Obstacles To NATO Plan Fading

Denmark Ready To Accept Greece And Turkey Into Defense Pact

OTTAWA, Ont. (UP)—Diplomatic sources said today that the North Atlantic Treaty Council will agree to recommend admission of Greece and Turkey to the 12-nation defense pact.

Denmark, it was said, plans to inform the council this afternoon that it will go along with the 11 other nations which favor expansion of the alliance for the first time.

Danish Foreign Minister Ole Bjorn Kraft said he was hoping to "have a reply from my government on Greece and Turkey between noon and 2 p.m. today." But American officials said Denmark already had let it be known it would not stand alone and block final agreement.

Canadian Minister of External Affairs Lester B. Pearson told a news conference Norway had expressed its general support for bringing Greece and Turkey's military forces of 750,000 into the treaty.

"All we are waiting for now is the report by the Danish foreign minister," Pearson said.

The council met today to consider creation of a top pact committee that could study ways to mesh military requirements and financial resources of the 12 nations.

Pearson said there was "general agreement" on the need for council of "wise men" as a temporary measure to speed unity and defense of the Atlantic area. The job should be done in 60 to 90 days, he said.

The council also has before it a recommended "Ottawa declaration" pledging new social, economic and political cooperation inside the treaty.

Agreement also was expected on a program to share the cost of establishing communications facilities for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's forces. Canadian Defense Minister Brooke Claxton said the amount "runs to a huge sum."

The United States meanwhile was meeting European bids for more American dollar help for rearmament with suggestions that Europe must do more for itself. This blunt attitude has been stated by Secretary of Treasury John W. Snyder.

The Greek-Turkish issue remained as the last important business before the council adjourns tomorrow.

Diplomats already are at work on a final conference communique to be issued tomorrow after minor business is completed. The council plans to:

1. Announce a decision asking Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower to provide at the next meeting in Rome on Oct. 29 a report on the "readiness and effectiveness" of his North Atlantic air, sea and ground forces to meet an emergency.

2. Reveal creation of a top board of five experts who would balance the risk of war against the risk of overweighing European economies by trying to produce too many military items. Agreement on this plan is being urged by the United States.

3. Start wider political, economic and social cooperation between the United States, Canada and the

Red Buildup Fails Stop UN Advance

Counterattacks Shattered, Allied Forces Grind Ahead; Air War Renewed; Marines Take Hill With Flamethrowers

8TH ARMY HQ, Korea (UP)—Front dispatches reported a heavy Chinese Communist build-up in infantry and artillery on the west-central front today as United Nations forces beat off vicious counter attacks in the east and smashed ahead up to 1,000 yards.

U.N. ground patrols and aerial observers noted the build-up, centered about the sector north of Kumhwa, the southeast corner of the old Communist "Iron Triangle" defense bastion. The Reds were lining up along a river in groups of up to 500.

An Allied briefing officer said it was indicated that the enemy build-up might be defense, in anticipation of a possible drive by Allied troops.

The Red build-up was observed in detail partly because of improved weather which permitted better aerial scouting, he explained.

The improving weather brought a step-up in the air war.

Forty-eight United Nations jet fighters tangled with 64 Communist Russian-built jets in three separate battles over "MIG Alley" in northwest Korea. One enemy plane was destroyed and five damaged. There was no report of Allied losses.

The Reds attacked newly-won U.N. hill positions on the eastern front under a curtain of heavy mortar and artillery fire, but failed to dent the Allied line.

U.N. troops northwest of Yanggu at the eastern end of the Hwachon reservoir punched out a 1,000-yard advance.

U.S. Marines routed the last Communist diehards from a strategic hill farther east after breaking their resistance with a spectacular attack with flame-throwers last night.

Pitt Unscathed In Polio Season

Not One Case, Says Rose; Last Summer Saw 20 Victims

By MURIEL SHOTWELL
Reflector Staff Writer

Not one child or adult in the county was struck by the dreaded infantile paralysis this summer even though indications were that the disease was coming this way.

June H. Rose, chairman of the Pitt County Infantile Paralysis Chapter, said that the county was very fortunate since the polio map in North Carolina showed that polio was working eastward. He said polio was concentrated in the Catawba and Yadkins Valleys and the epidemic was working its way east.

Last summer 20 children and adults were struck by polio in this county and one case was reported in 1949. Rose said Pitt County children who were sent to hospitals were still being treated but none had died and possibly none would be a permanent cripple.

Dr. T. G. Basnight, health officer at the Pitt County Health Department, and W. M. Pate, senior sanitarian, said no cases of polio had been reported to their office but there was still a possibility of the disease popping up.

Basnight said he could not point out any particular reason why no polio had struck in the county except that he thought sanitary conditions were better than last year and could be attributed to why there was no polio. He also said that many precautions had been taken by parents as well as health officials in the fight against polio.

Julia Fisher, public health nurse and supervisor of nurses at the local health department, said she thought a greater emphasis had been placed on personal hygiene and health education perhaps had prevented polio to some extent.

Pate said that unsanitary conditions play a vital role in a polio epidemic and it is assumed that polio is transmitted by body waste, therefore better sanitary conditions and sewer conditions could tend to reduce the chance of contacting polio.

By CHESTER WALSH
Reflector Staff Writer

"Veterans of World War I organized the American Legion and made it great," Louis F. Parker of Elizabethtown, state commander of the North Carolina Division, American Legion, declared last night at the American Legion meeting at the new Fair Grounds.

"Two North Carolina men attended the organizational meeting in Minnesota, and one of them was June H. Rose of Greenville, now past commander of the North Carolina Department of the American Legion," the speaker reminded.

The state commander, a World War II veteran, suggested to the veterans of World War II that they carry on with the same devotion of the organizers.

The supper meeting, sponsored by the Greenville, Farmville and Ayden American Legion posts and the women's auxiliaries, was to dedicate the new buildings and equipment of the Pitt County Agricultural Fair, held annually under auspices of the American Legion.

Post Commander Lester Turnage presided.

June H. Rose led the singing of patriotic songs.

Post Chaplain H. Glenn Haney said the invocation.

State Commander Parker, reviewing the Legion's rehabilitation program, reminded of the obligation to disabled veterans and their widows

Membership Goal Of Farm Bureau Nearing Success

Over 1,500 Already Signed; Bethel Township First To Fill Its Quota

Hopes for reaching the Farm Bureau's county membership goal were bright today after workers in the 1951 drive reported last night that 1,532 memberships have been written so far in the week-old campaign.

Township workers reported to members of the board of directors at a meeting last night that the campaign is progressing rapidly to a successful conclusion. The two groups met for a barbecue dinner at Respess-James for the purpose of checking up on the progress of the drive.

Bethel Township is the first in the county to reach its goal. During the first week of the two-week drive the four township workers have written more than 300 memberships, which exceeds their goal of 280. But although the township quota has been surpassed, the workers are still writing memberships.

The only other township that has turned in its money is Farmville with a quota of 395 members. So far the drive workers there have written 322 and are heading for a successful conclusion to the drive during the next week.

So far as other townships are concerned, several have reported that they are well-along toward their individual goals. However, they have not turned in any money and therefore have not officially been counted.

For instance, workers in Belvoir Township reported they have written 105 memberships out of a requested 120. That figure is included in the 1,532 written countywide but is not official until the money is turned in to the treasurer.

The drive will continue throughout this week and the first of next week. The final report of the drive proper will be given next Tuesday night when workers and the board of directors will again meet in Greenville. However, writing of memberships will continue after that even though the county goal is reached.

During last night's meeting the group approved $150 to be given to the Negroes of the county to help underwrite the Junior Dairy Calf Show. It will be held here next Wednesday.

The Bureau members also voted to make the president of the Associated Women of the Farm Bureau an automatic member of the county board of directors. She is Mrs. Edna Baker of Farmville.

Newsman Wins Silver Star For Heroic Actions

U. S. EIGHTH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, —(AP)— The field commander of United Nations forces in Korea today pinned the Silver Star on AP war correspondent John Randolph for heroic action. Randolph carried wounded to safety April 23 during a wild, four-hour battle.

Gen. James A. Van Fleet bestowed the award on the 33-year-old newsman in front of 100 correspondents. He told them:

"The press is part of the United Nations army in Korea. We are honored at having you as members of this command. I know that this gallant incident was one of many in which correspondents have distinguished themselves. The list is very long."

Worried Britons Await More Details On Ill King

LONDON —(AP)— Worried Britons speculated today on King George's illness as they waited for more details on the lung disease affecting the 55-year-old monarch.

Starting at dawn, London news stands did a land-office business as commuters snatched papers carrying headlines like "Serious News" and "King's Lung Is Affected."

Doctors for the tired monarch disclosed last night that "structural changes have developed" in one of his lungs, indicating a serious ailment.

A London lung specialist—not one of the nine examining the king—said "structural changes" can mean any of several lung diseases. He said the wording of the bulletin "suggests the doctors are not sure what is the whole trouble."

Queen Elizabeth, Princess Elizabeth and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, returned by plane last night from a vacation in Scotland.

The king himself went about his peoples' business last night. He had a 75-minute session with Prime Minister Clement Attlee in Buckingham Palace. Some believe the talk set the stage for a general election in October or November.

Second Adult Education Meet Set For Monday

Another meeting for the purpose of organizing adult education classes at East Carolina College will be held Monday night, September 23.

Only a small number of people were present at the meeting last night in the Austin Auditorium at the college to show interest in taking adult education classes and varied fields of interest were shown. In order to organize a course, at least 15 or 20 persons must be interested in the course to merit its meeting.

Dean Leo Jenkins said the offering of the course would not only be educational but would help the people know us at the college better and we could also profit from knowing the people of Greenville.

According to an announcement by Dr. John D. Messick, college president, the courses offered will be either for credit or non-credit. Even those persons who have not completed high school will be eligible to take the non-credit courses.

Depending on the demand, courses will be offered in speech, philosophy, German, Spanish, literature, creative writing, current world issues and happenings, everyday problems in science, elementary photography, clothing construction, typewriting, shorthand, office machines, accounting, business law, federal tax, salesmanship, art, music appreciation, the opera, or other music courses.

The meeting scheduled for Monday night will be in the Austin Auditorium and all who are interested in adult education courses are urged to attend by college officials.

Korean Truce Talks Again Flicker With Dawn Parley

Iranian Crisis Rapidly Nearing Another Climax

Harriman Offers Another Try At Mediation Task

WASHINGTON (UP)—W. Averell Harriman offered today to take another crack at mediating the explosive Anglo-Iranian oil dispute, but not on Iran's latest terms.

In a diplomatically tough note to Iranian Premier Mohammed Mossadegh, the presidential trouble shooter rejected his request to pass along a 15-day ultimatum to Britain and urged Mossadegh to "reconsider" his proposals for getting new talks started.

Harriman's position was laid down in a note to Mossadegh Saturday and released today by the State Department along with Mossadegh's note of last Thursday to Harriman.

Harriman warned that Mossadegh's ultimatum that the British settle in 15 days or get out of the country "will only further aggravate an already serious situation."

Publication of both notes came as official sources in Tehran told of planned negotiations for a new Soviet-Iranian barter agreement.

While rejecting Mossadegh's four points for opening new talks, Harriman left the door open for other efforts.

"I assure your excellency," he said, "that I continue to stand ready to assist in any way that I can in finding a just solution.

"...I earnestly hope that your excellency will reconsider the points set forth in your communication and that a basis can be developed under which negotiations can soon be resumed."

Delay Soviet Trade Talks; Spy Condemned To Death

TEHRAN (UP)—Iran condemned a Soviet spy to death today and declared a three-day postponement in the scheduled opening of trade talks with Russia.

The move came amidst other swift developments cropping out of Iran's bitter oil dispute with Britain. They included:

1. Finance Minister Mohamed Ali Varasteh resigned and a cabinet reshuffle was anticipated shortly.

2. Iran asked four British communications experts to return to their jobs because no Iranian could do the work.

3. Opposition newspapers urged the Shah to "use his prerogatives" to halt Premier Mohammed Mossadegh's drastic oil policies.

4. Retiring U.S. Ambassador H. F. Grady left for home by plane with a ringing denunciation of Mossadegh as a man who "cannot see beyond his nose."

Grady told associates:

"It is a government of chaos. It is not a strong but rather a stubborn government. This government is getting Iran nowhere."

Only a few Iranian officials appeared at the airport for Grady's departure.

Witness Stages Sitdown Strike

Judge Threatens To 'Throw Book' At Bookmaker Gross

NEW YORK (UP)— Bookmaker Harry Gross, screaming accusations at Kings County Judge Samuel S. Leibowitz, went on a sit-down strike on the witness stand today.

In a stormy climax to the 20-month investigation of gambling and police protection which has rocked official New York City, the swarthy kingpin bookmaker took the stand and yelled denunciations at the red-faced judge, who formerly was the country's leading criminal attorney.

Twice within his first 45 minutes on the stand, the dapper bookie, his face drawn and twitching and his voice breaking into near sobs, walked off the stand. A bailiff grabbed him and brought him back.

"I'll chain you here with handcuffs, if you don't come back," Judge Leibowitz said.

"You'll sit in that chair for two days if necessary. I'm going to have the district attorney get to the very bottom of this whole outrageous affair.

"I warn you if you refuse to answer I will sentence you for contempt of court for every refusal to answer."

Gross broke in, railing at the jurist as the man who had kept him under guard "without radios, without visitors, with no shoes or belt."

Leibowitz replied: "You'll rot in jail for one hundred years if you don't answer. Twenty months have been spent in this investigation. Before I permit this case to go up in smoke, I'll hold you here until you answer."

Plenty Of Space For Your Grave

ATLANTIC CITY —(AP)— Here is one more item you don't have to worry about—there will be enough cemetery space at least for the next 200 years.

That's the official estimate of the American Cemetery Association which says there's no need for the government to get into the cemetery business. The group is in convention here.

Postwar Help

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Postwar aid from the United States to foreign countries totaled $31,400,000,000 through last March 31, the National Advisory Council on International Monetary Problems told Congress yesterday.

The Council, headed by Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, submitted its report through President Truman.

It placed foreign aid from last Oct. 1 to March 31 at $2,400,000,000, and noted a big shift in economic to arms aid in this period, after the start of the Korean fighting.

Tobacco Average Continues High

Tuesday's $53.99 Only Slightly Off From Monday's Mark

Yesterday's tobacco market average dropped off somewhat from Monday's highest season figure but still remained higher than the early sales days.

The average yesterday was $53.99 with 3,532,538 pounds being sold for $827,416.55. Yesterday's sales were the 20th for the season and brought the total volume of tobacco sold to 28,558,360 pounds. Dollars paid out so far in the season amount to $14,328,244.16.

Average for the season to date is $50.12. Average for the last seven sales days is $52.40.

A trend toward higher quality tobacco is appearing on the warehouse floors currently, which differs from the lugs and tips that predominated during the first several selling days.

W. L. Whedbee, sales supervisor, reported that the quantity of cutters, leaf and smoking leaf is increasing day by day on the floors and the amount of tips is gradually decreasing.

This week, with the four-hour schedule in effect, the market is selling about 1,500,000 pounds daily and Whedbee looks for blocked sales throughout the remainder of the season. He expects a substantial increase in volume sold this year over the 1950 sales. Last year the Greenville market told 63,700,000 pounds for a season's average of $56.98.

The four-hour schedule will continue in effect for the next two and a half weeks. The fifth set of buyers on the local market will return here beginning next week after being transferred to Old Markets for this week's opening.

Optimists Believe Communists Ready To Resume Meetings; Atmosphere In Yesterday's Talk Devoid Of Tensions; Newsmen To Attend Future Sessions

TOKYO, Thursday (UP)—United Nations and Communist liaison officers meet today in a mysterious dawn conference which Allied officials believe may be the first step toward resuming cease fire talks.

The Reds called the meeting for the unusually early hour of 6 a.m. (1 p.m. Wesnesday EST) without saying what they wanted to talk about. The U.N. command at once accepted.

Optimists among officers of the U.N command believe the Reds may deliver a reply—possibly favorable—from the Communist high command to the note of U.N. Supreme Commander Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway offering to resume the armistice talks which the Reds broke off four weeks ago today.

Pessimists believed the Reds might want to make some new charge of a violation of the neutrality of Kaesong, where cease-fire talks have been held.

But Ridgway in his note Monday suggested a meeting of liaison officers to discuss resumption of negotiations.

Three Allied correspondents will be permitted to go to Pan Mun Jom, the liaison point, with the U. N. command delegates.

A series of rapid-fire developments pointed toward a decisive turn soon in the long deadlock over alleged U.N. neutrality breaches.

1. At a meeting of liaison officers at Pan Mun Jom yesterday, the Reds announced their capture of four South Korean soldiers whom they had accused of a neutrality breach. It developed that the soldiers were unarmed members of a DDT spraying detachment who drove their truck into the neutral zone by mistake. Without the usual angry denunciations, the Red liaison officers released the soldiers and their truck. The meeting was conducted "in an atmosphere almost completely devoid of tension," a U.N. release said.

2. Later the U. N. command liaison men requested a meeting at Pan Mun Jom at 2 p.m. yesterday (12 a.m. Wednesday EST) to discuss changing the frequency of the radio telephone by means of which communication is maintained between Kaesong and the U.N. advance cease-fire base near Munsan. The Reds accepted promptly and the meeting was held as scheduled.

Another Iran Crisis

American Peoples' Stake In Whether Iran's Oil Moves East Or West; British Still Undisturbed By Barter Talk; Potential Of World War III Lies In The Situation

By HARRY FERGUSON

After months of threat and counter-threat a showdown is near in the Iranian oil crisis. Things have reached the ultimatum stage between Iran and Britain, and Russia has lost no opportunity to keep the controversy boiling.

Every American has a stake in what happens because if the British cannot get oil from Iran it is going to have to be furnished by the United States and her Allies. The rearmament of Western Europe depends to some extent on the oil that has been carried in tankers from Iran to London.

The trouble started when the Iranians voted to nationalize the oil industry. To all practical purposes that means they wanted to take over the Anglo-Iranian Oil Co., controlled by the British. The danger spot is the southwestern Iranian town of Abadan where Anglo-Iranian has the worlds biggest refinery.

The British Labor government found itself in the position of trying to prevent something it had been doing itself — nationalizing industry. But it clung tenaciously to its position because oil is life-blood to any nation which has an economy based on industry.

The Iranian government was equally tenacious. It had to be because no premier could stay in office unless he were violently anti-British. In fact, he couldn't stay alive. One premier was assassinated because the Iranian extremists thought he was evading the issue. The present premier — Mohammed Mossadegh — sometimes takes refuge in the Parliament building in the capital of Tehran because he fears for his life.

The weakness of Iran's position is that it probably could not operate the refinery without Britain's skilled labor. And the nation badly needs the income that the sale of oil to London produced.

That was where Russia stepped in. There are reports that soon Iran and Russia will sign a barter agreement. Iran will give oil for things like food, timber and wool. On the surface it sounds like an ideal arrangement, but the British refuse to be disturbed by it. They argue that even if the barter deal

McMahon's Proposals

In The Pre-Korea Days, This Connecticut Senator Had Impressive Suggestions To Make; He Does It Again; One Proposal For Peace, Another On Arms

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Senator Brien McMahon is a man in whom hope does not seem to die easily. His hope is that mankind, through reason, can keep peace in the world.

This has been the dream of many men of goodwill from away back. So far it has been a dream only. But there is always someone, like McMahon, who persists in thinking that maybe tomorrow... or tomorrow...

Eighteen months ago the pink-cheeked McMahon, who dresses fashionably and is a Democrat from Connecticut, was troubled by the race between Russia and the West to get armed. He arose in the Senate to speak.

He is chairman of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy and he received thoughtful attention from his colleagues although in the end nothing came of what he proposed.

As he spoke that day he represented the conscience of mankind, troubled by the ancient problem: Does the world have to settle its difficulties by force? If we're civilized, can't we use reason instead?

He looked into the future and thought he saw doom if the terrible arms race continued. So he called for a special meeting of the United Nations' General Assembly in Moscow itself.

The purpose: to work out "rascal-proof" safeguards against atomic war and the unguessed perils of the hydrogen bomb.

He noted that such a plan for controlling the bomb had been offered four years ago by the United States, had won U. N. backing, but had been rejected by Russia.

A few months later the Korean War broke out, a clear demonstration that communism was relying on force instead of reason. Since then in Korea the U. N. and communism have been relying on force.

On a wider scale the West has placed its faith in an accumulation of such force—through the Atlantic Pact—that Russia will be discouraged from trying force herself.

Yesterday McMahon arose in the Senate again and repeated, with more detail, his fears as to where

Mrs White Sunday Night Hostess At Family Party

On Sunday night Mrs. J. B. White was hostess at a delightful family supper between the hours of 6:30-8:30 at her home on Greene Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles White welcomed the guests at the front door, and as they entered the softly lit entrance hall, Mrs. White, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McMillan and Mrs. Daisy McMillan, mother of Mr. McMillan, extended greetings.

The rooms on the lower floor were thrown ensuite for the occasion, and profusions of flowers graced tables and mantels in each of them, with pink roses and pink gladioli predominating. In the informal living room yellow roses added a touch of warmth and hospitality.

The table in the dining room was covered with an organdy cloth with lace insertions. The centerpiece was an artfully arranged group of pink asters, white pom poms and maidenhair fern with twin candlesticks holding white tapers on either side. The buffet was lovely with magnolia leaves, and on the mantel above the serving table was ivy twined around candles.

Mrs. J. L. Winstead and Mrs. Helen White Hawes served chicken salad and ham from either end of the table. Accompaniments were served buffet style and supper guests found their places in informal groups in the hall, living room, music room and den.

Assisting the hostess in the dining room were Misses Lou White Winstead and Barbara White.

Thirty-two members and close relatives of the family were present.

A.A.U.W. Holds First Fall Meeting

Around 26 A.A.U.W. members gathered Monday evening for the first meeting of the fall, held in the parish house of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. The president, Mrs. Walter Krausnick, presided at the dinner and program.

To the informal program, several members contributed—Mrs. J. E. Winslow, Miss Gladys Reichard, Miss Annie Mae Murray, Miss Leila Higgs, Mrs. R. L. Humber, and Mrs. D. S. Spain each discussing briefly one resolution adopted last spring at the state AAUW meeting.

The resolutions expressed the stand taken by the association on such school matters as the need to figure teacher load in terms of academic subjects and keep teachers in the fields to which they have been allocated, to provide for enforcement of school attendance, and to get standards set up by the State Department of Education for licensing kindergartens and nursery schools; and such other subjects as provision by the AAUW of some kind of clearing service for all women's clubs, to reduce overlapping of activities.

Mrs. D. S. Spain reported a letter from the state organization to President Gordon Gray of the University commending the University on admitting a Negro to its medical school without waiting for legal compulsion.

As the state AAUW set up last spring a committee on Civil Defense for the association, with Mrs. R. L. Rumber as state chairman, the branch asked Miss Mabel Lacey to serve as local chairman of such a committee.

Guests for the meeting were Miss Gloria Blanton, Miss Gertrude Troy, and Miss Elizabeth Gillam.

Girl Scouts Outing Had Extra Share Bad Luck

Very seldom does any group plan picnic or outing that something doesn't happen, and Girl Scout Troop 10 wasn't an exception.

When the group, 10 Girl Scouts, their leader, Mrs. B. B. Sugg, Jr., and Mrs. E L. Henderson, approached the road to Camp Hardee Saturday they found it newly oiled and tarred. But, like all good scouts, they went ahead anyway. The results—two cars covered with oil and tar that had splattered on them.

Undaunted, the group prepared for a day at camp. The morning was a little dreary and the skies had the promise of rain so two of the scouts neglected to bring their bathing suits. But the sun came out and all of the scouts prepared for a swim, except the two minus bathing suits.

Mrs. Henderson lived up to the scout motto, "Be Prepared", when she took the bathing suitless girls to the infirmary and improvised suits from cheesecloth and other "first aid" material. The two girls enjoyed a day of swimming after all.

The girls cooked their lunch outdoors in an open fireplace and Mrs. Henderson said the group had a wonderful time, enjoying swimming and "just being out in the open."

"On the way back we took precautions against the soft road", Mrs. Henderson said, "and covered the fenders and lower part of the cars with paper to prevent more oil and tar getting on the cars."

Hold Suspect In Theft Pitt Auto

WINTON — Burke Reid, 24, Negro of the Wilson-Pinetops area is being held in Hertford county jail here at request of the FBI.

Jailer Fred W. Liverman said he is wanted in connection with the theft of an automobile in Greenville three weeks ago and carried over the state line into Virginia.

The car belonged to S. E. Selby of the Grimesland community. It was stolen from a parking place near Centre Brick Warehouse.

Reid is to face charges of reckless driving, speeding at 90 miles an hour, and driving without driver's license in Hertford county recorders' court before surrender to federal agents. He was arrested on Highway 258 north of Murfreesboro last Friday by State Highway Patrolman W. R. O'Neal.

Reid was unable to produce driver's license and the car's registration card and local officers made further investigation which connected him in charges of theft of a 1950 model Plymouth car belonging to a Washington, N. C., veteran's training program teacher.

The FBI stepped into the case when it was learned Reid's arrest was made on a return trip from Norfolk, Va.

Law enforcement officers said a record changer, $100 in tools and a spare tire, the owner said was in the car when stolen were missing.

REALISTS

In browsing over my library the other day I came upon my boyhood copy of Robinson Crusoe. The fly leaf indicates that my mother had given it to me in December of 1898. I recall the thrilling hours spent poring over its pages. More than fifty years later I still regard it as one of the best pieces of literature to which my attention was called through many years of education.

There is a realism about the old books which many present-day books strive to emulate but cannot. Many writers believe they are realistic if they are obscene—if they barge into the privacies of life and use language which until recently was universally considered revolting to good taste. But the realism of many of the classical writers arises from the fact that they had a clear insight into life as it is and described it with simplicity and candor.

They did not believe that the whole of life is smut. They looked at life with a penetrating eye. They saw the good in humanity as well as the evil, and they never made the mistake of calling evil good because it happened to be practiced by sophisticated people.

They drew a sharp line of distinction between right and wrong, and this very fact itself classified them as realists; for such a line undoubtedly exists in the core of life's realities.

A New Era For The Pitt County Fair

A large number of Legionnaires last night witnessed the dedication of the new Pitt County Fair grounds to the memory of Pitt County's war dead.

The dedication marks a new era in the progress of Pitt County's Agricultural Fair which began on a small scale in 1937 and has grown steadily in size and quality under the auspices of the American Legion posts of Greenville, Farmville and Ayden.

The Legion fair has long since passed the stage of a carnival, and has truly become an agricultural fair. For several years the fair's agricultural exhibits have ranked high in comparison with similar fairs throughout the state, and for the past two years the purebred swine show of the fair has been about the best in North Carolina.

With its new site and new, larger facilities, the 1951 Pitt County Fair is set to be bigger and better than ever before when the gates swing open on October 1. The Legion posts and the agricultural leaders of the county have sought to make the fair truly an agricultural fair to show "Pitt County on Parade." They have done well in past years, and this year promises to be better than ever.

A lot of work went into the construction of the new fair facilities for the county, and for the most part the work was done by a relatively few men who took time from their other businesses to direct the building of the new site. To those men the other Legionaires of the county and the citizens generally owe a debt of gratitude.

New Band Uniforms; The Sooner The Better

The efforts to raise funds for new uniforms for the Greenville High School band was in full swing today as local business firms responded generously to requests from the Merchants Association.

The merchants were endeavoring to show the school they appreciate the services the Greenville High band has rendered to the city during the past 15 years, and they likewise were investing in a better band appearance in the coming years.

New uniforms are badly needed by the local high school band. The band represents the city not only in local public functions, but in appearances throughout this section of the state. The uniforms the members of the band are now wearing were purchased some 15 years ago by the merchants of the city.

Surely its time new uniforms were acquired for the band, and The Reflector is glad to see the local merchants responding so eagerly to the request. We hope the goal in the campaign will be reached this week so the new uniforms can be ordered immediately.

Iran Must Not Be Enveloped By Iron Curtain

Explosive Iran may be slipping from the camp of the Western allies to the Iron Curtain realm of Moscow.

The Iranian government has announced it is rushing through a barter agreement with Russia to supply Iran the scarce goods which have been cut off from Britain because of the dispute over the nationalization of the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company.

Clearly the move by the adamant Premier Mossadegh is an act to intimidate the British government into reopening negotiations on the Iranian oil dispute. Confidant as the Western powers seem to be that the maneuver will amount to naught, they can not overlook the possibility that the entire Iranian oil area with its vast stores of petroleum will fall into the hands of the Communists.

Such a catch will indeed be a prize for the Russians who have sought access to, if not control of, the Iranian fields for many years. At the same time the Western European nations would suffer a drastic fuel shortage if permanently cut off from the products of the Iranian fields. A complete switch in the directional flow of Iranian oil from the democratic nations to the Communists would appreciably affect the balance of military potential between the West and the East, and may be a determining factor in helping the Russians decide to strike in Europe before time allows Eisenhower's defenses to grow any stronger.

Admittedly the transportation problem for moving oil from Iran to Russia, Poland and Czechoslovakia seems almost unsurmountable for at least a year or two, but eventually the Reds will work out some method to transport the black gold which they are so eager to have. Even if the Russians can not get the oil for their own use, if they succeed in tying Iran to an economic agreement which cuts off the oil supply from the West, they will have won their greatest single victory of the cold war.

Britain is just as determined not to submit to the Iranian demands in the oil dispute as the Iranian leaders are to have their way in the oil nationalization issue. In the final showdown, however, Britain can not afford to cut off its nose and that of the other Western nations just to spite its face.

Every possible step must be taken by the allies to prevent Iran from becoming enveloped in the Iron Curtain of Moscow.

News Behind The News

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON—The Marshall-Lovett shift in command at the Pentagon, as well as certain domestic political moves, have thrown the Eisenhower-for-President boom into reverse gear. It may be only a temporary slowdown, and one partially applied by his sponsors for strategic reasons.

The appointment of Robert A. Lovett in place of General George C. Marshall as Defense Secretary is not regarded as a politically motivated stroke. In view of Mr. Lovett's great ability and experience, it was a natural selection. Yet it may have the effect of keeping Eisenhower on his European assignment so long that he will be lost to the GOP.

CLASHES—It is doubtful if "Ike" could have remained abroad, if a military man like General Omar N. Bradley or any other member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff had been named in Marshall's place. All had served under "Ike" in World War II, and, as a close reading of their memoirs reveals, they had many serious clashes on tactics, strategy and military politics.

Such a situation would have been uncomfortable, if not impossible. But the naming of Mr. Lovett, a New York lawyer-banker who "Ike" got to know well here and as head of Columbia University, seems to remove any possibility of friction between the Pentagon and SHAPE.

PROGRAM—Again without acting from selfish political motives, Washington has offered strong inducements for General Eisenhower to remain in Europe instead of gambling for the presidency.

In recent conferences with Anglo-French foreign ministers, President Truman and Secretary Acheson have promised to furnish additional arms, money and men for increasing the Western European Army Eisenhower now favors.

They have framed a program under which Western Germany, as a start, may agree to furnish at least ten divisions by early spring. She now has about four trained divisions known as police units, although they need further, integrated training and weapons to fit into the Eisenhower forces.

DEDICATED—These still undisclosed commitments mean that Eisenhower will have about twenty-five divisions, or approximately 500,000 men, under his command far sooner than he had been led to expect. So, only a few months before both conventions meet next year, he will be a man on horseback, military rather than political, however.

As a soldier, and one earnestly dedicated to saving the western world against Communist attack, his good friends doubt whether he would make the swap demanded of him by his promoters in the Dewey-Duff-Darby faction.

It must not be forgotten that "Ike" has a private grudge against the Russians. Like Franklin D. Roosevelt, he believed that they would cooperate in postwar efforts for peace. Now, he has supplanted Winston Churchill as their World Enemy No. 1. He enjoys the honor, and, if necessary, some day he would like to earn that description.

BARRIERS—General Eisenhower himself has built certain barriers against his nomination by either major party. He has explained his attitude quite frankly since he became a leading figure in many public polls and in the politicians' discussions of 1952.

He has left no doubt that he is a Republican, as disclosed here many weeks ago. In the very language I quoted, he said: "I am and always have been a Kansas Republican, just as my ancestors were." His friends gather that he proved his Republicanism by voting for Dewey in 1948.

But the fact that he is a Republican does not mean that he is a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination.

TERMS—General Eisenhower is adamant, sincerely and devoutly, against any attempt by himself or his friends to win him the 1952 honor. Even if he should quit the European job early next year, and become free to campaign, he will enter no primaries. He will make no speeches setting forth his views on controversial public issues, as his sponsors and enemies say he must in order to insure his serious consideration.

He must be drafted in such an overwhelming way that there can be no doubt of his sincerity when he defines the summons as another call to duty in his acceptance speech, should it be his fortune and responsibility to make such an address.

The Dear Departed

Somebody Told Me

By L. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

How well off are you? If somebody asked you that question, you could probably think of several reasons why you are pretty bad off. Before complaining, you should read this column, taken from an article by a writer named Stringfellow Barr.

Stringfellow asks you to pretend that you have not yet been born but will be born this year. If you were born today, 200,000 more babies would have been born all over the world.

You would have less than one chance in 20 of being born in the United States. Your chance of being born in the Soviet Union would not be much better.

You would probably be colored, black or brown or yellow. Your chances of being born white this year are not more than one in three. Your chances of being Chinese are one in four; of being born in India, better than one in nine.

You have only about one chance in four of being born a Christian. It is far more likely that you will be born a Confucian or a Buddhist, a Mohammedan or a Taoist.

If you are born in the United States you will probably live longer than a year. But if you are born in India, which is more likely, you have only a little better than a one-to-four chance of living more than a year. Even if you survive babyhood in India, you have only 50-50 chance of becoming an adult.

If you are born colored, you have only a one-to-four chance of learning to read. And since you almost certainly will not own a radio, you will be pretty well cut off from that part of the human family that has enough to eat and that is reasonably healthy. You will most likely live in a mud hut, with a dirt floor and no chimney. You will work on the land, and most of what you raise will go to the landlord. In addition, you are likely to be in debt to the local moneylender, and you may have to pay him annual interest of anywhere from 30 to 100 per cent.

How many times have you complained and had someone say, "Look around you and you can always find someone worse off." As time progresses, the color of the skin is getting to be of less importance, but there is another factor in being born that is becoming more significant, and that's where. Regardless of race, you are lucky to have been born in America.

And I thank you.

Around Capitol Square

Raleigh, N. C. By LYN VISBET

CONTRIBUTION — The 1951 convention of the Young Democratic Clubs of North Carolina wound up at Carolina Beach last Saturday night without making important contribution to state political history. There were a few developments which might be regarded as indicating trends in state politics.

ABSENTEES — High Brass public officials and recognized leaders in the regular Democratic party organization were conspicuous for their absence. Not a single statewide elective official was in evidence, except Senator Willis Smith, who came as honor escort and introducer of of Senator Herbert O'Conor of Maryland, who made the principal address. Only one representative in congress was on hand. That was Ertel Carlyle in whose district the convention was being held. There were members of the Washington staffs of Senators Hoey and Smith, Representative C. B. Deane and others, but they made it clear that they were attending primarily as delegates from their home county YDC clubs, rather than as accredited spokesmen for their big bosses.

REASONS — An informal barbecue meeting of Democrats in the twelfth congressional district at Waynesville on Saturday prevented National Committeeman Jonathan Daniels from paying personal respects to the YDC folks down east, and probably kept some other westerners away. Sudden death of Chief Justice Stacy imposed unanticipated obligations upon the governor's office and other elective officials. The death of Tom Bost, dean of Capitol square newsmen and one of the best loved men who ever used a pencil or a typewriter to produce newspaper copy in North Carolina, kept some others away. While these conditions were understood and appreciated, the fact remains that big time party folks attending the 1951 YDC convention were much scarcer than usual.

CANDIDATES — The only person who has been generally publicized as a candidate for governor next year to attend was William Umstead of Durham, who formally announced his candidacy ten days ago. Brandon Hodges, Hubert Olive, Henry Jordan and other potentials had scouts and proponents among the crowd, but none of these was willing to answer direct questions about the purposes of their principals. Another prospective statewide candidate was Roy Rowe, recognized but announced aspirant for the post of lieutenant governor.

AFFILIATIONS — When the credentials committee reported just before the formal business session Saturday afternoon there were 518 accredited convention votes from 56 county and local YDC clubs. There are one hundred counties in North Carolina with eighty or more of them having consistent Democratic majorities. The fact that only 56 counties "affiliated", some of them with only two or three votes when they could have qualified for many times that number, puts the spotlight on an interesting phase of YDC procedure. The maximum potential voting strength of the county is based upon votes cast in the last general election; but the actual number up to that maximum is determined by the affiliation fees paid. So far as your reporter can learn this is the only place in the political set up within North Carolina where votes can be sold and bought legally. Up to the maximum allotted on general election reports, the county club has the number of votes it pays for. So many dollars, so many votes—just like there are a certain number of banquet tickets for so many dollars.

PERSONALITIES — This policy undoubtedly had considerable bearing upon the results of balloting in the YDC convention. There was not actually anything like as much controversy between alleged "liberal" and "conservative" elements as some of the reports might have indicated. W. W. (Bill) Staton of Sanford was elected president by acclamation when Vaughan Winborne of Raleigh, his only announced opposition, made the motion. Staton had been running for months, Winborne for a few weeks. Staton had been a key man in Frank Graham's senatorial campaign headquarters last year, while Winborne had voted for Willis Smith. When Winborne got into the YDC presidency contest some effort was made to make it look a continuance of the Graham-Smith fight. It never was. But, it is a fact that if Winborne had wanted to carry the presidential election to a final vote, he had available several hundred dollars to "affiliate" local clubs which desired to go on record for conservatism as against liberalism. He and his friends agreed that the issue should not be drawn, because of erroneous impressions that would follow. Bill Staton, who is personally just about as conservative as Winborne and is personally more popular, had the votes. There was no point in going on with the election at expense of conservative money which would have built up larger membership for the liberal winner.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

DEPRECIATION
(Wilson Daily Times)

Not everyone understands depreciation. Business men, of course, know enough to charge it off, thereby reducing their taxes; but do they save the money? Does it go back into plant and equipment? Or do they spend that money for other purposes?

What applies to businesses likewise applies to nations. Is Franco in Spain, like a lot of business men, living off depreciation? It doesn't matter much how big or how little the figures are that we're dealing with. Depreciation is something we can't avoid. If we don't save the money as we charge it off, we'll pay much heavier for it later.

To understand better what we mean, let's deal in little figures. A small foundry is valued at $100,000. Its depreciation therefore runs somewhere around $10,000 a year. It's on the theory that the machinery in the foundry will wear out in 10 years. If the owner of that foundry spends the money instead of saving it, he'll have to go in debt for $100,000 to replace his foundry at the end of 10 years.

That's what Franco is doing in Spain. He's living off depreciation. It's a dangerous thing to do, as Franco no doubt has already found out. But the rich in Spain put him in to avoid taxation. If he turns against them, they may throw him out. So the rich am rich and the remain poor. It's the status quo that people everywhere object to. It's been the basis of most modern revolutions.

That, it begins to look, is what Spain is courting. Is it any wonder Franco wants some American dollars? But if he gets them, will he put them into the things that make for better living standards for the Spaniards, or will those dollars eventually find their way into the pockets of the rich? We should give all that thorough consideration before lending Franco money.

Business Today

A bit more optimism is permeating the furniture industry. For nine months sales have been off and inventories large and depressing. But at the fall furniture show in Boston, considerable buying has been reported and many retailers say sales have been rising since Labor Day, reducing their stocks.

Department of Commerce figures show a slight reduction in July. Retailers' inventories were put at $1,736,000,000, down $30,000,000. But they were still $715,000,000 higher than July, 1950.

The most discouraging prospect facing the industry is the reduced rate of home building.

A total of 1,386,000 non-farm dwelling units were started in 1950. This meant about 5,500,000 new rooms requiring furniture, furnishings and appliances.

Industry estimates place this year's total close to the government's goal of 850,000 units. That's 446,000 fewer than last year, or about a million and a half fewer rooms. That's a big cut in demand for furniture and furnishings.

There were 583,500 units begun in the first half of this year, which would leave only 267,500 units to be started in the second half. In short, the new home market has been cut almost in half, which is a big reason sales have been slow and inventories have been piling up.

At the Mortgage Bankers Association of America meeting in San Francisco last week, most of the lenders predicted that home building would be even less next year. Shortages of and controls on many materials, especially metals, and the government restrictions on mortgages, already having effects, are expected to continue through 1952. But the lenders said the chief cause of a decline in building would be the shortage of mortgage money.

Some of the lenders said that home building next year may be as much as 50 per cent lower than this year. That would mean between 400,000 and 500,000 new units, with around 2,000,000 new rooms needing furniture.

If the furniture industry is to keep healthy and if a lot of manufacturers and retailers are to remain in business, the industry will have to exploit the replacement market more to make up for the loss of part of the "new home" market. It will have to sell harder and advertise more effectively.

It will have to convince the 5,000,000 families who have bought or rented new homes since the war that the furniture they first bought was only temporary equipment, which is true in a great number of cases. It will have to promote pride of ownership of new furniture. It will have to put greater stress on fashion. It will have to convince many families that old and shabby furniture is a social liability. It will have to educate women more in decorating and persuade them to junk the "horrors" they have acquired. And it will have to develop programs for taking more trade-ins.

9 PCT. OF U. S. OUTPUT GOING TO DEFENSE

Nine per cent of the gross national product is now going to defense, the National Industrial Conference Board calculates. This is still far below the wartime high of 41.5 per cent.

Defense spending during the first half of this year, the Board estimates, was at an annual rate of about $30,000,000,000. The budget for the year beginning July 1 is about $60,000,000,.

OPS MAKES SALE PRICES PERMANENT

"Bargains forever" may become the slogan of some Connecticut liquor stores.

During the OPS base period, some stores ran out-price sales to get rid of excess Christmas stocks. Now the OPS has ruled, they must stick to those prices.

As a consequence, the price of one brand of liquor may vary as much as $1 from store to store.

RUNS OWN STORE TO TEST TECHNIQUES

A Canadian advertising and marketing man bought a dry cleaning shop in a neighborhood that contained a cross-section of Toronto income groups. J. D. Penn McLeod was interested in neither making extra money nor improving the appearance of the people. His objective was to find out for himself how people reacted to ads, sales promotions and selling techniques he devised. He didn't disclose his identity to his customers.

He learned a lot about public reactions and psychology, McLeod said. Besides, he became the only advertising man in the world to have a client follow his recommendations to the letter.

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK —(AP)— Confessions of a columnist:

They say a man ought to rear back every few years and take a look at his life—just to see if he's learned anything or is headed anywhere.

It is my turn to do that today. I have just finished eight years in the same old chair—writing a daily newspaper column.

That is the longest I have spent at one task since a successful eight-year hitch I served in grammar school, some time ago.

The thing I have found a man needs most to be a columnist is a two-pants suit. I don't know of any industry that, over a period of years, requires so much consecutive sitting—down. Most of your mental traveling is done in a chair.

A second essential a wise columnist acquires as soon as possible is a thoughtful expression—a good grey look of wisdom. After eight years of steady effort I still can't report complete success in this direction. Copy boys, passing my desk, nudge each other and ask:

"Is he thinking or sleeping?"

The third thing a columnist ought to try for is an open mind, the ability always to see fresh woods and pastures new in the human soul. This is the only real adventure in columning.

The rewards of the job have been completely unexpected. I had the idea eight years ago that a columnist spent his mornings giving consultations to anxious statesmen, his afternoons at the racetrack, and his evenings in a nightclub, being witty and wise. Naturally, he went home to a 15-room penthouse.

Well, bless us, it didn't turn out that way at all. President Truman has never solicited my advice, and if the government hasn't turned out the way some people hope, my conscience is clear. I've only been to two racetracks in eight years, and I know only one Manhattan night club headwaiter by name. But he doesn't know my name. And the penthouse? My wife says we are lucky to have an apartment in a building that has elevators.

The real reward of columning for me has been the perpetual discovery of interesting people. Far from contributing anything to them, I have myself gained an education from them. The human race, for all the sorry gravel mixed into its grit, is wonderful. Meeting the people I have has given me a deep faith in the worth of people generally.

It has wiped cynicism from my being and made me an humble optimist. The letters I get from readers would do that even if I never got to meet the people themselves. They have taught me there is more hope for mankind than there is for rocks, and stones, and pollywogs and flowers.

The biggest danger a columnist faces, I think, is the danger of feeling he is important. Merely because he has an audience, large or small. But anytime he feels that way, if he just goes and looks at himself in the mirror, the feeling ought to pass away and be replaced by a belly laugh.

The prayer of most columnists is to make their deadline every day. But I think another good silent prayer might go something like this:

"Dear Lord, Please don't let me get pontifical. Keep me from taking the easy way out and writing to please people's prejudices. Let me gain again the wisdom of a child, and keep what mind I have open and free."

Well, now let's see what the next eight years will bring.

Washington Letter

By HERMAN R. ALLEN
(For JANE EADS)

WASHINGTON — The District of Columbia Health Department says that the chief drugs and narcotics to which adolescents and adults become addicted are alcohol, marijuana, benzedrine, cocaine, the "morphine group" and sleeping pills.

"With the exception of benzedrine and cocaine," the pamphlet observes that "the signs and symptoms of alcoholism are too well known to need detailed description." It then goes on to describe more fully the signs of addiction to:

MARIJUANA

"Smoking marijuana produces symptoms of mild intoxication. The individual may show silly behavior, be dreamy, with speech and thought disconnected. Marijuana smoke is an irritant to the eyes.

"Marijuana lea to taking heroin for a greater 'kick.'

"When marijuana is withdrawn, there may be a marked restlessness and high state of irritability."

BENZEDRINE (Amphetamine)

"This is not a narcotic but is habit-forming. Benzedrine stimulates an individual to great hyperactivity. Persons may become jittery and highly nervous... When benzedrine is withdrawn the person becomes sleepy and groggy.

COCAINE

"The results obtained from the use of cocaine are similar but more pronounced than those resulting from the use of benzedrine. The person cannot stand still. The after results are complete exhaustion from over-fatigue. When cocaine is withdrawn the person becomes lackadaisical, sleepy and groggy and may experience convulsions."

The pamphlet cautions that no one should jump to conclusions on the basis of the sumptoms it outlines. Eyes may be irritated by dust, soap or the onset of pink eye as well as by marijuana. And changes in normal behavior, like attacks of nervousness, "are most frequently due to causes other than the use of drugs and narcotics."

The booklet points out that a youngster's future could be blasted by an erroneous off-the-cuff diagnosis of drug addiction.

Humorist Gelett Burgess Is Dead

CARMEL, Calif. —(AP)— Gelett Burgess, the humorist who wrote the "Purple Cow" and regretted it for 60 years, is dead.

The 85-year-old author was stricken with a heart attack last week. He died yesterday.

Aside from the "Purple Cow" verse Burgess regretted very little about life.

"Life is too short for regrets," he said shortly after moving here two years ago.

"Living is the pursuit of fun. If you want money, you specialize. If you want fun, you create new things. Most of my books I wrote in fun. That's why they don't sell."

Some did, though. His "Goops and How to Be Them" was a best-seller 30 years ago. Other favorites were "The Lively City O'Ligg," "Why Men Hate Women" and "The Rubaiyat of Omar Cayenne."

The Sport Reflector

By JIMMY ELLIS

The future of at least one member of the Coastal Plain League took a new turn late last week. Goldsboro, which has been the outright property of the St. Louis Cardinals for the last two years, will operate independently next year.

The announcement came from the offices of William Walsingham, vice-president of the St. Louis organization. It was no surprise to followers of the Goldsboro club and other interested persons.

The Cardinals have offered to stay in Goldsboro with a working agreement but it is doubtful as to whether or not the Goldsboro officials will be willing to accept such a set-up. Ed Worley, the boss of Goldsboro baseball, has been in the game a long time and has had a miserable time with working agreements since the league was reorganized in 1946.

The Goldsboro club first tried a working agreement with the New Orleans Pelicans of the Southern Association but it was a bum deal and neither end of the agreement had much to show for the year except arguments. The Detroit Tigers were next but a hitch in the baseball rules took care of that.

In 1948 and 1949, the Goldsboro club was strictly independent but it wasn't able to do too much in league competition. The Cardinals promised a change from that when they bought the franchise.

The 1950 Cardinal team was little different from the independent clubs and even sunk a little bit by ending deep in eighth place. The fans got disgusted with the brand of baseball put out by the organization's team in Goldsboro and stayed away. Walsingham, after the 1950 season, determined that Goldsboro was going to have a good team for 1951. Goldsboro got the good team but the fans still stayed away.

It is very understandable why the Cardinals should pull out even though it looked for a while at the end of the year as if they would give Goldsboro one more try.

The latest word from Mr. Worley and the Goldsboro directors is that they're going to be back in the league next year if it operates. But they're also interested in operating in an eight team league. That means that somebody is going to have to replace both Tarboro and Greenville. Tarboro is ready and willing to get back in—to kick Kinston's collective teeth down a few Eagle throats. I don't know what the situation is in Greenville, but I think that some effort should be made to get organized baseball back into this area. How about it?

It will be interesting to note what effect Roy Campanella's beaning will have on the Brooklyn Dodgers in the remaining days of the National League race.

Campy's value to the club is unmistakable and if he is forced to sit out a while, it could be murder for the Dodgers who were four games ahead of the Giants Tuesday afternoon. His absence was quickly noted as the Chicago Cubs ganged up on Don Newcombe and Clyde King to overcome a 3-0 Dodger lead and beat Brooklyn 5-3.

It is thought now that Campanella's injury is not too serious. Charley Dressen had better be praying that these thoughts are the truth.

Indians And Giants Gain In Loop Races

Indians Take Bosox As Giants Lick Reds

By CARL LUNDQUIST
United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UP)—The Indians are punchless, the Yankees act punchy, the Red Sox are brittle and crunchy. The Dodgers are reeling and the Giants are free-wheeling—and that's the quick sizeup on the incredible pennant races today.

The Indians get fewer hits than any team in the American League but the last place Browns, and if they should get into the World Series it will be the lowest team batting average since the war-time Tigers of 1945, who hit the modern low with a .256 mark. Cleveland now hovers around .260.

But the Indians still come up with the timely blows that win games as they demonstrated once more yesterday in their 6 to 4 victory over the Red Sox that put them back within three percentage points of the pace-setting Yankees, who blew a 7 to 1 decision to the White Sox while acting like old fighters who had been hit in the head too often.

And in the National League, the high-speed Giants who have won 30 of their last 36 games, came up with a 6 to 5 victory over Cincinnati, while Brooklyn lost, 7 to 1, to St. Louis as their lead was cut to three games.

Chicago's Billy Pierce won some revenge as he gained credit for his 14th victory, the White Sox making it plain they hadn't forgotten the night of July 27 at Yankee Stadium when rain wiped out a rally that gave Pierce a defeat in a game he appeared to have won.

The Indians roughed up the injury-laden Red Sox as Mike (Big Bear) Garcia pitched his 20th victory.

The Giants needed a quick relief job from George Spencer to save their 10th straight victory of the year at Cincinnati as he cut off a three-run rally with two on base in the ninth.

Brooklyn seemed panicky all the way as rookie Tom Poholsky, who had lost four games to the Dodgers this year, came through to pitch an easy eight-hit triumph for the Cards.

Tommy Byrne was the whole show in an "out-of-this-world" night at Washington in which he pitched a three-hit, 8 to 0 shutout for the Browns and delivered a grand slam home run—first for the club this year—then came into the second game and hit a 10th inning pinch-single to win it, 3 to 2.

In the only other American League game, the Tigers topped the Athletics, 8 to 6, as Johnny Lipon made five straight hits, while elsewhere in the National League, the Pirates edged the Braves, 6 to 5, as Ralph Kiner hit his 41st homer, and the Cubs topped the Phillies, 7 to 4, getting 1 hits as Randy Jackson, Frankie Baumholtz, and rookie Harry Chiti, collected three each.

1951 Vanceboro Eleven Is Young

VANCEBORO—Reports coming out of Vanceboro High School this year state that the football eleven there is one of the lightest and inexperienced ever fielded by the school.

Coach George Wood, a former East Carolina player who is now in his second year as mentor of the Red Devils, has but one man on the squad who has more than one year of varsity experience. He is Halfback Delos Toler.

Toler, a senior, is expected to carry the brunt of the Vanceboro attack. Only five other men on the squad have had game experience and they are counted on for the majority of Vanceboro's power this season.

The team opened the season last week against a strong Beaufort eleven, losing by a one-sided 62-0 margin. Swansboro comes to Vanceboro Friday afternoon for the initial home appearance for the Farm Life gridders. Vanceboro opens their Coastal Conference activity with a game in Robersonville on October 5.

The remainder of the 1951 schedule follows:

Sept. 21—Swansboro (here)
Sept. 28—Richlands (there)
Oct. 5—Robersonville* (there)
Oct. 12—Ayden* (there)
Oct. 19—South Edgecombe* (here)
Oct. 26—Farmville* (here)
Nov. 2—Swansboro (there)
Nov. 9—Snow Hill (here)

Bums Not Worried Says Dressen

ST. LOUIS (UP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers aren't worried about the New York Giants—honest they aren't.

At least, that's what they said after a 7-1 St. Louis Cardinal victory over the Dodgers and New York's 6-5 triumph over Cincinnati cut Brooklyn's lead to three lonely games last night.

From Manager Chuck Dressen on down, Brooklyn's heroes insisted the Giants hardly have chance.

"We're too good a team to keep losing," Dressen explained.

"We're likely to break out today and win six straight. If we hit our stride again, it will be all over."

Bowl Teams Profit

DALLAS —(AP)— Since the Southwest Conference took over the Cotton Bowl classic in 1941, all receipts less taxes and stadium rental have gone to the competing teams. In 1951 each team received $119,611 for an afternoon of football play.

Phantoms Prepare For Morehead City

With their second game of the year coming up Friday night, Greenville High's Green Phantoms have worked on their defensive play for the first two days this week.

The entire practice period Monday afternoon was dedicated to the defensive squad. Head Coach Bill Kittrell led his charges through an hour long drill, stressing tackling and defensive backfield play.

A thirty-minute scrimmage followed with the second string running plays from Morehead City's, the opponent for Friday night, T formation. The first team defensive unit worked against the runners, setting up their patterns for the game.

The Phantoms 280-pound tackle, Wilton McLawhorn, has progressed rapidly since putting on a uniform for the first time last week. He is expected to see a great deal of play this week. He and tackle Bob Tindal have shone in this week's practice drills, with back Guy Smith also coming in for his share of praise.

Good news came to the field Monday in the form of Captain Joe Rowland, who has been on the sidelines for three weeks with a dislocated shoulder suffered in an intra-squad game. Rowland dressed in light equipment and took several exercises although he is under physician's orders not to do contact work yet. He is expected to see some action against Morehead City. He is an end.

Big Four Teams Preparing For Opening Games

Coach Carl Snavely said today senior Skeet Hesmer will probably mastermind Tar Heel tactics in North Carolina's opener against N.C. State Saturday.

A fullback converted to blocking back, Hesmer has varsity experience which gives him an edge over sophomore Van Weatherspoon and freshman George Foti.

University ticket officials say more than 35,000 spectators are expected for the game.

Elsewhere in the Southern Conference, duke trainers counted three regulars out of the lineup against South Carolina Saturday and said a fourth might miss the fracas.

Quarterbacks Joe Self and Glenn Wild and tackle Ed Meadows are not expected to get into the game. Defensive end Walter Smith returned to practice yesterday after two weeks on the sidelines, but it was uncertain whether he would play against the Gamecocks.

A pair of Smiths, Charlie of Wilmington and Red of Winston-Salem, looked good in the running department as the Dukes ground off the rough spots before unveiling their 1951 offensive.

Wake Forest's Demon Deacons plowed through their last heavy workout today and prepared to make their first trip of the season to Boston tomorrow.

The Deacons will hold light workouts tomorrow morning and will leave by plane tomorrow afternoon. Coach Tom Rogers said he planned to take 37 players for the Friday night meeting with Boston College.

Rogers had his top four teams working on offensive plays against the reserves yesterday. The practice concluded with the teams alternating in making defense stands at the goal line.

N.C. State's big tailback, Alex Webster, occupied an infirmary bed today while the rest of the Wolfpack squad occupied itself with final preparations for meeting North Carolina.

Dr. Joseph Coombs said a severe cold would keep Webster in bed for at least two days. Replacing him in the State drills were junior Ted Potts and fancy passing Paul O'Hara, both effective operators at the tailback spot.

Tackle J. C. Britt of Fayetteville paced the State line in action against North Carolina T-formation plays run by the reserves. Defensive halfbacks George Suda, George McArthur and Jim O'Rourke did nicely in stopping the aerial attack.

Winston Gridder Fatally Injured

WINSTON-SALEM —(AP)— The first football death in Winston-Salem since 1923 was recorded here yesterday when James Purcell, 17, was fatally injured during a practice session of the Atkins High School (Negro) football team.

Purcell, a letterman on the team, died at Kate Bitting Reynolds Memorial Hospital one hour after he was injured. His death is the first football fatality here since 20-year-old Leo Caldwell was killed during a football game between Reynolds High School and Charlotte Oct. 20, 1923.

Ayden Prepares For First Game

AYDEN—Coach Stuart Tripp sent his Ayden High Tornadoes through extensive offensive drills yesterday in preparation for the season's opener on Friday with Williamston on the Martin County lads' home field.

The Tornadoes had an intra-squad scrimmage Monday afternoon, with Tripp reportedly pleased with the results. "The team looks better now than at any time this season," Tripp stated following the practice.

Ayden went to LaGrange last Friday to knock-heads with the Lenoir County boys. The Tornadoes outscored their opponents, 12-0. LaGrange threatened only once as one of Darrell Worthington's Ayden passes was intercepted and carried to the one yard line before the LaGrange attack sputtered out.

Halfback John Cheek carried the Ayden running attack, leading the way on double reverse plays which accounted for several long gains. Tackles Randall Harrington and Gordon Hart led the forward wall during the long scrimmage. Back Billy Powell McGlohon intercepted two passes for the Tornadoes.

FAST MAN

DURHAM—Jack Kistler, husky 218-pound sophomore fullback on Duke University's football team, is a fast man for his size. He won the 100-yard dash event as a member of Duke's freshman track team last spring. He also took part in the weight events.

Maybe you're missing something BIG

We know how you feel when a car has given you faithful service. You like it. You're loyal to it. And that's only human.

But just suppose you found out that some other car could make familiar roads seem a lot smoother.

Suppose some other car held the curves in a way you'd never felt before.

Suppose some other car had more thrilling power—steered like a dream—held its course like an airliner on the beam—and let you finish a long day's drive feeling daisy fresh.

Wouldn't you feel you're missing something big unless you tried it out?

There is such a car. Its name is Buick.

It has big soft coil springs on every wheel. It has a Fireball Engine. It has a "front-end geometry" that does miracles with steering. And it has Dynaflow Drive.*

And incidentally, it wears a price tag that makes it a very smart buy compared to anything else you own.

We'd like to have you try this car. You'll never know what you're missing till you do.

How about giving us a call—or coming in to see us real soon?

Edward J. Rutan of the department of English at East Carolina College has accepted an invitation to appear as guest speaker before English teachers of the Rocky Mount high school at a dinner Tuesday evening, October 9, at 7 o'clock in the Ricks Hotel. The meeting is an annual occasion. Jessie Johnson of the high school faculty is in charge of arrangements for this year's program.

"Creative English" will be Mr. Rutan's topic, and the talk will lay emphasis upon the teaching of composition. Among the audience of Rocky Mount teachers will be a number of Mr. Rutan's former students during the summer sessions at East Carolina.

Mr. Rutan is the author of "Successful Devices in Written English" and of a workbook in composition published by Harper and Brothers. He has acted as consultant to various public school faculties of this area in setting up programs of remedial reading in their schools.

Welfare Dept. Notes

K. T. Futrell said the plea, "I want the lien law explained to me," is frequently made to members of the Welfare Department staff.

The lien law which was passed in the 1951 General Assembly of North Carolina goes into effect October 1, 1951. The law affects Old Age Assistance recipients who own property or a share in property. It provides that Old Age Assistance payments made on or after October 1, 1951, will be a lien against the property of the recipient.

At the death of the recipient, the county attorney will file a claim against the estate. The lien will be for exactly the amount the recipient has received after October 1, 1951. The lien is not to be enforced so long as the husband or wife or a minor child of the deceased is occupying the property as a homesite. Disposing of property in order to evade this law makes a person immediately ineligible for public assistance.

Six case workers from the Pitt County Welfare Department attended the Caseworker's Association meeting which was held in Williamston September 12.

Those attending were: Mrs. Peggy Evans, Miss Ola Ross, Mrs. Madeline Vincent, Mrs. Elizabeth Avery, and Paul Hodul, case work Hughes, child wefare worker.

Miss Hughes, leader of the morning session, presented a film, "Preface to a Life". Mrs. Evans was one of the speakers on the panel discussion, "Professional Standards for Social Workers", held in the afternoon.

LET US SPRAY

NIANTIC, Ill. —(UP)— Church members had to spray the Niantic Methodist church with DDT late this summer to permit Sunday morning services to be held. A swarm of bees lodged over a window outside the church and one Sunday forced the congregation to flee. Men put on protective clothing and removed the swarm, then sprayed the church with DDT.

Queen City Murder Case

By Wm. G. Bogart

Chapter 1

The muffled beat of the dance band, coming through the heavy stage door outside the dressing room, reached Irma Lears. Somewhere a door opened and a girl's quick, light footsteps tap-tapped hurriedly along the corridor and faded toward the front of the night club.

Jeannette glanced at the little clock on the folding brown leather frame on her dresser; ten-thirty—that she was on at eleven o'clock. She would sing only two numbers tonight; then she'd leave. Never mind the late show. Somehow the club could manage. She must be ready to get away from here right after the eleven o'clock performance.

She was tall, slim-built. Smooth, strong shoulders showed above her slip. She moved around the room with impatient haste, picking up a pair of hose, panties, assorted handkerchiefs, and slipping them into an open suitcase that rested on a chair. Her eyes were sultry and dark and worried. Shaded with blue mascara, they looked more violet than blue.

There was a quick knock on the door.

She straightened, gaze swerving toward the door, her eyebrows flattening into pencil-thin straight lines.

She stood unmoving for ten seconds.

The knock was repeated.

"Who is it?" she asked. She seemed to be holding her breath.

"It's Irma, honey," the girl's voice called, a young voice, full of vitality.

Jeannette moved quickly across the small dressing room and unlocked the door. She turned the key in the lock after the slender redheaded girl had hurried into the room. "He phoned again, didn't he?" she demanded.

The girl who had entered the room had paused, turning, looking questioningly at the tall brunette. She frowned and said, "Jeannette, you're worried about something." She glanced around the dressing room, saw the open suitcase. "What are you packing for? What's wrong?"

"Irma," the tall girl repeated, "he phoned, didn't he?"

The girl named Irma was small, shapely, with the slim hips of a boy and the stright square shoulders of a dancer. She wore a brief flared skirt that covered barely four inches of her thighs, and a "bra" adorned with many tiny sequins that caught and reflected the light. It was a dancer's skimpy costume.

Irma jerked her head. "He wants you to call him right back. It's the second time—"

The redheaded dancer watched her an instant, then jumped up quickly and held her arm. "Please, honey, tell me? You act almost as though you're frightened about something." Then she said, wide-eyed, "You are frightened, Jeannette!"

Jeannette sat down suddenly on the narrow couch. She stared intently at the slim girl. "What did he say besides that? Did he say anything?" Her eyes were night blue.

"Just that he wanted you to call him back."

"Where was he?"

"He didn't tell me. He didn't say anything."

Irma, watching the taller girl's face, sat down on the couch, took her friend's hand. "You're afraid of him, aren't you?"

For a moment Jeannette was immobile. Then she said, her voice hardly more than a whisper, "Two nights ago I began to wonder about him. Last night, I was certain—"

Irma shook her head, still confused. "You've gone out with him so many times. He's met you here, taken you different places—"

"Have you ever noticed," the dark-haired singer said, "that he never comes in here, inside the club? Only that first night, the time I met him." Her fingers were trembling. "He always sends someone in for me. It occurred to me just the other night, he doesn't want to...to be seen!"

"Why? What do you suppose—"

"For instance," the singer went on swiftly, "how often have you ever seen him, Irma?"

The younger girl stared, startled. "I've never seen him! I'd never thought of that. He's just a name—George Bent—and I've talked to him only on the phone when he left messages for you."

"George Bent," Jeannette said quietly. She stood up, turned, looked down at the redheaded girl. "George Bent!" She laughed harshly, but her eyes did not change expression. "That's not his name. I'm convinced of that now!"

"Then—" Irma kept watching her. "Who is he?"

"I don't know."

"But—"

Jeannette asked, "Baby, have you ever been afraid of a man? Really afraid?"

Irma thought that over for a moment. Then she admitted, "Well, there was a boy in high school once—"

The tall singer's lips curved in a grim smile. "You don't understand the kind of fear I mean," she said quickly. "I can't go into details now. There was a guy once . . . I was twenty. Later—something happened. He got in a jam. I missed a rap by the skin of my teeth."

"A rap?" the girl Irma questioned.

"Prison."

Irma gasped.

"I've watched my step ever since," Jeannette explained. "I've never met the right guy. . . But this fellow George Bent, I thought he was all right. Then, the other night—"

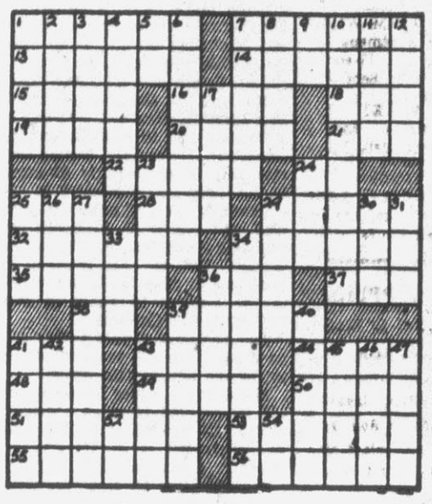

"Yes?"

The tall brunette shook her head, a curious expression in her dark eyes. "There's something... he's mixed up in something..." She gave an uneasy movement of her shoulders. Her skin was pale beneath the make-up. "I just want to get away from him, that's all!"

Korean Souvenir Is Delicate Item To Cart Around

WITH U. S. SECOND DIVISION —American soldiers are noted for being souvenir hunters. Few however carry as delicate an item as Cpl. William Fleming, Greenville, N. C. Wrapped tightly between layers of clothes in his cargo pack is a fragile glass vase, the type which could be purchased in any "five and dime" store for 25 cents.

Fleming found the vase in a bombed-out Korea village when he first came to Korea four months ago. "It was about the only thing in the village that wasn't smashed," Fleming said. "So I decided to take it along as a sort of reminder.

"But I'm kind of sorry I ever picked it up," the corporal confessed. "I must have sweated off 20 pounds worrying about breaking it every time we moved.

Cpl. Fleming is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Fleming, Jr.

Pitt Farmers Receive $6,500 In PMA Funds

Farmers of Pitt County received $6.500 from the federal government yesterday as they applied for funds from the Production and Marketing Administration to help them in their fall agricultural programs.

Fifty orders were written during the day for seed, lime, fertilizer, and winter cover crops while other farmers were receiving approval for earth removing practices and permanent pastures. The money paid out was actually $6.500.60 for the programs and is much smaller than was paid at the same time last year.

That is due to the fact that the rate of pay per acre was lowered this year. Under the 1952 program farmers will receive assistance in the amount of $1.50 per acre of cleared land, whereas the base rate last year was $3.50. It was lowered because funds on hand were depleted before all farmers could be included in the assistance.

As yet the local PMA county committee has not been notified just how much Pitt will receive for its 12-month program. However, the change in base rate should allow enough money to assist all farmers applying for prior approval.

James T. Meredith, secretary to the county committee, said, "Due to the change in the rate per acre, we feel as though we'll have enough money to go around."

Concerning the base rate, Meredith said that minimum payment for each serial number farm will be $25 with a maximum of $1,000. Farmers may apply for prior approval on their programs each day of the week except Saturday.

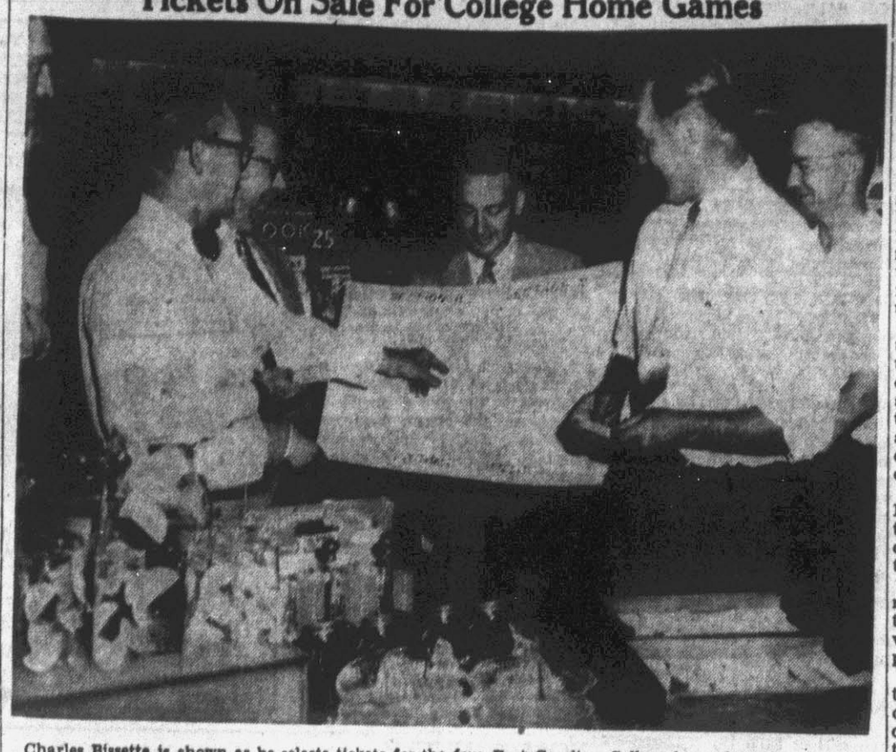

The office also approved 30 orders for programs to be carried out under the 1951 program. They amounted to $1,890.34 and will be paid out of funds remaining in the 1950 allocation to Pitt.

Tickets On Sale For College Home Games

Charles Bissette is shown as he selects tickets for the four East Carolina College home football games, as the sale of season tickets swings into high gear. Pointing to the chart, a guide for buyers, since they can pick out their seats, Bissette indicates to Dr. N. M. Jorgensen his choice. The season tickets are on sale this week and interested buyers are urged to obtain theirs early. The reserve seats are in the new stands which are now being built in preparation for the first home game here in October. (Reflector Staff Photo by Roy Hardee).

Legion Official . . .

and orphans. He said the American Legion drafted the bill that provided for establishment of the Veterans' Bureau and then he enumerated the "Americanism program."

He recited the story of the American Legion's effort after World War I to persuade Congress to establish a national defense program, and recalled that the powers-that-be in Washington rejected it.

'Eighteen years afterwards," the Legion commander said, "we had World War II. At the end of World War II the American Legion again set out to persuade Congress to provide for universal military training, and they turned us down.

"Now we have the Korean situation," and then he pointed out that "the United States has more than a third of a million men buried on foreign soil.

"Survival now is the watchword!" the speaker declared.

State Commander Parker, before starting to discuss the Hoover Commission, said "I got mad today, the first time since I was made commander of the North Carolina American Legion Division.

"I received a message from the national commander of the American Legion that a committee of 41 Americans, and headed by General Lucius Clay, Admiral Chester Nimitz and Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, is supporting the Hoover Commission to gut the Veterans' Administration.

"The men heading this committee know absolutely nothing about veterans' affairs or the wants and needs of disabled veterans and their widows and orphans," Parker declared. 'And I want to go on record now as saying that the North Carolina Department of the American Legion will fight this thing to the bitter end.

"These 41 committeemen are questioning the ability of the men who belong to the veterans' organizations that have a membership of more than 4,000,000. They have gone on record as doing everything to destroy the Veterans' Administration," he declared.

The state commander took time out to declare that "Some state civic organizations, knowing nothing about veterans' affairs, are meddling in this matter, just as they did two years ago. History will show," the speaker declared, "that they failed then to hinder our national government in assisting wounded, sick and disabled veterans and their widows and orphans."

Commander Lester Turnage recognized special guests. Norman Chambliss, manager of the Pitt County Agricultural Fair, told about the new fair grounds and buildings and reminded that this is one of the several fairs in the state approved by the N. C. Department of Agriculture. Pitt County farm agents and home demonstration agents were given credit for good work for the fair, and Frank Taylor, chairman of the Grounds and Building Committee, was given a vote of thanks.

DREAM CAME TRUE

TOLLESTON, Ind. —(UP) Peggy Keay chose her mother as her companion on an all-expense Cuban holiday which she won as queen of Tolleston's centennial celebration. Peggy's boss rounded out her dream by giving her $100 for spending money and two weeks off to take the trip.

McMahon's . . .

force will lead us all and the possible solution if we try reason.

This time he suggested, as before, a special session of the U. N. General Assembly for the "single purpose of stopping the armaments race" by working out an agreement for disarmament and control of the atom.

And as evidence of this country's good will, he suggested congress pledge itself—once there was real agreement on disarmament—to do this:

That all the countries, including the United States, should chip in and, through the United Nations, help raise the world's living standards by agreeing to spend for five years a large part of the money saved through disarmament.

If he had said just this and nothing else those who share his hope that maybe in the end it's possible for reason to triumph could have nodded and murmered that his thoughts were noble.

If that's all he had to say, of cused him of being a dreamy-eyed Yale man who somehow had drifted into the U. S. Senate which likes to pride itself on its realism.

But McMahon didn't stop there. While he offered hope and a proposition for peace arrived at reasonably, he himself demonstrated that he is quite realistic about all this himself.

He did so by offering two suggestions, the one explained above for peace through peaceful means, and this:

He urged a vast speed-up in the production of U. S. atomic weapons, so the armed forces can be equipped with them in far greater variety, for "more security for the United States."

In other words, while he suggested peaceful settlement, he urged the U. S. to be prepared with overwhelming and terrible force, just in case.

It seems likely that his startling suggestions about new weapons will receive more Senate attention than his suggestion for peaceful settlement.

is signed there is no way for Russia to get the oil from Abadan because she doesn't have enough tankers and it would take years to build a pipeline across Iran to the Russian broder.

The potential of Wrold War III is in this situation. If Britain decide to protect her 300 technicians by force, Russia has a treaty with Iran which permits her to move troops into the country. After weeks of negotiation the time has arrived when somethin has to give. There is nothing modern natic will fight for quicker than oil.

General Strike Ties Up Italy

ROME (UP)—A 24-hour nationwide general strike today by about 1,500,000 civil service workers seeking higher pay halted Italy's trains and disrupted mail, telephone and telegraph service.

Thousands of tourists were stranded by the strike which started at one minute after midnight (6:01 p.m. EST). The rail tieup threatened to be the worst since the bloody general strike of 1920.

Skeleton staffs worked in post offices and long distance telephone and telegraph exchanges.

Shanghai Killings Are Unabated

HONG KONG —(AP)— Shanghai's wave of September executions soared to 185 Friday with the public killing of 119 more "counter-revolutionaries."

The city's Liberation Daily reported the executions. It said 66 persons were executed Sept. 9 and 11.

A Canton dispatch to the independent Wah Kiu Yat Po quoted Koo Tat-Sun, vice chairman of the Kwangtung Peoples' (Communist) Government as reporting that 28,332 persons were executed between Oct. 1, 1950 and Aug. 10.

Kiwanis To Observe National Kids' Day Friday's Meeting

Jimmie Brewer, chairman of the Boys' and Girls' Committee, is in charge of the program at the Kiwanis Club's meeting Friday evening at 6:30.

Warren Carroll, director of the city recreation program, will direct the program, which will be centered about "National Kids' Day," a national event now being observed for the third consecutive year.

Kiwanis International and 3,300 Kiwanis clubs sponsor the event. Jimmie Fidler, Hollywood news radio commentator, is president of the National Kids' Day Foundation.

Quaker Explains Tax 'Shortages'

EARLHAM, Ia., —(AP)— After a Quaker wife explained to the small crowd why she and her husband refused to pay part of their income taxes, an Internal Revenue officer yesterday auctioned off their 1939 Chevrolet two-door sedan for $145 as part payment for back taxes.

Mrs. Arthur H. Emery Jr., told the silent crowd of about 35 that they refused to pay about 30 per cent of their 1947-48 income taxes and about 70 per cent of their 1949 total because those were the amounts the Bureau of the Budget estimated would go for military expense.

H. H. Jopling, of the Bureau of Internal Revenue at Des Moines, the auctioneer, said the Emery's owed $240 on 1947-48-49 income taxes.

"But we did not pocket the money," she declared. "We sent it to the Fellowship or Reconciliation, which is genuinely organized for peace and fellowship."

Emery, 27, who served a jail sentence as a conscientious objector during World War II, is in Europe on a bicycle "peace mission" with three other young Americans. The Emerys have no children. F. A. Leeper, Dexter, Ia., hardware and coal dealer, was successful bidder on the automobile.

Blames Forging Of Checks To Jilting By Girl

DETROIT (UP)— A jilted Air Force sergeant who admitted forging 100 checks worth $12,000 to finance a search for his fiancee, said today "I need a mental examination.

"I just can't understand why I passed those checks," Sgt. Richard Bittles said.

Federal Judge Thomas P Thornton agreed to the mental test, but cancelled a $1,000 bond on which Bittles was freed July 19 pending trial on charges of impersonating an Air Force officer.

Bittles said his fiancee "flew out on me" last March in San Francisco after he had given her a $4,000 engagement ring. He said he went AWOL, searching across the nation for her, paying his way by passing worthless checks.
