Britain To Take Dispute Before Security Council; Warships Expected To Prevent Shipping Of Oil From Iran; Russia Said Entering Negotiations

By UNITED PRESS
Diplomatic quarters in London predicted today that Britain will order its warships to intercept any foreign tankers, Communist or otherwise, which load Iranian oil.

The diplomatic correspondent of the pro-government Daily Mirror said he understood the cabinet plans to order the seizure of "any oil found in transit from Abadan" on grounds that it is British property.

The action was foreshadowed in the labor government's announcement last night that it will take its worsening oil dispute with Iran to the United Nations Security Council Monday.

The announcement said Britain proposed to "take all practicable steps to prevent any attempt" by Iran to dispose of products from its southern oil fields to third parties pending action by the Security Council.

It said Britain regards southern Iran's oil products as still the property of the British-owned Anglo-Iranian Oil Co. despite the nationalization of the industry by Iran.

Joao Carlos Muniz of Brasilia, president of the Security Council for October, called a meeting of the 11-nation group for Monday morning at Flushing Meadows, N. Y., to consider the British appeal.

Britain has drawn up a two-point U.N. resolution that would call on Iran to comply with the International Court injunction against seizure of British oil properties and to rescind an order expelling British technicians, British sources revealed today.

It will be introduced formally when the council opens Monday.

There was speculation that Iran might challenge the U.N.'s right to consider the matter, just as it has challenged the legality of the International Court's temporary injunction.

Another factor that loomed large was the possibility that Russia might veto any resolution opposed by Iran, whose oil is a vital stake in the East-West jockeying in the Middle East.

In Tehran, Vice Premier Hossein Fattahi said Premier Mohammad Mossadegh will leave for New York at the head of the Iranian delegation as soon as the Security Council meets to take up the British complaint. Iran sought to line up support in other countries today for the council debate and alerted military forces for any "possibility of aggression". Mossadegh, when told of the British appeal to the U.N., said Iran would "take relevant action accordingly" but did not elaborate.

The U. S. prepared a new compromise proposal for settlement of the dispute envisioning establishment of a new oil company with a neutral director. It would replace both the British company and the Iranian-established Iranian National Oil Co.

The general plan of those sponsoring the musical event is to draw together hundreds of singers to join in presenting a program of the old Gospel hymns of the church.

Major Lester D. Page and Dr. John D. Messick, president of East Carolina College, will welcome the singers and guests.

Rev. Leon Russell, president of the Greenville Ministerial Association, will say the invocation.

Revolt Against Them Put Down

The official state radio in Buenos Aires, Argentina, announced that a revolt against the government of President Juan D. Peron was put down swiftly Friday. The announcement said the outbreak was led by two former army generals. This picture of Peron and his wife, Eva, both all smiles, was made before the revolt. (AP Wirephoto).

Peron Moves Fast To Meet Trouble

Navy Minister Resigns; Proceedings Begin For Trial Of Accused Rebels Whose 'Foolproof' Plan Went Wrong

BUENOS AIRES—(UP)—President Juan D. Peron, Navy minister, resigned today as an aftermath of the short-lived Argentine revolt against President Juan D. Peron. Navy Capt. Anibal Olivieri immediately took the oath of office as his successor.

The government announced that Madame Eva Peron, the president's wife, was "rather seriously ill" with anemia of medium intensity and was being given blood transfusions. She was able, however, to make a bedside broadcast last night thanking the people for remaining loyal to the government.

In Montevideo, Uruguay, Argentina Navy Capt. Vicente M. Baroja, one of the rebels who fled there when the revolt collapsed, said that the plan seemed fool proof but "something went wrong."

"In theory, our plan could not fail to succeed," Baroja said. "...Something went wrong. Our connections failed."

Baroja said the rebellion was intended to topple the Peron government in one swift, coordinated blow.

He said he kept flying over Buenos Aires several hours yesterday with a load of bombs but never dropped them because the planned land action never materialized. He did not disclose details of the over-all plan for the coup.

(Baroja and more than 70 other officers of the Argentine armed forces who fled to Uruguay were interned and it was announced would be returned to Argentina.)

Peron announced on the government radio late yesterday that the revolt—and alleged plot to assassinate him and his wife, Eva—was all over. He said the short-lived rebellion was led by two retired generals acting for "the dark forces of capitalism and imperialism."

Reds Continuing Press Attack On Sixty-Mile Front

Cut Down Unmercifully By Artillery, Planes For Third Straight Day

8TH ARMY HQ., Korea (UP)—Red troops battered at the United Nations line across Korea for the third straight day today in a largely futile effort to win back terrain lost to the 8th Army's "Operation Killer."

The Communists struck in key sectors along a 60-mile front from a point north of Seoul in the west to the eastern mountains in strength ranging from 40 to 2,500 men, but they were cut down unmercifully by U.N. artillery and planes.

The Reds launched three probing attacks against the western end of the front Saturday morning. All three were repulsed without difficulty northwest of Chorwon, at the western end of the old "Iron Triangle."

Three more enemy attacks hit the Allied line southeast of Kumsong on the east-central front Saturday and were still under way at last reports.

Red attacks drove Allied forces from two hills southeast of the big central front bastion of Kumsong Friday, but U.N. troops routed an enemy regiment and recaptured one of them an hour later in a counter-attack.

Fifth Air Force fighter-bombers supported the counter-attack with their heaviest air blow of the war against a single objective, P-51 Mustangs and Marine Corsairs blasted, burned and strafed the enemy with 122 bomb, napalm and machinegun strikes.

Eighth Army officers said they did not consider the three-day Communist drive a counter-offensive because of the limited strength of the enemy attacks.

"The Communists are just becoming obnoxious," an 8th Army briefing officer said.

Another Jump In Tobacco Average

Friday's Sales Reach $69.08 Average For Season Record

Prices on the Greenville tobacco market took another jump yesterday as the sales averaged $69.08 per hundred for the highest daily average of the season.

The average price paid on the local sales yesterday was $2.30 per hundred higher than the average paid on Thursday's sales. Yesterday the Greenville market sold 1,609,186 pounds of tobacco and paid sellers $996,264.25.

The sales brought the week's total for the market to 8,051,326 pounds sold, $4,648,474.11 paid out and an average price for the week of $57.74. Totals for the first 28 selling days of the season through Friday show the local market has sold 41,368,362 pounds of leaf for $21,535,752.25 and an average of $52.06 for the season.

Planners Survey Recreation Needs Lack Of Space Cited As City's Leading Difficulty

Eugene Martin and Charles Graves, planning consultants from Atlanta, Ga., were here yesterday to survey the recreational facilities for both white and colored citizens.

Martin, Graves, Tom Rivers, city engineer, and Warren Carroll, recreation director, visited the sites of the two major recreational areas here to map plans for Greenville's future recreation facilities.

Carroll said the main trouble they found was the lack of space to carry out the building-up of the major areas, especially for the picnic grounds which is one of the greatest needs. He said more land would have to be purchased for the expansion of the areas if the plans were to be carried out.

The consultants are to prepare plans from their findings and report on it to the Recreation Commission. In explaining what Greenville needs, Carroll pointed out the need of swimming pools, a community center, tennis courts, softball fields, children's play lots, and picnic areas.

Carroll said plans for a community center called for club-rooms with folding doors that could be pushed back to accommodate a large number of people, a kitchen, basketball court, dressing room facilities, and other items.

He also said the need of adult recreation was just as important as recreation for children and teenagers. "Adults can be shown something to do, and can go on from there without supervision," Carroll said.

During the inspection of the recreational facilities, the men also talked with school and city officials and members of the Recreation Commission concerning the future plans.

Peiping Radio Blasts Uninterrupted; No Sign Communists Will Adopt New Conference Site; Ridgway And Chairman Of Joint Chiefs Go Into Huddle

TOKYO (UP)—The Peiping radio charged today that the United Nations command planned troop landings on both the east and west coasts of Korea north of the present battleline.

Complaining of the alleged probing activities, Peiping said: "These facts show that the American aggressors are in the course of preparing numerous adventures in Korea, and after repeated American provocations since the Kaesong (cease-fire) negotiations started to co-ordinate their premeditated top-level plans."

The broadcast mentioned the presence of the 40th and 45th U. S. Infantry divisions in Japan and their present training maneuvers as indications of the "new adventures."

The Peiping broadcast came as Gen. Omar N. Bradley and Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway began a series of conferences which may lead to a U.N. ultimatum to the Communists.

It was speculated that Bradley, chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, brought the supreme U.N. commander permission to fix a deadline for the Reds to quit stalling and resume the suspended armistice talks.

Ridgway was understood to have asked for such permission during a previous breakdown in the cease-fire conference. If the Reds should refuse to comply with the proposed Allied demand, the U.N. command presumably would begin an all-out war against them.

Bradley and Ridgway began their talks while still awaiting a Communist reply to the U.N. commander's proposal of Thursday to shift the armistice parley from Kaesong to the vicinity of the no-man's land town of Sonahyon, eight miles to the southeast.

The Reds were expected to reject it. A Peiping broadcast denounced the proposal as another attempt to block the armistice conference.

The Communists were reluctant to abandon Kaesong because it is behind their lines and gives them a chance to make it appear that the Allies are going to the Reds to seek peace. The Communists also have found Kaesong convenient for faking charges of U.N. violations of its neutrality.

As Ridgway and Bradley conferred, Charles E. (Chip) Bohlen, State department expert on Russia who accompanied Bradley here, met with U.S. Ambassador William J. Sebald, Ridgway's political adviser.

Bradley and Bohlen arrived in Tokyo by air from Washington Friday night on what official sources tried to pass off as a "routine survey" of the entire Korean situation.

Babson Reminds Business, Men More Important Than Machines

By ROGER W. BABSON
BABSON PARK, Mass. — The Babson Organization has 2,000 corporations on its Master List which it constantly watches. In other words, out of the 16,000 corporations whose securities are publicly traded in, we select 2,000 which we believe to be the cream.

Caring Shipping Departments
Notwithstanding our careful selection, some of these corporations are at times suffering from one department slipping. This naturally worries the head of the department. The more he worries, the more the department slips; the more it slips, the more he worries. If this continues too long he has a nervous breakdown or a heart attack. This is a loss to the corporation and its stockholders.

men for coming gre' inventions. I have in mind electronic devices which should reduce prices and increase the wages of intelligent workers. The value of foremen and department heads is not fully recognized by many corporations. Their accumulation of experience will take many years on the part of their successors to duplicate.

Entitled To More Rest
Corporations judge employees by their hours of work and directly or indirectly — by their production in physical units. But a department head or foreman may be able to develop original ideas in a few hours that can be worth large amounts to the corporation. To accomplish this, however, such a man should not be worried, and should keep himself in good health. If I should tell the president of the corporation that he could save thousands of dollars annually by spending $1,000 on repairing a certain machine, he would gladly do

College Fall Enrollment Tops Record Set For Period In 1950

East Carolina College has exceeded this fall its previous enrollment records, President John D. Messick has announced. Students registered for work during the present quarter number slightly more than 2300. For the same period last year, 2034 students were taking courses offered by the college.

In spite of the large number of students now attending East Carolina, enrollment this fall was curtailed because of a lack of sufficient dormitory rooms to meet the demand. President Messick pointed out this week. Room reservation fees were paid in advance by 1540 students. Dormitory space on the campus, however, was available for only 1053 students. As a result, 328 withdrew their applications. Approximately 500 students secured rooms in Greenville. A number of those who wished to enter the college this fall did not attempt to secure rooms when they found space on the campus was unavailable. The present faculty was nevertheless so overloaded that secretaries from administrative offices were sought to teach typing to new students. A report on this fall's enrollment just issued by Registrar Orval L. Phillips indicates that 1902 men and women are now enrolled in classes meeting on the campus. More than 400 students are taking off-campus courses, as compared with 143 in the fall of 1950.

New students, including freshmen and transfer students entering East Carolina for the first time, have also reached this fall an all-time high. The total of newcomers is 683, last year the college enrolled 607 new students. The freshman class includes at present 605 men and women.

Married Couples Class Hears Reports And Elects Officers

The Married Couples Class of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church met Thursday night in their new classroom in the basement of the church. The class was glad to have as guests Mr. Luther Moore, superintendent of the Sunday school, and Rev. Langill Watson, associate pastor and teacher of the class.

Mrs. Joe E. Brown, president, presided over the business session during which it was decided that the class would worship together the entire hour of Sunday school.

The minutes of the August meeting and the treasurer's report were read by Mr. and Mrs. Ed Conway, secretary and treasurer. It was reported that the class had already given a hundred dollars for new equipment and has more than a hundred dollars on hand which will be used primarily for painting the room and making further improvements. Mr. Moore offered some helpful suggestions and his assistance which was appreciated by the group.

The treasurer also reported the $38 for Mack Taylor, the adopted orphan of the class, has been paid. The entire amount, $50, is due in October.

During the business meeting the members wrote two letters, one to Mack Taylor and the other to Mr. Bill Cherry, who is a member of the class and a patient at the Medical College Hospital in Richmond.

Following the announcements and several discussions the officers for the new year were elected.

They are as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Warren Aldridge, presidents; Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Hite, vice presidents; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hudson, secretaries; and Mr. and Mrs. Billy Corey, treasurers; Mr. and Mrs. Joe Brown as temporary reporters. Those appointed to the membership committee were Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Taylor and to the attendance committee Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Phillips assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell White.

During the refreshment hour several orders were taken for cards and stationery which is a project of the class.

Everyone present enjoyed a real fellowship while the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Aldridge, served delicious refreshments.

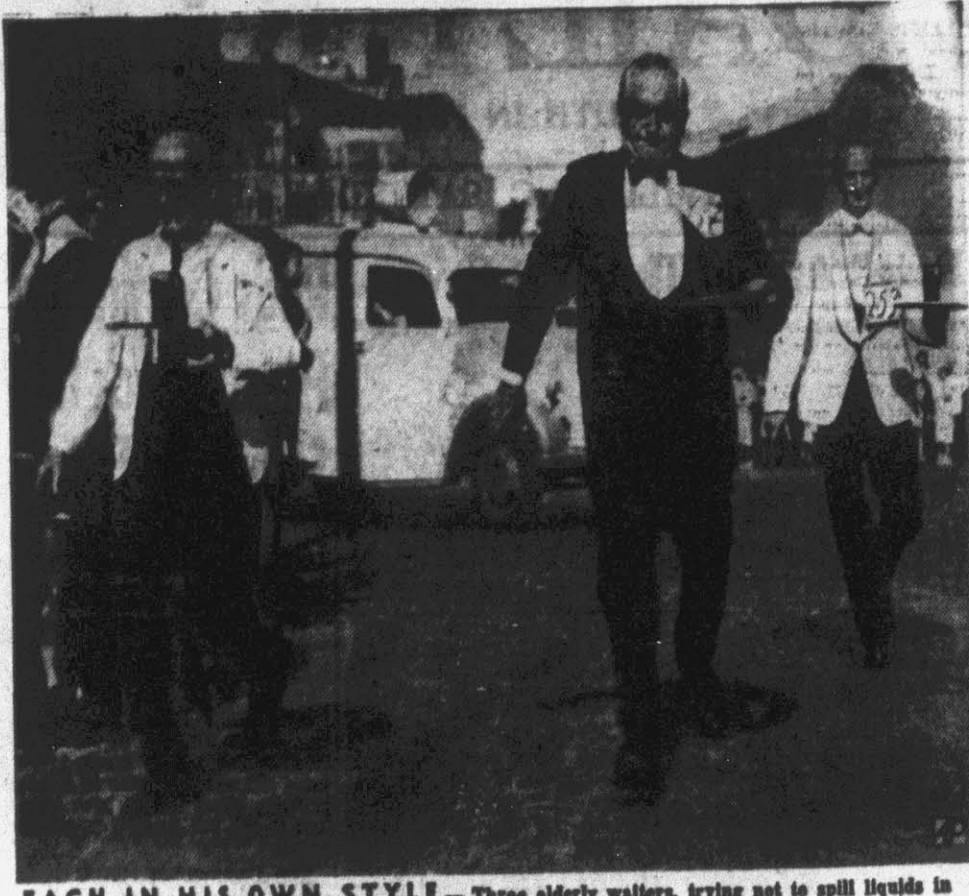

The class regretted that Mr. and Mrs. Burney Warren Jr. also host and hostess, were unable to attend although they helped in every other way.

It isn't that kids are different today than they were yesterday; it's just that today's parents have spoiled them. Families are smaller and in the old days when there were six or eight kids, everybody had to do his share. Today's mother of one or two or three children thinks it is an easier proposition to do the chores herself, rather than get into a discussion about them.

There is no reason why any mother should be a slave to grown children—and if she is, it probably is her own fault. Everybody-dead-his-own-job should be the rule of any adult family.

Mom has plenty to do with her normal household and culinary tasks without adding daughter's personal laundry to her list. Young girls should do their own lingerie. And there is no reason why young men cannot wash their own socks. And when they borrow Dad's car, tuxedo, suspenders or ties—the things should be returned in good condition.

November To Be Clean-Up Month For Roadsides
RALEIGH (AP)—November will be clean-up month along North Carolina roadsides.
The State Highway Commission yesterday set the month for a drive to clear advertising signs, dumps and encroaching buildings from highway right-of-ways.
Property owners and advertisers will be asked to cooperate voluntarily in the November drive. After that, the commission will consider using legal measures. Dr. Henry Jordan, commission chairman, said he believes the voluntary plan will work in most cases.
The offending signs and buildings obstruct the vision of motorists, mar the beauty of the landscape and trespass on state property, Dr. Jordan asserted.

ON THE RIGHT TRACK

In railroad parlance "turning an engine" means a great deal more than reversing the engine and putting it on the right track. It means preparing the locomotive for its scheduled run.

"Religious education" is another term which means more than it implies.

Our Church Schools do far more than teach religious truth. They give children the opportunity to practice Christianity in worship, service, and fellowship. Consecrated leaders provide a Christian example, helping their pupils to see and feel the happiness which our faith instills. Adult classes enable parents to deepen their own spiritual lives, and thus strengthen the Christian influence of the home.

The Church is never content merely to put a child on "the right track." It seeks to mold the character of the child, to prepare him for a noble, happy, and useful life.

In the many aspects of this vital work the Church needs your help and support.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake, (2) For his children's sake, (3) For the sake of his community and nation, (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

Barbara Payton And Tone Wed

CLOQUET, Minn. (AP)—Film starlet Barbara Payton and actor Franchot Tone, still bearing memories of a fist fight over her, were married last night and told newsmen they would honeymoon in quiet northern Minnesota.
"I never felt better in my life," said the 46 year old Tone, despite a bloodshot eye and swollen lips.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLAS
PUBLIC WORSHIP
Someone has likened weekly attendance at a church service to the entrance of a boat into a canal lock. The boat enters the lock at a lower level. Water flows into the enclosed portion, and the boat is raised to a higher level. Then the lock doors are opened at that level and the boat continues its cruise.

We enter church each Sunday, weakened and discouraged by the things of the past week. If the church service does for us what it should do, it raises us to a new level of gladness and trust and thus enables us to continue our journey at this higher level. Of course there is more to a church service than inspiration. In the silence of the sanctuary we give thanks for blessings received. We voice our petitions for gifts of which we have need and which only God can give. But the results of our lingering in the quiet of this place should be that at the end of a brief hour we leave with the feeling that our lives have been raised to higher and more satisfactory levels.

A superficial reading of the New Testament leaves us with the feeling that its writers place more value on private devotions than on public worship. But this is not true. Behind the whole New Testament seems to be the glorious reality of worshiping groups of believers in the Church universal.

What Sort of Values Do Their Actions Set

Which is more important to the nation: a youngster going through college before entering military service, or a married man leaving his home and wife to shoulder arms while a boy finished his college education?

From the draft exemption regulations which became effective with the President's signature Wednesday, the government apparently believes it is better to take married men into the armed forces and allow the unmarried college boys to finish their education. The Reflector is firmly convinced that the government has lost its sense of values in respect to who should be exempted and who should be taken into the armed forces through selective service.

On the same day the President signed the order making 500,000 childless fathers eligible for the draft, the Selective Service headquarters in Washington announced two more dates for deferment examinations for young men in college. A total of $59,066 college students took the exemption exams given last spring and summer, and a large number of others will take the new tests which will be given next December and next April.

While these college boys are toting their books to classes and their dates to athletic events, the army will be seeking 200,000 married men to carry guns out of the 500,000 whose draft exemption has been swept away by the presidential signature to the regulations passed by Congress last June.

If the army needs more men than it is getting, each young man should take his place in line. The financial ability to go to college or the ability to pass a test should not provide a young man exemption from military service. Married men should not be called on to fill the places in the ranks which could be filled by unmarried men if it were not for the unreasonable law which eventually will create an "educated aristocracy" in the United States.

A Bid For Better Days In Argentina

Hopes that the strong armed Peron government in Argentina would be overthrown were short lived as the dictator's troops squashed the rebellion. The act, nevertheless, leaves hope for better days in Argentina in the future—without Peron as dictator.

Perhaps it is un-American and even undemocratic to endorse a rebellion. In a democracy there are other ways of making needed governmental changes; but in the case of Argentina, a forceful rebellion is the only answer to the ruthless iron rule of Peron.

So far Peron apparently has been more or less content with supreme command of only his own nation, but if that one country becomes completely secure, he may look for new fields to conquer among his neighboring South American nations.

As many other dictators do, Peron rules by controlling the dominant military strength and the labor party; by throwing into prison those who oppose him politically, and closing down the newspapers and radio stations which dare to criticize his actions. With his wife, Eva, Peron has taken great riches from the people and scattered them thinly over the masses with great fanfare and fantastic promises of better days to come.

Since he came to power in Argentina in 1943, Peron has gradually and systematically snuffed out the fire of freedom in that nation, and has now reached the stages where he is stamping out the remaining embers of a once glowing torch.

Better days may come for Argentina, but they will have to come with the overthrow of Peron and his henchmen rather than through a strengthening of his grasp on the nation.

Pitt County Must Join In Its Own Parade

Pitt County officially goes on parade Monday with the opening of the 1951 Pitt County Fair. The preparations for the annual event point to the most impressive parade ever, both in the exhibits and in entertainment.

The Reflector urges the people of Pitt County to visit the numerous exhibits at the fair and join in the county's own parade.

For several years the purebred swine show held in conjunction with the Pitt County Fair has been one of the outstanding shows of its kind in North Carolina. From reports, the swine show this year is to be superior even to those held in the past.

As for the remainder of Pitt County's parade at the fair, there will be 37 exhibits including 15 from Home Demonstration clubs, five from 4-H clubs, nine from the Future Farmers of America, and one each from the Highway Safety division, forestry division of the State Department of Agriculture, the Farm Home Administration on the Pitt artificial breeding program.

All of the exhibits are educational and designed to depict some phase of the agricultural life of Pitt County, and suggestions on how to improve the conditions the county now has.

In the years since the Pitt County Fair has been sponsored by the American Legion posts, it has grown into a real agricultural fair; a far cry from the carnivals the county used to have. To continue to grow as it should, the Pitt County Fair must have the support of the people of the county. The Reflector hopes the fair gets the support it deserves during the coming week.

National Whirligig

Every Saturday this veteran Washington correspondent devotes his column to answering readers' questions of general interest on national and international policies and personalities. Questions may be sent direct to Ray Tucker at 6306 Hillcrest Place, Chevy Chase, Md.

By RAY TUCKER
WASHINGTON—President Truman recently told a press conference that the Democrats would win the 1952 election on the issue of prosperity. "I think the American people are better off than they ever were before. Just how prosperous are we, and how stable is it?"

Answer: It is hard to answer that question categorically because prosperity is a relative thing, and sometimes evanescent, as we discovered in 1929. What Mr. Truman has in mind, of course, are the obvious factors. National and individual income is at a peak, meaning that people are making more money than ever in the past. They can afford to buy more and better things, even at present prices.

It is probable that the average man or woman would answer in the affirmative, if he were asked whether or not he regarded himself as rather well off. He probably feels a certain insecurity with respect to himself, his wife and his children, out as of today, he is doing fine by all superficial measurements. He hopes the present conditions will continue, but he has his doubts.

Mr. Truman, of course, has no doubts on that question. Nor does Treasury Secretary Snyder who persists in saying that the 49-cent dollar has more purchasing power now than ever before. It is quite obvious that he does not help in doing the family shopping of a Saturday morning, as I do.

FACTORS—There are, however, certain basic factors which neither President Truman nor Secretary Snyder seem to take into account when they tout that word "prosperity" even more frequently and carelessly than Calvin Coolidge did in 1928, only one year before the crash. They deserve consideration in any discussion of this question.

When Franklin D. Roosevelt took office in 1933 with a campaign pledge of strict government economy, the public debt was only $20,000,000,000, and the annual budget was only $7,500,000,000. Federal taxes per capita were only $14.40, and millions of Americans were never bothered by the tax collector.

DEBT—Today, the national mortgage—that is, the public debt—has reached the all-time peak of $286,000,000,000, and will approach $300,000,000,000 in a few years. Interest payments on the present total are almost $6,000,000,000, which was the annual cost of government in Herbert Hoover's Administration. The annual budget is approximately $61,000,000,000, which does not include almost $100,000,000,000 of authorized but unbudgeted military expenditures. As against $14.40 in 1933, the per capita federal tax is now $35.95, and that does not include the ten per cent increase in the pending revenue bill. Finally, the 1951 dollar is worth about one-half of the prewar, 1939 dollar.

COSTS—Despite the rise in national and individual income, it does not compensate for inflated living costs, which may still go higher, according to Price Administrator DiStefano. Insofar as their worth in purchasing power is concerned, take-home pay, fixed income, life insurance policies, savings and pensions represent only half the value they had in 1939.

On the basis of these figures, and especially since the question of an individual's prosperity is a highly personal matter, I pass S.M.'s question back to him.

Science Simplified

Somebody Told Me

By L. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.
This week haircuts and a new man's mustache are in the news. In Washington, D.C. barber shops have raised haircut prices from $1 to $1.25. U.S. Senators are unaffected by this move. They get their hair cut at the taxpayers' expense in their own Capitol barbershop. The 75 cents in Greenville, which looked bad at first, is beginning to look better.

The mustache in the news is that of Movie Star Adolphe Menjou. For 40 years his mustache was neatly trimmed and waxed, which he regarded as a symbol of male elegance. But Producer Stanley Kramer needed an actor with a smooth upper lip for "The Sniper." When Menjou was picked for the role, he studied for two weeks before making up his mind. Finally, he made the offer: $10,000 for the mustache. One day last week he stepped into a studio barbershop and parted with his trademark, only to become $10,000 richer.

As small as Menjou's mustache was, it couldn't have had over 1000 hairs in it. At that rate, the studio paid him $100 a hair. To the average Greenville citizen, $100 is a lot of money for somebody to pay for one hair.

At the rate the Greenville barbers work, 75 cents for a haircut, one would have to slice about three million hairs in order to make $100. These figures were released by the Edwards Statistical Bureau, and are guaranteed to be inaccurate.

If and when my ship comes in I'll adopt a standard procedure when I walk in the barber shop. My barber is Ebert Hudson of Stokes and Hudson's Barber Shop, and I'll say to Ebert, "Give me the works."

If there's anything that makes a man feel like a king, it's "the works" in a barber shop. How do I know? I've had separate items of "it" separately, with manure excepted, at different times. When you see me getting them all at the same sitting, you'll know that I've hit the "income bracket I'm reaching for."

Ebert is still telling me that I'll never be bald, with no additional charge for the compliment.

On one trip to the shop I overheard the barbers emphasizing the value of advertising. Back when Gabriel Heatter was plugging Kream hair tonic, the Stokes and Hudson Shop would order all the salesmen would let them have, and then they couldn't supply the demand. When Gabe changed products, the sales took a sharp decline. Advertising will sell anything!

And I thank you.

Around Capitol Square

Raleigh, N. C. By LYN VIBSET
When other members of the council realized the import of that declaration and the autocratic powers vested in the governor in event such condition were found to exist, they decided to let the whole business rest for a while.

It is probable that a modified form of the resolution will be adopted and Governor Scott will be authorized to sign some sort of agreement with other states. It is very improbable that any such blanket dictatorial powers for the governor as contemplated in event of war will be granted under conditions presently prevailing.

TONED DOWN — The language at which the council of state balked is actually a greatly "toned down" version of the civil defense act as originally presented to the general assembly. The original proposal went much further in granting absolute authority to one man in event of war or threat of war or economic disaster. Very few members of the assembly like the bill, but it fell to the lot of freshmen to lead the fight against it. The bill was carried in the senate by first termers Pou Bailey of Wake and Hamilton Hobgood of Henderson counties. David Henderson of Mecklenburg and Addison Hewlett of New York over. The bill as passed by the assembly spells out in more detail than the original copy what the governor can do when the powers are invoked by resolution of the council of state.

LIMITATIONS—When the extent of these limited powers is noted there is better understanding of what might have happened had there been no limitations applied. Under terms of the act as passed which became Chapter 1013, Session Laws of 1951, the things that can be included in a compact are spelled out, such as "exchange of food, clothing, medicine, and other supplies; engineering services; emergency housing; police services; health, medicine and related services; fire fighting, rescue, transportation and construction services and equipment; personnel necessary to provide or conduct these services, and such other supplies, equipment, facilities, personnel and similar items for mobile support units, fire fighting and police and health units." Just think what powers might have been conferred upon the governor if these limitations had not been imposed. It is recognized that in event of all-out war some such centralized control might be necessary. The council of state could not agree Wednesday that conditions presently obtaining justified such action.

REPORT — Governor Scott's categorical charge that a report on power potentials of upper tributaries of the Cape Fear river is being suppressed by the utilities lobby surprised some high ranking officers in the army engineer corps. The governor told reporters at his press conference Tuesday that he had knowledge that report on a survey of Deep River, Haw river and New Hope creek, had been completed and that the army engineers wanted to release it but that congress would not authorize the release, because of influence of the utilities lobby in Washington.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

COMMENDABLE (William's Enterprise)
The Young Democrats of North Carolina did a commendable act in their recent meeting when they advanced a "political code of ethics." Although a bit late, the action is still commendable, and, in time, may help Democracy.

The code, the adopters admit, is not enforceable, but it will have some weight no doubt. Somebody's ears not so far from our own State could well burn after reading the code. It says, in part:

"It shall be deemed unethical to use, or allow to be used, written or verbal, any statements or material against an opponent consisting of falsehoods, half-truths, misleading statements designed to imply rather than inform, composite and misleading pictures, or distortions of fact in any manner or degree."

The code goes on to frown upon "bought" elections, and explains that when half-truths are employed by supporters, the candidate should get up in public and disassociate himself from such half-truths.

The services of able men have been rejected because race relations were injected into campaigns, the voters finding out too late that such issues were not the real issues, that one candidate, offering to solve all problems, was, in the final analysis, unable to do a thing.

It is high time that ethics be applied to political campaigns, and for the voters to realize that when a candidate employs such tactics he is doing so merely to cover up his own position or sins.

More power to the youngsters who would lead the way to cleaner political campaigns and for the real expressions of the people unfettered by slanted facts and contemptible lies.

Business Today

Japan faces a long, hard pull for economic stability, according to Yoshio Sawamura, Japanese economist and business man. Mr. Sawamura, who attended the Japanese Peace Treaty conference in San Francisco and who is now on a tour of the United States, is vice president of the Osaka Sangyo Keizai Shinbun, which prints a translation of this column several days after it appears in this shinbun.

While Mr. Sawamura did not state so flatly, his remarks in an interview left little doubt that Japan would be a tremendous burden on the United States and its taxpayers for many years to come.

Before the war, Japan had a population of a little over 70 million on the Japanese islands in Korea, Manchuria and the Mandated Territory. Now it has a population of between 80 and 84 million on the four main islands, smaller than California.

Japan is short of almost all raw materials except cotton, which has dropped in price with depressing results. Chinese and Manchurian sources have been cut off by the war in Korea. It lacks ships with which to import coal, steel and iron ore and foreign exchange to buy enough. Some coal and ore is being imported from the United States and Canada, but the high price and long haul makes it costly.

Japan's largest markets, China, Manchuria and Korea, are gone. It hopes to enlarge its market in Southeast Asia. Mr. Sawamura said, and it hopes the United States will be able to buy more Japanese goods. With Japanese politeness, he did not mention the fact that large rises in Japanese imports always bring demands from labor and industry for protection against competition of "cheap foreign labor."

Japanese labor is cheap. A Japanese worker gets less in a month than many American workers get in a day and the Japanese pays half of it in direct and indirect taxes.

The tourist industry offers little hope, Mr. Sawamura said. "Geisha girls and Fujiyama are not enough to attract tourists. We need planes and fine hotels, and we have not the capital to build them."

The peace treaty will end occupation charges against Japan, but reparations are still to be fixed. American military buying, largely of manpower, is some help.

"But what Japan needs is immediate credit or capital, long-term assistance from the Bretton Woods organizations and American dollars to put its controlled currency on a sound basis," Mr. Sawamura said.

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK (AP)—One of the dying American spectator sports is watching haircuts.

How long has it been since you watched a good clean haircut? Probably years.

Except in rural utopias the barbershop has ceased to be a public forum and a haunt of philosophers. It is no longer the shabby but warm refuge where men came to be shorn and knit together by Saturday night laughter and gossip.

Yes, it is going the way of the old-fashioned grocery store. It has become a glittering supermarket of steam and bright metal and buzzing gadgets, a cathedral of the tonorial arts.

It is big business. The motto in most of these glossy temples is: "The customer is always welcome—but get it, and get out." Spectators are discouraged, and the barber wants a quick turnover—not an admiring audience. Why, I haven't seen a cuspidor in a barbershop since Franklin D. Roosevelt's first term.

There is nothing to make a client yearn to linger or watch the next man get a haircut. The barber works in silence, except maybe for a desultory remark or two on the baseball situation. But he no longer launches into a learned and informative discussion on the political situation. That takes time.

The service is impersonal. The barber is fighting that clock. He wants to clip you, massage you, anoint you, or shave you—anything you want—but he wants to get you out of that chair as fast as possible, and get another man in.

Leisure? I know people now who make appointments with a barber. Shades of the great past! Imagine a life so crowded a man has to make an appointment with a barber, just as if he were going to the dentist. A fellow used to pick offhand the week or month he was going to get a haircut. Now he has to name the minute and hour, if he wants to be sure to find a chair.

The decline of the traditional barbershop began with the vanishing of the two-bit haircut, now as rare as a five-cent beer, the barber in the old days knew there was no use to hurry, because how could a man ever get rich at that price?

But today the barber gets $7.50 to $10.00 a head. With every snip of his scissors he can buy a brick for his new country home. Naturally he doesn't want to pause and parley politics.

Not that he wants to give an ailing customer his own homemade recipe for curing ulcers. He's too busy earning his own ulcer.

And no longer does he wind up the job with the time-honored question of his profession: "Comb it wet or dry?" He demands to know what tonic you prefer, and if you say you don't want any, he accepts your two-bit tip with a look of scorn: "You sink-out feeling cheap and guilty."

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS
WASHINGTON — Back in 1816, the name, birthplace and work check of everybody who worked for Uncle Sam—from charwomen on up to the President—were published in one official record.

Prepared at the Department of State in compliance with a resolution of Congress, this was a record of all officers and agents, civil and military, in the service of the United States.

The register also carried the ships and vessels belonging to the United States, and when and where built, together with a correct list of the presidents, cashiers and directors of the U. S. Bank and its branches.

These registers and those succeeding them are now housed in the Library of the Civil Service Commission. The first register, a slim little volume of 176 pages, contained only 6,327 names.

It was in going over these old registers that the Commission's librarian, Mrs. Mary V. Wenzel, brought to light a register of 1833 containing what she believes may be the first formal record of Abraham Lincoln as an official of the United States Government. Mrs. Wenzel opened the register to page 265 to show me these words:

"Post Office Department—Illinois
"New Salem... Postmaster—A. Lincoln... Compensation $58.70 per annum."
In 1816, Secretary of War William H. Crawford got $4,500; John Marshall, chief justice, $4,000, and Postmaster General Return J. Meigs $3,000.

Governors of the territories of Mississippi, Missouri, Illinois and Michigan got $2,000, and John Quincy Adams, minister to England, $9,000. Our only other ministers—to France, Russia, Sweden, Spain and the Court of Portugal in Brazil, where the court had fled because of the Napoleonic wars—received the same. Thomas Munroe, superintendent of the city of Washington, earned $1,200.

In 1879, the register had grown so large it had to be brought out in two volumes, and in 1907 all employees making under $3,000 were left out. Now the only persons listed are those occupying positions.

Queen City Murder Case

By Wm. G. Bogart

Chapter II
Johnny had seen the results of murder many times in his colorful career as a private investigator. Usually it was messy and gruesome.

This was not. Jeanette had a serene look about her, lying there in the virgin white tub. You would have thought she was resting, completely relaxed on a chaise longue. The telltale marks on her slim white throat were the only things that told of sudden, unexpected death—of murder.

He leaned down over the corpse and touched it carefully. The body had cooled a little but rigidity had not yet started to set in, as it does after death. He recalled that Jeanette had phoned him around six o'clock. It was only a little after eight right now. He guessed she must have been murdered shortly after she made the phone call.

By whom? And why?
He thought of the old desk again. At first she had been desperately trying to buy it. Then, within a few hours, she had been equally anxious to sell it. That puzzled him. Could the desk have anything to do with her murder?
He went out of the bathroom, remembering to put on his gloves again. He was very careful in moving about the small apartment because he did not want to make any sound that might draw other tenants here—not yet, anyway.

He wondered where in blazes the desk was. It was not here in the living room, which would be a logical place for her to place it. He had not seen it in the bathroom. Stepping into the small white kitchen, he looked around. Light from the adjoining living room was enough to tell him that the object was not out here either. He went back into the living room, thought it best to switch off the lights, then returned to her bedroom.

The only light burning in the apartment now was the shaded, pale vanity lamp. In addition to the vanity, there was a dresser, a small night table on one side of the bed and a telephone stand on the other side. He opened a closet door nearby.

The desk was in there. The closet was packed with assorted gowns and dresses hung from an overhead rod. The perfumed scent clinging to the dresses had a very seductive odor. He thought it was too bad she was dead. The desk had been pushed inside the closet and was practically concealed by the hanging dresses.

Someone, apparently, had already been here ahead of him. The desk drawers had been opened. He knew it must have been someone other than Jeanette, for contents of the desk were spilled on the closet floor. She wouldn't have scattered things around like this. It was obvious that the searcher had been in somewhat of a hurry—as a murderer might be.

Max must have been correct about the contents of the old relic. Johnny picked up bits of fine old lace that had fallen from a faded paper packet. There were some old photographs—views of the Cincinnati waterfront taken years ago. There was a stern wheeler river boat, the Suspension Bridge, other landmarks. Then he found a tiny pair of baby's shoes, or maybe you called them boots, tied together with pink ribbon. A remark his mother used to make years ago came to his mind: Blue was for boys and pink for baby girls!

But in all the assorted junk scattered around, he found nothing that might identify the owner of the desk.
Johnny's inspection was not being done in a leisurely manner. He moved with the quick, efficient actions so characteristic of him. There was a deep crease between his active eyes. A dead woman lay out there in the bathroom, and he realized that any moment someone might come here to call on her. Perhaps someone who even had a key, she might have been that kind. Who could tell?

Which put Johnny in a ticklish situation.
What he really should do was notify the police. If someone discovered him, before the police had been notified—and the police could prove it—then he was a dead duck!
But first, there was something else he wanted to do. He stepped out into the bedroom and thoughtfully looked around. He decided the best place to start searching was in the dresser. A woman usually tucked many personal things away, in bureau drawers. What he wanted was some clue to Jeanette's personal friends or acquaintances, and something about Jeanette herself. Somewhere, some place, there must be a motive for murder.

Johnny had just opened one of the dresser drawers, was starting to push aside filmy feminine wearing apparel, when he stiffened tensely, jerking his head around. He was almost certain he had heard something touch the window pane across the room.

He saw that the window shade was up about three or four inches. He should have noticed this and pulled it down, but he had been too intent on looking for the desk. Johnny had no more than turned his head when he heard to sound again. A distinct tap on the window glass. It sounded like someone using a coin to make the noise.

Well, now, he flicked off the shaped lamp and moved toward the window, keeping out of a direct line with the glass, stepping to one side of the enclosing frame. He bent down.

He saw the face pressed close to the window pane, trying to peer inside. A man's face. Johnny had no more than made the discovery when he heard a worried voice speaking his name.

"Johnny, open the window. Hurry up!"
It was his partner, Moe Martin. Johnny quickly unfastened the window blind and raised the lower frame. Cold air billowed the curtains inward. He saw that his stock partner had located an ash can somewhere, had unpeeled it, and now stood on this in order to reach the first floor window.

As he seized Moe Martin's arm and started to drag him across the sill, Johnny demanded harshly, "You fool, how did you know which apartment I was in?"
Moe was talking even as his rotund figure scrambled across the window sill. "I knew it was the first floor from the bell location. All I did was go around the building looking into ground-floor windows—until I found you."

"Someone might have spotted you!"
"I was careful, Johnny." Moe was sitting on the floor now, looking up, his round face bright with curiosity.

Chapter III
Johnny had quickly closed the window, locked it, and pulled down the shade. Stepping back to the vanity, he turned on the light again, brushing snow from his clothes.
"How'd you even know the address," said Johnny.
"Nancy told me. She listened in on the call."

"My God," said Johnny, "I have no privacy at all!"
"She thought you might get into trouble."
"You might look in the bathroom," Johnny advised. He started pushing things aside in the bureau drawers.

Moe, following Johnny's instructions, opened the bathroom door, started inside, then let out a yelp. He came back out into the bedroom at high speed.
"Johnny... she's dead!"
Nodding, Johnny Saxon started searching through another dresser drawer. "She was strangled, sweetheart," said Johnny. "She's dead like in murder."

The word "murder" stopped Moe Martin. An alertness replaced the usual worried expression in his eyes. He stared at Johnny Saxon. Slowly he asked, "How long ago—did it happen?"
"Within the past two hours or so."
Moe's gaze went around the bedroom, then to the doorway leading to the living room, then back to Johnny. He looked as though he expected someone to come through that connecting doorway any minute.

"What," he asked in a somewhat subdued voice, "if the killer comes back? He might, you know?"
"I doubt it, uncle. I wish he would, though! The guy broke up something that might have proved very interesting," Johnny sighed, untied a packet of letters he had found in the dresser, and started glancing through them.

Moe was silent. Then: "Johnny!"
"Hummm?" Johnny Saxon murmured absentmindedly.
"Let's get out of here." Moe's tone was tense. "Let's get as far away as possible. Right now! Why, people could even accuse us of murder!"
"They could at that, pappy?"
"Why don't you call the police, tell them what's happened and then let's get out of here?"
Johnny was reading another letter, the aper was faded and old.

He said, "I'll call the police—later—but not from here. They might hold us for questioning. A thing like this could drag on for days, weeks."
Moe was quite in agreement. "That's all the more reason we should get as far away from this apartment as—"
"It's a shame she was killed," interrupted Johnny. He finger tapped the letter he'd been reading. "She must have been married once. Here's one of the letters she wrote to the guy. I wish I had a wife who wrote letters like this one."
Moe asked, "Who was he? That might be a lead."
"So far, I haven't been able to find out. She merely called him 'Slim.' That's no help to us at all," pleaded, "let's scram—"

"All right," Johnny Saxon agreed. "There's little else any way." His glance fell on the woman's black gown and he picked it up. As he did so, a slip of paper fluttered to the floor from beneath the dress.
Retrieving the paper, Johnny saw that it was a clipping from a recent edition of a Cincinnati daily. Moe stuck his head around Johnny's shoulder and started reading also. It was Moe who gave a startled cry.
"A convict—escaped! A lifer!"
He took the letters from his pocket, glanced at the date on one. "Ten years," he murmured quietly. "It could be."
Moe picked up his thought. "Yes, the guy was sentenced ten years ago. Now he's free, escaped from prison. Maybe it was him."
His eyes, large and round again, held Johnny's. "Maybe he was her husband?"
"That's just what I was thinking," said Johnny calmly as he put the clipping and letters back in his pocket.
"Come on!" urged Moe Martin. "It isn't healthy around here, around."
Johnny was putting on his coat now. As he did so, his eyes touched upon the telephone stand and the little square box containing squares of loose scratch pad paper. Remembering that Jeanette Evans had learned his name and address, and had called him, he picked up the box. It was just possible she might have jotted down his name. That would be an incriminating thing to leave behind—Then he exclaimed sharply, "The hell!"
"What's wrong?" asked his partner.
Johnny kept tilting the little box so that light struck the topmost sheet of loose paper. He saw the indentations made on the clean sheet—impressions left by a pencil that had been used to write on a sheet above this one. But that piece of paper was gone, removed. Johnny's name, the address of the office he was using in the Carver Tower building, and the phone number were all readable in the sharp impressions.

Someone had removed the topmost sheet, someone now knew his name, and where he could be reached.
Moe had been watching. He understood. He said worriedly, "Johnny, maybe the—murderer tore off that scratch sheet. Put yourself in his shoes. He'll wonder just what Jeanette told you over the phone. He'll wonder just how much you know!"
"Not a very pleasant thought, is it?"
"Johnny, it's like holding T.N.T. in your hands!"
"Worse—because I can't let go of it. I'm stuck with it."
"Good Lord, what are you going to do?"
Johnny Saxon removed several more sheets from the scratch pad, just to be certain that the police would not find any impressions of his name left there. He put on his hat and gloves, then said, "When we get out of here, we'll call the police and tip them off to this murder. Then, I'd like to get something to eat."
He turned off the light, led the way to the hall door, peered out to make certain that no one was coming, then motioned his stocky partner to follow him.
He grabbed Moe's arm. "Not that way," He indicated the partially raised window at the rear of the hall. "We won't be seen if we slip out this back way."
He waited until Moe climbed over the sill and dropped to the ground a few feet below. Then he swung his long leg over in order to follow. Just as he did so a woman's high heels came tap-tapping quickly along the hall-way behind him.
Johnny's head snapped around. (To be continued)

Possible Loss Of Suez Canal Due To Egypt's Antagonism Is Real Danger

BY JOHN FISHER

Spurred by the Ottawa conference, Allied governments at last have recognized both the strategic importance and the imminent danger of the Middle East.

General Omar N. Bradley and policy-maker W. Averell Harriman were hurriedly assigned to speed Greek-Turkish inclusion in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. London rushed a new offer to forestall Cairo's denunciation of the 1936 military pact. The Arab League has been asked to support a Middle East defense arrangement.

The fly in the ointment is Egypt. An irresponsible government of corrupt pashas and greedy landlords in using fanatical nationalism—as in Iran—to inflame ignorant masses against Britain and the United States.

Its latest demand is that English troops, guarding the Suez Canal, be kicked out, even though such expulsion would leave defenseless Egypt ripe for Communist exploitation through rebellion or invasion.

Actually the loss to the West of the 200-foot wide stream of water called the Suez Canal would be more damaging than the shut-down of the great Persian oil wells.

If it were plugged by an enemy, Allied naval and commercial shipping from Europe to the Far East would have to spend more time and money in sailing around the southern tip.

Egypt is the geographical cornerstone of the Middle East. The Arab area, according to a recent State Department document, "is the most serious trouble in over the 1948 treaty that permits 40,000 British troops to occupy bases in the protection of the Suez Canal. Although the contract has five more years to run, the Wafd government is requesting immediate evacuation of British troops, the Prime Minister, who, himself negotiated the original treaty, is now threatening to abrogate it.

Futile dickering on revisions has been going on between Cairo and London since 1945. The playboy King Farouk is said to secretly oppose getting rid of the English guardians but the antipathy of the anti-British ruling class is at such heat that the monarch keeps mum.

besides, he is honeymooning with his newest bride. The politicians, drawn from a heartless, wealthy, crookedly-propriated class, are using the revived spirit of nationalism that is sweeping the Moslem world to distract attention from the miserable way they treat their wretched subjects.

About 14 millions feilahn toil for ten cents a day at tasks as hard as those of ancient Pharaohs' slaves. Inflation adds to their mounting financial worries. They live in mud huts and barely earn enough to buy bread and beans, their humble diet. The latter cost so much now that a Cairo newspaper had a cartoon of a worker asking a store-keeper, "What is the price of a bean today?"

Pashas Playing Soviet Game
Corrupt Persian rulers told their poverty-stricken people that England and America were the cause of their hunger and that once the oil wells were nationalized everyone would share in the profits.

Cairo bosses are peddling the same lies and promising prosperity when the canal becomes their own.

Recently huge mobs gathered in the capital, shouting violent threats at Uncle Sam and John Bull. Labor fanatics staged a hunger strike, vowing never to eat until the treaty had been broken.

Communist agitators have circulated all sorts of "anti-imperialist" slogans. The Soviet Legation in Beirut, Syria, the chief nest of Communist propaganda in the Middle East, has sent trained agents to the Nile to stir up trouble.

Several Egyptian papers that previously had little money to buy scarce newsprint have suddenly received mysterious funds and have gone all out in publishing the Red party line.

The rich pashas are stupid in creating a situation which the Communists can exploit: for their class would be among the first liquidated in a Communist uprising.

Some of the shrewder politicians realize the danger of edging closer to Russia and hint that in a showdown, Egypt, despite her grievances with the West, would be on the side of the free world. Extreme nationalists also are sore at Russia for not voting in the UN to uphold Egypt's ban on Israeli-oil tankers.

The government paper, Journal of Egypt, said, "Egypt knew very well that Moscow, which double-crossed the Arabs in the Palestine War by selling arms to the Israelis, could not come to its aid today."
Yet the editor and all the rest of the near-sighted Wafd regime are encouraging an anti-American, anti-British xenophobia that, by undermining the Middle East defense system, is playing Moscow's game.

Texas Is Proven Dinosaurs' Home

TEXARKANA, Tex. —(UP)—Anthropologists are exulting over the first positive proof that the mighty dinosaur once inhabited the Red River area along the Arkansas-Texas border.

The first dinosaur bones ever to be taken from the area have been found north of New Boston, Tex. in a gravel pit exposed by low water in the Red River. The fossils, apparently those of some grass-eating species, have been taken over by the Strecker Museum of Baylor University, Waco, Tex.

Prof. Bryce C. Brown, assistant curator, said the river probably washed the bones onto the gravel bed after sweeping over whatever unknown deposit holds the prehistoric reptile's full skeleton.

The man who made the actual discovery of the important fossils is Hargett Ellis, who said he had been collecting such bones "for years." He happened to show some of them to a Texarkana attorney and the attorney contacted Baylor scientists.

'Other Drivers' Scare Oldsters

MEMPHIS, Tenn. —(UP)—Mrs. Clara Young, 81, has been driving the same car for 26 years, but she's giving up driving "because of those other drivers."

Mrs. Young said she's not afraid of her 1923 Model T Ford or her driving.
"But I've finally got to admit I'm licked," she said. "It's these other drivers, they're so reckless. They run right over you."
Her car is still in good shape and passes the city inspection without any trouble.

Perfume Used To Trap Coyote

Gallatin, Mo. —(AP)—Cheap perfume caught a coyote for John Smith of Gallatin.

For weeks Smith had been trying to trap a crafty coyote. It eluded him every time. Finally he scented the site with ordinary perfume, the kind you can buy in any dime store. And he caught Mr. Coyote.

University Is Tower Of Babel

NEW YORK —(AP)—The Tower of Babel has nothing on Columbia University when it comes to languages. More than 30 foreign ones are being offered this year at Morning-side Heights in New York City.

In addition to 44 conventional tongues being taught, students will learn Akkadian, Avestan, Kurdish, Samoyed, Syriac and Tagalog. Also, such dead languages as Anglo-Saxon, Vulgar Latin, Medieval Hebrew, Latin and Dutch; Old Church Slavonic, Old French, Old Provençal, Old High German, Middle High German, Gothic and Sanskrit.

Tavern Sued For Refusing Drink

VALPARAISO, Ind. —(UP)—Mrs. Jeanne Bruckheimer asked a $25,000 damages of a tavern owner because he refused to serve her a glass of wine.

She said the bartender was wrong when he accused her of being drunk. She had stepped into the tavern, Mrs. Bruckheimer said, on her way home from a church social function.

Dispute Boils Over Removal Of Crosses From War Dead Graves

By DAVID C. WHITNEY
United Press Staff Correspondent

The American war dead of two world wars still lie under the white crosses row on row in Europe's silent battlefields. But across two oceans those of Pearl Harbor's infamous attack do not.

The "heartless economy" that caused the army's removal of the crosses this week from the graves of 13,000 American war dead on the rolling green turf of Honolulu's "Hill of Sacrifice" set a controversy boiling today from Hawaii to Washington.

Veterans in Hawaii said the replacement of the white crosses by flat stones marked on the graves, including that of columnist Ernie Pyle, gave the Hawaiian national memorial cemetery the look of a vacant lot.

In Washington, acting chairman Overton Brooks (D-La.) of the House Armed Services committee, undertook a personal inquiry into the matter. Other congressmen and senators assured a full-scale investigation.

Hawaii's delegate to Congress, Joseph R. Farrington, said he will ask the Defense department to poll the survivors of the dead buried in the Hawaiian cemetery to determine whether they want the crosses restored.

"No expense should be spared," Farrington said, "to honor those who have been laid to rest here."
Lt. Gen. Henry G. Aurand, the Army commander in Hawaii, who ordered the crosses removed and burned said he merely was carrying out orders that all crosses should be replaced with stone markers in national cemeteries.

However, an Army officer said that Aurand privately agrees that the crosses are more appropriate and impressive, "but he is a good soldier and it's his orders."

The Army originally had explained that the policy of removing the crosses was dictated by economy because of the high maintenance costs of keeping the crosses painted and because the wood rot quickly in Hawaii's tropical climate. An Army officer in Honolulu said that Congress had decided money would not be appropriated for the upkeep of the crosses.

But Rep. Edith Nourse Rogers (R-Mass) an ardent supporter of veterans benefits, branded the act "heartless economy." She said she would take it up immediately with the Army and with the House Armed Services committee.

The Disabled American Veterans organization, supported by two Honolulu newspapers, started the public protest against the plan three days before the Army trucked the crosses away Monday. The veterans say they would like to see permanent granite or marble crosses placed over the graves.

They feel that Hawaii deserves special consideration in spite of the fact it is American soil, because World War II erupted within sight of the towering crater where the samurai lies.

The DAV sent a resolution to Congress calling for restoration of the crosses as a reminder "that our present blessings of the government represent the dividends paid by the supreme sacrifice."

Congressmen and senators were aroused by the matter. Veterans organizations in the U. S. made no official statements in connection with the controversy, but indicated they sympathized with the request of the Hawaiian veterans.

An Army spokesman in Hawaii explained why the removed crosses were burned. "It is for the same reason the American flag is burned when it gets to tattered to use," he said. "Just as no one wants the symbol of the country lying around to rot, so no parent of a man buried up there wants the cross that was over his grave for years to lie around and rot."

Hail Anniversary Of The Mammoth Cheese In 1801

CHESHIRE, Mass. —(UP)—Residents of this Western Massachusetts town are celebrating the 150th anniversary of the "Mammoth Cheese."
In 1801, Democratic farmers pooled all their milk for one day. At the elder mill of Darius Brown, it was pressed into a record cheese four feet, seven inches in diameter as a gift for President Thomas Jefferson.

Records of the time tell how particular caution was exercised that the curd from Federalist cows should not go into the cheese."
It took 400 men to haul it to curing houses and early the next year it was taken to Washington where President Jefferson held a special meeting of Cabinet members, Congressmen, ambassadors and ministers to Cheshire—so the farmers could taste their handiwork.

"You Can't Take It With You" is now in production under the direction of Dr. Charles, assisted by Garland Jackson of Mt. Olive. The college department is headed by Dr. Kenneth Outbiter, who cooperates with the Teachers Playhouse in the production of "Every-

KINSTON — The show was all Bryant Aldridge's last night in Kinston's Grainger Stadium as the Kinston ace scored four times to lead his Red Devil teammates to a 40-6 victory over the Greenville Phantoms. Only a 63 yard run by Guy Smith, with 26 seconds left in the game, kept the Phantoms from being shut out.

Aldridge's Kinston dead-cinch for All-State, was easily the most outstanding man on the field as he gained 168 of the Devil's 287 yards rushing. He also passed for a fifth Kinston touchdown in addition to his running for the evening.

Aldridge and his Kinston crew wasted little time in getting their first touchdown. After kicking off to Greenville, the Kinston team held for downs and forced Sid Briley to kick.

Aldridge took Briley's kick on his own 25 and returned it 19 yards to the 44. On the first play, Aldridge hit the line for three yards on a full spinner. Kilby Turner added three more on a reverse around right end. Aldridge then got off on an off-tackle play which carried him to the Phantoms six yard marker.

Aldridge gained three more yards through the middle, but Turner, trying the same spot, was tumbled for a yard loss. Aldridge touched over the next play, however, and Kinston led 6-0 with about four minutes gone. Allen Heath added the point.

Both teams slugged it out on fairly even terms for the rest of the quarter but Kinston got possession of the ball with a minute left to go in the period. Play started with the ball on the Greenville 29.

After Kinston was penalized 15 yards for illegal use of the hands, Turner and Chris Emory alternated carrying the ball until it rested on the Greenville 49. An end around play carried to the 44 and then Turner hit Wayne Anderson with a pass that carried to the 27. Charlie Wickham moved the ball back to the 30 when he tried left tackle and the attack looked stopped when one of Wickham's passes fell incomplete.

Aldridge quickly put away any such ideas, though, when he broke over tackle for the 30 yards and his second touchdown. Heath again added the point.

Greenville had possession of the ball for only three plays following the kick-off, surrendering it on an interception by Wickham who returned the ball 21 yards to the Phantoms 19. A double reverse by Kinston failed to gain and then Aldridge found Jerry Trotter loose in the end zone and smacked him with a nice pass which made the score 20-0. Heath again added the point.

Dodgers Stunned By Giant Rise

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The National Football League was off to a flying start today, with the Los Angeles Rams writing a brilliant new chapter in the record book.

Other clubs in the circuit swing into action over the weekend. Highlighted by the record-smashing performance of Quarterback Norman Van Brocklin, who broke the league mark for yards gained by passing when he sent the Rams traveling 554 yards via the air, Los Angeles walloped the New York Yanks by a 54-14 score last night.

The faltering Dodgers and the amazing new miracle men of modern baseball, Leo Durocher's surging New York Giants, each have won 94 games and lost 58 in the early pumping drive for the senior circuit flag. They each have two games left to play.

Reporters had to wait about 20 minutes before an attendant opened the locker room door to let them in. You could have heard a pin drop. The players weren't even talking to each other. The gloom could have been sliced with a knife.

Manager Charley Dressen stood in his little office in Shibe Park's visiting quarters waiting for an avalanche of questions. But none came. It seems even the usually volatile newsmen were stunned by the sudden turn of events. Dressen called for Coach Cookie Lavagetto to stand beside him, as if he was looking for a little moral support.

"No, I'm not going to change my lineup," he said as one reporter broke the ice with a question. "This is the ball club that has led the league since May 13. It will have to be good enough to win the pennant. This is not time to start changing lineups, not with two games left to play."

"We'll be with Don Newcombe today and Preacher Roe tomorrow. If that isn't good enough, will, who has a couple of tickets for the Polo Grounds?"

AYDEN — Quarterback Darrell Worthington and Fullback Hal Edwards paced Ayden's Tornadoes to a successful defense of their Coastal Athletic Conference crown last night as Coach Stuart Tripp's boys ran roughshod over Robersonville's lame Rams, winning out by 26-7.

Worthington personally accounted for two touchdowns and gained 98 yards net rushing. Edwards also went over for two scores and added a pair of extra points to lead the scoring for the night with 14 points.

The Tornadoes took the lead within four minutes after the opening kick-off, marching 86 yards for the TD. Edwards took the opening kick on his own 20 and fumbled, but recovered back on the 14. Ayden had a first down in two plays as John Cheek and Delano Cox picked up six yards each on runs off right tackle.

Worthington then added another first down with a 13 yard jaunt to the 39 yard line, and followed with a 27 yard run, carrying into Robersonville territory for the first time. A pass from Worthington to Willis Manning accounted for six yards. Worthington, who was carrying the Ayden offense at this point, went over right tackle for 30 yards and the first Tornado touchdown. Edwards ran the extra point to make the score 7-0 for Ayden.

Edwards took it up from there and, after an exchange of punts near the end of the first quarter, took the ball on Robersonville's 12 and went over to put Ayden ahead, 13-0. A running attempt by Delano Cox for the extra point was no good. Fullback Sonny James fumbled on the 50 yard line following the kick-off and Tornado Guard Norman Skinner recovered on the 47. Edwards went 16 yards on a reverse and Worthington gained 25 off right tackle, placing the ball on the five. A double reverse with Cox carrying took the ball to the one, where Edwards took it over on the next play. The extra point was no good and the score stood at 19-0 with six minutes gone in the second period.

After a series of plays on the ensuing kick-off, Robersonville was able to pick only six yards to their own 36. Maurice Everette dropped back into punting formation to kick, but before he could get the kick away, Ayden left end Willis Manning charged in to block the kick. Manning recovered the loose ball on the 11. Mac Whitehurst carried to the five on an end around, and then Worthington went over for the final Tornado score. Edwards made the extra point, and Ayden led 26-0 with 40 seconds left in the half.

A refreshed Robersonville team came back in the third quarter and held Ayden on even terms. Both teams battled in midfield for the length of the period. Coach Tripp began to infiltrate substitutes into the Tornado line-up about midway of the final period. Robersonville marched 80 yards for their lone touchdown, with Dan Clark passing to Maurice Everette for the score on a play which covered 65 yards. Sonny James took the ball over right end for the extra point, ending the scoring for the night.

Defensive Standouts

Guards Gordon Hart and Norman Skinner, End Willis Manning, and Tackles Todd Kittrell and Randall Harrington led the Ayden defense, holding Robersonville to a net rushing gain of 83 yards. Center Curtis Dennis was also outstanding, both on offense and defense.

Co-captain William Taylor led the Rams along with Center Julius Budecz and Tackle Curtis Roberson.

National League Thrown Into Tie

ALLIE REYNOLDS

By CARL LUNQUIST
United Press Sports Writer

The dependable Yankees pocketed the American League baseball pennant as usual today, but it looks as though Giant and Dodger fans may be kept guessing until Wednesday about the outcome of the breath-taking National League race.

That's the day the World Series is supposed to start. At least that is what it says on the tickets, according to folks lucky enough to have a couple. But there could be a slight delay due to circumstances beyond control of the men who plot 154-game schedules and suddenly find that there is no way of determining a winner in that long April to October stretch.

With 152 games played by each club, the Giants and Dodgers were deadlocked for first place today and it would be an even money bet they would wind up that way when the schedule has run its course Sunday afternoon.

If there was a favorite to win in the regulation distance without a three-game playoff series, the Giants had to be the choice. For after two days of idleness in which they watched the Dodger lead shrink to nothing with two straight defeats in Boston and Philadelphia—they were ready to wrap it up.

Brooklyn, once considered invincible with a 13 1-2 game first-place lead on Aug. 11, now was in full panic after a second straight late-inning loss, 4 to 3, to the Phillies last night.

That combination "4 to 3" may be the most hated of all time for the Dodgers if they go on to lose in the final two days. Because both of the defeats that hurt the most came by that margin—and at times when victory seemed to be theirs.

Leading 3 to 1 in the eighth against last year's champion Phillies, bald Andy Semick tied the score against the Brooks at 3-3 with a two-run homer. Carl Erskine, who had pitched creditably until that time, then dug his own grave in the ninth when Richie Ashburn bloomed a single to left and Dick Sisler sacrificed. Bill Nicholson was walked intentionally and up came Willie (puddin' Head) Jones, a hero last year, but just another ball player this season. He smacked a single past third baseman Billy Cox into left field and Ashburn streaked for home, sliding in without dispute for the run that broke up the ball game—and perhaps a myth.

For the Dodgers no longer looked invincible. In fact, after the two defeats they have suffered under pressure, there was much doubt that they could pull themselves together for the last two games.

It was an all-star cast of pitchers for today's climactic games. Don Newcombe, who pitched the Dodgers to an off-the-floor triumph in Boston Wednesday as his 19th decision, will go tonight against Rob in Roberts, a 21-game winner for the Phils, considered by many to be the best hurler in the National League.

As the Giants take on the Braves in Boston this afternoon it will be Sal (The Barber) Maglie, their sleek 22-6 winner, who has broken Boston six out of seven times this year. He will have to go against lefty Warren Spahn, a 23-13 artist, who was beaten by the Giants 4 to 1 last Saturday but who won a 6 to 3 decision from Brooklyn Tuesday night. The Giants have beaten him four times.

Meanwhile, the Yankees, who clinched their third straight pennant yesterday with a no-hit, no-run flourish by Allie Reynolds, will resume the course today—strictly for batting and fielding practice—in a doubleheader against the Boston Red Sox. The Athletics and Senators were postponed and no other games were scheduled.

Reynolds' no-hitter gave the Yankees an 8 to 0 victory in the opening game of a twin-bill against the Red Sox. The Yankees then clinched sixth place by defeating the Pirates 4 to 3 in the National League. The Athletics and Senators were postponed and no other games were scheduled.

DiMag Retirement Not Definite Yet

NEW YORK (UP)—Joe DiMaggio wasn't sure today whether he'll retire or not.

The graying, 36-year-old Yankee star, who said last spring he would retire after the current season, still is mulling over his decision.

"Our work isn't complete yet," he said after the Yankees clinched the American League pennant yesterday. "This is neither the time nor place to say anything about quitting. After the World Series, maybe."

"Thinking it over a moment, he concluded by saying, 'Frankly, I still don't know what I'll do.'"

Southern Votes To Outlaw Post Season Bowl Games

CHAPEL HILL (UP)—The east's largest football conference "merely decided to put football back in its proper place in education" by voting to ban bowl games and put the brakes on spring practice schedules, southern conference commissioner Wallace Wade said today.

Wade said that neither the recent West Point nor other athletic scandals that have rocked the nation in the past year "appeared to influence the presidents of the 17 member schools" who overwhelmingly voted to recommend the bowl-banning action.

The presidents will instruct their representatives at the December conference meeting to take three major actions. In addition to the vote against post-season football games, they decided to ask their delegates to:

1. "Think about" cutting down or abolishing spring practice.
2. Prohibit transfer students from taking part in varsity sports.

"A great many educators," Wade said, "believe that bowl games have a demoralizing effect on both the students and players in participating colleges. The bowl games tend to drag out the season too long and create too much emphasis on the game."

He said that the school officials have been "thinking about and discussing all three actions for some time. The recent scandals did not appear to guide their decisions. We merely wanted to put football back in its proper place in education," the conference chief said.

He said the move to ban spring practice was discussed by the presidents last year, but that they have not reached a final decision yet.

"They are definitely opposed to the long spring practice sessions," Wade said. "They voted last year to abolish them if the rest of the teams in the nation would do the same. Now they are seriously thinking about taking action along those lines even if it is not done on a national scale."

The former head coach of Duke said the educators "are beginning to feel that football is taking too much time from other school activities."

The decision to keep transfers off the fields of sports was nothing new in the conference. It was in effect for many years, and was only amended a year ago to allow

Gold Wins 13-0 In Little League

Gold defeated the Red team in the second game of the youthful Little League football program yesterday by the score of 13-0.

Halfback Charles Smith led the winners with a pair of touchdowns. Smith scored first on a 10 yard gain and then broke through the Red secondary to go 55 yards for his second score.

The Reds threatened late in the first half as they marched to the Gold 2 yard line before the gun went off ending the half. Fullback Jerry Drum and quarterback Marvin Blount sparked the Red drive.

Fullback James Hudson, who scored the only extra point of the day, teamed with Smith to lead the winning Gold attack. Guard Edwin Wilkerson led the defense play for the winners. Guard Dick Arthur was outstanding on defense for the losers.

Rams' Ace Gains 555 Yards Passing

LOS ANGELES (UP)—Norm van Brocklin, a Johnny-come-lately in pro football, joined the select circle of the game's greatest passers today with a record 555 aerial yards gained in the Los Angeles Rams' 54 to 14 rout of the New York Yanks in the National League opener last night.

The Flying Dutchman quarterback credited his record to "going the full route." "When I knew I wouldn't be jerked at the end of the quarter, it gave me a chance to organize my campaign, he said."

Van Brocklin, a former Oregon star playing his third season in the NFL, completed 27 out of 41 throws as he passed for five touchdowns and plumged over for another. His yardage total broke the old record of 488 set by Johnny Lujack of the Chicago Bears in 1949.

Elroy (Crazy Legs) Hirsch tied a National League mark by catching four Van Brocklin passes for touchdowns.

The Rams also established two NFL team records by piling up 34 first downs and 73 net yards before a crowd of 30,316.

Eppes Bulldogs Loses 19-12 To New Bern High

NEW BERN — After taking the lead on the first play of the ball game, New Bern Negro High School defeated Eppes High School of Greenville 19-12 in New Bern last night.

New Bern's first touchdown was on the game's opening play when they hit for 65 yards and a touchdown on a long pass play. The Eppes Bulldogs came back, however, to drive 65 yards for their first touchdown.

A series of passes carried the ball to the New Bern 14. Henry Dupree cracked for eight yards off tackle and then Carlton Tucker found Ephriam Green open and fired a quick pass which tied the score. Another pass for the extra point was knocked down.

The scores remained tied at 6-6 until late in the third period when the Bulldogs found themselves in possession of the ball on the New Bern 15. Outerbridge had recovered a fumbled New Bern punt at that point to set up the score. Clarence Williams scored two plays later from the eight yard line to give Eppes a 12-6 lead but New Bern came back with two quick touchdowns and an extra point to win going away.

Panhandlers Hit Bonn, Germany In Boom Era

BONN, Germany (AP)— This little Rhine city has become a Mecca for beggars—as well as diplomats. Panhandlers find the boom-town atmosphere of the young West German capital good for picking up a fast penni.

Police say some collect as much as 70 marks $16.10 a day here—nearly the weekly pay of the average German worker. Two beggars recently arrested had lived in lavish hotel rooms and ridden in taxis.

Another carried a commuter's monthly train ticket from Dusseldorf and made the trip daily. Police say it's a losing game to try to stop the hat-in-hand boys. Crowds usually "boo" the cops when they haul one in. After a short jail term, the beggars start soliciting again almost as soon as they reach the street.

Colorful Street Name Is Changed

SINGAPORE (AP)— A thorough fare called "Cut Your Stomach Open Street" now has a new name.

That was the translation of the Chinese words jalan "pauah pak tiang. Residents sometime ago began to resent the gruesome name which originally was given because the street led to the site of an old cemetery for paupers and post mortem cases.

He stated that the education of young people would be responsible for a sound development of democracy in Japan.

John Mewborn was program chairman.

The attendance contest produced three one hundred per cent meetings during the month of September and it was announced that the team headed by Bobby Rouse was the contest winner. Plans for the pay off are to be announced later.

Curtis Flanagan received the attendance prize. Cecil Howell of Washington, D. C. was the guest of Cleveland Taylor.

Graham McAdams and Rev. Z. B. T. Cox were the guests of W. A. McAdams and Henry Johnson and Rev. Earl W. Holmes were the guests of George Davis. James W. Butler was a visitor from the Greenville club. Harry W. Stillman and Bill Johnson were visitors from the Ayden Club.

Urges Kiwanians Support Scouting

FARMVILLE — Rev. Gray Temple, Episcopal rector of Rocky Mount, spoke to the Kiwanis Club Monday night about Scouting and listed three reasons why he believes the movement deserves the support of every citizen.

Rev. Temple pointed out that the power-loving dictators have used youth movements to spearhead their work, and cited the organizations built in Italy by Mussolini and in Germany by Hitler. He asked that the club members support the East Carolina Council and the local troop in the financial campaign.

Special guests of the club were Scouts Johnny Dixon and Jimmy Joyner.

Police Chief L. T. Lucas was a guest of the club. He made a few remarks about the bicycle safety contest held in Farmville this week.

President Charles Edwards reported that proceeds from the Kiwanis Carnival were in excess of $1200 and that the net profit would be about $950.

The club will operate an eating stand at the county fair in Greenville next week.

Exchange Clubs' Board To Meet Here In January

The North Carolina Board of Control, Exchange Clubs, will hold its midwinter meeting in Greenville sometime in January, Director Sam O. Worthington announced at the Exchange Club's supper meeting last night.

The date and place of meeting will be announced later, Worthington, one of the organizers and the first president of the Greenville Exchange Club, stated. Ten Exchange clubs of the northeastern part of the state will be represented at the district meeting.

Worthington and J. W. (Bill) Riggins reported on the recent meeting of the State Board of Control at High Point.

Riggins welcomed three new members into the fellowship of the Exchange Club and presented emblem pins. The new members are John W. Lautares of Lautares Brothers' Jewelers; Jack Wallace, realtor, and J. R. Newell, manager of the local office of the Western Union Telegraph Company. President Robert S. (Sweeney) Moyer presided.

Jake Hadley reported that Warren Carroll, director of city recreation, will show a motion picture of football games at the armory next Tuesday night at 7:30. This meeting is preliminary to organizing an adult program of recreation.

Three Big Firms Found Guilty In Anti-Trust Suit

NEW YORK — (AP) — A federal court has found three of the world's big chemical and arms makers guilty of anti-trust violations by participating in a cartel to split up world markets.

A government attorney says the United States now will ask the court to end what he calls the "nylon monopoly" held by two of the defendants—the E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. of Wilmington, Del., and the Imperial Chemical Industries, Ltd. of Great Britain.

The Remington Arms Co., Inc., of Bridgeport, Conn., was the third big defendant. Also named in the government suit were five individuals connected with the corporations and the American subsidiary of the British firm.

Arrest Soldier For Hit-And-Run

Police arrested Guy C. Elks, 28-year-old soldier from Fort Belvoir, Virginia, between last midnight and dawn today and charged him with careless and reckless and hit-and-run driving.

The investigating officer's official report states that the car Elks was driving collided with a truck owned by Johnnie Jenkins, 1218 Clarke Street, Greenville, that was parked near 13th and Clarke streets.

Police estimated damage to Jenkins' truck at about $50; Elks' car, about $200.

Elks was still in city jail at noon today. He will be tried in Police Court Monday.

Mt. Etna Again Stages Eruption

CATANIA, Sicily — (AP) — Europe's greatest volcano, Mount Etna, has begun erupting. It is throwing reddish clouds and smoke into the air visible 30 miles away.

The eruption, which began last night, was heralded by tremendous roars and took place 9,300 feet above sea level.

First reports indicated lava was already straining out of the crater in 325-foot wide puddles but did not yet present any danger to inhabited areas.

High And Low

The temperature here yesterday afternoon was 90, and that's the highest the mercury has gone for more than a week. Mrs. Carl E. Maiden, local observer for the U. S. Department of Commerce, reported.

The lowest temperature here last night was 50, and that was the lowest since last May 25. Today at 8 a.m. the temperature was 63.

Yesterday a year ago, the highest temperature was 75 degrees. Lowest that night, 62, and at 8 a.m. next day it was 63. No rain that day.

Price Ceiling On Gold Is Removed

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The International Monetary Fund has taken its $35-an-ounce ceiling off the price of fabricated gold—gold meant for art, industry and other such non-banking uses.

The Fund's action yesterday meant in effect that the 49 Fund member nations—most of the free world, plus Czechoslovakia—are now free to put as much of their non-monetary gold on the market as they want, at whatever price it will bring.

The decision will affect the "free market" price of gold, possibly driving it down as more gold becomes available, or bidding gold up if the demand is great.

It may also reflect in international trade prices and in the value, on international exchanges, of some currencies as they are offered in exchange for the now more readily available gold. But officials said effects could not be predicted, may take months to show up, and depend partly on political and military situations.

German Women Look To Alaska

FRANKFURT, Germany — (AP) — West German spinsters, moaning scarcity of bachelors in this country, are casting envious eyes at Alaska.

A West German magazine which reported on its front page that "Alaska needs 50,000 women" was sold out in record time recently.

One of 2,800,000 West German women whose chances for marriage are slight because of war casualties, confronted a dealer the day after she had brought her copy. "That's all fine and interesting to read," she snapped. "But how do we get there?"

Moslems Fleeing To Pakistan

KHOKRAPAR, Pakistan — (AP) — Indian Moslems are fleeing across the border to Pakistan without help, Pakistan refugee minister Ishaq Hussain Qureshi told a press party visiting this frontier town.

From the start of communal riots in the Indo-Pakistan sub-continent in January 1950, Qureshi said, a grand total of 328,500 Indian Moslems have sought refuge in west Pakistan. He claimed the influx continues at a daily rate of more than 500.

Babson . . .

(Continued from Page One) corporations with which such men were connected. Often the death of such a man is ultimately unfavorably reflected in labor relations, sales programs and the earnings of the corporation; and hence a loss to stockholders. With special interest in the 2,000 corporations above mentioned, I am anxious for the support of all attempts to reduce these heart tragedies.

Doctors tell me that these heart attacks are unnecessary and could largely be prevented if corporations would insist on annual physical audits of their head executives. When finding one of their executive threatened with a heart condition, the corporation would find it an excellent investment to give this executive a supervised vacation with pay at a restful spot catering to the "tired business-man." This is not charity or a "wellfare" nature. It is sound, hardboiled business sense.

Repairing Versus Preventive Tests The so-called "six weeks cure" for heart attacks can be taken at home or at a hospital if the patient will absolutely obey the doctor's orders; but this is not true of preventive heart repairing. Those showing a tendency to heart trouble, but who have not yet been attacked, need not stay in bed. They should, however, be away from home and office, in a restful spot in the woods until all these symptoms vanish.

In this connection let me say that great progress is being made by physicians in detecting possible heart troubles. The electrocardiograph is now being supplemented or anticipated by "flicker tests", blood tests and ingenious gadgets which give an executive a warning to take a rest and avoid further trouble.

Again this year the Norman Y. Chambliss prize will be awarded to the best club exhibit. It is offered by the Fair manager and amounts to $25. It will be presented to the club president at the Chamber of Commerce banquet Wednesday aite. In addition to the Chambliss award, other cash prizes will be awarded to the winners in all of the departmental classifications for their entries. Also, Drum's Hatchery in Greenville is offering this year for the first time a trophy to the club boy winning the Junior Swine Show which will be held Wednesday morning.

One change has been made in the original schedule of Fair days. The county school children will be admitted free Tuesday instead of Friday as was originally planned. Teachers in the county schools are having a meeting here Tuesday, which would grant the students an automatic holiday. However, it was announced that the students would be admitted Friday with their passes if they cannot come Tuesday.

Dips Into Supply Reserve Copper

WASHINGTON (UP) — President Truman has authorized withdrawal of another 30,000 tons of copper from the national stockpile to make up for production losses in the recent strike.

His decision was announced today by Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson.

It is the second withdrawal of copper from the stockpile to help overcome the current shortage of the strategic metal. Release of up to 25,000 tons was announced Aug. 17.
