

Pitt Fair Opens Its Gates Today

Livestock Show Now Second Best In State, Asserts Chambliss

The Pitt County Agricultural Fair officially opened this afternoon at 4 o'clock, carrying out the slogan "Pitt County on Parade" by offering educational exhibits from farm and home groups in the county.

Chambliss said the agricultural leaders have made the fair possible by "excellent cooperation." S. C. Winchester, director of the men's division exhibits, said he was looking for improvements over last year's exhibits from the standpoint of educational benefits to farmers and homemakers.

Chambliss declared the fair this year, with the exception of Charlotte and Raleigh, will be the finest in the state. He said there were modern rest room facilities and nine eating stands that were occupied by people of Pitt County.

Another free attraction will be the Bailey Brothers, performers over WPTF. Their performance will begin at 7:30 and 10 o'clock every night on a specially built platform at the end of the midway.

The Ones To Watch

British-Iranian Quarrel Has Big Issues Involved, And If Russia Can Help Make Solution More Difficult, It Will Be Done; Iranians Impatient

By HARRY FERGUSON

Britain and Iran take their quarrel before the United Nations Security Council today, but the people seem to keep their eyes on the Russians. They may tip their hand on whether they want war now, two years from now or ever.

The Russians are not active participants in the controversy over Iran's seizure of the Anglo-Iranian Oil Co. installations in the southwestern Iranian town of Abadan.

There are big issues involved in the quarrel between Britain and Iran—issues, for instance, such as the fact that Britain and the anti-Communist coalition badly need the oil that formerly flowed from Abadan to the Western world.

Approve Aide To Solicitor's Post

H. H. Rountree To Be Administrative Assistant To Bundy

From now on the solicitor of Pitt County Recorder's Court will serve as administrative assistant to the district solicitor for criminal cases arising in the county.

By action of the county commissioners, meeting today, the county solicitor will help the district solicitor prepare cases for upcoming criminal court terms of superior court. Salary for the job was set at $75 per month.

The present solicitor, H. Horton Rountree of Farmville, conferred with the board early this afternoon concerning his appointment to the administrative post. Presently the solicitor's salary is $100 per month.

District Solicitor W. J. Bundy presented the request to the commissioners. He stated that such a position has been made in Beaufort County superior court and in other counties of the state.

Although, he said, the criminal docket is not as full as it has been in months past, the cases that are expected to arise in the future will warrant the hiring of an assistant.

Patience Proves Value In Holdup

OAKLAND, Calif. (UP)—Patience proved to be a profitable virtue for a holdup man who took the contents of a candy store's cash register after first waiting for customers to increase the "take."

The man, about 40 or 45, entered the store yesterday and flashed a gun while demanding the cash from two clerks. Considering the contents of the cash drawer insufficient, he sat down to wait.

A lady entered and purchased a three-pound box of candy, the hold-up man making the change. After one more sale, there was a lull in business and the bandit left.

Begin Hearings On Lottery Man And 4 Ex-Cops

GREENSBORO (UP)—Francis D. (George) Smith and four former Greensboro police officers faced preliminary hearings today on charges of conspiracy to commit bribery.

The officers, J. H. Adams, F. B. Money, R. L. Paschal and R. L. Ferrell, were fired from the force Aug. 14 after being charged with receiving bribes of money and whisky from C. A. (Shug) York, convicted lottery operator.

Twelve Singing Groups And 2 Choruses In Meet

Relatively Small Audience Attends, But Sponsors Feel Groundwork Laid For Making Event Annual Affair

Choirs and other singing groups, from a wide portion of eastern North Carolina participated in the first Coastal Plains Singing Convention here yesterday afternoon.

Twelve singing groups and two choruses, composed of all the voices participating, presented many of the familiar hymns of the church to an East Carolina College stadium crowd numbering close to 300 persons.

Although the crowd was nothing close to what had been expected, it was felt by the Greenville Junior Chamber of Commerce, sponsor of the songfest, that the program laid the foundation for an annual affair.

Under the direction of the Rev. Ernest D. A. Windham, Free Will Baptist minister, the choruses represented several counties in this section of the state, one from as far away as Ahoskie. Others came from Craven, Greene, Wilson and Pitt counties.

The theme for the occasion was stated by Dr. John D. Messick, president of the college, when he welcomed the groups to the campus. He stated that it was a good time for the people to get together, with the universal language of music serving as a bond among them.

Other speakers were the Reverend Leon Russell, pastor of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church, who delivered the invocation; and Mayor Lester D. Page who welcomed the groups to Greenville. In his brief, informal remarks Page called on the peoples of the world to join together in music in an effort to seek better understanding between nations.

For the better part of two hours the groups stood in the middle of the football field and sang the hymns of the church which were familiar to all. Each presented two songs and then joined with the other groups for the grand finale.

Messick To Open Finance Drive For Carolina Scouts

A prominent North Carolina College President will make the kick-off address to more than 500 workers in a special "Dawn to Dusk" finance campaign for the East Carolina Council, Boy Scouts of America, by way of a special East North Carolina radio hook-up, Tuesday morning, October 2 nd.

Dr. John D. Messick, President of East Carolina College, Greenville, has been selected by the Finance Campaign Committee to speak by radio to workers in more than 125 communities in the 20 counties of the East Carolina Council.

Mr. H. Dall Holderness of Tarboro-campaign chairman of the boys and J. H. Hanchrow of Wilson, Finance appeal stated "No Community will be given a quota as to the amount of money that they should raise to support Scouting. However, it is hoped that the largest possible number of people will express an interest in their boys and where possible, give one day's pay for a whole year of service in Scouting."

Senior Student Teachers Now In 12 N. C. Schools

Seventy-Seven Are Teaching; Majority In City And County Schools

Seniors at East Carolina College who are now gaining practical experience as student teachers in twelve public schools of eastern North Carolina number 77 men and women. Dr. J. L. Oppelt, director of student teaching and placement at the college, has just issued a report outlining the student teaching program for this fall and presenting facts and figures relating to this phase of training students for careers in education.

Work is being done by student teachers this quarter in all grades from the first through the twelfth, and in various departments in instruction in secondary schools.

Among the twelve schools participating in the program this fall, the Greenville High School, with 26 seniors doing full-time and three doing half-time teaching, leads in numbers. The Training School on the college campus follows closely with a total of 21 student teachers in grades one through eight.

Out-of-town centers and the number of student teachers assigned to each are Washington, 3; Tarboro, 6; Chicod, 3; Winterville, 2; Belhel, 2; Ayden, 4; Grimesland, 3; Belvoir, 2; and Farmville, 2.

Among the 77 seniors engaged in teaching this quarter, Dr. Oppelt's report reveals, 72 are North Carolinians and five are Virginians. Women outnumber men, 54 to 23. During the fall quarter last year 73 students, including 36 men and 37 women, participated in the student teaching program offered by East Carolina.

Students now assigned to the Greenville High School, where they are teaching in various departments of instruction are: Isaac G. Armstrong, Oriental; Gaye Batten, Selma; Donald G. Brown, Winterville; Mattie Faye Brown, Williamston; Shirley H. Byrd, Marners; Albert G. Cowart, Atlantic; James E. Finch, Louisville; Ida Mae Garrington, Jarvisburg; Elizabeth C. Glasgow, Littleton; Allison R. Hearne, Greenville; Madeline Hodges, Washington; Charles T. V. Jones, Elizabeth City; Alice L. McKenzie, Clinton; Mabel E. Messer, Dunn; Mrs. Lou Smith Nelson, Greenville; Edward J. Reynolds, Creswell; Ralph H. Rives, Enfield; Lucy M. Robertson, Williamston; Jean H. Shaver, Ransomville; Betty Ann Shaw, Weldon; Moses M. Sheppard, Norfolk, Va.; Mrs. Jean Farris Stargardt, Morehead City; Mrs. Mary Edna Brison Stocks, Fayetteville; Billie Watson, Bethel; John B. White, Greenville; Betty E. Worrell, Newsum, Va.

Clark Resigns As Director Of OPS

Deputy Director Alton G. Murchison Named To Post; Resignation Said Due To Pressure Of Private Affairs

The resignation of John G. Clark of Greenville as district director of the Eastern North Carolina Office of Price Stabilization was officially announced in Raleigh today.

It has been rumored for some time that the local oil dealer and civic leader would resign as head of the OPS in this section of the state as soon as a successor could be found to fill his place as district director.

Alton G. Murchison, deputy director, has been designated as acting district director of OPS in Eastern North Carolina.

Clark, who was instrumental in the organization of the Raleigh OPS office and has served as its director since last March, said pressure of private business interests forced his decision to resign.

Regional Director W. S. Bailey of Richmond, Va. said, "John Clark has left an outstanding record of service to the people of his district and to the government."

In announcing his resignation Clark declared that he owes a "great debt of gratitude to the business people of Eastern Carolina and to the press and radio for the finest sort of cooperation with the Price Stabilization Board."

"If every section of this nation could find in its people the same unquenchable spirit of cooperation which is prevalent in North Carolina there would be no problem of inflation which now threatens the basic liberties of this country," Clark said.

In a brief ceremony at OPS headquarters Clark presented a scroll from the personnel expressing their appreciation for his friendship and guidance.

Clark expressed his appreciation to the staff for the loyalty and capabilities shown by them and urged them to continue in the same spirit.

UN Command Sounds Warning That Time For Bluffing Is Over; U. S. Jets And South Korean Infantry Hurl Back Enemy In New Encounter

TOKYO (UP)—The United Nations command told the Communists today to stop bluffing and make their choice between an "honorable armistice" and all-out war.

The U.N. command sounded the warning while waiting for a Communist reply to its proposal to shift the suspended truce talks from Kaesong to Songhyon, eight miles to the southeast in the middle of the western front "no-man's-land."

Supreme U.N. commander Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway made the proposal last Thursday in a formal note to Gen. Kim Il Sung, North Korean premier and commander-in-chief, and Gen. Peng Teh-huai, commander of Chinese forces in Korea.

The new U.N. warning was in the form of a "Voice of the U.N. Command" broadcast to Korea and Asia.

"The Communists must realize that the time for bluffing is over," the broadcast said.

Unless the Reds choose to resume the cease-fire conference on mutually satisfactory terms, it said, they face the prospect of a terrible winter and more military reverses.

"Winter is approaching, and with it the difficulties in transportation and supply that will plague the Reds," the broadcast said.

"The U.N. command is poised and prepared to strike, and strike hard, should the Reds decide that they have had enough of the armistice talks and wish to get on with the war on an all-out scale."

8TH ARMY HQ, Korea (UP)—United Nations forces hurled back the Communists in the air and on the ground today as Gen. Omar N. Bradley and Matthew B. Ridgway toured the Korean front.

American jets shot down their 11th Communist jet fighter of the war and damaged three others in a 47-plane dogfight high over northwest Korea. The rest of the enemy formation fled north to Manchuria.

South Korean ground forces at the same time captured the third crest of a hill mass west of "Heartbreak ridge" on the east-central front and sent the remnants of a North Korean battalion fleeing north.

The South Koreans won the two western crests of the hill Sunday night. They smashed to the third crest Monday morning, but were driven back nearly 100 yards by the determined Reds.

The South Koreans charged up the hill again with fixed bayonets and routed the North Koreans after a bloody hand-to-hand battle.

Other South Korean troops farther east captured a hill northwest of "Punchbowl valley," above Inje, against light to moderate enemy resistance. Victory came 3 days after the U.N. initial attack on the position.

Army Drained Of Plasma Supply

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Korean war is draining the Army's supply of blood plasma faster than it is being replaced.

For that reason, Maj. Gen. G. E. Armstrong, surgeon general of the Army, urged Americans to donate at least one pint of their own blood.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (AP)—Italy's Prime Minister, scholar Alcide De Gasperi, has returned to Rome but he left behind an idea that could snowball into the West's answer to the gigantic communist youth rallies.

During his conference with Secretary of State Acheson, De Gasperi proposed the United States take the lead in drafting a positive program for selling democracy to Europe's restless youth.

The West is lagging dangerously behind Moscow in this important phase of the cold war, he said.

While the Russians sponsor mammoth youth rallies and demonstrations to sell their communist philosophy to the young, he said the West's statesmen do little except adopt hasty counter measures and denounce the communist spectacles as phony.

Why not switch from the defensive to the offensive in this struggle for the minds of youth? he asked.

British To Evacuate Oil Workers In Iran

Step Ordered As Explosive Dispute Goes To Security Council; Soviet Veto To British Resolution Seen

By UNITED PRESS

Evacuation by warship of the ordered today as Britain carried the explosive nationalization dispute to the United Nations Security Council.

The 330 Britons, who had rebelled against London orders to "stand firm" against Iran's ultimatum to get out by Thursday, will be taken out of Abadan Wednesday under protection of the royal navy.

They probably will be wearing the cruiser Mauritius, which has been standing off Abadan for several weeks, the Anglo-Iranian Oil Co. said.

Alec C. Mason, assistant general manager of the AIOC, made the evacuation announcement after the oil men protested London's orders and said they would rather leave voluntarily than become "political pawns" in the Anglo-Iranian crisis.

The oil men told the AIOC management they were certain Iran would carry out the threat to expel them from this southern oil center Thursday.

At Flushing, N.Y., Great Britain was faced with a Russian veto in support of the Iranians.

Laborites Issue Peace Platform

SCARBOROUGH, Eng. (UP)—Britain's ruling Labor party opened its annual convention today and bid for victory in the Oct. 25 general elections with a platform promising to "save the peace."

The Laborites charged the Conservative party, led by Winston Churchill, might lead Britain to war. The convention served as a kickoff for the campaign for the election.

It also became today a public platform from which right and left-wing factions of the party were united against the Tories. The two wings have been ripping each other for the past six months.

Prime Minister Clement R. Attlee will make the convention keynote speech later today.

"It is vital to the fate of civilization that the voice of labor should be heard wherever and whenever the issues of war and peace are discussed," said the party manifesto issued last night.

"I shudder to think of Winston Churchill representing this country at international conferences," said left-wing leader Aneurin Bevan to an overflow rally audience at a movie house here.

"I would tremble with fear if the Tories came to power. I would not like not to be sure that we would not be precipitated into war." Foreign Secretary Herbert Morrison said a few minutes later.

Mind Of The Young

Italy's Prime Minister May Have Provided Answer To Russia's Giant Youth Rallies And Power To Seemingly Hypnotize Vast Numbers Of Young People

By JOHN SCALI

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (AP)—Acheson was impressed with the logic of De Gasperi's arguments. He has directed his aides to look into the problem to see what, if anything, can be done.

But from all evidence available now it looks as if there won't be anything done for a long time, at least not on the scale that De Gasperi advocated.

Most State Department planners believe an independent study and attack on this problem may interfere with the work to be performed by a new committee created by the North Atlantic Pact council. This new group was set up at the Ottawa Conference two weeks ago to draw up a program of steps the 12 Atlantic Pact countries should take in non-military fields.

The youth problem could be one of the items on the committee's agenda. Not all the State Department's psychological warfare experts agree with this, however. They believe it would take too long to consider the communist youth problem along with a score of other issues.

Why shouldn't the West stage bigger and fancier rallies, sports carnivals and get together to remind their youth of the advantages of freedom and democracy?

Miss Caroline S. Peckham, of Appleton, Wis., a missionary of the Methodist Church in Japan and principal of Kwassui Girls College in Nagasaki, has been elected chairman of the Fellowship of Christian Missionaries in Japan. The Fellowship consists of missionaries of all Protestant bodies serving in Japan. It meets annually during the summer season in a conference where the problems of Japan, of the Christian movement are discussed. Four hundred missionaries attended the conference this year.

Three nuns of the Roman Catholic Church who have been members of religious orders in America for 70 years each, 18 who have been nuns for over 60 years each, and 82 who have ministered for more than 50 years each, were recently honored at a pontifical mass, followed by a dinner, in St. Paul, Minn. Mother Francis Xavier Hickey, 90, northwest provincial of the Sisters of the Good Shepherd, was one of the three who had been in the service for 70 years; the other two were Mother Bridget Bohan, 90; and Sister Alphonsa Welz, 87, of the Sisters of St. Joseph.

A new building for the Nursing School at the Methodist Hospital in Nagadi, India, is now in course of erection from funds which have been furnished by Methodist churches in the United States through its "Week of Dedication" offering. From this same fund the new surgical block of the Hospital has been erected and equipped. The total Methodist investment is upward of $75,000 from this special offering. When this School and Home for nurses is ready for cornerstone laying, that ceremony will be performed by Princess Amrit Kaur, the health minister of the Government of India. The Princess is a Christian member of a family that two generations ago gave up claim to the throne of a native state in order to embrace Christianity.

The Rev. Edith Flora Preusse, of Rockville, Conn., an ordained minister and educator of the Congregational Christian Churches, is en route to India to resume her post as a teacher in the Ahmednagar Girls School. The School was founded in 1838 and has an enrollment of 600 girls. Miss Preusse is a graduate of Mount Holyoke College and of Hartford Theological Seminary, and was formerly a pastor in Montana.

Bridge And Handkerchief Shower Honor Miss Nobles

Mrs. W. T. Lipscomb was hostess at a desert bridge on Friday night when she entertained as a courtesy to Miss Betsy Nobles, bride-elect of this month.

The lovely home on West Fourth Street was decorated with massive arrangements of dahlias and other fall flowers, which made a beautiful setting for the four tables placed for bridge.

Miss Nobles was given a dainty corsage of tiny white chrysanthemums when she arrived, and she and the hostess welcomed the guests at the door and invited them to find their places at the tables, which were set for the desert course served before card playing commenced.

The tables were centered with low silver candle holders with white tapers. They were tied with a fluffy ruffle of green tulle interspersed with pom poms. Place cards were tiny celophane baskets decorated with lilies of the valley and holding bridal mints. The honoree's basket was decorated with orange blossoms. Mrs. Lipscomb served pale green ice cream in meringue shells, accompanied by decorated bridal cakes, salted nuts and demi tasse.

After several progressions of bridge, a prize for high score was awarded to Mrs. W. M. Seales Jr. while Mrs. James Smith was the holder of the low score, for which she received the consolation gift.

Mrs. Lipscomb gave Miss Nobles a silver ice bowl with matching tongs as a wedding gift.

Before the guests departed, Miss Nobles was showered with lovely handkerchiefs, gifts from the guests, which were presented to her in the form of a bridal bouquet. The handkerchief bouquet was centered with

China Boasts Of National Reforms

TOKYO. (AP)—China on its second anniversary lauded out at the United States and other non-communist nations and boasted it had achieved great reforms at home.

The official Peiping Radio broadcast and plaudits that showered down on home soil.

It said Red China was goaded into the Korean War by the decision last Oct. 7 of the United Nations General Assembly to occupy all of Korea. It pictured Red China now as thirsting for peace but ready for more war.

"Since August, 1950 the American air force, attacking Korea, has been constantly invading the skies of northeast China," the broadcast said.

"Furthermore, through U. S. government manipulation and coercion, the United Nations General Assembly on Oct. 7 passed a blood-thirsty proposal to occupy all Korea. This tried the patience of the Chinese people too far. They therefore organized volunteers to re-Korea, protect their homes and defend their motherland."

The Peiping Radio said that between Oct. 26 and Sept. 10, 1951 the Red forces "wiped out over 15,000 American-Rhee troops, including more than 140,000 American, British, French, Turkish and other troops."

Legion Auxiliary Officers Installed At First Meeting

The American Legion Auxiliary held its opening meeting of the new year recently at the home of the president, Mrs. James R. Worsley, with Mrs. Ed W. Barnhill, Mrs. W. C. Bagley and Mrs. K. R. Rogers assisting as hostesses.

Twenty-five members were present. The meeting was opened with the salute to the flag, followed by a prayer by the chaplain, Mrs. Wiley Brown. The members observed a minute of silent meditation in memory of those who lost their lives in the past two world wars.

The preamble to the Constitution was read in union, followed by reports from the secretary, Mrs. K. T. Futrelle, and from the treasurer, Mrs. Woodrow Worthington.

The membership chairman, Mrs. W. J. Bundy, gave her report of dues collected. She announced that the Auxiliary had fulfilled its membership minimum quota of 106 members, but that there were still many other eligible women in the community who could and should offer their support and ideas to the Auxiliary. Any close relative of an active member of either of the two world wars is eligible for membership.

Mrs. Worsley announced that the gift shop for service men was to be opened October 30th at the various hospitals and other veteran centers and that each member of each club was requested to send a gift of from $1.00 to $3.00 in value in a gift box, suitable for brother, sister, aunt, mother or father. Local gifts are to be carried to the residence of Mrs. W. G. Harris at 708 West Third Street, by October 15 to be packed in bulk and sent to the various rehabilitation centers.

The new officers for the year were installed by Mrs. W. R. Jones, past president and current historian. They are as follows: president, Mrs.

James R. Worsley; first vice president, Mrs. J. B. Spilman; second vice president, Mrs. Knott Proctor; secretary and reporter, Mrs. W. C. Hollowell; treasurer and corresponding secretary, Mrs. Woodrow Worthington; chaplain, Mrs. Wiley Brown; historian, Mrs. W. R. Jones; sergeant at arms, Mrs. Martha Forrest; and membership chairman, Mrs. W. J. Bundy.

The Auxiliary heard reports from Miss Missie Sue Taylor and Miss Thelma Jane Hardee, the two girls who the Auxiliary sponsored and sent to Girls' State, held annually each year. This assembly of girls, who represent many towns throughout the state, spent a week together putting into practice parliamentary law and procedure. The two local representatives gave interesting reports of their activities while there.

At the conclusion of the business meeting, the hostesses served a refreshment course of ice cream, cake and hot coffee.

Adm. Fechteler Asserts Navy Power Unbeatable

WASHINGTON (UP)—Adm. William M. Fechteler, chief of naval operations, said today that with control of the seas the United States could invade and occupy certain strategic areas in Russia.

With such command of the seas, he said, there is "no possibility whatsoever" that Russia could strike back and invade this country.

His views were given in a copy-righted interview with U.S. News and World Report, a weekly news magazine. Fechteler described a navy, based on the "mobile" striking power of carriers, as "the means whereby we keep away from our home, and project our military will on the enemy across the sea."

"Control of the sea is essential to the United States," he said. He added that he questioned the ability of any enemy "seriously to jeopardize" U.S. existence by inter-continental bombing.

Russia's "greatest threat" to American command of the sea, he said, is the submarine.

"I don't think it is quite generally appreciated that we pretty nearly lost both World War I and II through this submarine busi-

Prepare List Of Bases U.S. Will Want In Japan

WASHINGTON (AP)—State and Defense Department officials shortly—perhaps this week—will begin working out the list of land, sea and air bases which the United States will want to retain in Japan.

Officials said the job is complicated by the fact that so long as the Korean War continues the United States will require more facilities than it will need if and when peace is restored to that area of the Far East.

The Japanese islands constitute a key position in this country's western Pacific island defense system against Asian communist forces.

Immediately after the Japanese peace treaty was signed at San Francisco Sept. 8, the U. S. signed with Japan a treaty authorizing American forces to remain in the Japanese islands following the occupation period. The occupation ends when the treaty takes effect, probably early next year.

Before that time, however, State Department officials feel that an agreement spelling out in detail base arrangements and the relationship between the American military and the Japanese government must be completed and agreed to by both sides.

Speculation is that at a minimum all three American armed services will want to retain indefinitely the main bases which they are using during the occupation.

The Navy has a base each at Yokosuka and Sasebo and a smaller base at Kure. The Air Force has a number of bomber and fighter fields scattered through the islands but its main installations are Hemada and Tachikawa in the Tokyo area. The Army has about half a dozen centers with its main base at Kobe.

Strange Subs In Alaskan Waters

By PETER J. HAYES
United Press Staff Correspondent
ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UP)—The U. S. Army, Navy and Air Force are investigating the sighting of submarines "definitely not American" off the coast of the Kenai peninsula, less than 100 miles from Anchorage, a high military source said today.

The military official, who would not permit use of his name, revealed that two U. S. fish and wildlife agents sighted the submarines, one on Aug. 26, and another on Sept. 12.

Investigating officers "definitely" ruled out the possibility that the reported subs were U. S. vessels.

Donald Cross, field and wild service field agent, was revealed to have told a joint Army-Navy-Air Force investigating board last week that he saw a submarine of the German snorkel-type surface Aug. 28 off Dick Arm, on the tip of the Kenai peninsula, southwest of Anchorage.

Cross told the board he got into his small boat and paddled away from the area. He said he was close enough to the sub to hear the sound of its Diesel engines and the peculiar suction sound of its snorkel apparatus.

Cross said he could not comment on the report because military intelligence officers had contacted him and ordered him not to discuss it with anyone.

The second sub report came from Tom Costello, fisheries biologist, who said he saw what looked like a submarine while flying from Elgin Island in Cook Inlet to Anchorage Sept. 12.

"We were flying at about 1,500 feet and were about 20 miles away from Kalgin Island when I saw it," Costello said. "It was a long cigar-shaped object and my first impression was that it was a sub. It was standing still."

"I said to the rest of the fellows in the plane, 'What is that down there, a sub?' They looked down and said I was wrong, that it was a sandbar. But I know it wasn't the sandbar because I saw that first, then I saw the object."

Costello said when he looked again in about 30 seconds, the object was gone.

"I didn't think any more about it until the next day when Don Cross came into the office and told me he saw a sub in Dick Arm. That's when I began to think that maybe I did see a sub after all."

Costello said he didn't mention it to anyone else until he was contacted by intelligence officers.

Five Winners In Misspelled Word Contest Of Fair

Winners in the misspelled word contest were announced today by James R. Worsley, secretary of the Pitt County Agricultural Fair.

A misspelled word appeared in the 1951 Premium List issued by the Fair Committee under the department lists. The word contained eleven letters and commenced with the letter "m."

The five winners were: Mrs. H. R. Allen, Route 2, Box 154, Greenville; Mamie Williams, Route 3, Greenville; Mrs. J. Elbert Mills, Route 3, Box 134, Greenville; Beth Baker, 4-H Club of Fountain, Farmville; and Charles E. McGowan, Route 2, Box 320, Greenville.

Each of the winners will receive a week or season ticket to the Pitt County Fair and a ticket good for all shows or rides on the Lawrence Greater Shows.

The winners were selected by J. W. H. Roberts.

Historic Ruling Await High Court's New Term

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Supreme Court today begins a new term which may produce historic decisions affecting communists, racial relations, and other important national problems.

Returning to the bench after summer vacation that began in June, the tribunal's nine justices already have before them requests for final rulings on these issues:

• If alien communists be locked up without bail during deportation proceedings, if the Attorney General feels they are too dangerous to be at liberty?

• May aliens be deported because they were once members of the Communist Party?

• May states bar communists from employment in public schools?

• Should the court reconsider the case of the 11 top U. S. Communist leaders whose convictions it upheld last June; their attorneys have filed pleas for reconsideration, although seven of the leaders are now in prison and four are fugitives. The convictions, in a New York federal court, were for conspiring to teach violent overthrow of the government.)

What can be done about the three-year-old case against Judith Coplon, the former government employe convicted of plotting to spy for Russia? (Conflicting opinions by two lower courts have set aside convictions found against her in two separate trials.)

The major racial case filed with the high court raise the question whether segregation of Negro and white children in public schools should be declared a violation of the federal constitution.

Other issues confronting the court include:

• A challenge to the practice of daily bible readings in public schools, on the ground of violation of the constitution.

• The question whether commercial radio broadcasts to "captive audiences" in streetcars and buses violate the constitutional rights of listeners who object to the practice.

Vote-Buying Is Spurred By Club

TYNER (UP)—Vote buying will be encouraged here Nov. 10 when Tyner's 277 residents elect a mayor. The Woman's Home Demonstration club is sponsoring the election and will sell ballots for 25 cents each. Club officers say the object is to get citizens to vote early and often and they predict the total vote may reach 4,000.

Any local resident can file notice of candidacy by midnight Nov. 6. Proceeds from the election will be put in the community center fund to build a community house.

S.S.S. Tonic gets at real cause of ailments due to blood and digestion DEFICIENCIES

YOUR TIRED, all-in feeling, your nagging, run-down condition, your sickly stomach and lack of appetite may all be coming from the same things—deficiencies. The human body is such a complicated thing that deficiencies in tiny blood cells can throw it out of order. So can deficiencies in stomach digestive juices. When this happens you are troubled with gassy and bloated stomach and general all-around weaknesses. You not only suffer from lack of appetite, but your stomach can't digest what you do eat. Your blood loses its strength—and so do you.

DOCTORS' TESTS PROVE

How S.S.S. Tonic Helps Folks Who Are Ailing

The S.S.S. Tonic Company wanted to prove just how good this medicine is. So doctors were asked in college, laboratory and hospital to try the tonic on people who needed help with their blood, stomach digestion or appetite. After trying out S.S.S. Tonic, the doctors agreed that S.S.S. was a valuable and useful medicine. This is what they said: "Laboratory studies show that for increasing red blood cells and for making the cells rich in coloring matter, S.S.S. Tonic was definitely greater than liver and iron. . . . After the continuous administration of S.S.S. Tonic, improvement was manifested in many ways: Improved appetite, stimulation of stomach secretions, improved digestion, restoration of the blood to a normal state, a notable increase in strength, vitality, energy, and a sense of well-being. Further tests showed stomach gastric discomfort relieved, and food better digested—thereby giving steady relief from acid indigestion."

Strength for the Day

By HANS L. DOUGLAS WHISLERBROW One of the most fascinating figures of renaissance history was Leonardo da Vinci—painter, sculptor, scientist, scholar, inventor. His painting "The Last Supper" is undoubtedly one of the most famous works of art in the world.

The man who lives usefully is an artist in living. This may never bring him recognition and fame, but it is bound to bring him the happiness which comes from helping other people to be happy.

The Line Of News Must Be Kept Open

The recent OPS staff memo forbidding the release of any information which, in its own words, "might cause embarrassment" to the office, is an example of the type of government censorship the people of the United States must guard against.

The OPS action just goes to show, in spite of reassurances by the Chief Executive, there are people in the higher echelons of the federal government who would like to keep the people from knowing what the agencies are doing.

These are not just abstract suppositions. There are conclusions drawn from the course of history. In practically every instance where a dictator has risen to power, he has first removed the freedom of the press, and with the people ignorant of internal government activities, he has run the government according to his own desires.

If the American people do not keep their vigil to maintain an open, direct line of information into the government, the United States could lose from within the freedom and liberties it has fought so vigorously to defend from outside forces.

The United Nations Faces A New Test

A new test of stability and strength of the United Nations as an arbitrating organization looms as the British seek to have the British-Iranian oil dispute settled before the Security Council.

Chances for settling the old and highly inflammable dispute over the world's richest oil fields are not encouraging at the present time. The United Nations has a couple of strikes against it before a British resolution concerning the oil crisis is put before it. Premier Mohammed Mossadegh already has asserted the matter should not be placed before the UN because the UN has no jurisdiction in a matter which is a problem between Iran and a company which is operating within Iran.

The Iranian government has denied jurisdiction by the United Nations just as it refused to abide by the recommendation issued by the International Court of Justice at The Hague last July.

Russia is anxious to do everything possible to broaden rather than heal the break between Britain and Iran, and it is not unreasonable to expect a Russian veto to any British proposal before the Security Council to which Iran objects.

Even without the Russians in the Security Council, the Iranian matter may prove the undoing of many months of friendship building by the United States and Great Britain among the smaller nations of the world.

The United States, as an arbiter and advisor in the case, must be doubly careful not to drive the Iranian oil fields into the hands of the Communists, but at the same time keep the fields from falling into the hands of the Communists by lack of necessary steps on the part of the Western Allies.

National Whirligig

WASHINGTON—Senator William Benton of Connecticut has been dubbed by members on his side of the aisle as "the Wayne More of the Democratic Party" because of the way he has developed a talent for upsetting the leaders' legislative and political strategy.

The Democratic high command has no fondness for Secretary Acheson's Capitol Hill "hairshirt," although several minority members secretly approve of his attacks on alleged radicals in the State Department and diplomatic service, especially during the "China war."

It is a political axiom that the people of a state, even though they may not agree with the victor, regard any move to oust an elected member of Congress as an affront to state sovereignty.

It is estimated that the Benton effort will mean thousands of Democratic and independent ballots for the man President Truman would like to retire to private life.

McCarthy's 1952 defeat is a White House "must." ATTACK—Even before the Benton motion for expulsion, Wisconsin Democrats had reported to National Chairman Boyle that it would be almost impossible to defeat the Wisconsin man next year.

It is probable that the Senator's tactics have antagonized as many Wisconsin voters as they have people elsewhere. But it is also possible that, though they deplore his methods, they credit him with having forced the White House and State Department to adopt a stiffer attitude toward Moscow.

POPULAR—"Jumping Joe" for several sources of strength that he relies on for reelection, even in event of a White House-directed assault on him. He has told friends that "my best booster is Benton," for he expects to profit from the expulsion move.

But the Senator is also popular with the veterans, as his various appearances before their conventions seem to demonstrate. He has been careful not to run afoul of labor. He has played along with the Republican organization, which has won repeated victories since it drove the La Follette family from power.

Moreover, Wisconsin is General Douglas MacArthur's home state, although only nominally. The military hero's criticism of State Department policy in China is made of the same pattern as Senator McCarthy's, in that both demand a more aggressive attack on Russia. It is understood that General MacArthur would probably campaign for the Senator, especially since the Democratic speakers have begun to lambast what they call "McCarthyism" and "McArthurism."

SPECULATION—Although several Senate and House committees are investigating charges of alleged graft in connection with the rearmament program, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Internal Revenue, so far they have failed to look into reports of speculation in land surrounding the sites of new government plants throughout the country.

An interesting deal which has failed to attract their attention, although it has aroused considerable eye-lifting in the Middle West, involves recent purchases of property near Grandview, Mo., the site of the old Truman family home, where the Air Force plans to build a $19,000,000 military airport. The Truman estate of 394 acres stands just outside the city limits of Grandview.

VALUES—The legal agent for the buyer and seller in this transaction was Ethos A. Axtell. He is an old political friend of the President and the Pendergasts. They picked him to oppose former Representative Slaughter in the ballot-stuffing 1948 Democratic primary because of the latter's opposition to the White House legislative program. Although he defeated Mr. Slaughter, the presidential favorite was beaten in the election.

Keep Tightly Corked

Around Capitol Square

Raleigh, N. C. By LYNN VISSET

C. & D.—Chances are that the fall meeting of the state board of conservation and development at Winston-Salem scheduled for October 15, 16 and 17 will be a very interesting occasion. Immediate interest centers in the forestry division, and the notice of discharge delivered to State Forester W. K. Beichler by Director George Ross, with waiting for report of the forestry committee, which had been called into session by Ross to consider the situation.

STATUTES—There are apparent omissions and conflicts in the statutes. Under the law, the governor appoints the board of conservation and development, and some sections of the general statutes purport to put control of the department in this board. The governor also appoints the director, without requirement of nomination or approval by the board, and some sections of the general statutes imply that the director is the big boss.

SMOOTH—Most of the time things ran smoothly, mainly because nobody bothered much to change them. The first director was Major Wade Phillips, whose big job was to get the new department going. He was followed by Col. John Harrelson, whose objective seemed to be to keep things moving as they had started.

TURMOIL—These conflicting provisions have kept the department in turmoil ever since beginning of the Scott administration. First issue to arise had to do with handling of the state advertising. That was followed by replacement of long time Director Bruce Etheridge by George Ross and appointment of new board members unfamiliar with accepted purposes and traditional policies of the department.

UNORGANIZED—Fact of the business is there has never been a completely organized department of conservation and development. It has been, and continues to be, an aggregation of more or less independent divisions, each doing a creditable job within its own field, but without co-ordination or integration into a workable department of state government.

board. Within a few weeks some of his own appointees resigned as well as some holdovers, because of what they believed too much insistence on part of the governor that they rubber stamp his ideas. Result is that now the department has a director and twelve of its fifteen members appointed by Governor Scott. The governor also exercised the authority claimed under the statute putting the advertising division under the director of the department to name the head if that division without requiring approval either of the board or the director. Amazing fact is that despite these cross purpose activities, overlapping and conflicting authority, and display of personal power, the advertising division has done a remarkably good job and the rest of the department has functioned better than anybody had right to expect under the circumstances.

CONSEQUENCES—Meanwhile, unavoidable consequence of this bickering and squabbling over authority has been to retard and handicap the job the department of conservation and development is supposed to do for the state. No matter who wins, it is already certain that the taxpayers have lost. Georgia and South Carolina have moved ahead with forestry programs much more rapidly than this state.

The Voice Of The People

Dear Sir: Recently the Reflector carried an article in which the Pitt County physicians and dentists at their meeting on September 13, unanimously endorsed a proposal to fluoridate the local water supply here. The article further stated that National and State dental societies, as well as the North Carolina State Board of Health, has previously endorsed and recommended fluoridation of public water supplies.

Fluoride is added to the water supply for the purpose of reducing dental caries. The adding of this chemical was first brought about by the extremely low percentage of dental caries in sections of Texas, principally the section of Deaf Smith County. This land has a much higher vitamin and mineral content than other sections of our country; the people and live stock are likewise much healthier than those of other sections of our country.

The conclusion drawn from this low incidence of tooth decay in this section and the association of the large amount of fluoride content of the soil brought about the present use of sodium fluoride as a decay inhibitor.

The Standard-Time newspaper, San Angelo, Texas, May 7, 1951 released new developments from the work of a University of Texas scientific researcher in regard to the practice of water fluoridation, has indefinitely delayed the installing of such equipment in many Texas cities.

Quoting the Standard-Time, "This scientist, several months ago, completed the initial phases of a series of experiments in which he fed sodium fluoride to mice. His initial conclusions are that sodium fluoride definitely accelerates the growth of mammary or breast cancer in female mice. This scientist, a staff member of the University Biochemical Institute, emphasized that the tooth decay inhibitor does not cause cancer, that it seems only to feed malignant growths of the mammary glands of the female, that his findings may be inconclusive and, finally, that his experiments will continue for at least two more years under condition of rigid control before he will make a definite and final announcement. In his experiments, the scientist fed the mice sodium fluoride in solution of from one to 10 parts of the chemical per thousand parts of water. These are the proportions which cities use when mixing the chemical with their water supplies. The mice refused to drink water loaded with more than 10 parts per thousand."

Dr. Royal Lee, DDS, Head of the Lee Foundation for Nutritional Research, referring to last paragraph, said, "Parts per thousand in above no doubt mean parts per million. Also, the Deaf Smith County area definitely does NOT owe its immunity to tooth decay to a preliminary conclusion now disproved, as other areas free of tooth decay are not found to have fluoride in soil or water."

It is the light of these latest findings on water fluoridation, I would be opposed to the adding of this chemical to our water supply here in Greenville. Dr. George P. Harvey, D.C.

Business Today

Now that work on the new tax bill is about completed, Congressional and Administration leaders are thinking more of the next budget and the next tax bill. The current tax bill is to provide revenues for the government from July 1, this year, to June 30, 1952. The next one, usually referred to as the 1953 tax bill, will be for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1953.

Government spending during the current year has been estimated at $68,400,000,000. It is hard to tell just how much the new bill will raise, first, because changes are still being made and, second, because the total will depend on total earnings and profits, which cannot be precisely forecast. Dr. Harley L. Lutz, of public finance, estimates that taxes will fall short of spending between $5,600,000,000 and $10,200,000,000. A number of other estimates fall within those figures.

If tax collections continue at the same rate and if they will be from 3 to 10 billion short in fiscal 1952, they will be from 22 to 29 billion short in fiscal 1953. The solution must be found in raising taxes again or borrowing, or a combination of both. The Senate Finance Committee reported that it has "serious doubts as to the feasibility of any substantial additional amounts from income tax sources. Senator Walter F. George (D. Ga.), chairman of the committee, said on the floor that "we have reached the point of diminishing returns as far as income taxes are concerned." Dr. Lutz said the present bill "milk the income tax cow dry." About the only other large sources for additional revenue are sales and excise taxes. Business in Britain survives, after a fashion, under purchase taxes up to 50 per cent. Perhaps American business could. Borrowing would mean more inflation; another fall in the purchasing power of the dollar, more rounds of price increases and wage rises, and further impoverishment of those who live on fixed incomes.

WONDER DRUG PRICE: WAR SEEN Possibilities of more intense competition between the big manufacturers of antibiotics is seen in the recent reduction of 15 to 40 per cent in the price of terramycin by Chas. Pfizer & Co. This follows the cut in price of vitamin B-12 from $450 to $350 a gram.

Almost all of the giant pharmaceutical companies produce one or more of the new wonder drugs. While each of them has specific uses, some can be used as alternates for others and thus the reduction in the price of one affects the demand for the others. There have been many price cuts resulting from improved and cheaper production methods, but the pharmaceutical industry regards the recent cuts as signs of a price war.

SAVY WOMEN'S WHIMS CUT CLOTHIERS' PROFITS It is the women, not men who are cutting into profits of retail men's clothiers, according to Joseph Salvatore, former president of the International Association of Clothing Designers and designer for Eagle Clothes.

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK (AP)—This is the tale of a marital phonograph duel by night. Trellis Mae Peeble had been trying for years to get a new fur coat. But Wilbur, her husband, kept putting her off. He always insisted they couldn't afford it.

One day, after a fresh rebuff of this kind, Trellis Mae read a newspaper article that gave her a new and exciting idea of a way to win Wilbur over. The article told how people could memorize information subconsciously in their sleep if the message to be learned was dimmed into their slumbering ears over and over again.

"I think this is going to get me my fur coat," mused Trellis Mae. "That is, if Wilbur has a subconscious mind." And she hurried right down town and had a portable phonograph brought into the bedroom. Unfortunately for her, Wilbur wasn't asleep at all. Through wary, half-closed eyes he watched as she put on the record. And with wideawake ears he listened as her message came out of the machine:

"Now hear this, Wilbur Peeble; don't be a cheapskate all your life. All your friends' wives have fur coats. Do you want your own wife to look like a bum? Tell her tomorrow to buy a fur coat. After all, you can't take money into heaven. Spend a little, Wilbur. Tell your wife to get that fur coat now."

Wilbur laughed to himself as Trellis Mae hopefully cranked the phonograph and played the record over and over. She had to quit after four hours because of a charleyhorse.

At breakfast the next morning Wilbur solemnly told her: "Honey, maybe I've been acting like a cheap skate about that fur coat. I don't want you looking like a bum. You go buy that coat today."

"Y-You m-m-mean it?" stammered his sleepy wife, rubbing her sore arm. "Why, sure, dear," he said. "All your friends have fur coats."

When he returned from work that night, Trellis Mae showed him a $2,000 fur coat she had taken out from the store on approval. Wilbur said it looked wonderful, and Trellis Mae went to bed, worn out but happy.

Half an hour later Wilbur launched his wily counterattack. He crept in with the portable phonograph. For six straight hours he played the following record into his wife's sleeping ear:

"Now hear this, Trellis Mae; a good wife saves her husband's money. You look like a polar bear in that fur coat. You don't want a fur coat. Take it back to the store. A good wife saves her husband's money."

The following morning Trellis Mae said fretfully: "I don't know what's the matter with me. I don't like that fur coat, and I'm going to take it right back. I think we ought to save the money."

"I don't understand—" said Wilbur. "Well, I haven't got it all figured out yet myself," said Trellis Mae. "But I'll tell you the mistake you made, Wilbur. You forgot to take your record off the phonograph this morning."

Latin America's Defences Are Stronger; Less Cost For U.S.

By NORMAN CARIGNAN

WASHINGTON (AP)— We're spending billions of dollars to help defend Europe and Asia from communist attack. What are we doing to defend ourselves in our own backyard—in Latin America?

The diplomats and military men who have charge of this job say we are in pretty good shape, better than most people realize, but there is still a lot to be done. Traditionally defense of the United States has been based on the western hemisphere—the United States, Canada and Latin America. Since World War II, this base has been expanded far into Europe and Asia. But the center still remains in this hemisphere. For this reason the State Department and the Pentagon laid plans early in the game to make this hemisphere secure from outside attack, communist coups, and little wars among the Latin American countries themselves that could upset things.

"Of course," one top State Department official said, "there isn't the danger of a direct communist attack in Latin America as there is in Europe and Asia. The main job here is to keep the hemisphere secure and maintain the flow of raw materials from Latin America that American defense industries vitally need."

Among these strategic materials are oil, iron, copper, lead, manganese, bauxite, quartz crystals, sugar, tin, wool, hides and skins, and others.

The problem in Latin America is two-fold: military, and political-economic. They work hand-in-hand.

In 1947, the U. S. and the Latin American countries signed a mutual defense treaty whose main feature is this: If one of them is attacked by a country outside the hemisphere the rest will come to the immediate aid of the one under attack.

The area covered by this provision runs from the north to the south pole and takes in Alaska, Greenland and Pearl Harbor.

In case war should break out in Europe, Asia or any other part of the world the American nations agreed to consult on what measures they should take to safeguard the security of the hemisphere.

This pact served as a pattern for the North Atlantic Treaty, of which Canada is a member.

Additionally at a foreign ministers conference here last April, the Latin American countries agreed to relieve the U. S. of the burden of defending many strategic seaports and bases in the hemisphere. These defense tasks tie down around 100,000 American soldiers, sailors and airmen in the last war.

The Inter-American Defense board, in which all 21 countries are represented, is now working on an up-to-date hemisphere defense plan spelling out what defense job each country would carry out.

These tasks involve protection against communist sabotage of strategic mines and transportation lines, manning air bases, maintaining air and sea patrols, coast guard duties and the like. In return the U. S. is helping the Latin Americans financially to carry out these tasks.

The U. S. also helped Argentina, Brazil and Chile to strengthen their navies by knocking down the price on six surplus cruisers. The three

82 Voters' 82 Candidates For Ohio Village Election

BENTLEYVILLE, O. —(UP)— This fall's election poses a problem here. There are only 82 registered voters and all 82 are considered eligible for office that will be filled through marking blank ballots.

The law of the state of Ohio reads that each registered voter is eligible to hold office. Therefore, since there aren't any names appearing on the ballot, and a mayor must be elected, each voter is eligible for the office. Names will be written in.

When the voters report to the abandoned district schoolhouse on November 6, they'll be considering the 82 candidates for nine positions—mayor, clerk, treasurer and six councilmen—in the village of four square miles, part of which is taken up with a metropolitan park.

Mayor Won't Campaign

On the map there are eight streets, but actually there are only four, and all 40 families live on these streets.

"I'm too busy taking care of my private business to campaign," three-time Mayor Richard Hladik said.

"This also happened back in 1849 and 1850 when it was made a village," Hladik added, "but then it was because election officials threw out the petitions because each one was signed by the same people."

"I came to Bentleyville for peace—not politics, I'd rather work in my garden," said Mrs. Fayette Eggleston, the village treasurer. Mrs. Julia Clerk, the clerk added, "I wouldn't run for office again. It isn't worth the trouble."

No Political Machines

"Gosh," Stephen Hriczo said, "hadn't given the election idea much thought. It rolls around sorta quick."

"Hadn't gotten around to discussing elections," R. D. Beattie said, "but come to think of it, a write-in election is more democratic. No power machines."

The daily greeting when Bentleyville people meet each other in neighboring Chagrin Falls where they buy groceries is, "Say, how's the next mayor of Bentleyville?"

And the comeback usually is, "Why, I'm not going to be mayor, you are!"

The members of the former council have given the same excuse that Hladik gave concerning too much business pressure—but they are still running for office whether they like it or not. Meanwhile, it's reported that relations among Bentleyville's citizenry is the most cordial it has ever been, for no one knows who's going to be mayor.

Editors Protest 'Security Code'

SAN FRANCISCO —(AP)— The Associated Press Managing Editors Association is carrying to against the new security code for civilian agencies.

APME, representing newspapers with daily circulation of 45,000,000, called the President's order "a dangerous instrument of news suppression."

President Truman last Tuesday ordered federal civilian agencies to withhold information on security grounds.

The editors at the close of their four-day convention here Saturday unanimously denounced the executive order as "censorship at the source." APME instructed its new president, Herbert F. Corn of the Washington Star, to carry its views to Mr. Truman.

APME also called on the nation's editors to resist state and local efforts at news suppression.

In a third resolution, the editors urged the State Department to press efforts to obtain the release of AP correspondent William N. Oatis. He was convicted in July of spying on Red Czechoslovakia and is in jail in Prague.

The Sport Reflector

By JIMMY ELLIS

Last week, I got a letter from one of the readers of this column. It wasn't exactly the kind of letter you put in scrap books and the writer forgot (?) to sign his name.

The epistle attacked my method of publishing the game which was played Friday night between Greenville and Kinston. The writer was apparently uninterested in hearing about the Kinston ball club and wondered (in no uncertain terms, mind you) as to just why the space was not devoted to Greenville.

The column which the other writer was attacking was the one in which I had quite a bit to say about the abilities of Bryant Aldridge. Kinston's fullback. The letter writer made it very plain as to what I could do with Aldridge and where we could both go.

After Friday's game, I'm even more convinced that the person who wrote the letter was not thinking when he said those things about Bryant and even he should be convinced this morning of the boy's abilities. Bill Kittrell and Dave Bannerman are thoroughly convinced and I don't think I'd be far from wrong if I said that Bill Dole would like very much to have him at East Carolina next fall and for the next three falls after that.

All that Bryant did Friday night, my little unknown friend, was put on a complete one-man show. He ran for 166 yards in ten carries and his passing was good enough to score another one of the Kinston touchdowns. He played a whole of a game on defense and, as Bill Kittrell put it so well after the game, "he was the difference in the two ball clubs out there tonight. He was slightly terrific."

Lou Bello, one of the most widely known and respected athletic officials in North Carolina, and much of the South, had this to say about Aldridge: "He's as good as anything I have ever seen in high school football. I would say that he was more of a ball player than Wilmington's Charlie Niven, now at Duke; Durham's Worth Lutz, also at Duke; and Sonny Ridehour, at Winkleson-Salem (Reynolds) triple-threat who is playing for the University of North Carolina.

"Aldridge handles himself well on the playing field. He's smart and is awake on every play of the ball game. No body pulls a thing on him, either offensively or defensively, and he's easily the boss in any game he plays. He'll do alright for anybody's club."

Going from Aldridge to the Greenville angle of the ball game, Coach Kittrell of the Phantoms could only say that Aldridge was the difference in the two clubs.

I don't think that ordinarily this Kinston club would be that much better than my boys—sure, tonight (this was said Friday night) they were two-three, maybe four touchdowns better—but I think that ordinarily we could handle them. That (Bryant) Aldridge is one good ball player and I think if we could have gotten rid of him for even a little while, we would have been more on an equal basis. Well, we'll just have to forget this one and work for Camp Lejeune."

For the game with the Red Devils, Kittrell went back to his original line-up which had Sonny Scott at quarterback and Sid Briley at fullback. From fullback, Briley carried eight times and gained 39 yards. He completed one of three passes for 17 yards and was responsible for three of the Phantoms' first downs.

Scott, back at quarterback, completed two of eight attempted passes for 20 yards. He had three of his aerials intercepted—something that hurt, along with fumbles. More than anything else, other than Aldridge's performance, perhaps the most outstanding thing in the game was the inability of the Greenville club to hold the ball. They fumbled six times and lost the ball four of these times—each time when it really hurt to lose the ball.

The Phantoms can play a good ball game—they proved that against Morehead City—but they definitely didn't do it Friday night against Kinston. But Kittrell isn't spending any time crying about it. He's forgetting it and looking to Camp Lejeune Friday night.

East Carolina Passing Brings 7-6 Win

Grissom Kicks Point To Win Ball Game

Pirates' Sandy Siler Completes 16 Of 30 Attempted Passes To Lead Way To Victory Over Norfolk Naval Air Station

NORFOLK, Virginia — An East Carolina College passing attack which worked well throughout the ball game came through in the final moments of the fourth quarter to give the Pirates a 7-6 win over the Norfolk Naval Air Station. The game was played Saturday afternoon on Navy's McClure Field.

The Pirates' pay-off pass came from Sandy Siler to halfback Jack Britt from seven yards out. The Pirates marched 72 yards for the touchdown. Hawk Grissom, reserve quarterback from Wilmington, split the uprights with his try for the point to give the collegians their second win in three games.

East Carolina had gained possession of the ball on their own 28 yard line after stopping one of the Navy drives to that point. After getting the ball, Siler took charge through his efforts and the work of fullback John Daughtry that the ball was moved to the point from where Siler threw his game winning aerial.

The Pirates scored their touchdown late in the first period, also on a pass play. End Mart Schlicher took the scoring toss from halfback Ronald McKasson. McKasson had thrown from 12 yards out.

The missed extra point by the sailors loomed large throughout the game and was the basis for their second defeat in as many weeks from North State Conference.

Score by quarters:
East Carolina 0 0 0 7-6
Naval Air Station 6 0 0 6-7
Scoring touchdowns: East Carolina — Britt; Naval Air Station — Schlicher; Point after touchdown: East Carolina — Grissom (placement).

Dodgers Win By Extra Innings

NEW YORK (UP)—This was the third straight year in which the Dodgers and Phillies played each other in an extra-inning game on the last day of the season with the National League pennant in the balance.

On Oct. 2, 1949, the Dodgers won the pennant by beating the Phillies 9 to 7 in 10 innings.

On Oct. 1, 1950, the Phillies won the pennant by beating the Dodgers 4 to 1 when Dick Sisler slammed a three-run home run in the 10th inning.

Yesterday, the Dodgers gained a tie with the Giants for the pennant by beating the Phils 13 to 8 when Jackie Robinson hit a homer in the 14th inning.

Musial And Fain

NEW YORK (UP)—Ferris Fain of the Philadelphia Athletics is the American League's batting champion with a .344 average and Stan Musial of the Cardinals is the National League champ with .355.

It is Fain's first title and Musial's fifth.

Ralph Kiner of the Pirates once again is the majors' home run king with 42, and Gil Hodges of the Dodgers follows with 39.

Third Playoff To Start Today

NEW YORK (UP)—The pennant playoff which starts today between the Dodgers and the Giants is the third in major-league history.

In 1946, the Dodgers and Cardinals tied for the National League pennant and met in a best two-out-of-three playoff. The Cards won the first game 4 to 2 in St. Louis, and ended the series by taking the second 8 to 4 in Brooklyn.

In 1948, the Red Sox and Indians tied for the American League pennant. They met in a single-game playoff at Boston Oct. 4, and the Indians won 8 to 3.

Big Bonito Broke Line; Landed In Tangling Another

A once-in-a-lifetime fishing experience took place Sunday off Oregon Inlet for a party of five from Greenville.

"Something big" took Marvin Woods' hook and after a violent struggle crossed the trolling line of Mrs. Don C. Schlien, who thought she had a strike. Moments later, Woods' line broke, and Mrs. Schlien was confronted with a duplication of the earlier struggle.

Woods and the fishing boat's skipper helped land the big fish, an 18-pound bonito, and learned to their amazement that the fish was the one that had broken Woods' line and had become entangled in the second line which proved its downfall.

Others in the party were: Mrs. Marvin Woods, Roger Tyndall and D. C. Schlien.

North State Feuding Starts This Week

By The Associated Press
Family football feuding begins in earnest this weekend in the North State Conference.

Lenoir Rhyme, with a 3-0 record for the season, makes its conference debut against Appalachian at Boone, Catawba, meeting Western Carolina for the first time in several years, plays the Catamounts at Asheville.

Lenoir Rhyme bolstered its favorite rating by brushing aside Newberry last week 21-0. Appalachian suffered a 20-6 defeat at the hands of Elon's Christians and fell out of first place in the conference standings.

Elon's Fullback Fred Hwangard scored two touchdowns and started an offense as the Christians' shipped the Mountaineers to take over the top spot in the conference standings.

Catawba recorded twin wins over South Carolina rivals last week. The Tribe walloped Newberry Monday night, 27-0, and then downed Erskine Saturday night, 25-6.

A 7-6 win over Norfolk Navy enabled East Carolina to continue the North State victory parade, but Western Carolina dropped the only decision of the week to outsiders, losing 12-0 to Presbyterian.

Bums Top Phils As Gaints Beat Braves

By CARL LUNDQUIST
United Press Sports Writer
Allie Reynolds, no-hit hero of the champion Yankees will pitch the opening game of the World Series—but Manager Casey Stengel said today "those guys are making me work up double strategy so I gotta have two sets of plans after that."

"Those guys" are the Giants, battling Dodgers and Philadelphia Stengel said, "it is bad enough worrying about trying to beat one club — we've got to worry about two."

Stengel said if the Dodgers win, he will pitch lefty Ed Lopat in the second game and use Vic Raschi for the first game in Ebbets field. He doesn't want to trust the soft-stuff southpaw in the little Brooklyn park against the predominantly righthanded Dodger lineup.

Stengel, who has won three straight pennants since coming to the Yankees and is now shooting for three straight world championships, would rather meet the Dodgers because "I think the Giant pitching is a little tougher."

But the players, thinking of the fatter World Series checks they will get by playing in a bigger park, would prefer to meet the Giants in their 55,000 seat park than the Dodgers in their little 32,111 seat arena. It is likely that the losing cut in a Yankee-Giant-series would be larger than the winning cut in a Yankee-Dodger affair.

The suspense-filled National League race wound up in a tie when the Dodgers finally downed the Phillies 9 to 8 in 14-innings on Jackie Robinson's homer after the Giants topped the Braves 3 to 2 in Boston on Larry Jansen's five-hit pitching for his 22nd victory.

The Yankees beat the Red Sox 3 to 0 in their final, winding up five full games ahead of Cleveland in a race that was far tighter than the National League struggle a little more than a week ago. That made it five in a row over the rundown Red Sox, three of which were shutouts starting with Reynolds' no hitter on Friday.

The Indians, who folded up almost as badly as the Red Sox in the stretch, lost their last game to the Tigers 2 to 1 on Virgil Trucks' 13th victory.

Ned Garver became the 13th pitcher to win his 20th game, giving the Browns a 9 to 5 victory over the White Sox. That made the total of 20-game winners the largest since 1920 when there were 17. There were seven in the National and six in the American this year. In 1920, the AL had 10, the NL seven.

Garver became the first major league pitcher to win 20 games with a last-place club since Hollis Thurston did it with the White Sox in 1924.

Washington topped the Athletics 4 to 2 on Bob Porterfield's fourth straight, and the A's took the second game 4 to 3.

In other National League games, the Cubs defeated the Cardinals 7 to 6, then lost 3 to 9, as Gerry Staley pitched a four-hitter. The Pirates topped the Reds 8 to 4 on Ralph Kiner's 11th inning grand-slam homer.

Webster Leads In Southern Scoring

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS
This seems to be a year when the Southern Conference football players are passing the touchdown-making around more than ever before.

To date, the league's 17 elevens have managed to cross enemy goal line 98 times. The six-pointers have been tallied by 76 players. Only George Washington's Colonials have failed to score.

So far, the scoringest player of all is Alex Webster, a 210-pound junior tailback from Kearny, N.J. Webster, in three games, has made four touchdowns for 24 points.

Trailing Webster with 18 points each are Jim Shirley and Billy Hair, both of Clemson; Charlie Smith, of Duke, and Jay Grumbling, of Virginia Military.

Maryland opened its season Saturday by distributing its eight touchdowns in an easy 54-14 victory over Washington and Lee among seven aces, including guard Pete Ladayo. The overwhelming triumph over last year's Southern Conference champions confirmed beliefs that Maryland ought to win the 1951 title handily.

A couple of fellows named Smith — Charlie and Jim — made all three Duke touchdowns as the Blue Devils came from behind in the fourth period to squeeze by Pittsburgh, 19-14. Jim got two and Charlie one six-pointer.

North Carolina's Tar Heels bowed to the flashy passing of quarterback Zeke Bratkowski and his Georgia Bulldogs, 28-16. Georgia got three touchdowns in the wild fourth quarter which also saw the Tar Heels tally twice.

Queen City Murder Case

By Wm. G. Bogart

Chapter 1.

The woman was no more than thirty feet away from him, and he dared not move lest he attract her attention. She was reaching in her purse for something, apparently her apartment key, otherwise most surely she would have spotted him.

Johnny did not move.

At first, he thought the woman was going to Jeanette Evans' apartment. She was a short, thin person, and her movements were quick. She looked like the high-strung type who would scream to high heaven if she saw a man straddling a windowsill.

But she did not stop at Jeanette's door. It was one just opposite into which she fitted the key. An instant later she had closed the door behind her.

Johnny let out his breath, swung his other leg over the sill, managed to balance on the window ledge until he had carefully lowered the window behind him. Then he dropped easily to the ground.

"What kept you?" whispered Moe Martin.

"A dame."

"What—again?"

They headed toward the street, reached it unnoticed, turned left and swung toward Reading Road, the main highway slicing this section of the city. Just a few blocks away was a shopping center. They walked in that direction.

Johnny selected a drugstore that was fairly busy. There was a bank of telephone booths just inside the front door. Moe Martin waited outside the store while his friend went inside to make the call.

Johnny dialed police headquarters, gave them an exact though brief description of the crime and where they could find Jeanette Evans. In response to questions that were immediately fired at him—he knew it was a police device used while they traded the incoming call—he hung up the receiver and left the store.

"Let's get away from here but fast," he said to Moe.

They walked a block down the street crossed the thoroughfare, and almost immediately spotted an empty cab headed back toward downtown Cincinnati. Johnny had turned up his collar. It was snowing, and cold.

They had entered the taxicab, traveled no more than two or three blocks when a police car passed them going out Reading Road, its siren ripping through the softened traffic sounds created by the falling snow.

Moe said, "The police dispatcher lost no time putting that on the air."

The driver's voice reached them through the partially opened window between front and rear seats. "There'll be plenty of accidents a night like this."

"Yeah," agreed Johnny. To his partner he whispered, "Better keep quiet. He might connect up with the police car going out there right at the time he picked us up."

Moe settled down in the corner, looking forlorn, making one final comment, "Why you had to get mixed up in this!"

Johnny guessed Moe was right. Because he had been curious about a brunette, and an old desk, he had walked into a murder setup. Worse—he knew less now than he did before! And being an inquisitive person, that bothered him more than anything else.

It was almost nine-thirty by the time they neared the downtown office building. Johnny instructed the driver, "Hotel Gibson."

There, they could cut through the lobby and the arcade, came out on Fourth Street and return to the block to Vine Street and return to the Carew Tower building. Cab drivers usually remembered too much.

Snow trucks were out now, moving like clumsy tanks through the streets. As they hurried up Vine Street a streetcar-sweeper passed, sending snow cascading toward the curb.

There was an arcade that led through the office building, past department store shops, and then on to the Netherland-Plaza Hotel itself.

Johnny paused just inside the arcade, unbuttoning his coat and shaking the snow loose.

"There's something I want you to do," he told Moe Martin.

"I thought we were going to eat?"

"My God, you did eat. I thought Nancy said you were bringing some sandwiches over?"

"Sure, but they were only sandwiches."

Johnny said, "I'll have a chicken, dinner sent up to your room during the night." He removed the letters from his pocket and handed them to Moe. "Go up to the Inquirer. Tell them you want access to the old newspaper files. You don't have to tell them what you want." Johnny figured silently an instant. He then mentioned a date of about ten years ago. "It would be around that time. That would be when that guy was sentenced to Ohio State penitentiary. If you find out anything, see if it says he was married, what his wife's name was any addresses, stuff like that."

Moe was frowning. "This newspaper writeup says he murdered a guard at the penitentiary. I'd hate to have him know we were looking for us."

"It's better than having him looking for us."

"Maybe he is—right now! If he was the one murdered Jeanette, if he's on the loose right here in Cincy—"

"That's exactly what I'm thinking about," said Johnny. "That's why I'd like to know more about him—without going to the police and asking questions."

"Where will you be?"

"Either at the office or back at the hotel room. Stop worrying."

"I sure wish," said Moe, "I knew what that convict looks like. Then I could keep out of his way!"

"Perhaps his picture will be in the old newspaper files. Slip the follow up there a couple dollars and you won't have any trouble getting access to the files."

Moe didn't look very happy as he turned up his collar and went out into the night again.

Map Drive In Middle East Area

NAZARETH, Israel —(UP)— Russia is preparing a new bid to penetrate the Middle East which the Soviets hope to "neutralize" in the initial campaign now well under way.

Those forming current Soviet foreign policy can never forgive the Bolshevik revolutionaries of 30 years ago for failing to take advantage of the singular opportunity presented to them at the close of World War I to acquire an open door into the Mediterranean.

By a secret pact now known as the Constantinople Agreement of March 18, 1915, concluded among Britain, France and Czarist Russia just before the ill-fated Dardanelles expedition, it was agreed that in the event of an Allied victory, Russia would obtain full possession of Constantinople together with both shores of the Bosphorus, part of Southern Thrace and certain islands in the Sea of Marmara which lies between the Bosphorus and the Dardanelles Straits. The Soviets, who then denounced all existing secret treaties of the Czarist Government, also repudiated this agreement.

Of the countries that signed the Montreux Agreement, two — Bulgaria and Roumania — are Russian satellites. The other signatories are Britain, France, Russia, Japan, Turkey, Greece, Yugoslavia and Australia. It is not likely they will permit the Soviets to move into the Mediterranean.

Considerations of strategy take precedence over everything else in the Soviet's desire to be able to move freely in the Mediterranean. Since they cannot play power politics in this sea bordering three continents, they are concentrating all their efforts on building up small cores of pro-Russian influence in those countries whose peoples they consider not liable to outright Communist propaganda. These are chiefly the Arab states of the eastern Mediterranean.

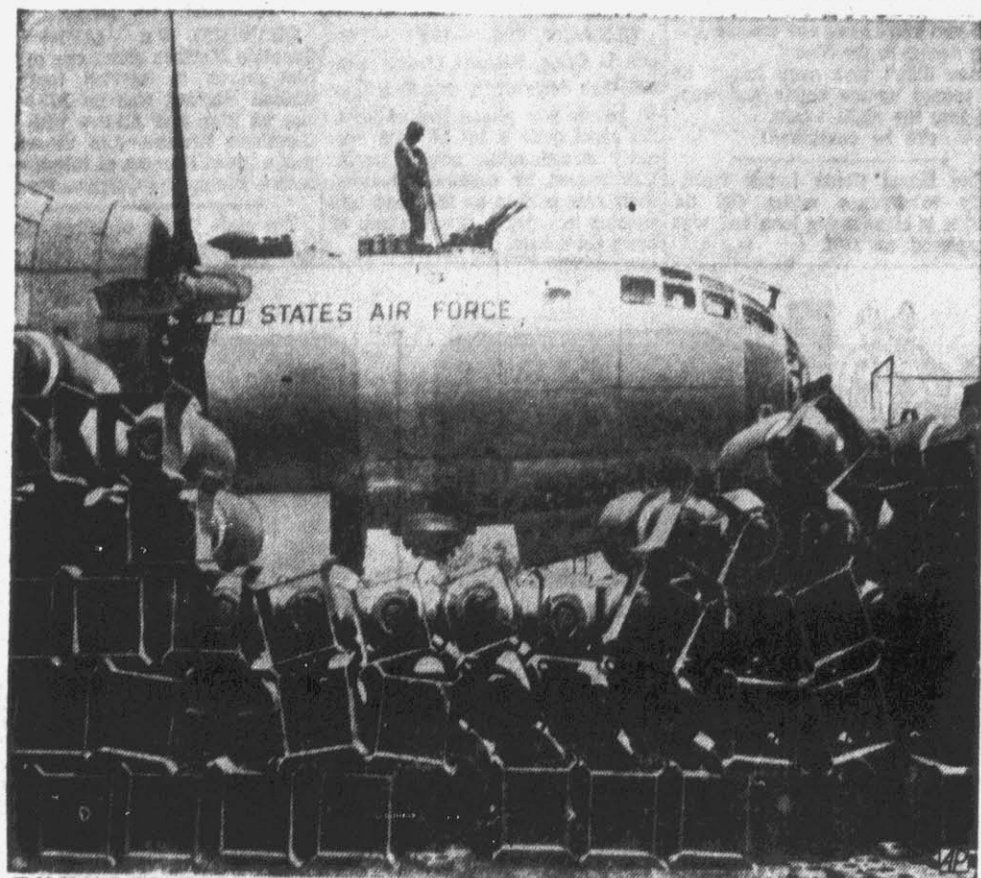

Disregards Arab World The Russian Government has on many occasions shown its disregard for Arab world and its opinions, even in connection with the Palestine problem. By opposing the internationalization of Jerusalem, a reversal of a previous stand, the Soviet rulers indicated they were completely heedless of public opinion in Arab countries. By supporting the Arab states against the West on such an issue as Jerusalem's future status, they could have endeared themselves no end in the eyes of the Arab world.

By disappointing the Arab world in not vetoing or at least postponing further the Security Council vote on the freedom of shipping in the Suez Canal, the Russians proved again that the Middle East poses very simple problems for them.

If the Russians invade the Middle East, their first aim will be to put the oil-producing countries out of commission and forestall possible action against the U.S.S.R.'s southern oil-rich provinces and industrial areas. They believe that an immediate, ruthless suppression of the civilian populations and the enlistment of the handful of trustworthy Communists they are grooming for the job will be all the action they will be required to take.

Although the Russians are anxious to get a foothold in the Middle East—Stalin is said to have told Churchill as much at the Tehran Conference—the Soviet press devotes little space to this part of the world, except for Turkey and Iran. On the average about two items monthly deal with Israel and these only with the foreign policy of the new state—rarely with the country's internal problems. The Arab states usually don't even rate that.

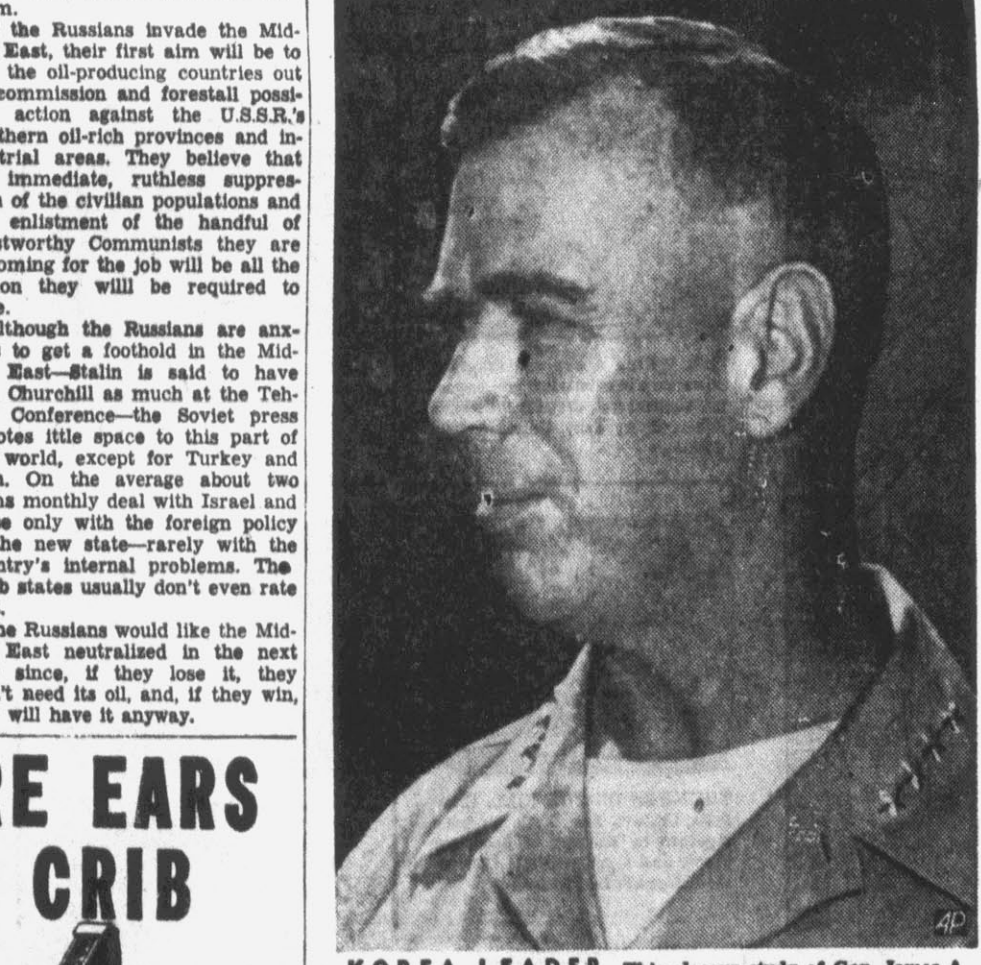

The Russians would like the Middle East neutralized in the next war since, if they lose it, they won't need its oil, and, if they win, they will have it anyway.

Murder Case Is Solved By Boy

HERMOSA BEACH, Calif. — (AP)— A 12-year-old boy was the Sherlock Holmes in the case of the murdered mother.

Young Charles Pratt found the body then gave information which led to an arrest within two hours.

Saturday night, while Charles was playing near the home of Mrs. Miriam Evelyn Lake, 43, he heard a scream and saw a man run out. Peeking in, he saw Mrs. Lake lying in a pool of blood, a knife in her back.

Charles ran to the police station and gave a description of the man. Later he identified the man arrested. In jail today on suspicion of murder is William Rogers Stewart, 29, Stockton, Neb., a Marine corporal discharged Friday from Camp Pendleton, Calif.

Stewart was arrested in nearby Torrance.

Officers said Stewart met Mrs. Lake through friends and they began celebrating his discharge and her birthday, which was Saturday, when Stewart said he could not remember what had happened.

Mrs. Lake was the mother of a 9-year-old boy, Jackson. Her husband, Jack Lake, is with the Air Force in Alaska.

Talmadge Backs Gen. Eisenhower

GATLINBURG, Tenn. (UP)— Georgia Gov. Herman Talmadge publicly endorsed Gen. Dwight Eisenhower today, his choice for the Democratic presidential nomination next year.

Talmadge said the general could win "hands down" if he accepted the Democratic bid. The anti-Truman governor said an Eisenhower ticket would sweep the South.

However, the Georgia governor-taking his first public stand on presidential politics in informal discussions with fellow governors at the national governors' conference underway here—said a coalition of Southern Democrats and conservative Republicans "would not be advisable." He said he could foresee "little support" for such a movement, even with Eisenhower as a candidate, and announced that he would oppose it.

The average height of a girl 15 to 19 years old is four feet 11 inches and her weight averages 110 pounds.

Can Work Together In Policing Of Vienna

By WELLINGTON LONG United Press Staff Correspondent VIENNA —(UP)— "Sinfoni!" Barked the Red army lieutenant at the 20-man squad drawn up in front of the Palace of Justice.

Five Americans, five French and five Soviet soldiers snapped to attention, while five British Tommies stomped their left boots on the cobblestones and also came to attention.

An American staff sergeant saluted, reported all present and accounted for, then followed a step behind the Soviet officer as he inspected the squad.

Inspection completed, the Russian said a few words in his own language, asked in English, "any questions?" then rapped "razoydi!"

At the last command, the American and French soldiers raised their right arms in a salute, the British again stomped their left feet and saluted, and the Russians saluted, then all did about face.

Daily Routine That was the daily routine of mounting the guard of the international patrol, only military unit in the world with both American and Soviet members.

Vienna is divided into British, French, American, Soviet and international sectors, and there is an IP car with a soldier from each nation in it on duty in each district at all times.

The IP rides in the big, ugly Dodge command and reconnaissance cars which by now must have been abandoned by every outfit in the world. The United States 99th military police battalion furnishes the cars, gasoline, maintenance and radios, operates the IP radio net, and insures that the American patrol member always drives the car.

The IP was the brain child of an American military provost marshal in Vienna right after the liberation, and the first patrols were sent out August 5, 1945. It has operated with a minimum of trouble since.

Not Always Peaceful Of course, there has been some friction, such as the time the Russian member stuck his pistol against the head of the American driver, forcing him to take an American prisoner to a Russian kommandatura instead of to a U.S. headquarters. Or the instance last winter when an American member started a fist fight with the Russian.

But the IP has faced some tough characters together. One instance was the drunken Soviet soldier who resisted arrest three years ago, crying "Truman good, Stalin bad." He wounded the Russian and killed the French member with his bary gun before he could overpower it.

Recently the patrol had to break up a brawl between Soviet and British soldiers who were using beer mugs and wine bottles as weapons.

Twenty-five young American military policemen are permanently assigned to the IP, considered Viennas prize assignment. These 25 are carefully chosen because of their experience, reliability, appearance, character and ability to speak German, the language in which patrol members converse.

The Russian members always appear to be privates, but it is known that at least three of them actually hold the rank of major, and probably are intelligence officers.

Take Turns Commanding The French are professional military policemen, who come to the mounting of the guard by streetcar carrying their insignia, cartridge belts and pistols in briefcases. The British, dressed in summer khaki shorts, are chosen from the various units stationed here.

The four powers take turns commanding the daily mounting of the guard. In the beginning, patrol members used to present arms for inspection, and the officers would walk along the ranks peering into the barrels and breeches.

One day, an eager American lieutenant stopped in front of a Russian, and snatched at his pistol. In standard American drill, the soldier lets go of the pistol. The Russian, however, just hung on, and the American jerked him clear out of ranks.

There hasn't been a pistol inspection since.

New Chairman For Federalists

HIGH POINT—(AP)—The United World Federalist movement in North Carolina will be headed for the coming year by McNeill Smith of Greensboro.

Smith was elected chairman of the state executive committee here Saturday as the group conducted a one-day convention. Also elected were James B. McMillan of Charlotte, vice chairman; John Harworth, High Point, secretary, and Frank Paschal of Raleigh, treasurer.

Haworth and Dean Henry Brandis Jr., of the University of North Carolina Law School, were named national committeemen.

Haiti has a population of around 3,000,000.

Cigarets, Gas, Liquor To Cost More In Month

WASHINGTON (UP)—Cigarets, gasoline, and liquor will cost more a month from today.

The price increases will come from higher excise taxes on those and many other items.

The Office of Price Stabilization automatically permits price increases to reflect new or higher excise taxes. In the case of excise taxes on the manufacturer's price, the retail price may be more than the tax so as to reflect the retailer's regular percentage markup.

A House-Senate conference committee still must adjust many differences between the tax bills passed by the two chambers. However, most of the excise tax provisions were identical in both bills and not subject to change by the conference committee.

The new excise rates go into effect on the first day of the month beginning more than 10 days after enactment of the bill. Hence they will be effective Nov. 1 unless the bill fails to reach the White House in time for President Truman to sign it by Oct. 21. That is not likely.

Here are some of the increases due to begin next month: cigarettes, one cent a package; gasoline, half a cent a gallon; beer, $1 a barrel; 100-proof whisky, 30 cents a fifth; wine, two to 25 cents, depending on alcoholic content.

The increase for gasoline does not apply to that already held at retail outlets, so there may be a short lag after Nov. 1 before some filling stations begin collecting the tax increase.

The House and Senate bills both add a list of items to the electrical and gas appliances subject to a 10 per cent tax on the manufacturer's price.

Included in both bills are electric dishwashers, electric and gas clothes dryers, and power lawn mowers.

Another tax due to start Nov. 1 is the 10 per cent levy on operators of numbers games and other lotteries and bookmakers and others handling bets for profit on sports contests.

The House and Senate both voted new taxes on fountain pens, ball-point pens and mechanical pencils not now subject to the retail jewelry tax. The Senate bill makes the tax 10 per cent of the manufacturer's price and the House bill 20 per cent.

Excise tax increases on manufacturers' prices will not usually hit the consumer until the retailer has exhausted supplies bought before Nov. 1.

Along with the new and increased excise rates, both chambers voted a few excise tax reductions.

Thus the 20 per cent retail tax is lifted on baby oils, powders and lotions and other toilet preparations not intended for adults.

Both bills repeal the present 3-1-3 per cent tax on electricity sold to domestic and commercial users. How this action will be reflected in electric bills presumably will depend on decisions of commissions regulating utility rates.

Only 2 Accidents In Past Weekend

Two minor highway accidents were reported on Pitt County highways over the past weekend, by the Greenville office of the Highway Patrol.

A car operated by Leland T. Stancil, 28, turned over on the New Bern highway, five miles south of Greenville yesterday afternoon.

Stancil was taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital by a passing motorist where he was treated for chest injuries.

Damage to the car was estimated at $1500 by investigating officer Paul C. Whitley.

Stancil stated to Whitley that he must have gone to sleep at the wheel and turned over.

Whitley charged him with careless and reckless driving.

A second single car accident occurred near Gardner's Crossroads Saturday morning at 9:15.

Patrolman Jim Davis listed the driver of the car as Minnie Haddock Smith, 41, Route 4, Wilson.

According to Davis the car turned over on a curve, causing damage estimated at $200.

No one was injured. Reason given for the accident was that the road was strange to the driver and she came upon the curve unexpectedly.

No charges were brought against the driver.

New Big Four Meet Offer Seen From Kremlin

LONDON (UP)—Reports circulated in European diplomatic quarters today that Russia is preparing another proposal for a Big Four conference.

Two newspapers—one in London and another in Paris—predicted that Soviet Premier Josef Stalin would offer to attend a meeting with President Truman and the prime ministers of Britain and France in Berlin.

Most sources believed the Soviet bid, if it came, would be an 11th hour attempt to block the rearmament of Western Germany by holding out the possibility of uniting Germany, settling the Korean war and resolving other East-West differences.

Diplomats said Russia already has "dropped some very strong hints" that she is ready to compromise if the West will reconsider its steady military buildup.

Farmville Kiwanis Club Calls Meet

FARMVILLE—The Farmville Kiwanis Club will hold an important meeting tonight at 6:30.

President Charles Edwards said the committee will make its report on the recent street carnival, sponsored by the Kiwanians, and which is expected to net the club for its community activities a substantial sum of money.

The Farmville Kiwanians' recent bicycle safety program which ended last Friday was a success, reports are expected to show.

The Farmville club will conduct a food and soft drink booth at the Pitt County Agricultural Fair at Greenville all this week.

Three-Car Crash In City Sunday

A three-car collision on Greene Street, between Second and Third Sts., yesterday about 5:30 p.m. featured the motor vehicle collisions during the weekend.

Traffic in Greenville yesterday was unusually heavy. North-south traffic on Greene Street, from Dickinson Avenue to Tar River bridge and beyond on the Bethel highway, appeared to be unending during the afternoon and last night.

The three-car crash occurred on Greene Street when a line of cars stopped for a traffic light. Police said a car driven by James R. Tyson, 17-year-old white youth, Route 4, Greenville, driving a pickup truck, collided with the car ahead, driven by Maycie Boyd Culbreth, 1114 Evans Street. The Culbreth car crashed into the rear of the vehicle driven by Galen Roger Harris, Route 4, Greenville. Mrs. Harris' knee was injured.

The investigating officer said damage to the Harris car was about $15; Culbreth's car, about $200; and Tyson's car, about $12.

Police arrested Tyson on the charge of following too close to the car ahead.

A car driven by J. R. Bowen, Route 1, Ayden, collided slightly with an oil tanker truck parked in Clarence Waters' service station lot on the Bethel highway. The owners settled their difference. No arrest was made.

Minds Of . . .

(Continued from Page One) course De Gasperi suggests—set up a group to work on nothing. They would rather follow the but youth problems, one that could produce results on a big scale, quickly.

Any program that's drafted and started could be fitted in later with whatever the Atlantic Pact group decides upon. The important thing is to get started, they say.

To back up their argument, they point to the gigantic communist youth festival the Russians held in Soviet Berlin this August. More than 1,000,000 boys and girls marched, paraded and sang to advertise the communist brand of "peace."

Several hundred thousands succeeded in slipping into Western Berlin to get a quick peek at western democracy but, as a recent State Department report said:

"As a demonstration of such power, the festival was no failure. In fact, it surpassed in sheer numbers any of the Nazis' efforts at Nurnberg."

President Opens Chest Campaign

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Truman urged Americans last night to help their neighbor.

He called for support of the Community Chest drive in the spirit of "the good old-fashioned rule that neighbors should always help each other."

"That is the heart of the American ideal," the President said in a nationwide broadcast opening the annual Community Chest campaign.

The Ones To . . .

(Continued from Page One) mentation already handed down by the International Court of Justice at The Hague. That recommendation is that neither Britain nor Iran take any drastic action until the court can make a final decision on the merits of the seizure of the Anglo-Iranian Oil Co. plant.

What makes the issue desperate is that the Iranian public isn't in the mood for waiting for anything. The crowds in the streets of Tehran have been shouting, "We want British blood." They mean that literally, not figuratively.

The general guidepost is this: If Russia take a tough line in the Security Council session, it means she is ready to far's up to an armed break between Britain and Iran with all the consequences. If she takes a more moderate line and confines herself to making propaganda, it means Stalin has decided this time isn't the time to shove all his chips into the center of the table.
