Three county prisoners made good their bid for freedom sometime Friday night when they jimmied open a cell block door and removed the ventilator fan shown above. With the fan removed the men cut a screen wirecovering and hopped onto the roof of the jail. There they entered the building from outside and used either stairs or the elevator to escape. Now under chain and lock, are the prisoners of the county and city housed in the city jail. Three Negro prisoners, waiting trial in court, jimmied open the cell door shown above, by using a piece of pasteboard sometime Friday night. The escape was not discovered until Saturday morning. Officials stated that the locks were able to be picked due to wear and tear on the workings of the locks over a period of years.

Trio Escape City Jail By Jimmying Cell Door's Lock

Discovered Missing Saturday Morning At Breakfast Time; Four Others Stayed Behind

By ROY HARDEE
Reflector Staff Writer
Three Pitt County prisoners, awaiting trial in city jail, jimmied a cell block door sometime Friday night and escaped through a ventilator shaft opening at the north end of the city jail.

Discovery of the escape was not made until Saturday morning, when Jailer W. G. Leggett arrived to feed his prisoners their Saturday morning breakfast.

All of the county prisoners are being confined to the city jail while the county jail is being renovated.

Once the escape was discovered an intensive investigation was launched but it was late Saturday afternoon before the escape was placed on the police radio network. No reason was given for the delay in placing the escape on the air except that the investigation was being made.

Chief Guy C. Langston, who headed the investigation, stated that reason for the investigation was to find out if the cell door had been left open and the prisoners allowed to escape through negligence on the part of some officer.

The escaped prisoners were listed as: Johnnie Weidon, alias Johnnie Weidon, Negro, 51; 5' 2", weighing 120 pounds. Dark complexion, mustache, bad teeth, and scar in left eyebrow. Weidon was arrested in Jacksonville on a warrant held by Pitt County sheriff's department on two counts of assault with a deadly weapon.

(2) James Jake Copper, Negro, 45, weight 160 pounds, 5' 9", Copper, Greenville Negro, was in jail for failing to comply with a court order. Police records show that he had a long scar on the left cheek and wears glasses sometimes.

(3) John Robert Green, Negro, of Greenville was charged with midnight burglary and was due to be tried in this week's session of superior court. Green was listed as being 28 years old, 5' 11", weight 175 pounds, dark complexion. He has a scar on the back of his left hand.

Upon completion of the investigation it was determined that the prisoners escaped by using a piece of cardboard to jimmy the lock. Chief Langston pointed out that years of wear on the workings of the lock is believed to have made it possible for the prisoners to open the lock with little effort.

Once gaining the freedom of their cells, the three removed a ventilator fan at the north end of the jail and cut the screen wire covering the window.

When the fan was installed, two sections of bars were removed which left an opening 11 inches wide and 24 inches high which the prisoners used to reach the roof.

From the roof, the prisoners circled the fourth floor cells, entering the building again through an outside door just off the cell block's main door. There they either took the elevator or the stairway to freedom. Officers stated that they believed the men left the building from a Fifth Street door.

Chief Langston stated that the bars removed when the fan was installed will be replaced today.

Upon discovery of the weakness in the jail cell locks heavy lengths of chains and padlocks were wrapped around the cells to insure the safe keeping of the prisoners.

Truman May See Big Atomic Tests

Las Vegas Paper Says President To Observe Maneuvers

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UP)—The Las Vegas Morning Star said today that President Truman may be a spectator at the nation's first atomic combat maneuvers scheduled to begin soon at the Atomic Energy commission's Frenchman Flat proving ground.

The paper did not disclose the source of its information, but it said it was convinced that the president's Defense Secretary Robert Lovett and other top Washington officials would be present when the tactical maneuvers employing newly-designed atomic weapons are launched.

The Sun said Secret Service men had been making extensive preparations for the President's arrival.

In Washington, White House press secretary Joseph Short said today he knew of no plan for President Truman to witness the forthcoming atomic combat maneuvers.

President, according to the law governing atomic weapons, is entrusted with the sole power of deciding when and where America's atomic weapons can be employed.

The Atomic Energy commission and the Department of Defense have thrown a curtain of security around the forthcoming maneuvers, but reliable sources indicate that at least a half dozen types of tactical atomic weapons will be tested at the proving ground with American troops participating.

Chairman Gordon Dean of the AEC is expected to arrive here later today to make an inspection of the atomic testing facilities in the barren, remote site.

Dean has cautioned that his arrival here goes not necessarily mean that the much-heralded maneuvers are about to begin.

Speculation about when the maneuvers actually will get under way—a date that has been declared a top secret by the AEC—ranges from this Wednesday to Oct. 15 to 17.

Fair Attendance Sets New Record

Over 30,000 Pass Through Gates Despite 2 'Bad' Days

The Pitt County Fair last week set a record for attendance during the six days when over 30,000 persons walked through the gate.

That is about 5,000 more persons than attended the Fair last year. Larry Averette, in charge of admissions, said today. The figure includes both paid admission and pass customers.

Averette said the attendance during Friday and Saturday was responsible for carrying the figure over that of 1950. During Wednesday and Thursday only a few of the harder souls visited the new fairgrounds due to cloudy, cold and damp weather.

Drive For Early Adjournment Is Opened In Senate

Ask Speedy Approval Of Three Bills Involving Over $65 Billion Outlay

WASHINGTON (AP)—Leaders opened a Senate drive for early adjournment today by asking speedy approval of three bills involving the spending of more than $65,000,000,000.

Democratic leader McFarland of Arizona outlined this ambitious program for his colleagues:

1. A compromise $56,937,808,030 defense money bill supplying operating funds for the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines.

2. A compromise foreign-aid measure authorizing a $7,483,400,000 program of economic and military assistance abroad.

3. A new $1,751,196,781 catch-all money bill carrying funds for more than a score of government agencies, including those handling economic controls and civil defense.

Originally there had been talk that congress could wind up the session this weekend, but McFarland is now hoping for adjournment Oct. 20. Even that date appeared optimistic.

All three of the pending Senate bills are on McFarland's "must" list.

Senate approval, which seemed certain, would send two of them to the President's desk.

The House, generally further along with its work, turned today to a bill already passed by the Senate to cut down on the maximum size and weight of parcel post packages.

Funds for actual operation of the foreign aid program must be provided in a separate money bill, still being drafted by a House Appropriations Subcommittee.

The huge defense spending bill, largest of this session and biggest military money measure in peace time history, contains more than 20 billion dollars for the Air Force, slightly less than that for the Army and nearly 16 billions for the Navy and Marine Corps.

The third bill—the $1,751,196,781 supplemental measure—represents an increase of nearly $165,000,000 to amounts voted by the House.

Chinese Bringing Up More Troops

Reds Reported Rushing New Army To Endangered Front As UN Divisions Smash Ahead Against Strong Resistance

8TH ARMY HQ, Korea (UP)—United Nations forces blasted out gains of up to a mile on a 70-mile front today and the Chinese Reds were reported rushing an entire army east to prevent a breakthrough.

An American division commander said the Chinese appeared to be moving an army of some 30,000 men to the east-central front to bolster North Korean units believed to have lost 75 per cent of their men in recent bloody fighting.

Despite their mounting losses, however, the Reds were putting up a desperate fight.

They threw South Korean troops off a high peak overlooking "Punchbowl valley" on the eastern front and halted American troops just short of the summit of the last enemy-held peak on "Heartbreak ridge" on the east-central sector.

On the western front, the U.S. 1st Cavalry division smashed ahead 1,000 to 1,500 yards north-northwest of Yonchon.

The whole front was aflame from North of Seoul in the west to "Punchbowl valley" in the eastern mountains.

Some of the heaviest fighting was on the east-central front, where decimated North Korean units were putting up a fight-to-the-death to prevent a breakthrough.

The 23rd regiment of the Maj. Gen. Robert N. Young's U.S. 2nd division launched its climactic assault on the last Communist-held peak on bloody "Heartbreak ridge" above Yangju Sunday.

The attack continued throughout the night and into the day Monday. The Yanks bayoneted gassed and shot their way to within a few yards of the summit, only to be stopped cold by Communist machineguns anchored in deep bunkers.

An estimated Communist battalion held the peak.

U.S. tanks attached to the 23rd regiment moved into Satae, east of the ridge, and fired pointblank at the Communist stronghold, but heavy concentrations of Red artillery hindered the tanks' fire.

Gen. Young estimated that his 2nd division troops have whittled down North Korean units facing them to 25 per cent of effective fighting strength during the last three weeks.

He said he has received reports that the Chinese were shifting an entire army—equivalent to a U.S. army corps—into the formerly exclusively North Korean area to buttress the line.

"It is possible because we have put a lot of North Koreans through the meatgrinder," Young said. "If the report is true, the Chinese will go through the same meatgrinder."

Illinois Man Is New YDC Head

Solid Victory Over North Carolina's Basil Whitener

ST. LOUIS (UP)—An Illinois candidate who was backed by delegates from Northern states held the presidency of the Young Democratic Clubs of America today in a solid victory over the South.

Richard Nelson, administrative aide to Gov. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois, defeated Basil Whitener, of Carolina, N.C., who had the backing of a minority Southern bloc.

Nelson, backed by Northern and Western states with the exception of Rhode Island, defeated Whitener 571 to 384 in a fiery election session in which the Southern delegates threatened to bolt the convention.

Nelson was installed as president yesterday.

The minority group had suffered a previous setback with the defeat of a proposal sponsored by the South Carolina contingent to restore a rule requiring a two-thirds majority vote in nominations for the 1952 Democratic state.

This was rebuffed by a 9 to 6 vote. It was later re-introduced on the floor by Sidney Duncan, Columbia, S.C., and was voted down 633 to 286. But the Southerners gained some ground with the adoption of a majority of proposals cleared by the resolutions committee.

One of these, sponsored by the South Carolina delegation, called on the Democratic party to do "all in its power to preserve for the states the right of self-government."

The Southern delegates also were successful in obtaining a watered-down version of a controversial civil rights resolution sponsored by California and backed by Minnesota.

This skit tells of the work of the U.N. and its specialized agencies and shows how UNESCO, the Marshall Plan, the World Health Organization, the Food and Agricultural Organization, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and the U.N. Technical Assistance Program can unbind and free the peoples of the world from their major problems.

Miss Grace Outland will lead the skit and Miss Ruth White, Dean of Women at East Carolina, will be co-leader.

Participating in "A World Made Free" will be Miss Janet Myers, representing Ignorance; Mrs. Alice Ayers, Ill Health; Mrs. Hilda Avery, Hunger; Miss Rita Taylor, Rights Denied; Dr. Hazel Taylor, Underdeveloped Areas; Mrs. Georgia Franklin, Aggression.

Mrs. Dan Barton will sing the United Nations hymn and the U.N. flag will be prominently displayed to carry out the theme of the skit. Mrs. Chester Walsh, chairman of the International Relations Committee of the BPWC, is in charge of the program in its entirety.

The program promises to be one of the best and most timely of the year and a large number of club members and guests are expected. Among the business for the evening will be the election of delegates for the District BPWC meeting to be held in New Bern on October 21st, according to Mrs. Ruth Garner, president.

Winterville F.H.A. Plans Year's Work

Winterville F.H.A. held its first regular meeting on Friday, September 28, in the Winterville grammar school auditorium.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Peggy Dail, and opened by the members repeating the creed. After this the minutes of the last meeting were read by Mable Anne Mills acting as secretary in the absence of Marjorie Boyd. Nancy Worthington next gave the treasurer's report and then the pointkeepers gave their reports on the girls having the highest number of points. These girls were rewarded for their work by the advisor, Miss Alva Raye Taylor, who presented each with a nice prize.

The president asked for new business and at this time a committee to nominate chapter mothers and fathers and a committee to plan a street dance were appointed. Also it was decided that the club would continue selling cards, vanilla, dish cloths and magazine subscriptions in an effort to earn money.

At the close of the meeting the president announced a rally to be held in Edenton on Saturday, October 6, and urged all members who could to attend.

As there was no old business, the meeting was then adjourned.

WCTU Starts Year With Opening Talk By Rev. J. A. Neilson

In his talk to the Women's Christian Temperance Union last Wednesday, the Rev. J. A. Neilson said that this country has advanced in church and Sunday School membership, in college attendance and in many scientific ways but in spite of these advances there has been a moral let-down, and that it is time for America to wake up. He said magazines, books and clubs play up the gutter type of life and that the moral let-down has crept in the homes and churches resulting in drinking, gambling, lack of loyalty and lack of honesty. He said the radio, television and movies represent drinking as the natural and desirable way of life. Mr. Neilson contended this to be a false sense of values and that every cocktail drinking person is a potential alcoholic.

He concluded his talk by saying that America needs to get back to the standards as revealed in the life of Christ. He said, "If we can get the homes straightened out we will then have moral control in the hearts of men and women."

In the absence of the president, Mrs. Helen Higgs Kirkpatrick, Mrs. C. W. Brown presided over a short business session. She announced that the November meeting will feature a Roll Call program. At this meeting the new officers will be in charge as follows: president, Mrs. C. W. Brown; vice president, Mrs. F. E. Riddick; secretary, Mrs. Gladys Winn Scoville; treasurer, Mrs. I. N. Williams. The committee chairmen are: radio, Mrs. Lella Carson; legislature, Mrs. F. P. Brooks; speech, Mrs. Helen Higgs Kirkpatrick; flowers, mission and relief, Mrs. A. W. Baker and Mrs. S. L. McCarty; and publicity, Miss Gloria Blanton.

Airship Mooring Mast Pays Off In New Manner

NEW YORK.—(AP)—The dirigible mooring mast that the late Alfred E. Smith had built on top of the Empire State Building is paying off in a way probably never envisioned by "Al."

A television broadcasting mast surmounting this world's tallest building is bringing in $500,000 a year in rents, according to George A. Hammer of the Charles F. Noyes Co., agents.

Five local TV stations pay $70,000 a year each to use the mast, plus $30,000 a year for space for control equipment. In addition, the observation tower brings in $800,000 a year in admissions.

Whitehurst-Hardee Rites Performed

In a candlelight ceremony Miss Theima Jane Hardee, daughter of Mrs. Oscar Hardee and the late Mr. Hardee of Greenville, and Bert Marshall Whitehurst Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Marshall Whitehurst Sr. of Stokes, pledged their marriage vows in the Salem M. E. Church in Simpson Sunday, September 30, at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon, with the Rev. C. G. Nickens, pastor of Grimesland, officiating at the double ring ceremony.

The church was decorated with floor standards of white gladioli and pom pom mums interspersed with seven branched wrought iron candelabra with tall cathedral candles, and rich green huckleberry, Oregon fern and trailing plumbosa. Single candelabra were used by the altar. The pews were marked with white satin bows and gladioli.

Prior to the ceremony Mrs. Paul Toll, organist of Greenville, presented a program of nuptial music, assisted by Mrs. Margaret James, soloist, who sang "I Love You Truly" and "Always." Tommie Eilers of Greenville sang "The Lord's Prayer" as the benediction.

Given in marriage by her brother, Karl Hardee of Greenville, the bride entered the church with him and was met at the chancel by the bridegroom, who had as his best man his father. Her wedding gown of bridal satin was fashioned along the traditional lines with a fitted bodice and tapering sleeves ending in calli lily points over the hands. The basque bodice of chantilly lace, designed with off shoulder neckline of nylon illusion, was fastened in the back with miniature self-covered buttons. The bouffant skirt, worn over hoops and crinoline, was of bridal satin, with scalloped tiers of chantilly lace, ending in a cathedral train. Her fingertip veil of imported illusion was arranged from a satin bandeau outlined with pearls. She carried an arm bouquet of silver sheen chrysanthemums, centered with a white orchid and showered with feathered chrysanthemums.

Mrs. Jasper Boyd of Grimesland, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, and wore a pink dress with a fitted bodice of taffeta with a bouffant skirt of nylon over taffeta. She had matching mitts and headpiece and carried a colonial bouquet of assorted shades of pom pom mums and California asters tied with blue satin ribbon.

The bridesmaids were Mrs. John Loyd Cory, sister of the groom, and Mrs. Walter Tyson, both of Stokes, Misses Jane Edwards and Annie Ree Hardee of Stokes. Their dresses were of blue taffeta and nylon, fashioned similar to the matron of honor and they carried colonial bouquets of shades mums and asters tied with pink satin ribbon.

Misses Katherine Boyd and Lois Jane Hardee, nieces of the bride, wore junior bridesmaids and wore dresses identical to the bridesmaids. They carried miniature colonial bouquets tied with contrasting satin ribbons.

Little Miss Connie Hardee and Master Billie Hardee, niece and nephew of the bride, served as flower girl and ring bearer.

Honorary bridesmaids were Misses

Betty Lou Shackelford, Lois Dunn, Barbara Tilley, Betty Jane Jackson and Janice Relyea, all of Greenville. They wore pastel shade dresses with matching mitts and corsages.

Serving as the ushers were James Lewis Hardee, Andy Carigan, John Loyd Cory and Noah T. Hardee, brother of the bride.

For traveling the bride wore a plum gabardine suit with a pink blouse, black accessories and the orchid lifted from her bridal bouquet.

For the ceremony the bride's mother wore a blue lace dress with matching headdress and an orchid corsage. The mother of the groom was dressed in a rose dress with matching accessories and an orchid corsage.

Reception Immediately following the wedding, a reception was given at the home of the bride.

Various colors of gladioli were used in decorating the home, and also burning candles were used. Mrs. E. G. Hardee greeted the guests and introduced them to the receiving line which was composed of the members of the bridal party. Mrs. Andy Carigan received in the gift room, with Mrs. James Mills presiding at the bride's register.

The refreshment table was covered with a lace cloth, centered with an arrangement of white carnations and fern in a crystal bowl, and flanked with burning tapers in satin tied holders. Mrs. G. Loren Edwards poured punch with Misses Betty Lou Shackelford, Janice Relyea, Betty Jane Jackson, Barbara Tilley and Lois Dunn assisting in serving bridal cakes, salted nuts and mints.

Goodbyes were heard by Mrs. Raymond Tyson, with approximately 100 guests calling during the afternoon.

Pre-Nuptial Courties

Among the courtesies shown Miss Hardee prior to her marriage was a kitchen shower on September 20 with Misses Joyce Cannon and Janice Relyea as joint hostesses at the home of the latter.

Mrs. William Francis Tyson honored Miss Theima Hardee and Marshall Whitehurst at a party at her home on Wednesday night, September 26.

The dining table was centered with a bowl of scarlet sage and fern. Punch, bridal cakes, mints, nuts and party sandwiches were served.

Miss Hardee was presented a corsage and a gift of silver in her chosen pattern.

Miss Lois Dunn complimented Miss Hardee with a miscellaneous shower at her home on September 28.

Dinner Party Mr. and Mrs. Bert Whitehurst honored Miss Theima Hardee and Marshall Whitehurst at a dinner at Respass-James Barbecue House on Friday night, September 28.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitehurst welcomed the guests and directed them to the dining room where a three course dinner was served.

The table centerpiece was an arrangement of white chrysanthemums and fern placed in a crystal bowl. Bridal place cards marked the seating position of each of the guests. Miss Hardee was presented a corsage of white pom poms.

Guests were Miss Hardee, bride-elect, Mr. Whitehurst, bridegroom-elect, Mrs. Oscar Hardee, mother of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Alvah Hardee, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Hardee, Mr. and Mrs. Karl Hardee, Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Boyd, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carrigan, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Cory Jr., Mr. and Mrs. William F. Tyson, Mrs. Major H. James, Miss Annie Ree Hardee and Mr. Hubert Edwards.

Cake Cutting Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carrigan and Mr. and Mrs. John L. Cory Jr. entertained Saturday night at a cake cutting in honor of Miss Theima Hardee and Marshall Whitehurst. The party was given following the wedding rehearsal at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carrigan.

The table was covered with a linen cloth and was centered with a bowl of white chrysanthemums, flanked with white tapers in crystal holders. On one end of the table was placed a three-tiered wedding cake, topped with a miniature bride and groom. On the other end of the punch bowl, Mrs. Bert Whitehurst presided at the punch bowl. After the bridal couple cut the first slice of cake, it was served by Mrs. Oscar Hardee. Mints and nuts were also served.

Miss Hardee was presented a corsage and a gift of china in her chosen pattern.

Women In The Church Women of more than eighty Protestant communions, organized in some 1800 state and local councils under the United Church Women of the National Council of Churches, will observe Friday, November 2, as "World Community Day." They will gather in community-wide services in several thousand centers across the nation. Two projects are under way in the women's groups of the churches and these will culminate at the Day's observance: the raising of an "Ecumenical Scholarship Fund" to bring to America young people from overseas for training in Christian leadership; and the making, collecting, and shipping of thousands of blankets and warm clothing to the needy overseas through Church World Service.

The annual Springarm Award, made by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, was won this year by Mrs. Mabel K. Staupers, a member of St. Philip's Protestant Episcopal Church, New York City, and long active in public health work. The award is "for spearheading the movement to integrate Negro nurses into American life as equals." Mrs. Staupers has led the successful efforts to permit Negro young women the right of tax-supported hospitals, and to break down the Navy's ban against Negro nurses.

Reports from Kansas to the National Council of the Churches show that more than 400 churches in the Kansas City area worked during the July floods to provide emergency relief—food, shelter, clothing—to more than 40,000 persons rendered homeless by the waters. More than half the persons served were women and children, and a large percentage of the rescue and relief workers were from the women's organizations of the churches. The Rev. Harold C. Bradshaw, of the Topeka Council of Churches, says: "During the emergency more practical Christianity was in evidence in the community than I had ever seen before. When we were fighting to strengthen the dikes, ministers worked side by side with hundreds of others, lugging sandbags and sloshing through the muddy mess on errands of mercy. After the water went down they joined in helping families shovel mud out of their homes."

Formal Saturday Reception Honors Dr. And Mrs. Wooten

To honor her son and his wife, Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Wooten of Baltimore, Mrs. W. L. Wooten was hostess at a formal reception on Saturday night at her home on Maple Street.

At the front door to welcome the callers who arrived were Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Waldrop, Dr. and Mrs. S. M. Crisp received them in the hall and introduced them to the receiving line, composed of the hostess, Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Wooten, Miss Lillian Wooten of Baltimore and William I. Wooten, a student at Duke University.

From the living room the guests were invited onto the side porch by Mr. and Mrs. Graham Flanagan and Col. and Mrs. Owen Marshallburn, where the punch table was placed. The refreshing punch, served from a lovely bowl surrounded by greenery, was poured by Miss Kay Van-Nortwick and Miss Mary Rose Crisp, assisted by Dave Whitchard III and Dr. Fred Warren of Camp Lejeune.

Others who were on the porch to serve the guests were James Picklen Jr., Dr. Charles Pace, Mr. and Mrs. Ty Wagner, Frank Wooten and Claude Taylor.

Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Winstead directed the callers from the porch into the library, where they were asked to register by Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Rose, Mrs. L. C. Skinner and Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Fleming Jr.

From the library the guests went through the den and into the back hall. Greeting them in the den were Dr. and Mrs. J. M. Barrett, and in the hall to usher them into the dining room were Mr. and Mrs. David Hardee. At the dining room door they were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. White and invited to the refreshment table.

A color note of flesh pink and white was observed in the appointments of the table and buffet. An imported white linen outwork cloth was laid over pink satin for the table cover. A silver bowl holding pale pink roses and asters centered the table and was flanked by silver candelabra bearing pink lighted tapers. Silver platters and trays were used on the table to hold pink and white ices, tea, pastries, pink and white mints and salted nuts. Alternating in serving the guests were Mrs. Travis Hooker, Mrs. E. G. Flanagan Sr., Mrs. Herbert Holden, Mrs. J. C. Wooten and Mrs. Frank Wooten. Assisting them were Misses Jang Massey, Alice Wooten, Betsy Holden, Betsy Nobles and Mrs. Bob Jones of Alexandria, Virginia.

Throughout the spacious reception rooms, lovely arrangements of flowers were used. In the living room massive yellow chrysanthemums were effective in table and mantel appointments. In the front hall yellow and orchid chrysanthemums were featured. Elsewhere blended pastel flowers accented the decorations of the home.

Following the reception, Mrs. Wooten served a buffet supper to those assisting in the house.

Farmers' Exodus In East Texas

WINNSBORO, Tex. —(AP)—The farmers are moving out of this part of East Texas. O. J. Gipe says the number of active farmers in the Winnsboro area has dropped from 3,800 in 1940 to between 1,100 and 1,200. Gipe is head of the Hopkins-Rains-Wood and Sulphur-Cypress Soil Conservation districts.

He blames economic pressure and the temptations of the big cities for the exodus.

"The day is gone," Gipe says, "when just anybody can make a living on a farm. Hit and miss farming today won't provide enough to feed and clothe a family, and keep them warm throughout

Youth Injured In Riding Bull

Mount AIRY —(AP)—Nineteen-year-old Evans Jarrell tried to ride a wild Brahman bull at a rodeo here Saturday night and would up with a fractured skull.

Jarrell, a Mount Airy high school football player, tried to win the $100 offered by the rodeo to anyone who could stay on the bull for four seconds. Jarrell was quickly tossed and the bull kicked him in the head.

The youth was still unconscious at Martin Memorial hospital here last night.

Replace Crosses Over War Dead

HONOLULU —(AP) The long rows of wooden crosses marking the graves of 13,000 World War II and Korean war dead are being removed from Punchbowl Cemetery. Flat stone markers are replacing the white crosses.

Army authorities said the change is being made because the wooden crosses deteriorated too rapidly in Hawaii's climate.

Prisons Council To Talk Reforms

RALEIGH —(AP)—The State Prisons Advisory Council is scheduled to meet here tonight to discuss further Prison Director Walter F. Anderson's "Three D" prison reform program.

The proposed program was explained to the board at an executive session last month. At that time the board members were given committee appointments and assigned to look into the workings of the prison department.

The members are expected to deliver their reports tonight. Chairman of the board is Dr. William McGhee of Spray.

Anderson, who took over the prison directorship early in August, has termed his "Three D" program as discipline, discovery and deliverance. Discovery includes classification, counseling and other methods, Anderson explained, for determining the characteristics of prisoners. Deliverance will come through plans for rehabilitating the prisoners, Anderson added.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLAS
THAT EXALTED GOODNESS
A man who speaks frequently before luncheon groups said to a friend of mine recently, "I never lose an opportunity in speaking before these groups to make a profession of the deepest faith that is within me."

He did not mean that he made a sectarian appeal. What he meant was that he bore down without compromise on moral issues and that he lost no opportunity to express faith in the great spiritual realities to which we all must conform. He unhesitatingly put the things of the spirit before the things of the flesh. He made it a practice, without ranting, to denounce materialism as the moral cancer which is eating away the life of our people.

Our Lord said to his disciples when he sent them forth, "As ye go, preach." He meant in this particular instance that they were actually to stand up and deliver sermons, but he means for everyone of us that our pilgrimage through this life should be a continual testimony to our Christian faith. To do this it is not necessary that we preach sermons or distribute tracts or buttonhole people and tell them how evil they are. It just means that our lives every day should be a testimony to the finest faith that is in us.

We can all live on a low level. We gravitate to that without effort. Life at its best is a continuing testimony to the exalted goodness of God."

He Just Can't Be 'Explained' Again

The President saved his most biting criticism of the American press for the middle of National Newspaper Week.

He started with the assertion that the press had given away 95 per cent of the nation's secrets, and then launched into a dissertation on responsibilities of newsmen on national security.

What he had to say made a very confusing impression in the minds of reporters present, and incredulous amazement in the minds of editors when they received reports of that presidential interview.

Mr. Truman voiced concern over publication of the announcement that the Air Force was forming a robot bomber squadron and similar revelations that were announced by the Defense Department . . . for public consumption. The press, said Mr. Truman, should not have carried this information if they had the best interests of the country at heart.

This was just one of the several eyebrow-raising statements of that pontifical assessment of America's news services; and indirectly, of the lack of confidence he feels in the security-consciousness of this country's top defense experts.

Actually, before any information pertaining to the national security is released to the press, it is carefully reviewed by experts in the field concerned so that no real "secrets" of value to the enemy are endangered. Then, newsmen are summoned and given a prepared announcement for public consumption. Frequently, pictures of the subject at hand are also produced, all of them having undergone close scrutiny for possible "slips" of vital material. This system proved satisfactory through two world conflagrations and to date in the Korean war.

As much as could be told to the American people of their mounting military strength, has been told to show that their billions of dollars are producing the might that was intended. It lent confidence in America's strength at times when doubts and fears could have given way to panic.

To supplement the front-line censorship of the military, the censorship of scientific developments and the censorship of actual arms production, a voluntary censorship has been adopted by the press on many stories of troop movements which could have been told by any newspaper or news service which had only one eye open as to what was going on.

There should be as few secrets in a democratic government as possible. Ideally, there would be none; and we can only regard an earlier presidential order of security classification in the executive department as denying the public its share of trust and responsibility.

Ordinarily, the State and Defense Departments are the only ones dealing in information of value to Russia . . . and they have their own security arrangements. Now Mr. Truman must have known all this; but he put his foot in it again. People have tried to "explain" him before, but each time he comes up with something different. Not even his admirer and biographer, Jonathan Daniels, can explain him this time.

A High Price To Pay For A Prisoner

The ability of the United States to bring economic pressure upon a nation which provokes its wrath is being exhibited in the case of Czechoslovakia.

The ruthless Czechs, under orders from their overlords in Moscow, may continue to hold AP Correspondent William Oatis in prison; but it is going to prove a costly project for the Czechs, and it is likely they will release Oatis as the costs continue to mount.

From the economic estimates released by the United States government, the economic embargo against Czechoslovakia will cost that country $40,000,000 a year in trade losses. That in itself is a tremendously large price to pay for the imprisonment of one man unjustly, just to spite the leading democratic nation of the world.

The United States is steadfast in its convictions that no man should be imprisoned for mock accusations and confessions trumped up by a government and heard by a sham court. The Communists, on the other hand are just as determined to support their principal that the government can imprison or put to death any individual its leaders see fit, without reason. Neither will give ground to the other until a great deal of coercion brings submission.

While the economic steps of the United States against Czechoslovakia will be directly costly to the Czechs, it will be equally costly to the Russians, for the Czechs will look to the Kremlin to make up for the losses they suffer carrying out the orders from the Communist high command. As long as Russia compensates Czechoslovakia for her losses in trade with the United States in the Oatis case, Oatis probably will be held. But the moment the Czechs or the Kremlin decides the price is too high to pay for Oatis, he will be given his freedom.

There is no point in trying to give the impression that all the cost in the incident is being borne by the Czechs and the Russians. It has cost the United States to continue the fight for Oatis' freedom, but by no means the way it is costing Czechoslovakia.

The United States is fighting for a man and for a principal. This nation will be willing to pay the price for Oatis longer than the Czechs, and chances are that more far reaching steps will be taken for Oatis' release if this economic embargo fails to bring desired reaction from the Czech government.

News Behind The News

WASHINGTON—Southern political leaders here and in their home territory have been taking a friendly but embarrassing ribbing from their Republican and anti-Truman brethren on the question of carrying through with their persistent threats to align Dixie Democrats against Harry S. Truman, if he seeks re-election next year.

Although the Mason-Dixon line has been badgered about this problem on Capitol Hill ever since their legislative leaders opposed and defeated most of the Administration's domestic program from 1945 until today, they took their worst beating at the recent Governors' Conference at Gatlinburg, Tenn., which was attended by every Southern state executive except Earl Long of Louisiana.

CONSIDERATION—Not accustomed to the clubby ties and associations that animate opposition members in House and Senate on intra-party problems, Republican Governors and their aides did not show the same consideration for their Democratic opposites. Among the Dixie gentlemen to undergo off-the-record catechisms on this subject were Governor James F. Byrnes of South Carolina, former Truman crony, Supreme Court Justice and Secretary of State; Governor Eugene Talmadge of Georgia, Governor Fuller Warren of Florida, Governor John S. Battle of Virginia, and, of course, the head men of Alabama, Mississippi and Texas.

Although all save a few of the Southern leaders speak disparagingly of the President in unofficial tones, almost the only ones to publicize their enmity were Governors Talmadge and Byrnes. Mr. Byrnes' attitude is well known, and will explode in actual opposition to Mr. Truman in the primary, the election itself and in the electoral college.

IMPRESSIONS—Behind the superficial joshing, and especially at Gatlinburg, there has been a definite effort by the GOP-ers to discover whether they can count on Southern Democrats as reliable reinforcements next year. In fact, they have tried to ascertain how many electoral votes the South might deliver for the Republican ticket against Mr. Truman, and what Republican figure would make the greatest appeal to the potential bolters.

Incidentally, a majority of the Republican Governors and Congressmen, as well as most Democrats, with the outstanding exception of Mr. Byrnes, are certain that Mr. Truman will run again. He has no opposition, speculation-wise, among his political enemies or friends.

ARGUMENT—The tone and tenor of the Republicans' taunting and jibing can be reproduced most accurately by enclosing a composite of their cloakroom and Gatlinburg remarks within quotations. Here is the GOP approach and argument to the not too solid South.

"You fellows have been fighting Democratic Presidents in Congress and at national conventions for almost twenty years. You have been threatening to break away from the Roosevelt-Truman, New Deal-Fair Deal faction, and to restore your section's power in the Democratic Party. You have done so in Congress.

"Russell of Georgia and Eastland of Mississippi have killed Civil Rights proposals. Walter George of Georgia scoffed at Truman's demand for ten billions in new taxes, and gave him only half that amount. "Harry Byrd of Virginia demands more economy every day, while Truman laughs at him. Jimmy Byrnes even defies a non-segregation edict of the Supreme Court on which he used to sit. Except for foreign policy, you have nothing in common with the Truman-Boyle regime. So, why not make a clean break with the Missouri crowd in 1952, after crying 'wolf' all these years?"

CRUCIAL—Events are conspiring to make the twelfth congressional district one of the most potent factors in determining results of next year's Democratic primary elections.

With possible exception of the sixth district, which is made up of four industrial piedmont counties, the twelfth district of ten mountain counties is more nearly homogenous and has more common interest among all its counties. And the mountain people outvote their mid-state friends. With slightly more than two-thirds the population, the twelfth district cast almost exactly twice as many votes in the sixth in last year's general election. Actual vote as reported in the official North Carolina manual was 73,561 in the twelfth, 36,886 in the sixth.

PARTISAN—Admittedly there is some unfairness in comparing general election votes with Democratic primary votes on basis of historic record. Monroe Redden had no opposition and there was no twelfth district vote in the Democratic primary. Carl Durham did have opposition and received eight thousand more votes in the primary than in the November election. That situation, to some degree, justifies the statement often made in the east nominates Democratic candidates and the west elects them in North Carolina. There are peculiar circumstances now leading to conclusion that the twelfth district may hold the ace of trumps in the 1952 political game.

CONTEST—First item for consideration is the certainty of a race for congress in the twelfth where Monroe Redden has announced he will not seek re-election. There may be other contests, but as of this date it is expected that every other incumbent congressman will hold his seat. On the face of the picture that indicates a larger primary vote in the twelfth than anywhere else. Certainty of contest and prospect of a larger vote in the congressional primary inevitably will have some influence upon other primary races.

CANDIDATES—Presently there are two announced candidates for congress in the twelfth—Richard Queen of Wayneville and Irvin Crawford of Asheville. Queen is in government service at Washington, a former member of the senatorial staffs of Senators J. M. Broughton and Frank P. Graham. Crawford is a law office associate of former Senator Robert R. Reynolds. Not formally announced but recognized as a potential candidate with powerful backing is Frank Parker, Asheville lawyer and former state senator. Looming as a prospect is Zeb Weaver, Asheville attorney, incumbent state senator, and son of the long time popular Congressman Zebulon Weaver.

COMPLEX—The situation is complicated by factional divisions among Buncombe county Democrats and the possibility that Brandon Hodges, presently state treasurer and long time factor in Buncombe politics as county attorney and state senator, may be a candidate for governor. It is known that Hodges is under pressure from his own area and from the far east to get into the gubernatorial race in order to assure maintenance of the east-west rotation system for chief executives. All the other presently suggested candidates—William Umstead of Durham, Henry Jordan of Cedar Falls and Hubert Olive of Lexington—are considered in the central piedmont area to which incumbent Governor Scott certainly belongs, and with some qualifications for fringe residence, J. M. Broughton of Raleigh and Gregg Cherry of Gastonia might be credited. Some far easterners regard everything on the sunset side of Raleigh as west, and some mountaineers count everything on which the sun shines before it brightens the Blue Ridge mountains as east. That is what makes the east-west business so absurd as a criterion for selecting a governor, unless and until there shall be a legally established or commonly accepted dividing line. There is no doubt that Hodges would poll a considerable vote because of his far western residence, as well as his admitted qualifications. It is also certain that his entry into the governor's race would have some effect on congressional voting.

LEADERSHIP—The twelfth district is in about the same condition as the state with respect to lack of recognized leadership. No one has proven his ability to step into the place vacated by the death of E. C. (Deacon) Greene whose influence extended beyond Buncombe county. John Queen, long time solicitor of the twelfth district, has a strong political following. He had been doing some active preliminary campaigning for congress before his nephew, Richard Queen, made his surprise entry two months ago. Since then "Mr. John" has been pretty quiet. Several aspirants for political leadership in Buncombe apparently are more concerned about county officers than congressmen or governors.

COMBINATION—The circumstances outlined here combine to make the twelfth district a political barometer. Certainty of a race for congress enables the politicians to get started earlier in lining up sides. Uncertainty about the district having a strong candidate for governor leaves the way open for political horse trading later. The fact that the twelfth is the second heaviest voting district in the state, exceeded only by the ninth, and usually votes more solidly one way than any other part of the state, and only on rare occasions fails to go with state majorities, adds prestige to its barometric status. Astute politically minded persons all over the state will carefully watch developments in the twelfth district during the next few weeks.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

MANY ANGLES

(Washington Daily News)
The mandatory injunction ordering them to place a fifth set of buyers on the Kingston to tobacco market has many angles which are well worth considering.

Henry L. Stevens issued the mandatory injunction, and recently he heard the arguments of the five companies who are seeking to dissolve the order. He will hear both sides again on October 13.

To date the order requiring the fifth set of buyers for Kingston has not met with compliance by the companies. They have so far refused to place another set of buyers there.

Judge Stevens earlier had ordered them to do so. Are we not treading on thin ice when we tell a tobacco company that it has to place another buyer on a market?

If a tobacco company can be told to place another buyer on the Kingston market by such legal proceeding, then what is to keep someone from getting an injunction forcing the Washington Daily News to put on another reporter in the news room?

Perhaps one of our merchants could have an injunction served on him requiring him to hire another bookkeeper for his office force. Or to get down to brass tacks, what is to keep someone from getting an injunction requiring the warehouses to hire another set of weighmasters? This thing could have drastic repercussions. The law is attempting to step in and tell a private company that it must buy more tobacco in Kingston by adding another buyer. As we have said before Washington and all other markets could well adopt the same procedure to gain another set of buyers.

We assume that a definite need must be shown before such an injunction can be made permanent. But when all tobacco markets are blocked at one time, is that not evidence that more buyers are needed everywhere and not just Kingston alone? Washington has been blocked until recently for several weeks. And does not such an injunction place the judge in the position of where he knows more about running the tobacco business than the companies who are buying the tobacco?

As we say, there is no telling where this thing could end. It is dangerous in many ways. Most people probably do not realize that we are already marketing tobacco too rapidly. It is not more buyers we need. It is a longer season with less hurry and fewer buyers perhaps.

When we try to force a company to take action which it considers is against the policy of the company, then maybe we have infringed on the right of that company to operate its business according to sound business principles.

This matter is a serious one in the tobacco industry, both from the farmer, warehouse, and company standpoint.

KINSTON'S CASE

(Wilson Daily Times)
Ever since Greenville received its fifth set of buyers, Rocky Mount and Kinston have been chafing. Why can't they have markets on a par with Wilson and Greenville? Two seasons ago, breaking over the traces, they established the fifth sale; but later it was thrown out on a court order. Now Kinston has gone to court in her own right, getting a mandatory injunction compelling the companies to put on a fifth set of buyers.

We don't know what animated the court; but we do know that if this injunction is sustained, it will have a signal effect on the tobacco markets all over the South. For if Kinston can win such an action so can all the other markets. It will compel the companies to put on many unnecessary buyers which they will claim they can't afford. And, if persisted in, it may endanger the auctioning system which has been under fire in some quarters already.

For the court, if it sustains that injunction, is telling a company how many it must employ. For our part, we would think that unconstitutional. It would be the same as if a similar court told a store how many clerks to hire, a definite invasion of the private rights of that employer. But it is its point, is ready for desperate measures; if it can't win by arbitrarily establishing a fifth sale, it hopes in some other way to win. It'll mean a lot of repercussions if by chance Kinston wins.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER
Shortages of materials, higher operating costs and controlled margins are causing many business executives to re-examine their distribution patterns these days. In many of these studies, someone usually suggests, "Let's cut out the little fellows. We do not make anything on them anyway."

Sometimes this step will prove financially sound. Even the proprietor of a very small business realizes he doesn't make much, if anything, on an order delivered beyond his normal delivery area. But cutting out the little fellows isn't always sound.

Let's take the case of the Nemo Corp. This is a fictitious name, but the details have occurred in many companies.

A young accountant dashed up to the boss one day and said, "This is terrible. We are making 80 per cent of our sales to 20 per cent of our accounts. We are making sales of $400,000 a month to 200 large outlets and only $100,000 in sales to small ones. There are 42 cents worth of labor, materials and handling costs to each item and 35 cents in overhead. It costs us 7 cents an item to sell to the large outlets at 90 cents, and 23 cents an item to sell to the smaller outlets at $1. At that rate, we make 6 cents an item from the large outlets and just break even on the smaller ones. Now that materials are getting scarce, we can increase profits by cutting off the little fellows."

"Interesting," said the boss, who had been there before. "Let's carry it a little further. According to your figures, we are making $26,664 a month on the big fellows, nothing on the little guys. Also according to your figures, the little fellows are carrying $35,000 of our overhead. If we cut them out we'll have to charge that overhead against the other $400,000 in sales. That would give us a net loss of $8,000 a month, wouldn't it?"

"Gee," said the embarrassed accountant, "it looks as if we are making all our money from the outlets we don't make a cent from!"

That, of course, was as bad as his first analysis. The Nemo company needs both large and small outlets to make a profit. And that may be for many other companies planning to cut off small outlets.

RUSH TO BEAT TAX

MAY BENEFIT STATES

Several states are going to reap an unexpected tax windfall.

Congress is increasing the tax rate on alcoholic beverages. It is certain that before the tax goes into effect, many customers will stock up to escape the higher levy. In some states, package stores are already advertising that purchases made now may save around $5 a case. And this rise in sales will pour hundreds of thousands of dollars into treasuries of states that already tax the stuff.

How important it will be is indicated by the fact that ten states raised or extended beverage taxes this year, while only two cut them. Several states collect more than $5,000,000 a year in levies on potatoes.

MERCHANDISING GUIDE

TO AID RETAILERS

A new merchandising and advertising planning service is being introduced by the Bureau of Advertising, A. N. P. A., in a nationwide effort to help retailers build sales volume.

The chief tool is an "Annual Time Table of Retail Opportunities," which is a study of seasonal buying activities designed to help retailers time their buying and advertising to coincide with peak consumer interest in various lines of merchandise. The study is available through the 1,000 newspapers that are members of the bureau.

MORE CITIES LEASE

MOTOR VEHICLES

More cities are leasing, instead of buying, autos for use in municipal business, the International City Managers' Association says. Cities usually pay rent and buy gasoline, oil and insurance.

The trend to leasing by cities results from efforts to increase investment, and from lack of maintenance facilities in some cities.

There is a similar trend in private business, but for a different reason. Many companies can reduce their income taxes by leasing, instead of buying, autos and trucks.

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK —(AP)—Will the allies employ atom bombs to shorten the war in Korea?

What is behind Joe Stalin's announcement that the Russians have exploded a test atom bomb but they don't plan to use it against the United States?

To get the answers to these timely questions I went to call on my old friend, Col. Amos Frothing, U. S. A. (Retired). The Colonel is a frosty old Cavalry officer—completely imaginary—who says he quit the army in 1909 because the administration of President William Howard Taft was so peaceful it made him nervous.

As usual I found the old boy poring over antique war maps in his study with a glass of bourbon in his hand. "Gad," he said, shuddering, "that General Grant was a slipshod character. With three more horses—and my advice—Bob Lee could have chased him from Appomattox clear through Abe Lincoln's bedroom in the White House."

Sometimes it is hard to dig Col. Frothing out of past battles. He doesn't hold Napoleon's errors against him, but he feels that whoever promoted Bonaparte from Corporal to Sergeant made a big historical mistake.

"I see you have a problem, Junior," he greeted me, as I tossed him a snappy Boy Scout salute.

"Sir," I said. "You will recall I interviewed you two years ago, and you said then that the atom bomb was an ideal tactical weapon to use against enemy ground troops if Russia invaded Europe."

"Indeed I do, Junior," he replied. "Up until then the commentators had spoken of the atom bomb as merely a strategic weapon. That was nonsense. Any strategic weapon can be employed tactically—and should be if necessary."

"Only a stratified military brain thinks otherwise. There are occasions when it might be wise to use a shotgun to kill a horse-fly."

I asked the Colonel what about the situation in Korea.

"We're in a stalemate there," he said. "And I see no end to that stalemate as long as we depend upon ordinary firepower and mass infantry and armored attacks. We have to pull a bigger trigger."

"Such as, sir?"

"We are in a stalemate there,"

"Well, Junior, I believe we could do it either with gas or with atom bombs. Many people regard these weapons as immoral. But if you believe in what you are fighting for, there is no immorality greater than defeat."

"If we have as many atom bombs as the statesmen hint, sir," I said, "we ought to be able to pitch them around in Korea like baseballs. Why haven't we?"

"One reason is that the military mind is even more cautious than the civilian mind," explained the Colonel. "I myself believe that if we starting throwing atom bombs in Korea we'll quickly whip the Chinese."

"But that atom bomb is our ace-in-the-hole. If we do toss 'em and the Chinese don't quit,—well, Junior, we're going to have some mighty surprised faces. And our European friends are going to wonder just how much help and protection we really can give them."

"It's a gamble. But so is everything in war and politics and peace, Junior."

"What if we use atom bombs in Korea, and Russia gives the Chinese a few atom bombs to throw at our troops there, sir?"

I asked.

"That would automatically start the third world war," said Col. Frothing sternly. "And I don't think Joe Stalin is that big a fool. He's bluffing."

Washington Letter

WASHINGTON — Miss Kay Nawn, meat grade girl, Department of Agriculture, get her mind prepared for a WAC captain. She knows the quality, cut, grade and selection of meat and how to prepare it to best advantage.

Commanding officer of WAC's in the China-Burma-India theater, the vivid brunette taught meat selection and preparation to Army food service personnel and ran a consolidated mess for GI's and WAC's.

Before joining the Army, the Boston-born Miss Nawn attended a home economics school and studied catering management at Simmons College, Boston. After that she owned and operated two tea rooms, one in Boston, one on Cape Cod.

Since coming to the Department of Agriculture as meat specialist in 1946, Miss Nawn has been giving meat lecture-demonstrations all over the country wherever professional and consumer groups request them. Now that most beef, veal, lamb and mutton is federally graded, she is trying to show housewives how they can let the purple grade stamp be their guide in buying as well as cooking meat with benefit both to pocketbook and meals.

"A successful purchase begins with the selection of a suitable quality and cut of meat," Miss Nawn told me. "The easiest and most reliable guide to quality in meat on retail counters is the grade stamp."

Acquiring a knowledge of the federal meat grades has two distinct advantages, she says:

"You may choose the grade that is suitable to your need without being an expert, provided it has been stamped in accordance with the official federal standards. You can prepare your selection by the appropriate method in full confidence that the meat dish will be satisfactory."

Federally graded meat is recognized by the long ribbon stamp that runs the full length of the carcass. The stamp will show on all the principal retail cuts.

Grading means federal standards in examining meat to determine its quality. These concern shape of the carcass, or wholesale cut; finish, or degree of fatness on both exterior and interior; and the quality, indicated by the characteristics that determine the texture, firmness of flesh, color, marbling, etc.

Federal grades usually available to you are "U. S. prime," "U. S. choice," "U. S. good," "U. S. commercial" and "U. S. utility."

GOOD REASON

WHITE SANDS PROVING GROUNDS, N. M.—(UP)—News-men who recently attended the firing of a Navy Viking rocket asked why the rocket was exactly 32 inches in diameter. After a long technical explanation involving ratio of length to diameter and effects of air drag on a larger projectile, the engineer concluded: Besides, it so happened that the metal plate we were able to obtain made a cylinder exactly 32 inches across.

As promised, the football fans of this area were treated to two good football games over the week-end. Greenville High School looked surprisingly good in its 13-0 victory over Camp Lejeune High Friday night and East Carolina's Pirates did not look bad at all Saturday night in losing to Elon 34-20.

I say that Greenville looked "surprisingly good" because even Bill Kittrell was expecting the worst because of injuries. Quarterback Sonny Scott was laid low with a bad knee and halfback Guy Smith was also out with injuries.

This put Greenville's burden squarely on the shoulders of Sidney Briley and Bobby Perry and both boys came through in fine style. Perry, especially, looked very good although Briley did some sharp ball handling while under center.

Washington High School's Pam-Pack will be a rough crew to tangle with Friday night but if Perry and Briley, along with big Bob Tindal and the rest of the Greenville crew, can play as they did Friday night, it'll be a rough evening for Choppy Wagner and his boys.

Injuries also hurt East Carolina an awful lot Saturday night. There aren't any alibis for losing to Elon but even Coach Bill Dole of the Pirates said after the game that he thought his club "did very well and deserved a better break in the final decision."

The entire East Carolina ball club played a good game. There were moments when they were lapses—but individually and collectively—for the most part, every single one of the players turned in a good game.

Dwight Shoe's performance stamped him for All-Conference honors as well as Doc Smith, the Pirates' big guard. Both these boys literally played themselves until they could go no further. They were on the verge of complete exhaustion after playing almost the whole game in near 90-degree weather.

One thing that a lot of the fans refuse to realize about ECC's pass defense is that most of the time, there were two freshmen handling the defensive halfbacks. The reason they were back there is obvious: there wasn't anyone else.

Sandy Siler is much, much too valuable to throw into defensive work although he would probably do it if asked. John Daughtry is the same way. So are Paul Gay and Jack Benzie although the latter did play some defense.

Claude King played both at offensive halfback and defensive halfback but the strain was reflected in his offensive play. He fumbled quite a bit in carrying the ball from his new position but other than that, he played a heck of a ball game.

The team spirit in that game was something to see. Even Mike Kovack, who is out with an injured knee, wanted to dress for the game but Coach Bill Dole waved him away. Everybody on each of the teams wanted to win and win badly.

Perhaps Reid Staton, the Field Judge, summed it up better than anyone else when he said, "I think I've called my share of the big games. I've seen some good games and some bad ones but I don't think I ever saw one where the boys were hitting any harder than they were out there tonight. Everybody was out to win."

More football: last week's picks (five out of six, I believe) gives this column a season's record of ten correct calls in eleven efforts. I declare I really think I'll quit now—while I'm "way ahead of everyone else. Oh, well the usual prognostications will be here Friday, I suppose.

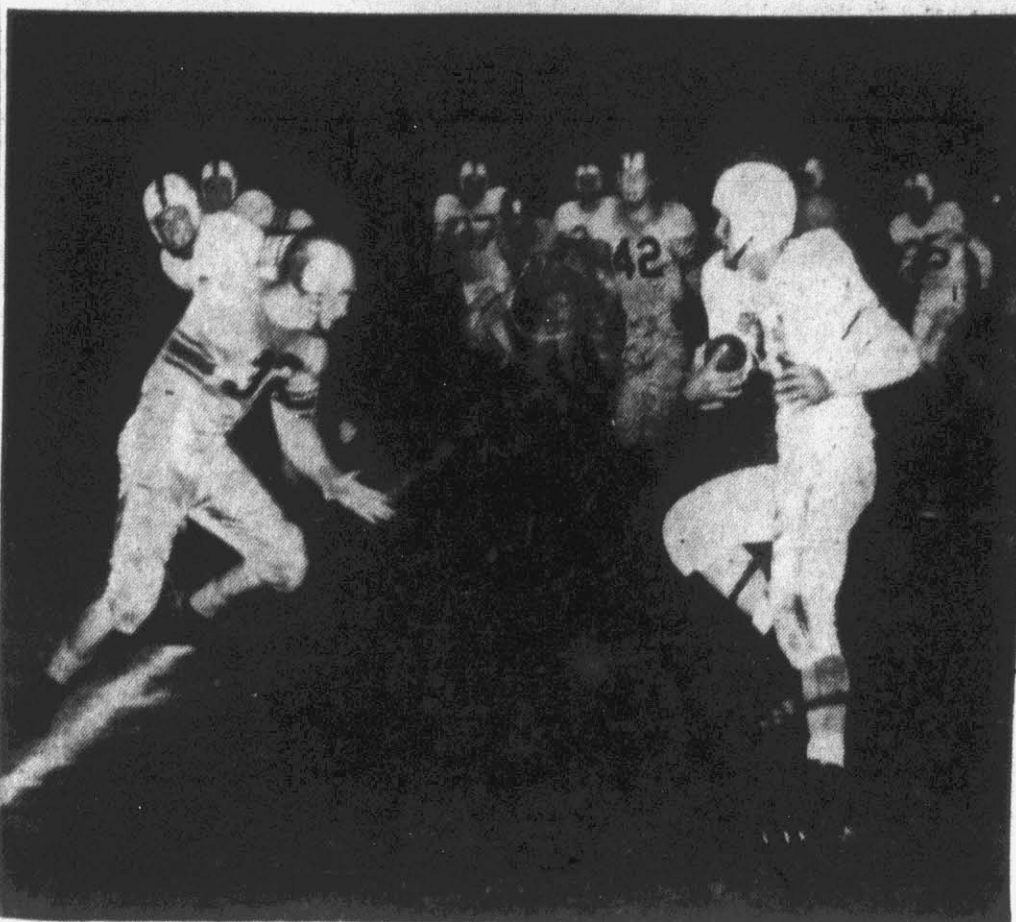

Games this week: Washington High at Greenville (Friday night, 8 o'clock); ECC at WCTC; N. C. St. at Duke; South Carolina at the University of North Carolina; and Wake Forest goes to Richmond to meet William and Mary.

Work on East Carolina's new gym is still going on, but college officials are getting ideas of when they may be able to move in. The gym has supposedly been promised in time for basketball season.

Wake Forest seems to be shaping up as the dark horse in the run for the Southern Conference crown. Tom Rogers' Deacons have really gone wild in their first three games but will have a rough time on their hands Saturday when they tangle with William and Mary.

Both Carolina and Duke received some rather rough handling from their respective hosts Saturday while State managed to hold Catawba to six points in a losing effort.

Elon Passes Sink East Carolina Pirates

Ayden And Rams Win In Coastal

Ayden and Robertsonville were victorious over the week-end in their Coastal Conference assignments, while Farmville dropped a contest to Morehead City.

Robertsonville dropped Vanceboro, 18-0, to make its record stand at 1-1 in the league. Led by tailback Dan Clark, the Rams scored twice in the first period and then crashed over for another in the last period on a 30-yard screen pass play from Clark to Russell Johnson.

Clark scored once himself, passed for another, and set up another TD. He bucked the middle of the line for two yards and a marker in the first period, and was instrumental in setting up a touchdown by Sonny James a few minutes later.

Vanceboro did not seem to be able to get started against the Ram defense. It penetrated within the Robertsonville 30 but one time. It now has a 0-3-1 record in all competition and a 0-1 record in the loop.

Ayden-South Edgecombe
South Edgecombe threw a scare at Ayden's Tornadoes Friday afternoon and held the favored Tornadoes to a 14-0 victory.

Only the passing of quarterback Darrell Worthington and fullback Hal Edwards kept the Tornadoes from playing to a stalemate. The two Ayden backs completed 9 of 12 passes during the afternoon for 74 yards and one touchdown.

Worthington completed five straight in the last quarter for the TD. He threw four aerials to right end Mac Whitehurst and then tossed a 7 yard pass to left end Willis Manning to cross up the South Edgecombe defense for a touchdown.

South Edgecombe, led by Brooks Webb, came back with only a few minutes left in the contest to score. Starting on its own 30-yard line, the team marched the length of the field for the TD, with Webb going over from the 10-yard line.

Farmville-Morehead City
Morehead City, led by John Ballou, gave a dazzling exhibition of running to defeat Farmville's Red Devils 25-6, in a non-conference game.

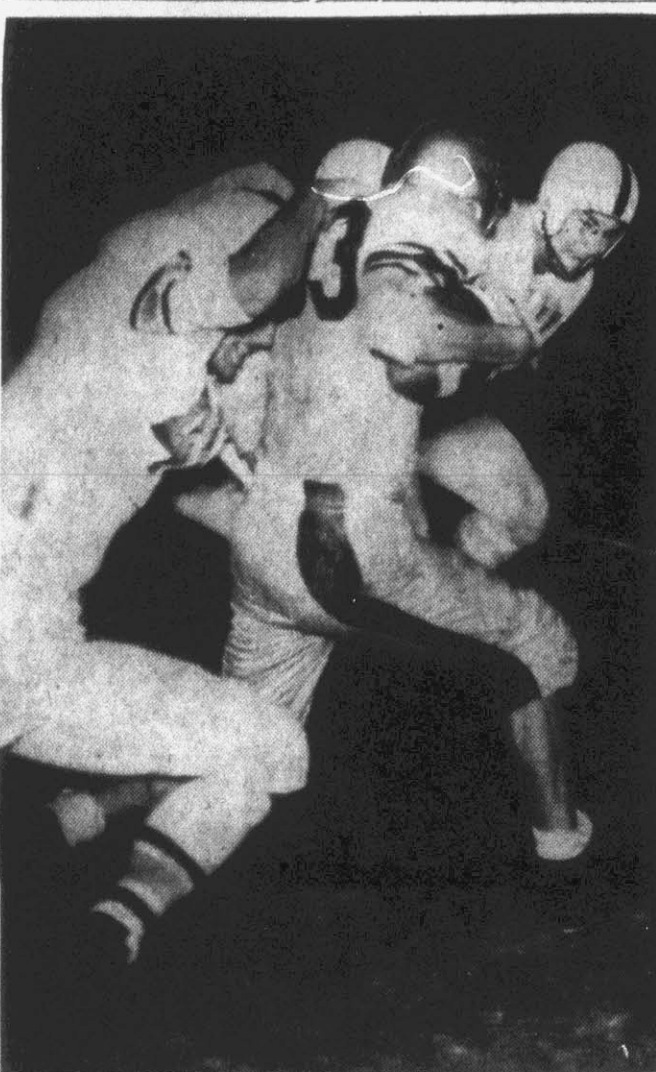

Ballou scored three times during the game, on 50, 35, and 15 yard runs. Halfback Strug Steel tallied the fourth Morehead score in the last period.

Farmville scored in the second period on a dash by Sigbee Dilda, climaxing a 65-yard sustained drive. The Red Devils threatened again late in the game, but were stopped by the Morehead line on the 10.

Games This Week
Wednesday—South Edgecombe at Nashville
Friday afternoon—South Edgecombe at Bennettsville
Friday night—Vanceboro at Ayden; Robertsonville at Farmville

Lenoir Rhyne Established As Power In North State

Two important games top the North State Conference football schedule this week.

Catawba and Appalachian tangle in their annual meeting at Winston-Salem, while East Carolina plays Western Carolina at Cullowhee.

Elon, topping conference standings with a 2-0 record, enjoys an open date, and Guilford is at Emory and Henry. Lenoir Rhyne, unbeaten in its four games this season, invades Tampa, Fla., for an inter-sectional fray All games are scheduled for Saturday night.

Catawba, Lenoir Rhyne and Elon are unbeaten in conference play this season. Catawba won its conference opener Saturday night against Western Carolina in easy fashion, 37-7, as fullback Bob Linder tallied three touchdowns.

Elon took its second conference win by overpowering East Carolina 34-20. The Christians unleashed an aerial attack that scored three touchdowns against a stubborn Pirate defense.

Series Resumed Today After Rain

NEW YORK (UP)—The New York Yankees hoped today to take advantage of a tie breaker in the weather and even the World Series against the New York Giants today.

The Yankees, trailing their inter-borough rivals two games to one, figured to benefit most from the rain which caused postponement of yesterday's fourth series game at the Polo Grounds.

Manager Casey Stengel, growling over the manner in which his club has been playing, conceded that the postponement "is a fine break for us."

Given Sunday's respite, which meant he did not have to gamble with rookie Tom Morgan, Stengel announced that Allie Reynolds, who was beaten 5 to 1 in the series opener at Yankee stadium Thursday, would pitch against the Giants today.

Durocher stuck with his quiver balling right-hander, Sal Maglie, who won 23 games this season while losing only six. Reynolds won 17 for the Yankees while losing eight.

Outfielder Was Really Put 'Out'

DENVER (AP)—Outfielder Bill Bruton of the Denver Bears was knocked cold in a collision at home plate. The first question he asked when he came to was "Did I score?" Alas, he didn't. He toppled to the ground short of the plate after colliding with Catcher Bill Biddle's elbow and Biddle tagged him out. The Sioux City Soos won the Western League game, 1-0, by their second touchdown, an 11

Tremendous Homecoming Crowd Sees Season's Opener Dropped To Red-Hot Elon Team; Christians Hit 20 Of 33 Passes

By JIMMY ELLIS

The largest crowd ever to see a football game in Greenville jammed East Carolina College's stadium Saturday night and were treated to a display of passing fireworks that will not soon be equalled here or any where else. Elon College did most of the passing—and most of the scoring—and wound up with a 34-20 victory over the East Carolina Pirates who were celebrating Homecoming.

An estimated 6,750 fans filled every seat and stood along the side lines to watch a little 160 pound tailback and a six foot, three inch end team up to beat the Pirates almost by themselves.

The backfield star was little Lou Rochelli, up until now a second-string performer, who tossed passes to end Bob Lewis with an almost reckless abandon as the Christians rolled up an amazing 305 yards via passing and a total offense mark of 529 yards.

Even though Rochelli and Lewis were the brightest stars in the Stadium Saturday night, Coach Bill Dole's Pirates were not without their own outstanding performers. For one, there was end Dwight Shoe who in simple language played a game that can be marked as one of the best of his collegiate career.

The star end of the Pirates put on a show of his own in the second half as he proved to be a glue fingered receiver time and again for Sandy Siler's passes.

All told, the visiting Christians completed 20 out of 33 passing attempts and the Pirates completed 13 out of 23. The Pirates gained 252 yards passing and 169 (net) rushing but it can be said without a doubt that they were beaten at their own game—passing.

It took Rochelli and the rest of the Christians very little time to spot the glaring weakness in the Pirate defense. They took the game's opening kick-off and did not surrender the ball until they scored.

Four straight running plays carried the ball for the Elon team from their own 23 to the 43 yard line where Rochelli cranked up his passing arm. He hit Lewis with a five yarder to the 48 of ECC after a penalty had given them five yards. Two more passing efforts fell short but Rochelli found Len Greenwood alone on the 38 and hit him with a perfect strike. Greenwood legged the ball up to the 19 from where wingback Frank Tingley swept around left end on a reverse to send Elon into a lead which they never surrendered. Sal Gero kicked the first of four extra points.

East Carolina racked up in the scoring division next—this time early in the second period. The Pirates gained possession of the ball on their own 21 when Elon ran out of downs and on the first play from scrimmage, John Daughtry tore his way for eight yards to the 29. A one yard gain by Jack Benzie was followed by a 17 yard pass from Siler to Benzie and then Daughtry hit left guard and went to the Elon 2 before he was jostled out of bounds. Jack Benzie lost five yards to the seven but Siler found Claude King alone on the left side and ECC had closed the gap to 7-6. It stayed that way when Hawk Grissom missed the extra point effort.

A 69 yard march by the Christians later in the period was culminated by their second touchdown, an 11 yard aerial from Rochelli to Greenwood. Gero added the point to make the score 14-6.

East Carolina took the kick-off from the Christians but could go no where and Benzie kicked out of bounds on the Elon 42 yard line. On the first play, the sharp shooting Rochelli singled out Lewis on the ECC 47 and shot him the ball. Lewis took the ball at that point, whirled quickly to his left and outran three East Carolina players for the touchdown. The play covered 58 yards and after Gero had added the point, Elon led 21-6—the score at halftime.

Second Half
East Carolina roared out in the second half to take the kickoff but lost the ball after penetrating to the Elon 24. Elon was unable to do anything and Bill Blackston lofted a 45 yard kick which rolled dead on the East Carolina 28. Three plays later, the Pirates had a touchdown.

Paul Gay, the Wilson freshman, lost a yard but Siler found Shoe on the right side by himself and hit him with a pass that covered 48 yards to the Elon 25. On the next play, it was Benzie's turn to play receiver and he took the ball over for the score. Grissom added the point to close the margin to 21-13.

Elon the ensuing kick-off and marched 74 yards for their fourth tally. This drive was culminated when Rochelli hit Lewis with another pass—good for 32 yards and the touchdown. Gero's kick hit the bar but the Christians led 27-13.

East Carolina's final tally came three plays later on a 56 yard pass play from Siler to Shoe. Grissom had returned the kick-off to the 33 yard line and Siler started the forward march with a four yard pass to Hodges. Next it was Jack Britt on the receiving end—this time for seven yards to the 44.

Then came the pass which Shoe took on the Elon 22 and carried over for the score. Grissom added the point—ECC's last—to make the score 27-20.

Elon's final touchdown came on the ground in the fourth period with R. K. Grayson hauling the ball over from five yards out. The Christians had marched 80 yards for the score which they did not need and it was of little consequence when Gero added the extra point.

Queen City Murder Case

By Wm. G. Bogart

Chapter 18..... where he was from. Apparently he and Jeannette were staying at a hotel here when he was nabbed for killing a guy. The only thing we know is that his name is Fred Tolman.

Johnny turned to Nancy. "Does his name mean anything to you, honey?"

She shook her head, and then she said, "Johnny?"

He had been scanning the news item again, to be certain there was nothing he had overlooked. "Yes?" He looked up.

"Why get mixed up in this murder, Johnny? You called the police anonymously. Let them handle it from here on. No one need know."

"But someone does know," Johnny pointed out. "In all probability it's our escaped convict—Fred Tolman. But it could be some one else who was there in Jeannette's apartment and who found my name. Don't you see? Until I can be certain who that person is, I'm on the spot. That's why I'd like to know. That's why I sent Moe, here, up to the Enquirer to learn anything he could—"

Mention of the newspaper reminded Johnny of something. He turned to his partner and asked, "Did you stop off some place on the way back? When I called up they said you'd been gone almost half an hour."

"Oh!" Moe Martin's eyes looked extra large behind the horn-rimmed glasses he had put on to read the newspaper account again. "An old friend of yours, he said he was. We stopped in a bar next door to have a drink—"

"What was his name?" "Steve Eggers."

In response to Johnny's questioning glance, Nancy said, "Yes, he's still a reporter on the Enquirer and still drinking, Johnny!"

"I'll say he can drink!" said Moe.

Johnny's fingers drummed thoughtfully on the desk top. Nancy's glance went to his eyes. She said, "What is it, Johnny?"

"I wonder," he mused, then added, "Maybe Steve Eggers is just the person to help us. He always like to roll the dice at some of those popular night clubs across the river. He gets around, meets all kinds of characters—"

Nancy added, "It's right next to the Enquirer. A lot of newspaper people hang out there. It's a well-known spot."

Johnny said, "See if you can get it for me on the phone, baby. I've got an idea."

Going out to the switchboard, Nancy said, "Don't worry, he'll still be there provided the place hasn't burned down!"

Johnny spent several moments reviewing old times when he got the reporter on the wire. "Busy, kid?" he asked finally.

"The town's a morgue," Steve Eggers said sadly. "There's a raging blizzard outside and I'm stuck here for the night. Why, can you suggest anything, Johnny, old boy?"

Johnny said, "Well, a blizzard's one excuse for not tearing yourself away from a bar. But look, kid. How's about taking a run across the river? This one's on me. Nancy's coming along too."

"Kid," he began, "You said you're fairly well acquainted at the Mayfair?"

"Sure thing!"

"Know many of the entertainers? I mean—the regulars they feature there throughout the season?"

A mischievous grin touched Johnny's face. "Sure! There's a cute little doll named Irma I've been out with from time to time. Irma sure is—"

"Know one named Jeannette?" Johnny asked.

"Yeah, she's a singer," Steve shook his head sadly. "She's of my type, though."

"I see," mused Johnny.

Steve looked at him sharply. "Okay," he remarked. "I should have known! Johnny Saxon doesn't go trekking around the countryside on a night like this just for his health. My nose for news tells me you're on the trail of something. Come on, brother, give!"

"Jeannette was murdered to-night," said Johnny.

The reporter stared at him. "No!"

But his surprise only lasted an instant. Soon he was saying worriedly, "Hell, let's get back to Cincy! There's still time to make the morning editions—"

She would have looked good in rags.

Waiting for the elevator she looked at Johnny Saxon. "Johnny," she said softly, "This really is serious, isn't it? I mean, for you. Do be careful!"

He grinned, squeezed her arm and said, "Don't worry about your uncle Johnny, pet, I lead a charmed life!"

She was silent riding down in the elevator.

Chapter 19

Traffic crawled slowly on the great old Suspension Bridge to Kentucky. It was still snowing, and cold enough that the snow was packing down hard. Chains went clank-clank-clank against automobile fenders.

Steve Eggers sat between the girl and Johnny Saxon, in the back seat of the cab. The reporter had Nancy's arm tucked through his arm.

"Say!" he exclaimed cheerfully. "Long time no see you two people. We should do this more often. The Club Mayfair, huh? We'll have fun!"

You couldn't help liking the guy, Johnny thought. Steve was in his forties, but he had the energy of a college playboy. Quite bald, he had round, boyish features and twinkling blue eyes. He looked pudgy, but he was solid and hard. He drank too much, as Nancy had commented.

Johnny had delayed telling the reporter the real purpose of their trip across the river. Now he started getting around to it.

"Kid," he began, "You said you're fairly well acquainted at the Mayfair?"

"Yeah, she's a singer," Steve shook his head sadly. "She's of my type, though."

"I see," mused Johnny.

Steve looked at him sharply. "Okay," he remarked. "I should have known! Johnny Saxon doesn't go trekking around the countryside on a night like this just for his health. My nose for news tells me you're on the trail of something. Come on, brother, give!"

"Jeannette was murdered to-night," said Johnny.

The reporter stared at him. "No!"

But his surprise only lasted an instant. Soon he was saying worriedly, "Hell, let's get back to Cincy! There's still time to make the morning editions—" ways like to roll the dice at some of those popular night clubs across the river. He gets around, meets all kinds of characters—"

Nancy added, "It's right next to the Enquirer. A lot of newspaper people hang out there. It's a well-known spot."

Johnny said, "See if you can get it for me on the phone, baby. I've got an idea."

Going out to the switchboard, Nancy said, "Don't worry, he'll still be there provided the place hasn't burned down!"

Johnny spent several moments reviewing old times when he got the reporter on the wire. "Busy, kid?" he asked finally.

"The town's a morgue," Steve Eggers said sadly. "There's a raging blizzard outside and I'm stuck here for the night. Why, can you suggest anything, Johnny, old boy?"

Johnny said, "Well, a blizzard's one excuse for not tearing yourself away from a bar. But look, kid. How's about taking a run across the river? This one's on me. Nancy's coming along too."

"Kid," he began, "You said you're fairly well acquainted at the Mayfair?"

"Sure thing!"

"Know many of the entertainers? I mean—the regulars they feature there throughout the season?"

A mischievous grin touched Johnny's face. "Sure! There's a cute little doll named Irma I've been out with from time to time. Irma sure is—"

"Know one named Jeannette?" Johnny asked.

"Yeah, she's a singer," Steve shook his head sadly. "She's of my type, though."

She would have looked good in rags.

Waiting for the elevator she looked at Johnny Saxon. "Johnny," she said softly, "This really is serious, isn't it? I mean, for you. Do be careful!"

He grinned, squeezed her arm and said, "Don't worry about your uncle Johnny, pet, I lead a charmed life!"

She was silent riding down in the elevator.

Traffic crawled slowly on the great old Suspension Bridge to Kentucky. It was still snowing, and cold enough that the snow was packing down hard. Chains went clank-clank-clank against automobile fenders.

Steve Eggers sat between the girl and Johnny Saxon, in the back seat of the cab. The reporter had Nancy's arm tucked through his arm.

"Say!" he exclaimed cheerfully. "Long time no see you two people. We should do this more often. The Club Mayfair, huh? We'll have fun!"

You couldn't help liking the guy, Johnny thought. Steve was in his forties, but he had the energy of a college playboy. Quite bald, he had round, boyish features and twinkling blue eyes. He looked pudgy, but he was solid and hard. He drank too much, as Nancy had commented.

Johnny had delayed telling the reporter the real purpose of their trip across the river. Now he started getting around to it.

"Kid," he began, "You said you're fairly well acquainted at the Mayfair?"

"Sure thing!"

"Know many of the entertainers? I mean—the regulars they feature there throughout the season?"

A mischievous grin touched Johnny's face. "Sure! There's a cute little doll named Irma I've been out with from time to time. Irma sure is—"

The reporter stared at him. "No!"

But his surprise only lasted an instant. Soon he was saying worriedly, "Hell, let's get back to Cincy! There's still time to make the morning editions—"

"You can call from the club," Johnny said. "They can put a rewrite man on the story. Besides, there isn't any story—yet."

Johnny told him everything that had happened, finished with, "That's why I figure our only lead will start at the Club Mayfair. We've got to talk to someone who really knew Jeannette—a girl friend, perhaps—and then learn what men Jeannette ran around with. How about this one you call Irma?"

"Well," said Steve Eggers thoughtfully, "I guess Irma knew her as well as anyone. But as I said, that Jeannette was cute. She wasn't telling anybody anything. And she was out for what she could get. I don't know whether Irma can help us or not."

Nancy put in, "Johnny's in a spot, Steve," she told about the notation on the telephone scratch pad, and of how Johnny might either be implicated in the murder or else put on the killer's list.

Then Johnny himself explained about the escaped convict named Fred Tolman, and of the man's visit to Johnny's temporary office.

"You've probably heard of his escape from the pen up in Columbus. It happens he was once married to Jeannette."

The reporter nodded. "The police have a dragnet out for the guy. I didn't pay much attention. That's their job..." His eyes sparkled as he held Johnny's gaze. "But now this puts a new slant on it. Married to her, huh?"

"Ten years ago. It busted up when he was sent to prison."

"And now," Steve Eggers said, "he crushes out of the big house and first thing he does is knock off his wife—because she's given him the brushoff." He shook his head. "Brother, you sure are lucky he didn't shoot you—after finding your name up there at her place!"

"It does look like he killed her, doesn't it?" said Johnny.

"Hell, yes!" Then, suspicious, "Why, have you any other ideas? You're not holding out on me—"

Johnny said, "No, kid, I'm not holding out. Nancy, here, and Moe both figure Tolman killed Jeannette. I suppose I should too. But there's the possibility Jeannette was already dead when Tolman got to her place. He finds my name. That would explain his forced entry into the office tonight. I can't imagine him barging right down there into the heart of the city if he had killed her."

"Maybe you're right."

"So you see," pointed out Johnny, "we've got a job to do. That's why I needed your help."

"Then we'd better not say anything at the club," suggested the reporter. "Otherwise, every one in the place will clam up and we won't learn a thing."

Johnny said, "That's just what I was going to suggest. We're simply doing a little slumming. Perhaps you can get this Irma to join the party, and we'll see what we can find out."

Moments later they pulled up in the driveway before the big white building.

Steve Eggers ducked into one of the lobby phone booths and called his newspaper. He was back in a moment, and none would have ever guessed the impact of the murder story he had just relayed to his office. He was grinning easily now, getting almost every other person. He took Nancy and Johnny each by an arm and steered them toward the cocktail lounge, to the right of the main foyer.

They squeezed into a small, circular leather booth in a corner of the room and ordered a round of drinks. Steve told them, "Irma's got a dance routine to run through in the main dining room. Soon as she's through, I'll get her."

A sign at the rear of the lounge read: "GAME ROOMS." Well-dressed men and women moved in and out of the doorway to the gambling parlors.

The warmth of the lounge brought back the glow which Steve Eggers had achieved before Nancy and Johnny had picked him up across the river. The cold ride through the night had sobered the reporter somewhat, but now he was feeling splendid again. He held Nancy's slim hand and said, "You're lovely. You're such a lovely girl."

Nancy said, "Perhaps you should not drink any more, Steve. Remember, be careful what you say here tonight." Her eyes worried, met Johnny's. "His life is in danger, you know."

Steve grinned. "With you along, baby, I'd welcome any kind of danger." He squeezed her hand. "Don't worry about me."

They were on the fourth round when the stocky looking reporter brought the girl named Irma to their table.

Moscow's Zoo Is In Market For Wild Animals

MILAN —(AP)— Soviet Russia is in the market for wild animals. Augusto Molinar, director of the Milan Zoo, said today that Moscow's Zoosenters (Zoological Center) is negotiating with him for purchase of lions, tigers, giraffes, zebras, elephants, rhinoceros, hippopotami, monkeys and snakes. If negotiations are completed, Molinar said, he will leave in December for Africa, India and Australia to collect the animals. He plans to bring them back to "Know them all!" said Steve. "Nancy's coming, huh? Say, that's swell. Sure thing I'll go!"

"We'll pick you up in fifteen minutes right there where you are," finished Johnny, and hung up.

Nancy said, "Why include me? Steve Eggers is a wolf—"

"I had to bribe the guy, pet. Otherwise he might have turned me down. If I remember correctly, Steve always went for you in a big way."

Moe said, "About this other thing." He dropped his voice, glancing at Nancy, busy fixing her make-up. "Has she heard from her sister? On that case, we can make a little extra money—"

Johnny said, "And I can get myself killed if I don't hurry up and find out who knocked off Jeannette Evans. Look, sweetheart, you stay right here and sit on the phone. Then, if Nancy's sister calls again, you can get the information. So far, nothing drastic has happened and I doubt if we'll even go out there."

"What if Fred Tolman comes back?"

"I told you, it's very doubtful that he will. But if it will make you feel any better, here!" He took the pistol from his pocket and handed it to his partner.

A moment later he and Nancy were going down the corridor. She looked good in a silver fox coat.

Johnny said, "Well, a blizzard's one excuse for not tearing yourself away from a bar. But look, kid. How's about taking a run across the river? This one's on me. Nancy's coming along too."

Wind And Rain In East Pacific Coast Swelters

By UNITED PRESS

Wind-driven rain lashed the Atlantic Seaboard today as the Midwest and the worst heat wave of the year hit the West coast. The storm cost the lives of at least seven persons in the northern section of the United States.

Rain, driven by a wind which reached 52 miles an hour at times, pelled New York City for 17 hours. A total of 3.41 inches of rain fell. Portions of the city were darkened when the rain short-circuited electric cables. Telephone failures hit portions of northern New Jersey.

Sewers were locked, homes flooded, subways stalled and the city faced a major cleanup job of downed trees, fallen light poles and stalled autos.

The Eastern storm was the vanguard of a Canadian cold front moving to the North and East. It developed in Missouri, swept up through Indiana, crossed the Great Lakes and delivered its pent-up knockout blow in the East.

Cold, crisp weather with clear skies followed hard on its heels.

Early morning temperatures in Chicago dropped to 36 with a high of 56 forecast for later in the day. Below-freezing temperatures were general throughout Northern Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Iowa. The cool weather stretched down through the Plains states to Oklahoma and Texas where the mercury hovered in the 60's and 70's.

The West Coast, meanwhile, sweltered in a record-breaking heat wave. It was 96 in Los Angeles yesterday — the hottest day of 1951. Long Beach had 98, another record.

Normally cool San Francisco had 86 and Santa Ana 101. More of the same was forecast for today.

Chicago caught its share of the storm as it moved through the Middle West. The weather bureau there said 1.19 inches of rain fell.

A large section of the outer drive on the South Side was closed when the storm hit.

wind drove waves across the thoroughfare, making it impassable.

But the real punch was delivered in upper New York state, portions of Pennsylvania and the Middle Atlantic states.

In New York, the storm reached its peak between 8 and 10 p.m. at the height of the city-bound trek of weekend motorists. Gale-force winds up to 50 miles an hour were recorded.

Ships in New York's upper bay dropped extra anchors to keep from being driven up on the beach.

One Queens woman telephoned police and said she was entertaining two very tall guests and the water was up to their knees in the living room.

The cold front was expected to cover most of the country east of the Rocky mountains by late today. The forecasters said it would lose some of its chill within two or three days.

And they said the passage of the storm front into Canada would be followed by clearing skies and warming sunshine.

Oncoming Car Is Blamed In Wreck Of Bus; Five Die

GAINESVILLE, Va. (UP)—A 23-year-old Trailways bus driver today blamed an oncoming car which crowded him for the crash of his packed bus in which five persons were killed and at least 25 injured.

The bus, with 10 to 15 persons standing in the aisles, skidded on a rain-wet highway last night near here and folded around a tree striking the bus from top to bottom. The bus was enroute from Front Royal, Va., to Washington, D.C.

Rescue workers used acetylene torches to cut out a side in the bus to release some passengers who were trapped.

The injured were taken to several small hospitals in nearby towns.

The injured driver, Alvin Shepherd, of Gainesville, told Lynn Alvey, of Gainesville, that he was rounding a bend when an oncoming car crowded him.

As he touched the brakes, the bus skidded, ran off the right side of the road and turned on its side, Alvey said Shepherd told him.

The accident occurred shortly after 8 p.m. (EST) on state Route 55 just before it reached an intersection with Route 29. It had been raining but had stopped.

Survivors said that the bus had not been travelling at an "excessive speed."

Alvey, who reached the scene shortly after the accident, said it was "the worst thing I have ever seen. I don't have words to describe it."

He said he saw at least four mangled bodies and a "lot of people trapped inside." The injured were walking about in a daze, he said.

Baker's Funeral Home at Manassas, Va., reported it had received four bodies. The Arlington County, Va., hospital said one woman had died by the time she reached the hospital.

It identified her as Miss Lena M. Lunsford, of Washington, D.C. Baker's funeral home identified two of the dead there as: Mrs. Gertrude Rodgers, of Alexandria, Va. (Her two children, James, 9, and Charles, 7, were reported uninjured in the crash.); Robert Vinton Good, of Rileyville, Va.

About 340 tons of meal and 42,000 gallons of oil were produced as by-products of sealing operations on the Pribilof Islands in 1950.

Monday Is Wake Forest Holiday

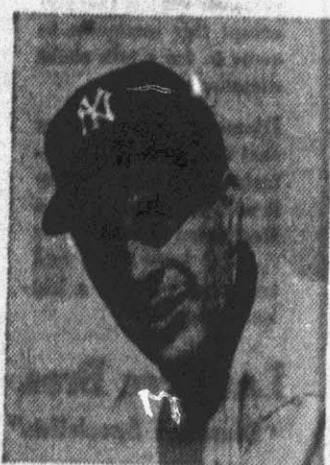

WINSTON SALEM — (AP)—Monday, Oct. 15, will be a holiday on the Wake Forest College campus. College officials said yesterday that the student body and band will be transported here by bus to hear President Truman speak at the groundbreaking exercises for the new Baptist institution.

The President and his party will arrive at Smith Reynolds Airport here at 12:15 p.m. on the presidential plane, the Independence. Groundbreaking exercises will begin at 2 p.m.

The Alva B. Adams irrigation tunnel in the Rocky Mountains is the world's longest.

Sealing operations on the Pribilof Islands, Alaska, netted 60,000 skins in 1950, about 10,000 fewer than in 1949.

THE SCOOTER'S A ROOTER

Little Phil Rizzuto, most valuable player of the year 1950, is considered by baseball men one of the top shortstops of all time. Phil is a real "Prestone" anti-freeze booster. He makes his home in New Jersey and they have lots of weather there—all kinds. But Phil doesn't care. He knows he's got the best protection he can give his car—"Prestone" anti-freeze! "No matter how cold it gets or how warm it is between cold spells, I know I'm safe with 'Prestone' anti-freeze," says Phil. "I put 'Prestone' anti-freeze in my car before the first freeze. One shot lasts all winter. I don't know another anti-freeze that gives the same degree of protection. That's why it's 'Prestone' brand for me!"

Dealers have "PRESTONE" Anti-Freeze NOW...

They may not have it later!

You're SET
One shot lasts all winter!

You're SAFE
No rust...no foam...no freeze...no failure!

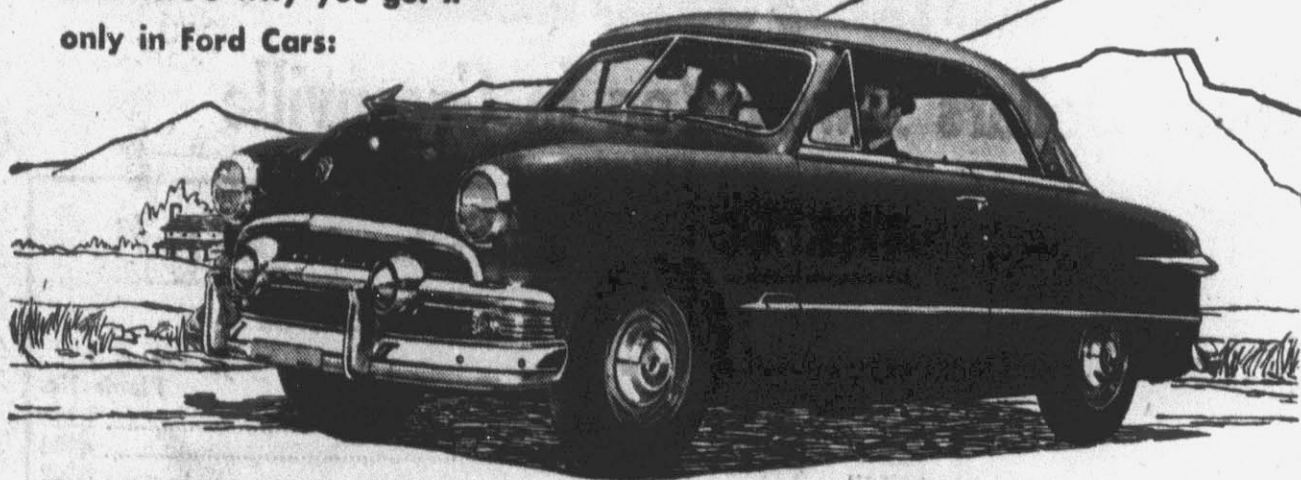

You're SURE
No other anti-freeze gives the same degree of protection!

Here's why Fordomatic puts them all in the past!

For the past year, automotive writers, engineers and owners have been raving about a new kind of automatic driving... and here's why you get it only in Ford Cars:

All the power you need when you need it is yours with Fordomatic. You'll find it the most thrilling experience you ever had. You'll discover the advantages of having... the smooth going that automatic drives employing torque converters can give you... plus the zip, control, and savings that cars with automatic gears can give you. For Fordomatic combines the finer features of all other automatic drives!

Some automatics have this

The automatic drive some cars offer you is a torque converter which multiplies torque without the use of gears. Its advantage is a smooth flow of power. Its disadvantage is a smaller range of torque multiplication which requires more power from the engine and an uneconomical axle ratio which increases costs.

Some automatics have this

Other cars offer an automatic drive that uses automatic gears (as illustrated in simplified form at right) instead of a torque converter. The advantage here is more "go," more control and greater economy. The disadvantage is that this system is not as smooth, nor as jerk-free as a torque converter.

IT GIVES YOU INSTANT "GO!"

Because Fordomatic gives you a combination of the best features of all other automatic drives, it delivers instant "go" for exceptionally easy, exceptionally smooth starting, passing, and hill climbing. Its extra Intermediate Gear gives you a push of extra power any time you want it... extra braking power, too, that's outstandingly smooth.

IT PRACTICALLY DRIVES ITSELF!

Fordomatic drives your car for you better than you could ever drive it yourself. It brings you a completely new thrill in no-shift-lever, no-dutch-pedal driving, because its development began where all other automatic drives left off.

But Fordomatic has both

Yes, Fordomatic has a torque converter plus automatic gears. It brings you only the advantages of both drives and eliminates the disadvantages.

Unlike cars with only a torque converter (which start and cruise all in one drive gear), Fordomatic starts fast and smooth in Intermediate Gear then shifts itself into Drive Gear.

Defense Expert Warns U.S. Open To A-Bombs

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Russia has exploded its second atomic bomb. What might that mean in terms of living in the United States? The United Press asked a leading civil defense expert and former high ranking naval officer whose answer is embodied in the following dispatch.)

By FRANK TREMAINE
United Press Staff Correspondent
LOS ANGELES (UP)—Russia probably is capable of delivering simultaneous atomic attacks by air and sea against almost every major city in the United States, Rear Adm. Robert W. Berry (Ret.) said today.

He said Russia probably is capable of delivering simultaneous atomic attacks by air and sea against almost every major city in this country. Such strikes could almost completely interrupt American industry upon which our ability to fight a continuing war depends.

Berry, who made a study of civil defense needs while serving as special assistant to the late Secretary of Defense James A. Forrestal, said resumption of industrial production after an atomic attack depends on the nation's "rehabilitative powers." These depend on civil defense preparedness, which lags because of public apathy and economic inaction.

"Congress, by its lack of action, has done much to solidify the apathy of our people toward civil defense," he said. "We need the stuff to start with. We haven't got it."

Berry, a veteran of two wars, now is civil defense director for Los Angeles which has a population of 2,028,000.

One outmoded atomic bomb might kill and maim 100,000 persons in Los Angeles, he said.

"One Nagasaki-type atom bomb dropped in the middle of Los Angeles at mid-day would kill 75,000 persons and wound 105,000, according to our estimates," Berry said.

"We believe there would be 90 per cent death and destruction within a radius of half a mile from the center of the blast. The remaining 10 per cent would be wounded.

He said modern atomic bombs are much more powerful than the two dropped on Japan in 1945 and a major attack probably would involve more than one bomb and might include other weapons such as incendiary bombs and germ war.

Casualties and destruction in other cities probably would be equally as heavy and might be worse, Berry said. Los Angeles has gone ahead on its own in civil defense and he said federal officials rate it one of the 10 best-prepared major cities in the country.

Popular conception of an atomic attack visualizes waves of bombers. Berry said the initial strike might come from the sea or be a coordinated sea-air attack. He pointed out that Russia is believed to have at least 300 submarines which could be fitted with catapults for guided missiles such as those already tested by the United States.

usual, inventors quickly countered by inventing the gas mask. At the start of World War II there was talk about entire populations being wiped out by gas, but neither side ever used it. The offense and the defense had reached such delicate balance that there was no profit in poison gas for either opponent.

It is not beyond the realm of possibility that something of that kind will happen to the atomic weapon. It may be refined to the point where soldiers will fire atomic war-heads at each other, but that civilian populations will not be subjected to atomic attack. If so, it will be because both sides in the next war will realize that unlimited atomic warfare will mean the destruction of everybody.

What profit is there in conquering a world that contains nothing but ruins piled high with bodies?

In loving memory of my dearest beloved son, Walter F. Freeman, who passed away two years ago on October 8, 1949. I was sitting beside your bedside when you died looking into your gentle eyes. He left 10 sisters and three brothers.

God saw the road was getting rough.
The hill was hard to climb
He gently closed his loving eyes
And whispered, Peace be thine.
His weary nights are past.
His weary patient, worn-out frame
Has found sweet rest at last.

Pleven Ahead

PARIS—(AP)—Premier Rene Pleven's coalition forces won the first part of France's local elections today by collecting 43.2 per cent of the votes, but the Communists got more than any single party.

The results indicated that French voters approved cooperation with the United States and participation in the North Atlantic Pact, for the coalition stands for that kind of foreign policy.

The Communists got 1,524,443 votes, or 23.8 per cent, in the election for the country's 90-odd departmental (county) councils.

Driver Arrested After Collision

Greenville police arrested James D. Shirley, 33, Negro, 1306 Greene Street, Saturday night on the charge of passing on a hill after a collision in which five persons were injured and two vehicles damaged.

Damage to Shirley's truck, was estimated to be $1,200; damage to Rodgers' car, $800. Both vehicles had to be towed to garages for repairs, police stated.

The injured, all Negroes, are: James D. Shirley, truck driver, lacerations and shoulder injury; James T. Winstead, face and leg lacerations; Daniel Winstead, lacerations and bruises; Annie L. Rodgers, leg and head lacerations, and C. Rodgers, arm and hand lacerations. All are residents of Greenville.

Firemen Bring Prevention Message To City Schools

Fire Prevention Week began in Greenville this morning when Fire Chief George Gardner and uniformed firemen visited the grammar schools to distribute leaflets and information on fire hazards.

Preparations for Fire Prevention Week have been made in the high school with the Junior and Senior dramatics class producing radio and stage plays on fire prevention. O. E. Dowd, principal, said several unannounced fire drills will be held during the week.

Fire Chief Gardner will speak at an assembly in the high school Wednesday on fire prevention and will bring some fire fighting equipment with him. Dowd also said the students have been asked to check the attics and basements of their homes for fire hazards.

Activities for fire prevention will continue with "clean-up" days set aside for the removal of fire hazards. Tomorrow has been designated as "clean-up" day in homes and business establishments. Uncalled.

Each of the three police shifts check the jail twice during their eight hours on duty for fires or sickness among the prisoners. Langston stated.

Four other prisoners in the cell at the time of the escape did not attempt to leave, the officers stated.

Notice of the escape has been flashed to the FBI and the SBI by the local Police Department.

As yet no trace of the three escapees has been uncovered.

Fair Attendance . . .

"It was the biggest crowd and the best Fair Pitt County has ever had," he said. He attributed the attendance record to the new location, better building and parking facilities, and better exhibits.

In addition to the crowd, "The exhibits were the best we've ever had," he said.

Arrests were on the following charges:

Attempted rape, 1.
Aggravated assault, 16.

Chief Langston's report shows that police investigated 30 accidents; investigated 22 dog complaints, and checked on a total of 303 complaints during September.

Total number cases known to police in September, 369.
Total cases cleared by arrest during September, 296—or 80.2 per cent cleared by arrest.

Police patrol cars and motorcycles traveled the following distances during September: Car 51, 739 miles; car 52, 5,301 miles; car 53, 4,957 miles; car 54, 440 miles; motorcycles 1, 662 miles; motorcycle 2, 960 miles; dog catcher, 829 miles. Total, 13,888 miles during September.

formed firemen will visit business establishments checking on fire hazards.

Wednesday has been designated as "clean-up" day in the city and people are urged to get rid of grass on lots and trash in the alleys and gutters. The City Street Department will co-operate in removing trash.

Today and tomorrow white and colored Boy Scouts, under the direction of Howard K. Hunter, field representative, will go to more than 2,000 homes in the city with inspection blanks for home owners to use in inspecting and removing fire hazards.

Fire Prevention Week here is being sponsored by the Civic Affairs Committee of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

Those 'New . . .

flown back here from his "fantastic new weapons" speech in San Francisco when Senator McMahon (D-Conn.) made a Senate speech which really drew attention.

He called for all-out mass production of atomic weapons to equip a mighty atomic army, navy and air force. Could such a thing be done? McMahon was in a good position to know, since he's chairman of the Committee.

He said "I am here to report . . . that the atomic bottlenecks are being broken. The day is coming when the quantity of atomic weapons we are capable of making could be sufficient, beyond any question, to serve as the paramount instrument of victory."

On Oct. 1 McMahon told reporters Secretary of Defense Lovett and the Joint Chiefs of Staff, appearing before his committee, had "vigorously recommended a major expansion program."

So the kettle was kept boiling and late last week Gordon Dean, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, added to the national guessing game about new weapons with a speech in California. He said:

"Through our atomic energy expansion program and recent technological developments in the atomic weapons field, we are entering an era where our power to wage warfare with atomic devices is so great, even in comparison with the recent past, that our fundamental concepts of what atomic warfare is and what it might mean to us must undergo a revolutionary change. xxx

"We have reached the stage where we can begin to meet the tactical needs of the armed services (troops in the field) while still retaining our immense capacity for strategic retaliation (long-range bombing)."

But all this "vague talk about 'fantastic' and 'cataclysmic' and 'amazing' new weapons must not have been sitting well with another member of congress, a Texas Democrat, Rep. Mahon. He said:

"I think one sentence would be appropriate at the moment: Those fantastic statements about fantastic weapons are entirely too fantastic. No right thinking person is going to be misled by all this superman talk of push-button warfare. There is no easy and inexpensive road to victory in war."
