U.S. Aid Sought By Britain, Iran

Both Sides Ask Good Offices In Oil Dispute As Fear Of Shooting-Showdown Grows; British Workers Ordered To Stay In Iran Despite Decree

LONDON (UP)—Great Britain and Iran appealed today to President Truman and Secretary of State Dean Acheson to use their good offices to find a way out of the Iranian oil crisis.

Prime Minister Clement Attlee, personally directing Great Britain's moves in the crisis, appealed to Mr. Truman and the State Department through Ambassador Sir Oliver Franks in Washington.

Attlee also called Winston Churchill to a private conference tomorrow to be informed of the government's decision on Iran.

In Tehran, Iranian Premier Mohammed Mossadegh called new U.S. Ambassador Loy Henderson an extraordinary 90-minute conference to make a similar plea for U.S. diplomatic intervention before it is too late.

Iran asked once before for President Truman's help. The President gave it promptly by sending his special envoy, W. Averell Harriman, to Tehran.

Harriman managed to get Anglo-Iranian negotiations started again but they collapsed in the end and led to Iran's ultimatum to British workers to get out of Abadan by Oct. 4.

Britain today ordered its citizens to stay in Abadan in defiance of the ultimatum, and warned Iran her decision to oust them will have "grave effects" for which Iran will bear "full responsibility."

At this stage, the danger that an armed clash might result made both countries turn to the U.S. for help.

The area around Abadan, the world's greatest oil refinery, is surrounded by British ships, planes and soldiers and the British said they have not yielded from their declaration that they will not leave Abadan.

Drive Extended For Farm Bureau As Goal Missed

Fell Short By 800 Names; Work Progresses On November Referendum

The county's Farm Bureau membership drive has missed its intended goal of 4,000 members by a little over 800 names, thus showing the campaign into an extra week.

As reported by workers in the townships at a final meeting of the board of directors last night, the county's total now stands at 3,139 members. So the drive will continue for another week, although there will not be another meeting for the purpose of reporting.

While the county has not reached its goal, four townships have surpassed theirs, thus setting the pace for the rest of the county. They are Bethel, quota of 280, 362 written; Carolina, quota of 250, 281 written; Farmville, quota of 395, 490 written; and Fountain, quota of 140, 154 written.

For the most part the other nine townships are close to their quotas. Only Chicod, Greenville, Pactolus and Swift Creek are lagging behind while Beaver Dam, Belvoir, Falkland, Winterville and Ayden are in sight of their membership.

While the membership drive should close sometime next week toward getting the Agricultural Foundation referendum passed in November is progressing. Last night the Farm Bureau group elected J. Branley Speight and Arch Flanagan to co-chairman the work in Pitt toward getting the referendum past a vote of the farmers.

Called "Nickels for Knowledge" by the state Farm Bureau and other agricultural organizations, the referendum would raise the cost of fertilizer for the farmer. That nickel would then be put in the Foundation to spur on its research fund.

Speight and Flanagan will head a committee composed of Hugh Winslow and W. Connor Eagles, Greenville, and W. A. Allen, Farmville, to inform the farmers of the county concerning the purpose of the referendum.

As described by county farm agent S. C. Winchester during the meeting, if such a research fund had been available prior to now, it is possible that the farmers of Pitt would be planting an immune tobacco variety instead of a resistant variety.

The referendum will be held in the townships November 3. Persons who will conduct the polls will be Dr. M. T. Frizzelle, Ayden; P. S. Rasberry, Beaver Dam; Carl Scott, Belvoir; W. A. House, Bethel; W. E. Little, Chicod; Judson Whitehurst, Carolina; Woodrow Woodson, Falkland; Jack Lewis, Farmville; Alton Moore, Fountain; Alton Barrett, Greenville; J. Paul Davenport, Pactolus; Alton Gardner and W. C. Chauncey, Swift Creek; and Vernon Cox, Winterville.

New Eagle Scout Registration Near End In Ayden Bond Election

Climaxes Three Years Of Scouting For Greenville Boy

Fifteen-year-old Bill Simmons of Greenville last night received the first Eagle Scout badge presented by the Pitt District, Boy Scouts of America, in approximately four years.

Simmons, a member of Troop 30, was presented his badge by his aunt, Mrs. Paul A. Scott Sr., at the Boy Scout court of honor held at the city hall. H. Frank Steinoeck, awards chairman of the district, who in turn pinned it on her nephew.

Bill has been a Boy Scout for three years and at the present time is senior patrol leader of Troop 30. Before being elected by his troop as senior patrol leader last June, Bill served as a patrol leader in the troop for more than a year, and his patrol won a blue ribbon at the Council Camporee held in Wilson last spring. During the summer months, Bill was a junior counselor at Camp Charles, Boy Scout camp near Bailey, for six weeks.

After the Eagle Scout badge had been presented to Simmons, his scoutmaster, Bill Drum, offered his congratulations, and said Simmons is "one of the finest Scouts I've ever known." Drum thanked Bill for his diligent work in scouting to attain the Eagle rank, and for his cooperation and leadership in Troop 30. "This is the kind of thing for a scoutmaster to work for and wait for," Drum said as he congratulated the scout.

Simmons is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Simmons of Greenville, and the nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Scott Sr. He is a member of the sophomore class at Greenville High School.

Three other scouts received merit badge awards at the court of honor last night. They were Dickie Newell of Troop 30 who received merit badges for swimming and life saving; Preston Jarvis of Troop 36 who received a merit badge for citizenship in the home, and Angus Duff of Troop 30 who received merit badges for first aid, pioneering and personal health. The badges were presented by District Commissioner Jack Dowdy.

Charles A. White, president of the Greenville Rotary Club, was the principal speaker at the court of honor. White told the scouts that American people are the only ones left in the world who have freedom, and he reminded the boys that freedom carries its responsibilities which must be shouldered by the individual if freedom is to be maintained.

The proposed expenditure from the $70,000 bond issue for improving the town's sewer system calls for the extension of sewer lines to sections in South Ayden and West Ayden which at present are not served by sewer lines. The project likewise includes the installation of a 100 foot tower. If the water bond issue is passed by the voters the project will also include a water softener unit for the town.

Stokes explained that the $70,000 bond issue for the water system improvements would be paid off out of the town's earnings from utilities, and would not affect the tax rate of Ayden.

Long-Standing Suit On Cotton Claim Is In Court

Farmville Man Seeks Reimbursement Or Return Of 127 Bales Of Cotton Stored In Bonded Warehouse Since 1939

By JOHN D. SPINKS, JR. Reflector City Editor

An attempt to get a Pitt County man reimbursed for his 12-year-old cotton, or at least get it back into his hands, entered superior court this morning.

The case concerns an action brought in 1949 by J. H. Harris, Farmville merchant and farmer, against A. B. Fairley, superintendent of the bonded cotton warehouses of the state. It was instituted in Pitt superior court late in 1949 and in the meantime has been to the Supreme Court on demurrers and motions.

This is the first time the case has ever been tried on its own merits in superior court.

The history of the suit goes back to 1939 when Harris began storing his cotton in the Farmville Bonded Warehouse. By 1942 he had stored 127 bales without taking the loan rate and as yet has not been paid for any of it nor has he been able to get it out of storage, according to allegations in the suit.

The case has brought together the largest number of attorneys, on both sides, that Pitt has seen in many years. Representing Fairley and other officials of the warehouse system are Harry McMullan and three other attorneys from Raleigh; Sam B. Underwood, Jr., of Greenville; and two others from Tarboro.

Presenting Harris are J. B. James and W. W. Speight of Greenville.

By noon today the bevy of lawyers was still engaged in drawing a jury and had exhausted the regular venire. A dozen others were sent for and, according to defense counsel, the jury should be sitting for the hearing by mid-afternoon. The trial is expected to take about three days.

Harris, who evidently was in no hurry to collect on his cotton, bided his time, the suit alleges, until 1944 when he asked George S. Williams, manager of the Farmville warehouse, to either sell the bales or return them to him.

Williams, it is alleged, made excuses concerning payment or the return of the cotton but promised that if Harris would not go to court about it, he would either deliver all of the bales or sell them at the going rate.

That same year Harris asked Williams to sell 22 bales at the best market rate, provided the market was 22 cents per pound or better. At that time the North Carolina Cotton Growers Cooperation Association had fixed the price at 22.18 cents per pound.

Following that action Harris in early 1947 asked Williams to deliver or sell the remaining 105 bales at the going rate of 32.06 cents per pound. Williams, it is alleged, did neither, causing Harris to make formal claim for the cotton on the State Warehouse Superintendent having informed the attorney general of Williams' action.

The suit is asking for $19,376.86 which was the value of the 22-bale and the 105-bale lots of cotton at the going rates when sale of each was requested.

Just before the suit was instituted in superior court, Williams was found dead at the home of his daughter in Washington in August 1949, which the Beaufort County coroner termed suicide.

Prior to that the State Bureau of Investigation found that Williams had requested farmers in the county to sell the cotton for him, which the suit alleges, caused the farmers to think that they were selling cotton belonging to Williams personally.

The investigation found that payment for the sale of the cotton was later turned over to Williams by the farmers, the suit states.

Ridgway Accused Of Conspiracy To Stall Talks; Reds Refuse Talk Conditions; Greatest Jet Battle Of War Staged Over MIG Alley; Allied Victory

TOKYO (UP)—A new deadlock in attempts to resume Korean cease-fire talks intensified today, and the Communists accused Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway of a "conspiracy of stalling."

United Nations and Communist liaison officers met for the third time in an attempt to agree on a basis for resuming negotiations. Their meeting ended in deadlock and no further meeting was announced.

Tonight the Peiping radio, mouthpiece of the Chinese Communist government, accused U.N. Supreme Commander Ridgway of "conspiracy" to delay the talks because of his insistence that there must be safeguards against further Red allegations of violation of the armistice conference neutral zone in Kaesong.

Reporting that the third liaison meeting resulted in no progress, Peiping repeated that they were willing to resume full-scale negotiations at once.

But Ridgway's liaison officer Col. Andrew J. Kinney "again reported to the old stalling tactics of discussing conditions first," Peiping said.

The liaison officers met Wednesday for 90 minutes in Kaesong. Both sides refused to budge. The Communists returned despite their walkout Tuesday but refused to discuss anything except the time and date for reopening of full-scale peace talks without discussing conditions for them.

8TH ARMY HQ, Korea (UP)—U. S. and British fighters probably shot down two communist jets and damaged 13 others today in the biggest series of all-jet air battles in history.

A total of nearly 350 United Nations and Communist jet planes tangled in four separate 60-minute-hour dogfights over "MIG Alley" in northwest Korea during the day.

The result raised the United Nations score in two days of swirling air battles to five Soviet-built MIG-15 jet fighters destroyed, two probably destroyed and 17 damaged.

Student Forum Has Term's First Meet

Fifty-Six Delegates From Six High Schools In Eastern N. C. Attend Bicameral Legislative Session Here

By MURIEL SHOTWELL Reflector Staff Writer

The first session of the 1951-52 Eastern Carolina Student Forum convened in the Greenville High School assembly rooms last night.

Fifty-six delegates representing six high schools in eastern North Carolina discussed seven resolutions during the two-hour bicameral legislative sessions.

Neighboring schools were invited to participate in the forum by the Greenville High School Chapter of the National Forensic League. R. E. Starling, NFL advisor, said the purpose of the discussion groups was to give boys and girls practice in thinking and speaking. "Of course," he said, "participants learn parliamentary procedure and become better informed concerning current world affairs. The five meetings last year were very successful."

Students attending the forum were divided into a House and Senate and discussions were conducted as legislative sessions.

Douglas Mitchell, president of the National Forensic League, host to the other schools, presided as president of the Senate. Resolutions favoring the Federal Government's making a sincere effort to balance the nation's budget, endorsing North Carolina's abolishing of capital punishment, and supporting the idea of every high school having a special auto driving course as an elective.

Forbes of Washington presided as Speaker of the House.

Twenty-four delegates were seated in the Senate: Robert Bright, Belvoir-Falkland; Jimmy Warren, Roxboro; Neal Trueblood, Washington; Juanita Garris, Phyllis Stocks, Hannah Jackson, Steve Parish, and Wilbur Jackson, Ayden; Virginia Smith, Margaret McCarty, Edward Dowd, Roy Taylor, Betty Small, Ginger Worthington, and Douglas Mitchell, Greenville; and Malcolm Cox, Peggy Sanders, Gail Smith, Pat Sheppard, L. C. Carlton, Joanne Wellons, Betty Stanford, Joanne May, Jo Ann Jones, and Sara Bett Wheatley, Kinston.

In the Senate two students, Hunter Tillman and Bill Mewborn, represented Roxboro; Peggy Lewis and Penny Tyson, Belvoir-Falkland; Jo Ann Padley, Millie Tripp, Faye Stocks, and Gwendolyn McLawhorn, Ayden; Polly Brady, Rachael Lang, Jackie Moore, Frank Bodkin, Lula Mayo, Kathryn Tucker, Patav Baker, John Brooks, Ray Evans and Billy Dunn, Greenville; Wayne Mar-emergency supplies and equipment. The House termed the program unrealistic and slashed it to $85,355,000. The matter now is before the Senate.

Security Information Rule In U.S. Executive Branch

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Truman today ordered the entire executive branch of government to follow the state and defense departments' plan for control of security information.

Mr. Truman established uniform standards for classifying and protecting security information. But he warned all agency heads not to use the new system to cover up their mistakes.

"To put the matter bluntly," Mr. Truman said in a directive to all department heads, "these regulations are designed to keep security information away from potential enemies and must not be used to withhold non-security information or to cover up mistakes made by any official or employee of the government."

By executive order, Mr. Truman provided that in the future all departments shall follow the same system — heretofore used exclusively by state and defense — for putting security information into four classes: top secret, secret, confidential, or restricted.

The President and members of his staff insisted no element of censorship was involved in the new plan, and promised to squelch promptly any effort by a government official to classify non-security information.

Possible New Operation Facing British Monarch

LONDON (UP)—King George VI was officially reported in "good" condition today, but his doctors said he had spent a less restful night and he faced the possibility of a second operation within two weeks.

The seventh medical bulletin to be issued by five attending doctors since they removed all or part of one of the king's lungs Sunday said: "The king has had a less restful night, but his majesty's general condition this morning is good and progress is maintained."

king was being given smaller quantities of opiates to dull the post-operative pain.

It was more than offset by assurances that the frail 55-year-old monarch was maintaining his progress in his battle for survival.

Newspaper Price Now Ten Cents

LOS ANGELES (UP)—The Los Angeles Examiner announced today it will increase the price of its papers on newsstands and from vendors from 7 cents to 10 cents effective Oct. 1.

The paper, a Hearst publication, said the increase was necessitated by recent increases in the cost of newsprint, wages and other materials.

Tough Attitude Pays

This Country Has Been Putting Czechoslovakia 'Through The Hoops' Since Fake Trial Of William Oatis; Now Red Ambassador Hints Possible Release

By HARRY FERGUSON

A few weeks ago President Truman bowed out the new Czechoslovakian ambassador to the United States. Vladimir Prochazka had called at the White House to present his credentials, and according to the rule book of diplomacy, he and the president should have exchanged greetings and assured each other of the everlasting friendship between the United States and Communist Czechoslovakia.

Yesterday there was a sequel to the dressing down that the Czech ambassador received. Prochazka called a press conference in Washington and said Czechoslovakia might be willing to release Oatis if the United States would only be up on counter measures it has taken. Those measures are designed to choke off the flow of trade into Czechoslovakia and apparently they are hurting the Communists worse than Washington realized.

Reports coming in from Europe trouble inside Czechoslovakia. Like an iceberg, most of it is below the surface and cannot be seen. But some of it shows. Like the recent incident of the Czech railroad engineer who ran his train across the border into Germany and surrendered it to the American authorities. The engineer and 32 of the 111 passengers decided they did not want to go back to Czechoslovakia and will seek asylum in the free world. That is a surface symptom and collecting legitimate news.

Pose As Police, Ransack House

CHICAGO (UP)—Four masked men, posing as police officers investigating an accident, talked their way into the suburban home of a steel manufacturer last night and stole $35,000 in jewelry and $3,500 in cash.

Five persons at the home of Bucky Harris, 35, Glencoe, Ill., were herded into the library and terrorized for a half-hour while the robbers ransacked the house.

"Time is one thing we all have the same amount of," White asserted. "We all have today. Yesterday is gone and tomorrow may never come." He urged the youths to apply themselves in scout work and school work in their younger years and in their businesses or professions in later years. "Most any man or any boy can get anything he wants within reason if he works for it and digs for it," White declared.

Tuesday's 668,022 pounds of tobacco were sold for $384,295.83. Moore said the averages reported from the Farmville market were official.

Farmville Mart Has $57.54 Day

FARMVILLE—Yesterday's averages on the Farmville tobacco market were reported as $57.54, which was a drop from Monday's report of $59.44.

Fred C. Moore, supervisor of sales, said there was a medium type of tobacco on the floor with leaf cutters, and some lugs. He said many of the farmers were satisfied with the sales.

Civil Defense Needs

When Millard Caldwell, Head Of Civil Defense, Fights For His Ideas He Takes On Biggest Foes In Sight; Whether He'll Win Or Not, Is Something Else

By VERN HAUGLAND

WASHINGTON (AP)—When Millard Caldwell loads his gun for some pretty big targets, Gen. of the Army George Marshall, for example, or Secretary of the Air Force Finletter, or the whole U.S. Congress.

Caldwell is a tall, rangy former Florida governor—and former congressman—with heavy, Lincolnian brows, a detached, dispassionate manner and a finely-honed razor tongue.

For the better part of a year now he has been saddled with one of the most frustrating jobs in government—trying to whip up public and congressional interest in a full-scale atomic-age civil defense program. Caldwell is administrator of the Federal Civil Defense Administration (FCDA).

Recently Caldwell presented the House Appropriations Committee with an estimate of $55,000,000 as his agency's minimum requirement for the year ending next June 30. The figure would have provided $260,000,000 for matching state appropriations in a bomb-shelter construction program, and $200,000,000 for the stockpiling of Caldwell says the House figure would spell a "lingering death" for his agency. "Congress doesn't know what civil defense means," he told reporters, not once but on many occasions.

Caldwell also took out after Finletter and other military officials. He referred to published accounts quoting the military as indicating the danger of attack on the United States.

On the basis of protests by Caldwell, Finletter explained that in testimony before a Senate subcommittee Aug. 20 he meant to say that the United States now is reasonably safe from direct invasion, as distinguished from air attack. Elaborating, Finletter explained: "Possible enemies of this country now have a substantial number of atomic weapons and also have

Plan For Year Made At Class Meeting

The first meeting of the Ada Cherry Sunday School class of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church was held on Monday night after being discontinued during the summer months.

The members met at the home of Mrs. J. H. Rose, teacher, with Miss Annie Turner, Mrs. Carlos Murray and Mrs. Lucian Bryan as assisting hostesses.

Mrs. George Smith, president, presided over a business session, during which the class voted not to "adopt" an orphan for the coming year but to have as its main project aid in furnishing the new Educational Building. Reports from the treasurer showed that already the class had turned in more than $200 towards equipment for its own room.

The slate of officers for the coming year was presented and approved. It was as follows: president, Mrs. George Smith; vice president, Mrs. H. R. Rogers; secretary, Mrs. James Phelps; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Norris Merritt; treasurer, Miss Sue Brickhouse.

The devotional for the evening was given by Mrs. Fred Langford. She used as a Scripture reference verses from the 11th chapter of Luke, and read comments from "Victorious Living," the devotional book by E. Stanley Jones.

During the social hour which followed, a musical contest was conducted by the hostesses, at which time Mrs. J. Harvey Ward played selections on the accordion which members were asked to identify. During the serving of fruit punch, sandwiches, nuts and sweets, Mrs. Ward rendered further selections, which were greatly enjoyed by all.

New Officers Elected At Class Meeting

The Wesley Philathea Class of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church, at its first meeting of the fall season, elected new officers for the coming year.

The class met at the home of Mrs. V. P. Scoville on Monday night, with Mrs. R. E. Taylor, Mrs. J. L. Nobles and Miss Addie Johnston as assisting hostesses.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. K. T. Futrell, vice president, presided. Mrs. Milton White opened the meeting with a well prepared devotional.

Routine reports were given and a discussion of the evening, a discussion of plans for the new classroom, followed. Donations were received from individuals for chairs and ways of raising the full amount required for the purchase of the furniture were suggested and approved.

A collection for the purchase of fall clothes for the orphan whom the class supports was taken and other pledges made. An announcement was made of another apron sale which will be held in October. The sale of aprons is one of the main projects of the women of the church for raising money for the new classrooms.

The slate of officers, which was presented and approved, was as follows: president, Mrs. V. P. Scoville; vice president, Mrs. K. T. Futrell; secretary, Mrs. R. E. Taylor; treasurer, Mrs. Rupert Allen; reporter, Miss Addie Congleton; teacher, Mrs. Harry Forbes.

At the conclusion of the business meeting, the hostesses, assisted by Mrs. Fred Sauve, served ice cream in ginger ale and cakes.

Shelf of Books At Library for BPW'ians

"Read about Women" is the suggestion of a most attractive display of books at the Sheppard Memorial Library this week.

Capturing one's attention is a book by Agnes Rogers, "Women Are Here to Stay." This is a fascinating book containing 502 pictures and telling of women during the last half century. "New Wings for Women," Sally Knapp, and "Tar Heel Women," Lou Rogers of Fayetteville, also occupy a place of attention in the display prepared for National Business Women's Week, September 23-29, by Mrs. Bessie Scott, head librarian, and Mrs. Columba.

In "Tar Heel Women" is a chapter telling about the life of Sallie Southall Cotten, early civic leader, writer and founder of the North Carolina Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Cotten spent most of her life in eastern North Carolina and Pitt County and both Woman's College in Greensboro and East Carolina College in Greenville have dormitories named "Cotten Hall" in her honor.

"This Is My Story," autobiography of Eleanor Roosevelt; the biography of "Abby Aldrich Rockefeller" by Mary Ellen Chase; "Belles On Their Toes" by Gilbreth and Carey; "Champion of Women" by Blake and many other books are included for suggested reading about women who have made great contributions to American life.

Thursday has been set aside as Equal Rights Day and the local Business and Professional Women's Club is making plans to observe this special day along with 2700 other similar clubs throughout the nation.

F. J. Forbes, Sr. Rites Thursday

Fred James Forbes, Sr., 68, died at the Pitt Memorial Hospital Wednesday morning at six o'clock following an illness of several weeks.

Funeral services will be conducted at the chapel of the S. G. Wilkerson and Sons Funeral Home Thursday at 3 P.M. with the Rev. Leon Russell, pastor of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church officiating, assisted by the Rev. H. L. Watson, assistant pastor of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church, and the Rev. Robert W. Bradshaw of Wilson, a former pastor of the church. Interment will be in Cherry Hill Cemetery. Nephews will serve as active pallbearers and honorary pallbearers will be intimate friends of the family. Mr. Forbes was born in Greenville, a son of the late Alfred and Jane Williams Forbes of Pitt County. He was educated at Trinity College (now Duke University). He was married in 1907 to Miss Blanche Mayo of Bethel. In the same year he was made cashier of the National Bank of Greenville, which position he held for 25 years. Following the closing of the bank, he was made liquidating agent in different towns in North Carolina. In 1936 he moved to Raleigh where he liquidated the Raleigh Banking and Trust Company of that city. While there, he was one of the first organizers of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association. He returned to Greenville in 1941 and since that time has been engaged in the real estate business. He was a member of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church and for many years served as treasurer of the church. Surviving are his wife; one daughter, Mrs. Robert Black of New London, Conn.; two sons, Fred Jr., and John Mayo Forbes of Greenville; four sisters, Mrs. Hortense F. Moyer, Mrs. Bruce F. Hadley, Mrs. S. T. White and Mrs. W. L. Best, all of Greenville; two grandsons, Jimmie Forbes and Bobby Black, Jr.; also several nieces and nephews.

Both carried bouquets of pink asters.

Jeanette Elks, Chocowinity; Miss Jean Tucker, Simpson; and Mrs. J. C. Singleton, Washington, all cousins of the bride, were honorary bridesmaids. All wore dresses in pastel shades with full skirts, matching head-dresses, and corsages of asters.

Mrs. Elks, mother of the bride, wore a dress of purple with black accessories. Mrs. Carson, mother of the bridegroom, wore navy, with maroon hat and black accessories. Both wore corsages of white carnations and gladioli.

Mrs. Barnhill is a graduate of Grimesland High School and is now employed as bookkeeper at Belk-Tyler's in Greenville. Mr. Barnhill received his education in the school at Stokes and at State College in Raleigh. He is now employed with the state department of Soil Conservation and is located at New Bern.

Immediately following the ceremony on Sunday afternoon the wedding party and special friends were entertained at a reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Tucker, Simpson, aunt of the bride. For the wedding trip the bride changed to a suit of purple with black accessories and wore the orchid from her bridal bouquet as a corsage.

On Friday night following the rehearsal, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Smith, sister of the bridegroom, entertained at a cake-cutting at their home in Robersonville.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLAS
SENSITIVITY OF SOUL

We are told that some radios are so sensitive that they can be tuned to catch the disturbances of the very distant stars.

The receiving sets in your living room and in mine are not of that variety. Only a few such delicate sets exist. But there are sets so sensitive and so delicately attuned that disturbances millions of miles away are caught by these instruments and recorded.

We can liken the soul of man to a radio receiving set. Some people's souls are about as spiritually efficient as the original crystal set radios of thirty years ago.

The souls of others are so sensitive that the divine will easily makes itself known to such persons. They look at life from the standpoint of religious values. They think of people in terms of moral character. They criticize themselves unmercifully and are generous in their praise of others. They are fine spiritual instruments attuned to the principles of that God who is at one and the same time afar off yet very near to everyone of us.

Watch out for the sensitivity of that delicate instrument which humanity has agreed to call the soul. It can be easily thrown out of adjustment—in fact, seriously damaged.

Proof Positive Of Scouting's Comeback

Time was not so many years ago when Greenville and Pitt County were ranked with the tops as communities which emphasized Boy Scouting in this section of the state.

At one time Eagle Scouts active in scouting here numbered in the 'teens, but during the war years the movement faltered here, and since that time leaders have struggled to push Scouting back to its place of prominence.

Last night the Pitt district awarded to Billy Simmons of troop 30 the first Eagle badge which has been awarded by the district in several years. The attainment of the rank by Billy is the result of many long hours of work by him, his scoutmaster Bill Drum, and many others connected with the scout organization locally.

A New Test Of America's Self Discipline

It will be interesting to watch the attitude and the actions of the United States government toward the political situations in England and France during the next few weeks as the people choose between the Laborites and the Conservatives on the one hand, and coalition and extreme nationalism on the other.

There is little likelihood that the government of this nation will take an active part in the elections in Britain and France the like of which it was accused of taking in Italy last year where there was a showdown battle between the forces of freedom and the puppets of Moscow. In Italy practically all the Western Allies banded together without making any bones about the matter and did all they could to assure defeat of Communist candidates at the polls.

In France and England this year, however, the question is not Communism. The United States can not show partiality to the opposing sides without risking a break of good will between the people of both nations and the government of this country.

pled the productivity of the nation's industry and has strapped the nation's economy with unreasonably high taxes and a general slowdown of business.

In France on the other hand, the question is not so much domestic as it is international. The Pleven coalition has given its approval to the strengthened North Atlantic Treaty Organization for the unification and protection of Western European countries from both a military and an economic standpoint. DeGaulle, who is determined to oust Pleven and head the government himself, is an extreme nationalist who would not sanction the international agreements made by France. DeGaulle's unmovable stand would be to defend France first, and in no case subordinate France's own program to a program for the betterment of France and the rest of the European nations as well.

Naturally the United States does not want to see the North Atlantic Pact structure crumble, and for that reason will not be in sympathy with DeGaulle's movement.

The diplomacy of the United States will be taxed to the greatest to remain completely aloof from the British and French political situations during the coming weeks. It will be interesting to see what subtle tactics the government of this nation will use, if any, to influence the outcome of the British elections and the French situation.

National Whirligig

WASHINGTON—Confusion always accompanies the thinking and policy-fixing involved in such a prodigious effort as the United States is making in its attempt to rearm both the Old and New Worlds against a large-scale attack or around-the-world guerrilla warfare by Russia. But it has reached its peak at Washington today, in the opinion of veteran observers.

Oddly, the officials held responsible for this situation are not so much the politicians around the White House and on Capitol Hill, although they have contributed their share.

The men blamed by their erstwhile colleagues of the industrial, financial and business communities are such respectables as Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson, former head of General Electric, and Eric A. Johnston, former president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

TARGETS—It is a sort of man-bites-dog story when such bigwigs from the ranks of the free enterprisers become the targets of Wall Street and La Salle Street attack instead of the politicians who never let even a hot or "cold war" interfere with the vote-getting industry.

But for the last month Messrs. Wilson, Johnston and other business big leaguers drafted by President Truman have been severely criticized at off-the-record hearings and in what Franklin D. Roosevelt once characterized as "well-stocked clubs."

This critical attitude is best reflected in the comment of a prominent industrialist—his name is a household word, if it could be published—on the operations of the Wilson-Johnston group. He said: "SPELL—I don't understand what happens to my friends when they take a job at Washington. They seem to fall under the spell of the men who appointed them to positions of public power. They seem to forget the basic principles on which a system of free enterprise is operated, including such items as taxes, prices, wages, profits, loss etc. They become politicians themselves."

"Chrysler Wilson knows that Truman's spending-as-usual policies are wrong. So does Eric. But, although they are doing him a favor by sacrificing good jobs and salaries to remain at Washington, they make no attempt to influence him. They never try to tell him the facts of economic life.

Instead, they try to fit their policies in with his Fair Deal program. They are taking advice from instead of giving it to the Missouri politicians around him. I don't get it!"

INCENSED—The steel magnates are particularly incensed at Mobilizer Wilson. As they are among the principal suppliers for his company, G.E. in peace or war time, their attitude is especially noteworthy.

When President Truman demanded that they expand under threat that the government would build its own plants, Mr. Wilson was among those who denounced this policy. Only a few months ago, he gave assurances that steel's past and proposed plant expansion would fill the needs of the rearmament program and civilian production.

But recently he criticized them for lagging behind in present and in prospects for promised output. They don't know whether he got his figures from Pentagon planners, or from the Council of Economic Advisers to the White House.

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, Jr.

Most of us have read thousands of war stories during the past several years, but very seldom can you find one with love on the battlefield. This happened in Korea last week. A 26-year-old Chinese Red officer crossed over to the allied lines waving a white flag. Normally the enemy is close-mouthed, but this man, Lieutenant Fan Wei-ning, was full of talk. He gave out important facts on the officers and men in his division; their ages, their equipment, and their battle plans.

Then he asked for a map of the village where his division was based, and pointed out a supply dumps, command posts and gun positions.

You can imagine the surprise of U.N. men. Never had they seen any enemy talk so much. Little did they realize at first that it was love that had driven the lieutenant to give out.

Fan was glad to explain why he was talking so much. Last May he found three Chinese WAOs in the division to which he was assigned as "entertainment officer" in a job somewhere in between USO director and political commissar. "One," he explained, "was a beautiful young girl named Toy. We fell in love. It was not at all bad being so far away from home under those conditions. Then the division commander began to notice Toy."

After that, Fan and Toy seldom saw each other; the commander arranged their duty hours so that one was always on duty when the other was free. Fan stood it out as long as he could. "Finally," he said, "I decided to desert."

Just as Lieutenant Fan was being led from the tent in which his interrogation took place, he stopped, returned to the map, studied it intently for a minute, and then marked a big neat cross on the map.

COURTHOUSES There is in the state hall of history an album containing photographs of all the one hundred county court houses in North Carolina. In a recent story your reporter said that so far as he knew there was no such grouping of compilation of court house photos. So far as has been ascertained to date there are two complete albums, and numerous others with from fifty to seventy-five courthouse pictures. One complete group is in the hall of history at Raleigh. The other is in a private library at Forest City.

COMPLETE — Of fence Griffin, editor of the Forest City Courier and historian for the North Carolina Press Association, advises that he has personally photographed every court house in North Carolina and some 400 in other states. He prepared an album for the state department, which includes all the one hundred court houses now in use, as well as several which have been replaced in recent years. There is, for instance, a picture of the old farm building at Robbinsville (Graham county) last wooden courthouse to be used in the state. There is also a picture of the Gaston county courthouse at Dallas, before the county seat was moved to Gastonia. Griffin added to his personal album the pictures of courthouses which he snapped in other states.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER
Department and specialty stores can be expected to intensify selling efforts for the remainder of the year. They will have to promote more vigorously to offset rather poor showings.

The upturn in sales since Labor Day and prospects for a very good Christmas will help. But it will still take a lot of hard, extra selling to bring profits up to levels of recent years or, in some cases, to show any profits at all.

The Controllers' Congress of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, after a survey of 228 stores in all parts of the country, reported that 45 per cent of the stores lost money in the first six months of this year.

The net profit from merchandising operations of the average store went down to 0.6 per cent, as compared with 2.3 per cent last year. The net gain after taxes averaged 1 per cent compared with 2.3 per cent last year.

This was in spite of the fact that total sales in dollars were 2 per cent higher than a year earlier. However, the total number of transactions fell 3 per cent. The gain in dollars was attributed to the fact that the average sales check rose from $3.99 to $4.19.

Part of the trouble came from high inventories. Raymond F. Copes, general manager of the Congress, said that stock turn-overs in stores doing more than $1,000,000 in sales a year, went down from 1.9 to 1.5. The inventory situation was further reflected in the rise in mark-downs; they increased 4.3 per cent.

But the basic trouble, Mr. Copes pointed out, is the fact that department and specialty store margins are frozen. This makes the price the store pays the basis for its ceiling prices.

"The typical department store in the over $1,000,000 volume bracket paid out 18.9 cents of every dollar they received from customers for salaries and wages of people working in the stores. This figure represents pure payroll costs, exclusive of any fringe benefits such as insurance, taxes, pensions," he said. "Actual payroll in the retail store accounted for better than 50 per cent after paying for merchandise."

He pointed out that manufacturers can include wages and other operating costs in computing ceiling prices but stores can't.

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK —(AP)—Well, looky who's come to our town! The fall guy himself.

Yes, big-chested autumn, the hinge of the year, the best of the seasons, holding on to summer with one hand and throwing a fist against the face of winter.

Welcome back, strong boy. Comb the vine leaves out of your hair, kid. Sit down, and stay for a long, long while.

We heard you hollering in the hills on the way; we feel better already now that you're here. The place is breezier since you blew in—laughing like a happy traveling salesman, full of good stories and fresh gossip of far places.

Oh, it's always better when the big fall guy rolls into town. Summer is a warm cocoon, a fat and drowsy time. Summer is for dreaming, and resting and nesting.

But autumn is for scheming. Autumn is a git-up-and-go-on-with-new-living month. Autumn is a signal to call us back from recess—a bugle to send us back into the battle and try to make our dreams come true, before chill winter wraps us in the year's cold cocoon.

It is the season of new projects, higher goals, bigger problems—and fresh faith to deal with them.

The fox barks at night on a country ridge; his two-footed cousin, the city wolf, is back on his favorite street corner whistling for his troubles.

Baby gets over his last colic, and a new boy carries sister's books home from high school. "He's a nice boy, too," says Mama. Papa grunts. "He looks like a half-grown ape in corduroy to me." When he bawls out to his brother for saying, "I think I'm old enough to have the car every Friday night this year, Dad. How about it?"

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS
WASHINGTON — The beauty queen contest craze has spread from cotton, orange, apple, TV, Miss and Missus America queens to the capital's exclusive Embassy Row. Sponsored by "Washington Diplomat," a slick magazine dedicated to news and chit-chat about foreign envoys, the contest arouses close competition. There are so many beauties from abroad to choose from.

Barely a year old, "Washington Diplomat," edited by the personable Monty Radlovic, formerly a news correspondent with Reuters's News Service, has already selected its first beautiful women in a series to be announced annually.

Senorita Diana Oreamuno, vivacious, dark-eyed daughter of the Costa Rican ambassador, was the winner. Judges were Mrs. Edward G. Miller, Jr., wife of the assistant secretary of state, Mrs. Marie McNair, society editor of the "Washington Post," and Fernando Galan, first secretary of the Cuban embassy.

The pretty Oreamuno was born in New York 20 years ago and educated in the U.S. She is athletic—a fine swimmer and enthusiastic horsewoman. For her beauty and charm she won a handsome Persian rug, which now graces the floor of her boudoir.

The beauties are selected from the group of lovely women who are "cover girls" on the magazine. Selections of beauties from the diplomatic corps are based on background, poise and education as well as beauty—a pretty smile is not enough," Mr. Radlovic told me.

Among recent "cover girls," any one of whom is a likely queen for next spring's selection, was charming Lady Elliot, wife of Air Marshal Sir William Elliot, chairman of the British Joint Services Mission, in this country only a little more than two months.

A petite, graceful, brunette, she is the daughter of the former governor of Trinidad and Southern Rhodesia.

Other beauties included Mme. M. O. A. Baig, broad-eyed wife of the Minister of Pakistan; the wife of the Guatemalan ambassador, Senora Aida Aragon de Alvarado, the third secretary of the Pakistani embassy, Mme. Bokman, wife of the Swedish ambassador, and the appealing Mme. Popovic, wife of the Yugoslav envoy.

Executives map out new advertising appropriations, bigger plant expansions, wider sales promotions, and wonder if they will be able to afford two weeks in Florida next January. In Wall Street the clerks and stenographers wonder if the Christmas bonus will be big enough to give where more than one million dollars had been chiseled by jobless workers in a three month period this year. The enforcers found out about that ruck. They probably didn't scratch the surface.

Many people do not realize that this jobless benefit money is contributed entirely by employers. They think it is part of the deductions made from their wages. All of this money comes from employers.

The purpose of the law is good, in that people who must leave work through absolutely no fault of their own can be helped when they need help.

But when some of the practices allowed over the past few years become general, the purpose of the law is flouted. The violators should be found and punished.

When a person is unemployed, they must make two or three applications every week or so for employment in order to continue drawing the payments. Many make token applications, preferring to draw the payments rather than work.

This is especially true of young mothers. In many cases, they can draw more from the unemployment payments for 20 weeks than they can net from working. If they work, they have to pay a maid to care for their child. After they pay the maid, pay their taxes, buy their lunch, etc., there isn't much left. So they use great skill in feigning a desire to work to draw that unemployment check, which is all net.

Just this morning, we read

When a person is unemployed, they must make two or three applications every week or so for employment in order to continue drawing the payments. Many make token applications, preferring to draw the payments rather than work.

This is especially true of young mothers. In many cases, they can draw more from the unemployment payments for 20 weeks than they can net from working. If they work, they have to pay a maid to care for their child. After they pay the maid, pay their taxes, buy their lunch, etc., there isn't much left. Art Supervisor's Work To Be Shown In Atlanta

James A. Walker, art supervisor for the Training School at East Carolina College and other city schools, has been honored by having his "Vol de Nuit" chosen for display in the Sixth Southeastern Annual Exhibition in the High Museum, Atlanta, Georgia, September 30-October 14. The work, an imaginative study of cats, attracted favorable comment during the spring when it was included in the Fourteenth North Carolina Artists Annual Exhibition at the State Art Gallery in Raleigh.

The Atlanta exhibition, one of the most important regional art shows held in this country, includes, 150 works by artists in eight South-eastern states. The paintings, including both oil and water color studies, were selected by Francis Chapin and William Thon, both outstanding American artists.

Mr. Walker's "Vol de Nuit" is a water color-pen and ink. Unusual in technique, it shows in subject matter a sense of humor not often observed in gallery exhibitions.

Mr. Walker, who is from Richmond, Michigan, has been connected with East Carolina and the Greenville city schools for the past two years. During this time, he has exhibited his works in eight art shows, including the Virginia-North Carolina Artists Exhibition in Norfolk, the Piedmont Festival in Winston-Salem, and the National Art Exhibit at Huckleberry Mountain, Hendersonville, N. C.

He is a graduate of the University of Michigan, West Michigan College, and Columbia University.

Welfare Dept. Notes

The many services offered by the Pitt County Public Welfare Department are carried out by highly trained staff of caseworkers who are just in their infancy as far as being recognized as professional workers.

Every caseworker must have a degree from an accredited college and further training if they wish to advance. Although a special type of degree is not compulsory at present, a sociology degree is now coming into preference. A person who trains to go into welfare work with a sociology degree must take numerous courses in psychology, sociology, economics, political science, etc. All these courses are designed to give the worker a more understanding attitude and an unbiased view of the problems at hand.

It is a type of study that gives a thorough background in attempting to understand human nature and its existing problems. Psychology is the study of the individual with group behavior. A thorough study of both these fields is essential to the caseworker as a foundation for his profession.

The caseworker must be familiar with various State laws that are connected with welfare policies. In a way it would be safe to say that a caseworker is a doctor, psychiatrist, lawyer and counselor all bundled into one package. Even though a hopeful college graduate has intentions of working in a welfare department that does not mean he or she will necessarily receive an appointment. The Merit System provides a series of creditable examinations that must be passed before any worker can receive any new position. Only in this way can it be sure that it is getting qualified caseworkers for the responsibility demanded by each position.

"The caseworker has not yet reached its full measure of recognition," says K. T. Futrell, superintendent of the department of public welfare, "however, all satisfaction is not necessarily measured by recognition. The real satisfaction comes in serving one's fellow man."

"Only when the public becomes more aware of the existence of the Public Welfare Department services to society, can it expand and render its fullest benefits to society," said Futrell.

Farm Labor Still Scarce In State

RALEIGH (AP)—Obtaining sufficient farm labor is still a big problem for some North Carolina farmers.

The Federal-State Crop Reporting Service reported yesterday that cotton pickers are scarce and wages are high. "Some farmers exchange work in order to get their crops harvested," the agency stated.

About one-fifth of the cotton crop had been harvested as of Sept. 22. The condition of the crop ranges from fair to very good. The best crop appears to be in the central and southeast sections. The agency gave this report on other crops:

Corn: prospects are generally fair to good. Approximately 10 per cent of the crop has been harvested to date.

Tobacco: harvest of the crop is almost complete.

Peanuts: a good crop is expected, particularly in the large commercial area where ample moisture has prevailed.

Sweet potatoes: prospects are generally fair, with reports of fair to good from eastern counties.

Apples: about 20 per cent of the commercial crop in the mountains has been harvested. The condition of the crop ranges from fair to good.

Parole Follows Death Sentence

RALEIGH (AP)—A Robeson County man originally under sentence to die for first degree burglary has gone home a free man. State Paroles Commissioner Dr. T. C. Johnson announced today that George A. Johnson was among 14 prisoners granted paroles by Governor Scott.

Johnson was convicted in Robeson County in August, 1940, of entering the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Curry at Pembroke. His sentence was commuted to life imprisonment in January, 1941, by Governor Clyde R. Hoey. In 1941 it was reduced to 30 to 40 years by Governor Gregg Cherry.

Dr. Johnson said testimony showed the crime was committed while Johnson was drunk. "The Paroles Commissioner added: "This case was used as an argument before the legislature for changing the law so that a person convicted under such circumstances might be convicted of second degree instead of first degree burglary."

Mrs. McCrary Resigns Employment Office Post

Mrs. Mary McCrary, interviewer at the Unemployment Compensation office, has resigned her position there to take a position with the United States Government.

Mrs. McCrary has been with the employment office here for the past four years and came here from the Winston-Salem office. Other than an interviewer, she was active in the testing program for high school seniors who were not planning to go to college.

The tests were administered by Mrs. McCrary and included 10 basic aptitudes which formed 20 wide occupational aptitudes patterns. These tests helped to place high school graduates in the work they were best suited.

W. B. Dillingham, manager of the employment office, said Mrs. McCrary's resignation was a loss to the community among both the employers and employees and her work had been valuable in the community. work would include traveling all over the United States but Greenville would still be her residence.

She said she was thrilled over her new job but she hated to leave the high school testing program. Last night the employees of the employment office took Mrs. McCrary to Washington for supper and presented her with a traveling alarm clock as a farewell gift.

Long Travels Bring Mother And Children To New Home In City

It's a long way from here to Costa Rica but the want of a good education for her children brought Mrs. Sheila De Savigny all the way from the tropics to Greenville, via Wilmington.

After the death of her husband in March, Mrs. De Savigny wanted to leave San Jose and bring her children to the United States so they could have opportunities that they could not get in Costa Rica. Her decision to come to the South was aided by Mrs. Virginia Maynard when Mrs. Maynard told her to go to Wilmington where she had relatives.

Mrs. De Savigny and her three children, Chester, 17, Richard, 16, and Marjorie, 14, boarded a plane for Miami August 2 at 10:00 a. m. and flew for six hours until they reached Miami. Here the De Savignys ran into difficulty. Their children were admitted immediately into the country since their father was an American but Mrs. De Savigny had to wait until the customary red tape was cut.

At Miami they boarded a bus for Wilmington and arrived there at midnight, August 3. Mrs. De Savigny made Wilmington her headquarters for a while until she could find a town she wanted to settle in. It so happened the Mrs. Maynard was an aunt to Sybil Harris who lives here so Mrs. De Savigny came to Greenville to look for the kind of school in which she wanted to attend and she found it. Mrs. De Savigny said the educational facilities here were exactly what she had in mind for her children—a good high school, a four-year college, and a nice small town to boot. She commented on Greenville being one of the friendliest towns she had ever been in and she wanted to make it her home.

"People here go out of their way to be friendly," she said in her charming accent, "and they are always smiling. I don't think I could ask for a better environment for my children." She compared Greenville with San Jose by saying it was more civilized here. "You never know," she said, "what is going on in the minds of natives. In Costa Rica the native is always right and the foreigner is wrong, no matter what happens."

But Greenville was compared in another way with the tropics. "Believe it not, but it is not as hot in the tropics as it was here when I first arrived," she commented. Another thing Mrs. De Savigny commented on was the high cost of living. She said that servants in Costa Rica could be hired for $10.00 a month, and, of course, the price of meat and food was declared as being "much higher".

Mrs. De Savigny related many stories about life in San Jose but the one which probably is more pertinent now is what life was like living around Communists.

The De Savignys were in the midst of a Communist revolution since they lived in the same block where the Communists had a radio station and headquarters.

"During the revolution," she said, "shooting was going on constantly around us and we even had a wall of bricks around one window to keep bullets from coming in. One time the Communists tried to enter our house, but my husband got up enough nerve to ask for a search warrant. This confused the Communists so they left but we were in constant danger of them coming back."

At this time all of the schools were closed and little or no communication went between citizens. "Our leaders fled to the hills," Mrs. De Savigny said, "and our doctor, Orea Muno, now vice-president of Costa Rica, left with us many of his personal papers and effects to hide from the Communists."

Mrs. De Savigny said at one time her husband's life was threatened by the Communists since he has a book in his possession which contained a list of Communists in the city.

"When I was preparing to leave Costa Rica and come to the States," Mrs. De Savigny said, "I was loading up some books to give to my preacher when I came across a Communist book. The preacher asked me if I didn't want to keep the book as a souvenir but I didn't want any sort of book in my possession when I tried to enter the States."

Mrs. De Savigny went on to relate many things which had happened when she was a young girl in Costa Rica and living on her father's coffee plantation. "Many times bandits came to our house," she said, "asking, or taking, food, clothes, and guns. At one time the leader of the bandits came into our home disguised as a priest and he asked me what I thought of the bandit. Thank heavens my reply was an honest one and satisfied him. He said, 'For your opinion, your family will not suffer.'"

Mrs. De Savigny is English and was educated in English schools. She lived in Costa Rica for seven years and in Nicaragua for 17 years. At the present, Mrs. De Savigny is looking for a home here so she can settle and give her children the opportunities that cannot be found in another country other than America.

The complete war destruction of Germany was still so much in evidence, said Russell. "Nowhere else in our travels were we reminded so vividly of the devastation that European countries had suffered."

Except in Berlin, the minister said, they heard no mention of war from anyone. "The people apparently are not living under the fear of war," he answered in reply to a question, "at least not outwardly," he added.

They were in Berlin during the Communist Youth Rally in the Eastern sector, and there in Berlin they were conscious of being on the front line of the propaganda war. One of the striking recollections of Berlin was the evidence of the success of the Marshall Plan, Russell said. There was a big display in the heart of the city which was set up to inform the people of the benefits derived from the funds, and strong in England," said Russell, "with seven out of every nine sermons being preached by laymen, moving from church to church Sunday after Sunday. Though the membership rolls are small in comparison to the Church of England, the percentage of active participation is greater."

The purpose of the Conference itself was to unify Methodists throughout the world, said the minister, and there were approximately 600 attendants from all parts of the world.

During the Sunday Communion service held at Wesley Memorial Church, Bishop Ivan Lee Holt, of the St. Louis Area and president of the U. S. Ecumenical Methodist Council, delivered the sermon. Among the other most prominent

From Germany the tourists took a boat trip down the Rhine River, past the famous historical German castles, from Mainz to Cologne. Then they crossed over into Belgium for a general tour of the country. They took a short journey across to Holland and there saw some Indonesian refugees.

Leaving the Continent the group crossed over to England and spent several days in London, enjoying the splendor of that great metropolis before taking off for Scotland, where they were entranced with the lovely lake district of that country of ballad and legend fame.

By this time it was the last of August, and they went to historic Oxford for the conference sessions. In and around the conference site they visited all the shrines dear to the hearts of Methodists—Epworth, where John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, was born; Bristol; places in London where Wesley lived and worked; the little place in Aldersgate made sacred by Wesley's experiences there; and other places associated with the early history of Methodism.

While in Oxford Russell and Clegg were housed in beautiful old Christ Church College, where John and Charles Wesley were students, and where later John was a Fellow of Lincoln College. It was in Oxford that the little group who gathered around the Wesley brothers in a "Holy Club" were first called Methodists.

LOS ANGELES—(AP)—Abraham Lincoln's features have been carved in perpetuity in a 1,318-carat sapphire valued at $250,000 and owned by James and Harry Kazanjian of Los Angeles.

The "Lincoln in Sapphire" has just been completed in black with a few indistinguishable touches of deep translucent blue. It was carved during two years of work from one of the five largest known sapphires in existence.

Three of the other gems will be carved likewise, probably in the likenesses of Andrew Jackson, George Washington and Henry Ford, to provide a series of "Great Americans in Sapphire." The sapphire bust of Lincoln is not for sale. It was carved by Norman Maness, steel engraver and die maker.

Six Weeks Of Sightseeing In Europe Climaxed By Meet

By MARTHA S. FORBES
Touring Europe has been quite fashionable with local residents during the past two summers. But only one of the Continental visitors has had the pleasure and privilege of attending a world-famous conference during his stay abroad.

The Rev. Leon Russell, pastor of the Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church, was appointed in the spring as an alternate delegate to the Eighth Ecumenical (world-wide) Methodist Conference which was held in the birthplace of Methodism. He combined business with pleasure and left New York in July for six weeks of traveling in Europe before reporting for the Conference, which met in Oxford, England, from Aug. 28 through September 7.

Russell and Rev. W. L. Clegg of Burlington, another delegate, joined a party of 19 in Paris after an uneventful but pleasant boat trip across the Atlantic and together the group traveled for six weeks in Europe under the guidance of one of Thomas E. Cook's tour. The party had its own interpreter and guide and was composed of ministers and laymen.

The group spent several days in and around Paris, visiting the great cathedrals, art museums and historical shrines in the environs. From there they journeyed to Switzerland, where for ten days they browsed through Geneva, Berne, Interlocken and Zurich. In these places they had the pleasure of visiting all the churches and institutions supported by the Methodist Church.

Russell was very impressed with the deaconess movement in Switzerland. Every large Methodist church and church-supported institution were staffed by deaconesses, who for the most part carry the load of responsibility of Methodist work in the Alpine country. In Zurich also is the largest European Methodist publishing house, in which they spent many interesting hours.

From Switzerland they went to Germany and stopped briefly at Munich, Berlin, Frankfurt and Cologne. It was while they were in Germany that the party ran into a Methodist Youth Caravan from Eastern North Carolina and Tennessee, who were helping the Germans in their church rehabilitation program.

"The complete war destruction of Germany was still so much in evidence," said Russell. "Nowhere else in our travels were we reminded so vividly of the devastation that European countries had suffered."

Except in Berlin, the minister said, they heard no mention of war from anyone. "The people apparently are not living under the fear of war," he answered in reply to a question, "at least not outwardly," he added.

They were in Berlin during the Communist Youth Rally in the Eastern sector, and there in Berlin they were conscious of being on the front line of the propaganda war. One of the striking recollections of Berlin was the evidence of the success of the Marshall Plan, Russell said. There was a big display in the heart of the city which was set up to inform the people of the benefits derived from the funds, and strong in England," said Russell, "with seven out of every nine sermons being preached by laymen, moving from church to church Sunday after Sunday. Though the membership rolls are small in comparison to the Church of England, the percentage of active participation is greater."

The purpose of the Conference itself was to unify Methodists throughout the world, said the minister, and there were approximately 600 attendants from all parts of the world.

During the Sunday Communion service held at Wesley Memorial Church, Bishop Ivan Lee Holt, of the St. Louis Area and president of the U. S. Ecumenical Methodist Council, delivered the sermon. Among the other most prominent

From Germany the tourists took a boat trip down the Rhine River, past the famous historical German castles, from Mainz to Cologne. Then they crossed over into Belgium for a general tour of the country. They took a short journey across to Holland and there saw some Indonesian refugees.

Leaving the Continent the group crossed over to England and spent several days in London, enjoying the splendor of that great metropolis before taking off for Scotland, where they were entranced with the lovely lake district of that country of ballad and legend fame.

By this time it was the last of August, and they went to historic Oxford for the conference sessions. In and around the conference site they visited all the shrines dear to the hearts of Methodists—Epworth, where John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, was born; Bristol; places in London where Wesley lived and worked; the little place in Aldersgate made sacred by Wesley's experiences there; and other places associated with the early history of Methodism.

While in Oxford Russell and Clegg were housed in beautiful old Christ Church College, where John and Charles Wesley were students, and where later John was a Fellow of Lincoln College. It was in Oxford that the little group who gathered around the Wesley brothers in a "Holy Club" were first called Methodists.

"The Methodist movement is very

Americans who participated actively in the conference were Bishop Paul Martin of the Arkansas-Louisiana Area, Bishop Arthur J. Moore of the Atlanta Area, Rev. Dr. Ralph W. Sockman of New York City, and Mrs. Frank G. Brooks, president of the Woman's Society of Christian Service.

Japanese Plan Super Highway

TOKYO—(AP)—The construction ministry announced today plans are under consideration for a super highway linking Tokyo and the city of Osaka.

Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida—who recently served in San Francisco as the chief Japanese delegate to the peace treaty conference—said that he would like to see such a project started in commemoration of the signing of the treaty.

The projected super highway would cost roughly $160,000 to $190,000.

Green City Murder Case

By Wm. G. Bogart

Chapter 8
John Saxon wasn't interested in bidding on an Oriental rug, so while the small knot of people was grouped around the auctioneer at the rear of the long sales room, he wandered about near the front of the galleries.

He had used to do this sort of thing when he was a detective story writer instead of a detective investigator. Those were the days!

He shook off the mood of nostalgia and his pleasant, quiet gray eyes lit on an old pewter lamp shifted to a funny-looking vase, then they lit on the brunette.

She was tall and slim-built, and she wore furs. She seemed pretty in an experienced sort of way, yet at the same time she made him think of the Gayety Burlesque on Vine Street.

He watched her. The way she was poking around amongst a pile of assorted junk stacked back against the wall, you would have thought her life depended upon it! She had reached an old overstuffed sofa and was tugging it out of the way. Behind it, almost hidden against the wall, she had apparently located a rickety old desk.

The short round figure of Moe Martin appeared behind Johnny Saxon. Moe Martin, in a manner of speaking, was his partner.

He remarked, "I've seen moving men who couldn't do half as well!"

"Quiet, pappy!" shushed Johnny. "I'm watching her."

"Don't," said Moe Martin. "It generally costs us money when you get interested in something like her."

Johnny watched the brunette straighten up, pushing a strand of hair out of her eyes. Next she was quickly tapping down the length of the long room. He decided that her destination was the auctioneer.

Moe said, "Maybe we should be getting back to the office. Perhaps Nancy's heard from her sister while we've been out. There ought to be a fee in it. This sister of hers is married to a guy worth a barrel of money."

Johnny interrupted him. "If we do take the case we'll do it merely as a favor to Nancy. She's an old personal friend of mine."

"Do you realize we've spent a lot of money?" said Moe Martin.

"I'd hate to go broke before we get back to New York. Suppose—"

"Stop worrying!" exclaimed Johnny. "Aren't we eating good? Aren't we stopping at the Netherland-Plaza?"

"In one of their most expensive suits," said Moe, worriedly. "We could save money if we took a single room—"

"Look," said Johnny with patience. "Let's don't be depressed, uncle."

Johnny studied the old writing desk. There was a single long, very fine drawer built beneath the center writing section. Two larger drawers, perhaps four inches deep, were on either side of this. Above and behind the open writing section was a series of small cubbyholes fitted with pull-out drawers.

Johnny looked around. "Oh, oh," he said softly. "Here she comes again."

Evidently she had made some sort of arrangement with the auctioneer, for immediately he went to the old spinet desk.

"Now, my friends, who will bid five—the auctioneer began.

"Fifty dollars!" called the brunette.

Johnny Saxon's eyes sharpened. He knew the auctioneer had been going to ask for five dollars.

Johnny said clearly, "Seventy-five dollars!"

The brunette had turned her head sharply, seeking out the person who had so outrageously raised her bid.

"One hundred dollars!" she called with determination.

"One hundred and twenty-five!" Johnny winked at his stocky partner as he raised the ante.

Again Johnny Saxon caught the brunette's expression. It struck him there was something close to fear itself in her eyes now.

"One hundred and fifty!" she called.

He saw the auctioneer's questioning gaze above the heads of the intrigued crowd. Johnny gave an imperceptible shake of his head.

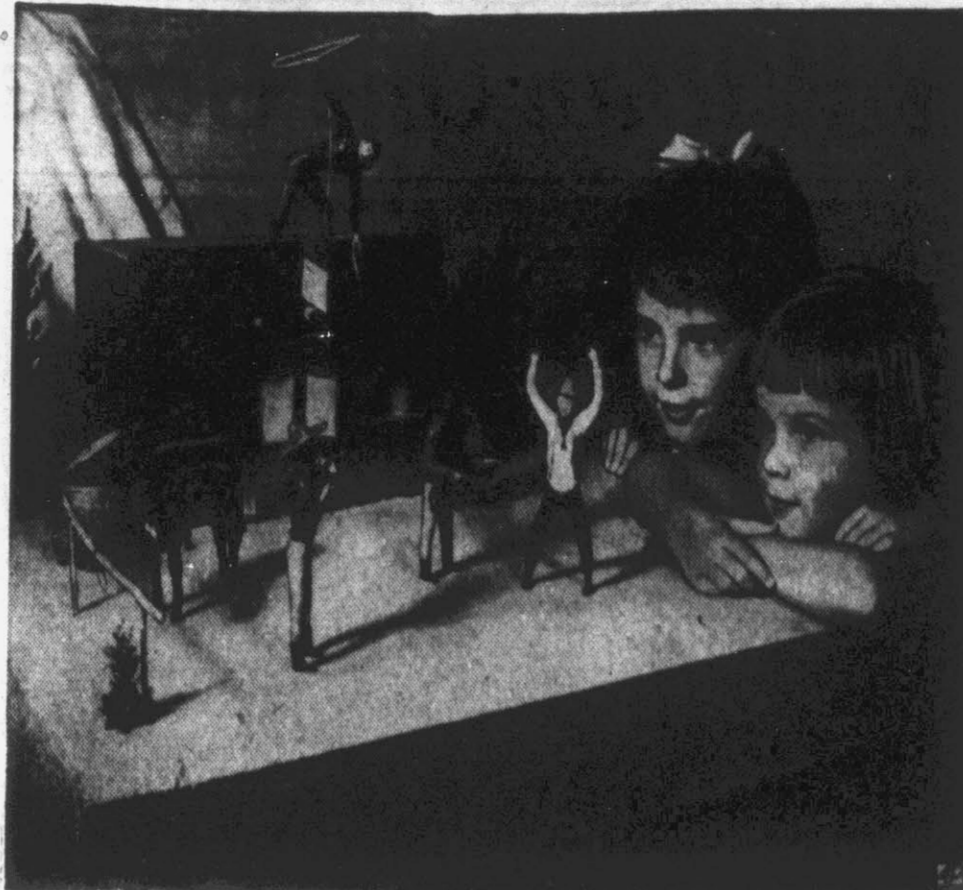

The auctioneer wound it up fast. "Sold," he said with finality.

A young man in rolled-up shirt sleeves, stepped up to the brunette.

The clerk said, "You pay me, ma'am. What's the name and address, please?"

Johnny did his best to hear the reply. But the brunette spoke in a low voice. Johnny had the definite impression that somewhere, sometime, he had seen her before.

He stepped over toward the clerk. The folded, crisp, five-dollar bill was deftly slipped into the young fellow's palm. Johnny said something. Then he was putting a copy of the brunette's address into his own pocket.

Moe Martin had seen the swift exchange of banknote and slip of paper. "What's she got," he wanted to know, "that a dozen other babes haven't—"

"The desk," Johnny told him. (To be continued)

GREENVILLE MARKET REPORT

On Monday, September 24th, the Greenville Tobacco Market sold 1,666,212 pounds of tobacco for $953,723.32, an Average of $57.24

This is the highest average of the season and shows every pound of tobacco sold on all of Greenville's 17 warehouse floors, including green, wet, damaged, rotten, nondescript and non-supported tobaccos. It contains no inflated and misleading estimates.

Individual warehouses averaged between $60.00 and $65.00 for their entire sale.

Practical tops are $72.00, with company purchases of individual baskets going as high as $95.00 per hundred pounds.

Many growers averaged over $70.00 for their entire offerings.

No market excels Greenville in prices paid for your tobacco.

We urge you to keep your tobacco dry—as wet tobacco and tobacco in too high order has no support price and there is always a heavy loss to farmers who sell their tobacco in this condition.

Bums Lose Two; Giants Within One Game

Braves Win Twice As Giants Win

Idle Yankees Move Within Two Games Of Clinching American Pennant

By CARL LUNDQUIST
United Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (UP)—It will be a subway World Series all right, but the Yankees didn't have the slightest idea today whether they will be playing baseball's modern "miracle men," the Giants, or the doddering Dodgers for the championship.

And get set for that miracle because it could occur.

The fantastic Giants are roaring home at an unbelievable pace, even surpassing the stretch run of the famed 1914 Braves, who climbed from last place on July 4 to win the flag. The Giants, who lost 11 in a row in the first two weeks of the season, weren't in last place on July 4, but they were worse off than the Braves at a much later date. On Aug. 11 they were trailing the Dodgers by 13 1-2 games, whereas the 1914 Braves were only 6 1-2 behind at that time.

Since that fateful date, the Giants have won 34 games and lost but seven for an .886 percentage. The Braves, who made their bid more quickly, played .789 ball for the last half of the season with a 60-16 won and lost mark.

Last night in one the Giants—and the Dodgers—never will forget, no matter who comes home in front.

For the gritty guys of Leo Durocher made a truly Giant stride to within one game of first place by topping the Phillies, 5 to 1, with crackling brilliance while the Dodgers were miserable for 13 innings as the Braves trampled them, 6 to 3 and 14 to 2.

At the same time, the idle Yankees moved to within two games of clinching their third straight flag when the second place Indians fell to their fourth straight defeat, 4 to 2, at Chicago and the run-down Red Sox lost a 3 to 0 two-hitter to Bob Porterfield in Washington.

The Giants, who play the Phils again tonight after the Braves take another whack at the Dodgers this afternoon, could go into a virtual tie for the lead, two percentage points behind if they win and the Dodgers' lost. Veteran 20-game winner Larry Jansen, who has beaten the Phils five times this season, opposes either erratic lefty Ken Johnson or Philly newcomer Karl Drews, who defeated the Dodgers last Friday in his only start.

For the Dodgers, erstwhile ace Don Newcombe, who has been battered in his last three starts and hasn't won a game since Sept. 8, will try once more against right hander Max Surkon, a three-time winner over Brooklyn, who lost one game to the Bums this year.

Brooklyn with five more games to play, two in Boston and three in Philadelphia, must win four to be sure of the flag, three to tie. The Giants have only three more to go, tonight in Philly and Saturday and Sunday in Boston when both staff aces, 22-game winner Sal Maglie, and Jansen will be ready again.

The Yankees, ready for a "clinching party," will have six to go, all at home, starting with the Athletics today. They are off tomorrow, then wind up with five against the Red Sox, playing Friday and Saturday double headers

A CATCH OF MORE than 500 mackerel and bluefish was made last Friday by this local party. The entire catch was made with rods and reels from the boat of Captain Johnny Styron, the Sylvia, of Morehead City. Those in the party include J. P. Moss, Jr., Ray Wingate, A. B. Wingate, Marshall Evans, Leo Hawkins, and J. Bryan Brown. (Photo by Dan Wade).

and a single game Sunday. They could nail it down on Friday. Big Jim Hearn, ahead 3 to 1 against the Phils last night, gave way to the magnificent Maglie after Willie Jones homered in the seventh and the next two batters singled. Alvin Dark with a homer and triple set a 10-hit ending the inning with a double header, then cut off the Phils the rest of the way. Alvin Dark with a homer and triple set a 10-hit ending the inning with a double header, then cut off the Phils the rest of the way.

The Braves put over six run innings to clinch both of their games. They had their big rally in the first inning of the opener when Sam Jethroe hit a two run homer and Buddy Kerr smashed a three-run double and the margin was more than enough for lefty Warren Spahn who went on to win his 22nd game—pitching with only two days of rest. Young Jim Wilson recovered from a sore arm that almost ended his career, pitched three-hit ball to win the second game. Earl Torgeson batted in six runs, three on a homer as Boston moved out 7 to 0 in two innings and kept up the deprecation the rest of the way.

The White Sox took a 4 to 0 lead on the Indians as lefty Billy Pierce survived late inning difficulty to win the game that put Cleveland three games behind. The Indians scored twice in the eighth and had the bases loaded in the ninth when Dale Mitchell lined into a game-ending double play.

Baseball May Be Tried On Anti-Trust Charges

WASHINGTON (UP)—Professional baseball apparently has failed to satisfy the government in its house-cleaning efforts and may soon find itself hauled into court on anti-trust charges, it was learned today.

What the FBI has dug up in a four month investigation is now being studied by Justice department trust busters and the legal challenge to organized baseball may be expected later this fall. Lawyers representing the major leagues were due here today for a conference with assistant Atty. Gen. H. Graham Morrison and others on his staff. It was expected that they will seek a further truce and plead for another chance to see what they can do to meet government objections.

The FBI investigation was ordered May 23 by Atty. Gen. J. Howard McGrath, who simultaneously ended a truce which began Oct. 27, 1949. The truce had been granted so that baseball could try to eliminate practices which the justice department had viewed as possible in restraint of trade.

Meantime, the inquiry was still underway into other sports. The department is taking a careful look at all professional and amateur sports, including football, basketball and boxing. The main point of investigation is practices which restrict telecasts and radio broadcasts.

In the baseball inquiry, attention is also being given to the reserve clause by which major league clubs hold complete control over a player's career. Under the clause, a player can only play for the contract-holding club unless traded to another club or given an unconditional release.

The reserve clause also came under investigation recently by a House subcommittee which was seeking to determine if organized baseball was a monopoly. The anti-monopoly subcommittee has not yet issued any report on its hearings.

Leahy Rates Game With Indiana As One Of Highlights

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — (AP) — Coach Frank Leahy, starting his ninth season at Notre Dame, rates the game with Indiana Saturday as one of his most important football openers since he became head man of the Irish.

With two out of every three men on the squad facing their first varsity competition, the Irish will be represented by their youngest and greenest team in more than a decade.

Notre Dame has graduated 13 lettermen and for the first time in five years is not ranked at the top nationally in pre-season figures.

The Irish could well be regarded the underdog against Indiana Saturday. One of the Hoosiers' five wins in a 23-game series with Notre Dame came last year, 20-7. Indiana is rated stronger this season and is looked upon as a first division finisher in the Big Ten Conference title race.

Double Trouble Brewing For Wake Forest Deacons

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
North Carolina State, undismayed by its rebounding 21-0 loss last weekend to North Carolina, is brewing double trouble for Wake Forest's Demon Deacons.

When Saturday night rolls around in Raleigh, the Wolfpack will face up to the Deacs with what hopes will be a deadly combination: a bigger and better offense, and a fearful jinx.

The jinx may be the more decisive factor of the two. Not since 1945 has a Wake Forest team been able to whip State in Raleigh's Riddick Stadium, though with monotonous regularity the Deacons have come to town a heavy favorite to prevail.

Playing anywhere at all, the Deacs have found the Pack a monumental obstacle to success. A 34-13 victory in their own Groves Stadium in 1948 is the only thing the Foresters can boast about since their slim 19-18 win in 1945.

Several times they have been prohibitive favorites—but have lost. In 1947 they were two-touchdown favorites and lost 20-0. In 1949 they rated a three touchdown edge but bowed, 27-14. Last year, State achieved a 6-6 tie in the final minute of play.

N. C. State Coach Beattie Feathers, however, isn't putting all his faith in the jinx. With dogged determination he has polished his offense all week, and the hard work appears to be paying off.

Wake Forest might as well look for a concerted attack on its pass defenses. Tailback Alex Webster,

Durocher Proud Of Surging Team

PHILADELPHIA—(AP)—A jubilant, but cautious, Leo Durocher studied the National League standings which showed his New York Giants a game out of first place today and said "this is the fightingest ball club I ever managed."

"Everybody else gave up on us," Durocher said quietly, "but not the team. They don't know what it means to quit."

The Durocher speaking wasn't the boisterous, wise-cracking fellow he's supposed to be. He was subdued and a bit choked up emotionally. There was no mistaking the glow of pride in his eyes.

He had good reason to be proud of his Giants. They had just narrowed the margin between the league-leading Brooklyn Dodgers and his Giants to one full game, the narrowest edge the Dodgers have held in the National League since early in May.

On August 11, the Giants were 13 1/2 games behind the Dodgers. Since then, while the Dodgers have been buckling under the terrific pressure, the Giants have won 34 of 41 games.

Last night's 5-1 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies marked the Giants' ninth triumph in their last 10 games.

Durocher wasn't predicting a pennant. "We still have to have help to win it," he said cautiously.

The Dodgers, with two more games to play than the Giants, have won 93 games and lost 56. The Giants have won 93 and lost 58.

Ticket Sales Flop For Title Bout Tonight

NEW YORK—(UP)—Slow ticket sales indicated a floperoo gate of less than $80,000 for tonight's fourth featherweight title fight between champion Sandy Saddler and Willie Pep at the Polo Grounds.

Because of the bitterness between the two boxers, promoter Jim Norris had hoped for at least 25,000 fans and $150,000. Their third bout, last September at Yankee Stadium, attracted 38,751 and $262,150.

The forecast of fair weather may help somewhat. Ducky Saddler of New York, victor in two of their three previous bouts, was still favored to keep his 126-pound crown; but increased support for ex-champ Pep dropped the betting price from 2-1 to 9-5.

Italian Pep of Hartford, Conn., would establish a ring record if he scored an upset triumph. He would be the first champion in any division ever to have won the same title three times.

The 15-round bout, scheduled for 9 p.m. (EST), will NOT be televised or broadcast to home sets. It will tee-vee only to 17 theatres in 13 cities. A package price of $110,000 was paid for the movie and theatre-TV rights. That addition may swell the total proceeds close to $200,000. Saddler gets 37 1-2 per cent of the net; Pep, 22 1-2.

Sandy and Wee-Willie will be performing on a new safety ring-mat of plastic "Ensolite," its high shock absorbency should prevent head injuries when fighters are floored.

Giles' Election Is News To Frick

NEW YORK—(AP)—Ford Frick, new commissioner of baseball, said today it's news to him if Cincinnati's Warren Giles has been elected his successor as president of the National League.

Lou Smith of the Cincinnati Enquirer wrote that Giles has been elected unanimously as the new head of the senior circuit and official announcement is expected momentarily.

"I wouldn't know about that," Frick said. "Giles would make a good president. However, this is something that the club owners do themselves with no help from the executive committee."

The Sport Reflector

By JIMMY ELLIS

The Raleigh News and Observer commented editorially yesterday on a problem that is common to each of North Carolina's "Big Four" smaller student bodies and the largest football squads in the history of the schools.

Not only does the Observer seem to dislike such large football squads, they also attacked the use of freshmen in varsity competition. They are not the first to pan the idea of using the frosh, but it still makes a good topic to use.

In the North State Conference, it's almost mandatory that a school use freshmen unless it wants to go trotting out on the field with barely enough men to make up two teams. The schools are not large enough to permit the fielding of adequate football teams—by adequate I mean having enough men around so that not a single man is not subject to the constant pounding that comes in having to play every minute of every football game—without the use of freshmen.

In the Big Four, it's a horse of another color. The student bodies of State, Carolina, and Duke are certainly large enough to furnish enough upperclassmen for football. Wake Forest, with an enrollment of around 1700, has always managed, somehow, to get a big squad out of the three upper classes.

Enrollment has not dropped a great deal because of the Korean War. School officials will frankly admit that they do not foresee in the near future a sharp decrease in the number of students. For this reason, I would heartily endorse the suggestion that the freshman rule be dropped for now and not brought back until such time when it is really necessary.

Football predictions for the week:

Carolina versus Georgia in Chapel Hill: the Bulldogs are mean—and big. They handled Georgia Washington 23-0 last Saturday and Carolina scouts have come in from the yonder lands reporting that "them Jawa boys" are really loaded for bear. Carolina is loaded, too, something that Beattie Feathers will be glad to verify, but I'm afraid I'll take Georgia in a close one. If I were betting, I wouldn't be giving any points.

Duke versus Pittsburgh University in Pittsburgh: even though the smoky city boys recently had three of their big wheels returned to them through the courtesy of the Armed Forces, they still have a long way to travel. They're capable of anything, but if it's a nice day Saturday, the Blue Devils should win by—oh, I don't think I'd be willing to give points here either... but I would take Duke in an even bet.

Wake Forest versus State in Raleigh (Saturday night): there will be barbecued wolf dragging back to the dressing room after Saturday night's little encounter. With Dickie Davis to stand around and throw all night long, the Deacons shouldn't have too much trouble with State, which depends an awful lot—perhaps too much—on the talents of Alex Webster. One note: State is always good against Wake Forest and has been known to rise up from the depths and knock the Deacons' proverbial block off. While I fear the power of the whammy, I don't think this is State's year to do much knocking at Wake Forest.

Record for the year: two out of two last week; batting average: 1.000.

Brooklyn's mighty slump—if it continues—is going to be likened to the fall of the Roman Empire. From a lead that once consisted of a good, solid ten games, the Dodgers are now one measly game behind the Giants. And unless I'm mistaken, that second place ball club is the team that dropped eleven games in a row at the beginning of the year.

Roy Campanella's back in the line-up now but that didn't make a great deal of difference yesterday when the Braves dumped the Bums most unceremoniously in both ends of a double header. In fact, there seems to be nothing to help the Dodgers right now unless it's Preacher Roe and even he can't pitch every one of the Dodgers' games.

Leo Durocher's Giants definitely hold the hand right now. But I'll stick with Brooklyn since Clyde King is a friend of the family and since Brooklyn really does have what amounts up to just about the best all-around ball club in the major leagues.

Alaska's Air Defenses Rushed Into Being U. S. 'Gibraltar Of Skyways'

By PETER U. HAYES
United Press Staff Correspondent
ANCHORAGE Alaska —(UP)— Uncle Sam is spending staggering sums of money to convert "America's Ice-box" into a Gibraltar of the airways.

Alaska, a territory nearly three times the size of Texas, blocks the Arctic short-cut that Siberia-based bombers might fly to attack the U. S. In the event of total war with Russia, military leaders believe Alaska's big airfields would be eyed greedily as perfect spring-boards for round-trip bombing missions to America's production centers.

"The advent of the air age has placed us in the direct line of possible attack," Lt. Gen. William E. Kepner, Commander-in-Chief, Alaska Command, said.

"Alaska is our Gibraltar of the air age. We are living in a bastion and we must be prepared to defend it."

Radar Comes First
To do this, the United States is pouring more dollars into Alaska defense construction. This year it amounted to more than $200,000,000. Next year money spent on airfields and other installations is scheduled to top $300,000,000.

A-1 priority project is the radar net. Begun last year, work is being speeded to complete the ring of radar stations by late 1952. It would be these listening posts that would give Alaska's jet fighter pilots the few precious minutes needed to beat off an enemy air assault.

Most of the defense funds are being spent at Elmendorf Air Force Base and Fort Richardson, just outside Anchorage, and Ladd and Eielson Air Force Bases near Fairbanks.

These two strongpoints are many hundreds of miles inland from Alaska's Bering Sea coast, which is only 50 miles from Siberia. The decision to embark on an all-out program to strengthen Anchorage and Fairbanks installations, at the expense of coastal

If you know of the whereabouts of Messrs. Half Pint, Pint, Quart Square Glass Milk Bottles.

They have wandered away this past year in large numbers. Having no wings to fly or feet to walk, they should be in or close to Pitt County.

Their cousins coming to us now are not as good as they were. We've received these notices from all of our sources of bottles.

Because of a shortage of Selenium (a color control of Flint Glass) in the industry due to defense program demands, the color of our flint containers, including milk bottles, will be affected while a "straw" or "pink" color has been maintained on milk bottles in the past, it can no longer be guaranteed because of this material shortage, which is beyond our control.

.....Mr. Milk Bottle, please come home. We need you.

Youths Of Guam Sign For Draft

GUAM —(AP)— Selective service boards are registering young Guamanians for military duty for the first time in the history of the island.

Residents of Guam have been American citizens for a year, and many men are eager to don a uniform. Some Guamanian youths already are in training schools set up by the U. S. Armed Forces and a few have seen action in Korea. So far, however, none has been drafted under the Selective Service Law.

Officials estimate that about 1,000 native Guamanians and 5,000 Philippine and mainland residents will sign up today and tomorrow.

Tombstones Tell Great Days Of Vienna's Past

By WELLINGTON LONG
United Press Staff Correspondent
VIENNA — (UP)— Some of Vienna's greatest and worst days are recalled by the tombstones of her cemetery—the largest in the world.

Buried there are Ludwig van Beethoven, Franz Schubert, Johannes Brahms, Gluck, Franz Liszt and the two Johann Strausses. So are actor Johann Nestroy, dramatist Ludwig Anzengruber and Socialist leaders Karl Lueger, Viktor Adler and former President Karl Renner. Harry Lime, the villain in the "Third Man" is also buried there.

The Zentralfriedhof, on the road to Budapest, is only 80 years old. But it already covers more than 700 acres, and holds an estimated two and a half million persons, not counting those cremated—a total greater than Vienna's population.

There are sections for Jews—partially destroyed by the Nazis in 1938, and for those killed while fighting with the anti-Nazi underground.

Mourners Provided
There is a special war cemetery, a section of which contains 2,717 Red army soldiers killed in the 1945 battle for Vienna. All funerals in Austria are handled by the city undertakers, who provide pallbearers and mourners dressed in black uniforms and cocked hats.

Before this cemetery was established, the central burial place was the catacombs beneath St. Stephen's Cathedral. In the inner city undertakers bury 40 a day in the Zentralfriedhof now—a considerable drop in business since the bad old days when the death rate was considerably higher and sometimes as many as several hundred persons were interred in a 24-hour period.

Lowered Through Floor
Funeral services for the dead were held inside St. Stephen's and concluded with the lowering of the body through a hole in the floor to little men down in the catacombs. In the beginning, the bodies were dumped into communal chambers, but later, wealthier persons were permitted to purchase family used as air raid shelters.

The internal organs of the Habsburgs are kept in metal vessels in a tiny room at the base of the Cathedral tower. The Habsburg dead used to be split three ways—bodies to the Capuchin Church, hearts to the Augustiner Church, and other internal organs to St. Stephen's. Franz Josef, however, ordered that he be buried in one piece.

Suggests Grass To Make Paper

CANBERRA —(AP)— Arthur Neville, a 76-year-old western Australian farmer, believes Australian buffalo grass and New Guinea Kunal grass can be used to make high quality paper.

Neville arrived in Sydney recently carrying a big bundle of buffalo grass which he brought from the Northern Territory. He told reporters that the grass had plenty of cellulose, but that it must be boiled in caustic soda at 600 degrees F. for more than four hours to be effective as a source of paper. He said he intends to submit samples to the Commonwealth Scientific and Industrial Research

Mrs. M. P. Hoot, leader of first year Girl Scouts, told how to deal with first year scouts.

Mrs. R. L. Wolff, formerly a field director of girl scouting in the southeastern states and now a teacher at West Greenville School made an interesting talk about methods of arousing and keeping up the interest of Girl Scouts. She stressed five useful points: (1) fun; (2) learn something; (3) do something worth while; (4) get inspiration; and (5) give service.

Miss Lottye L. Gray reported on the training course for leaders of the southeastern states held at A. Eppes High School, Greensboro, and T. Negro College, Greensboro, last month. She exhibited art work

Jenkins Addresses Teachers On Five Points To Sell Schools

The first professional in-service meeting of teachers of the Greenville city unit was held at C.M. Eppes High School auditorium Monday night. Principal W. H. Davenport presided. He introduced Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, dean of East Carolina College, speaker of the evening.

Dr. Jenkins cited instances whereby public schools are criticized by people who look at school programs from a general point of view and said they often blame the schools for failures of boys and girls. He emphasized five points which tend to win favor for schools.

"Sell the idea that it is to their advantage to believe in God, and go to Sunday school and church," he urged.

He said that in order to advance such an idea it is the teacher's duty to beat down the arguments heard by boys and girls of the modern age." The job is one of continuity, conquered by adopting several methods used to win these arguments when opportunity presents itself.

"Prepare young people for marriage." The speaker said selecting a mate is of prime importance in the lives of boys and girls. The prevailing tendency of getting married today is one of serious concern.

Many mis-mated marriages could be avoided by talking common sense to young people. Such marriages often are the result of lack of planning, family differences, financial problems and religious transpositions, and these should be discussed with students.

"Aid students on securing jobs where there is happiness." Dr. Jenkins advised students to look upon the whole country as a place of employment, rather than one localized area. He said the use of "self" is very effective when advising students of their strong points or weaknesses. To be honest with boys and girls in the end reaps a greater reward than in-different teaching.

"Help students to choose their company." The speaker urged teachers warn young people that the kind of company they keep is important. He pointed out the pleasure and satisfaction resulting from wisely selecting companions, and reminding that a person is judged by the company he or she keeps.

"Need for a hobby." The speaker, in concluding his address with praise for hobbies, urged the teachers to recommend them to students. Having something to do generally tends to keep young people out of mischief, he declared. He reminded that ambition and pride in one's achievements contributes much to the living of a useful life. A. E. Murrell, member of the faculty, thanked Dr. Jenkins for his address.

Turkish Citizens Are Top Friends

Four-County Negro Cattle Show Opens At Guy Smith Stadium

The Four-County Dairy Cattle Show, sponsored by Greene, Martin, Pitt and Beaufort county agents as vocational agricultural instructors, opened at Guy Smith Stadium today at 1 o'clock.

The show's slogan is "To stimulate ownership and a greater appreciation of high grade and pure-bred dairy cattle by Negro farm youths in North Carolina."

The North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service and vocational agricultural departments supervised the Dairy Cattle Show.

Four Eastern Carolina counties, Greene, Martin, Pitt and Beaufort, are sponsoring the show.

It opened with M. Brown Hodges of Grifton, giving approval of the Board of County Commissioners, Don H. Conley, county superintendent of schools, and Prof. W.H. Davenport, principal of C. M. Epes Negro High School, congratulated the promoters for holding the show.

Sam C. Winchester, county farm agent, and W. Connor Eagles, U. S. soil conservationist, made interesting talks, and agricultural and vocational leaders were recognized.

J. J. Brown, vocational agriculture teacher at Ayden, spoke on "The Purpose of the Dairy Show."

R. L. Wynn, Negro dairy extension specialist at A. and T. College, Greensboro, gave an impressive demonstration.

Mayor Lester D. Page of Greenville welcomed the Negro dairy show and its promoters and the hundreds of spectators who attended.

Rev. P. H. Mumford said the invocation.

A feature of the Four-County Negro Dairy Show was the appearance of the C. M. Epes Negro High School Band, under direction of Bandmaster William Gibson.

Judging of cattle started at 1:30. Entries included junior calves, junior yearlings, senior calves and senior yearlings.

Cash prizes and blue white and red ribbons were to be awarded as premiums.

Mild Autumn

The highest temperature recorded in the Greenville area yesterday was 86 degrees. Lowest last night, 65, and at 8 a.m. today it was 70. Nearly a third of an inch of rain fell late yesterday.

Casualties Rise

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Announced U. S. battle casualties in Korea reached 85,469 today, an increase of 2,212 since last week.

This is the largest weekly increase since June 27.

Advisors present at the forum included Mrs. H. M. Branton of Kinston, Mrs. O. C. Stroud of Ayden, and R. B. Starling and Betty Hansinger of Greenville. Starling said there were twice as many schools and students participating as compared with the opening session last year. "It was a success in every way," Starling concluded.

Tough Attitude

Czechoslovakia is a prize worth fighting for in the cold war because unlike most southern European nations, it is heavily industrialized. It can turn out farm machinery, oil drills, industrial tools—articles which are acutely scarce behind the Iron Curtain. It also can make tanks, guns and planes.

Russia has been taking almost all these things as fast as the Czechs can manufacture them and not giving much of value in return. The unrest reached the point several weeks ago where a large number of middle echelon Communist officials in Czechoslovakia were purged. But changing the bureaucrats is not going to restore trade to the nation, and that's what the Czech ambassador was trying to talk about in Washington yesterday.

Oatis is not going to be freed tomorrow, but the Western world seems to have hit upon a formula that can be used effectively in protecting its nationals in Iron Curtain countries.

Civil Defense

(Continued from Page One) the planes to carry these weapons in an attack on this country. xxxA determined bomber assault will get most of its planes through, even against an alerted and efficient defense. xxxWe should ready our civil defense as we are ready for our radar, interceptor and aircraft defenses.

Caldwell also repeatedly had called upon Marshall, who recently returned as Secretary of Defense, to come out strongly and publicly for civil defense.

At a Senate subcommittee inquiry Sept. 5, Lovett, then still Deputy Secretary of Defense, read a three-paragraph letter from Marshall to Caldwell dated July 25 and saying, in part:

"I am glad to reiterate the position of this department which has consistently advocated a strong civil defense for this nation as an urgent and continuing necessity.

My personal convictions are strong that we must have a competent civil defense system, in being. "I wish to reassure you of my desire to support your program. I consider that the build-up of the civilian capabilities in this field is essential, not only from a humanitarian standpoint, but as a military necessity."

Caldwell then assailed the Marshall letter before the committee. He said it lacked force, failed to convey a sense of urgency, and was obviously a response to a request—a solicited testimonial.

"It could have been written about education or the religious forces, or the Red Cross," Caldwell

"This business of getting 15,000,000 to 20,000,000 American citizens to give up their time, money and efforts to become a part of an active, moving, effective organization is a tough one, and the motivation requires some pretty strong language at the top levels. "The only way that I know that will get this thing moving effectively is for the Defense Department to get behind it and give it a push in good sharp language." Lovett replied that (a) Marshall does not write a flamboyant letter—that's not his character—but writes a "fairly laconic" document in which each word is supposed to count; (b) Whether the letter was solicited or not was beside the point. "What the effect of Caldwell's prodding may be upon congress remains to be seen."
