Arrangements of grasses and leaves emphasized the ingenuity of the hostesses in their choice of decorations, and Mrs. Fleming was presented with a unique corsage made of crabapple berries and leaves.

In a special offering in the churches, the plans of the Methodist Committee for Overseas Relief for military to human need in India, Pakistan and Korea especially, and for the resettlement of displaced persons from Europe will be remembered and aided; as will also the services of the Methodist Commission on Chaplains and the Methodist Committee on Camp Activities. Mrs. Artemus L. Gates, chairman of the Child Placing and Adoption Committee of the New York State Charities Aid Association, has made public a "message to all citizens," voicing approval of child adoption through an authorized agency, made by the Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, noted Baptist clergyman. Childless couples, despairing of ever having children of their own, may feel that they have missed one of life's greatest experiences," says Dr. Fosdick. "Parents who for any reason whatever have given up hope of caring adequately for their own children are unhappy and bewildered. The unwed mother particularly is likely to be lonely, frightened, in need of kindness and understanding, not of censure or reproach. Whatever the request made to you, it will be urgent and of course you will want to do something about it. There is something you can do by being a kind and sympathetic listener, and by directing the person needing advice or help to the resources actually available in every community. But do not try to do it all yourself. The responsibility of arranging for the future of a child, or of creating a family by adoption is too complex, too far reaching in its consequences to be assumed hastily by an individual." Dr. Fosdick advises adoptions through official agencies.

Parents Advised Encourage Tykes To Try Drawing

By DAVID TAYLOR MARKE
AP Newsfeature Writer
Junior has been busy an hour with crayons and paper. Now he proudly shows you his "picture." What do you do?

Do you scream "what's that?" If you do, you are wrong, advises Kelly Fearing, University of Texas assistant professor of art. He suggests you let the child tell you about his picture.

It may look like a snakepit to you, but Junior says it's "Daddy, coming home from work."

"A child works in symbols," Fearing explains. "Scribbles on a page are meaningful to him. When you see what he sees, you know what he is thinking about."

Let Junior do it. Don't judge a child's art by adult standards, he says. And, above all, don't try to show him how to draw. Your work probably is no better than his, Fearing wagers and may be worse: it suffers from your inhibitions and preconceived notions of what the picture OUGHT to look like.

There's been too much "copy work" in art, Fearing says, such things as having children fill in colors in pictures drawn by others. This ties the youngster down to adult standards, he points out, and keeps him from learning to develop his own.

"We punish a child if he copies spelling or arithmetic," Fearing notes. "But if he copies someone else's picture, nothing is thought of it."

All children have an intuitive sense of design, says Fearing. It is lost when they begin to be realistic. Don't criticize your child's work because it isn't realistic.

When a child begins to see that his pictures don't look just right, he will ask for help. Even before that, you will be able to note his developing sense of observation in his spontaneous and free drawing, says the art teacher.

Meanwhile, the youngster's originality has been stimulated, and he has gained muscular coordination. In this way, Fearing explains, art helps children to grow.

Hobby Club For Women Planned

Organization of a Hobby Club for women of Greenville will be discussed tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock at a meeting in the Armory. The club will be open to any woman who is interested in joining.

Activity Director Jo Hunter of the city recreation commission said this morning, "The purpose of organizing a Hobby Club for women is self-explanatory. Each member will be given a chance to participate in a variety of activities in order to determine in which her interest and ability lies."

After a period of experimentation, study and improvement of skills in each hobby will be stressed.

"The more skilled one becomes in an art the more pleasure one derives from participating in such an activity," Miss Hunter asserted.

Plans are being made to preview such hobby possibilities as creative art, weaving and basketry, medalcraft, photography, leathercraft, music, interior decorating, marionette hobbycraft and a number of others.

NOT SECURITY BUT SUPPORT
"Why has God sent this dreadful thing upon me?"
It is with this interrogation of despair that nine people out of ten meet their troubles, and there is a reason why this should be so. It does seem when trouble comes upon us that these things are taking place because of some evil we have committed. We have so long accustomed ourselves to believe that trouble is punishment for sin that we have failed to hear that great assurance of the Word of God that just as often as not trouble comes not only upon the wicked, but upon the righteous also.
God does not send trouble upon human beings. He made a perfect world, and man by his sin has made it a hideous place of pain. God is not responsible for this distortion of His purpose. He does not create trouble or send it upon human hearts to try them, but He takes the trouble which men themselves have made and utilizes it to a great end. Instead of engulfing us in our follies, His loving hand comes down and supports both the guilty and the innocent that they may survive and pass through the deep water.
We are never promised security in this world as a reward for our goodness. What we are promised, if we obey God, is not security but support. No matter what happens to us, we can be confident that powers vastly beyond our own are being extended to us every minute of our lives.

Adequate Forethought Means Better Street Work

North Carolina municipalities, richer by $4,543,096 by virtue of the Powell bill checks mailed last week, should be careful to give sober consideration to how the money should be spent before it begins burning holes in their pockets.
Four and a half million dollars can do a lot of paving and repair work to streets in North Carolina cities and towns if the money is spent wisely. By the same token, it can do a shamefully little amount of work if it is tossed here and there without consideration for the over-all improvement in any municipality.
The city of Greenville has shown evidence of forethought by designating priorities for the first six projects to be undertaken with the Powell bill money. It likewise has taken a step to make the money go as far as possible and do as much good as possible by passing a resolution calling for two-thirds payment of new paving by property owners along the streets chosen for surfacing.
Greenville still has a great deal of planning to do for the more than $49,000 it will get from the Powell bill funds; but at least the city has made a good start.

The Fans Got Off To A Fine Start

Greenville High School's football team got off on a bad foot Friday night at the opening game of the season; but the fans, for a change, got off on a good foot. The 3,000 people at the game Friday night was the largest crowd to view a GHS athletic contest in many years, and surely was a far cry from the few hundred faithfuls who attended the games last year.
Greenville high's athletic program has needed the support of the people of the city for a number of years, and Friday night they got it. But the high school program is far from out of the woods. The program needs the continued support of the people of Greenville throughout the football season and the remainder of the year.
The Booster club which was formed to support high school athletics several weeks ago probably had a great deal to do with the crowd at Friday night's game. The Reflector tips its hat to the club. But the crowd also indicated the people of the city outside the club likewise are interested in supporting the high school athletic program in the manner it deserves. That in itself is a new trend in the habits of Greenville citizens, and one which will pay big dividends in years to come.

To the sports fans of the city, The Reflector passes along this suggestion: Don't be disheartened by the showing the ball team made Friday night. Keep coming to the home games of the Phantoms, and by the end of the season you'll see the local boys display a much better brand of ball than they did in the opening game.

The Citizen Who Deserves No Mercy

There is nothing more contemptible in the mind of a patriotic American than a fellow citizen who supplies our enemies with war materials they need to kill American soldiers on the battlefields.

It is sometimes difficult to believe that people can be so unscrupulous and short sighted as to engage in that sort of activity.

A Senate subcommittee has reported that "undesirably large quantities" of war materials are finding their way from American controlled areas in the Pacific into Communist China. The report goes further to say most of the military goods involved "have undoubtedly been stolen or procured illegally—possibly even with the assistance of United States personnel, from the enormous military stores in Ryukyu."

The subcommittee would not make such a statement had not the investigation given it reasonable assurance that American personnel in the Pacific are aiding the Chinese Communists in stealing supplies from American depots and passing them along to the Communist troops to use to kill American boys.

The government should take immediate steps to crack down on the smuggling racket in the Pacific to stop the flow of goods to the Communists. The United States government should show no mercy to those American citizens it finds involved in furnishing the Communists American goods with which to kill American youths.

News Behind The News

WASHINGTON—Future history will probably record September, 1951, as the fateful month in which the United States assumed undisputed leadership—political, economic, military of the world's so-called democratic alliance in a moment of unprecedented crisis.

The unrecorded but reported decisions reached here and at San Francisco in conferences of Anglo-French-American foreign ministers—Morrison, Schuman and Acheson—formally ratified our acceptance of far-flung responsibilities that have been imposed upon us in gradual but aggravated form as a result of our military and economic contributions to World Wars I and II.

Whether for better or worse, and only time will tell, we have agreed to police, finance and rear more than a billion people inhabiting that part of the globe not controlled by Russia or her satellites.

In view of commitments we have already entered into through the Marshall Plan, the North Atlantic Military Alliance, the alignments with Spain, Turkey, Yugoslavia and Greece and new agreements discussed at San Francisco and here, it will become increasingly difficult, if not impossible, for us to turn back or stop the clock of American expansion. The Administration believes that it will be able to sell the new program to the American people and Congress.

BURDEN—Washington has now agreed, formally and finally, to take over England's erstwhile role as the world's policeman, peacemaker and financier. We have had to undertake that burden for the reason that Britain has become just another nation as a result of her losses in two wars and the arrival of the atomic age.

What is most astonishing, perhaps, is that we have become the boss nation at the request and insistence of these Old World powers because they admit they are too poor and too weak to carry the load any longer. Unless they want to become Russian puppets, which they do not, they had nobody to turn to except Uncle Sam.

As an indication of their decline, they no longer seek to preserve even the trappings of power, prestige and empire. The very fact that Europe's most distinguished leaders and statesmen now troop to Washington, instead of staging these conferences at London, Paris or the Hague, measures their weariness and willingness to unload their too heavy burdens on us.

SIMILARITIES—Indeed, historically minded diplomats here compare the last two weeks' decisions and developments to the Congress of Vienna in 1815. There the statesmen tried to patch up a European structure that had been smashed to smithereens by the Napoleonic Wars.

There are other similarities between 1815 and 1951. Then, as now, the Russians behaved badly, and soon sought to upset the balance of power agreed upon at Vienna. Oddly, it was the czar's attempt to establish a Russian state in and south of Alaska which contributed to our declaration of the Monroe Doctrine, and gained British support for that hands-off warning.

Diplomats also note, wistfully but hopefully, that the Vienna Congress maintained European peace for 100 years, except for a few localized conflicts.

AID—America's expanded and still unrevealed role is reflected most accurately in the number and extent of the requests for new aid of all kinds that Anglo-French statesmen submitted to President Truman, Secretary Acheson and, most significantly of all, to Secretary of the Treasury Snyder.

The British and French flatly informed us that they cannot fulfill General Eisenhower's rearmament demands without far greater economic and military advances. Despite Marshall Plan recovery, they insist that they cannot turn out guns and butter simultaneously, as President Truman says we can do. They need steel, lumber, wheat, machine tools, railroad equipment etc.

If they do not or cannot turn out weapons, we must provide either them or the raw materials. Otherwise, they say they must continue to trade with Russia, sending her potential war materials in return for food and homebuilding supplies.

DISASTROUS—On the other hand, if they do not also turn out butter, both existing ministries in Britain and France may fall at a moment when a domestic political crisis might prove disastrous in the "cold war."

Apourin Bevan, the Labor leftist, might succeed Attlee. Bevan contends that England should spend more money on domestic, socialistic reforms than on rearmament. Plevan might be succeeded by Charles de Gaulle. Although anti-Communist, he holds ancient grudges against the British and ourselves.

The French requested more American reinforcements, especially planes and light artillery, for their war against Reds in Indo-China. The British asked our diplomatic and economic intervention to preserve their interests in the Middle East and Asia—Turkey, India, Iran, Iraq, Egypt, etc. The French likewise want us to proxy for them in Morocco, Syria and Lebanon.

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

This morning I talked to Coach Bill Dole of the East Carolina Pirates about the 40-0 defeat of his team by Mississippi Southern College in Hattiesburg, Miss. Saturday.

The question the Monday quarterback has been kicking around is how much the game helped the college team. So I asked Dole that question, to which he answered an emphatic "very much."

"If you can get by without important injuries, which we did, it helps to play a team better than you are. After all, a team is no better than the opposition it meets," Dole said.

Coach Dole explains that he wants to build up two or three outstanding games out of the North State conference. "You have to start somewhere," he said, "and Mississippi Southern was a good start."

two seasons has played Louisiana State University, Alabama, University of Louisiana, Tennessee and Kentucky. In addition, they are defending champions of the Gulf Coast Conference. Dole says, "Our toughest game of the season is over."

Does the bus trip figure in the defeat? "Definitely," said Dole. "You can't ride 1000 miles on a bus and be in good shape. But they would beat us from one to four touchdowns."

Mississippi Southern has 52 football scholarships, compared to the 19 at East Carolina. In student bodies the two schools are comparable.

After the scrimmage with Duke and the Saturday game, Dole has decided to use a two platoon system, with the exception of the defensive left tackle, where he'll use three players. "Injuries occur when the boys get tired, and it's not worth taking a chance."

Friday night as the Pirates were working out in Hattiesburg, he learned that they offer the 32 scholarships mentioned above. They also offer 10 for basketball. And the director made the statement that was obvious: "Our athletic program has paid off."

Dole said, "I am very well pleased with the performance of the team. The boys battled to the very end. They never faded. And they're not downcast. They realize that Mississippi Southern had a better team. We have come a long way; the game was better than the score indicated."

Around Capitol Square

Raleigh, N. C. By LYNN NISBET

COURT HOUSES—If there is anything in North Carolina a composite or group picture of the one hundred county court houses the fact has not been given the publicity to which it is entitled. Secretary of State Thad Eure has arranged on the screen hiding the lavatory in his office from the casual view post card pictures of each of the forty-eight state capitol buildings. It is an attractive display. Similar showing of the North Carolina courthouses would be a good stunt for somebody. Your reporter has seen ninety-nine of the one hundred court houses from the outside, and has a side by side ninety-five of them. The one exception for outside view is the Avery county court house at Newland. The four which have been seen from the outside but not entered are at Southport in Brunswick, Gatesville in Gates, Danbury in Stokes, and Columbus in Tyrrell.

DISTINCTIVE—Because the court houses have common functions to perform in every county, large or small, they are sort of similarly among them. At the same time, each one has distinctive individuality and in some respect is different from all the others. For instance, there are two county courthouses in the United States located on islands. One is at Manteo (Dare county) North Carolina, the other at Key West, Florida. There are two county court houses in the United States built of native marble quarried in the community. One is at Murphy (Cherokee county), North Carolina, the other somewhere in Vermont. How many court houses have been built of native material is not known, but the Graham county courthouse at Robbinsville is one. The present native stone building replaced the last wooden courthouse in the state some fifteen years ago. The Jackson county court house at Sylva dominates the town's main street on its western end, and is reached from the front by a series of steps. There are varying counts on the number of steps, but there is an authenticated story that when the court house was moved from Webster to Sylva some years ago, a local business man (C. J. Harris) agreed to provide the access stairway containing not less than 138 steps, plus some landings and graded walks.

SQUARES—In a great many instances the court house square is the central point of county activities. This is true at Shelby in Cleveland county, at Morganton in Burke, at Lincolnton in Lincoln, at Clinton in Sampson, at Mocksville in Davie, at Yanceyville in Caswell, and numerous other points. Sometimes the court house is almost hidden especially in the larger county seat towns like Raleigh in Wake, Greensboro in Guilford and Durham in Durham. At some other places like Camden and Currituck the court house not only dominates the town but all practical purposes is "the town."

SEATS—In majority of North Carolina counties the court house is located in the largest town. There are almost enough exceptions to raise doubt whether they prove or disprove the general rule. In Rockingham county, for example there is the progressive city of Reidsville with 12,000 population and half a dozen other sizeable towns, while the court house is at Wentworth—not even listed as a corporate municipality. In Surry county there is Mount Airy with 8,000 and Elkin with 3,000 while the county seat of Dobson is listed in the 1950 census with 60. In Harnett county industrial Dunn is seven times as big as county seat Lillington. In Alamance county progressive Burlington is almost five times as big as county seat Graham, while Tryon in Polk outclasses county seat Columbus four to one, and in Catawba the city of Hickory more than doubles the population of Newton where the court house is situated.

URBAN—There are six counties in which the big city population is more than half the total. Durham and Wilmington have about 70 percent of the population in Durham and New Hanover counties. Charlotte has approximately 67 percent of the total in Mecklenburg county, while Winston-Salem has 59 percent of the Forsyth county. Elizabeth City has just above half the Pasquotank total. In Guilford county the cities of Greensboro and High Point have 60 percent of the county population. Guilford is the only county with two county seats, a special legislative act some years ago having authorized the regular formal sessions of the county superior court to be held in High Point.

The Voice Of The People

To The Editor:
Why do the majority of the Greenville citizens refuse to attend the revival being conducted by Oliver Green? There are several answers for this question. First, the citizens are sinners and are afraid to read or hear God's word; second, they are sinners, but they can't seem to find the time to attend church; and last, but not least, the citizens are either Christians or suppose to be Christians and just as long as they go to church and Sunday school on Sunday morning they are usually satisfied with their services to God.
A Christian will not be afraid to hear what Mr. Green has to say; and furthermore, he will take time to attend the revival meetings. No, the citizens had rather spend their leisure hours playing cards, going to the movies, and other things than to go to church. There will be time for pleasures other than going to church after the revival closes.

A sinner should attend the meetings with the goal of finding God and being saved through faith and by grace. All a sinner has to do to be saved is confess his sins to God and believe in him and he has God's promise of an eternal life. What more can a person ask.
A local grocer who was saved in the revival last week has been out of his store. Greenville needs more business men who sell beer, wine, and liquor to have "backbone" enough to have it taken out of their places of business.
Sunday night Mr. Green preached on "Booze," a sermon which was directed to the people who drank strong drink, sold it, or had anything at all to do with it. Just before the sermon three men who sold strong drink, and a mother who was an alcoholic testified against strong drink in any form. After Mr. Green's message, approximately 600 young people between the ages of 8 and 21 took an oath to never drink strong drink and not associate with anyone that did. During one part of the oath, the youth turned toward the audience and pointing an accusing finger took a stand against dealers of strong drink. The businessmen of today were given a challenge by the businessmen of tomorrow, but they refused to accept the challenge.

The old say, "never put off until tomorrow what you can do today," also applies to accepting God. If you keep putting off salvation, it may be too late. You can be saved in a tent revival just as good as you can if you were in a beautiful church. You can be saved anywhere by accepting God and his word, but it does the soul good to attend church services and hear more of God's word. The ministers of Greenville are needed in the prayer room each night to help bring lost souls to God.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER
The psychological effects of what has been going on in Korea may have important effects on the American public and the general economy. It has carried conviction, more than any statement by any American leader—or any Russian, for that matter—that we are engaged in a many-year struggle with the forces of Communism.

The American public has reacted impetuously and emotionally to most of the developments in the Far East. A look backward at events since June, 1950 shows how true that is.

When fighting broke out on June 27, the public was plunged into a sort of panic, exemplified partly by the great rush to buy goods. This, it seemed to all of us, was the start of World War III. This was intensified by the retreat to Pusan.

Then when the United Nations forces rallied, buying and business slowed down a bit. When the Chinese came in and thrust the United Nations back to the 38th parallel, buying, business and fear rose again.

During the early part of this year there were what, in grim, fantastic humor, called "peace scares," and with each one commodity and stock prices declined and buying eased off. And then, with the start of peace negotiations, business went into a slump. During the most optimistic periods of these negotiations, sales in some lines fell to half of what they had been a year earlier. There were other factors, of course: controls, shortages, large crops, tax legislation, etc. But, in retrospect, the ebb and flow of battle was the largest single factor in business. Perhaps the military analysis, not the economists, should do our business forecasting.

Now the peace negotiations have dragged on, seemingly endlessly. This has had a slow and steady psychological effect, far different than the sharp, quick impacts of statements by Messrs. Truman, Acheson, Marshall, Dewey, Gromyko, Nehru and the rest.

One can tell a child that 2 and 2 make 4, and one can tell you and me that we are engaged in a long-term struggle with communism. But the facts will be forgotten unless the child adds 2 and 2 every day for weeks, or unless it has been pounded in to us, day after day, that we are involved in a long-range, not a transitory, fight.

The effects on the economy will likely be these: it will respond less sharply to news of victories and defeats in Korea; it will react less violently to reports of loss or more war.

Stalin, Mao and Kim Il Sung have carved out a new perspective for us.

MATCHING ACCESSORIES MAY PERK UP SALES

If men can be persuaded to match their accessories, it stands to reason that they will have to buy more of them. That may be the theory behind a promotion of one firm Hickok Mfg. Co., Rochester, N. Y., to persuade men to match belts and other accessories. It also works out well for its new leather treatment that produces sculptured belts in five different color tones that can match or complement shoes, shirts, jackets, slacks and suits. The new belts sport such things as sculptured herringbone designs on grey birch and leather covered buckles in testwood.

TOP EVEN NEW YORK'S

Louisiana and Washington are the most expensive states to live in, judging by calculations of Commerce Clearing House, Chicago. Per capita state tax collections in 1951 in Louisiana are estimated at $97.66 and in Washington, $95.03.

California, however, wins the taxation prize. Although its per capita levy was third with $90.50, its total was $68,000,000, topping even rich, old New York's take of $64,000,000. Mr. Dewey, Meet Mr. Warren! IF ALARM RINGS, GROCERIES ARE FREE

To boost sales, a mid-western clocker under the check-out counters. No one, except the proprietor, knows the time they are set for.

When an alarm rings, the customer at the counter gets her purchases free. If there is no one at the counter at the moment, the proprietor wins; if there is a customer there, he loses the amount of her purchase.

The proprietor has protected himself with insurance against the possibility that the ringing of an alarm keeps over a customer with a weak heart.

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK (AP)—The Great American Tragedy today is the average cup of coffee. The average cup of coffee is what the average man gets when he asks for a good cup of coffee. And it makes him madder than corruption in government, the decline of youthful morals, or a hole in his sock.

He is willing to put up with most of the blemishes of an imperfect world. He will face up to the fact life has him behind the 8-ball; he will, under pressure, admit to certain small defects in his own character; he does not, ordinarily, complain that all horse races are fixed just because the horse he bet on lost.

In most things he will take the bitter with the sweet. But not when it comes to his cup of coffee. Here he stands foursquare against any compromise. He wants exactly what he wants, and nothing else will make him happy.

And the real issue before the people every day is: How to get a good cup of coffee. Not a good cup of nickel coffee. That issue has been fought out and lost. The problem is where to get an honest-to-flavor cup of coffee that will reach down into the gnawing morning anxiety of a man and say, "There, there, everything's going to be all right today."

Give a man the wrong cup of coffee, however, and nothing can make his day right. He will criticize his own mother-in-law and detects hidden flaws in her daughter. He'll sing a song of woe until twilight.

Why is it so difficult to get a good cup of coffee? Brewing it is no magic art, handed down secretly from generation to generation. Basically, it is the alchemy of coffee, water at the right temperature and time. You mix them together in the proper proportions—and you get good coffee.

The classic formula for coffee: "It should be hot as Hades, black as midnight, and strong as a good woman's love."

If you get a cupful of that, it doesn't make much difference whether somebody dropped eggshells in the pot to settle it. You can thicken it with sugar, or thin it with fat cream. But you can't wreck it.

The average cup of drugstore or cafeteria coffee, however, is more likely to be nothing but lukewarm, grey liquid fog caught in crockery. It has the personality of swamp mist, strained through sulphur, and bitter as an old regret.

Though it be served in a vessel of beaten gold—and it isn't—the stomach detects it as a fraud and grumbles in rebellion. It misses the mellow bite of authority, the true fragrance.

East and West and North and South the daily search goes on, the great American quest— for an authentic cup of coffee.

The restaurant proprietor who can distill it properly need never stay up nights trying to invent a better mousetrap. The world will beat a path to his door

Washington Letter

By HERMAN R. ALLEN (For JANE EADS)

WASHINGTON—You are a parent. You have been reading about teen-age narcotic addiction. How can you tell if your son or daughter has fallen victim?

Or you are a teacher. Some of your pupils begin to act strangely. Has the dread "reifer" or the hypodermic needle invaded your school?

The District of Columbia prepared a four-page pamphlet, "A Guide to the Problem of Narcotics," which outlined the symptoms of addiction to various drugs.

"Unfortunately," the pamphlet says, "there are no specific tests to recognize drug addiction." For this reason, it says, "A physical examination of all junior and senior high school students should be non-productive in finding cases."

"A far better method of detection," it continues, "would be close observation by parents, classroom teachers and school medical inspectors."

"The first indication of possible addiction is an abrupt change in normal behavior pattern. Most likely the first person to notice this complete turnover of the normal behavior is the parent. Alert, health-conscious teachers may also notice such changes quite early."

After listing symptoms of addiction to several drugs, the booklet points out that "as with other diseases, early detection means early cure." Then it emphasizes:

"This brief resume is only a guide—a guide to be used intelligently to observe the signs and symptoms early."

"A word of caution must be added. Changes in normal behavior pattern are most frequently due to causes other than the use of drugs and narcotics."

"Signs and symptoms similar to those mentioned in this summary may be caused by other physical, mental and emotional changes. If there is some sign or symptom which may arouse a suspicion of early addiction to drugs or narcotics, consult the family physician."

Single copies of this pamphlet may be obtained by parents, teachers, doctors or other interested persons by sending 2 cents postage to Mr. J. Edgar Caswell, Director, Bureau of Public Health Education, District of Columbia Health Department, 300 Indiana Ave. N.W., Washington 1, D.C. (Tomorrow, Signs of Marijuana, Benzadrine and Cocaine.)

Humber Says Present Governmental Policies Bringing World War Closer

By WYATT BROWN
The lack of foresight in the present administration to modify United States foreign policy in its political aspects for the primary purpose of preventing war is bringing America, in so far as the time element is concerned, closer to the precipice of another World War, declared Robert Lee Humber last night in his address on the world situation to the Greenville Rotarians. He cited history, opinion of European leaders, and his personal observations to sustain his conclusion.

In the outset Humber pointed out how the United States has in the last few years developed a foreign policy far beyond one would have imagined ten years ago. "The people of the country are frustrated by a lack of understanding of the resulting developments," he said.

After this preliminary statement he interrupted the development of his theme to "take stock of where the United States is now. The U.S. does have a foreign policy but only that evolved from meeting emergencies. In contrast with this is the German handling of foreign policy—to have a concrete program with a time table."

Pinpointing the stage of developments, Humber denominated the moment as "the end of an epoch," and the U.S. as facing the new epoch without adjusting to it. To explain the idea of the new epoch he cited the ending of feudalism with the introduction of some new inventions — gunpowder, etc. The epoch of which we are witnessing the end has been terminated by the invention of the radio and the airplane.

The results have rendered nationalism an anachronism, was Humber's verdict.

Tracing American foreign policy Humber mentioned the Truman Doctrine, the Fulbright Student Exchange Plan, the Marshall Plan, and the Point Four program. From these he said he saw military policy evolving, economic considerations, and the creating of world unity by student exchange and Point Four activities.

But politically our foreign policy was lacking an awareness of the new age in which the world is moving. He said the present regime thinks tomorrow will be like today. "Our foreign policy (on the political level) is not implemented with modern conceptions." He went on to say that American policy in the political sphere has not advanced one inch but still depends upon diplomacy. "We are headed under the present regime for inevitable war," he declared. If the present regime could modify its thinking to modern needs there might be hope. "Our policy has been expanded militarily, financially, and intellectually, but not politically," he declared. He characterized as obsolete the agencies used to attain ends integral to our survival.

Emphasizing the catastrophic nature another war would assume Humber quoted from conversations with big business heads who consider another World War would render their economic assets valueless. The time left is running out and the present policy appears to be to meet the issues with war, Humber pointed out. Indicating what would be the proper steps to prevent a disastrous World War III Humber said, "Our foreign policy needs to address itself to the subject of how to end wars."

Humber pointed out that with the United States and her allies controlling 85 percent of all industry, 83 percent of all natural resources and other like advantages, they should have no fear of Russia but instead they do fear to implement their policy.

In concluding Humber reiterated that war has outgrown Western culture. He said the times present the people with an unprecedented challenge. To this challenge Humber presented his solution — world law. World law he explained would be enforced upon individuals; whereas now the world must depend upon enforcing law on nations which is impossible.

Guests of the club were A. C. Sampietro of Detroit, Michigan, and Dr. Sam T. White, II, Visiting Rotarians were Harry Munford, Ralph Hardee, and Paul Taylor of Ayden, and Leon Roebuck Sr., of Washington. James W. Butler was greeted as a new Rotarian and A. E. Stallworth was greeted as a returned member.

Dr. Carl Adams gave his autobiography last night admitting to birth in Kentucky where he stayed to get his education. He came to the East Carolina College faculty in 1924 and joined the Rotary Club a few years later.

The speaker of the evening, Robert Humber, was presenting the program for the International Contacts Committee. Before he got his address under way he told of plans to afford Rotarians the privilege of corresponding with Rotarians in other nations. Charles White, club president, presided.

Plan Forego 1952 License Plates

COLUMBUS, O. (UP) — Ohio motorists won't have new license plates in 1952.

The state legislature approved issuance of windshield stickers to be used in 1952 in place of metal license tags. Motorists, however, must use their 1951 plates along with the stickers.

John W. Bush, state purchasing agent, said the state would save $550,000 next year by issuing the stickers and decal stamps. The main object of the switch, however, was to conserve steel for defense efforts.

Wallet Returned, But Money Is Removed

SAN DIEGO (UP) — The sad story of a widowed navy wife who lost a wallet downtown containing $500 apparently barely touched the heart of the finder.

Mrs. Rosalie Tucker had the wallet returned to her through the mail—minus the $500.

Out Of Luck In Parking Tickets

COLUMBUS, O. (UP) — Patrolman Richard J. Flattery parked his private automobile while off duty and went into a drug store to get a nickel to put in a parking meter.

When he returned he found a police ticket on the windshield. Flattery went immediately to the police station, parked his auto at his rear and paid his traffic fine.

When he returned to his car, he found another ticket on the windshield, this time for illegally parking in a no-parking area.

Old Belt Sales Top '50 Opening

RALEIGH (AP) — A heavy volume of sales was predicted today for the 20 flue-cured tobacco markets of the Old Belt which opened their season yesterday.

The first day's trading on the Old Belt saw a few grades show increases over opening sales of 1st year, with average prices up from $1 to $4 per hundred pounds for cutters, smoking leaf, and better quality lugs and leaf. Low quality lugs, primings, and nondescript were lower with losses ranging from $1 to $10.50. Quality of offerings was below that of last year.

The border belt and Eastern North Carolina Belt reported strong demand for offerings yesterday, while on the Middle Belt, average prices for leaf grades edged up slightly.

Leaf grades on the Middle Belt showed price increases of $1 to $2 per hundred over last Friday. Volume of sales last week amounted to 15,812,011 pounds at an average $51.91 per hundred, bringing the season's sales to 30,601,483 pounds for a $52.11 average.

The majority of grades on the Border Belt were steady to $1 higher than reported for last Friday. Gross sales for the season increased to 249,585,480 pounds at an average of $52.02. The selling season ends Friday for Conway and Lamar, S. C.

Witness Claims Ex-GI Tortured In Czech Prison

WASHINGTON (UP) — John Hvasta, American ex-GI held in a Czechoslovakian prison, has been subjected to torture and a "calvary of agony," according to an "eyewitness" report.

Hvasta's jail is a filthy "middle age" dungeon, a report released by the National Committee for Liberation of Slovakia said.

Committee spokesman Dr. V. S. Krajcovic said conditions are probably the same in the jail where Associated Press correspondent William N. Oatis is imprisoned.

The report was said to come from an escaped fellow prisoner of Hvasta, The American, a Hillside, N. J., former U.S. serviceman, is in the prison at Leopoldov. He had been held there since 1948 on a spy charge. Oatis is in Pankratic prison on similar charges.

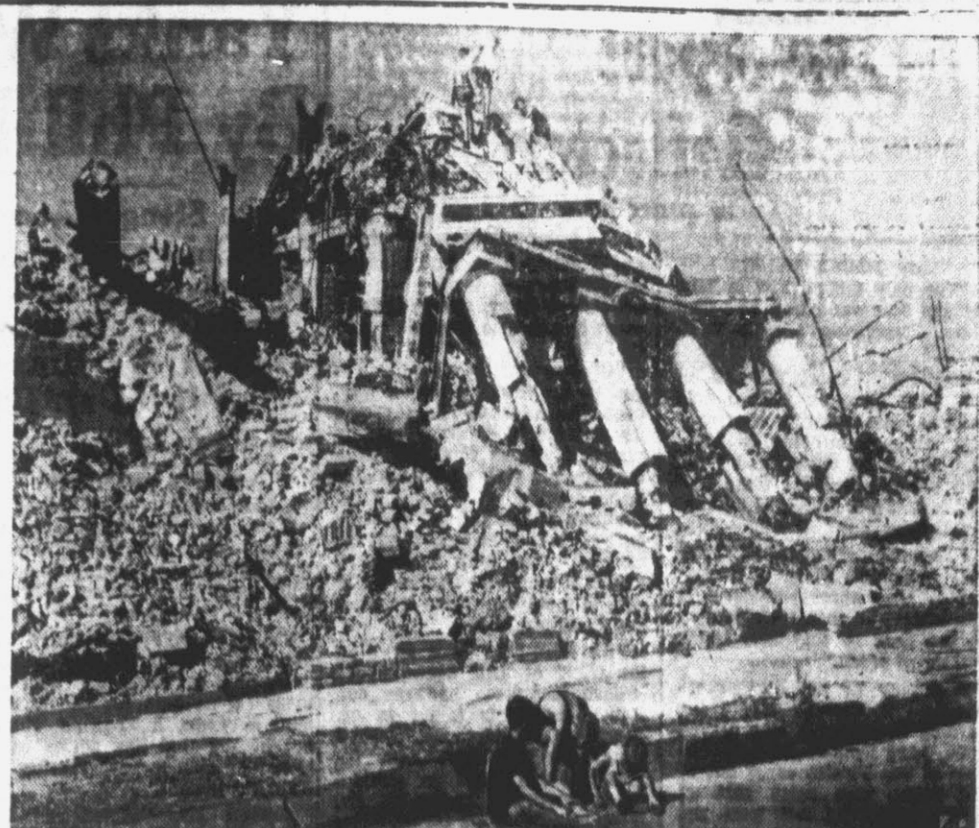

The identity of the author of the report was not disclosed. He said he was a fellow-prisoner of Hvasta in Leopoldov "until the day of my successful escape."

No one who has not been a political prisoner in Leopoldov can imagine "that in this 20th century still exists such a torture chamber," he said.

The Communists have covered the windows with tin plates, cutting off fresh air and sunlight and leaving the prisoner "buried alive," he said.

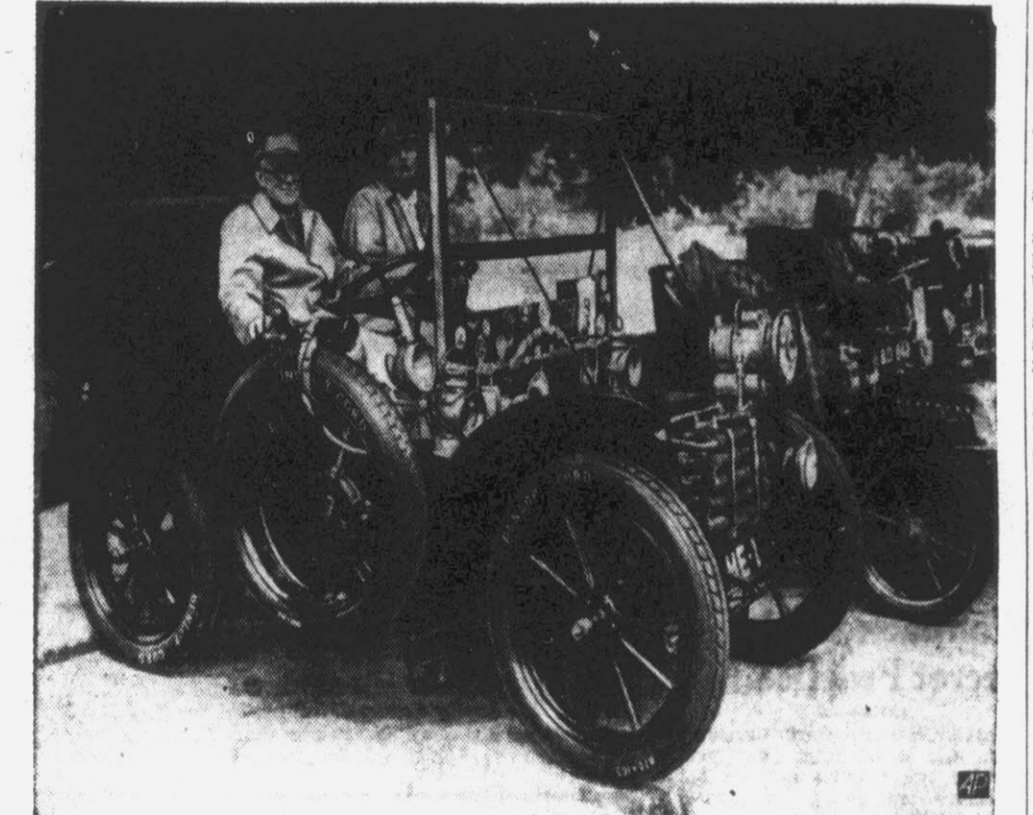

"The prisoner is worse than buried alive," he added. "The prisoner is not allowed to see from which side and how many people are beating him."

He said Hvasta was tortured in January 1950 because Communist "spies" overheard him telling other prisoners about "the existence of real liberty and democracy in the United States." "The result was terrible," he said. "he had to go through the entire procedure of torture and calvary of agony. Hvasta finished and insects, where prisoners went three days without food, three without water, and underwent more castigation."

"The only thing I saw in Mississippi that was cheap was gasoline. Everything else is first-class."

That's what Coach Bill Dole of the East Carolina Pirates told the Charlotte Observer after they had called him Saturday night and asked for quotes about the ball game which his team had just lost 40-0 to Mississippi Southern College.

"That Southern squad is a good ball club that plays a man's game. They knock you down in one alley and then rack you up in the next so they can knock you down again."

The play of the Southerners was not necessarily rough, according to Dole, but they played good, hard football. No less than five of the Pirates came out of the action with some sort of minor injury but they were not hurt bad enough to keep them out of the game Friday night with the Naval Apprentice School in Newport News.

According to Dole, Mississippi Southern is a school about the same size as East Carolina. Their athletic program is a good one and they're making it pay off.

Reed Green, athletic director at Mississippi Southern, told Dole that the school gave 62 full scholarships each year. Fifty-two of these are for football and the remaining ten go for basketball. The school plays or has played some outstanding football teams to be no larger than it is. They are going to play Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge this week-end and later on in the year, they'll tangle with Red Drew's Alabama Crimson Tide, a game that has become almost a tradition at Southern. In other years, the Southerners have played such teams as Kentucky, Tennessee, the University of Louisville, and the University of Chattanooga.

"Some good football has rubbed off on the Southerners from having to face such good teams

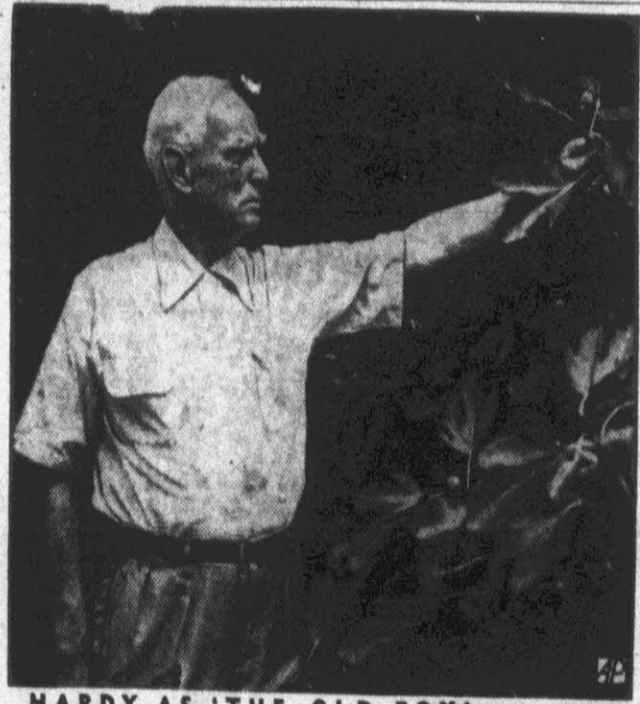

Safety Device Is Termed A Success

SYRACUSE (AP)—One of boxing's newest safety devices—a "safety" mat for the ring—was tried in a fight here last night and was acclaimed a success.

In the fight, Joey DeJohn, 161, of Syracuse knocked out Le Sala, 160 1-4, of Donna, Pa., in 2:29 of the second round.

Sala went down on his back, his head hitting the floor. Officials said Sala's head hit and stayed on the mat—no thud and no bounce such as took the life of George Flores recently.

They said the mat, made of a plastic combination, served as a shock absorber and probably saved Sala a serious injury.

Casey Stengel Accuses Chisox Manager Of 'Ganging Up On Yanks'; Boston Takes 12-0 Lead, Wins 12-5 Over Chicago

By CARL LUNDQUIST
United Press Sports Writer
Manager Casey Stengel of the pennant-expectant Yankees accused the White Sox of ganging up on his club today in an effort to knock them out of the race.

Stengel wasn't particularly mad about it and said it was Chicago manager Paul Richards' "own business" if he held his top pitcher, Saul Rogovin, a 12-game winner out of the Red Sox series so he would be able to pitch against the Yankees tonight.

Stengel also pointed out that Billy Pierce, Chicago's other big winner who has 13 victories, wasn't used in Boston, and that he will be working with at least six days of rest against the Yankees if he pitches on Wednesday or Thursday.

And in the third game, he can go with practically everybody on his staff against me," Stengel moaned. "Yes sir, we could get in to real trouble with those guys."

Stengel pointed out that Rogovin "beat us three times already this year" and that the only times he lost to the Yankees were on 2 to 1 and 2 to 0 decisions.

The Yankees were worrying in advance over the White Sox, even though they despised themselves like real flag winners in their two triumphs over the Indians. After yesterday's 2 to 1 triumph in which Phil Rizzuto squeeze-bunted home the winning run in the ninth inning for Ed Lopat's 20th victory, the Yankees were a full game in front of Cleveland and 2 1-2 ahead of the Red Sox.

Boston drubbed the White Sox 12 to 5, as Richards strung along with second-line pitching.

Rizzuto, who drove in both runs in the tight victory over hard-luck Bob Lemon, bunted the ball so perfectly with the bases loaded and Joe DiMaggio almost across the plate when it landed, that Lemon didn't even bother to field it.

Boston scored four runs in the first inning and ran up a 12-0 lead for Ray Scarborough before he eased up and permitted five runs in the ninth. Clyde (Clutch) Volmer drove in five runs, three on a homer, while Ted Williams got four hits, one his 30th homer.

The Cubs came from behind to top the Dodgers 5 to 3, and cut their National League lead to four games over the idle Giants. A pair of two-run homers by Hank Sauer and ex-Dodger Gene Hermanski gave the Cubs their triumph.

Roy Campanella, Dodger catcher, was hit on the left ear by a pitched ball and taken to a hospital with bleeding lacerations.

Tom Brown's homer gave the Phillies a 2 to 1 victory over the Cardinals and Robin Roberts his 20th win in the only night game. It was the second straight 20-victory season for the strong right-hander.

There were no other games scheduled.

Indians Aren't Stopped, Just Delayed ... Stengel

By MILTON RICHMAN
United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UP)—Cautious Casey Stengel of the Yankees insisted today "We haven't stopped 'em, but at least we've delayed 'em," and Al Lopez of Cleveland agreed with him all the way.

"We're not through by a long shot," said the disappointed Lopez, following the Indians' 2 to 1 loss to the Yankees yesterday. "Our pitching is in excellent shape and it just means we'll have to play a little harder the rest of the way."

"We figured we'd be all right if we only split the next two games with the Red Sox," the Cleveland plot added, "but after losing these two to New York, we'll simply have to try to beat Boston twice."

While Lopez thought of ways to chop the Yankees' one-game American League lead, Stengel repeatedly claimed that Cleveland's chances to win are still good.

"Then you mean to say you don't think Cleveland is licked yet," someone said to Stengel.

"No!" yelled Casey, screwing up his face and clutching his chest like a man who had just been shot. "Would you say that the Yankees are over the toughest part?" he

Musial Continues To Set Lead Pace

NEW YORK (AP)—Back in a few years, the National League chant was: "Break up the Cardinals."

Now it's just: "Break up Stan Musial." And don't think that wouldn't suit National League pitchers fine. Musial, you see, is the loop's No. 1 terror guy with the bat.

Currently, he's on his way to a fifth batting title, with a .367 average. With only 13 games left, it seems impossible for anyone to top the St. Louis slugger.

Richie Ashburn of Philadelphia has the best chance, if you can call it that. He's hitting .346—21 points behind Musial.

CHICAGO (AP)—Philadelphia's Ferris Fain picked up nine percentage points during the week to boost his batting average to .341 for the widest lead in the American League hitting race in a month.

Falling 19 points behind in second place was George Kell of Detroit with .322. In other averages computed through Sunday's games, Chicago's Minnie Minoso had .321 and Boston's Ted Williams .319. A week ago Kell, Minoso and Williams were tied for second place.

Roy Campanella Beamed As Bums Lose To Chisox

CHICAGO (AP)—Just before the league-leading Brooklyn Dodgers took the field yesterday for their season finale against the Chicago Cubs, husky Roy Campanella, frisky as a colt, chortled:

"Don't worry about those New York Giants catching us—we're leading seven games ahead of them. Those seven more they lost than we have are gone forever." Actually, the Brooks now lead by four games.

Today, Campanella rested as perhaps the best catcher in baseball—was resting in a Chicago hospital after an accidental beaming by the Cubs' Turk Lown. The Dodgers felt as though they also had received a collective black-jacking. Roy's condition was pronounced fair, but when he will return to the Brooklyn lineup was questionable.

Without Campanella, the Dodgers, who play the Cardinals at St. Louis tonight, conceivably could back away from the National League pennant which the Giants alone believe they, themselves, might somehow miraculously snatch.

The Brooks have 13 games left, the Giants nine.

The husky Negro's absence was felt immediately yesterday as the Dodgers blew a 3-0 lead and lost to the Cubs, 5-3. Big Don Newcombe, who had whipped the Cubs four times previously this season without defeat, apparently missed the on-the-plate generalship of Campanella, who was felled in the second inning.

In the seventh inning, Newcombe, after allowing only two hits to that point, was slammed for a double, Hank Sauer's 29th homer and another two-bagger. Don escaped defeat as reliever Clyde King served a two-run homer to ex-Dodger Gene Hermanski to get saddled with the loss.

Lown, although roundly booed by the strong Brooklyn partisan crowd after plunking Campanella, twirled a fine game for his fourth win against eight defeats. Only one of Brooklyn's three runs was an honest endeavor, that being Andy Parko's 25th home in the sixth.

Veterans Back In Tar Heel Lineup

CHAPEL HILL (UP)—Three veterans were back in the lineup today as the University of North Carolina Tar Heels got ready for their opening game against North Carolina State Saturday.

Fullback Dick Weiss, wingback, Bob Ganti and defensive end Glen Nickerson have been out with minor injuries for more than a week.

The entire North Carolina squad watched N. C. State in action against Catawba Saturday and spent most of yesterday's drill working against Wolfpack plays.

Wolfpack Holds Secret Practice

RALEIGH (UP)—North Carolina State held secret drills today and devoted two practice sessions to defensive preparation for Saturday's North Carolina game.

Coach Beattie Feathers used yesterday's early session in an effort to correct a pass defense weakness which showed up in the Wolfpack's warmup tilt with Catawba last Saturday.

In the afternoon, reserves ran plays from the North Carolina single wing, T and short punt formation. The State defense had trouble adjusting to the shifting formations.

Police Escorting Women Home

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UP)—Police patrolled all streets today and escorted lone women to their homes at night in this tense college town as a nurse-hating maniac killer defied detection.

Detectives admitted they were stumped in their efforts to solve the slaying Sunday of Pauline Campbell, a 34-year-old nurse, near the University of Michigan campus.

The bludgeoning of Miss Campbell, "a quiet, old-fashioned girl," was the third attack on a nurse here within four days.

INDIANAPOLIS (UP)—Occupants of a rooming house here complained that their landlord's party was too noisy. They couldn't sleep, the roomers said.

The landlord agreed it was quite a noisy get-together. He asked his roomers to ignore it just this once. It was, he said, a going-away party for a good friend leaving the next day for prison.

No Deductions On Black Market

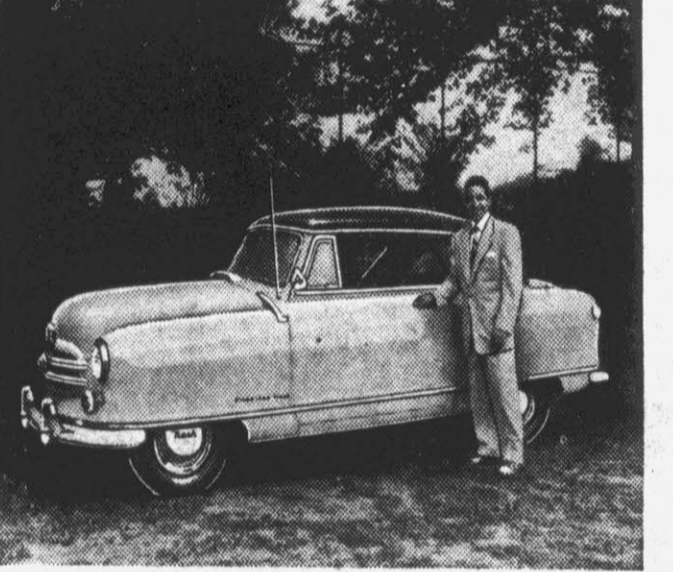

NEW YORK (UP)—Economic Stabilizer Eric Johnston has warned businessmen that they will not be able to deduct as operational costs on income tax returns any monies spent buying black market goods and services.

In an address before the 74th annual meeting of the American Bar Assn. last night, Johnston said the government would "disregard as a legitimate expense for income tax purposes any cost paid by business in violation of price or wage regulations."

School Testing Program Begins In Pitt Oct. 9

The testing program in the county schools will begin October 9 when the first grades in all of the county schools will be given readiness tests.

This year will be the second year in which this type of test will be given to first grade students to determine whether or not they are ready for formal school work. The tests are not used to determine a student's intelligence but a student's maturity.

For some time educators in the county have been concentrating on reading and getting students ready to read to insure little reading difficulty in future school work. An extensive program has been carried on in this type of testing and teachers have met frequently to discuss the program. Last year the test was given to 539 first graders in the county.

First grade teachers will meet with Annie Lee Jones, supervisor of the county schools, October 8 to discuss the tests further and receive general instructions for administering the tests. Test results will be handed in to Miss Jones to be compiled to see what percentage of the first graders are ready to begin formal school work.

Fourth grade mental ability tests will be given October 23 in all of the county schools and will test the students on their ability to learn. Last year the teachers themselves took the tests as if they were the students in order to become more familiar with the test. Over 530 fourth grade students were tested last year. Results of the mental ability tests will be compiled by Miss Jones. Fourth grade teachers will meet for general instructions October 22.

Reading tests will be given in grades four through 12, beginning November 5 and continuing through November 9. This is the third year that the reading tests will be administered. In 1949-1950 the tests were given to students in grades six through 11.

Last year 2,590 students were given the reading test and Negro children were given the test for the first time last year. The tests used are the same ones used by freshmen entering East Carolina College and the same tests are used every year but a different form of the test is used.

Even Washday Is Used For Racket

The housewife paid the fine without comment when the stranger explained that it was a ruling of the save-water committee to help ease the county water shortage.

Police are looking for the stranger—there is no Wednesday washing ban—nor any other waterless days.

Haircut Costs Leads To Trouble

When it was found that the guns had been stolen from a downtown sporting goods store, the well-groomed youth was placed in juvenile detention and the barber was jailed for receiving stolen property.

Interest In Pocahontas Grave Is Saving Church

GRAVESEND, England —(UP)—Every American learns at school the story of the Indian princess Pocahontas.

But few know that somewhere under the paving of a quiet parish church in this lower Thames River she lies buried.

It was here that Pocahontas died at the age of 22 of tuberculosis as she was preparing to return to her native Virginia forests, homesick for the wilderness after strange civilized life.

But she was no longer outwardly the simple Indian girl, favorite daughter of the powerful chief Powhatan, who prevented the braves from beating out the brains of English explorer Captain John Smith.

She was baptized by English missionaries and given the name Rebecca. In 1614 she married John Rolfe, an English squire who had gone to Virginia, and returned home with him. In England she was dressed in fine clothes and was received at the court of King James I.

Engulfed by Industry
Today interest in Pocahontas has revived at Gravesend because the parish has decided to abandon the church, St. George's, and possibly even pull it down. The church, they say, has been isolated from its congregation by Gravesend's industrial development and the relocation of residential districts.

"If it hadn't been for Pocahontas this church would have been torn down long ago," parishioners say.

St. George's was built in the 18th century to replace an earlier church which burned down, that's why no one knows the exact spot where the Princess is buried, but the original parish register clearly records her burial in 1617. A brown brick building set in a shady graveyard, the church tranquilly surveys ship traffic to and from the port of London.

Would Preserve Chapel
A movement has been launched to preserve St. George's as a "chapel of unity" for all denominations. The rector, the Rev. Richard Daunton-Fear, is going to the United States soon to determine how strong American interest is in the project.

American tourists in England have often made the trip to Gravesend to visit the church.

In 1914 the Virginia chapter of Colonial Dames of America presented a pair of stained glass windows to the church in memory of Pocahontas. A memorial tablet in the chancel says: "Gentle and humane, she was the friend of the earliest struggling English colonists whom she nobly rescued, protected and helped."

Pocahontas had a son two years before her death named Thomas. From him such well-known figures as Sir Robert Baden-Powell, founder of the Boy Scouts, and explorer Admiral Richard E. Byrd are said to have descended.

Two culprits, who yanked the meter from in front of a drug store and dragged it to the mayor's house were fined $21 each.

Pure Oil dealers in this area learn the fundamentals of Pure-Sure Car-Saver Service in classroom sessions held in Pure Oil's training center at 3225 Granby Street, Norfolk. Later, they develop practical skill and "know-how" with the help of on-the-job coaching and supervisory follow-up at their stations. Pure Oil's Norfolk training center is one of seventeen operated by the company for the benefit of Pure Oil dealers. It is supervised by Virginia Training Director D. W. Manning, who lives at 1322 W. 39th St., Norfolk.

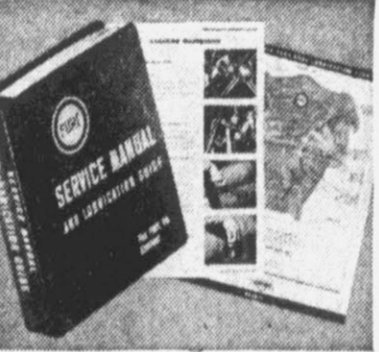

This is how Greenville Pure Oil dealers learn to give you

Pure-Sure Car-Saver Service

In Pure-Sure Service Training, Pure Oil dealers and helpers take tools in hand and learn by doing. They practice on classroom models, not on your car. In this way, old-timers keep up to date on the latest service procedures. Newcomers learn how to do each service job right.

Experienced instructors train each man in complete Pure-Sure Car-Saver Service—covering everything from how to repack wheel bearings to how to service Hydramatic, Dynaflo, Powerglide and Fordomatic transmissions. Factory-approved techniques are demonstrated in complete detail.

Pure Oil dealers learn to work—and always do work—from detailed blueprints of your car. Pure Oil's Service Manual provides each dealer with approved lubrication charts and illustrated step-by-step procedures that are recognized as the most practical and constructive in the business.

Pure Oil dealers who successfully complete Pure-Sure Service Training, and who have the necessary modern equipment, are entitled to display this "Approved Station" sign. Look for it. It assures you service by skilled, carefully trained operators—the sure Car-Saver service you want and need.

These pictures show what puts the "sure" in Pure-Sure Car-Saver Service: Pure Oil dealers are constantly being trained as sure Car-Savers. They work with sure Car-Saver tools and equipment. And the Pure Oil products they use—Purelube Motor Oil and the complete line of Purelube greases, gear lubricants and automatic transmission oil—are all designed to keep your car running better for a longer time.

Be sure with Pure! Visit the Pure Oil Car-Saver nearest you. His skill and "know-how"—plus the superior products he sells—can add sweet-running years to the life of your car!

Green City Murder Case

By Wm. G. Bogart

Chapter 2

It took about three minutes to change clothes with the guard. He had the corpse lying on his cot. Just in case any other convicts became curious, he had turned on the water in the sink. It ran down the drain freely now, and above the sound of the running water he muttered things in a low tone. To anyone listening, especially with the water running, the muttering would pass as two men talking.

Ten minutes had probably passed since he first told Guard Judson about the sink. Now he was ready to leave. He didn't think ten minutes was too long after quitting time for Guard Judson to be leaving the prison yard. Some nights it ran as late as fifteen minutes. Never more than that. He had checked too many times, watching from his cell window as Guard Judson moved across the prison yard.

He took with him the guard's gun, cap, wallet, keys, everything just as it was in Guard Judson's clothing. As he looked the cell door behind him, he added what he thought was a nice final touch.

"Thanks," he said in his own voice, loud enough so that nearby inmates could hear. "I guess the sink'll work all right now."

Then he went down the stone corridor, steps unburied, his shoulders just a trifle stooped as Guard Judson's had been stooped. At the end of the passage he opened the heavy door with one of the keys, locked it again behind him, and went down the iron stairs to the leaker room below. It was deserted, as he had known it would be. None of the other guards in this section of the prison worked a short shift tonight. Right now they were in distant cell blocks.

He found Guard Judson's long raincoat and battered hat hanging on a hook, put them on, turned up the collar of the coat around his throat. He tipped the hat brim down far enough so that it shaded his eyes. A doorway across the room gave onto a short flight of steps that led to the big prison yard.

He went out into the darkness. The rain was beating down. It was blustery, cold, and the rain blew against his face and ran inside his collar. It felt good against his perspiring flesh. His nerves were still calm. The effort of undressing Guard Judson's tall, limp form had beaded his oatmeal colored face with sweat. The cold rain, his first taste of freedom, was wonderful to feel as it ran down his collar.

He walked at the same unhurried, slightly stooped pace across the prison yard. He came up into the circular, saffron glow cast by a light directly over the big gates. He paused, raising his head, looking up toward the guard's tower atop the wall.

The man up there had stepped outside his small lookout room. He didn't come far, because the rain was spraying against him. He had seen the figure leave the guard's room across the yard, watched its progress. He called out, "See you tomorrow."

The man raised his hand in an easy movement. Many times from his cell window in the darkness, he had watched Guard Judson do the same. The arm wave was identical to Guard Judson's.

The man above stepped back into the small circular room. There was the soft whir of a motor. The gate opened. He walked through, hearing the gate already closing behind him, swung left along the city sidewalk just outside, and soon was swallowed up in the night. The state prison was located inside the city; it was only a matter of moments until he was on a thoroughfare where there were people and marquee lights.

He felt perfectly secure. Guard Judson would not be discovered until the rounds of the cells were made in the morning.

He was free!

It would have been a natural thing for him to pause and watch the night moving through the rainy night, standing in doorways, entering the theatres. There were the lights, and traffic sounds and the gay lilt of a girl's laughter. For ten long years he had not seen nor heard such things.

Yet he did not hesitate in his stride. He was a man intent on a single purpose. No longer was his walk slow, methodical, or his shoulders slightly bent. His pace was faster; his shoulders were squared. Rain trickled down his long face as though coursing over granite. His dark eyes were intent and somber.

Soon he located an inter-city bus station. Inside, he first stepped into a telephone booth and opened Guard Judson's wallet. He counted thirty-four dollars. There was perhaps a dollar's worth of small change in the pocket of the trousers he wore. The gun he had placed in the raincoat pocket.

He went across the big waiting room to the ticket counter.

"When does the next bus leave for Cincinnati?"

The clerk was busy stamping a ticket. He did not look up. "Half an hour."

CITY TRAFFIC NO PROBLEM FOR FLOCK — Though pedestrians tremble at bucking daily street traffic, these sheep unconcernedly move through Frankfurt, Germany, thoroughfare. It is understandable in that it was on a Sunday.

"How long does it take?"

"Due in Cincinnati at two a.m. Ticket?"

"One-way," he said to the man. The ticket safely in his pocket, he went outside the bus station and crossed the street. He waited in the doorway of a shop closed for the night.

He wondered if she still was at that night club in Cincinnati. He had seen her picture in the newspaper a week ago, at the prison library. Those night clubs changed entertainers pretty often. Nevertheless, he thought he could find her, even if she had moved on to another city. He had to find her because she knew of that marriage twelve years ago. A man was a fool to ever tell a woman anything.

She was the only living person who knew anything about his past. Otherwise, he would not have given her a second thought.

Well, it was too bad that she knew. Too bad for her!

TEEN TALK

Dear Judge

AP Newsfeatures

Just when one gets the impression that there is a dearth of men, along comes a batch of mail giving a hopeful sign. Little ladies write asking how to go about home dating... and two things are indicated at once: (a) men are available but (b) they are broke.

Let's hope that a girl's parents aren't obliged to keep the boy in bread, butter and sweetmeats every night to get him to call on daughter. After all, a girl does not find sugar plums on a candy tree any more than the boy does. Why, then, should girls do the entertaining?

But it is fun to entertain at home, and providing you do not get the boy in the habit of parking on your sofa, you should be easy on his pocketbook, occasionally, and suggest an evening at home. Here are some answers to questions most frequently asked by puzzled señoritas:

1. How shall I suggest we spend the evening at home?

If you have been out with a boy a few times, and he seems broke, or if your family likes to approve a boy before you go out with him, then invite the young man to the house for an evening of record playing, games or dancing. However, do not ask him the second time, unless he has made an effort to take you out even for simple entertainment.

2. How can I break the ice when he visits my home for the first time?

Introduce him to your family as soon as he arrives. This doesn't necessarily mean dragging in your prankster brother or giggling sister, although you should be able to do that charmingly. It does mean introducing the young man to Mom and Pop. He should not be invited to your home if the family plans to be out, unless an older brother or sister agrees to stay home.

3. How shall I entertain him?

First of all, do not do anything to embarrass him—and that includes pushing him into a big family dinner party or splashy family celebration the first time he visits your house. After you know the boy, you can decide just how much family he can take. Then you will know how far to go in including him in family parties. Most boys do not like to be in on their own family shindigs, so they will hardly welcome you.

Sunday night supper usually is informal enough so that the poor boy will not choke by being in the right-knife and right-fork spotlight. If you do not invite him for supper, you could serve a light refreshment. But don't try to impress the young, gallant with a big meal you've cooked yourself. You can't show a boy your domestic side until you've known him for some time. And then he should learn about it only by absorbing it bit by bit.

4. What time should he go home?

A smart girl will manage to indicate to the young man that it is time to go before Dad comes in and yawns or Mom calls down to ask if daughter is still up. (Mothers and fathers are like that.) To avoid being embarrassed by the family, put a clock on the living room table immediately after the young man arrives. Set it down on a table in full view saying something like "I've got to get to bed by 9:30 (or 10 or whatever) because I must be up early" (for an exam or to do some special chores or for another appropriate reason.) Any nice boy will take the hint. If he tries to detain you, after you've given him warning, say "good-night" abruptly, if necessary.

5. What about petting at home?

A boy should not get the impression that he is invited to your house for a necking session, which is what will happen if you permit him to get overly romantic. If you want him to be a gentleman on outside dates—such as picnics, car rides, etc.—you will have to set the example in your home. Some girls get the idea that it is fine to neck at home since they have Mom and Pop in the office for protection. Then they wonder why a boy is so difficult to handle when they date away from home.
