Aerial War In Korea Is Kept Up

Three MIGs Downed, Four Damaged; Red Truce Team Stalls For Time

8TH ARMY HQ., Korea (UP)—Dogfights blazed in the air over northwest Korea today while United Nations infantrymen repelled enemy probing attacks in freezing weather.

American jet fighters shot down damaged four others in the second straight day of air battles while all U.S. jets returned safely from the tangle with 50 Communist planes.

The latest battles raised the U.N. combat toll of MIGs to 139. Of these, 106 have been destroyed by 5th Air Force fighters and fighter-bombers.

U.N. doughboys, battling in 24-degree temperature, turned back a series of small-scale Red probing assaults against hill positions in the frost-covered Yonchon area.

Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, supreme U.N. commander, toured Korea front-line positions in a light plane. He visited an observation post and observed Chinese Communist positions through binoculars.

Ridgway flew to Korea from his headquarters in Tokyo Thursday. Friday's air battles over northwest Korea's "MIG Alley" raised the U.N.'s two-day toll of enemy jet fighters to four destroyed, six damaged and two probably damaged.

PANMUNJOM, Korea (UP)—Red truce negotiators stalled for time today, presumably awaiting orders whether to adopt Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky's demand for an Allied withdrawal to the 38th Parallel.

Vishinsky's demand in the U.N. General Assembly in Paris Thursday was not mentioned during Friday's meeting of the armistice subcommittee, but it threatened to wreck Allied truce hopes.

Communist negotiators had reluctantly abandoned their demand for a cease-fire line along the 38th Parallel shortly after the truce talks were resumed two weeks ago. They now were seeking a firm agreement that the line be along the present battlefield, which runs up to 45 miles north of the parallel.

The U.N. and Communist subcommittee members called off the usual armistice session Friday when nothing new developed during the morning meeting of two hours and 45 minutes. They agreed to meet at 11 a.m. Saturday (9 p.m. Friday EST), however.

Brig. Gen. William Nuckols, the delegation spokesman, said the Communists adopted "what might be termed an elusive attitude" Friday morning.

"I got the impression, and so did the delegation, that today was a day of transition—a day of no decision, another day of stalling," Nuckols said.

DiSalle Clings To Hope Price Level Not Upset

OPS Dams Opened For Flood Of Requests For Higher Prices Under Provisions Of So-Called Capehart Amendment

WASHINGTON (UP)—The government's price dams were opened today for a flood of requests for higher ceiling prices from about a fourth of the nation's manufacturers.

Price Stabilizer Michael V. DiSalle said the requests would lead to higher authorized prices for "a great many" manufacturers. But he held out hope that the current over-all price level could be maintained.

DiSalle last night cleared the way for the price increases by issuing orders permitting some 70,000 manufacturers to compute new ceiling prices on items ranging from furniture to salad dressings.

The manufacturers' pricing order was issued under the so-called "Capehart Amendment" to the new price control law. The price increases will be pyramidical by the time they reach consumers because of wholesalers' and retailers' percentage markups.

Other controls developments: 1. The National Production Authority suspended purchases of tin for the government's emergency stockpile and ordered all tin purchases turned over directly to industrial use. At the same time, it planned to cut back on domestic tin consumption, a move that could mean a shortage of tin cans.

2. NPA banned major model changes in automobiles, television sets and all other consumer goods after Feb. 1 to allow greater production of machine tools for defense industries.

3. NPA said jute box production would be curtailed sharply by material allotments during the first three months of next year.

4. The Office of Price Stabilization issued new ceiling price regulations aimed at fixing retail lamb and mutton prices at about present levels. It also issued a price formula for retail veal and calf meat which is expected to result in small increases.

DiSalle said some manufacturers probably will postpone price hikes until the "market warms."

The government's main hope of holding the present price level, however, rested on cutting ceiling prices of other manufacturers when the pricing order is extended to the remaining three-fourths of the nation's industry. DiSalle's assistant, Edward Phelps, said OPS has "many reasons to believe" that it can force rollbacks in industries not yet covered by the new pricing orders.

Times Reiterates Democrats Seek Ike As Candidate

Article Says Demos Have Twice Promised Him Truman's Help In 1952

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York Times said today Democrats had visited Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower in Paris twice within five weeks and promised him President Truman's support for the 1952 presidential nomination.

The visits, the Times said, appeared to be part of a "much more active and organized campaign than has been generally known" to get Eisenhower as the Democratic nominee.

Arthur Krock, the Washington correspondent for the newspaper, wrote that he received his information from a Republican who should know and whose "standing in the nation is very high indeed."

First, the article said, Eisenhower was approached by a Democrat "described as very influential in the party and not associated with the Southern opponents of the President."

Later, Krock quoted the Republican source, "a group of similar type" also called on the General. On each occasion, the story said, the same statement was made to Eisenhower. Krock elaborated: "It was that if, at any time before the Democratic National convention, he would say he would accept his presidential nomination, his visitors were convinced they could guarantee it and he could count on the support of President Truman."

"General Eisenhower's reported reply was: 'You can't join a party just to run for office. What reason have you to think I have ever been a Democrat?'"

The story said Eisenhower told about the proposition to a friend on his recent visit to this country, with the remark: "You know I have been a Republican all my life and that my family have always been Republican."

Krock said evidence was growing that President Truman had offered to support Eisenhower "in the culminating point in a major enterprise by important Democrats that seems to have failed."

The writer made his statements in a follow-up to an article published yesterday in which he had said a "thoroughly reliable and informed source" told him Mr. Truman had offered such support.

The President commented: "There's not a word of truth in it."

Small Nations Of UN Beg Russia Not To Incite War

Probers Claim Red Spy Not Hindered

Senate Investigators Accuse State And Justice Departments Of Giving Czech Clear Field In Learning Secrets

WASHINGTON (UP)—Senate investigators accused the State and Justice departments today of giving a Czech spy a clear field to learn about America's atomic program even though U.S. intelligence agents had warned against him.

The spy was identified by Sen. Pat McCarran (D-Nev.), chairman of the Senate Internal Security Committee, and Sen. Herbert R. O'Connor (D-Md.) as Col. Otto Biheler, former military and air attaché at the Czech embassy here. Biheler now is in Czechoslovakia.

The two senators charged that the State and Justice departments let Biheler travel about the United States and make nine trips outside the country.

Both departments refused immediate comment on the charges. O'Connor described Biheler as a "key figure in the Communist espionage apparatus in the United States."

He said he learned about the Czech during a closed-door hearing of a committee "task force" on Wednesday.

McCarran, ill in a Reno, Nev., hospital, said in a statement issued by his office that Biheler came to the United States in 1948 and left last February. He said U.S. intelligence agents knew Biheler had been gathering information on this country's basic research in biological warfare and atomic weapons and other advanced methods of defense.

American intelligence agents warned the State Department against Biheler, O'Connor said, but the Czech nevertheless was issued visas and never was "cleared" personally.

"It would seem," McCarran said, "that the State Department does not wish to impede the activities of these people."

The senator said Biheler's activities in this country included: 1. Asking the Government Printing Office for all publications on strategic bombing and for two copies of the Atomic Energy Commission's annual report.

2. Contacting a relative of Dr. Ervin Munk, former Czech consul general in New York, on a trip to Mexico in 1950 to coordinate procurement of information about U.S. atomic energy and uranium stock.

3. Ordering certain bacteriological samples from the Army center at Camp Detrick, Md., and procuring "thousands of dollars worth of material to be utilized in research which were forwarded to Czechoslovakia by diplomatic courier."

Aggressive Policies Feared; Jessup Serves Notice That West Will Press For Disarmament Program; Eden To Answer Vishinsky Monday

PARIS (UP)—The smaller nations pleaded with Russia today not to plunge the world into war by aggressive policies.

Australian Foreign Minister R.G. Casey, fresh from a visit to war-torn Korea, told Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky: "Either the Communist and non-Communist countries will find a means of living together peacefully in the world or they will run into unparalleled disaster, with consequences almost impossible to imagine."

"If the Soviet Union is indeed anxious to avoid this terrible disaster, then let it not press beyond the point of no return. Let it act in time and let it act with clarity to demonstrate that it does in fact desire peace."

Delegates of New Zealand and American delegate Philip Jessup issued an off-the-floor challenge to the Reds to start talking peace now, and stop stalling the issue.

The foreign ministers of the U.S., Britain and France held a strategy meeting and agreed that Britain's Anthony Eden would be the first to answer Vishinsky, in General Assembly debate Monday.

Vishinsky blasted the Western proposal of an arms census and limitation under U.N. supervision yesterday. He called for full outlawing of atomic weapons and a worldwide arms conference, of both members and non-members of the U.N. before next June 1.

The only significance of the Soviet plan, Jessup told a press conference, was to bypass the U.N. and delay the start of any disarmament talks.

Jessup spoke while delegates of smaller nations were addressing the General Assembly in the general debate on how to halt the cold war.

The United States, Jessup said, wants to start disarmament talks right now, right here in the world organization—not next June outside it.

Jessup served notice that the three Western powers will press for immediate action on their program for disclosing and reducing all atomic and other weapons of war.

The U.S., Britain and France will ask that their plan be placed formally on the Assembly agenda for presentation to the main political committee early next week.

They are assured of sufficient votes to gain approval of that procedure. Sensured diplomats expressed doubts, however, that any disarmament program could achieve results unless the Kremlin changes its tactics.

Blood Collecting Program Mapped

Several Bloodmobile Visits Here Each Year Announced

Hoover Taft, chairman of the Pitt County Chapter of the Red Cross announced yesterday at a meeting of the Red Cross Board of Directors in the city hall, that the chapter would become a participating one in the blood program.

Taft said that a bloodmobile would be in the county three or four times a year for one-day stands to receive blood from donors for both civilian and military purposes. He announced that a program is underway for the first visit of the blood mobile which will be here soon and that the Methodist Church would be used as the blood center.

A field director from the Southeastern area will be here November 15 and 16 to help set the program up and a committee was appointed to nominate a blood program committee. Those nominated were Mrs. James Picklen, Mrs. J. H. B. Moore, and Dr. K.B. Pace.

Taft also announced that all radio programs on CBS November 15 would be devoted to recruiting donors for blood giving. The Medical Society in the county has named Dr. Howard Gradis and Dr. S. R. Bartlett in work with the blood program.

Lt. Tom Brown of the State Highway Patrol, disaster chairman, reported that his committee was almost complete with the exception of appointing a sub-committee head at Grifton. He said that most of his appointments were law enforcement officers since they had access to radio facilities and carried some disaster equipment with them at all times.

First Aid Chairman Edwin L. Clark said first aid courses were offered every quarter at the college in both standard and advanced courses. He said that Christmas he hoped courses in first aid would be offered in the county elementary and grammar grades and that school bus drivers would be required to have certificates.

Clark also said that Dean Jenkins at the college had asked for an instructors' course in water safety to be taught and plans were in the making for such a course. Chief Guy Langston is serving with Clark as co-chairman of the first aid committee.

Mrs. J. H. B. Moore reported on Junior Red Cross activities by saying that teacher-sponsors had been appointed in the city and county schools and she hoped for a 100 percent response such as last year. Mrs. Moore said gift boxes and supplies were given out and the enrolled classes were receiving the Junior Red Cross magazine.

She reported that many letters of thanks had been received from all countries where gift boxes were sent and that some of the

Byrd Advocates Harsh Measures To Save Party

Chest Campaign To Formally Open Here Tuesday

RICHMOND (UP)—Sen. Harry Byrd (D-Va) urged Southern Democrats last night to take "harsh measures" to save the party from "trumanities," who he said are "a greater menace to this country than Russia is."

Byrd, a long-time administration foe, spoke here at a national affairs forum sponsored by the Richmond Chamber of Commerce.

The South holds the political balance of power necessary to bring about a reformation of the Democratic Party, Byrd said. He avoided any open reference to a states' rights movement next year, and said he did not anticipate becoming a presidential candidate of any party.

MISSES ONE ACCOLADE NE WYORK (UP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur said last night that if he could have one line crediting him with peace, he would "gladly yield every honor which has been accorded by war."

Recently, three persons in the county who requested that their grants be cancelled, have applied and been reinstated for old age assistance.

The property lien law provides for a general lien upon the real property and a claim against the estate of any person who is receiving old age assistance on October 1, 1951, or who receives assistance from and after October 1, 1951, to the extent of the total amount of assistance paid such person from and after October 1, 1951.

Therefore, upon the death of an old age recipient, a claim will be filed against the person's estate by the county through which assistance is paid and the county is authorized to collect from the person's estate the total amount of old age assistance paid from and after October 1, 1951.

The law sets up a lien against any real property owned or acquired in the future.

A survey is being made in the county on a voluntary basis of the old age assistance cases, at the Questions 'Help' Of Justice Dept.

Senate And House Probers Say Branch Not 'Enthusiastic'

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senators Nixon (R-Calif.) and the Justice Department "has not been enthusiastic in its support of congressional investigations of scandals in the government."

The California senator is a member of the special Senate investigations subcommittee, now probing charges of improper political influence on government loans.

Nixon told a reporter he considers the Justice Department "could and should be more helpful" to the subcommittee by assigning some of its agents to help dig up evidence.

He is disturbed because many investigations have stemmed from "newspaper stories calling attention to flagrant improprieties in executive agencies that should have been detected by the executive branch of the government," Nixon said, adding:

"That can only mean that Congress can do at best a hit or miss job of looking into unwholesome conditions because it lacks an adequate investigating staff. We learn about these things when somebody happens to stumble across them, and report it in the newspapers."

A House Ways and Means subcommittee looking into irregularities in the Internal Revenue Bureau also contends it is being hampered by the Justice Department. Its counsel, Adrian Dewind, told newsmen yesterday the group has been unable to gain access to the department's tax fraud files.

Close Monday

City, county and federal offices in Greenville will be closed Monday in celebration of Armistice Day, November 11. The banks of the city will be closed also, but a spokesman for the Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade said the tobacco market will remain open.

The city offices and the offices of the water and light commission will be closed, and so will all the Pitt County offices. The post office also will be closed Monday.

Pitt's Old Age Assistance Rolls Are Reduced By 111 Due Lien Law

By MURIEL SHOTWELL Reflector Staff Writer

Since announcement of the property lien law which was passed by the 1951 General Assembly, 111 old age assistance recipients have been dropped from the old age assistance rolls in the county by the Welfare Department.

Recipients of assistance were notified that the new law would come into effect October 1 when an explanation of the law accompanied the checks sent in August to them. The recipients were given until the first of October to discuss with their family if they wished to continue receiving grants or if they wished to be dropped from the assistance rolls.

Of the 111 who requested termination of their grants, 78 of them made their request in September and 33 made such a request in October. K. T. Futrell, superintendent of the Pitt County Welfare Department, said there are still 950 aged people in the county who are receiving old age grants and 110 of them own some property. "The figure of 950 will probably remain static because of deaths and other reasons and will make

Pronounced Dead, Woman Comes To Life In Morgue

San Francisco. (AP)—A 60-year-old widow clung precariously to life today after having been pronounced dead, then reviving at the city morgue.

The apparently lifeless body of Mrs. Theresa Butler was found in the bathtub of her fashionable apartment yesterday noon. A doctor pronounced her dead. Two hours later, an assistant coroner heard a faint gasp as he unloaded her "body" at the city morgue.

Startled, James Leonard turned to see Mrs. Butler's jaw drop open, then quiver slightly. She was rushed to a hospital. Again she seemed dead no pulse, no apparent respiration and no measurable blood pressure.

His Honor Gets A Poppy Earlier Than Most

Mayor Lester D. Page of Greenville purchased the first poppy of the 1951 Buddy Poppy sale yesterday to begin the official sales of the current campaign.

In the ceremony which marked the opening of the 30th annual sale of Buddy Poppies, Mayor Page expressed the hope that sufficient funds will be raised to meet the needs of V.F.W. veteran relief activities in this area during the coming year. Mrs. Horace L. Vincent, chairman of the local poppy sales committee, opened the drive by presenting Mayor Page with the poppy.

Program On Alaska Given At Thalian Club Meeting

Mrs. Charles Bisette was hostess to the Thalian Book Club on Tuesday, November 6, at 1:00 p.m. Amid rooms beautifully decorated with chrysanthemums, the hostess, assisted by Mrs. William Bryan, served a delicious turkey dinner.

Following the luncheon, the hostess introduced Mr. Charles Bisette, who was the guest speaker for the afternoon.

Mr. Bisette, who had been stationed in Alaska during World War II, discussed in an interesting manner this country which has become so much more familiar to Americans in the past 25 years.

"Alaska is so much more than just a lake of ice and snow," Bisette declared. In reviewing briefly the past century of history, he mentioned that the United States purchased the sum of $7,200,000. Gold alone has yielded 50 times the purchase price, and since 1900 copper worth more than $200,000,000 has been mined, said the speaker.

Alaska is also a great producer of hardy grains, berries and vegetables due to its rich soil and the long daylight hours of the short summer, he added. The vegetables usually are larger in size than similar ones grown in the United States.

In speaking of its government, Bisette reminded members that it is governed as a territory and has not yet been granted statehood. Airplanes are the most frequently used means of transportation and they are very light and equipped to travel in any kind of weather, which changes in Alaska from winter to

American Education Week
Throughout the nation American Education Week is being observed November 11th-17th. The Church has a responsibility and a privilege of uniting with the home and the school to mold the lives of our children. Along with the Church, the schools are teaching that we must believe in our freedoms to worship, to live decently and with purpose, to live as individuals and not as machines, and to give each child his destiny in the image of God. Visit your schools.

Union Thanksgiving Service
The churches of Greenville will have a Union Thanksgiving Service in the Immanuel Baptist Church, 10:30 a.m. Thanksgiving Day. Rev. C. D. Patterson, pastor of Meadowbrook Presbyterian Church, will preach the sermon.

Churches of Christ, Scientist
"Adam and Fallen Man" is the topic of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science churches next Sunday.

The Golden Text is from Ephesians 5:8, 10. "Ye were sometimes darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord: Walk as children of light: . . . proving what is acceptable unto the Lord."

Passages from the Bible include: "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." (Romans 8:1-2)

And from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Let the perfect model be present in your thoughts instead of its demoralized opposite. This spiritualization of thought lets in the light, and brings the divine Mind. Life not death, into your consciousness." (p. 407)

Ministerial Assn. Elect Officers; Register Protest

The Greenville Ministerial Association met in the educational building of Memorial Baptist Church on Monday, November 5, for their regular monthly session.

Dates were set and plans made for many important services and activities for the next few months. The Union Thanksgiving service will be held in Immanuel Baptist Church on Thursday, November 22, at 10:30 a.m. with Rev. C. D. Patterson preaching.

The Union Teachers' Training School will be held on February 10 through 15. The courses to be offered and the teachers for this school will be announced at an early date. March 9 through the 12 was set as the date for the city-wide "Visitation Evangelism Campaign."

The following officers were elected for the coming year: Rev. Richard E. Hardaway, president; Rev. Rashie Kennedy, secretary and treasurer; and Rev. J. A. Nelson, vice-president. Mr. Nelson will also be in charge of the radio work of the association.

The association, by a unanimous vote, passed the following resolution: "The Protestant Ministerial Association of Greenville, North Carolina, firmly convinced that the proposed movement to institute ambassadorial relations with the Vatican would sharply infringe upon the traditional American principle of separation of Church and State, do earnestly protest the proposition and hereby do respectfully request our Senators and Representatives that they resist the same."

Little Theatre Offers 3-Act Play Next Week

The Greenville Little Theatre Guild will present "Tish," a comedy in three acts, Tuesday and Wednesday nights, November 13 and 14, at the Greenville Recreation Center.

The play is based on the stories of Mary Roberts Rinehart and is being given for the benefit of The King's Daughters Fund for the Home for the Aged.

The story of the play is centered around Letitia Carberry, "Tish," a middle-aged spinster who begins on a journey in the Southwest with her two boon companions, Lizzie and Aggie. The excuse for her journey is to get close to nature and "lead the simpler life."

They start out in a second hand car but before, Lizzie wires Tish's young nephew, Charlie Sands, telling him of his aunt's latest project and their destination. Charlie flies down to the Southwest in his private plane to "The Eagle Hotel," somewhere near the Mexican border.

Aggie and Lizzie come limping into the hotel and Tish is somewhere on the road. The car had broken down, and Tish, determined to repair it herself, had started off unexpectedly, leaving Aggie and Lizzie alone on the roadside. Tish arrives in due time, after having driven through the plate glass window of Luther Hopkins, who follows her into the hotel demanding payment for damages.

When the hotel safe is looted, Tish thinks she knows where the money is hidden and drags Aggie off for the search. Tish becomes the center of international complications when she is proclaimed as a lone female spy.

Whether Tish is trying to help Aggie recover her lost teeth or striving to straighten out the tangled romances of two attractive young couples, Tish gets everybody into a jam.

Killing Frost

The temperature in the Greenville area dropped to 28 last night, four degrees below freezing, and there was a killing frost, Mrs. Carl E. Maiden, local observer for the U. S. Department of Commerce, reported.

For this time of the year, 28 was 16 degrees below normal. Highest temperature here yesterday was 53 degrees. At 8 a.m. today the mercury stood at 32—freezing.

Yesterday a year ago, the highest temperature in the Greenville area was 80 degrees. Lowest that night, 45, and at 8 a.m. next day it was 52.

Large Audience Hears Symphony

Approximately 1,800 concert-goers were made up of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra and its North Carolina conductor Thor Johnson an enthusiastic reception when the famed music ensemble appeared last night in the Wright auditorium of East Carolina College. The audience included members of the college community and patrons of the college Entertainment Series from Greenville and various other towns of eastern North Carolina.

Johnson, music director and conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony, was welcomed with rounds of applause by the audience and during the evening was recalled many times to the stage.

The program for the evening was made up of Haydn's Symphony No. 85 in G Major, "Job—A Masque for Dancing" by Ralph Vaughn Williams, and Brahms Symphony No. 1 in C Minor, Op. 68. Encores included Saint-Saens' popular composition "The Swan."

The next number scheduled on the College Entertainment Series for the 1951-1952 season will be "Rodgers and Hammerstein Nights," presenting highlights from such musical successes as "Oklahoma," "Carousel," and "South Pacific." A 30-piece orchestra, a chorus of twelve voices, and four soloists will appear in the production. The program will be given Saturday, December 8, at 8 o'clock in the Wright auditorium.

Experts Puzzled By Large Number Odd Meteorites

ALBUQUERQUE — (AP) — An unusual number of odd meteorites flashing through southwestern skies these autumn nights has puzzled experts.

In the past 11 days, seven fireballs of exceptional size—and with some other exceptional aspects—have whirled through the skies over a seven-state area. The Institute of Meteoritics at New Mexico University said today that their frequency has never been equaled in history.

"In fact," said Dr. Lincoln La Paz, head of the institute, "there has never been a rate of meteorite fall in history that has been one-fifth as high as the present fall. If that rate should continue, I would suspect the phenomenon is not natural."

The fireballs reported by observers in Arizona, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Texas, Colorado, Utah and Nevada don't behave like ordinary meteorites at all, Dr. La Paz said.

They travel in straight lines when they should follow a curved course. Mostly they are silent although meteorites of that size should make a definite noise. They have a greenish color which has not been reported outside the southwest.

One of the most unusual streaked 125 miles in a straight line across Arizona Nov. 2. Seen also in New Mexico, Utah, and Nevada, the fireball vanished in a blinding flash somewhere in northern Arizona. There was no noise.

The most conventional was the one that struck near Oklahoma City, Okla., last Wednesday after being seen in New Mexico, Texas and Colorado. Although it was of the greenish color, it made a definite noise.

Raven Follows Boy To School

CARSON CITY, Nev. — (AP) — Mary had a little lamb that followed her to school one day—but eight-year-old Bobby Anderson can do better than that.

Bobby has a raven that follows him to school every day. The big black bird named "Spike" flies right up to the door and, on occasion, flits right into Bobby's third-grade classroom.

And as in the tale of Mary's lamb, that's very much against the rule.

"It's too much of a distracting influence," says Principal John Blaikie.

No Decision On Convention City

ASHEVILLE — (AP) — The annual convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy (UDC) ended here today without selecting a 1952 convention city.

The decision of where to hold next year's convention was left to the executive board after delegates turned down an invitation from the Chicago Convention Bureau to meet in the Illinois city in 1952.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLAS

UNDERSTANDING FOLLOWS BELIEF

A generation ago the country was reeling with the clamor of a mighty conflict being waged between theologians and scientists. Today that clamor has died down. There are more religious scientists than ever before. Many erstwhile skeptics among scientists have become believers. Also the situation has been helped by the fact that theologians have become more reasonable.

Science deals with matter, and basic to all scientific thought is the fact that we cannot believe a scientific truth until we first understand it. In the field of religion, however, precisely the opposite is true. The mysteries of religion cannot be apprehended by reason alone. They must be accepted on faith. Accordingly, it comes to pass in the field of religion that we never understand religious truth until we first accept it.

In science we understand and then accept; in religion we accept and then understand. Science relies primarily upon the mind for its discoveries; religion, because it deals with the unseen, relies upon that infinite quality of personality known as faith. Religious truths cannot be laid hold on by any of the five senses. Apprehension of spiritual truth requires the use of that sixth sense known as faith.

It was Anselm who a thousand years ago declared: "I cannot understand a religious truth until I first accept it."

Greater Military Strength The Only Alternative

Russian rejection of the American proposal for world disarmament and impartial inspection and inventory of the military might of the larger nations came as no surprise.

By their action the men of the Kremlin show clearly that they want world peace only at their own price—world conquest by the Communist movement. Their action speaks much louder than the millions of words of peace propaganda which have flowed from the Kremlin during the past year.

There is only one alternative left for the freenations of the world now that the Russians have announced their refusal to enter into a sensible program for a balance of military might among the nations of the world. The free nations must continue to build their military might to the point where it will deter any would-be aggressor from attempts to enslave a free nation. The military strength of the free nations must be sufficient to hold the Communists in check, and later it may bring the Kremlin to the realization that its dreams of world conquest can never be more than dreams.

The alternative for the free nations will be a costly one, and it is not the course of action the free nations of the world prefer. But under the circumstances, it is the only course to follow if we are not to be crushed under the Communist heel.

The plan for world disarmament under the auspices of the United Nations proposed by President Truman is a workable proposal if all the nations of the world would enter into it in good faith. It would of course be international suicide to attempt such a course of action without the cooperation of the Communist nations.

While the flat Russian refusal to enter into such a program nips the proposition in the bud, the very fact that the Russians turned thumbs down on the proposal should draw the free nations of the world to a closer unity. Perhaps it will bring the free nations of the world now that the Russian necessity of strict adherence to economic measures which have been proposed against the aggressor nations, but which have been relegated to virtual insignificance by the lust for the almighty dollar.

While we may reasonably tab an international disarmament program as dead for the time being, the peoples of the free nations know themselves well enough to expect continued efforts by the free world to effect some sort of international disarmament program in the years to come.

In the meantime, however, the free nations should make up their minds to tighten their respective belts and enforce strict economic measures against the Soviet Union and its satellites.

Four Shopping Days 'Til Christmas-In Korea

For most of the people of Pitt County there are 38 more long days for Christmas shopping, and for the most part the people of the county haven't given much thought to the annual chore.

But for some of the people—those who are planning to send a gift to an American soldier in Korea—there is less than a week before the November 15 mailing deadline.

Christmas is a time for family gatherings. It is one day in the year when folks travel from near and far for reunions at home. But for American fighting men in Korea, Christmas 1951 will hold only fond memories of the past and bright hopes for future Christmases around the family fire place.

For the man actively at war, the loneliness of Christmas day on the cold, bleak battlefield can be lessened greatly by packages from home which bring a touch of Christmas to the far away fox holes. Packages from loved ones and packages from friends at home will brighten the winter skies which overhang the Korean battlefields, and add warmth to the soldier's cramped quarters in the frozen ground of Korea's snow covered mountains.

The last few days of the shopping rush are too late to bring brightness into the Christmas of the soldier in Korea. Packages mailed to Korea after next Thursday will not be assured of delivery by Christmas. For the presents that go in the neighborhood there are 38 more shopping days 'til Christmas; but for the packages going to Korea, there are only four more shopping days 'til Christmas.

News Behind The News
By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON—General Eisenhower's presidential backers are currently concerned over recent suggestions in prominent political quarters that military men are not too interested in the economical use of the many billions invested by the taxpayers in national defense and foreign rearming.

While the criticism has not been aimed directly at the commander of the West European army, it found expression at the very moment when his visit to Washington to argue for an acceleration of the military tempo placed him front and center on the political stage.

Moreover, it tends to substantiate earlier reports that this would be a major point of attack on his presidential qualifications by the Taft forces, and by Democratic campaigners, if he should become the Republican nominee. With taxes at a record peak, a successful attempt to foster this impression might create a chink in his armor.

UNDESIRABLE—The demands for rigid checks on the military's handling of the present $57,000,000,000 defense budget were voiced by ex-President Hoover, Senator Edward Martin of Pennsylvania, an old soldier himself, and by the Lyndon Johnson watchdog committee, successor to the investigating body President Truman headed during World War II.

Although Mr. Hoover has not expressed any preference among the G.O.P.'s 1952 candidates, he is believed to favor Senator Taft of Ohio. He is understood to agree with General Eisenhower's 1948 comment that, barring an "overriding" emergency, the election of a military figure to the presidency is undesirable.

AUTHORITY—Senator Martin's statement, which was made in his weekly report to his Pennsylvania constituents, attracted the politicians' attention for several reasons. For one thing, he has held every army rank from private to Major General, and he was wounded several times. He should be an authority on military wastefulness.

Secondly, Pennsylvania's seventy convention delegates make it an important battleground. Senator James H. Duff is a leading Eisenhower promoter. Governor John S. Fine, who will probably head the delegation, says that it is too early to take sides. Thus, Senator Martin's attitude in the intrastate maneuvering commands interest.

CARELESS—The Johnson committee report reads as if it had been written by General Eisenhower's enemies. It was based on an inspection of the financial and general operations of several naval and marine bases, where overstaffing, feather-bedding and uneconomic use of manpower were discovered.

The Senate investigators declared that military men seemed to lack "cost consciousness," which is a parliamentary way of saying that they are "careless with a buck." The report recommended that, in addition to such factors as personality, leadership and aggressiveness, future fitness ratings and promotion charts include an estimate of officers' "cost consciousness."

Mr. Hoover expressed his views in giving his support to the Lodge-Bridges proposal for creation of a bipartisan Congressional committee to keep an eye on defense spending and its results. In view of the vast amount turned over to the military by Congress, the former President declared that expert supervision is "essential" for watchdog purposes.

CRITICISM—Senator Martin's talk amounted to direct and sharp criticism of the pre-Korea Pentagon staff, which General Eisenhower frequently served as an adviser.

"Within the limits of security," said the Pennsylvanian, "the people should know what their money is buying. They should have complete assurance that every dollar of the $5,000,000,000 appropriated for defense is not wasted, but actually buys a dollar's worth of defense."

In the following paragraphs, he specifically questions the Pentagon's handling of funds in the months before the North Koreans attacked. This was during the period of Truman-Johnson economy so seriously criticized in the late James V. Forrestal's diaries.

LIMIT—"One encouraging feature of the defense bill," continues Mr. Martin, "is the provision that one-half of the money given to each branch of the service is earmarked for what military men call 'hardware.' That means tanks, planes, ships, guns, bombs, ammunition and other weapons of combat.

"Many of you will recall the shocking disclosure of last year, when it was revealed that in the previous five years only eighteen cents out of every defense dollar had been expended for essential 'hardware.'"

Somebody Told Me

By I. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

The name of this story is "The Clothesline in the Moonlight." It would never have been written if Wife Rachel had been on schedule last night. She had to make a meeting at eight o'clock, and it was five of eight.

"Will you do me a big favor?" she asked. "Bring in the clothes off the clothesline." A few seconds later I had the clothes basket in hand and the mighty project was underway.

If you weren't outdoors last night at five minutes of eight, you should have been. The air was just crisp enough to give your lungs a nice sort of refreshment. The moon was a sight to behold, and the atmosphere was so impressive that even diapers hanging on the clothesline were picturesque.

There are plenty of jobs that the average housewife has that you couldn't hire me to do. But picking those clothes off the line is not one of them. It was fun! Every husband should try it.

The job is much better for parents, because most of the clothes on the line will be the baby's. And as you make the long haul down the clothesline, picking off the baby's clothes, you think of the pleasant circumstances under which you have seen those clothes.

For example, you pick the socks off the line, thinking how cute the offspring is as he chews on his socks. You pick the diapers off and picture how happy he is with a dry one. Somehow, you never stop to think how unhappy he was with the wet one, and how he howled. You might even stop to wonder why there are so many on the line. Then you realize that there are so many hours in the day that you aren't on hand to change them.

This job was a lot of fun to me, but I had to stop to realize that it might get old as time progresses. Then I stopped to think about the great washing machine. "When you have one," the salesman told me, "you don't have to worry about how many clothes you get dirty. It's a simple matter to throw a few more in the machine."

That salesman didn't mention the clothesline, and at the time I didn't have the experience to prompt the question. Next time they'll have to show me a machine that will hang up the clothes.

As I came to the end of the line I was thankful that I had the opportunity to do such a pleasant job, but convinced that it could easily become another household drudgery.

"What we need next," I later told Rachel, "is a dryer to eliminate that task. Even so, I still say every husband should try it. And I thank you."

INSPECTION—It is a fundamental principle in governmental economics that fees for inspection cannot be levied or charged in amounts above the actual cost of the inspection services provided. That principle is completely ignored in operations of the North Carolina state government. Traditional practice in this state is to use "inspection fees" as a lucrative source of several million dollars general fund moneys, which dollars immediately lose their identity as inspection fees and go into the general pot from which is drawn the salaries of the governor and the judges and the school teachers and the clerks on the state payroll; the purchase of fuel and lead pencils and what have you.

EXAMPLES—Outstanding example is the quarter cent a gallon "inspection fee" collected on gasoline and kerosene sold in the state. Receipts from this source, reported by the revenue department, for the fiscal year ending last June 30 amounted to $3,361,870. Because of some adjustments and transfers it is difficult to find exactly how much was actually spent for inspection, but it was around a quarter million dollars. The budget book has an estimated expenditure of $224,000 and a recommended appropriation for the current year of $246,135. Those figures mean only that purchasers of gasoline and kerosene are paying under the guise of inspection fees something more than three million dollars a year for general fund purposes. Inspection fees collected on fertilizer, feeds seeds and other items have similar history, although fewer dollars are involved. Also comparable, but still involving less amount, are fees collected for inspection of banks, securities dealers, insurance companies and other service enterprises in the state.

AGRICULTURE—By far the larger part of the inspection services provided by the state are channeled through the department of agriculture. This department has the gasoline-kerosene, fertilizer, feed and other inspection jobs scattered through several divisions. Currently collections for these services are in excess of four million dollars a year—and the total operating budget of the department is approximately one and three quarter million dollars. This discrepancy cannot be charged to the department now or in the past. Responsibility rests upon the general assembly which has consistently refused to adequately earmark inspection receipts.

CHALLENGED—The system has been challenged by the past by fertilizer and feed manufacturers, and has been protested by organizations representing motorists—who are the chief contributors to the gasoline inspection fund. Another challenge is coming up, with possibilities of upsetting it apple cart unless compromise agreements can be worked out—as was done with fertilizer companies some years ago.

TOBACCO CURERS—One of the inspection fees charged is $1.00 on each oil-burning tobacco-curer installed in curing barns on farms throughout the flue-cured tobacco area. A conference has been scheduled for November 20 among representatives of the department of agriculture, the attorney general's office and officials of the Florence Mayo company, one of the largest makers and distributors of oil-burning systems for curing tobacco. Information is that all participants in this conference will approach the question in friendly spirit, with common purpose of working out a fair proposition. The manufacturers do not object to inspection or to paying a reasonable fee for the service. They do object to forced contributions for other purposes under guise of inspection. And the whole structure of inspection fees rests upon such delicate foundation a small shake might precipitate a big fall.

CALENDAR—With announcements popping all over for the supreme court and for congress in the twelfth district, more and more folks are complaining that time is running out for potential candidates for governor and other state offices to get in the running. Maybe so, maybe not; because time is relative. Officials to be elected next year will not take office until January 1, 1953, or later. But—in most instances their identity will be known seven months before that and less than seven months from now; and in some others they will be known in just about fifteen weeks from now.

PARTIES—Not required by statute but covered by party rules is requirement that the state Democratic executive committee meet in Raleigh prior to March 10 to fix date for precinct meetings county and state conventions. The Democratic state convention is usually held a few days before the primary. No specific date is set in Republican party rules for a committee meeting, but usually one is held in time to call a state convention two or three days before close of filing time for candidates for state offices.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

CAUSE OF CONCERN (Williamston Enterprise)

Two welfare cases have been brought to light by neighbors in this county that should cause concern among an enlightened people.

There is the case of an aged mother who was afraid to give a lien on her property because she was apparently afraid of her children. Receiving an old-age pension, the subject said she was willing to sign the lien and declared that it was only right for her to give the lien. Now, the poor creature is about to lose her pension and has little to look forward to in the way of succor from her children.

Then there is another case where an aged person is afflicted with man incurable disease. The children have advised that they can't even pay the minimum amount that would assure the victim treatment. Yet, the records show that they hold property valued at nearly $10,000.

They are isolated cases, to be sure but when even one presents itself in this age of enlightenment there is reason to have cause for concern about the fate of our civilization. When needy ones are denied relief by their own flesh and blood, it is time for one to wonder how soon the end will come.

In our humble opinion, those who would do such low-down, contemptible things as to deny those of their own flesh and blood relief are more guilty than the fiend who would stalk and kill an innocent baby.

It is bad enough to try and beat the relief set-up as we have it, but to deny the helpless in the name of a little piece of property or an almighty dollar constitutes a serious threat to all that's good and noble in this world.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER

The reopening of the remodelled White House, probably next year, may have important effects on the furniture and home furnishing businesses. It will probably stimulate considerable consumer interest in 18th Century furniture, which has been suffering in competition from modern designs.

Decorators who have seen plans for the furnishings say they are in remarkably good taste, and this has been substantiated by sketches of the project. The decorators, under Charles T. Haight, of Altman's, New York, have attempted to use as much of the historic furnishings as possible. Arrangements have been simplified to get away from the appearance of a museum, and brighter and more pleasing colors have been added in wall coverings, draperies and upholstery.

The goal has been "an American interpretation of the Georgian epoch" in which Sheraton, Chippendale and Hepplewhite flourished. The second and higher floors, however, will be early American in design, with a plentiful use of bright cotton prints.

The publicity attendant upon the return of the Truman family to the renovated structure will probably cause very few families to want to duplicate any of the rooms in their own homes. However, it will stir interest in the designs and colors used and many will want one or more pieces of furniture in White House style, or color and wall treatment just like the Trumans have.

It will profit both manufacturers and retailers to continue alert to trends arising from this situation. Replicas of White House furnishings or parts of rooms will attract attention and traffic; so will models of the various rooms. Photographic copies of the released sketches of the new decor are available from the large national photo agencies, such as Acme News-pictures, Wide World, etc. However, they cannot be used for advertising without consent of the White House.

MYCELIA SOUP JUST LIKE MUSHROOM

Mushroom soup without mushrooms may soon be a possibility. University of Florida scientists have been experimenting with growing mycelia in waste materials from fruit canning factories. The mycelia, as fungus, are while threads which, when slowly cooked, develop a meaty, mushroom flavor, thoroughly edible and delicious in soup.

COOPERATION AIDS FURNITURE SALES

A venture in cooperation has brought success to four Detroit furniture stores. The stores, independently owned, were located in low-traffic areas on the well.

The owners then organized the Better Home Furniture Stores Association and arranged for cooperative buying and cooperative advertising. Their newspaper advertising campaign, built around special cooperative purchases, began August 18 with larger space than any single store could have managed; already all the stores report improved sales.

BOYS WEAR STORES BUILDING STOCKS

Some brisk buying was reported at the show of the Boys Apparel and Accessories Manufacturers Association, which closed last night in New York. Most retailers reduced their inventories and they were building stocks for spring but not, however, at the rate they were buying a year ago.

HOTEL SHOW DRAWS HIGH ATTENDANCE

That hotels expect continued near-capacity business for some time was indicated by a attendance at the National Hotel Exposition in New York this week. Although restricted to the trade, attendance is approaching the 100,000 mark. Chief interest was in labor-saving machinery, such as dishwashing machines, push-button ice-making machines, laundry equipment and so on.

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK—(AP)—Is the bustle coming back to America? Well, there's a rustle in that direction—only the girls themselves don't realize it, says a movie fashion expert.

Charles Le Maire says the present wild feminine rush toward fuller cocktail skirts and evening gowns might force a comeback for the bustle against the wishes of women themselves.

La Maire, who has helped dress and undress a lot of stars as wardrobe director for Twentieth-Century-Fox, is historical rather than hysterical about the trend toward spreading gowns—but insists they are getting out of hand.

"That led to the bustle before—and it may again," he said. "Perhaps you are not aware of the dimensions of the problem, but women after dark now are wearing fluffed out things that make them look like the middle tent in a three-ring circus."

"It started in Europe last spring—it was a gay social season—and spread here," said Le Maire.

"Women used to brag about who designed their dress. Now they are content to boast, 'It has 25 to 40 yards of material in it.'"

"I like the style—it is soft and feminine. It is a return to the 1860's. But the women then gradually let their skirts get so wide they couldn't get into carriages or pass through doors. So they started pushing their skirts back and they ended with—the bustle."

Le Maire says he hates the idea of a bustle because it creates a "unnatural body line—like a rear-uprising false."

"The only use I see for a bustle in the modern world is for someone to park a package on it in the subway," he said.

It is his idea that the flared skirt has crept up without the average husband realizing it—and that it will change our civilization unless its spread is halted.

"I like the big full dress," he said, but—it is changing our lives.

"There is no longer a place for a man to sit down. The dress takes up so much space there is standing room only. Architects will have to make doors wider. Furniture will have to be redesigned. It will have to be elastic like the accordion—able to stretch out more."

"And as for closet space? Already the wife with the wide skirts can hang only half her new wardrobe in her own closet. So what does she do? She takes up her husband's closet. And where does he find his clothes? Hanging in the bathroom."

Le Maire says its time to call a halt to the ballooning style of after dark dresses—right now.

"Why, 12 or 14 yards of material used to make a big dress even for a movie studio costume outfit," he recalled. "But today you order 30 yards of fabric—and pray it will be enough for a modern evening dress."

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON—There's a new career for women in the U. S. Army. Uncle Sam wants social work officers who are commissioned in the Medical Service Corps—to work in Army hospitals and clinics both in this country and abroad.

Men officers, of course, are also being recruited, and so are civilian workers with civil service ratings, said Lt. Col. Leslie B. Starks, chief of the Social Services Branch of the Surgeon General's Office.

"The role of the social work officer has always been important," Col. Starks explains, "but today it assumes even greater importance in view of the stresses arising from both combat and rapid military expansion."

"The Social Services Branch, incidentally, is one of the first technical divisions of the Army to bring in women as commissioned officers on the same footing as myself or any other male officer. The Chief of the Medical Social Work Section is a woman," he pointed out. She is Maj. Barbara Hodges, an attractive brunette who received her appointment in July.

About 20 women, mostly second lieutenants, are already members of the corps, and several are members of the branch's equally important Psychiatric Social Work Section. All women social workers wear the same taupe uniforms, designed by Hattie Carnegie, that you see on W.A.C.'s, Army nurses and Army Medical Specialist Corps officers.

Their big job is to assist ill or convalescing service personnel with their emotional and social problems. They are taking over the personnel case work formerly handled by the Red Cross in military hospitals and clinics. The Army minimum requirement is a master's degree in social work from an accredited school.

"The field offers a very rewarding area of practice, an unusually wide variety of assignments and participation in a program making an important contribution to the defense of our free world," Maj. Hodges said. Pay starts at $3,780 per year for a second lieutenant.

If you're interested and qualified you can apply to your Army area headquarters or write to the Surgeon General, Department of the Army, Washington 35, D. C., Attention: Chief, Personnel Division.

Benny Honored Tonight For Long Radio Career

NEW YORK (UP)—On a bright St. Valentine's day in 1894 (precisely 57 years ago, as any radio fan will tell you) there was born in Waukegan, Ill., a boy with eyes as blue as the chips he's in today. At six, he began studying violin. At 16, he was playing in a Waukegan theater orchestra and worrying about whether Jim Jeffries could make a come-back against Jack Johnson. At 17 (the year was 1911), teamed with a pianist named Cora Salisbury, he made his first professional stage appearance. In Windsor tie and gleaming white suit, he stood in an amber spotlight in Gary, Ind., and played "The Rosary" on his violin. Then the pair broke into red-hot ragtime ("Everybody's Doing It") while the boy winked a blue eye at the balcony.

Who's Who insists Benny is 57. But with television staring him in the face, he's staring right back like a kid. He's nuts about it. "I like television because in it I do what I did on the stage," Benny said. "And the response you get from the man in the street is terrific. Twenty years ago when I was on the road with Earl Carroll's Vanities, everywhere I went I heard people talking about entertainers I'd never heard of before—entertainers on the radio. "I went to Carroll and told him, 'I want a release; I gotta get into radio.' Today the same thing is happening in television. When you're on a television show, everywhere you go people mention it. Taxi drivers, pushcart peddlers on 10th Avenue, big shots in night clubs, they all tell you they caught you and liked you on television." It is curious that Benny likes television for its resemblance to the stage—because it was on the stage that he lived for years in a state of deathly fear. "When I stopped playing the violin and began talking on the stage," Benny said, "I had terrific stage fright. The audience didn't notice it because I never did anything but stand and talk. To counteract it, I'd take on a superior attitude. "I finally conquered it after I took on master of ceremonies roles. But or years I was so scared and nervous that I'd cancel tours and take a vacation to pull myself together. Once I'd Eddie Foy bawled the bejabbers out of me for getting stage fright. He really let me have it." Did the bawling-out help? "Not much," said Benny. "Two weeks later I cancelled a whole tour."

He became a star in vaudeville, a monologist who through the years went out and held the stage alone, talking softly to the audience. Then one day 20 years ago he was asked to appear as a guest on the radio. He walked up to the microphone and said: "This is Jack Benny talking. Now there will be a brief pause for everyone to say, 'who cares?'" Nobody cared but about 20 million people. That's the average of Jack Benny's weekly radio audience during the years since the comedian's first appearance. Tonight, in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria, surrounded by stage and civic dignitaries at a dinner given by the August Friars Club, the boy from Waukegan who insists his age is 39 will be honored for 20 years of radio comedy.

Probe Of H-Bomb Plant Practices Is Ending Today

House Labor Subcommittee, twice under fire, planned to wrap up its investigation of the hydrogen bomb plant near here today and go home. Since Monday the committee, headed by Rep. Barden (D-NC) has been looking into charges of possible Taft-Hartley Law violations at the huge project of the Atomic Energy Commission. The committee has been delving into charges of labor racketeering and whether the DuPont Company and the unions have any kind of agreement to run the job on a closed shop basis. The E. I. DuPont de Nemours Company is under contract to build the plant on a cost plus fixed fee basis. Barden estimated the project ultimately might cost as high as two billion dollars and DuPont officials said the work force might hit a peak of between 40,000 and 45,000 men by mid-1952. In any case, all of the construction unions of the American Federation of Labor and the DuPont Company have insisted there is no agreement of any kind to operate a closed shop. DuPont, however, has made no bones about the fact that it considers the unions a prime source through which to obtain skilled labor in a hurry. In fact, Robert K. Mason, DuPont's manager for the plant, told the committee that it was through union cooperation that the workers were found, and the job speeded. The unions in turn testified they recruited workers at DuPont's request and that DuPont hired them when they did. In the course of the hearing both the company and the unions denied vigorously any agreement to hire only union personnel. A closed shop, which means a worker must belong to the union before he can work on a job, is forbidden by federal law on defense projects.

Bomber's Crash Fatal For Three

SAN ANTONIO (AP)—Three airmen were killed in the crash of a B-29 last night, and one was missing but 11 others rushing parachuted to safety. Survivors said the no. 3 engine caught fire while the Superfortress was on a training mission from nearby Randolph Air Force Base. Crew members extinguished the fire but it broke out again. Then the order to abandon ship was given. Only 11 made it. They were hospitalized overnight for check-up but none appeared injured. The Superfort fell in a gravel and sand pit on the western outskirts of San Antonio. Wreckage was scattered over a wide area. The plane carried four instructors and 11 student airmen. Sgt. Robert A. Ward, stationed at nearby Lackland Air Force Base, saw the crash. "She was headed straight in," he reported. "But as altitude dropped, I could see sparks flying from the engine. Just before it crashed, there was a huge flash of white sparks from one of the engines like a Fourth of July fireworks display." A Randolph spokesman said it could not be immediately determined whether the missing man parachuted and could not be located or whether he died as the plane crashed and burst into flames.

The Sport Reflector

By JIMMY ELIAS

Predictions again today—an attempt to improve that poor record stacked up after last week.

Greenville High School is idle this weekend and it's a well-deserved holiday for Bill Kittrell's team. The Phantoms will swing back into action next weekend with a trip to Roanoke Rapids.

East Carolina College's Pirates will travel to Cherry Point tomorrow afternoon in the big game for Eastern North Carolina football fans. As of right now, the Pirates are favored over the Marines by just about everyone who has followed the schedules of the two clubs this year and I shall not be an exception.

The Pirates have done well this year considering the fact that every time they get rolling, someone—a very vital someone—gets hurt. This year, there have been no less than six first string men who have been put on the sidelines with injuries and Coach Bill Dole's team will have three freshmen in the backfield tomorrow when the starting whistle toots.

Those six injuries this year are coupled with the loss of 17 of the first 22 men Dole had on the 1950 Pirates aggregation so it isn't hard to see where East Carolina has had some patched up line-ups ever since the first game was played. Incidentally, the Pirates have not been in top physical shape for a single game this year. Who else can make that statement?

But, regardless of all the injuries to the Pirates, the Flyers should crash with a sickening thud tomorrow afternoon. They have a good collection of football talent but I'm afraid their defense isn't soot enough.

Moving into the Big Four, we find State at Davidson, Wake Forest at Duke, and Carolina versus Virginia at Charlottesville. Let's take them in that order.

State at Davidson: The Wolfpack is going to have to play this week without ten-elevenths of their football team, Alex Webster, unless the Wolfpack star fully recovers from the lime burns suffered in his eyes last week in Louisville. Even so, the State team should not have too much trouble disposing of Orwell Little's mighty tame Wildcats. The Presbyterian gentlemen just don't have it.

It points to a great game for Elmer Coets who will have the biggest portion of the job of stopping Halfback Jimmy Thacker and Quarterback Ruth—just about all that Davidson can claim in the way of stand-out football players.

Incidentally, there is talk making the rounds of Davidson joining the North State Conference. The conversations claim that the Southern Conference is just too tough for Davidson and unless they can manage to win some games, they're going to drop football completely. They could do a lot for the North State loop should the rumor be more than just idle talk.

Wake Forest at Duke: This is the real toughie of the week. Wake Forest has won the last three in this series and they have quite a few of the same boys back.

Middlecoff Leading N And S As Third Round Play Begins

Middlecoff, out in front after two rounds, was a solid favorite today to score a repeat victory in the tournament that started him on the road to golfing gold and glory—the North and South Open championship.

The Memphis, Tenn., dentist was an amateur back in 1945 when he first won this tourney—the only amateur ever to take the top prize. It was that victory that prompted him to try and make his living at the game.

Today, with a two-under-par total of 142 for the first two rounds of the 49th renewal, Middlecoff stands in a fair way to add to the success that followed that decision six years ago.

Steady Cary fashioned his one-stroke lead by shooting a pair of one-under-par 71s on the Pinehurst Country Club course. Tied for the runner-up spot behind him at 143 were Dick Chapman, the local star who holds the British amateur championship; Jimmy Adams of Britain; and dark-horse Tommy

One of those gentlemen is a little buck-toothed quarterback named Dickie Davis who has gone pass-happy again after a short and unsuccessful tour of duty with the Coast Guard. Another of those gentlemen is Jack Lewis, a long, tall character who makes it a habit to hang onto Davis' passes. They teamed up to put the skids under the Blue Devils last year. They should do it again this year.

Incidentally, one thing that might turn the tide in the favor of Duke could be the play of Worth Lutz. Lutz played all but one play last week for Bill Murray's team and now Murray admitter. The split-T gentlemen mits that he is the team's best from Death Valley might beat the Deacons at their own game—but I doubt it.

Carolina versus Virginia at Charlottesville stacks up as another rough afternoon for the Tar Heels.

It isn't like the Tar Heels to go around losing with the reckless abandon with which they have dropped four games but I always heard there was a first time for everything. For the most part, the Tar Heels are young and unpredictable and they may turn the tables on Virginia—but I doubt this too.

Virginia got the taste of Carousing runaway against the Tar Heels last year with their heels. They like it. They'll get more of the same tomorrow.

Since there isn't a game in Greenville tonight, it might be well worth the time to take off for Washington tonight to see the game being played there between the Pam-Pack and the Kinston Red Devils. These two clubs are easily the class of the North-eastern Conference with the Pam-Pack sailing along undefeated while Kinston has had its nose rubbed several times.

The game right now is being rated a toss-up although some folks seem to want to concede Washington the edge because of a supposed superior backfield. I don't know—I just know that it's hard to find a high school football player any better than Bryant Aldridge. Dick Cherry might be the one to prove me wrong.

Bolt of Durham, N.C.

Middlecoff grabbed the lead even as defending champion Sammy Snead quit in disgust.

Slamming Sammy, who matched par 72 in the opening round, blew up to 78 yesterday. So irate was he with himself that he drove out of town and put out of town on the final hole, then stalked away before the rest of the threesome finished.

A second-round 78 was also the Southern Pines, N. C. Combined Southern Pines, N. C. Combined with his first-round 68, that left Boros at 146, four strokes behind Middlecoff.

Tied at 144, two strokes off the pace, were Dai Rees of Britain, John Barnum of Grand Rapids, Mich., Bob Toaki of Northampton, Mass., and amateur Francis (Bo) Winger of Pleasantville, N. J. At 145 were Max Faulkner of Britain, Doug Ford of Harrison, N. Y., Henry Ransom of St. Andrews, N. Y., and amateur Bill Campbell of Huntington, W. Va. Five players were tied with Boros at 144.

Tornadoes To Play In Goober Bowl Game

Strong Weldon To Oppose Ayden On Thanksgiving

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Sports Writer

Ayden's Tornadoes and the Weldon High School gridders have received and accepted invitations to play in the Goober Bowl in Enfield on Thanksgiving Day, it was announced yesterday by Ernie Davis, chairman of the bowl's selection committee.

The game, sponsored by the Enfield Junior Chamber of Commerce, will bring together two of the best teams in the state. In making the announcement, Davis stated, "We consider that we have selected the best two teams in eastern North Carolina. We feel that we are very fortunate in having such teams as these to participate here on Thanksgiving Day."

Both Weldon and Ayden have excellent records. Weldon has won a total of 17 games in its last 19 starts, while Ayden has compiled a total of 20 victories, 2 defeats, and one tie in its last 23 starts.

Bids were tendered to the schools Wednesday afternoon. Davis said that he was notified of their acceptance early Thursday morning. Weldon was champion of the Roanoke-Chowan Conference last season, and is a strong contender for the title again this year. It is already champion in the Halifax County Conference. Running from the T formation, they have three All-Roanoke players on the squad.

Heading the list is Co-Captain Bobby Dickens, a halfback. In seven games this year, Dickens has personally accounted for over 700 yards rushing alone. Weldon's other halfback, Garland Conwell, is also a conference man. Conwell has gained well over 700 yards on the ground in eight games.

The third all-conference player is Hank Spivey, who is the largest man on the squad, weighing in at 235 pounds. He is a center.

Ayden runs from both the Double Wing and T formations, with Hal Edwards, a 165-pounder, alternating from quarterback in the T to fullback in the Double Wing. Edwards is the boy who was converted from straight fullback to take over the quarterbacking for Coach Stuart Tripp's squad early in the season, when second-string All-Conference halfback Darrell Worthington was injured and placed on the sidelines for the year.

The loss of Worthington was expected to halt the Tornadoes' attack, but Edwards, John Edward Cheek, Wesley Cannon, and Delano Cox, who shares the passing chores with Edwards and does a big share of the running, filled in the slack and now have a balanced attack, strong either in the air or on the ground.

End Mac Whitehurst, who was the only one of six All-Coastal Conference players for Ayden to return to action this year, is the receiver on the majority of the passes. The six-foot, three-inch ballhawk has provided the difference of victory or defeat in several games this year. Willis Manning, the other end, is also a good receiver.

Ayden's line is considered to be one of the best in this part of the state. Heading the way are tackle Randall Harrington and Todd Kittrell, guards Gordon Hart, Norman Skinner, and Riley Tripp, who will probably find the 235 pound Spivey to his liking (Tripp weighs in at approximately 230 pounds), and center and linebacker Curtis Dennis. Dennis has been a demon in the opponents' sides all year.

Will Be Broadcast
The game will be broadcast by one station in Tarboro and the two stations in Rocky Mount. The Rocky Mount stations will also carry it over their FM facilities.

Last year's game was played to a capacity attendance of over 5,000 spectators. According to Davis, more permanent seats have been installed and they are now capable of seating up to 6,000. "We are expecting another capacity crowd this year," said the selection committee chairman, "and that we can take care of every one."

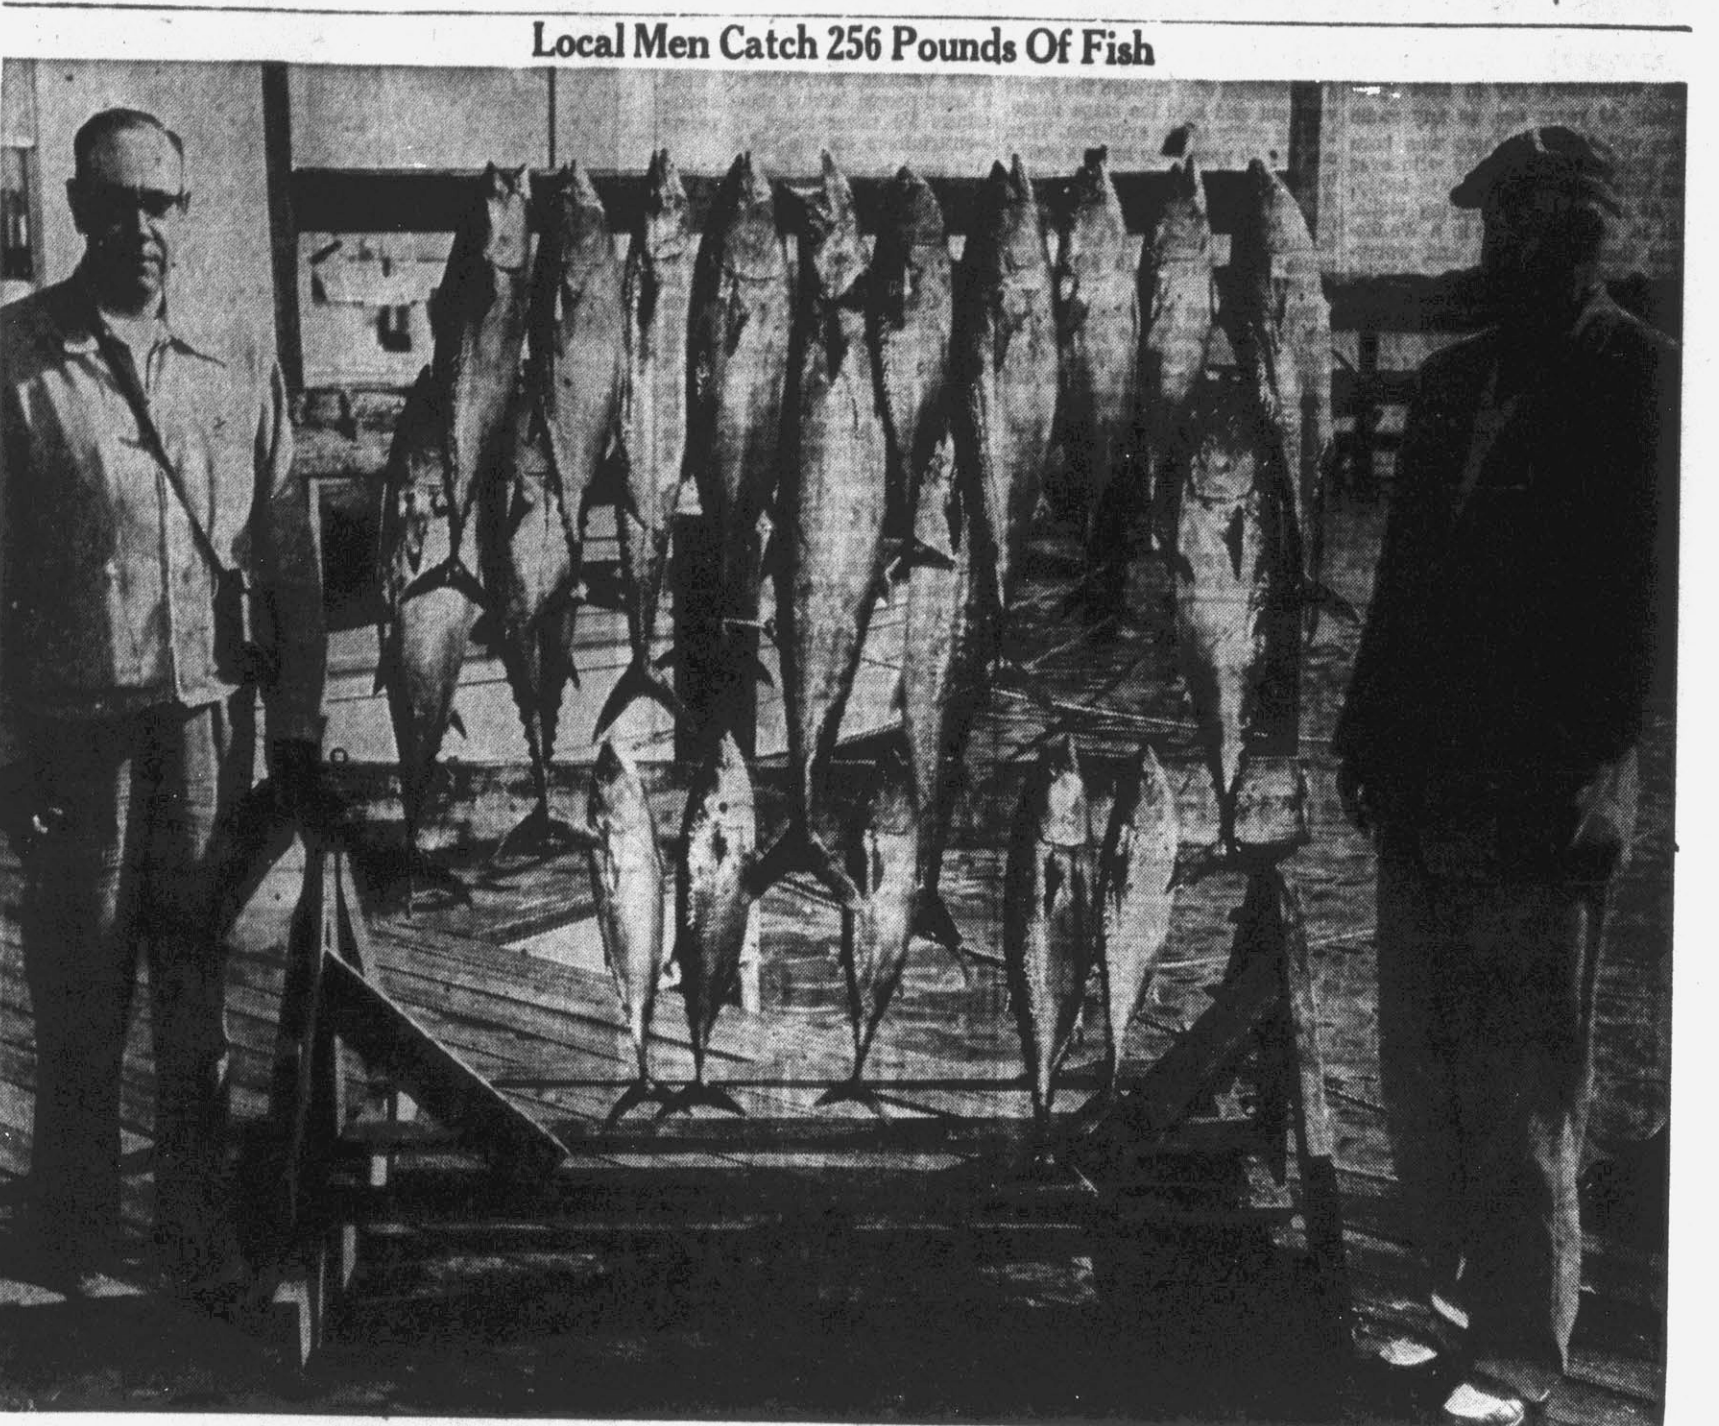

Several bands from surrounding high schools are scheduled to put on a gala halftime show. Sponsors from both Ayden High and Weldon High will take part in the halftime festivities.

Former Coach Is Sought By School

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. —(AP)—A former president of the Indiana University Alumni Association says Don Veller of Florida State is "interested" in the football coaching job at Indiana.

Lewis S. Armstrong, banker at Elkhart, Ind., said he talked to Veller by telephone yesterday. Armstrong said a definite campaign to bring Veller back to I. U. is under way.

Clyde Smith, in his fourth year as coach at Indiana, announced Tuesday he was resigning, effective at the end of this season. He has two years to go on his contract.

Tornadoes Ready For Tilt Tonight

By JAMIE LANG, JR.

AYDEN—Ayden's Tornadoes and Beaufort's Sea dogs square off here tonight in what will probably be the toughest game to date for either team.

Ayden, champions of the Coastal Conference for the third successive year and who have accepted an invitation to play in the Goober Bowl in Enfield on Thanksgiving Day, will be at top strength for the contest. Reports from Carteret County say that the Beaufort squad is also in good physical condition.

Victims of the Tornadoes this year include South Edgecombe, Farmville, Vanceboro, Tarboro, and Robersonville. Ayden dropped its first game to the defending state Class A champions, Williamston, and was tied last Friday night by Plymouth, 6-6.

The Tornadoes will be led in the backfield by Hal Edwards and Delano Cox, with able assistance from John Cheek and Wesley Cannon. Reserve back Harry Ross will also see plenty of action. Line play is expected to be led by Todd Kittrell and Randall Harrington, both tackles, and center Curtis Dennis. Mac Whitehurst and Willis Manning, both of whom are candidates for an all-Coastal Conference berth, will start at the ends, with relief work by Jimmy Jenkins and Billy Powell. McLawhorn, who has recently been switched from the backfield.

All indications point to a good game.

Fighters TV Row Stopped By Panel

LOS ANGELES —(AP)—The State Athletic Commission stepped in today and stopped a row with a compromise settlement between lightweight champion Jimmy Carter of New York and challenger Art Aragon of Los Angeles.

The weigh-in for their 15-round title bout next Wednesday night will be at 11 a.m. (Pacific Standard Time).

Aragon demanded a weigh-in at 10 a.m., and the Carter forces wanted the time to be the usual 12 o'clock noon.

The argument started because the fight itself will go on at 7 p. m. (PST) (10 p. m. Eastern Standard Time) for television to the east, but not to Southern California.

Aragon wanted the earlier scale-time because it would give him longer to regain any strength he might lose making the 135-pound limit.

Injury Toll Goes Higher As Pirates Practice; Sonny Calahan Sidelined

SONNY CALLAHAN, first team offensive tackle, yesterday became the fifth regular player to be lost to the East Carolina Pirates since the season began. Calahan injured his knee in practice this week and will miss tomorrow's game at Cherry Point and the game at The Citadel November 24. He is a 200 pound sophomore from Whiteville. (Reflector Sports Photo by Roy Hardee).

The injury toll at East Carolina College continued to mount higher and higher with the announcement yesterday that left tackle Sonny Calahan was out for the rest of the year with a bad knee. Calahan, a sophomore from Whiteville, was injured in practice this week.

Also on the at least temporarily-injured list was first team defensive tackle Willie Holland. Holland has come with an elbow injury from last week's game with Appalachian and may see only limited action in tomorrow's game with the Cherry Point Flyers. Holland was promoted to the top defensive job only two weeks ago.

The injury to Calahan makes him the fifth first string performer to be lost for the year to the Pirates. The first to go were Ildar Yarborough and Mike Kovack, both of whom received knee injuries in the season's third game, with Norfolk Naval Air Station. Then Luke Taylor joined them on the shelf with a broken wrist and Cecile Winslow got into the act with a broken hand. A sixth Pirate, halfback Jack Britt, has not been at peak condition since the game with the Naval Flyers, having received a sprained ankle in that game.

To replace Callahan at the left tackle spot of offense, Dole has nominated big Bill McDonald. McDonald started out the year as the number one offensive right tackle but lost out to fast-stepping Nick Kanos. Kanos will be at right tackle tomorrow afternoon with McDonald switching over to the left tackle post.

Dole also announced a change in the Pirate backfield for the game with the Marines tomorrow. Tom Allsbrook will start at right halfback in place of Jack Benzie. Allsbrook has seen little actual game competition this year but has been particularly impressive in practice this week. He will be used only on offense.

As it now stands, the Pirates' offensive line-up will have Larry Rhodes and Dwight Shoe at the ends; Kanos and McDonald at the tackles, John Swart and Doc Smith at the guards, Frank Madigan at center, Sandy Siler at quarterback, Allsbrook and Claude King at the halfbacks, and Paul Gay at fullback.

The People Are Delivered ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Exodus 5-15.

Moses and Aaron appeared before Pharaoh and pleaded that their people might be allowed to leave Egypt. The Pharaoh refused. They performed their miracles before him, but still the Pharaoh denied them.

Then Jehovah brought horrible plagues upon the Egyptians, but still the Pharaoh hardened his heart until the Egyptians' firstborn were slain in one night; then he gave in, and the Israelites marched out with their families, their flocks and herds.

When the Pharaoh realized what it meant to let all these slave workers leave, he sent his army after them. The Israelites, encamped on the shore of the Red Sea, were terrified, but Jehovah parted the waters, and they went safely over.

Safe on land once more, with the pursuing hosts of Pharaoh drowned in the sea, the Children of Israel sang a beautiful song, praising Jehovah for delivering them from their cruel taskmasters.

The People Are Delivered

JEHOVAH PARTS SEA SO ISRAELITES CROSS TO SAFETY.

Scripture—Exodus 14-15.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

SOME MONTHS ago, a group of Jewish survivors from Central Europe sailed for Palestine after escaping from the terrible persecutions to which they had been subjected. They named their boat, "The Good Ship Exodus." Since the year 1900, nearly one million Jews have moved into this same land, and they are still going there.

These people were doing what their faraway ancestors did in 1445-1444 B. C., when the great Exodus from Egypt took place. That great outpouring of about two million human beings, their children, servants, probably some of mixed descent who had been impressed by the wonders taking place in Egypt, is one of the greatest mass movements in all history.

Moses and Aaron went to Pharaoh, after convincing their own people that the Lord would indeed give them their liberty under the leadership of these two men. They said to the Pharaoh, "Thus saith the Lord God of Israel, Let My people go, that they may hold a feast unto Me in the wilderness."

But Pharaoh answered, "Who is the Lord, that I should obey his voice to let Israel go? I know not the Lord, neither will I let Israel go."

Then Pharaoh made the burdens of the Israelites much greater. He told his taskmaster to give them no more straw to mix with the clay in making bricks. The poor workmen were forced to go into the fields after the harvest to get the stubble left by the reapers.

of the land into lice, which infested man and beast. The magicians tried that, too, but could not make it work, and they told Pharaoh that this was the "finger of God," but he would not listen but hardened his heart.

Swarms of flies was the fourth, and this time the Lord put a division between the Egyptians and the land of the Israelites, so that the latter would not suffer from the plague.

In spite of the sufferings of his people, the Pharaoh's heart hardened after the plagues were abated, and he refused to let the Israelites go.

The next was an illness among the cattle so that they all died, but the Israelites' cattle were perfectly healthy. Boils that afflicted everyone, even the Pharaoh, came next; then rain and hail that ruined crops; then locusts that ate the last of the growing things. The ninth plague was a dreadful darkness that settled over the Egyptians, while the Israelites had light.

As the various plagues were lifted, Pharaoh's heart hardened and he refused to let the people go.

One night, at midnight, Pharaoh rose, he, and his servants and all the people, and there arose a great cry throughout all the land, for the firstborn of every family was dead, from the least unto Pharaoh himself. "There was not a house where there was not one dead."

The Lord had prepared the Israelites for this terrible scourge. Each household was ordered to kill a lamb on the tenth day of the month, then on the fourteenth day they were to kill the lamb, and sprinkle some of its blood on the upper door of the house, so that when the angel of death passed he would spare the inhabitants of the blood-marked houses. This was to be the feast of the Passover, which, the Lord ordered, they should keep at that same time forever.

Pharaoh realized that the Lord was indeed with the Israelites, and he ordered them out of Egypt with their families, their flocks and herds. So Moses led them forth.

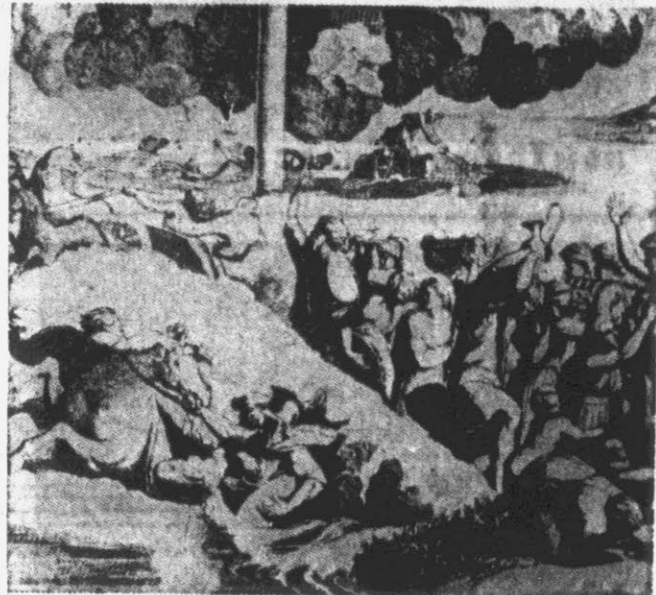

"And the Lord went before them in a pillar of a cloud, to lead them by the way; and by night in a pillar of fire, to give them light; to go by day and night." They camped before the Red sea, and by this time, Pharaoh had repented of letting them go, and he sent his best chariots and soldiers after them. The Israelites were terrified, but that night the cloud that had been before the Israelites, stood behind them, between them and the Egyptians. In the morning the Israelites upbraided Moses for bringing them away from their homes, but he said: "The Lord shall fight for you, and ye shall hold your peace."

You know the story well, how Moses raised his hand and the waters of the sea parted and the hosts of Israel walked dry-shod through the sea; while the chariots and soldiers of the Egyptians sank into the sea as the waters came back and all were drowned. On dry land and safe, the Israelites sang a beautiful song of praise to God.

The Lord brought ten horrible plagues upon the Egyptians. There is not space in this column to tell of them in detail. The first was turning the water in the river to blood so that the fish died and the water was not fit to drink. The Pharaoh's magicians did the same thing.

The second was the plague of frogs which covered the land. The magicians duplicated that too. The third was turning all the dust

Survey At East Carolina Gives 'Typical' Student Of Business Education

The typical business education student at East Carolina College, according to a survey by Dr. E. R. Browning, director of the business education department at the college, is a North Carolinian living in a rural area. A paved road leads to his home, which is lighted by electricity and equipped with a telephone.

His family has an average income of $5,385. His father is a house owner, and his mother a housewife. He is a Protestant, more than likely a Baptist or a Methodist. He plans to work in North Carolina after he leaves college, either as a teacher or in business.

Dr. Browning bases this portrait on a survey of 203 men and women now majoring in business education at East Carolina. He will report results of the investigation Friday, November 9, at the annual meeting of the North Carolina College Conference in Greensboro. The survey was conducted by Dr. Browning as a member of the Research Committee of the College Conference and has been approved by the committee.

"The purpose of the study," says Dr. Browning, "was to gather data concerning social, economic, and educational backgrounds of the business majors at East Carolina College. The Research Committee ran it as a pilot study from which other state-wide studies in this area may be made. There was no attempt," he added, "to prove any particular point or set of facts."

Specifically, the survey indicates that 87 per cent of the 203 students are native-born North Carolinians and that 82 per cent plan to work in North Carolina after leaving college. Those planning to finish their work at East Carolina include 89 per cent. Largely because of financial difficulties, 11 per cent will not be able to graduate.

The families of 86 per cent of the students own their own homes. Electric lights equip the homes of 99.5 per cent; and telephones, of 66 per cent. Most of the families own automobiles; the typical car being a Ford or a Chevrolet two years old.

The students, in general came from small schools—69 per cent of them from schools employing fewer than 16 teachers, and 63 per cent from schools having an enrollment of 300 or fewer. Among brothers and sisters of the 203 students, twice as many women as men have attended or are attending college.

Students reporting military service include 30 per cent. The total service record came to 160 years, and the average length of service to two years and ten months. Most of the students were enlisted men. Of those having military service 74 per cent went overseas.

Men students reporting in the survey include 47 who belong to the Air Force ROTC unit at East Carolina. Nine of these have served as cadet officers. Ten of the veterans are attending college under Public Law 16. The draft status of men students includes all classifications, with 4A the most common.

Build New Town To East Strain

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP)—A new town is rising from the chocolate-brown earth 16 miles from here to ease the over-population problem in this tight-packed republic.

It is planned to transform 1,685 acres of this fruit and vegetable-growing area for the future occupation of 40,000 people.

Negro Minister Serving In Asia

SINGAPORE (AP)—The first American Negro Methodist missionary ever assigned to work in Sarawak stopped in Singapore briefly on his way there. He is Thomas A. Harris, a native of Gainesville, Florida.

He was educated at the Florida Agricultural and Mechanical College and graduated with a bachelor of science degree in 1936. Subsequently, he worked for the State Agricultural Extension Service, resigning to study at the Kennedy School of Mission in Hartford, Conn., and at Yale University in preparation for missionary work. He and his wife had a two-year tour of duty in Fukien, China, from 1948 to 1950.

Considers Piano More Important

ROME (AP)—Earle Arthur Jacklin, a mechanical engineering graduate of Purdue University, has decided that the keyboard is more important than the drafting board.

He has just completed three years of study at famed Cherubini Institute in Florence, Italy, where he studied under the GI Bill. He finished World War II as a captain of engineers.

He's coming home next month looking for a job teaching piano somewhere in the West.

Chapter 9
True to his word, Ray phoned early that next morning. But he said that he would not be able to give Jan her flying lesson. He explained that Miss Darrow was expected sometime during the day and of course he would have to be on hand to welcome her.

"That's perfectly okay," Jan said. "I suppose, though, I'll have to wait until Miss Darrow leaves. I don't suppose I'll be seeing you until she does."

Ray said he would call her again before long, so that was all she had to go on.

"Your Aunt Amanda wants us to meet her for luncheon," Eve said. "She is so eager to hear all about your engagement, darling. All about your young man. And you know we owe it to Aunt Amanda, as you are her only niece, great-niece, really, and she always has done so much for us."

Jan knew that Eve never tired of reminding her of all that Aunt Amanda did for them. Aunt Amanda was the rich aunt. She was also an old dragon. But she had her good points. She was generous when it suited her, and had it not been for her, Eve and her daughter could not have lived as comfortably as they had all these years without a man at the head of the household.

Jan did not look forward to this luncheon. But she knew it was something that had to be gotten over with, and the sooner the better.

It would probably be another nightmare. As it turned out, it was Aunt Amanda took them to the Colony for lunch. She had to see the famous personalities who often came there and she was always received with such aplomb by the head waiter.

"Now then," Aunt Amanda said as soon as their order had been taken care of, with much more fuss than had seemed necessary. "I want to know all your plans. When is the wedding to take place? Are you going to wear your mother's wedding veil? You should, you know. That lace was my own mother's. It came from—nice. How many bridesmaids are you counting on? How many for the reception? If it's over a hundred, Eve, it will have to be held somewhere else. But of course the wedding must be held in my house, in the green room, I think."

Before her mother could speak for her, Jan spoke up.

"It's much too soon to talk about any of those things," Jan said. "Ray and I haven't the faintest idea when we will be married."

Aunt Amanda, who looked something like a horse herself, came to think of it, gave a horsey snort.

"I never heard of such nonsense, she said. 'Why did you become engaged to this young man if you aren't in a hurry to marry him?'"

That was a long story, but Jan could not give it to her. She pursued a safer course.

"There was a long story, but Jan could not give it to her. She pursued a safer course.

"There are lots of reasons," she said. "It was terribly sudden, our getting engaged. As Ray told Mother, we haven't had time to think beyond that. And now another matter has come up. This seemed as good a 'me as any' to break this piece of news."

"Now, darling," Eve said, looking arch. "I hope you two haven't had a lovers' quarrel."

"It's not that," she said. "It's something much more important Ray has found someone to back his invention. He's going to try it out in a test flight. And of course we can't plan anything until that's over."

"That's nice," Eve said. Then to Aunt Amanda, just as though she had not heard what Jan had said, "I think June would be nice. I always think June..."

"Mother, didn't you hear what I just said?"

"Of course, darling. But I always say when two young people are in love someone else has to think and plan for them and so I..."

"Well, you can just stop planning," Jan's pretty face was dark, and her eyes glittered. "This test flight is much more important than any old wedding. It's terribly dangerous and so..."

"Why, darling," her mother interrupted this time, "you'd think you were counting on Ray not coming back! Most girls, when their young man is facing danger, such as a war, marry him before he goes off into the fray. I married your own father in a hurry because he had to leave me, because he would be in danger."

"You shouldn't talk that way," Jan broke in once more. This luncheon was worse than she had foreseen. "Of course I don't think anything will happen to Ray."

Aunt Amanda picked it up. "She wouldn't get engaged to a man who might not come back," Aunt Amanda said. "It seems to me, Eve, your daughter has more sense than you had. Jan is right. It does not have to be a June wedding just so there is a wedding."

"But I've told Jim that we cannot possibly be married ourselves until I get these two sweet children settled," Eve said.

"I don't see, my dear, what Jan's postponement has to do with you. You and Jim Peters can be married, in June, if you like."

"That's what I keep telling Mother," Jan said. She had been surprised at her great-aunt coming over to her side. But she knew it would take more than that to influence Eve.

"Why, darling!" Eve exclaimed, lifting an expressive eyebrow, "isn't that Ray, with that amazing girl—being shown to that corner table with its reserved sign? Of course it is! That's Jan's young man, Amanda. But who on earth is that simply stunning girl with him?"

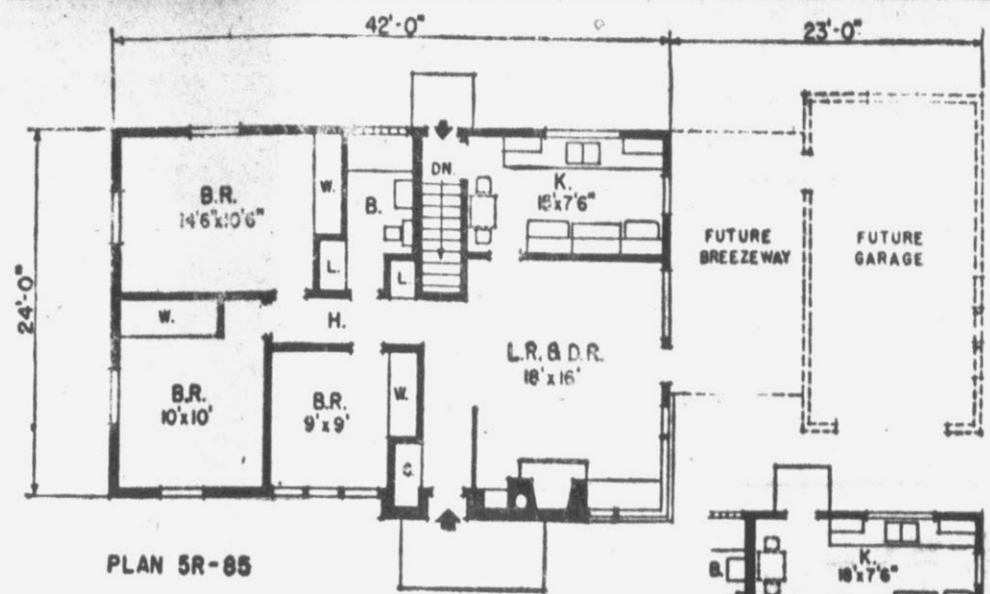

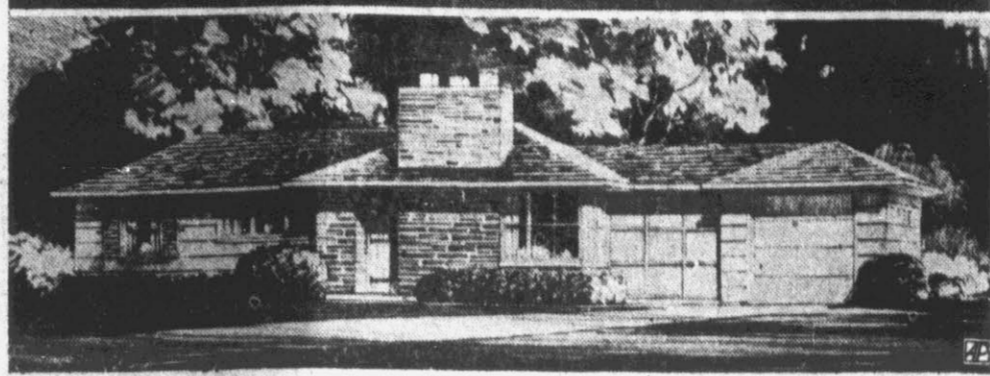

She did not say more than that, but she might as well have. What Eve meant was, What gies? Why is my daughter's young man, the man to whom she so recently became engaged, lunching in town with some other woman? And especially a woman as outstanding, as attractive as the tall, lovely pale girl he was with.

Chapter 10
It took Jan a few minutes to regain her composure to recover from this shock. For she had not expected to see Ray here. She certainly had not expected to see him with anyone like that. The woman, or girl, could only be one person—Bernice Darrow.

"Hurr-ump," Aunt Amanda said. "If you don't know who that creature is, Jan my dear, I think you had better hurry and find out."

"I know who she is," Jan found her voice, although it did not sound quite natural. "It's Miss

HOMES FOR AMERICANS

A MASSIVE CHIMNEY and stone framed entrance gives this house of wood construction with wood siding just enough masonry to make its facade distinctive. Economy is a keynote of the plan. Simple rectangular in shape and with kitchen and bath close together, the house keeps building costs within range. This is plan 5R-85 by Elmer Gilleck, 129 So. Grove Ave., Elgin, Ill. Without garage and breezeway, the house covers 1,050 square feet—a size that is practicable under current materials restrictions. With a complete basement, the house contains 19,850 cubic feet. Basementless construction, with the alternate kitchen plan shown in the inset, deducts 5,230 cubic feet.

Darrow, Bernice Darrow." "The Darrow heiress!" Eve exclaimed. "The one whose father owns so many things, has so much influence in Washington, the girl whose grandfather left her all those millions."

"I suppose so," Jan said. "What do you mean 'you suppose so'?" Eve demanded. "Didn't your fiancé tell you he was lunching with another woman? Didn't he give you a reason, darling?"

"This was indeed a strange state of affairs. Eve did not approve of it at all.

"Certainly he told me," Jan flashed. She had to come to Ray's defense, even though he was not engaged. Miss Darrow is going to back his invention," Jan explained.

"I don't know that I approve of that," her mother said sagely. "I must talk with Jim about putting some money into it. Or Amanda. Surely you don't think it too wise for Jan's young man to have Miss Darrow as his backer, do you, Amanda darling?" "That is up to Jan. I would say," Aunt Amanda returned. She did not offer to produce the money. "If she cannot trust her young man, even with such a gorgeous hussy as that redhead, Jan is indeed wise not to be in any big hurry about this wedding."

"I don't believe Ray has seen you, Amanda darling?" "Eve was saying, 'Try to attract his attention, Jan. Wave or do something.'"

"I'll do nothing of the kind!" Jan flashed. What she wanted to do was to shrink up so small that there would be no chance for Ray to spy her.

"We could get the head waiter to invite them to join us," her mother said. "You ask him, Amanda."

"If you do," Jan said in a fierce low voice, "I'll leave. I won't stay."

Out of the corner of one eye she could see Ray and Miss Darrow. They were talking and laughing heads bent close above the small intimate table. They were so absorbed in one another that there was not much chance that they would realize anyone else was in the crowded restaurant.

Once again Jan had that funny sinking sensation in her middle. "Just for coffee, darling," Eve would not be put off. "After all, you should meet Miss Darrow. Remember it's you he is engaged to, not her. Although anyone seeing them together, and you sitting off here, would think that they were the engaged couple!"

"I'll meet her some other time," Jan said. "They are discussing business. It wouldn't do for us to interrupt now. Ray wouldn't like it at all."

She wanted to say that she and Ray were not engaged, either, but if Ray continued to act as he was at the moment nobody would believe he was engaged to Jan.

"I don't want any coffee," Jan said. She felt as though she could not possibly swallow another mouthful of anything. "I don't want any dessert. And, Mother, if you invite them over to our table I will never forgive you as long as I live."

"The child is right," Aunt Amanda laid down the law. Perhaps she saw the desperation in Jan's eyes, heard it in her voice. Or she may have been wiser in the ways of the heart than Jan's mother. "You and I shouldn't have dessert either. Too many calories. Besides, I want Jan to pick out an engagement present this afternoon. There is a silver service I saw the other day at Tiffany's that might do, so we must get going."

A silver service, anything, was better than staying here. Jan threw her great-aunt a grateful glance. Maybe Aunt Amanda had an understanding heart after all. Maybe if it came to a pinch—and the pinches seemed to be getting tighter and tighter as time went on—Jan could depend upon Aunt Amanda to come to her rescue.

She would pigeonhole this thought. And she hoped that Tiffany's, along with a lot of other places, would take a silver service back.

Jan did not hear from Ray the following day, although she kept thinking the phone surely would ring, nor the day after that. She thought about driving out to the field to take a lesson from Hank. She would get so rusty that she never would be able to solo. But she was afraid if she went out to the airport that Ray would think she had come out in the hope of seeing him.

She would have died, she told herself, rather than have him think that.

But she did think he could have phoned. He could not be that busy. He could not spend every minute with Miss Darrow. Not discussing business. And certainly he was not living up to his promise to pretend that he was engaged. Such neglect as this would not fool anybody. Certainly it would never fool Eve.

Negro 4-H Clubs Hold Achievement Day Observance In Greenville Today

By CHESTER WALSH
Achievement Day for the Pitt County Negro 4-H Clubs and the Home Demonstration Clubs at the armory today marked the climax of a year's outstanding achievements and public services.

The day's exercises featured the planning and executing of the great forward program of Pitt County Negroes in agriculture, dairying, live-stock raising and the making of better homes," Mrs.

Amelia S. Capehart, Negro Home Demonstration Agent for Pitt County, said.

Miss Mattie Monk, president of the Negro 4-H Council, called the meeting to order at 10:30 a.m. Singing of "America" and the 4-H Club pledge and invocation by Mrs. Roxie Moore, president of Simpson Home Demonstration Club, followed. "Come, Ye Thankful People," was sung by the group. Miss Mattie Monk gave a message of welcome.

The Farmville Negro High School Band, under direction of John Burge, played several selections.

Mrs. Ruby C. Carraway, Negro District Home Demonstration Agent, had charge of the achievements and awards to Home Demonstration and 4-H Clubs.

Shirley and Virginia Bush of the Winterville Negro 4-H Club, sang a duet.

David L. Henderson, president of the Winterville Negro 4-H Club introduced the speaker, Dr. W.L. Trigg, president of St. Augustine's College, Raleigh.

H. B. Sugg, supervisor of Pitt County Negro Schools, spoke briefly in concluding the exercises.

Mrs. Maggie Strong, president of the Pitt County Negro Home Demonstration Club Council recognized special guests.

Special recognition was given the Negro boy and girl Pitt county champions.

Boys—William F. Streeter, Falkland 4-H Club, meat animal; David L. Henderson, Winterville 4-H Club, achievement award; Jesse Patrick, Winterville 4-H Club, vegetable garden; James Braxton, Ayden 4-H Club, health improvement; Elmer L. Leary, Grimesland 4-H Club, dairy animal; Joe M. Gardner, Ayden 4-H Club field crops and tractor maintenance.

Girls—Christine Gardner, home improvements and canning, Dorothy Gay, dress revue; Inez Grimsley, health improvement, Marjorie Gay, clothing, frozen food and achievements, Allie White, gardening.

Costly Damages In Collision On Bethel Highway

Police said nearly $1,000 damage was done to four cars involved in a collision on the Bethel highway, in the Fleming's Crossroads community, across the river, Wednesday evening.

The investigating officer arrested Seth Bailey, farmer of near Williamson, and charged him with following too close to another vehicle. Damage to Bailey's car was estimated at $200.

Other cars involved in the collision were driven by: Maggie R. Cordon, insurance agent of Washington, N. C., damage, $250.

John L. Mooring, Negro farmer of near Stokes, damage $400.

Lucille W. Hassell of Greenville, $100.

Flying Ace Gets Command Of Unit In Korea

WITH U. S. FIFTH AIR FORCE, Korea —(AP)— Col. Francis S. Gabreski of Oil City, Pa., America's top active flying ace, today was made commander of the 51st Fighter-Interception Wing.

The stocky 32-year-old veteran has been Deputy Commander of the crack Fourth Fighter-Interception Wing.

In World War II Gabreski shot down 28 German planes in aerial combat and destroyed three on the ground. His Korean score is three Russian-made MIG-15 jets destroyed and one damaged.

He has flown 53 Korean missions in the swept-wing F-96 Sabre Jet.

New Laboratory Is In Mountains

BERKELEY, Calif. —(AP)— The new University of California research laboratory, now nearing completion, will be the nation's highest year-round research laboratory.

It is located 12,500 feet up in the White Mountains of Central California. It will open up an area of scientific research that heretofore has not been available regularly in this part of the world.

Farmers Urged To War On Rats

Officials at the Pitt County Farm Agent's Office today asked farmers to declare open warfare against rats. These aggressive pests were described by Farm Agent Sam Winchester as the deadliest, most destructive of all animal enemies of humanity.

Government biologists estimate there are as many rats as people in the United States—150,000,000. Figures show that in this country alone, rats annually destroy more food than 200,000 farmers can grow. Pitt County rats come in for their full share in this mass destruction of badly needed food.

In reality, rats are far from being the happy, innocent creatures depicted by Walt Disney, and in addition to their destructive tendencies they spread typhus, infectious jaundice, rabies fever and fatal food poisoning. Collectively, they are a giant reservoir of bubonic plague.

Each Fall, the county agent's office conducts a county-wide rat control program. "Although we have not, as yet, begun the 1951 program," Winchester said, "we have ordered a new product which has been used with amazing success elsewhere in the United States". He stated that when the poison arrives in volume, the rat control program will be launched in the hope that such wholesale destruction of farm products can be avoided in Pitt County.

Big Fishing Year

REGINA, Sask. —(AP)— Saskatchewan's well-known fishing spot at Lac La Ronge had a record number of fishermen this year. Estimates are that about 6,000 visitors, mostly Americans, took more than 270,000 pounds of fish from the lake, mainly lake trout, pike and pickerel.

Each Fall, the county agent's office conducts a county-wide rat control program. "Although we have not, as yet, begun the 1951 program," Winchester said, "we have ordered a new product which has been used with amazing success elsewhere in the United States". He stated that when the poison arrives in volume, the rat control program will be launched in the hope that such wholesale destruction of farm products can be avoided in Pitt County.

bomber, but still there was no trace of the missing men.

Search sectors were assigned and the planes worked in shifts. They returned to the nearest base periodically to give their weary crews a brief rest and let equally weary mechanics work on the planes so that the hunt would not stop.

Relatives Pray
During it all a small group of wives and children kept a quiet and hopeful vigil at Westover, praying that their menfolk would be found.

The search went on for several days. Then, of necessity, the hunt was curtailed. Planes had to be returned to needed flight lines. Their men had to have a rest. The search continued, however, until it was a certainty that none of the missing men could be alive even though they might have inflated their emergency life rafts. No one knows.

The same kind of search will go on again when a plane vanishes on an over-water flight. It will be just as intense, just as widespread and thorough.

No Effort Or Money Spared In Hunt For Missing Planes

By LEONARD S. ZAHN
United Press Staff Correspondent
BOSTON—(UP)—You may read in your newspaper that a plane has disappeared on a flight over the ocean.

The story hits the front page the first day. The second day, if no survivors or wreckage are spotted, it's on an inside page. The third day it's probably out of print and you forget about it.

For a long time, however, many thousands of men and women remember it vividly. For a smaller group, it's never forgotten.

Take the latest case. A huge Air Force strato-freighter with 11 men aboard vanished on Oct. 15 while flying over the Atlantic Ocean from the Azores to Westover Air Force base in Massachusetts.

It was a big story for a day or two. Then it was wiped out of the newspapers by other news. Although you weren't reading about it, your money was being spent and your sons and husbands and sweethearts were risking their lives to give it a happy ending.

Always the Same
Here's what happened with this missing C-97. It's what happens every time one of our planes disappears over an ocean.

The four-engine plane took off one morning from the Azores on the last leg of a regular flight from Germany to this country. An hour after take-off, it radioed it was on course. That was all.

The plane was due at Westover that afternoon. An hour after its scheduled arrival, a worried operations officer flashed an alert.

With the alert, a complex and dangerous search procedure went into effect, affecting thousands of service men and women and scores of planes.

Crews Called Out
Crews were called hurriedly both at Westover and at Lages Field in the Azores. Radio messages were flushed to all ships at sea. The Navy and Coast Guard were alerted and the Royal Canadian Air Force was asked to help. Planes and men were called out from dozens of Air Force bases in the country.

Within a few hours, more than 85 planes were air-borne over the dark ocean, their augmented crews straining their eyes for some trace. A week SOS was picked up the first night and dozens of planes converged on the area whence it was believed to have come. There was nothing there. More SOS signals were heard later, a blinking light was spotted by a Canadian

The best time to rid your tobacco land of nematodes is RIGHT NOW!

NO PROFIT IN THIS ROOT!

When nematodes eat into tobacco roots, they also eat large chunks out of your profits. The simple fact is: nematode-damaged roots reduce both yield and quality of your tobacco leaf. Yet, nematodes can be controlled . . . easily...if you treat your soil in time with the tested, proved and approved fumigant, D-D.

D-D PREVENTS THIS DAMAGE!

Avoid the spring work rush . . . take advantage of ideal fall weather

Don't wait until spring. Now . . . before you plant your cover crop . . . the soil is relatively free of vegetation, and D-D gets in its maximum effectiveness. Also, you can pick a day when conditions of temperature and moisture are ideal . . . when you're free from the press of work that always piles up in early spring.

D-D is famous for nematode KILL!

D-D kills both the root knot and the meadow nematode . . . allowing roots to grow strong and healthy with maximum nourishment to the young plants. D-D is recommended by your state tobacco authorities . . . and is endorsed by growers in every tobacco county in the state. Ask your county agent!

D-D is easy and economical to apply. You can do it yourself with your tractor, or you can have it done by a trained crew with their own equipment. Either way, the cost of a D-D treatment is returned many times over in higher yields of better leaf. Don't take chances . . . use D-D!

IMPORTANT—D-D does not control black shank. It does control nematodes and allows the tobacco plant to develop a healthy root system which helps resist ant varieties to fight the disease. Fight black shank with every weapon you have. Use resistant varieties . . . practice crop rotation . . . fumigate your soil.

Livestock Producers Reminded Resources At Hand For Growth

By JESS POINDEXTER
Reflector Staff Writer

"In a county that produces as much grain annually as Pitt County does, farmers should certainly be feeding more cattle," H. D. Quisenberry, State Department of Agriculture Marketing specialist, told county livestock producers this morning.

Speaking at the county-wide livestock school held in the county courthouse, Quisenberry said that the state needs more beef cattle to meet advancing market demands. "We import nearly 85 per cent of the beef consumed in North Carolina," he asserted, "and with this fact in mind, farmers need not worry about over expansion of the industry until that figure is greatly reduced."

"We do not advocate converting good cash crop land into pasture, but we feel that there is ample land lying idle which could be utilized for grazing livestock. We need a lot more steers in North Carolina," he said.

Quisenberry reported that this state has the strictest regulations in regard to Bangs disease of any state in the country. "These make it very difficult to move cattle into North Carolina from other states. Some areas have been excluded completely as a source of beef cattle purchase. Those directly affecting us are all of Tennessee and part of Virginia.

However, he revealed that the restrictions are somewhat more lenient for calves under 500 pounds. Even in this case, all calves must come from accredited herds, and be tested for Bangs disease within 30 days. "Most calves bought recently weighed around 400 pounds," he stated.

"The delivery price of calves bought recently has been about 38 cents a pound, but some markets in Virginia have reported sales as high as 44 cents. In North Carolina, heifers bring four cents per pound more than steers, but in the last two weeks, steers on Virginia markets have outsold heifers."

The school will adjourn from 1 to 2 p.m. for lunch, but will continue through the afternoon.

Assistant Farm Agent Claude Goodman informed the gathering that though Pitt County is a great tobacco producing area, farmers are becoming more conscious of the importance of diversified agriculture. "We now have 21 small grade 'A' dairies in the county, and more than 3,000 breeding type beef cattle," he said.

Driver Is Injured In Collision Of Truck And Car

WINTERVILLE—One person was injured near here yesterday as the result of a truck-car collision on a rural road.

Patrolman Jim Davis, investigating officer, reported that a car driven by Heber Tyson, 44, of Route 1, Fountain, collided with a truck operated by Mrs. Lena Hunt Dixon of near Greenville.

The accident occurred at Worthington's Crossroads around 10 o'clock.

Tyson received a leg injury which required a number of stitches to close.

Investigation into the accident is not complete, Davis said.

Damage to both vehicles was estimated at $225 by the officer.

Tyson was injured when the bumped was jammed through the floorboard of the car which he was driving.

letters had been translated.

Mrs. Howard Gradis home nursing chairman, reported that one class in home nursing had been taught in Eppes School with 20 Negro housewives receiving certificates, two courses taught with eight housewives receiving certificates and 13 certificates were given to Negro housewives. Mrs. Gradis said she had taught one class at Greenville High School, giving 11 certificates to home economics students. A civil defense supplement was given with each course.

She reported that the college here had asked for a home nursing workshop to be given during the summer and plans are being made for it.

Mrs. Walter Taylor, executive secretary, reported on home service during July, August, September, and October. She said there were 465 cases put on file during those four months and there are now 6002 cases on file in the office. She reported that 211 people had been given limited service by receiving information. Mrs. Taylor said no loans had been granted during the four-month period but loans had been collected in the amount of $53.00.

She said service had been given in the following cases: Harvest furlough, hardship discharge, social histories, leave verifications, assistance in obtaining compensation and pensions, insurance or family allowance, obtaining government benefits, counseling in personal and family problems, referrals to other agencies, obtaining help from welfare, AER, and Navy relief for families of servicemen, and other reports for the military and Veterans Administration.

Jet Plunges Into Busy Highway

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (AP)—A Navy jet training plane plunged into the pavement of a busy four-lane thoroughfare yesterday at an estimated 500-mile per hour.

The resulting explosion rattled windows in houses two miles away.

The pilot, Aviation Machinist Mate Grant Lee Deing, of Corpus Christi, was killed.

The plummeting jet narrowly missed automobiles traveling in both directions on the north-south arterial road.

Dallas Pollard Rites To Be Held Saturday

Funeral services for Dallas "D" Pollard, 55, who died Thursday morning at 12:30, will be conducted from the chapel of the S. G. Wilkerson and Sons Funeral Home on Saturday afternoon at 3:30. Burial will follow in Greenwood Cemetery.

Services will be conducted by the Rev. C. D. Patterson, pastor of the Meadowbrook Presbyterian Church, of which Mr. Pollard was a member.

Mr. Pollard was born and reared in Wayne County, and was a veteran of World War I. He came to Pitt County in 1928, and was a member of the American Legion and also of the Order of Red Men.

Surviving are a son, Jesse D. Pollard of Norfolk, Va.; a daughter, Rosetta Pollard, a student at Pine-land College, Salem, N. C.; three brothers, Frank Pollard of Farmville; George Pollard of near Princeton; and Matt Pollard of near Raleigh; and a sister, Mrs. Vance Lancaster of Farmville.

Child's Death Ruled Due Natural Causes

Pitt County Coroner Griffin H. Rouse designated "acute indigestion" as the cause of the death of a two-month-old Negro child found dead at its home in the Grifton section of the county.

Coroner Rouse identified the child at Edward Earl Daniels, infant son of Eddie Herman Daniels and Doris Daniels who live on the Ed Moore farm about five miles east of Grifton. Rouse said the child was found dead in its bed about 9 o'clock yesterday morning by its mother.

No inquest will be held, Rouse said.

Gunman Is Given 6-Year Sentence

Frank Terry, 24-year-old Negro who was wounded in a gun battle with a Greenville detective last Saturday night, this morning was given a sentence totaling six years and one month on four counts.

In passing sentence on the youthful gunman, Judge Charles H. Whetstone stated, "I am not going to have you or anyone else shooting at officers if I can help it. You are shooting at the heart of our democracy in doing this. If you don't like the officers or anyone else, then it is your right to vote them out."

Testimony was brought out by Detective N. H. Byrd that he and two other officers arrived on the "block" around 9:20 Saturday night, just before Terry shot a man in the foot.

Byrd stated that when Terry shot Samuel Atkinson, he and Officer Corbett ordered the man to halt and that Terry then turned and fired at Byrd. The officer stated that he then fired twice at the fleeing gunman, striking him in the left thigh, bringing him down.

Witnesses to the shooting who testified in court this morning bore out the statements made by the officers.

Terry was given two years on assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, carrying a concealed weapon, and another two years for assault with a deadly weapon; he was given one month on the charge of discharging firearms in the city limits of Greenville.

Judge Whetstone ordered the 32 automatic 11-shot pistol taken from the wounded man to be turned over to the clerk of Superior Court to be sold or disposed in the manner the clerk might deem fit.

The second assault with a deadly weapon warrant was drawn against Terry as the result of his shooting Samuel Atkinson in the left foot.

Atkinson stated that he and Terry had "words" in the Paradise Cafe and that when he attempted to leave, Terry was waiting on the outside and made a threatening statement.

Then Atkinson stated "the gun went off and hit me in the foot."

At the time of the shooting the gunman was actually aiming at a second man, the officers pointed out.

Chest Parade Is Set For Monday

"Join the Parade for a Better Community" will be the slogan used in the Community Chest parade Monday morning at 11:45.

Participating in the parade will be the Greenville High School and Eppes High School bands and the following agencies which benefit from the Community Chest will be represented: Boy and Girl Scouts, teen-age club, welfare and charity, Service League Thrift Shop, and United Defense Fund.

The Drum and Bugle Corps of the AROTC and the AROTC at East Carolina College will also participate.

The termination of the parade will be at the Courthouse where a ten-minute ceremony will be held to commemorate Armistice Day.

Child Injured In Fall From Tractor Better, Expected To Recover

WILLIAMSTON—Carolyn Robertson, 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Robertson, who was seriously injured Wednesday when she fell from a tractor, is expected to recover.

Her 8-year-old sister, Judy, was driving the tractor when Carolyn fell off the machine. The big rubber-tired wheel ran over the child's head, causing a fracture, a physician stated.

The older sister was steering the tractor while her father and others gathered corn and loaded it on an attached trailer. He stopped the tractor before the trailer ran over the prostrate child. She is at Brown's Community Hospital.

Car's Occupant Hurt In Traffic Mishap

David Lee Close, Negro, an occupant of a car driven by Leroy Spell, Negro, of near Greenville, was painfully but not seriously injured yesterday morning when Spell's car and one driven by David R. House, Jr., Route 5, Greenville, collided at Greene street and Dickinson avenue.

He was treated at the office of Dr. J. A. Battle for a bruised leg. Slight damage was done to the two vehicles. No arrest was made.

Heavy Damages Reported In Fire At Local Home

Considerable damage resulted late last night when fire broke out in the home of Pete Tripp, 1104 Fairfax Street.

Furniture in the living room of the house was discovered on fire shortly after 11:30 and had gained considerable headway before being spotted.

When firemen arrived, Tripp had brought the fire under control, by using a small garden hose.

Part of the flooring under the furniture was burned through and the entire house was smoked badly.

Planning Ahead To Year 2001

GASTONIA—(AP)—The Public Service Company of North Carolina is looking to the future. To the year 2001—to be exact.

The company, which has its headquarters here and which serves 34 communities, is asking for 80-year franchises in all towns that are incorporated.

Company officials describe the requests for the gas service as "routine."

Taft's Brother Announces His Entry In Politics

CINCINNATI—(AP)—Charles P. Taft, brother of Sen. Robert A. Taft (R-Ohio) today announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for governor of Ohio.

Charles Taft, 54, who like his brother an attorney, has been prominent in church work, in politics and in civic enterprises for many years. Robert, 62, is a candidate for Republican nomination for President.

Some folks close to Senator Taft say he would rather Charles had not entered the gubernatorial contest.
