

Reds Again Take Heartbreak Ridge

Four Americans Fought Way To Top Of Dominating Hill Only To Be Forced Back By Enemy Regiment; Battleship Joins East Coast Fighting

8TH ARMY HQ., Korea (UP)—The battleship New Jersey hammered away against the hills on the eastern front today to aid United Nations infantrymen battling desperately against the Communists.

The big battle wagon moved in near the coast as its gunners blasted enemy-held peaks with pinpoint fire from nine 16-inch guns.

"They knocked three feet of real estate off one hill," an enthusiastic air observer reported.

Four Americans fought their way to the peak of "Heartbreak" hill north of Yangju, on the bloody eastern front, only to be forced to surrender it two hours later, despite reinforcements, to a Communist regiment.

The four Americans had survived a vicious bayonet and hand grenade battle through the night to reach the summit of the hill in the crisis of a bitter 15-day fight for its control. Other members of their unit were forced to fall back from the peak which controls the rugged surrounding area.

After the exhausted quartet gained the crest, American reinforcements moved up quickly but were fiercely resisted. Reds drove all U.N. troops off the peak just before dawn Monday.

Streams of deadly machinegun fire, mortar barrages, and small arms fire punctuated the all-night clash.

U.N. troops who failed to reach the peak from the opposite side held a position on the slopes after digging out Communists with bayonets and hand grenades.

U.N. troops tried to seize "Heartbreak" hill in two thrusts for the peak from the north and south flanks, starting before dawn Sunday.

Just to the west, other U.N. forces fought an all-day battle to conquer another important crest. Heavy Red reinforcements were reported building up west of Kumwha in the old "Iron Triangle" area, farther west of "Heartbreak" hill. They used increasingly heavy amounts of small arms, mortar and artillery fire including that from self-propelled guns.

Proof of the Communists' aggressive intent by all means was shown in an enemy raid—although a sickly attempt—on Kimp'o airfield outside Seoul, the peacetime South Korean capital.

Three obsolete P-51 bi-wing planes dropped two bombs—one a dud—over the airport early Sunday. One plane was shot down by a Marine night fighter—the third "Bedcheck Charlie" type aircraft to be shot down in the past three months.

A Navy announcement disclosed the U. S. destroyer Perkins was struck twice by Communist shore batteries during a 16-day bombardment in support of ground troops. No serious damage, the announcement said.

Crises For Our Allies

Britain Unable To Commit Itself To Any New Policies Until After Elections; DeGaulle's Nationalists Plan Defeat Of Plevin Government Decisions

By HARRY FERGUSON

America's two most powerful allies—Britain and France—have entered a period of crisis just at a time when the world-wide resistance to Communism is gathering momentum.

London will be unable to commit itself to any definite new policies until after Oct. 25 when the British voters decide whether the Labor government remains in power or whether Winston Churchill and his Conservatives take over. Definite resistance to the plans for the defense of Western Europe have developed in France and the government, as usual, is balanced on a razor's edge.

Two men who are heroes of the Allied defeat of the Axis in World War II—Churchill and Gen. Charles de Gaulle—are the men seeking to overthrow the governments and assume power themselves. The danger to the anti-Communist coalition is greater in France than it is in Britain.

Churchill is an old-time enemy of Communism. He and Stalin never have seen eye-to-eye, not even when they were Allies sitting around the same table and drafting

Gifts And Loans From Lithofold Told At Inquiry

Former Gov't Employee Describes Favors From St. Louis Printing Firm

WASHINGTON (AP)—A former government employee told today of receiving expensive gifts and borrowing $6,100 from an official of American Lithofold Corp. When that company was the Air Force.

The testimony at a senate inquiry came from Charles B. Moring, who said he left his $6,400-a-year publications job with the Air Force last March to become the $25,000-a-year eastern division sales manager for American Lithofold.

Moring said Lithofold, a St. Louis printing firm, obtained a number of contracts from the Air Force but that he couldn't estimate how many or of what value. He declared that he never influenced, or tried to influence, the awarding of contracts.

Moring said he received gifts including a television set, a movie camera and projector, a ham and a turkey from a Lithofold official, Robert A. Blauner.

Blauner is the son of the company's president, R. J. Blauner. The younger Blauner is now in Cuba.

The Senate Investigations Subcommittee is looking into charges that American Lithofold used political influence to get $565,000 in loans from the government's Reconstruction Finance Corporation (RFC).

The name of William M. Boyle, Jr., Democratic national chairman, has been brought into these charges. He has denied he influenced the loans.

Senator Nixon (R-Calif.) demanded that the senators ask Boyle to sub-

Three-Day Wait On King's Hopes

Will Take That Long To Determine Surgery Outcome

LONDON (UP)—King George dozed in a semi-coma today, and a court official said it would be at least three days before any real hope could begin for the monarch's recovery following a lung operation.

After a consultation at the palace, a court official said:

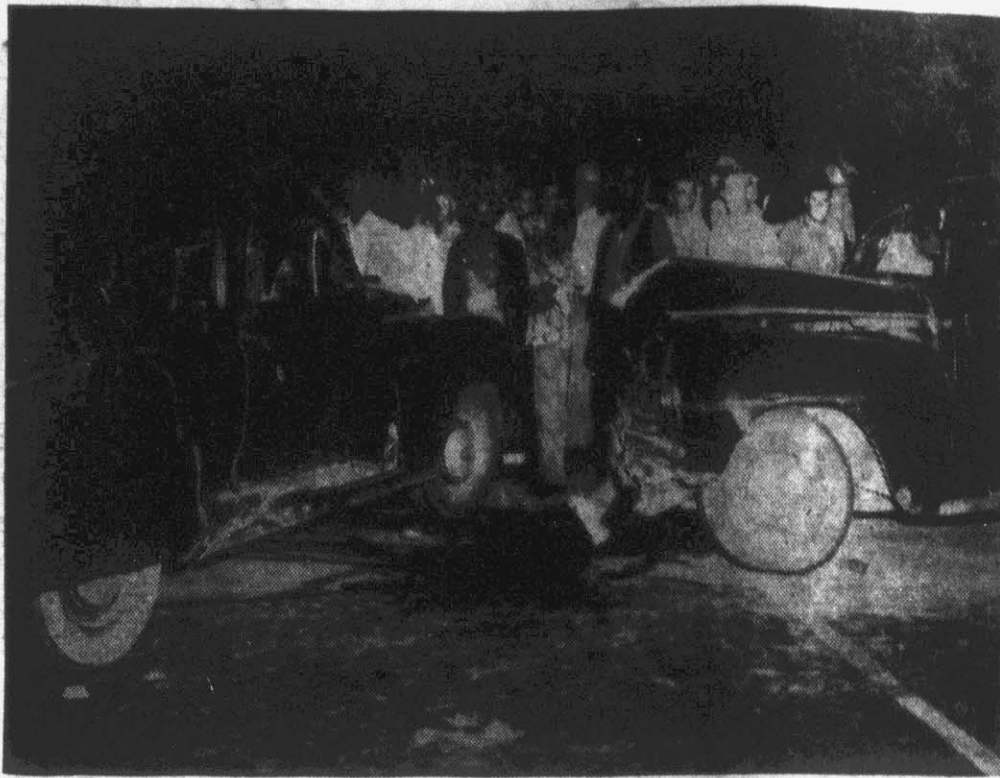

"I will be a very unhappy man for the next three days. It will be that long before the doctors can begin to have any real hope, or basis, for concluding that their work may be successful."

In addition to the shock of the operation, court officials worried over possible complications because of the chronic arterial condition in his legs.

Princess Elizabeth, heiress to the throne, kept in close touch with Buckingham Palace ready for a possible emergency call.

A Buckingham Palace medical bulletin said the king spent a restless night after an operation in which part or all of one lung was cut away and also, it was understood, one or more ribs.

Man And Woman Die In Accident North Of Farmville; Three Other Occupants Of Truck Escape Unharmed

FARMVILLE—Two Negroes were killed instantly near here yesterday morning when the log truck which they were riding failed to make a curve and turned over after going into a ditch.

The fatal accident, the Highway Patrol reported, occurred at 10 o'clock on a rural road some three and one-half miles north of Farmville.

Patrolman Bruce Jackson, assisted by Cpl. H. M. Morrow, and Pfc. Whitley made the investigation. Ernest Mitchell, 31, of Scotland Neck, driver of the death truck, was killed in the Farmville city jail pending an inquest in Farmville Tuesday night.

Killed were Mary E. Ellis, 46, of Farmville, who died of internal injuries, and Richard Putnam of Stony Creek, Va., 40, who died of a broken neck.

Both of the dead persons were seated on the right hand side of the truck and the woman was thrown into the windshield while the man's neck was broken in the crash. Both died instantly.

Adult Education Meeting Tonight

Long List Of Proffered Courses Depends On Enrollment

Another meeting will be held tonight in the Austin Auditorium of the college for the purpose of organizing adult courses.

Last week a meeting was held in the auditorium to see how many people would be interested in taking adult courses. The number of persons present was not enough to organize classes, so another meeting will be held tonight at 7:30.

The courses will be offered for non-credit or for credit. Even those persons who have not completed high school will be eligible to take the non-credit courses.

If there is sufficient demand, courses will be offered in speech, philosophy, German, Spanish, literature, creative writing, current world issues and happenings, everyday problems in science, elementary photography, typewriting, shorthand, office machines, accounting, business law, federal tax, salesmanship, music appreciation, opera, or other music courses.

J. D. Messick, college president, said the courses offered depend on the possible enrollment.

No Crowds Greet Duke At Station

LONDON (UP)—A lone figure stepped from a train at Victoria station this morning. There were no crowds to greet him.

The scene proved one, and for all that King George VI has won the hearts of his people. It took the shadow of tragedy to show how complete was the king's victory.

For the man who stepped from the train was the Duke of Windsor. This was the first time anyone could remember that his return to London had not been greeted by still loyal crowds.

Marine Housing Conditions Bad

Families Living In Barns, Hen Houses And Tool Sheds

WASHINGTON (AP)—Marines at Camp Lejeune, N. C., live in mule barns, hen houses and tool sheds converted into homes for the fighters and their families.

Conditions are shocking, protesting is shameful, said Senator Lyndon Johnson (D-Tex.), chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, which investigated the situation.

The housing shortage at Camp Lejeune is critical, he stated in an official report released yesterday.

"Most of the government-owned trailers at Camp Lejeune are shabby and run-down. Extremely overcrowded conditions exist. It is impossible to connect trailers to septic tanks. There is fire hazard at the bounds of the post," the report said.

Johnson reported ten marine families, including 25 people, pay a total of $5,000 for one dilapidated house in the city of Jacksonville near Lejeune.

As bad as things are for marines and their folks at Lejeune now, Johnson predicted, the housing situation around the camp will become worse since the marines anticipate a further build-up of strength.

Mailing Invitations To EC Alumni For Homecoming

Invitations to Homecoming Day for Alumni of East Carolina College, October 6, are being mailed to approximately 2,000 graduates of the college this week, James W. Butler, college alumni secretary, has announced. The invitations, attractively illustrated with photographs, announce a program of varied activities, including a parade, a luncheon, a dance, and a football game between East Carolina and Elon.

Charles Self of Greensboro, president of the Student Government Association of East Carolina, heads a committee in charge of campus decoration and student participation in the parade, which will be a spectacular attraction of the day.

The East Carolina Band, the college Air Force ROTC unit of approximately 400 cadets, the unit's Drum and Bugle Corps, and a series of floats entered by campus organizations will participate in the parade, which will begin at 3:30 in the afternoon. It will move along campus driveways and through downtown Greenville.

The East Carolina Pirates will meet the Elon football squad at 7:30 in the evening in a game staged on the college athletic field.

Henry C. Oglesby of Washington, D. C., will preside at a meeting of the college Alumni Council at 11 in the morning in the Alumni Office.

A luncheon in the North Dining Hall will include an address by President John D. Messick of East Carolina, introduction of Alumni Association officers, and a program of music. A dance in the Wright building, at which alumni and other visitors will be special guests, will close the day's program.

Housing Situation Wins Praise At Fort Jackson

WASHINGTON (AP)—Fort Jackson, S. C., one of the largest military reservations in the United States, was praised as much yesterday by a Senate investigating committee as Camp Lejeune, N. C., was damned.

Senator Johnson (D-Tex.) issued a report based on a survey of military installations in this country, calling attention to the fact that Camp Lejeune housing conditions are among the worst in the country and Fort Jackson conditions among the best.

He said, "Fort Jackson is a prime example of the benefits that flow from sincere attempts by the military and local authorities to cooperate on the housing problem."

Unwilling To Resume Kaesong Peace Talks

Eventful Evening For Prowl Car In Regular Rounds

Auto Wrecks, Lost Children, Occasional Drunk, All In Day's Work

By ROY HARDEE
Reflector Staff Writer

Saturday is a busy day in Greenville under normal circumstances, but with the Greenville Police Department it means added headaches and long tireless hours of hard work and excitement.

This weekend was no exception, as prowls were kept constantly on the move answering a variety of calls.

The following is an account of the patrol made by one of the city prowls cars from four o'clock until midnight:

Shifts change a few minutes before the hour and in the day room the beat assignments are made and all special notices explained. Today, officer Bruce Buck is assigned to the prowls car.

The officer and this reporter left the station for eight hours, which was to lead to calls about a lost dog, a possible suicide attempt, a three-car accident and many other items.

For the first hour or so, patrolling is just routine along the crowded streets of Greenville.

At 4:55-the Desk Sergeant sends out a radio call for the car to meet an officer at the intersection of 8th Street and Dickinson Avenue.

The message does not give the nature of the call.

As the police car moves into sight, Officer Cannon comes across the street with a little lad of five by his side.

Cannon explains that the boy has become lost from his mother while she was shopping. Officer Buck opens the back door of the car and says, "Get in Sonny and we will take you home."

Once in the car, the little boy, is quiet, and barely holding back tears, finally gives his name and address and also where his father works.

With this information, little Danie Singleton, Ridgeway Street, Greenville is returned to his father, a worker at the A. P. store safe and sound.

5:06-Radio call to meet officer at P. C. X. Store on Dickinson Avenue. When arrived, was told that there had been a call concerning a drunk but he had run off down the railroad tracks. "He must not have been too drunk, for he could never have run down those tracks without falling," sighed the officer.

5:10-Headquarters gives out description of lost child. Station then advised that same had been returned to father. Mother was at station making complaint about his being lost.

5:25-The radio crackles out message that a woman had just attempted to jump from the Tar River Bridge but failed by a passing motorist. Investigate.

Both city cars on duty at this time respond to the call. By the time the cars can travel the few short blocks to river bridge, the streets leading into it are a sea of traffic as curious sightseers have stopped their cars to find out what has gone on.

Two men are standing by the bridge rail overlooking the river, holding a small woman firmly in their grasp. A short white coat, pair of shoes and large knife, lie in a pile at the foot of the woman who is quiet and tearful.

Detective Lt. M. E. Corbett and Det. Sgt. N. H. Byrd, take the woman in custody, while giving a word of thanks to Tom Rowlette, sailor home on leave, who lives on East Fourth Street, Greenville.

Investigation reveals the woman to be Pauline Bowen, 1111 Dickinson Avenue. Corbett states subject had left home stating that she was going to jump in the river and drown herself. Subject was turned

Gen. Eisenhower Advances Target Date In Europe

PARIS (UP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower has advanced by one year his target date for the creation of an Atlantic Pact army powerful enough to halt an invading Soviet force, reliable sources say today.

The target date is now reported to be July 1953. Previous reports said the Atlantic Pact commander would not be able to assemble his so-called "medium defense force" until a year later.

Just what the altered timetable would mean in actual divisions, the sources would not say. But they pointed out that Eisenhower, known for his impatience in "getting on with the job," is plumping for a one-third increase in armaments output in Western Europe during the next fiscal year.

City Said Unsuitable For Further Meetings; Reds Told They Must Agree To 'New Conditions More Conducive To Progress Toward An Armistice'

TOKYO (UP)—The United Nations balked today at resuming the Korean armistice talks in incident-ridden Kaesong on grounds that the city is "unsuitable."

U.N. liaison officers told Communist liaison officers at an hour-long meeting in Kaesong that the truce talks cannot be reopened until the Reds agree to "new conditions, more conducive to progress toward an armistice."

No agreement was reached, and it was decided to hold a second meeting at 10 a.m. Tuesday (8 p.m. Wednesday EST).

The U.N. officers handed the Communist liaison delegation a memorandum summarizing the U.N. position.

The Communist liaison officers demanded that the armistice talks be resumed in Kaesong at once without further wrangling, a U.N. command bulletin said.

But U.S. Col. Andrew J. Kinney and James C. Murray refused. They said arrangements must be completed first to assure that the talks will not be interrupted again by real or imaginary violations of the conference neutral zone.

For this reason, they said, Kaesong was unsuitable as a site. However, the Allies apparently did not mention any specific alternative site to Kaesong.

Ridgway first suggested that the truce talks be shifted to a new site Sept. 6, but the Communists rejected the proposal at the time.

If the Reds again reject Ridgway's proposal for a new conference site, it is believed the Allies will seek establishment of a joint U.N.-Communist inspecting body to guard against and investigate any charges that the armed forces of either side have violated the neutrality of the conference zone.

The Communists broke off the armistice talks Aug. 23 on the pretext that U.N. planes bombed the Kaesong neutral zone the previous night. The U.N. command denied it and said the so-called "evidence" of the raid was planted by the Reds themselves.

Since then, the U.N. bulletin said, the Communist commanders have alleged nearly 200 U.N. violations.

Wallace also denied he ever had proposed a Communist-Nationalist coalition in China.

The former vice president also disclosed he asked the late President Roosevelt to make Lt. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer the U. S. commander in China during the war. Roosevelt acted on the advice months later.

Wallace also denied he ever had proposed a Communist-Nationalist coalition in China.

Wallace's views were given in a letter to President Truman. The White House released the letter and other documents, including Wallace's long-secret reports on his controversial trips.

Navy Man Forestalls Jump Into Tar River

Tom Rowlette, Home On Leave, Restrains Woman From Leap Until Police Arrive; Second Time He's Saved A Life

A local man received the plaudits of the Police Department Saturday when he deterred a woman from jumping off Tar River Bridge here and also added to his laurels as a rescuer of persons in trouble.

Tom Rowlette, 25-year-old Navy man on weekend leave, grabbed a 30-year-old white woman as she was getting ready to jump from the bridge into the water late Saturday afternoon.

The woman was Miss Pauline Bowen, 1111 Dickinson Avenue.

Rowlette, who is the son of Mrs. C. B. Rowlette, 503 E. Fourth Street, was driving onto the bridge when he spotted the woman taking off her shoes, midway of the bridge. By the time he was abreast of her, she had climbed over the guard rail and was preparing to jump.

He stopped the car, jumped out and had climbed over the rail before the woman let go. Several Negroes who were also on the bridge at the same time assisted Rowlette in getting the woman back over the rail. A passerby stopped his car and called the Police Department for help.

The police reported the woman was suffering from the after-effects of sleeping tablets. On further investigation it was found that she had been released from Dr. Joseph Smith's clinic earlier in the afternoon after spending Friday night there under the influence of the tablets.

She left with her brother, Dr. Smith said, and was to be taken home. She left home after that, it was learned, and was next seen on the bridge.

Rescue of the Bowen woman marked the second time Rowlette has saved persons from possible drowning. Early in the summer while stationed at Key West, Fla., he jumped into a swimming pool on the base and pulled a ten-year-old boy out of the water who would have drowned otherwise.

Dr. Smith reported the woman had swallowed tablets he had prescribed for her mother. He said he kept her in the clinic Friday night because he thought her condition warranted medical observation.

Election Differences

British Limited To Three Weeks Of Campaigning; Only House Of Commons Is Subject To Elective Process; Who Runs The Country; Deciding Issues

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—When the British hold their national elections—as they will on Oct. 25—the politicians act like American politicians but the elections themselves are different.

The candidates make promises, predict doom and damnation if the other side wins, and clutter the scenery with their pictures and slogans.

But while the Americans campaign for months, the British are limited to three weeks, apparently in belief that if a man has anything to say it at that much time.

The American Congress and the British Parliament both have two houses. In congress it's the Senate and the House of Representatives. In Britain, it's the House of Commons and the House of Lords.

Here the members of both houses must be elected by the people and both are equally important in running the country. It's different in Britain.

There only the members of Commons are elected by the people. Members of the House of Lords inherit their seats from their fathers or get them in other ways.

But it's the House of Commons which runs the country because, in Britain, both houses are not equally important. Through the years, as Plevin became more democratic, the House of Lords sank further and further into the background. Today it's secondary.

There are 625 seats in Commons. Candidates for those seats are elected by districts in Britain, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Pay for each member is about $2,800 a year. Here the yearly pay of American senators and congressmen is $12,500, plus $2,500, tax-free, for expenses.

The party which wins a majority of seats in Commons runs the country. The king picks the head of the majority party to be prime minister. This prime minister is the real head of the government.

Then the prime minister chooses his cabinet—the heads of the various government departments—from members of his party who, like himself, were elected to Commons

Betsy Nobles Honored Guest At Coffee Hour

Mrs. J.H.B. Moore and Miss Betsy Nobles were joint hostesses on Saturday morning when they entertained to honor Miss Betsy Nobles, bride-elect of October.

The morning coffee hour was held at the home of Mrs. Moore on East Fifth Street. The hostesses chose blending fall flowers for mantel and table decorations in the rooms where the guests gathered. They and Miss Nobles welcomed them at the front door and extended warm greetings. Miss Nobles was wearing a variegated carnation corsage.

From the charmingly appointed table in the dining room, Mrs. Luther Moore poured coffee from a silver service at one end of the table. Guests served themselves to dainty accompaniments which were on trays and platters around the table. An organdy cloth was used to cover the table and a centerpiece of white carnations, snapdragons and pom-poms added a festive touch.

During the social hour which followed, the guests were paired off and given paper, pins and trimmings of ribbon, flowers and feathers. Using these materials, they were asked to design and model hats for the bride-elect's trousseau. This was the occasion of much fun and entertainment, and the unusual creations attested to the skill of the amateur fashion designers.

Miss Nobles was presented with gifts of silver from both of the hostesses at the conclusion of the modeling exhibit.

Woman's Club To Have Dinner On Thursday

Members of the Greenville Woman's Club will enjoy a "Get Acquainted Dinner" on Thursday evening at seven at the club house.

A large number of new members will be introduced and welcomed into the club. Department and committee chairmen will be presented and the year book will be distributed. This year for the first time the year book has been dedicated to a club member who has given outstanding service to the club for many years. Her choice was a unanimous one of the Executive Board and her identification has been a jealously guarded secret. Other members are all excited and curious to learn the identity of the honored person.

Mrs. J. B. Spilman, second vice-president, will have charge of the dinner and the program. Everything has been planned for good fellowship and a jolly good time and a large number of the 180 members are expected to attend.

National BPW Week Opens

"Women in Uniform Day" is being celebrated today as part of National Business Women's Week. The purpose of this special observance is to let communities see and become acquainted with women who have served in the Army, Navy, Air Corps and Marines and to honor women recently enlisted locally in these branches.

Women in the services have an opportunity to utilize their highest training and skills as full partners on the job ahead. At the same time, they have remarkable opportunities to grow and improve in their specialized fields and to prepare for their own future in getting ahead on the job.

Miss Julia Fisher, Supervisor of Pitt County Nurses, the only member of the Greenville BPWC who has been in service, is ironically celebrating "Women in Uniform Day" as a patient in Pitt Memorial Hospital where she underwent an appendectomy yesterday. Miss Fisher served for nine months in Hawaii and Fort Meade, Md. as a nurse in the Army Nursing Corps.

Boys Speak To Ayden Rotarians

Four boys who are inmates of Camp Butler and the director, James Waite, spoke to the members of the Ayden Rotary Club Friday night on the rehabilitation program which is being carried on by the state at Butler for youthful offenders.

Each of the boys spoke on different phases of the program and gave an account of their appreciation for the chance to serve their time at the youth center. They told of the road camps where they were first sent and expressed a deep appreciation for the efforts of Waite and his assistants in helping them to a more decent way of living.

The boys also told the Rotary Club how much their attitudes had changed since entering Butler and that they now took advantage of the two churches at Butler, where going to church and Sunday school is optional for the inmates.

They explained the daily schedule at Camp Butler, including work on the farm and repair work. They told of their athletic program and said they had a football team, a basketball team, an a baseball team.

The boys appearing on the program were: Merrill Sallenger, Raleigh; Arthur Byrd, North Wilkesboro; Kenneth McLaughlin, High Point; and Mike Burchette, Ronda.

Waite said the youth center had no bars, guards, guns, or cages. Interest in the work at the center was shown by the club members in asking questions about the center. In his answers to the questions, Waite said there were 78 boys at the center and all of the boys had to be honor prisoners before they could be transferred to the center.

At the close of the meeting the club unanimously endorsed the work of Waite and his assistants. Waite was introduced to the club by P. W. Kilpatrick, member of the legislature and endorser of the work done at Butler.

Visiting Rotarians were Dr. Paul Jones of Farmville, Bancroft Mosely and Dr. K. B. Pace, of Greenville, and Leonard Hill of Ayden, guest of Roy Turnage, Jr.

New Eagle Scout To Receive Badge

The first Eagle Scout badge to be awarded a Boy Scout of the Pitt district in several years will be presented to Billy Simmons of troop 30 tomorrow night at the district court of honor.

H. Frank Steinbeck, district awards chairman, and District Commissioner Jack Dowdy urged all scouts of the district, their parents and their friends to attend the court of honor which will be held at 8 o'clock in the court room of the Greenville municipal building. "This is the first Eagle Scout the district has had in a long time," Steinbeck said, "and we are certainly proud of him."

Troop 30 will have charge of the opening ceremonies and the presentation of the flag at the court of honor. In addition to the Eagle badge Simmons will receive, there will be other advancement awards presented to other scouts of the districts.

Women In The Church

Beginning this autumn and continuing through 1952, the million and a half members of the Woman's Society of Christian Service of the Methodist Church, which has organizations in some 25,000 local parishes, will conduct a "progressive visitation campaign" with the plan of reaching and enrolling at least another million Methodist women. Stress will also be given during the year to improving social conditions in the local communities and in the international sphere. Mrs. Frank G. Brooks, of Iowa, is national president of the W.S.C.S.

The first woman to serve as a president of the World Council of Churches was recently chosen by that body's executive committee. She is Miss Sarah Chakko, president of Isabella Thoburn College (Methodists) in Lucknow, India. Miss Chakko, already a world figure, helped organize and served as secretary of the Commission on Life and Work of Women under the World Council. She has also served as president of the United Provinces Christian Council of India, as president of the Student Christian Movement of India, and as a vice-president of the World's YWCA. She has studied in the United States at the University of Michigan and the University of Chicago, where she majored in history and political science.

"We believe that next to the churches, today's best instrument for peace is the United Nations, therefore, we will know it and support it." This is the part of the "action program" of the United Church Women—a department of the National Council of the Churches—which will be observed by women's groups in thousands of churches across the nation on October 24, "United Nations Day," the sixth birthday of the UN. Under the leadership of Mrs. Ross Snyder and of Mrs. Emory Ross, the UCW is training scores of women to speak in support of the UN at the meetings of October 24. Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, a leader of the UCW, points out that the United Nations and war from exploding out of tense situations," and mentions specifically the situations in Iran, Palestine, Greece and Kashmir. She praises also the UN enlistment in Korea of "not only the moral but the armed forces of the free nations."

Cross-eyed and near-sighted children usually are the best students, says the American Optometric Association.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLAS
YOU CAN'T CHANGE THE UNCHANGABLE
Some years ago a motion picture magazine offered prizes for anyone who could perfectly impersonate the acting of Charlie Chaplin. Under an assumed name, Chaplin entered the contest himself and ended up in twelfth place.

This circumstance would seem to teach a number of lessons which we might ponder. The first is that judges of any kind are often wrong. If you were evaluating the pronouncements of so-called "authorities" you are going to be in for a good rigging. These gods have day feet, and sooner or later we all find it out to our chagrin and financial loss.

The second thing which Chaplin's place as twelfth on the list seems to indicate is that we all change with the passing of time, and most of us slip a bit. Maybe the Chaplin who took part in the contest wasn't quite like the Chaplin who had convulsed his audiences some years before. In fact we can be sure he wasn't. He had changed. Maybe he had improved, but maybe he hadn't. My money says he hadn't.

Life is unpredictable. Change is inevitable. Get these two facts well in mind and it will save you a lot of bumps. There are some things in this life we hope mortals can't win against, and one of these is time. Stop complaining.

But whatever you do, be skeptical of the infallibility of those men who pose as "authorities" in any field. Remember that "the gods have clay feet."

The Gate Is Swung Open For Battles

The Supreme Court decision in the Grimesland - Washington electric power case knocked the props from under the old assumption that a publicly or privately owned power company has exclusive rights to furnish electricity to the area its lines encompass.

According to the interpretation of the court's decision, Washington has the right to extend its lines into areas served by the lines of Grimesland. By the same token, it seems that private companies such as Carolina Power and Light, Virginia Electric Power, Tide Water and utilities of the municipalities of this area could stretch their lines into any territory they thought profitable.

At the present time the decision in the case may result in no changes in the electric power set-up in this area. In the future, however, the decision in the Grimesland-Washington case may be cited as grounds for expansion by private companies into areas now served by municipalities. It could result in a price war in electricity somewhat like those recently in the gasoline or merchandising businesses.

With the Virginia Electric Power Company extending its lines to Greenville and Washington, and the Carolina Power and Light lines tying in with Farmville, the time may come when the private companies will attempt to take over the areas now served by local utilities by virtue of a cheaper electric rate they will be able to offer consumers.

The Reflector is in agreement with Justice W. A. Devin that the element of competition should not be eliminated; but if territory franchises are written out of the electric power business by virtue of a Supreme Court decision, it seems logical that similar decisions could rule out franchises in other fields of enterprise as well.

The Supreme Court decision not merely settles the dispute between Grimesland and Washington, but it lays the groundwork for a dog-eat-dog battle between power companies if they ever find themselves ready to enter such a scrap for customers.

Meeting Communists With Their Own Tactics

United Nations Supreme Commander Gen. Matthew Ridgway is doing the right thing by taking his good time in replying to the Communist invitation for the resumption of the cease fire talks in Korea. Nothing is to be accomplished by re-opening the talks until the United Nations can be reasonably sure the Communists really want a cease fire in Korea . . . not just another breathing spell for their hard-pressed troops along the Korean front.

There is no point in re-opening the talks just to give the Communists another opportunity to wrangle over the alleged U. N. violations of the Kaesong neutral zone which already have been denied. It was a little more than a month ago that the Communists broke off the negotiations. A delay of a few more days by Ridgway in making his reply to the Communists will not materially hinder the chances of reaching an agreement. On the other hand, it may make the Communists realize that they will have to get down to brass tacks if the talks are resumed.

For 15 months the United Nations forces aggressors in Korea. For the major portion have been battling with the Communist of that time the U. N. forces were compelled to fight with one hand tied behind them because of the international politics which were being played thousands of miles from the battlefronts. Now, however, it is generally agreed if the war is to be won, the U. N. forces must be allowed to take advantage of all the military opportunities which present themselves in the front lines, and miles behind the front on either side.

The Communists understand that the restrictions on the U. N. forces have been lifted, and the war can now be carried on more vigorously by the forces of freedom. While each day the war is continued costs the U. N. forces in men and material, the relative losses which will be inflicted on the Communist force stand to be higher than during the past months of the war.

The Reflector wants to see the war in Korea stopped as soon as possible, but as long as the Communists cling tenaciously to their two-faced policy of mock negotiations, General Ridgway is doing the right thing to delay the resumption of the talks. We are learning more and more that the only terms the Communists understand are the terms they themselves employ—military force. In the Korean incident we must continue to fight fire with fire.

News Behind The News

WASHINGTON—President Truman's well-known opposition to the nomination of General "Ike" Eisenhower for president by the Republicans is based on White House belief and reports that there will be no Southern walkout or revolt, unless the commander of SHARP heads the opposition ticket in the 1952 contest.

Despite doubts on their willingness to execute their three against Mr. Truman by carrying their legislative fight on him to a finish, a basic consideration behind the Byrd-Byrnes-George movement has been that the opposition must first nominate Eisenhower before the Democrats hold their convention at Chicago.

The political score of the moment, although nothing is certain in American politics seems to be: No Eisenhower, no exit. In fact, this ultimatum to the G.O.P. has been one of the strong factors behind the Dewey-Duff-Darby argument on behalf of "Ike."

WEAPONS—An Eisenhower selection, since the Republican assembly at Chicago before the Democrats' national powwow, would give the Southerners two weapons for use against the Missouri faction at the convention and in the election.

It might enable them to restore the two-thirds nominating rule, which was abolished by Roosevelt-Farley strategists in 1932, thus stripping the South of its balance of power in nominating Democratic candidates. It might force the Truman wing to forget to write another strong Civil Rights plank into the platform.

Failure to attain these minimum objectives would still leave another anti-Truman alternative. By running favorite sons in the presidential contest in Southern states, and assuming that they got more votes than the Democratic nominee (Mr. Truman or somebody else), the Dixie winners could vote for Eisenhower in the electoral college. This might assure his victory, if the G.O.P. carried its normal quota of states above the Mason and Dixon Line.

APPEAL—A Taft nomination would definitely not offer the same appeal and attraction to Southern Democrats restless under Truman-Boyle leadership, despite their general respect and admiration for the Ohio Senator, and their agreement with him on most domestic issues—economy, states rights, federal centralization etc.

For one thing, they share the feeling of many Republicans that their own "Mister Republican" is not the assured victor that General Eisenhower might be. And if they are going to make the grand bolt after all these years of threatening and talking about it, they cannot afford to pick a loser.

Moreover, it would be difficult to depict Mr. Taft as the bipartisan kind of "independent" that "Ike's" friends make him out to be.

OBSTACLE—The final obstacle is that, whereas the Southern conservatives vote with the Ohioan on most domestic matters, they generally support the Administration's foreign policy that he opposes. The South has always had close ties, sentimental and economic, with England and France. Its major products loom large in Marshall Plan aid to Europe.

So, although Mr. Truman once offered to help "Ike" become President—and it is obvious that the Missouriian has no influence in the G.O.P.—he now opposes the General on any ticket.

The inside fact is that the President hopes circumstances will shape themselves in such a way that he can keep the Kansas threat in Europe for the duration of 1952's presidential campaign.

LESSON—On the eve of the 1952 campaign and the windup of Congress, President Truman has given a sharp lesson in practical politics to his Democratic critics and opponents on Capitol Hill. He has shown that he will give any patronage wealth in his possession to a Congressman who supports him ably and unquestioningly.

The recipient in this instance is Senator Brian McMahon of Connecticut, who fits that description precisely. His latest service to the White House was to predict on a television program that Mr. Truman will be re-nominated and re-elected overwhelmingly. He has placed all his Connecticut nutmegs in a Missouri basket.

Whereas McMahon colleagues are complaining about their Truman-Boyle neglect and hoping that current R.F.C. revelations will force Mr. Boyle's dismissal, Mr. McMahon got two important diplomatic appointments within one week. He had previously placed his former law partner, Gordon Dean, in the key post of Chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission.

SOAP-SALESMAN—Senator McMahon persuaded Mr. Truman to name Chester Bowles, former Price Administrator and Governor of Connecticut, to the extremely important position of Ambassador to India, where he replaces a skilled and experienced diplomat. He also won the Uruguayan ambassadorship for his administrative assistant, Edward L. Roddan.

Putting over Mr. Bowles was fine McMahon strategy, although the appointment has provoked terrific criticism. As long as Mr. Bowles remained in Connecticut, possibly regaining the Governorship, there was a chance that he might take the state political organization away from the Senator.

Exiling him to India was a lucky political break, although how the go-getting advertising man will get along with the mystic and philosophic Nehru is a question. India is the last place in the world for a soap-salesman diplomat.

The Red Influence

Around Capitol Square

Raleigh N. C.

By LYN NISBET

CROSSED—Secretary of State Thad Eure, who is ex-officio securities commissioner for North Carolina, has returned from the national convention of securities commissioners at Oklahoma City.

As chairman of the liaison committee it was Mr. Eure's job to get the state and federal officials on the one hand and as between themselves working together smoothly, and on the other hand to maintain good relations with private investment bankers and securities dealers. He experienced no great difficulty so far as technical matters are concerned. There is a fine spirit of co-operation in attempts to weed out "blue sky" stocks and irresponsible dealers. But it was easy for him to discover widely differing political opinions among the folks attending.

DIVERGENT—Representatives of the federal Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) were, of course, all out for President Truman, the administration policies, and further centralized control of securities trading. The investment bankers and dealers generally were bitterly opposed to the Truman philosophy and opposed the trend toward further control of business in Washington. The state officials were in the middle, with perhaps some leaning toward the centralization of authority. These state officials, like most others, are zealous of the rights and prerogatives of the states, preferring uniformity of procedure under state control rather than mandatory federal regulations.

TRAVEL—Mr. Eure is a frequent attendant at out of state conventions, official and otherwise, and is accustomed to all kinds of travel. He confessed, however, some surprise to find that he could fly to and from Oklahoma City, spend two nights and parts of two days attending to the business which occasioned the trip, without being away from his office as long as he would be to attend one meeting in the extreme western corner of North Carolina.

SUSTAINED—Apparently the superior court judges did a good job during the spring and summer.

mer. Out of twenty-one cases decided this week by the supreme court, the lower courts were sustained in fifteen, reversed in four, and there were two with split decisions—that is, one phase was affirmed, one reversed, in each appeal. The high court uses several different expressions to announce decisions, depending upon peculiar points emphasized in the appeal. If the lower court verdict is approved the notation may be "affirmed," or "No Error," or "Appeal Dismissed." If the decision is to upset or overrule the lower court, the notation may be "Reversed," or "New Trial," or "Error and Remanded." The effect of the several different ways of saying the lower court is sustained is the same. The effect of each of the notations on the other side is different, but sometimes it takes a lawyer to tell just what the difference may be. In some cases the high court decision is the end of the road, in others it represents only a turning point toward a longer journey through legal processes.

LOST COLONY—Proposals to have the "Lost Colony" show presented by the Westminster Choir School at Princeton, New Jersey, seem to have been abandoned for the present, at least. One of the primary factors seems to be the common trouble of insufficient money. There is the sentimental argument on one side that the show belongs on Roanoke Island and should not be moved anywhere; on the other is the fact it is so much worth while that it should be made available to larger audience than can visit the Island. Back of that, however, is the fact that it will take a lot of money—not presently in hand—to build and equip a suitable stage at Princeton. Then there is another angle. The Roanoke Islanders do not want the show presented anywhere else because it will deprive them of the monopolistic advantage they now enjoy. Some of those responsible for its successful production in the past are anxious to have it shown to varied groups, in order to increase their prestige as showmen—although there seems no prospect of immediate cash benefits.

BENEFITS—There is in the background some jealousy among the several elements, involving phases of the old question about which came first—the chicken or the egg. Whether Paul Green contributed more in writing the "Lost Colony" text, than the show contributed to making him famous is one question. Whether the Westminster Choir has made through the years a gratuitous contribution to the dramatic pageant, or whether the choir group has been paid in cash and in prestige for any service rendered is another.

SHOWS BIG INCREASE—Plenty of fibbers this year, the Office of Foreign Agriculture Relations forecasts. Crops in the four principal producing countries, Italy, Spain, Turkey and the United States, are half again as large as last year. A moderate gain in the American crop is expected and the largest increase is expected in Turkey. Italian and Spanish crops are slightly down.

CONTROL—While the Roanoke Island Historical Association is debating within its own membership what disposition to make of the matter, it might be well for all parties to remember that the State of North Carolina has a considerable stake in the venture through legislative appropriations in the past, and that under strict interpretation of the statutes its control may be vested in the budget bureau and the division of purchase and contract.

PESTS—The warm humid atmosphere makes this area susceptible to weed and insect pests, and lots of attention is being given to control through chemicals and disinfectants. Mexican bean beetles and Japanese beetles are prime causes for worry among crops and wire worms among animals. There is also unusual susceptibility to plant diseases, especially those affecting foliage. Update problems are mainly with root ailments, but here it is leaf diseases that require most careful watching. In some cases the "plant doctors" have experienced the same troubles encountered by folks doctors, in that treatment for one disease seems to lower resistance to some others.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

WE CAN HOPE
(Washington Daily News)

Another term of Beaufort county Superior court opened in Washington today. About 40 cases are on the calendar for trial.

The recent history of court sessions in Beaufort county has not been one in which the taxpayers or the State of North Carolina can take pride. In fact, the truth is that court terms, both regular and special, have cost Beaufort county a lot of money. They have cost a lot more than they should. During the last three sessions we have had about the same number of cases on the calendar as we have this time. On one occasion term adjourned on Tuesday, and on the other two adjournment came during the day on Wednesday.

Judges are human, and we appreciate that fact. They are also being paid out of taxpayer's funds. We can and should expect at least a full week's work out of the court.

This system of adjourning court early, postponing most of the cases, and in other ways defeating the ends of justice should not be tolerated. Beaufort county is tired of such practices, and the people are demanding that our public servants give a full week's work for each pay check they receive.

If judges were paid by the day, we wouldn't have any such happenings as adjournment before the judge even gets the seat warm. If in private business such indifference to duty occurred, then somebody would be on the carpet pronto. If the Daily News decided that it would not print the first three days of the week and let the rest of the week take care of itself, then this writer would be penning his resignation instead of this editorial.

Sincerely, we do have a right to expect to get what we pay for. With 40 cases to be tried, there is a good week's work there, and it should be done. If there is work to do, then postponing it for somebody else is not the way to get it out of the way.

Miss Susie Sharpe, only woman judge on the Superior court bench of North Carolina, is presiding this week. Miss Sharpe comes to Beaufort county highly recommended for her judicial ability, temperament, and legal knowledge. She has a fertile field for accomplishment here. More than half the cases on the calendar involve drunken driving. There are two murder cases.

There is no need for anyone to say that there are not enough cases to keep the court busy for a week. We know that "it ain't so."

We hope that Miss Sharpe will try to understand the point of view of the taxpayers of this county who are fed up with the lack of work done in recent terms of Superior court in this county.

There is no need for anyone to say that this is idle talk. Anyone who doesn't believe what we are saying can find the truth merely by looking up the record.

We can take hope that Miss Sharpe will understand our situation.

SUSPICION MUST BE REMOVED
(Williamson Enterprise)

Many travelers do not pick up hitch hikers because in a few isolated cases the hikers have attacked their benefactors. Because of a few cases, many are suspicious and thousands of servicemen and others, worthy of a lift, are denied.

In this county not long ago, an aged couple was robbed of more than $1,000. It was later learned that the couple received pensions.

More recently a Raleigh woman got an automobile and it was later learned she was a welfare subject.

The public is becoming suspicious of hitch hikers and pensioners because of a few irregular cases. The suspicion must be removed in one way or another or else the worthy needy are going to suffer.

It has been the practice to perfect the pride of the welfare charge, but the fellow paying the taxes is becoming suspicious; and, after all, he is entitled to know what becomes of his money.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER
Small business and the very large businesses are getting larger shares of government defense orders, an analysis by the non-profit National Industrial Conference Board discloses.

Small business got 22.4 per cent of all recorded contracts for goods and services during the ten months ending April 30, the Board found. The little plants did even better on strictly military contracts. They got 28 per cent in April, the latest month for which figures are available. In World War II they got 22 per cent.

It is difficult to calculate the share of subcontracts that small firms have won. The Board notes that an analysis of 863 Air Force prime contracts, totalling about $5,000,000, showed that 75 per cent of the subcontracts went to firms employing less than 500 persons.

On the other hand, giant General Motors has obtained 14.7 per cent of all war orders and Ford has 4.2 per cent. In World War II General Motors had 7.9 per cent and Ford 2 per cent. The greatest proportionate increase has been registered by International Harvester, which was 33rd in percentage of government contracts in World War II and is in 11th place now. Republic Aviation jumped from 24th to 6th place, and Boeing from 12th to 3rd.

General Motors has a total of $3,500,000 in orders. One of the largest shifts in contracting has been geographic, the Board says, largely due to the fact that fewer ships are now required. In all previous wars, there was a great boom in shipbuilding but in the July-November 1950 period, the last for which figures are available, ship orders accounted for less than 2 per cent of all orders.

Two states, New York and California, have the nearly a third of all defense orders and these states, plus Michigan, Ohio and Indiana, have more than half the total. These five and five New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, hold three-quarters of all prime contracts. However, much of the actual production is subcontracted to firms outside these states.

DRUGISTS FACE SUPERMARKET CHALLENGE
For years drug stores have been cutting into the market held by appliance stores, restaurants and other lines. But now supermarkets are cutting into drug store sales so much that drugists will have to do something about it. S. B. Jeffries, professor of business management at the Brooklyn College of Pharmacy told a New York drugists' council.

He recommended improved management and better advertising. If that doesn't work, he suggested, drug stores may have to take on some of the super-markets' best-margined items.

POOR SHOES, SORE FEET COST MILLIONS
Time lost by absenteeism and accidents resulting from foot ailments cost workers and industry $700,000,000 a year, Dr. Joseph Lelyveld, chairman of the National Foot Health Council, said after a survey.

Most foot ailments, he said, are caused by poor-fitting shoes or shoes unsuited to the job. Of workers interviewed, 79 per cent said their feet caused them discomfort.

ONLY ONE GROUP TRIMS DIVIDENDS

Of all the corporations publicly reporting their dividends in the first seven months of this year, only the food, beverage and tobacco group showed a decline compared with the same 1950 period. The group's total dividends were $1,100,000 down.

But this was offset several hundred times by other groups. $4,141,400,000, compared with $3,679,300,000 a year earlier.

RED, PINK HANKIES WILL BE PROMOTED
Handkerchiefs to match lipstick shades may soon be widely promoted. When a woman uses one to wipe off excess lipstick, smears on her hankies won't show.

The idea is not being promoted because of any fastidiousness, but to increase the use of handkerchiefs and offset the inroads of tissue hankies. Lipstick manufacturers will be urged to sponsor handkerchiefs named for their most highly advertised shades.

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK (AP)—The Peebles were having a family argument about how to end the war in the Far East.

"We will never stop the fighting in Korea until we recognize Red China," said T. L. Mae, "or else throw a few million atom bombs there to force a decision. You got to do it militarily—or you got to do it politically."

Her husband, Wilbur, immediately went to bat against her. Wilbur said that, of course, every well-meaning human being wanted to stop the killing, too, but principle is principle.

"I been studying up on foreign affairs with our woman's club," said Trellis Mae. "Any I think we are caught in a chotomy."

"What in the world is that?" demanded her husband.

"It is like being transfixed on the horns of a dilemma—it is the choice between one of two evils," she said.

"In Europe we are courting fascist Spain and giving money to communist Tito to fight a so-called communist Russia."

"In the Far East we are dribbling dollars to a refugee, semi-fascist Chinese government on Formosa that can't fight its way off an island. And yet we refuse to recognize a Red government that controls most of China and is killing our American men in Korea in something that is called a police action."

Will broke in:

"You are talking like a woman and a communist."

"Talk my eye," said Trellis Mae. "I'm talking a woman's common sense."

"The thing we ought to do is recognize the Chinese Reds and fight to get them in the United Nations. To heck with the fact they fought us as we approached their border through Korea. We would fight them if they landed in Mexico and came close to Texas."

"We are driving the Chinese, the most populous people in the world, straight into the arms of the Russians, the most developing industrial people alive."

"We have recognized Japan but we haven't set up a permanent way for her to exist industrially in peace. We don't lower our tariff barriers to let her sell her produce in the United States."

"On the other hand, we haven't legally recognized her natural market, which is China, which is now so-called communist. But Japan has to sell abroad or die—just like Britain. If we didn't buy her goods, she might have to go Red to sell to Red China."

"As long as the Korean War goes on we can refuse to recognize Red China, and buy enough war supplies from Japan to keep her from dealing with China, her natural customer."

Wilbur looked woeful.

"That is very pessimistic," he said. "It would indicate that our real enemy is still nationalism—rather than communism."

"You are right, Ducky," said Trellis Mae. "The world is caught in the same old grope for power."

"How about Christianity then?" asked her troubled husband.

"Christ was a man and not an institution," said his wife sadly. "He was crucified as a man who stood for good by an organization that stood for order."

"Well, that's simple," said Wilbur. "Why don't we build an organization that will enforce both goodness and order?"

"Why doesn't the world stop dreaming, dear?" asked Trellis Mae gently. "And why don't men like you run for congress—and make a happy world?"

Washington Letter

By HERMAN R. ALLEN
(FANE EADS)

WASHINGTON—One of the most stirring accounts of a Korean battle action that former war correspondents here recall is contained in a letter received recently by a man on duty at the Pentagon. The letter was written by a friend from an evacuation hospital in Korea. It follows:

Hi Wes, old buddy,

Well, I finally caught one that put me in a cast. We jumped off in the attack on the 26th (August) and took our objective with only a few casualties. In my platoon I only lost one man. On the morning of the 27th at 11:00 (a.m.) they counterattacked and hit our company with a whole regiment of Chinese and North Korean Infantry.

I had my mortar section zeroed in on the draw in front where they attacked from and they did a fine job but we ran out of ammo. I made them fix bayonets and get on top of the ridge and start firing their rifles, carbines, pistols, and whatever they had.

After awhile the old man yelled for me to take my platoon over to help the first platoon as the Chinese were breaking through.

I started over when a Chinese mortar caught me in the leg. I sent my men over anyway and crawled back to the ridge with my carbine and about six fragmentation grenades and let them have it as they came up. The old man yelled the wounded to leave and he ordered me to take them out.

The hill we were on was pretty steep so we slid down on our tails and got on top of the ridge and started firing their rifles, carbines, pistols, and whatever they had.

The Sport Reflector

By JIMMY ELLIS

East Carolina College football received a tremendous plug Saturday night from Louisiana State University and radio officials of the Louisiana area. The comments came from the announcer of the LSU-Mississippi Southern College football game played in Baton Rouge, Louisiana, Saturday.

The announcer was supposedly quoting Coach Tinsley of LSU. Tinsley and his entire LSU coaching staff had personally scouted the ECC-MSC game the week before and when he got back to Baton Rouge, the Tiger head coach told reporters that he had seen Mississippi Southern score 40 points on a good East Carolina team and he would personally consider himself lucky if LSU could score two touchdowns against the Southerners.

The LSU coach was quoted as saying, "Anybody that can score 40 points against the East Carolina team I saw play can consider itself a good ball club. I will be pleased to win by two touchdowns."

The final score of the game was 13-0. LSU was held to seven points until the final seven minutes of the game.

Those quotes from Baton Rouge should settle definitely the arguments as to whether or not ECC met a good club last week. The broadcast of the game was one of two in the entire United States (the other broadcast was the Florida-Citadel game) and the estimated listening audience was half a million people.

Now, it will be interesting to see what MSC can do with Alabama, the other big powerhouse on its 1951 schedule. The Crimson Tide won its Saturday opener by a slight margin of 30-0.

It seems that my predictions for the football week-end came out strictly in the black. My choices of both Carolina and Duke came through and both in fine style.

While I saw neither of the games, it seems (to listen to the several radio announcers) that Carolina is really loaded again this year. The Tar Heels were running in new ball players with reckless abandon Saturday afternoon and once they got rolling, there was nothing State could do to stop them.

That doesn't mean that State doesn't have a good ball club. I still feel the situation is this: the only thing that State has that Carolina can't claim is a tackle of Elmer Costa's ability. Carl Snavey has everything else.

Duke's surprising win over South Carolina even took my breath away for awhile. I had greatly expected the Blue Devils to win, but not by so great a margin as the 34-6 score. From having watched spring practice up in "Death Valley," I knew Bill Murray had the makings of a great ball club.

Now let's hope that the Duke team doesn't go on an abrupt about-face and lose the remaining games on its schedule.

This week's schedule will be a little more difficult to predict. Carolina is taking on Georgia's ever-powerful Bulldogs in Kenan Stadium while the Blue Devils journey north to meet Pitt University. State will meet Wake Forest Saturday night in Raleigh in a game that should be tops for thrills.

A little gazing into my crystal ball before I go out on a limb with these ball games.

One of the most important games in the North State Conference will be reeled off Saturday night in Burlington when Elon meets defending champion Appalachian. The Mountaineers are currently leading the loop with two wins in as many conference games while the Christians are untested against league opposition.

The latest of Appalachian's two big victories is a 26-6 stomping of West Carolina Teachers. They had taken Guilford by a comfortable margin earlier in the season, and while they are riding high at the present time, Elon is sure to provide a stern test.

The Christians defeated the Norfolk Naval Air Station 37-7 last Thursday in Burlington in a game that was 12-7 at the half time.

Catawba will make-up its rain-out Saturday game with Newberry tonight and will take on Erskine Saturday night.

West Carolina will visit Presbyterian, Guilford has an open date, and East Carolina, of course, will journey to Norfolk to meet the Naval Air Station.

Lenoir Rhyne's Bears, pre-season favorites to win the league gunting will be at Hickory Saturday to take on Newberry. The Bears got off to a fine start Saturday with a 21-7 victory over Davidson.

Aerial Acrobatic Shows Banned

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The government will not permit air shows or exhibitions from now on unless they contribute to the advancement of aviation and public confidence in it.

The Civil Aeronautics Administration, announcing a new policy yesterday, said it will not sanction aerial acrobatics not under direct control; delayed parachute jumping; dog fighting; intentional aircraft crashes; and similar hazardous operations.

Elizabeth City moved into a tie with Washington for first place in the Northeastern Conference with a 14-7 win over Edenton Friday night. Edenton, which had held first, dropped to third with a record of one win and one loss.

Elizabeth City's victory came despite a great performance by Burton Harrison, Edenton's tailback, who took the opening kickoff and ran it back 92 yards for a touchdown. Gene Taylor added the extra point but after that Elizabeth City settled down to play their game of football and ground out two touchdowns.

Bobby Sawyer and Forrest Simmons scored one touchdown apiece for Elizabeth, both the scores coming from one yard out. Hewitt added the extra points.

Washington's victory over New Bern which lifted them into a tie for first place was a hard-earned 13-7 game played in New Bern's Kafer Park. Gilbert Nelson went eight yards for the first Pam-Pack touchdown while the other score came on a 20 yard pass from Dick Cherry to Bobby Allgood. Nelson came through on one of the two attempted extra points.

New Bern's lone touchdown came on a 65 yard scamper around right end by Dick Wade. Ken Vernelson kicked the extra point.

Two other league teams were in action Friday night, neither against conference opposition, however. Kinston's favored Red Devils pounded out a 25-7 victory over the little LaGrange Bulldogs while Greenville's Panthers collected a 12-0 win over Morehead City.

Bryant Aldridge led the Kinston attack Friday night by scoring two touchdowns, one of them 14 yards off tackle, while Chris Emory and Charlie Wickham came through with the two scores. Emory's touchdown was a 49 yard dash on another of the off tackle plays from Kinston's single wing.

Sid Briley and Guy Smith led the Greenville club to its victory of the new season, each with a single touchdown performance against Morehead City. Smith scored the first six-pointer on a pitch out from quarterback Briley while the quarter back himself jammed the second touchdown across. Leon Moore missed both extra point attempts.

In league action scheduled for this week, Greenville will be in Kinston while New Bern takes on Roanoke Rapids in Roanoke Rapids.

Raschi Pitches New York To 6-1 Win Over Red Sox

Three More Victories In Six Remaining Games Can Clinch Third Straight Championship; Cleveland 2 1/2 Games Out

By CARL LUNDQUIST

United Press Sports Writer
It seems almost unbelievable but thanks to quick Vic Raschi, 20-game winner and a standout candidate for the most valuable player award, the destiny-driven Yankees were closer to winning their pennant today than the seemingly sure-shot Dodgers.

The Yankees are 2 1-2 games ahead with only six to play and can clinch their third straight flag with three more victories, no matter what the folded-up Indians do in their remaining three games.

The Dodgers, however, even though they are three games in front of the Giants, will have to win four of their remaining seven games to be sure of the flag, and they have at their heels the hottest club in either league.

Leo Durocher's Giants have won seven of their last eight games and 32 of 33 in the stretch run. If there is going to be a miracle in this dizzy season, it looks as if the Giants have the best chance of performing it.

The Yankees gave the Red Sox another swift kick yesterday when they won a 6 to 1 decision in Boston as Raschi gave up eight hits and pitched shutout ball after an unearned run was scored in the first inning. It was big Vic's 20th victory, marking his third straight season at that magic level.

Battling 1 to 1 with lefty Chuck Stobbs for seven innings, Raschi got the runs he needed when the Yankees exploded in the seventh for three runs. Two more runs in the eighth were just icing on the cake.

At the same time, the Tigers heaped new revenge and humiliation on the Indians, defeating them 9 to 1 for the third-straight game as Virgil Trucks pitched seven-hit ball and struck out 10 batters including so-called big-wig hitters Larry Doby and Luke Easter three times apiece. Vic Wertz hit a three-run homer and single to pace the 15-hit Tiger batting tempo and Trucks drove in two runs on squeeze bunts.

The Indians have only a Tuesday night game with the White Sox in Chicago and two more games Saturday and Sunday with the same tough Tigers, while the Yankees play all their six games at home, one with the Athletics Tuesday and five over the weekend with the Red Sox, including Friday and Saturday doubleheaders.

Things were almost as bright for Brooklyn, but trouble could develop. Lefty Preacher Roe, who won his 22nd victory against just two defeats, 6 to 2 over the Phillies yesterday, can finish with the greatest winning percentage for a 20-game victory in big league history if he suffers no more defeats.

But he may have to work again since the Dodgers have four games in Boston, including a night doubleheader Tuesday, and three in Philadelphia this weekend.

The Giants, who topped the Braves 4 to 1 yesterday as Sal Maglie won his 22nd game for the best record by a hurler on the club since Carl Hubbel won 22 in 1937, play Boston again today in the only major league game, then leave town for two games in Philadelphia Tuesday and Wednesday and two more in Boston over the weekend.

Roy Campanella, showing he has come back completely after being beamed by Cub pitcher Turk Lown last week, hit a two-run homer and three singles while Andy Pafko also hit a two-run homer in yesterday's six-hit Dodger triumph by Roe.

Maglie pitched himself into and out of trouble, giving up 13 hits. Bobby Thomson's two-run triple was the big Giant blow as Monte Irvin with an infield out and Willie Mays with a double, drove in the other runs.
The Athletics romped to 12 to 4 and 8 to 3 victories over the Senators to clinch sixth place, while the Browns came from behind to top the White Sox 8 to 7 in other American League games.

Elsewhere in the National League, the Cardinals won 9 to 3 and 5 to 2 decisions from the Cubs, while Murry Dickson won his 20th game with the last-place Pirates, shutting out the Reds 3 to 0, after which Howie Fox retaliated by pitching the Reds to a 2 to 0 victory.

GREENSBORO TV Power Increased
GREENSBORO—(AP)—The Greensboro News Company's television station WFMY-TV began operating on a 5,000-watt transmitter over the weekend.

The new transmitter gave the station ten times the power allowed it in the past. The transmitter was placed in operation Saturday on the second anniversary of the beginning of operations for the station.

Jim Turnesa Wins Reading Open

READING, Pa. (UP)—

They'll have to find room in the Turnesa family's trophy chest today for another prize from the golf links—the Reading Open tournament won by Brother Jim.

For years now, the golfing Turnesa brothers from Briarcliff, N. Y., have been accumulating silver and cash on the fairways of the world, and so it was no surprise when 38-year-old Jim struck his way to first place in the Reading competition yesterday with a 72-hole total of 280.

He finished three strokes ahead of hard-closing Jack Burke Jr. who had 283, and five ahead of Skeel Riegel of Tulsa, Okla., and Jimmy Clark of Laguna Beach, Calif., each of whom carded a 285.

For the victory, Turnesa gained first prize of $2,400. It was his first big success of the 1951 golf campaign. Previously, the closest he had come was a three-way tie for second place in the Wilmington, N. C., Open in March, and a tie for second in the Tucson, Ariz., Open in February.

Magic Numbers

NEW YORK (UP)—

Combine the magic numbers "three" and "four" and it will be a Yankee-Dodger World Series.

The magic number for the Yankees is three—meaning they need to win only three of their remaining six games to clinch the American League pennant. The Dodgers have to win only four out of seven.

Each time their rivals lose, the magic number goes down, too.

Queen City Murder Case

By Wm. G. Bogart

Chapter 6
The house was still quiet as Beth descended the staircase to the first floor. The skiers were evidently making an afternoon of it.

Beth continued on to the sitting room and to the enclosed, large sun porch beyond.

"Tilting one of the Venetian blinds, Beth looked out across the rolling hillsides. Still no sign of the ski party."

Behind her, in the living room, the telephone rang. She stepped quickly into the adjoining room to answer it. It was a man's voice.

"Is this Hopewell 24-J?"

"Yes. It didn't sound like anyone she knew."

"Is this Mrs. Sherman, Beth Sherman?"

"Yes, this is she."

There was a slight pause. It puzzled her. "Hello," she said, thinking perhaps the party had been cut off.

"Hello," said the man's voice. Then, changed somehow the voice said, "Now, listen."

She couldn't understand why the voice brought a stir of uneasiness within her.

"Are you alone?" the man's voice demanded.

It was an odd thing to ask. The hurried, almost gruff tone of the voice made it the more puzzling.

"Yes, I'm alone," Beth admitted.

"Who is calling?"

"Never mind names," the voice said. "Just listen. Listen and get everything straight, because I haven't time to waste. Understand?"

There seemed to be a threat in the voice now. She said swiftly, "Understand what? Who's calling? Who is this?"

Instead of replying to her questions, the man said, "Two and a half years ago you spent part of a summer on a ranch in Wyoming. I certain party followed you out there, remember? I said we won't mention names. There's no need to, is there? You know the man I mean. There was some pretty lively talk at the ranch, though. ...things, luckily, that didn't get carried back to Cincinnati when you hurried home. I wonder..."

Suddenly her blood ran cold. Impact of what this person was saying struck her like a blow in the face. She couldn't speak.

"I wonder," the voice went on, "did you ever tell Dave Sherman about that summer in Wyoming?"

Her thoughts whirled. Who was this person? How did she started to stammer, "Listen, you must be mistak—"

A peculiar short laugh reached her ears. "Don't tell me, baby. Don't try to give me anything I know that Dave Sherman doesn't know. You didn't tell him before you married him and his money, and you didn't tell him after."

His tone filled her with dread. "Another thing," the voice went on, "there's a little incident out of the past that wouldn't make nice reading in the Cincy newspapers. Remember when you were just nineteen, baby? Think back to what happened that year. Put that and the Wyoming ranch thing together and spread it around town a bit." The short, muffled laugh came again. "Boy, would that fix things for that wealthy husband of yours. Can't you hear them talking in the Union League and the Cincinnati Clubs?"

"Listen!" Beth cried. She stared toward the hallway, fearful that someone would pop in any moment, or that Sam Clark might appear from upstairs. She tried to keep her voice low, and it was trembling. "What do you want? Who—" Her gaze darted toward the hallway again.

There was another pause on the line...seconds that gave her whirling mind time to flash back across the years to the day when she was nineteen. That year! That horrible, ugly year!

Him! No, it couldn't possibly be. They had sent him away, never to prey on anyone again. They had sent him to...

"Say," the voice demanded, "are you there?"

Once more she strained to catch some inflection, some little thing that would give her a clue to the voice. He'd be years older now, naturally. The voice would be changed. Even then, it couldn't be...him. There was no possible way.

"All right," he said. "Now here's what you're going to do. The price is easy, considering what you've got in your bank account, baby. I happen to know. Your husband could pay a damned sight more, but I don't think you want me to go to him, do you? So..."

He let the dreadful implication penetrate. Then, "Understand?"

"Yes," she breathed in a whisper. "How...much do you want?"

"Fifty grand...fifty thousand. I'm letting you off cheap..."

A little cry came from her lips. "I can't," she said. "I simply haven't got that much..." The room swam around her. She saw her world tumbling, all the precious things...Dave, her husband. "I'll give you a few hours to think it over," the man said. There was finality in the voice now. "I'll get in touch with you again, later I..."

Upstairs, somewhere, footsteps sounded. Doctor Sam Clark! Horrified Beth Sherman. She had to get away from the telephone. She'll have to think...

"All right," she said, her voice a frantic appeal. "Someone's coming. I'll have to...talk to you later."

"Don't worry, you will," the voice said. "Soon!"

She hung up and quickly started out of the room, her legs almost buckling beneath her. She must escape to her room before she met anyone. She must be alone, to think.

She raced up the stairs, heard Sam Clark moving about in his room. Luckily, his door was closed. She reached the security of her bedroom, closed the door behind her, reached the vanity set and sat down. She clutched the edge of the dressing table with cold trembling hands.

She tried to tell herself this horrible thing couldn't have happened to her. She'd had one of those frightful dreams again. She shook her head vigorously and stared into the huge mirror.

The person who stared back at her, her reflection, was like a ghostly apparition. Gone was the gay, happy smile, the bright shining eyes. It was as though she had "Dave," she sobbed. "Dave...I love you so."

THEY'RE COOKING UP A BATCH OF GOOD ROADS!
In this giant "still," the gooey, sticky raw asphalt substances are transformed as if by magic into a tough water-resistant material for long-lasting highway construction. The plant, recently completed in Wilmington, is the only one of its kind on the East Coast.

PICK-UP DELIVERY THIS MORNING—A HIGHWAY BY AFTERNOON! Faster road-building with fewer delays results from MexPet's modern delivery system at its new Asphalt Plant. The equipment shown here is capable of loading 350 transport trucks daily.

THE SEAWAYS BRING THE HIGHWAYS! Many miles of modern, hard-surfaced all-weather highways will be built for your use, from the materials this ocean-going tanker brings to Wilmington for processing in the company's new plant.

THIS NEW PLANT HELPS TO PAVE THE WAY FOR PROGRESS! Every twenty-four hours, this modern asphalt plant produces 750,000 pounds of asphalt. One of the large storage tanks shown will hold 10,000 tons—enough to pave 170 miles of all-weather highway. The convenient location of the plant and its modern system of hot-asphalt delivery, will do much to speed highway construction in both North and South Carolina.

A great new industry for the Carolinas

Here's what it means to you!

Friday, September 21, 1951, the Governor of North Carolina turned a valve in Wilmington, North Carolina, symbolically setting into operation North Carolina's newest and most unique industry. Barring the unforeseen, that valve will never be shut off, for this new industry is in North Carolina to stay—and it will stay in operation twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week, fifty-two weeks a year.

This new industry is the Mexican Petroleum Corporation's Asphalt Plant, recently completed by the American Oil Company. It is the only asphalt plant of its kind on the Atlantic Coast. To it, the companies' own fleet of ocean-going tankers bring asphalt material. From this material, it produces asphalt for highway paving—three-quarters of a million pounds of it a day! One year's production of asphalt from this plant is enough to pave an 18-foot highway 2500 miles long.

There are many reasons why this plant was located in North Carolina. Accessibility to sea-transport is one, for Wilmington's harbor facilities have long been famous. But the main reason is that North Carolina has long needed an asphalt plant of its own. This great state is among the most progressive in America, and stands high in highway construction. Through the location of MexPet's new asphalt plant at Wilmington, it now has a nearby source of this fine paving material. This means not only a great saving in time of delivery, but in actual delivery costs.

MexPet, through its Savannah and Baltimore asphalt plants, has long supplied the Carolinas with paving material. Now, through these new Carolina facilities, this service is expanded. It is made more convenient and is speeded up.

We're glad to be here. We hope, as you ride on smooth highways surfaced with MexPet asphalt processed in our new plant, you'll be glad we're here, too!

Increased Participation In Recreation Planned

In a report made to the Recreation Commission, Monday night Warren Carroll, recreation director, said that the attendance on the playgrounds this summer did not reach a maximum but he knew the basic reasons why the maximum was not obtained.

He said that before next summer's program is put in effect there should be a longer and more definite period of leadership training, the leaders should become more familiar with the people involved, there must be more programs of special and specific interest, and the directors must plan and organize the facility layouts in order that more activities can be utilized.

During the summer the playgrounds were open with leaders to guide the children in different kinds of games and activities. Included in the activities were such sports and games as baseball, softball, story-telling, arts and handicrafts, singing, drama, apparatus play, and special activities.

Carroll said the Little League Baseball program was the biggest success of all of the activities and ended with the players and interested persons getting together for a barbecue dinner. "Our boys," Carroll said, "made a very good impression on the people at Havelock not only by playing good baseball, but also on their manner of behavior."

The Automotive Dealers Association sent the Junior League championship players to the North Carolina Recreation Society's Junior League Baseball Tournament in Charlotte but they were defeated in their first game.

Carroll said the use of the Guy Smith Stadium for the last three playing dates of the softball league put a load on the budget for the use of lights. He said the softball group was looking toward the Recreation Commission for aid and need a lighted area before the program will expand to its greatest.

"A fella can't find a safe place to live since Otto the Orkin man moved in!"

ORKIN

Dial 3918 — Wilson, N. C.

He also expressed the opinion that Greenville lost a very good man when Edward Todd, Negro Recreation supervisor, left. He said Todd did a great deal in promoting recreation interest and praised the work he was doing. "In many respects," Carroll said, "the Negro recreation program was well advanced over the white set-up. The programs were more varied, the participation was much greater, and there was much more active participation among the adults."

"We are now faced," Carroll added, "with the problem of finding some type of headquarters for a Negro recreation program. One thing that we can carry out in the Negro program and that is operating after-school playground activities."

Carroll commented on the basic plans for the fall program by saying they had been established and the different programs will be put into operation as soon as possible. There will be four teams of Little League football with much of the equipment furnished by the boys.

A Little Ladies club will be organized and the Armory will be used for this every Saturday morning. A Ladies Hobby Club group will meet one morning a week at the Armory and go into a variety of arts and crafts works.

Carroll said the recreation leaders were working toward the promotion of a men's volleyball league, which he hopes to develop towards the Health Club ideas. He said the director's services had been offered to the schools in helping classroom groups in folk and square dancing, gymnastics, grammar school sports activities, and any other activities.

Groundwork has also been laid for the formation of an amateur camera club. The teen-age club is getting a new face lifting and Carroll said much of the afternoon work will relate to special interest groups.

"As we go further into the winter season," Carroll said, "basketball leagues will swing into full operation and other specified activities will be added."

Plans Workshop For Teachers

Beatrice Chauncy, faculty member of the department of music at East Carolina College and supervising teacher of music in Greenville elementary schools, will direct during the next two weeks a workshop in folk dancing and rhythms for teachers in Duplin County elementary schools. Meetings will be held on Tuesday and Thursday evenings at Kenansville. Approximately 65 teachers will attend.

Greene County teachers meeting at Snow Hill Monday and Tuesday, September 17-18, held a workshop under Miss Chauncy's direction at which newly adopted music texts for North Carolina elementary schools were discussed.

HOW IMPORTANT IS Your Executor?

Before your family can receive your property, your estate must pass through the hands of your executor, or an administrator.

Today, many estates contain farm lands, corporate stocks, bonds, productive real estate, equities, or business interests, and the ability and skill of the executor (or the administrator)—his business experience and judgment—can mean profit or loss for the family.

When you name Your Executor, consider the qualifications which are essential to your family's security. Consider the fact that these are specialized qualifications acquired only by long effort and experience. And consider the further fact that only the corporate trustee can give assurance of its ability to serve when needed.

Unlike mortal man, the corporate trustee can project its own life into the future and provide certain protection for your family, and peace of mind for yourself.

Brownie Scouts Take Camp Trip

"Happy Helen," the Girl Scout truck, carried 18 Brownie Scouts to Camp Hardee Saturday but let them down on the way when she had a flat tire, the first in six years.

Mrs. E. L. Henderson said "Happy Helen" delayed the trip because of a nail in the tire, which is the first time since the truck has been in use. "But," Mrs. Henderson said, "we finally got down to camp and had a wonderful time." Another thing caused a delay on the trip to camp. It seems that the little Brownies couldn't keep their scarves on and the truck had to be stopped frequently to pick up lost scarves.

Once the campers got to their destination, everything went smooth. The girls went swimming both in the morning and afternoon and nickered along the beach.

For lunch the Brownies cooked out in the open and came up with a "one pot meal" which was made up of meat, tomatoes and vegetables. After eating, the campers roasted marshmallows around the fire.

Mrs. Henderson said she thought the group which went Saturday had the best time of any group she had been with down there. Janice Ormond and Barbara Jean Barrow accompanied Mrs. Henderson down to Camp Hardee with the Brownies.

Girl Scout Troop Six is planning to go to Camp Hardee tomorrow after school to spend the afternoon and cook supper. Frances Bendall and Mrs. Troy Dodson are going with them.

Friday Mrs. W. R. Spicer is planning to take her Brownie Troop down to camp for supper.

Hunt Sources Of Electrical Power

PORTLAND, Ore.—(AP)—The big search for new sources of electric power is underway in the drought-stricken Pacific Northwest.

The search was touched off last week when the Defense Electric Power Administration (DEPA) ordered cuts which resulted in a 10 per cent reduction of power to the area's booming aluminum industry.

Then Saturday the apparent seriousness of the situation was emphasized when Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson told the aluminum producers to prepare plans for the possible removal of some of the Pacific Northwest plants to areas of assured power supply.

What caused the power shortage? Most public and private power officials blame the drought. This has been one of the driest summers in the history of the area. And not enough rain has fallen to swell the Columbia River, which with its huge hydro-electric generators is the source of much of the Pacific Northwest's power supply.

Rep. Hugh Mitchell (R-Wash.) said a delay in building additional generating facilities also was responsible.

Gerard Placed On Probation In City Court Today

In Police Court today, Judge Charles Whedbee found William C. Gerard, World War II veteran, guilty of non-support of his wife and four young children.

The judge gave him six months on the roads, suspended on condition that he pay one-half of his salary through the court clerk to his wife; Mrs. Theresa Gerard, a German war bride, each week. He placed Gerard on probation for two years.

The court order explained that the sum Gerard is to pay his wife is not to be more than $35 a week.

The court order explained that Gerard is now employed by a firm in Washington, Judge J. W. Roberts, counsel for Mrs. Gerard stated.

Two Fire Alarms Of Minor Nature

Greenville firemen answered two fire alarms of a minor nature yesterday.

The first alarm came at 11:42 Sunday morning when an oil stove in a house at 404 West First Street flared up. Only moderate damage resulted.

The house was owned by Dr. Paul Fitzgerald.

A second call was turned in Sunday night around seven o'clock when an automobile driven by Billy Corey caught fire on Tyson and Douglas Street intersection. Moderate damage was reported to the car.

Area Red Cross Worker In City

Gardner Gidley, field representative from the area office of the American Red Cross, was here today to set up a first aid and water safety program.

Gidley said the purpose of his visit here was to organize an instructor's course in first aid and water safety at the college, plus just a routine visit to this chapter.

Added To Staff Of Health Dept.

Another new staff member has been added to the Pitt County Health Department in the capacity of secretary.

Mrs. Riley Cox of Winterville began work this morning at the health department and replaces Mrs. Lucy Churchill Miller who recently resigned.

Mrs. Cox's work takes in the filing of x-ray reports, and information on the x-rays.

SEATS FOR PRESIDENTS WASHINGTON (UP)—R. E. P. Ralph A. Gamble (R-NY) planned to introduce a bill today which would give former Presidents lifetime seats in the House of Representatives.

Crises For . . .

Bringing down a French government is a fairly easy task for a determined man who has the large bloc of votes in parliament that deGaulle can command.

These are the normal processes of democracy in both France and Britain. There is no Stalin in either London or Paris to order up a change of policy overnight or to enforce compliance with the one already in existence.

Waiting for the people to make up their mind is one of the handicaps democracies accept cheerfully in the cold war. After all, that's what the cold war is all about.

Eventful Evening . . .

Back again to the regular grind but not for long.

Cruising along Fleming street, Buck notices a Negro man weaving along the road slightly. The prowl car, with the large Police sign on its side pulls up beside the man. "Say follow you better go home, before you get drunk." "I just came from there, Captain."

"Well that's where you better go. Just trying to give you a chance," the officer says as he pulls away, and the man wanders off, head-locked back home.

"I have arrested him two or three times recently for being drunk," Buck comments.

5:42—Radio message reporting a lost dog. Be on the lookout.

5:45—Wreck reported at 10th and Charles Street. Investigation reveals that car driven by David W. Hardee Jr., of 403 East Fifth Street, Greenville was parked at the Charles Street intersection when struck by a second car driven by William Haywood. Fountain of Rocky Mount. Only moderate damage, no arrest.

6:10—Second wreck call, this time in front of Hill's store. Car scraped fender in heavy traffic, small damage. No charge.

"Well we have had our share for today," signs Buck, "but guess it is just the beginning with all this traffic."

7:30—The Police car is now moving along Dickinson Avenue when there is a large crash in front of the car and the three persons on the car are eye-witnesses to a three-car accident.

The sound of the crash is audible for blocks around and now can be heard the cries and screams of the persons inside the cars. A radio call to the police station summons the Fire Department's rescue truck while the injured are being attended to.

Reaching the cars, one pinned between the other two, and the crowd of people around the scene start to move the cars in order that the doors to the car with the injured persons can be opened. One by one the injured are taken from the car and placed in the waiting ambulances. Five all together.

Wreckers clear up the wreckage while additional police officer routes the congested traffic through. The driver of the car which crashed the red traffic light and hit the car, is led away from the scene, between two officers, to city jail where he is lodged on a charge of driving drunk.

At Pitt Memorial Hospital, the five persons are still being examined and x-rayed and the officer advises that he will return later or perhaps Sunday to obtain the remainder of the information on the injuries suffered.

"Pretty bad," comments Lt. R. G. Rogerson, "and all on account of liquor."

9:35—Radio call to check on drunk at 204 Center street. Not there when arrived.

9:50—Officers work traffic leaving revival meeting near ball park. 10:05—Be on lookout for small, girl, three years old, lost around 10th and Dickinson Avenue. Same reported found few minutes later, dore Brown, of Elizabeth City, for being drunk.

10:40—Radio call to wreck at the College gate. When arrived, officer was told that driver of car had left scene, after striking wall around college and damaging car. Warrant issued for same. Car stored. From then until midnight things were quiet, or just the end to an average night in Greenville for the city Police department.

Minor Collisions Motor Vehicles In Recent Weekend

Greenville traffic officers were kept busy during the weekend checking on several minor motor vehicle collisions in which no arrest was made.

Cars driven by Mack R. Haddock, Route 5, Greenville, and Carlton Spain, 906 Gotanche street, collided on Evans Street Saturday evening near Proctor Hotel. Slight damage was done and no arrest was made.

Cars driven by Dalton G. Turner of Grifton and Cleveland Fleming, 213 West 14th Street, collided in the southern part of the city. Slight damage was reported and no arrest was made.

Several other collisions involved nothing more than scratched paint.

Other motor vehicle collisions in which occupants were injured are reported in another story.

Adult Education . . .

Here the people vote not only for the members of the Senate and House but, every four years, for president and vice president. Neither of those two is a member of congress.

And the president picks his cabinet as he pleases. He can choose a member of congress for a cabinet job (who would have to resign from congress to take it) or he can select a man who was never in votes, then— Elections for the House of Commons are supposed to be held every five years which means the members hold their seats for five years—unless something happens. And what happens is this: If the majority of the controlling party is so narrow in Commons that it can barely squeak through on an important issue or even loses on the big issue through a switch

This raises a question: Does the majority party still represent the will of the people? Does it have the people's confidence? The prime minister calls for a new election to find out. So while the British national elections must be held only once every five years, they may actually have two elections in one year or more than that over a five-year period.
