a double bill at Philadelphia. They have won two double bills from the Yankees already.

Martin, winning his 10th game, topped Bobby Feller, who was stopped once again in quest of his 21st victory. Cocky Ferris Fain, the stylish first baseman who is in hot quest of the American League batting title, set the hitting pace with two runs batted in.

The Indians got a home run out of Bob Kenney, who also got the only tally in the opening victory over the A's with a homer in a 1 to 0 decision. But Kennedy became the goat of the game by dropping a fly ball for an error that let three runs come home.

The Yankees, who were idle, now lead the Indians by half a game, and also have nothing to worry about with an open date today while the Indians play the Browns in a night game.

The Dodgers built up a cushion for their weekend series with the Giants by defeating the Reds 3 to 1, to increase their lead to seven games in the National. The Giants dropped a home run battle to the Pirates 10 to 9, while in other National League games the Braves massacred the Cubs 16 to 2, and the Cardinals topped the Phils 6 to 3. The Red Sox trimmed the Tigers 10 to 4 in the only other American League game.

Preacher Roe gained credit for his 18th victory against just two losses, although his touch left arm tightened up again and Clyde King had to take over in the seventh in Brooklyn. Connie Ryan got a first inning Cincy homer after which the Reds could do nothing with Roe or King. Brooklyn scored two unearned runs, winning on just six hits.

Major league pace-setter Ralph Kiner hit his 37th home run in the ninth inning to give the Pirates their margin over the Giants, moving them from eighth to sixth in the standings.

The Cardinals broke through against rookie Niles Jordan for four runs in the fourth inning and moved on to a victory that put them into fourth place ahead of the Phillies.

The Red Sox, still not out of it, moved to within 4 1-2 games of the skidding Indians as Ellis Kinder pitched one-hit scoreless relief ball for four innings, and his mates exploded late to sink Detroit.

NCAA Committee Offers 12-Point Attack On Sports

CHICAGO—(UP)—The powerful policy-making committe of the National Collegiate Athletic Assn. offered a 12-point attack against overemphasis of college sports today.

The council program attacked financial grants to athletes and high-pressure recruiting methods and suggested re-examination of rules permitting post-season games.

It also recommended that practice seasons be confined to the time of year when the sport is played and asked rigid supervision of all out-of-season practice sessions.

Another point urged that "all athletes who receive gifts or subsidies beyond that permitted by the institution and conference" become automatically ineligible.

Thre suggestions were aimed at strict enforcement of athletes' academic standards and limiting the number of games a college plays in each sport.

The council also recommended reconsideration of the free substitution rule to "eliminate pressure implications of the platoon system."

The suggestions were drawn up at the close of the council's two-day meeting yesterday.

Ham Richardson And Art Lawson In Delayed Sets

FOREST HILLS, N. Y. (UP)—Defending champion Art Larsen of San Leandro, Cal., tottered today just two games away from defeat by 18-year-old Hamilton Richardson of Baton Rouge, La., as the seventh day of the U. S. tennis championships opened with a playoff of a fourth-round match halted by darkness at 5-5 in the fifth set.

Top-seeded Dick Savitt of Orange, N. J., ailing with a mysterious leg infection, faced a play-or-forfeit ultimatum in his fourth-rounder against Straight Clark of Pasadena, Cal.

Already one round behind most of the field, the towering champion of Wimbledon and Australia was granted one 24 hour postponement but today was set as the deadline to set his match on the books.

Bitter at failure of tournament officials to put on his match at an earlier hour yesterday, the cocky Larsen refused to confer with them on whether to replay the entire fifth set so it was scheduled to be resumed at 5-all, Larsen's service. Set scores, Larsen's listed first, were 6-4, 3-6, 6-1, 3-6, 5-5, when darkness fell.

The winner in the playoff was scheduled to meet Gardnar Mulloy of Miami without leaving the court with a berth in the semi-finals at stake.

Frank Sedgman became the last survivor of Australia's talented Davis Cup team, as Vic Seixas of Philadelphia, Budge Patty of Los Angeles and Herbie Flam of Beverly Hills, Cal., al rode into the quarter-finas with victories yesterday.

Seixas seeded seventh in the draw, slashed from behind to whip Ken McGregor, the No. 2 Aussie, 4-5, 7-5, 7-5, 6-4, and Patty ousted southpaw Mervyn Rose, Aussie No. 3, with a similar rally, 1-6, 6-3, 6-2 7-5. Flam dusted off Eddie Moylan of Trenton, N. J., 4-6, 6-2, 6-2, 7-5.

Patty next will meet the Savitt-Clark winner in a Saturday match while Flam plays Seixas.

In the women's division, second-seeded Shirley Fry of Akron was scheduled to bid for a berth in the semi-finals against Kay Tuckey of England, who defeated Beverly Baker of Santa Monica, Cal., yesterday. Maureen Connolly of San Diego, Cal., was paired against Jean Quertier of England in the only other quarter final match.

Mrs. J. J. Walker-Smith of England reached the quarters by defeating Mrs. Baba Lewis of Newtonville, Mass., 9-7, 8-6, and Mrs. Magda Rurac of Los Angeles upset Mrs. Patricia Todd of La Jolla, Cal., 9-7, 2-6, 6-1.

Already in the quarter-finals and idle for another day were top-seeded Doris Hart of Miami and Nancy Chaffee of Beverly Hills, Cal.

Going Slow

FARMVILLE — Practice for the local Red Devils has been going comparatively slow during the last week, it was reported this morning by Coach Elbert Moye.

"The boys are slow in getting out for practice this year," Moye said, 'consequently, it is hard to say what type of team we will have."

Farmville was hit hard by graduation last season. Several newcomers have been counted on to fill the gaps.

Charles Tucker is Moye's assistant.

Chapter 17

Brents hand went to his side and his fingers came away red and wet. Jack was looking at him and he said, "Reckon I'll go home and patch myself up." He went down the aisle and through the doorway, knowing Jack would watch Shotgun's men.

He went to Shotgun's shack, entered it, lighted a lamp and started a search of the place in the hope of finding some clue to the identity of the mysterious leader. He found nothing but a cigar box filled with gold coins. There must have been five thousand dollars there. He left with the box under his arm, went to Jack's stable and, mounting the side of a stall, put the box on a rafter where it would not be noticed.

He went home, found that Shotgun's bullet had passed between hip bone and lower rib and, save for the bleeding was not serious. He cleaned it and taped a compress over it, then changed his shirt and coat and returned to the Palace. Jack was not there and neither was Biff. He frowned at the thought that they had probably gone to contact their leader; he might have anticipated such a move and should have followed them.

Shotgun's body had been removed and the Cockeyed Kid had cleaned up the blood and the life of the Palace once more flowed in its normal channel.

An hour later Jack came in. He caught Brent's eye and motioned him over to the bar. He said, "You all right?"

"Yes. It wasn't bad."

"How'd you like to take over Shotgun's gang?"

Brent experienced a thrill which travelled the length of his spine and set his toes to tingling. It had come. He said as calmly as he could, "Me? I'd like it fine. When do I take over?"

"Go home and pretend to go to bed. After the Palace closes come around to my house. Back door. Go in and wait in the kitchen. Don't make a light. There's a man you'll have to meet and I'll take you to him."

Brent's blood was throbbing in his temples. Tonight he would meet the unknown leader, the man he was convinced had killed his father and his brother. He did not let his elation show in his face; he looked carefully over the crowd and saw that Shotgun's friends were still in the place. Biff had not returned, nor was Cliff Durham present. He must avoid them until after he had learned the identity of the leader. After that it didn't matter; trouble couldn't come fast enough to suit him.

He went out through the side door and into the alley. He reconnoitered his shack carefully, and when he entered he did not make a light. He removed his hat and gunbelt, putting the latter where he ould reach it easily and stretched out on the bunk to relax.

Tonight was the night.

The sound of quick, light footsteps outside the cabin rang the alarm bell in his brain and he snatched his gun and had it trained on the doorway when the latch clicked. In the rectangle of the entrance he saw a form which was not that of a man. He said softly, "Who is it?"

"It's me, darling," said Lu Roselle, and closed the door behind her.

He swung his legs from the bunk and sat up as she felt her way through the darkness and sat down beside him. She said, "I told Jack I had a headache and was coming home early. I've done it before. We have over an hour."

He was annoyed. He said, "You are wrong; you're going home now."

"Please, Tex!" She put her arms about him and drew him to her. She kissed him and pressed her cheek against his. "Let me stay. Im fed up with that joint." She clung to him and the words came with a rush. "Take me away from it! Let's go together. I don't care where just so it's away from here. I'll do anything you want me to, but get me away from this stinking hole!"

At last she was talking and he was quick to take advantage. "Maybe if you'd asked me before tonight I'd have been more than willing; but tonight I'm to see the big boss about taking Shotgun's place."

"Don't do it; Get out of Destiny and take me with you. I'm scared, Tex!" She clutched him tightly. "Somewhere in Destiny is a traitor. Shotgun's last raid was tipped off and so was Jack's. Other jobs will go wrong and some day a posse is going to ride into Destiny and clean up."

"This boss of ours seems to be a smart fellow; can't we depend on him to pull us out of here before the law strikes?"

"In this game it's every man for himself. He's probably sitting pretty with a getaway all planned."

Brent's nerves were tingling "Do I know him?"

"Of course."

"Does he use his right name?"

"I don't know."

"I wondered. Somewhere I heard a name connected with the outlaws of Destiny; a name that sounded like—Shell."

She drew away from him and he could feel her intent gaze through the darkness. She said in a hushed voice, "Shell?"

"Something like that." He tried to sound indifferent. "I didn't pay much attention. Doesn't matter; I'll meet him tonight and maybe I'll find out."

A subtle change came over her; he could sense it in the way she reacted. She got up. She said, "I guess I'd better go home after all."

And then there came a knock on the door.

Lu gave a gasp, then froze into silence; Brent snatched up the gun he had returned to the chair and asked, "Who is it?"

The answer came in an even, toneless voice. "Jack Roselle, I came to tell Lu the arty's over."

The latch clicked and the door flew open but nobody stood in the entrance. Jack said, "Come on out, Lu."

"Jack, we were just talking." Her voice trembled.

"Come—on—out!"

Brent saw her move slowly towards the doorway. She said again, "Honest, Jack, we weren't doing a thing but talking."

"Sure. Just come out and go home."

Brent got up from the bunk and watched as she went out, cringing as far from Jack's side of the doorway as she could. He heard Jack say, "I'll talk with you later." She turned quickly and Brent heard the click of her heels on the planks as she ran up the street.

Brent said, "I'll make a light and we'll talk this over."

"Don't bother. I'm not coming in and I know you won't come out. I could give the word that would turn every gun in Destiny on you but I'm not going to do it. You saved my bacon twice and it was Lu chasing you and not you chasing Lu. Be out of Destiny by morning."

Christian Relations Among Nations — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON — By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—John 4:4-14; Acts 10:25-28; Colossians 3:11.

Passing through Samaria, Jesus passed by Jacob's well and asked a Samaritan woman for a drink of water. She asked Him why He, a Jew, would ask a favor of her, who was a Samaritan, with whom Jews had no dealings.

Jesus told her that if she knew to whom she was speaking she would have asked Him for living water; for he who drank of water from the well would thirst again, but he who partook of living water, would never thirst.

Cornelius, a Roman centurion of Caesarea, sent men to bring Peter to him. As Peter neared Cornelius' home, the centurion ran to meet him, cast himself at Peter's feet, but Peter raised him, saying, "I too am a man."

Cornelius had gathered many to listen to Peter, who began by saying that, according to Jewish custom, it was not lawful for him to associate with Gentiles, but God changed his mind.

Christian Relations Among Nations

GOD TELLS US TO LOVE ONE ANOTHER

Scripture—John 4:4-14; Acts 10:25-28; Colossians 3:11.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

ALL THROUGH history there has been racial discrimination. Jews considered that they were God's chosen people and that they should not eat, worship or associate socially with those whom they called Gentiles.

White men looked down on those whose skins were darker than theirs. Men of wealth and position lauded it over men of lowly birth who worked with their hands. Kings ruled their subjects with absolute authority because they held their positions by authority of God Himself, so they claimed.

Are men learning better, as the early church was gradually led to see that the gospel was not a message to the Jews alone, but was intended to be brought to all men? As races and nations are forced by the changing world to mingle more and more together, are we learning that God made us all; that He loves us all, and we all should be brothers no matter what our positions in life, our race or color?

Are we learning that men have the same basic needs—of food, drink, clothes, shelter, love, liberty and understanding? And that all of us need to be saved from our sins and brought to God.

St. John tells us that Jesus "must needs go through Samaria." Most Jews went a circuitous route to avoid going through Samaria, as they despised the people. They traded with them, but had no social or religious dealings with them.

You will remember from other lessons that the problem of whether the new religion was to be kept for the Jews only, or for the Gentiles as well, troubled the early Christian church a great deal, and there was much dissension and discussion of the subject. Jesus shows us very clearly not only by the episode of His deliberately passing through Samaria, but of holding converse with a Samaritan woman—and a woman whose character He knew to be not of the best. She was one of His Father's daughters, however, and Jesus would save her if He could—that is, if she had within herself the will to be saved.

Jacob's well was near the town of Sychar, where the apostles had gone to buy food. Jesus, being weary, sat down on the well, and the woman came there to draw water. Jesus asked her for a drink of water, and the woman asked, in surprise: "How is it that thou, being a Jew, askest drink of me, which am a woman of Samaria?"

"Jesus answered and said unto her, If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, Give Me to drink; thou wouldest have asked of Him, and He would have given thee living water."

This answer amazed the woman who said, "Sir, Thou hast nothing to draw with, and the well is deep; from whence then hast Thou that living water? Art Thou greater than our father Jacob, which gave us the well?"

Perhaps this woman was slightly annoyed, thinking this stranger was disparaging the well.

"Jesus answered and said unto her, Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again; But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life."

We do not know if the words of Jesus helped this woman to lead a better life thereafter, or if she was converted, but we do know that Jesus felt the gospel was for everyone, not just the Jews, and that He was purposely led to this woman by God's bidding.

Peter was staying with Simon, a tanner, when, going up to the roof to take a nap, he had a vision wherein he, being hungry, saw a sheet let down from heaven with all manner of animals in it, and a voice told him to kill and eat.

Peter said he could not do so, as many of the beasts were "unclean" according to the Jewish law. The voice said, "What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common."

Peter wondered what meaning the vision had, but just then his host called that there were three men waiting to see him. The men came from a Roman centurion named Cornelius, and they said he must go with them to their master's house.

Cornelius was a saintly man and he wanted to embrace the Christian religion. Hearing that Peter was nearby, he had sent for him.

As Peter neared Cornelius' house, the soldier came running to meet him and threw himself on his face before Peter, worshiping him. Peter raised him, saying, "Stand up; I myself also am a man."

Peter might have taken this homage as his due; he was, with his brother, Andrew, the first man Jesus called to follow Him. He was considered the head of the early Christian church, but in his own opinion he was just "a man." Let all who feel puffed up because of their success in life—whether they be churchmen or laymen, take note of this passage in The Acts.

Finding that Cornelius had gathered together a number of people into his house, Peter began his talk by reminding them that the Jewish law forbade a Jew from coming to one of another nation, but that God had shown him in a vision that he should call nothing that came from Him common or unclean. He baptized the people in the house and they received the Holy Ghost.

The lesson is clear: "God is no respecter of persons," as Peter was convinced. "Christ is all, and in all." Colossians 3:11.

New Five-Points Traffic Lights

The traffic signal light tower at Five Points will be removed in the near future, and with it a traffic hazard will be eliminated.

Four iron standard poles of the white way lamp type, 30 feet tall, will be placed at the five-direction intersection. Traffic signal lights will be installed on them by order of the Police Committee. Foundations for the four iron standards have been laid.

When the order for changing the traffic setup at Five Points was issued some time ago, it was explained that the four iron standards would replace the wood poles and the tower now there.

Plans provide for connecting and synchronizing all traffic lights in the city.

Under the new system, it was explained, traffic may be diverted from a congested thoroughfare to another street, thus facilitating steady movement of traffic.

With the present traffic signal tower at Five Points only five cars can get past the tower on the green light, a city official stated.

Vote Legal Sale Of Beer, Wine

LIBERTY —(AP)— Liberty has voted back in the legal sale of beer and wine.

Complete but unofficial tabulations of yesterday's election show 241 persons voted for legal ber, 203 against; 232 for legal wine, 206 against.

Randolph County voted dry in March, 1950. Liberty is the first town in the county to vote wet since then and is the 15th Tar Hel town in 11 legally dry counties to vote back the legal sale of beer.

Deadline Near

Deadline on making payment for the operation of any business in the city is tomorrow.

Today city clerk H. H. Duncan reminded all persons who have not paid their privilege license for the fiscal year to do so immediately. Penalty on delinquent licenses goes into effect Monday, he said.

To date Duncan's office has sent out written reminders to all merchants and other businessmen in Greenville to that effect. And collections, he said, have been above those of former years, due primarily to the inclusion of additional businesses to the list of those required to buy licenses.

Penalty after tomorrow is five percent per month with additional five percent in each succeeding month.

Early Risers To See Sun Eclipse

NEW YORK—(AP)—Early risers tomorrow will see a partial eclipse of the sun.

The phenomena will be visible on all of the eastern seaboard and west of the Mississippi River to a line approximately between Galveston, Tex., and Bismarck, N.D.

The sun will rise here partly eclipsed at 5:21 a.m. (EST). The shadow will deepen until 6:01 a.m. (ES), when about 87 per cent of the sun's surface will be blotted out. The shadow then will start to fade, disappearing at 7:10 a.m. (EST).

To view the eclipse safely, the Better Vision Institute says, look through an over-exposed photographic film or a piece of glass smoked by candle flame. Even then, don't stare at the sun continuously for a long time.

The old name for Iraq is Mesopotamia.

Altitude Record By Rocket Plane

EL SEGUNDO, Calif.—(AP)—A Navy rocket-powered airplane has shattered all altitude records, climbing to what aviation experts unofficially believe was 77,674 feet (more than 14½ miles). It levelled off at 1,300 miles an hour.

The supersonic flight in the needle-nose Douglas Skyrocket ship was made Aug. 15 from Edwards Air Force Base. The exact altitude reached by the Douglas test pilot, Bill Bridgeman, was not disclosed.

Bridgeman's plane was dropped from the bomb bay of a Superfortress at 35,000 feet and he immediately cut in the four powerful rocket tubes to curve upward in front of the bomber.

Bridgeman could have seen the vast curve of the earth had he had time to look, but he worked tensely in the cramped little cabin, scanning the wide range of his instrument panel.

The Skyrocket has a wing span of 25 feet, is 40 feet long and weighs about 15,000 pounds.

Annona, in Roman mythology, was the name given to the personification of the produce of the year.

New Excise Tax Program Gets Backing Senate Finance Group

WASHINGTON (UP)—A pack of cigarets, a gallon of gas, a bottle of beer and whisky is going to cost more soon.

The increases are just about assured on those and many other items, such as automobiles and dishwashers. The increases will be in the form of boosted excise taxes on those things.

The Senate Finance Committe has accepted, without change, many excise tax boosting proposals approved already by the House. They still face a Senate vote, but it was likely they would be approved.

However, electric bills should be slightly lower. The committe partially offset increases by accepting a House provision to repeal the 2 1-3 tax on electrical energy. This would mean a savings of about $104,000,000 a year for domestic and commercial users of electricity.

The House excise tax provisions would yield an added $1,252,000,000 a year. Yesterday the Senate committe approved new and increased excise taxes to produce an estimated $1,045,000,000.

The Senate committee's action would boost the tax on a pack of cigarets one cent — from seven cents to eight; the gasoline tax would go up from one and one half cents per gallon to two cents.

On beer, the tax would go up from $8 to $9 a barrel.

On distilled spirits, the present levy of $9 a proof gallon would rise to $10.50. That means an increase of about 26 cents in the price of a fifth of 85-proof whisky. These levies are the same in the House-approved bill.

Tax increases on wine would range from two to 25 cents a gallon.

On the excise boosts, the Senate committe went beyond the House in one case yesterday and voted a 10 per cent tax on the manufacturers' price of electric vacuum cleaners, washing machines and garbage disposal units. This levy is similar to one already in effect on many electrical appliances.

Both the Senate committe and the House have approved raising the present seven per cent excise tax on the manufacturers' price of passenger automobiles and motorcycles to 10 per cent. Similar levies, now five percent, on trucks, busses, trailers, automobile parts and accessories would rise to eight percent.

The finance committe approved the extension of 10 per cent manufacturers' excise taxes to a list of electrical appliances, including power mowers and dishwashers, and on fountain pens, ball-point pens and mechanical pencils. On the last three items, the House tax was 20 per cent.

India announced she had decided not to sign the pact, and the reasons she gave are the same as the objections to the treaty raised by Russia. Primarily, both India and Russia think the treaty should turn over Formosa to Communist China and should not include any clause permitting U.S. troops to remain in Japan.

Venom Put To Work; Try Poisons Against Disease

DR. H. L. STAHNKE and his secretary, Betty Lou Lindly, look over a Gila monster, only poisonous lizard in the U. S.

AP Newsfeatures

TEMPE, Ariz. — Deadly Gila monsters and scorpions are being put to work in medical research at Arizona State College here.

In charge is Dr. Herbert L Stahnke, director of the poisonous animal research laboratory. Dr. Stahnke also gives a special course for upper classmen on "Poisonous Animals of Arizona."

As one of the current projects, Dr. Stahnke and his research assistants are determining the effect of venoms on cancerous tissue as part of the Damon Runyan campaign against cancer.

"We're testing the scorpions, Gila monsters, 14 kinds of rattlesnakes, coral snakes, black widow spiders, tarantulas, centipedes and other poisonous animals from foreign countries," Dr. Stahnke explains.

All the work remains in the experimental stage and it will be some time before the results are known.

Experiments here have indicated certain venoms from scorpions are beneficial in the therapeutic aches and arthritis and the laboratory is working on a serum to combat the sting of the scorpion. A recent survey showed that in 10 months there were 1,573 scorpion sting cases in Arizona. They are especially dangerous in small children.

Following an editorial campaign by the Tucson "Daily Citizen," a fund of $4,500 was raised for the anti-scorpion serum. Then the legislature took official notice of Dr. Stahnke's laboratory and appropriated an additional $1,500.

To make the serum, cats are injected with progressively greater amounts of scorpion venom and then some of their blood is drawn. Cats, it is explained, have a natural immunity to the stings.

It takes about 1,400 scorpions to furnish enough venom to innoculate one cat. It's estimated 10 innoculated cats will be needed to provide sufficient serum for use in Arizona alone.

Taking of the venom from the long slender tail of the scorpion is an unusual process. Forceps which are wired with electricity hold the stinger in position. When set, a charge is sent into the scorpion tail, the muscles contract with the shock and the venom is ejected into a jar. The same process gets venom from the lower jaw of the Gila (pronounced Hoe'la) monster.

Gila monsters have a venom which Dr. Stahnke describes as 10 times more deadly than the most deadly rattlesnake venom.

Fatalities from a bite by a lizard are rare, however.

Dr. Stahnke, who received his Bachelor of Science degree from the University of Chicago and his Masters from the University of Arizona, turned to the study of poisonous animals in 1935.

"We had a three-year-old daughter and we were alarmed at the possibility of her being stung by scorpions. In questioning doctors I found they knew very little about the scorpion stings and people here knew little or nothing about the various types."

Indirectly Support Claim Pair Behind Iron Curtain

LONDON (UP)— The Foreign Office gave indirect support today to a persistent report that two missing British diplomats are — or have been — behind the Iron Curtain.

The London Daily Herald reiterated today that the two men have been "located" and said it turned over to the Foreign Office information on the route taken by the pair when they disappeared from England three months ago.

The Foreign Office confirmed it had received the information and added:

"The statement agrees with certain theories and information previously submitted, but which could not be confirmed despite attempts to check it."

The remark that the information could not be "checked" led to speculation that the men were in Soviet satellite territory where the government would not be able to trace them. A reliable source said yesterday that the two diplomats were in Czechoslovakia in June and might still be there.

"It boils down to this," a spokesman said. "We don't know where they are and we don't know where they are not."

The Daily Herald said the information given the Foreign Office included a "detailed day-by-day itinerary" of Donald MacLean, 38, chief of the Foreign Office American section, and Guy Burgess, 40, a Far East expert in the Foreign Office, since they disappeared in France May 26.

The information covered "the journey the two men made by steamer, train and plane and where they are now," the Herald said.

MacLean's American-born wife is believed still at Beauvallon on the French Riviera with her brother, sister and two children.

A high-ranking French Intelligence source said yesterday that Mrs. MacLean insists that she does not know where her husband is and that she has not heard from him since he disappeared.

Jinx 'Worn Out' For Three Years

PITTSBURGH — (UP) — Fred L. Reho, who operates a gasoline station in suburban Wilkensburg, had plenty of business yesterday, but not many paying customers.

Reho, 18, was sitting in the station early yesterday morning when a trailer-truck loaded with tile roared past the window narrowly missing two service pumps. The truck managed to stop several hundred yards down the street without turning over.

About two hours later, another truck duplicated the feat, but crashed into a pole after speeding through the station driveway. Reho told police that just two days ago another heavy truck ran through the station driveway and crashed in a vacant lot across the street.

Reho, who bought the station a few weeks ago, was warned by the previous owner that such things would happen "about once a year." According to the warning, the young station owner has nothing to worry about for the next three years.

Teachers And Administrators In All-Day Meet

Teachers and administrators in the city schools are holding an all-day meeting today and will meet again in the morning to discuss plans for the coming school year.

The first of the meetings were held this morning in the library of the Greenville High School and in the C. M. Eppes High School. At the meeting in the Greenville High School, a number of officials made talks.

Speakers were Mayor Page, J. B. James, chairman of the school board, Dr. J. D. Messick, president of East Carolina College, Mrs. Helen Wolf, president of the NCEA, Elizabeth Hyman, chairman of profesional study group in the city schools, and J. H. Rose, superintendent of the city schools.

Another meeting will be held this afternoon in the C. M. Eppes High School when Rose will speak to the Negro teachers.

Rescue Diggers Were Too Late

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (UP)— Fellow workers said today that as they dug frantically for Dennis Standard, 36, buried under 10 feet of dirt when a sewer caved in, they could hear his muffled voice saying, "You're doing all right."

But by the time they dug down to him, he had suffocated.

Jumps 200 Feet To River Death

WABASHA, Minn. (UP)— Daredevil Linn Whitemore, 25, shouted "tell my folks goodbye for me" and jumped 200 feet to his death from a Mississippi River bridge.

His friends said Whitemore had a liking for dangerous stunts and had tried to jump from the bridge once before.

Who Is . . .

There are about 150 Indian reservations in this country, owned by the tribes which occupy them, but held in trust for them by the government. The government assumes responsibility for the Indians connected with the reservations.

The responsibility is carried out by BIA by providing education, medical care, welfare, and advice on tribal problems, like farming. The BIA spends about $70,000,000 a year on this.

And that's where its definition comes in—a man is an Indian if he has one-quarter or more blood and if he has an interest in land held in trust by the government.

If he fits that definition, he's entitled to beneifts from BIA. If he doesn't fit is, he's not entitled to them. For example:

1. A man with 50 per cent Indian blood, and a member of a tribe occupying a reservation, works in a Detroit auto factory. For some reason he has no interest in any land owned by the tribe, and held in trust by the government, or any profit derived from that land.

So far as BIA is concerned, since it has no responsibility for him, he is not an Indian.

But his brother, working beside him in the same Detroit auto plant, with 50 per cent Indian blood but with an interest in the land held in trust by the government, is considered an Indian by BIA.

There are about 300,000 Indians —according to BIA's definition— living on the 150 reservations, and another 100,000 living somewhere else. No one guesses how many people in this country have some Indian blood.
