Soviet Planes Forced Down Missing Transport Plane

Four American Airmen Held By Hungary; Observers Fear Communist Ransom Demand May Include Treasured Crown; Soviet Press Agency First To Make Disclosure

LONDON (UP)—Western observers fear Monday that Communist Hungary may demand the return of the 11th century crown of St. Stephen as ransom for four American airmen forced down there by Soviet fighter planes two weeks ago.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The State Department said today the United States will take "immediate action" to free the four-man crew and an American Army plane reported forced down in Communist Hungary.

The Communists finally broke their silence on the fate of the American airmen, who disappeared Nov. 19 in an Air Force C-47.

The news agency Tass said that Soviet fighter planes forced down the transport after it violated the borders of Rumania and Hungary. Material found aboard the plane, Tass said, showed that the transport was picked up by spies and saboteurs in Yugoslavia and dropped them behind the Iron Curtain.

A Budapest dispatch said the Hungarian government subsequently confirmed to the U. S. legation that the missing plane was "in this country." The Hungarian Foreign Ministry gave no further information, however, a legation spokesman said.

Tass said the transport was forced down at Papa, near a Soviet air base in Hungary. Papa is 230 miles northeast of Belgrade, destination of the plane on its flight from Germany.

The transport had strayed off course and was fired on by Hungarian and Rumanian border guards before being intercepted by the Soviet fighters which are stationed in Hungary under the peace treaty.

The delay in making the announcement was interpreted here as a play for time to give Hungary an opportunity to bargain with the United States over long-standing differences over St. Stephen's crown. The Communist regime had tried and failed to include the crown in the ransom for release of American businessman Robert Vogeler.

The Soviet announcement said the plane had equipment to fly in all weather and at night, as well as operational maps of the Ukraine and Volga areas and Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Hungary. This, plus the presence of a skilled crew, shows a "deliberate violation of the Hungarian and Rumanian frontiers for definite purposes," Tass said.

Tass said the C-47 also had a portable field radio in "soft packing and with a device for dropping," six parachutes for the crew but "for some other purposes" and "several packs with 20 warm blankets each" to be dropped down from the plane.

"The plane had been sent by the American military command for criminal purposes connected with the planting of spies and saboteurs on the territory of the people's democracies and the Soviet Union," the statement said.

Hungary on Nov. 24 asked that the United States return the crown which anti-Communists turned over to Americans in World War II to save it from the Red Army, then at the gates of Budapest.

Claim Lawmaker Fought Tax Suit

Justice Dept. Attorney Says Rep. Boykin Tried To Stop Prosecution In Fraud Case Which Ended In Conviction

By REX CHANEY United Press Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON (UP)—A Justice Department attorney testified today that Rep. Frank Boykin (D-Ala.) tried to stop prosecution of an Air Corps tax fraud case.

Attorney John H. Mitchell, who was assigned to prosecute the case, testified that Boykin said prosecution of the case would be "a grave miscarriage of justice."

Despite Boykin's objections, the case was presented to a grand jury. Indictments were returned against four persons. Two pleaded guilty and went to jail. The case against the other two, wives of the men who went to jail, were dismissed.

Mitchell described Boykin's interest in the case to a House subcommittee investigating tax scandals after Chairman Cecil R. King (D-Cal.) announced that Supreme Court Justice Tom Clark and Attorney Gen. J. Howard McGrath will be invited to testify later this week.

King said he thought Clark "would want to clear the record" regarding his airplane trips with T. Lamar Caudle, former assistant attorney general.

"He also quite naturally probably will be questioned about how Mr. Caudle got his job with the Justice Department in the first place," King said. Clark was attorney general at that time.

Among other things, the investigators want to know why McGrath approved Caudle's acceptance of a $5,000 fee in the sale of an airplane. Mitchell said Caudle had shown keen interest from the beginning in the tax fraud case involving the Gulf Coast Tobacco Co. of Mobile, Ala., Boykin's home city.

Mitchell said Caudle never instructed him not to proceed with the case but that on two occasions Caudle's assistant, Turner Smith, made it clear to him that he (Smith) thought Caudle would be displeased if the case was prosecuted.

Mitchell gave this version of one telephone call from Boykin: "Congressman Boykin told me what fine people they were. He said that they were friends of his, that they were victims of spion, malice and racial prejudice. He said it would be a grave miscarriage of justice if they were prosecuted."

He said that Boykin once invited him to stay at his home in Mobile during the investigation, and that after he declined he learned that Caudle "apparently had accepted" for him. He said he told Caudle it would have been "highly improper" and that Caudle said he "thought I would have a good time."

Mitchell said he "got the impression" either from Boykin's secretary or from Caudle that the tobacco firm executives had contributed to Boykin's congressional campaign.

Caudle, former assistant attorney general in charge of the Justice Department's tax division whom President Truman fired Nov. 16, has told the subcommittee that he got the commission on the sale of a $30,000 airplane to a representative of two men under indictment for tax fraud.

Caudle was recalled for a fifth round of questioning about his activities while in public office. During four days of testimony last week he told the subcommittee that McGrath approved his acceptance of the $5,000 commission.

McGrath sent word to the subcommittee that he would be delighted to testify. He asked only that his testimony be taken in public session, a point to which the investigators raised no objection.

Lag In Spending Said To Improve Budget Outlook

Deficit Of At Least $10 Billions Still Indicated For Fiscal Year

WASHINGTON (UP)—Spending lags were reported Monday to have caused a slight improvement in the federal budget outlook for next year, but a deficit of at least $10,000,000,000 still is indicated.

The deficit for the current fiscal year, ending next June 30, is expected to be at least $8,000,000,000 and perhaps more depending on the rate of defense spending.

This outlook was reported by a usually well-informed source who is familiar with some of the preliminary work done in preparing the budget which President Truman will submit to Congress in January.

That budget will contain recommendations and estimates for fiscal 1952, starting July 1.

According to present estimates, federal spending during fiscal 1952 is not expected to climb above $85,000,000,000, compared with $70,000,000,000 for the current year. Earlier administration forecasts had shown that government outlay might run as high as $90,000,000,000 during fiscal 1952.

The tentative cutback was attributed to slower-than-expected spending of funds appropriated by Congress for defense purposes.

Administration estimates last summer, assuming that the world situation did not worsen, called for tapering off the budget after fiscal 1953. These estimates assumed that defense spending would hit its peak near the end of that fiscal year, or about the middle of the 1953 calendar year.

Revised estimates were reported now to show defense spending reaching the high point about six months later — near the end of calendar 1953 or early in 1954.

Mr. Truman already has served notice that he will ask for another tax increase next year because of the expected deficit, although Congress never shows any enthusiasm for raising taxes in an election year.

To Combat Toll

Raleigh (AP)—In an unprecedented move, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Landon C. Rosser today called for a special meeting of local police and court officials to discuss ways of combatting the state's rising toll of traffic deaths.

Rosser called on all recorders, mayors, court judges, solicitors, sheriffs and police chiefs to gather at the Institute of Government Building at Chapel Hill Dec. 14.

He said Governor Scott and Chief State Supreme Court Justice W. A. Devin will attend. The enforcement and judicial officials will be asked to help map out plans to cut down highway deaths which already have claimed 936 lives since January.

The commissioner said almost all motor vehicle violation cases are tried in city, county, and mayor's courts. He stated that suggestions from officials of these courts would be particularly valuable in attempting to reduce automobile accidents.

Christmas Mail Rush Is Starting

Local Post Office Expects To Go Above Last Year's Mark

Quite a number of Christmas cards and gift parcels are now being mailed, and indications are that there will be a steady increase up until Christmas, said Joe Dudley, superintendent of mails at the local post office.

Dudley has estimated that the post office will handle over 65,000 mailing items per day during the Christmas rush. He said the volume already shows signs of being larger this year and the mailing of parcels is picking up earlier than last year.

To avoid the rush, the public is urged by the post office to buy a supply of postage stamps as soon as possible and mail cards and gifts parcels to distant points by December 10 and locally addressed cards by December 15.

"We recommend the use of first class postage on Christmas cards as they will be given preferred handling and only cost one cent more than the third class rate," Dudley said. "If you place your return address in the upper left hand corner of first class card will be returned to you in case of non-delivery."

The proper address on cards and parcels is the main thing urged by officials. A properly addressed card means the using of house number and street name for city addresses and rural route number and box number for rural addresses.

The public is also urged to tie, wrap, and pack gift parcels securely and in a manner in which they will not be broken. If insured articles are lost or broken, the sender will be protected. Unusually speedy delivery of letters or parcels can be insured by use of air mail special delivery service.

Reds Indicate Acceptance Of Arm Inspection Terms

North Koreans Say Island Recaptured

Claim Made While UN Negotiators Offer Trade Allied-Held Islands North Of 38 For Adequate Red Concessions

6TH ARMY HQ., Korea (UP)—The Communists claimed Monday night that they had captured two Allied-held islands off the far northwest coast of North Korea.

The claim was made while negotiators of the United Nations were offering in truce talks to trade all Allied-held islands North of the tentative cease-fire line in return for adequate concessions by the Reds.

North Korea's Pyongyang radio, in a Chinese-language broadcast, said that North Korean troops captured the islands of Taehwa and Yo-I about 50 miles south of the mouth of the Yalu River which is the boundary between Korea and Chinese Manchuria.

The broadcast said that 400 South Koreans "and Americans" were killed or wounded and three Allied ships captured.

The islands were captured by the Allies Nov. 2 in an amphibious attack.

During the day Monday, an unidentified plane bombed and strafed U.S. 3rd Division troops on the western front.

The attack was the first in daylight on U.N. front line positions in recent months. But there was some doubt in the minds of experts whether the plane was Communist or was a U.N. plane which made the attack by mistake.

Far to the northwest, U.N. jet planes damaged two Russian-built MIG-15 jet fighters in two dogfights over "MIG Alley." U.N. jets have shot down 18 enemy planes and damaged 12 in the past four days.

The enemy plane which attacked the Allies on the western front flew too high to be identified.

One report said the plane was a jet, but others said it was a conventional propeller type. A 3rd Division briefing officer said the main target appeared to have been an artillery position.

Apart from the raid and similar American air attacks on the Communists, only artillery duels and brief patrol skirmishes disturbed the quiet along the 146-mile front.

'Atomic Design' For British Ship

LONDON (UP)—Britain hailed its new aircraft carrier Eagle Monday as the world's first major warship tailored to fight an atomic war.

However, the navy retained its ancient "secret weapon" of an issue of rum for every seagoing fighting man aboard its most modern ship.

Naval authorities said the 36,800-ton Eagle is "virtually unsinkable" because of a new method of controlling fire and water from damage by enemy shells. It can carry the atomic bomb and steps have been taken to make the vessel less vulnerable to atomic blast and radiation.

SPARTANBURG (AP)—We should use atomic weapons in Korea if present efforts to stop the fighting fail, Gov. James F. Byrnes believes.

The former Secretary of State suggested this action in a speech here Saturday night at dedication of the $1,200,000 Spartanburg Memorial Auditorium.

"The time has come," Byrnes declared, "when we should make clear to the communist world that, while we intend to make every effort to end hostilities in Korea, if those efforts fail, we are going to use every weapon at our command to bring that conflict to a victorious conclusion."

Korean Truce Talk Deadlock May Be Broken, Though Communist Concessions Couched In Such Language That Allied Negotiators Call For Clarification

PANMUNJOM, Korea (UP)—The Communists broke the Korean armistice deadlock Monday by agreeing to a total arms freeze and proposing that "neutral" inspectors come behind the Iron Curtain to enforce it.

It was the first time that Communists anywhere have accepted the principle of arms inspection behind their borders or lines.

But they phrased the concessions in language that might end the U.S. rotation program, prevent replacement of 14,000 units and permit the Communists to complete new jet airfields.

United Nations truce negotiators sought to clarify the Red proposal by posing 21 questions. The Communists promised to answer them at the armistice meeting at 11 a.m. Tuesday (9 p.m. Monday EST).

The replies may go a long way toward determining whether there will be an armistice in Korea by Christmas.

However, the Allies are particularly anxious to know just which "neutral nations" the Communists have in mind to police the truce. In Communist eyes, both Russia and China are neutral. So also are Red Czechoslovakia, Poland and the Balkan countries. On the other hand, most other U.N. members are involved in the war on the Allied side.

The Communist compromise offer nevertheless marked the biggest step toward an armistice since both sides agreed last Tuesday that the cease-fire line shall be along the present battlefield if the rest of the truce terms can be settled by Dec. 31.

North Korean Gen. Nam Il, chief Communist negotiator, put the proposal before the Allies in the form of two additions to the five-point program he introduced last Tuesday.

It was a complete reversal of the Communist stand. Previously, the Reds had adamantly refused to consider any arms freeze or inspection behind their lines on any North Korean affairs.

Nam Il proposed that "both sides shall undertake not to introduce into Korea any military forces, weapons and ammunition under any pretext," and that representatives of nations neutral in the Korean war inspect "such ports of entry in the rear as mutually agreed upon by both sides and to report to the joint armistice commission the results of the inspections."

The Allies had proposed merely that there should be no increase in the present size of armed forces, supplies, equipment and such facilities as airfields during a truce. This would permit the Allies to retrain troops under their rotation program.

The Allies' delegation and five or six staff officers hurriedly worked out 21 questions for clarification. They included:

Does the arms freeze mean no rotation, or return of troops from recreation and res. leave in Japan, no replacement of ill or injured soldiers, no replacement of evacuated units, no return of naval ships from overhaul and no imports of arms for training purposes.

Byrnes said, "while preparing for war, or waging war, that our objective is to win the peace. We cannot win the peace if, while fighting for it, we destroy our economy. The Soviets will never destroy America unless we ourselves first cripple America."

As the best way to keep our economy strong, government spending "should be trimmed to cover only defense needs and essential expenses," Byrnes declared.

Farm Meetings Set For Naming PMA Candidates

James Meredith, secretary of the Pitt County Production and Marketing Administration, announced this morning that a number of meetings will be held in the county Tuesday, December 4, for the purpose of nominating candidates for community committees and delegates to the county convention.

The duties of community committees are measuring tobacco acreage, keeping farmers informed as to changes in the program, and assisting the county committee in carrying out general program practices. "The election date will be announced later," Meredith said.

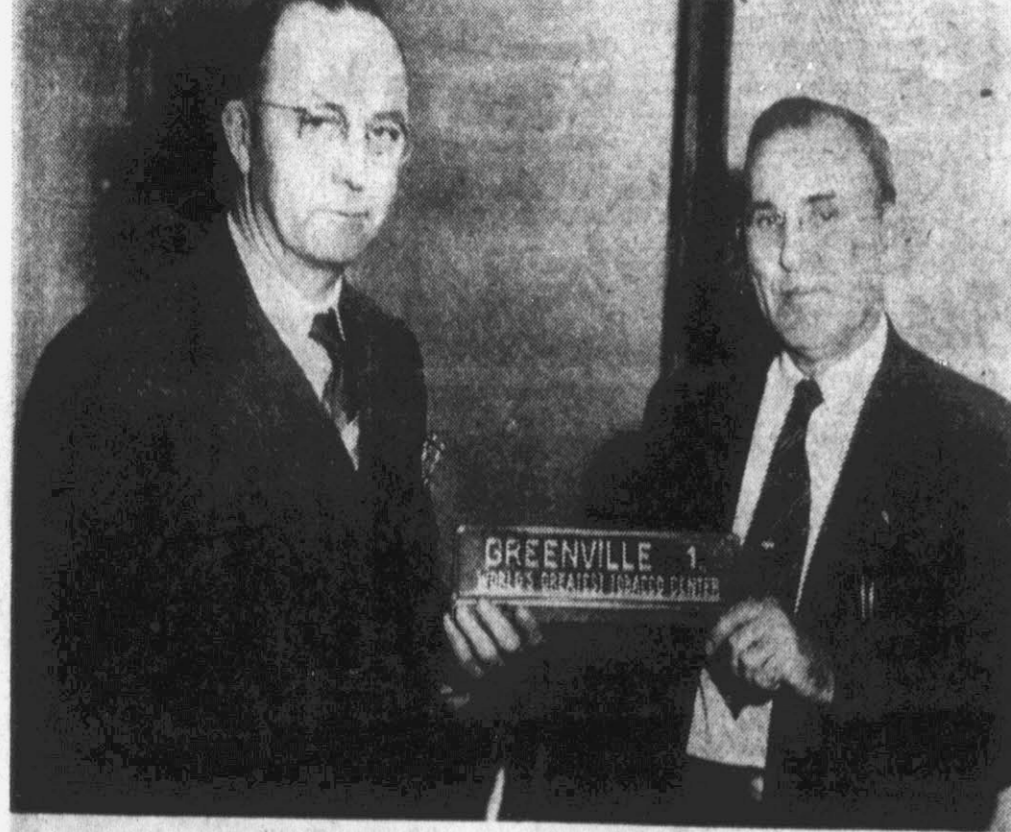

All the nominating meetings will be held Tuesday night at 7 o'clock in the following communities: Ayden "A", Town Hall; Ayden "B", Town Hall;

Spending Trend Back To Normal

DETROIT (UP)—More money was spent for automobiles than for food in this motor capital of the world last year, the Detroit Board of Commerce said Monday.

The trend however has shifted back to normal in 1951, the board said. In 1950, Detroiters spent $557,000,000 for cars and $484,000,000 for food. This year, food sales are running ahead of car sales.

Informal Dinner Party For Jane Massey Given Friday

Miss Jane Massey was extended a courtesy in honor of her approaching marriage on Friday night when Miss Elizabeth Kittrell and Mrs. Charles Braswell entertained at dinner at the home of the former.

The guests were all close friends of the honoree. They were welcomed at the door by Miss Kittrell, Miss Massey and Mrs. Braswell.

The flower and candle arrangements in the home carried out a silver and white bridal theme. White gladioli and silvered fern were arranged in crystal vases which were tied attractively with small silver wedding bells.

The guests were seated at a beautifully appointed table in the dining room, which was covered with a white satin cloth. The centerpiece was a tiered sprig holding white gladioli, fern sprinkled with silver snow, and white tapers.

A three course dinner was served, followed by after dinner coffee, which was served by Mrs. J. B. Kittrell in the music room. The coffee was accompanied by small fortune cakes, each of which contained a

Friday Luncheon Given To Compliment Jane Massey

Mrs. H. L. Rivers and Mrs. Tom Rivers were joint hostesses at a luncheon on Friday as a compliment to Miss Jane Massey, whose wedding will take place in December.

The luncheon was given at the home of Mrs. H. L. Rivers in Brookgreen. Extending greetings at the door as the guests arrived were the hostesses and the honoree, along with Mrs. M. E. Massey, mother of the honor guest.

The hospitable home was lovely with artistic arrangements of red berries and assorted chrysanthemums. The table in the dining room, from which a course luncheon was served buffet style, was covered with a cut work cloth and bore a centerpiece of grapes and shaded chrysanthemums picturesquely arranged in an antique silver basket.

Mrs. Leon Russell and Mrs. William H. Taft were seated at either end of the table to serve ham and congealed salad. Assisting in serving the other dishes were Mrs. L. S. Picklen, Mrs. J. L. Horton, Mrs. H. L. Hodges, Jr., Mrs. Key Brown, Mrs. J. H. Blount, and Mrs. M. L. Wright.

Around forty guests enjoyed the hospitality of the hostesses. Miss Massey was given as a gift a silver vegetable dish. Miss Meiba Brown, another bride elect, was also given a gift of silver. Mrs. J. B. Spilman, Jr. and Mrs. John Moss, recent brides, were given similar gifts at the conclusion of the luncheon.

Cunningham was wounded in the right arm and lung. He was reported in good condition at a West Palm Beach hospital.

Christmas Savings Club Mails Out $36,000 To Its Members Saturday

While the Santa Claus parade was passing along Evans street Saturday morning, the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Greenville was mailing out checks for over $36,000 for Christmas spending money to hundreds of persons who had been depositing small sums of money since last December 1.

"It is an annual custom of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Greenville to mail out checks for the Christmas Club's savings while the Santa Claus parade, sponsored by the Merchants' Association, is on the march," said A. C. Tadlock, secretary-treasurer.

"The Christmas Savings Club money comes in at a convenient time for Christmas shopping," he stated. "The $36,000 we distributed Saturday was sent to hundreds of people—children and adults—who had deposited with the First Federal small sums since the preceding December 1. The Christmas Savings Club's deposits have steadily increased since we started it in 1940. This year, the

The First Federal's Christmas Club's savings fund starts December 1. Members may deposit $1 a week and receive at the end of 50 weeks a Christmas check for $50. The person who deposits $2 a week receives a check for $100. Those who deposit $3 a week will receive a check for $150, and those who deposit $5 a week in the Christmas Savings Club fund will receive $250 at the end of 50 weeks.

Annual Episcopal Bazaar To Be Thursday

Aunt Holly and Uncle Mistletoe will be in Greenville on Thursday, December 6, from 10:00 A.M. to 10:00 P.M.

These annual visitors to the city put in their appearance at the St. Paul's Episcopal Church Bazaar, held by the Woman's Auxiliary. For many weeks the ladies of the Auxiliary have been busily preparing for their arrival and they are pleased to announce that all is in readiness to welcome them.

Will believe animals on display. Mistletoe have a special surprise in store for the children. They have invited Santa Claus to accompany them, and he has accepted their invitation and will be on hand all day to talk to the kiddies.

Santa will be in front of the large circus tent which will be located on the second floor of the Parish House. Inside the tent there will be live animals on display balloons, clowns, popcorn and pink lemonade. Rides can be enjoyed and there will be a fishing pond where the children can, for a small sum, hook prizes. Many interesting games have been planned at the circus for the children, and while the youngsters are being entertained at the circus with Santa Claus, the parents can shop leisurely at the bazaar in the downstairs rooms of the Parish House.

Again as in the past, Mrs. J. T. Little is serving as overall chairman, with Mrs. J. G. Lautares as co-chairman. Mrs. Charles White is chairman of the doll and doll accessories committee. Other chairmen are as follows: Mrs. Sam Northrup, Christmas stockings; Mrs. R. C. Stokes, Jr., aprons; Mrs. Bob Greene, household articles; Mrs. W. I. Wooten, home made sweets; Mrs. H. S. Ragsdale and Mrs. F. D. Duncan, greenery and decorations; the Layman's League, the White Elephant table; Mrs. L. S. Ficklen, Kiddie Carnival; and Mrs. Lee Folger, dining room.

All kinds of attractive and original gifts will be offered for sale—things planned for everybody on anyone's shopping list. Many things have been planned which have never been offered for sale at the bazaar before. The workers promise a table which features gifts for that hard-to-shop-for male, who seldom gets what he wants.

As in the past the doll table will be particularly attractive, with many kinds of new dolls. It has been suggested that people planning to purchase doll clothes bring the dolls with them so that they can be assured of perfect fitting clothes.

The stockings, tree decorations, table and mantel ornaments and Christmas greens have always proven very popular, and this year the decorations committee has planned many new and different articles for use during the holiday season.

There are literally hundreds of items on the Households table. The aprons are of all kinds, sizes and designs and are sure to please the most practical as well as the most frivolous of cooks and hostesses.

The Men's table and the White Elephant table will offer many good buys, and the fact that the men are assuming charge of the latter will be an added sales promotion scheme. The table of sweets and delicacies will help to solve many problems for the hostess who is looking for something delectable and appetizing for holiday entertaining.

Luncheon will be served from 12:15 to 1:30 P.M. and dinner will be served from 6:00 to 8:00 P.M.

A cordial invitation is extended to all men women and children of the community to visit the bazaar on Thursday December 6.

Wesleyan Service Guild
The Wesleyan Service Guild of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church will hold its annual Christmas dinner meeting Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock at the American Legion dining room.

Members are reminded to bring wrapped Christmas gifts marked on the outside for "Boy" or "Girl" which gifts will be turned over to The King's Daughters for distribution to needy children.

High School Students Hold Congress Session

High School students from Kingston, Ayden, High Point, Belvoir, Farmville, Chocod, and Greenville participated in a student congress here Friday and Saturday in the Aldermen's room at the city hall.

The congress, sponsored by the Greenville High School chapter of the National Forensic League, held four sessions with 18 senators, and 52 house members.

The first bill that was passed was introduced by Betty Small and Bobby Langston of Greenville and prohibited "the manufacture, sale, ownership, or operation of an automobile or any motor vehicle with a speed capacity in excess of sixty miles per hour."

Three other laws enacted by the student legislature were: (1) Margaret McCrary's bill which provided for cooperative action with Canada for improving the St. Lawrence River Seaway, (2) Edward Dowd's and Frank Bodkin's bill requiring life sentence for persons found guilty of selling dope and narcotics to teen-age boys and girls, and (3), a bill by Nancy Owen of High Point to provide for the creation of one or more academies, similar to West Point and Annapolis, for the training of women as leaders in the different branches of military service.

Other bills passed in one of the two houses were: Establishment of a sixty-mile per hour speed law; to provide a movie censorship board by the president and approved by the senate; to admit Alaska to statehood; to investigate "corruption in government" with a special committee "to investigate conditions other than those already known"; for compulsory automobile liability insurance; to provide television of sessions of congress.

To raise the compulsory school attendance law to the age of 17; to enforce sterilizations laws; to lower the voting age to 18; to require one year of military training for every male youth in the United States; to construct in Washington, D. C., a memorial for the late president, Franklin D. Roosevelt; and a resolution "favoring a balanced United States budget" which warns every governmental agency that "every possible economy must be practiced."

Awards were presented Saturday at a joint session for the most outstanding students. Awards went to the following: Nick Fisher, High Point, outstanding senator trophy; Virginia Smith, Greenville, grateful for presiding chairman in the senate; Doug Mitchell, Greenville, outstanding congressman trophy; and George Collrane, High Point, grateful for presiding in the house.

The school trophy for scoring the greatest number of points was won by the Greenville NFL chapter but the club president, Doug Mitchell, explained the chapter's executive committee's feeling that as a host school the club should not keep the cup. Mitchell awarded the cup to the Ayden NFL chapter in honor of its being the largest beginning chapter in the history of the Appalachian District of the National Forensic League.

Finds Mother Is Accident Victim

Funeral On Tuesday For Mrs. V. T. Harrell

Mrs. Sallie Everett Harrell, 70, died in Carolina General Hospital in Wilson Sunday morning at five o'clock. She had been in failing health for the past two years but died suddenly.

Funeral services will be conducted at the chapel of the S. G. Wilkerson and Sons Funeral Home Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock, and burial will be in the Dave Barrow family cemetery near Belvoir. The Rev. D. W. Alexander, Free Will Baptist minister of Bethel, will officiate.

Mrs. Harrell, daughter of the late Lacy and Bettie Spain Everett, was born and reared at Conetoe, and was married to V. T. Harrell of Pitt County in 1897. They made their home in Pitt County and after his death in 1947, she moved to Wilson to live with her children. She was a member of Gum Swamp Free Will Baptist Church.

Surviving are four sons, Herbert,

Benny and V. T. Harrell, Jr., all of Wilson, and Ed Harrell of Greenville; three daughters, Mrs. Effie Smith of near Rocky Mount, Mrs. Martha Leftwick of Blackstone, Va., and Mrs. Daisy Leftwick of Cascade, Va.; three brothers, Daniel and Ernest Everett of Conetoe, and Chester Everett of Council; 34 grandchildren and 13 great grandchildren.

Billy Edwards Celebrates Birthday

Billy Edwards, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood R. Edwards, was honored on his seventh birthday with a party Saturday afternoon.

Billy greeted his guests upon arrival, and invited them to the lawn to play with his toys and a new tent which he received as a gift from his parents.

Moving pictures were made of the children while they were playing.

They were later invited to enjoy the birthday refreshments consisting of ice cream, individual birthday party cakes and nuts. Mrs. Clifton Edwards, Mrs. Julian Edwards, Mrs. Russell Jefferson assisted Mrs. Edwards in serving the children.

Those attending the celebration included: Melvin Hoot, Richard Taft, Anna Taft, Bobby Hardee, Paul Dudley, Richard Paul, Boogie Norris, Susan Powell, Charles Vincent, Ronald Vincent, Jimmy Edwards, Sonny Taylor, Lynda Hunning, Gayle Hunning, Tommy Bryant, Sue Proctor, J. G. Proctor, Davey Edwards, Lynda Anderson, and Roger Collins. The out-of-town guests were John Edwards of Fayetteville and Donald Jefferson of Raleigh.

Strength for the Day

BY DOUGLAS

Soil erosion is one of the desperate problems with which our country is now faced. Millions of tons of fertile soil are being washed down the sides of this country and going out to sea. Many years ago Professor Simons of Columbia University wrote two essays, one entitled "Soil and History" and the other "Rome's Fall Reconsidered." He attributed the fall of the Empire to the depletion of the soil.

Soil erosion is a slow process but an incessant one. Little by little, unless care is taken, the fertility of the soil departs. Much of the ancient world which blossomed as the soil was arid desert today.

Transfer this concept of soil erosion over into the things of the spirit and observe what takes place. Our ideals seldom depart all at once. Little by little they are worn away by the company we keep, the thoughts we entertain, the habits we fall into. Most of all, a decline in religious faith or the neglect of religious duties causes erosion in the spiritual and moral realm to accelerate at an alarming speed.

Watch out for that slow wearing away of right habits and high ideals against which an unquiet conscience often warns you.

The Three R's Made A Fairly Good Showing

Progressive education programs which have been instituted at least to some degree in public schools across the nation may be in for a temporary set-back from their opponents as a result of the findings in a test given the junior class of Los Angeles high school.

The tests indicated 18 per cent of the students did not know how many months there were in a year, 16 per cent did not know why July 4 is a national holiday; nine per cent did not know how many 8-cent stamps could be purchased for 75 cents; five per cent did not know what half of 70 is; 80 per cent did not know how many U. S. senators are permitted from each state and 62 per cent did not know Phillip Murray was affiliated with the CIO or the Standard Oil Company.

These statistics look rather discouraging for progressive education; but were the same test given the general public the results probably would be even more startling.

Simple as the questions apparently are, the results of the test given Los Angeles students point out one thing. In questions relating directly to the three R's the percentage of errors was lower than in those relating to government, national personalities and other fields. That would indicate that the so-called progressive education programs are devoting more time to the three fundamental phases of education than they often are given credit for doing.

Some consolation can be found in the fact that 95 per cent of the students tested knew how to divide 70 by two and get the right answer, even if only 38 per cent knew who Phillip Murray was.

Reaction From The Tax Office Scandal

The New York Times has viewed the Caudle case editorially through its usual conservative glasses. In the manner to which it is accustomed it has given the ex-assistant attorney every benefit of the doubt in his dealings in free plane rides, fur coats, new automobiles, and $5,000 commission for selling airplanes.

After several introductory paragraphs, the newspaper pointed out that the very activity of high officials in the Internal Revenue Bureau such as is coming to light daily may sabotage the nation's efforts to raise the money it needs to meet the higher costs of government. The New York Times said in its editorial yesterday:

"This country now imposes income taxes of a severity that a few years ago was totally undreamed of. These taxes do not merely hit the rich. They strike the working man, the clerk, the young family just launching itself in life. They are necessary if we are to pay the cost of defense and insure the future of our democracy. But they must be imposed without favor. If the friends of the assistant attorney general in charge of the Tax Division, or the friends of any collector or any person influential in the Bureau of Internal Revenue, get off more easily than the average citizen the situation is not merely immoral—it is dangerous.

"The average man is willing to pay all the taxes justly assessed against him. He is not willing to be discriminated against. Unless the Bureau of Internal Revenue and the Department of Justice are not only scrupulously honest but absolutely above suspicion we may witness a wave of tax evasion comparable with that notoriously encountered in such countries as France and Italy. A disillusioned and cynical taxpaying public—and this means practically the whole public—could make tough going for the Bureau of Internal Revenue and for the Treasury of the United States, even without breaking any laws."

The powers that be in the federal government can not reasonably expect the average man to continue paying cheerfully his portion of taxes when he sees that influential persons are allowed to get away with owing the government millions in taxes. The little man today has a hard enough time making ends meet without having to shoulder the additional burden created by the unpaid taxes of a few big operators.

President Truman and the Democratic party must accept the responsibility for the immoral, if not illegal, behavior of the appointive officials in the tax offices. The administration and the party likewise must quickly throw the rotten apples out of the barrel before all the apples deteriorate. As The Reflector has pointed out previously, just removing the rotten apples is not going to be enough. There must be other punitive action which will act as a preservative for the apples left in the barrel and for the new apples put into the barrel.

National Whirligig

WASHINGTON—Defense Secretary Robert A. Lovett is at loggerheads with Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson over what the military regard as unusually generous treatment of powerful labor union politicians, especially President Philip Murray and Walter Reuther of the CIO.

The Lovett group, which is under constant pressure to reinforce our Korean units, build up Eisenhower's Western European army and furnish training weapons to our troops in this country, have complained periodically to Mr. Wilson's industrial planners that they cannot meet production schedules on key items like tanks, jet planes, radar etc., unless there is a firmer stand on labor problems.

WRANGLING—Pentagon protests involve such questions as strikes and threatened walkouts, wage boosts, restrictions on hours of work and political favoritism to certain areas in the award of contracts. In effect, these criticisms amount to a charge that there is an attempt to use the costly defense effort for political purposes and to retain the big unions' support for the 1952 election.

Mr. Lovett has lost out in most of the backstage wrangling because Mr. Wilson has enjoyed the complete support of President Truman. Whenever there is a dispute over a directive in this field, Mr. Truman has the final word.

INTERFERENCE—As in World War II, when the late Henry L. Stimson frequently had to buck Capitol Hill and other outsiders' interference, members of Congress insist that war contracts be awarded on a political rather than on a production and cost-basis.

Like Mr. Stimson, Secretary Lovett has to waste valuable time in placating Senators and Representatives facing reelection next year, including Republicans as well as Democrats.

SLOWDOWN—Although there have been no strikes in key mass-production industries so far, there have been stoppages of production in bottleneck plants. With rearmament orders affecting such a vast segment of industry, including large and small firms, any delay or slowdown clogs the whole assembly line.

A strike among the copper miners forced the withdrawal of 25,000 tons of this scarce and valuable material from the military stockpile. Although there is a heavy inventory of automobile batteries, Mr. Lovett was forced to turn over a large stock of equally short lead from his reserves to maintain employment in this field.

Mr. Reuther, president of the CIO auto workers, has insisted on heavy production of many peacetime articles in the Detroit factories which employ members of his union. As a result, production lines in that area are jammed. The output of essential war material has been slowed down sharply.

PATTERN—The New York dock strike halted the shipment of equipment to Korea and to Western Europe. Nevertheless, the labor experts in the Wilson organization did not take a strong stand in any of these disputes.

The Murray demand for an increase in pay for almost a million steel workers will boost the defense cost by more than $500,000,000, if they are granted. The CIO had insisted that he must have a larger raise than would be forthcoming under the wage-price stabilization formula. And, of course, since "big steel" will set the pattern for future demands in other industries, it is impossible to calculate the final boost in rearmament charges.

DIRECTIVE—Public Law 413 provides that contracts must be awarded to the lowest bidder. Despite that, Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, Assistant Secretary of War in charge of manpower, has issued a directive to the effect that "depressed areas" suffering from unemployment must be favored by Pentagon officials handling contracts.

Several of these "depressed areas" are in politically important states. It is also true that every effort should be made to relieve conditions there. But it is impossible to reconcile the Rosenberg order with Public Law 413, for the economically active centers usually underbid their less fortunate competitors.

PUBLICITY—The sad experience of the Interstate Commerce Commission explains why Cabinet members and bureau chiefs at Washington employ as elaborate a staff of press agents as Congress will permit. It pays off in the size of the annual appropriations.

Mirror, Mirror On The Wall—

Around Capitol Square

By LYNN NISBET

TRAVEL—Several references were made to progress in road and bridge building in the area during the past decade. Places that were inaccessible a few years back are now easily reached over good roads, a condition which imposes further responsibility upon the operators of hotels, beaches, fishing equipment and other entertainment facilities to "take care of the visitors." Two incidents of current news point to accomplishment and future planning for still further improvement in travel routes.

BRIDGE—State highway department and local government officials Monday will formally dedicate the new bridge across North East river on US 117 and US 421 near Castle Hayne. The bridge and about a mile of approaching road eliminates a serious traffic hazard on this important travel route.

FERRY—Later in the day Monday the state officials and most of the locals will move on to Carolina Beach for an oyster roast and a conference with sponsors of the proposed ferry across the Cape Fear between Carolina Beach and Southport. Establishment of the ferry was authorized by the last general assembly, but there was a limit set in the act upon amount to be spent. Engineers say it cannot be put in for that sum, and delay has occurred pending decision as to which part of the act should take precedence—the order for construction or the limited authorization of funds. At the Carolina Beach conference Monday night the issue will be put squarely up to the highway folks by the local sponsors. Manager Randy Hamilton of the Town of Carolina Beach and a chief booster of the ferry project, says the question will be put in such way that a yes or no answer can be given—and such answer will be demanded. "do you or do you not intend to establish the ferry service?"

FAR REACHING—So far the question of a ferry across the lower Cape Fear has been a local issue. It won't remain in that category very long. The local folks are getting support from all along the route of which runs from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic Ocean, coming into North Carolina between Mountain City, Tennessee, and Boone, thence through Winston-Salem, Greensboro, Sanford, Dunn, Clinton and Wilmington—to stop cold on a sand dune near Fort Fisher. Some three miles of river separate that terminus from Southport and connections with US 17 on the south. A booster association for US 421 embracing cities and towns and resort areas in half a dozen states has been formed and is expected to add its prestige to the local demands for a continuous route to the south.

EGGS—J. V. Whitfield, veteran legislator of Pender county, is and has been interested in many phases of regional development. He thinks, maybe, the hen egg affords a symbol for what is going on. Several years ago the Pender county folks got interested in a co-operative cold freeze and locker plant at Burgaw. Special attention was given to poultry—fridges, turkeys, eggs. Business has been good in poultry meats, but the egg stands as a symbol of progress. The co-op first had to encourage farmers to produce eggs, then had to provide facilities for buying and marketing them. A young man was sent to State College to learn how to candle, grade and package eggs. During November of last year the egg business was launched. One case of 30 dozen eggs, candied, graded and certified was sold. For several weeks there was just one case sold. Then folks found out about the project. For the last week in November this year the score was forty-five cases of 30-dozen eggs each. Whitfield says he is confident that by end of another year the report will show between seventy five and a hundred cases—and he won't be surprised if it passes the hundred mark. From one to one hundred cases of graded and trade marked eggs out of Pender county in two years, is admittedly somewhat faster than other phases of development in Southeastern North Carolina have grown, but Whitfield says it shows what can be done.

MATHEMATICS—Vivian Whitfield used to be a college professor and has had considerable experience in consular service. He is also a mathematician. He can work out problems in calculus, geometry and algebra, but only simple arithmetic is needed to figure the egg deal. It costs 7¢ freezer company about five cents a dozen to handle the eggs of farmer members. That pays for grading, buying cartons and packaging the eggs, selling costs, etc. About one cent is reserved for contingencies or "profit," which means out of the price of each dozen eggs the co-op takes six cents. After that take out, records show that the producing got more for their eggs than if they had been sold on a casual market without grading or assurance of quality.

PAROLE—Parole commissioner, is under fire and he has been for sometime. We don't want to see any injustice done him. If he is capable and if he is doing a good job, then one is being done him just now. If on the other hand he is guilty of playing politics, doling out paroles without due regard for the rights and safety of others, as some have accused him of doing, and being incapable of holding such a position, that also should be brought to light.

We hope Governor Scott will appoint a body to study the system. Such a study and subsequent recommendations should be of great help to the people of North Carolina.

As it is now, when a prisoner can be paroled into a town where he is a complete stranger, without the consent of the Chief of Police or without his knowledge, then there is something wrong.

And when officers advise the commission to get a parolee out of the county, and that act is ignored, then something is wrong.

There is one other point we want to get straight on now. And in this we believe we are speaking for the people of Beaufort county. We don't want the Parole commission to unload any more dangerous criminals on parole out here. If they are to be paroled under such circumstances, then for God's sake send them somewhere else besides Beaufort county. Our experiences have not been very pleasant, that is, some of them. We have enough troubles of our own, enough crime, and enough work for our officers to do without sending trash like Lafayette Miller on us to kill and kidnap innocent people.

Whether all or part of this criticism is just and constructive, we are not prepared to say definitely. We do feel that there is something wrong, and that it should be corrected as soon as possible.

We realize that there are countless prisoners paroled who make good citizens and about whom very little is said. We also feel that some prisoners are paroled who have no business outside to molest decent society. It may be the fault of the system and not the fault of the personnel who operate the parole system in our state.

Governor Scott should appoint a commission to study the problems. This commission should give every consideration to the system and to the personnel who operate that system. If paroles are being given without ample study of each individual case, then attention should be called to that fact.

If on the other hand, there is nothing wrong, then the public should be informed. As the situation now stands, the public thinks something is wrong and radically wrong. And this public which pays the taxes wants to know what it is so that the faults, inefficiencies, and shortcomings can be corrected. And if there are politics now rampant in the commission, and the public believes there are, then the politics should be removed.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER
 A warning against bad taste in Christmas promotions has been issued by Joe Meek in the Illinois Federation of Retail Associations' bulletin. It is an injunction that could profitably be heeded by merchants everywhere. Christmas shopping is large in total. In many lines and departments, a quarter and even more of all annual sales are made during the Christmas gift season. Furthermore, the total has been rising almost every year.

This has created a temptation among some merchants to lose sight of the fact that Christmas is essentially a religious holiday. Some manufacturers are also guilty. Their promotions, even those spangled with Santa Claus, holly and Stars of Bethlehem have been offensive to the religious. In fact, the use of Christmas symbols in connection with some products, makes the promotions even more offensive.

The danger in disregarding taste is not alone in offending individuals at the time, but it can result in organized opposition to all commercialization of Christmas. In New York City the Catholic Church has already frowned on Christmas Eve office parties. It would be a short step to opposing the entire idea of using Christmas as a basis for selling goods. In many other cities clergymen of both Protestant and Catholic faiths have individually spoken out against bad taste in Christmas sales. It would not take much—not more than a few more offensive beverage and tavern promotions—to crystallize resentment into city-wide or national movements. And that could hurt the vast majority of merchants who adhere rigidly to good taste.

The un-meeek Mr. Meek quotes an example of bad taste in a different religious season. A Colorado advertisement on Maundy Thursday carried a picture of a chancel window framing an altar. Below the picture were the words: "In Memory of Him who died for us we will be closed all day."—Arts Tavern.

Below that was the legend, "Louise and her lovelies will entertain you while you relax in our air-conditioned lounge. Doors open at 8:30 p.m."

Christmas announcements rarely ever reach that point in bad taste, but a few approach it. MERCHANTS ACCEPT REBEL CURRENCY—Confederate money and facsimiles of it were accepted at face value in a community promotion in Asheville, N. C. in a

DUTCH BIKE MAKERS SEEKING SALES HERE
 Dutch bicycle manufacturers have formed an export association to promote the sale of their bikes in the export market, particularly in the United States and Canada. Ten standard export models have been designed and among members of the association. The association maintains quality control. Interested importers can obtain details by writing to the Export Combinatie Nederland:se Pijpindustrie, N. V., de Latrsestraat 13, Amsterdam, Netherlands.

EASIER WAY TO GET S. S. TAX RETURN
 People who work for more than one employer in a year often overpay their social security tax. Refunds of the excess can be obtained by applying on special government forms. But there is an easier way, Commerce Clearing House reports. Now a worker need merely note the over payment on his income tax form and apply it to the tax due.

WEST GERMANY BARS COFFEE EXTRACT GIFTS
 Merchants selling gift parcels and individual sending food parcels to West Germany are warned by the Department of Commerce that the West German government forbids the inclusion of coffee extracts and mixtures of coffee and other substances. When they are included they are liable to excise taxes of 50 to 70 per cent of the rate on coffee.

HAL BOYLE'S COLUMN
 By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK—(AP)—Why did the late Mrs. George Bernard Shaw leave $263,000 to teach the Irish people "the social graces?"

If a London court now considering the bequest does rule it is valid, how should the Irish spend the money? Do they, as Mrs. Shaw intimated, need lessons in "self control, elocution, deportment, the arts of personal contact, and social intercourse?"

These questions have stirred up a number of the Old Sod's ex-native sons here.

James McGurran, president of the American Irish Historical Society, suggested that Mrs. Shaw made the bequest because her playwright husband had been painfully shy and awkward in public. But as for the Irish as a race, well, says McGurran:

"Although Mrs. Shaw was herself born in County Cork, I'm afraid that her knowledge of her native land was either very defective or her use of its distinctive terms was not accurate."

"During her own early years in London the most brilliant talkers at the English dinner table were Irish—Oscar Wilde, Justin McCarthy and T. P. O'Connor.

"Curiously enough, Shaw himself was an outstanding exception. According to Mrs. William Morris, wife of the poet, he was the only awkward and reticent Irishman she had ever met."

And then McGurran delivered this verbal shillelagh:

"My own suggestion about the bequest is that it be used in England to promote a sounder knowledge of Irish history, life and character. For anyone who knows Ireland is well aware that in the arts of deportment, courtesy and natural eloquence the Irish people need neither advice nor instruction."

A reporter who entered an Irishman's bar and brought up the subject was first made to show his credentials to remove any suspicion he was a British spy.

He subsequently noted down the following observations by the patrons, many of whom had been born in Ireland.

"The whole thing must be a fraud. Now, who ever heard of an English judge handing down a decision that would give $263,000 to Ireland?"

"That's right. All England ever gave Ireland was trouble, the potato blight and weak tea."

"Self control, is it? I'd like to see anybody try to teach me self control."

"What is it Mrs. Shaw said about deportment? I thought deportment was something they gave you in school. That's where my kids get it anyway—all they have got of it, that is."

"Who will teach the Irish better manners? The English? We have been trying to teach the manners for 800 years—and the job is only half done."

"All the English ever taught the Irish was how to eat stones."

"Erin go bragh!"
 "Erin go bragh!"
 "Erin go bragh!"

Oh, pshaw, Mrs. Shaw. It's hopeless. The Irish like themselves as they are—shy though they seem to the rest of the world.

Washington Letter

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON—The children in Denmark want to dress like Johanna and Hans Anderson do on Saturdays. They admire the popular Anderson children's dungarees, or blue jeans, which they wear around Copenhagen when school is out.

The Anderson youngsters, Johanna, 17, and Hans, 13, are the children of U. S. Ambassador Eugenie Anderson and her husband, John Pierpont Anderson, of Red Wing, Minn. Mrs. Anderson has just returned to the Danish capital after a month's visit in the United States.

The story of Johanna and Hans was related to me by Mrs. India Edwards, vice-chairman of the Democratic National Committee, who recently had a talk with a Danish textile manufacturer who was on a business trip to the U. S.

"He was telling me how Ambassador Anderson had shown such a hit with his countrymen, how efficient, informed and understanding she was, and how the Danes loved her and her husband," Mrs. Edwards said.

When Mrs. Anderson, the first woman to be appointed as Ambassador, was in Washington, she said there is no doubt at all but eight countries. People who have visited Denmark since she moved into the American Embassy at Copenhagen two years ago, say there is no doubt at all she is the most popular foreigner in Denmark.

She is credited with having played a major role in working out an agreement by which the U. S. has been granted important military bases in Greenland, which Denmark owns. The 42-year-old lady ambassador impressed fellow Americans with her knowledge of international affairs, her diplomacy, her serious interest in her job and her modesty, in the talks she gave on her return visit here.

The friendliness of Danish people, their warmth and sense of humor had made the biggest impression on her. She said the Danes look to America for cultural inspiration. They like American musicians. The 8,000 Yugoslians in our Embassy at Copenhagen are in great demand. More than a quarter of the entire population have seen our State Department-produced documentary films on American life.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

AIMING AT A STABLE MARKET
 (Henderson Dispatch)
 Announcement of the Department of Agriculture that tobacco acreage allotments in 1952 will be about in line with the past season is no surprise. While a slight over-all curtailment is in prospect, the individual grower will have about the same quota.

So far as information goes now, the 1951 yield may be a little more or less than anticipated, but that is a variation resulting from growing conditions, and something that involves the weather, which is unpredictable over so long a period.

Those growers who were pleased with this year's allotments will find little to object to in the outlook for 1952. They will be informed soon after the first of the year just what they will be permitted to plant. Under the law governing the quota system, the department is required to set its figures by December 1. They can be raised later but they cannot be reduced. So that thus far in advance, planters may begin to make their plans for the coming season.

All of which is further confirmation of the claim that cultivation of leaf tobacco is more than a year's job. Before one crop is completely disposed of, plans are already under way for the next. It is a long, tedious task from any standpoint. Growers are entitled to a good price because of the effort required and the risks involved. This year's prices were not far out of line with 1950, although the difference was on the downside, and in the face of increased costs of production.

Quotas that have been announced are designed to keep supply and demand as near to gether as practicable, and it appears the department may have hit upon a reasonable appraisal of the situation in its announcement for next year.

INVESTIGATION NEEDED
 (Washington Daily News)
 A lot of newspapers just now are criticizing the Paroles commission in North Carolina very severely.

Whether all or part of this criticism is just and constructive, we are not prepared to say definitely. We do feel that there is something wrong, and that it should be corrected as soon as possible.

We realize that there are countless prisoners paroled who make good citizens and about whom very little is said. We also feel that some prisoners are paroled who have no business outside to molest decent society. It may be the fault of the system and not the fault of the personnel who operate the parole system in our state.

Governor Scott should appoint a commission to study the problems. This commission should give every consideration to the system and to the personnel who operate that system. If paroles are being given without ample study of each individual case, then attention should be called to that fact.

Lunch Honors Jane Massey

Miss Jane Massey was complimented at luncheon on Thursday at 1:00 p.m. when Mrs. J. L. Horton entertained at her home on Rotary Avenue.

Guests for the affair were twenty close friends of the honoree.

Red berries and fall foliage were used as decorations in the living room.

The table in the dining room, which was set with bridal place cards marking each place, was laid with a Madra cut work cloth and centered with a lovely arrangement of white snapdragons and fern in a low silver bowl.

The place of the honoree was marked with a shoulderette of bridal flowers.

Following the serving of a delicious three course turkey luncheon, the hostess presented Miss Massey with gifts of silver and china in her selected patterns.

Let Love Alone

By KATHLEEN HARRIS

Chapter 30
All he had to do...when it was nearly killing him! When he dared not believe that what he saw shining in her sweet young face was true.

"Don't you know I love you darling?" Her voice, soft and warm, told him what her eyes were saying too. "Don't you know that's why I went away the first time? I thought you were in love with Bernice. And that's why I came back again."

"But you always said you wanted nothing to do with love!"

"I've found out that you cannot decide such things," she told him. At least he had not tried to make her believe it was Bernice he loved. "I've found out a lot of things about love, Ray."

Again he did not answer right away. Then he said, speaking in that strained stiff tone, "It's no use, Janie. I know who you came back. I suppose Bernice has told you. You know I'll never walk again. You feel sorry for me."

"Don't say things like that!"

"But it's true. You think you're partly to blame, because I cracked up, because your wearing my pin brought me bad luck."

"If you'd look at me," she interrupted him once more, "instead of trying not to, you'd see I'm still wearing it, over my heart, where you pinned it that night in the garden."

Involuntarily he did glance down to see that what she said about the little lucky charm was true. She wore it over her heart.

"You can't love a guy who'll never be able to take care of you," his voice was gruff. But now his eyes could not look away from hers. "I can't let you," he added.

"You can't stop me," she told him.

"Bernice has gone to New York," she told him, adding hastily because of the promise given to the other girl, "I talked with her over the phone when I told her I was coming. She's going to bring back a famous surgeon and he's going to operate on you and you are going to be as good as you ever were."

"I told Bernice it was no use," Ray answered. Yet hope flared into his eyes and into his heart. "She has done so much for me already. I can't let her do this too."

"You can't stop Bernice either," Jan said. "She's just as wonderful as you always said she was." And Jan meant this now. She no longer had to be jealous of the other girl. She no longer disliked her. Bernice was her friend, as Ray had hoped she would be. "I'm glad to know Bernice now and feel that way toward her."

Ray smiled into Jan's eyes. "It was silly," he added, "for you to think I was in love with her. Why, Bernice is just like an older sister to me! That's how she feels toward me, too, nothing more than that. Bernice was in love with her cousin. He was killed in the war. That was what I meant once when I said if you knew more about her you would understand her better, Jan."

"I understand her," Jan returned, returning his smile also. Better than you do, my dearest, she added to herself. For Ray would never believe that Bernice had loved him.

"What I don't understand," Jan said, "is why you don't kiss me, darling. It's been a long while. I told you once that a kiss meant something to me. It means that nothing you can say will keep me from kissing you!"

"Hey!" Ray said. His handsome young face got quite red. But he did not try to draw back as she flung both of her young strong arms about him.

The kiss she gave him did say a lot more than any words. It was a kiss that held not only all the love, but infinite tenderness and compassion. It was a kiss that was a vow that, whatever came, she would share it with him.

And that was what Jan said when finally the kiss was over.

"What I want you to understand, young man," Jan said severely yet tenderly, "is that we are engaged this time! And don't you dare try to pretend with me, or try to get out of this engagement ever!"

"I'm afraid you don't know what you may be letting yourself in for," Ray began. Not because he wanted to put up any protest—not after that kiss. He never had dreamed that Jan would kiss him like that or that he would see so much love in her bright eyes. But he still felt he ought to warn her. For what if the operation did not prove to be a success, and what had happened to all his stern resolutions? Just then he noticed that one of the hospital attendants was approaching them. He held a yellow envelope in one hand. When he reached them, he handed it to Ray.

Ray took it, tore it open, read it. He handed it to Jan. It was a wire from Bernice saying that she was returning with the surgeon, and that this doctor was confident the operation would prove successful.

The hope in Ray's eyes was a bright flame now. Yet he said, "We must not feel too sure, Janie. Although now I am almost ready to believe in any miracle."

"I do believe," Eve said, "a fall wedding is as nice—and every bit as romantic as a June one. And now that you've got roses in your cheeks again and no longer look like a former ghost of yourself, darling, you will make a perfectly lovely bride."

Anyone looking at Jan would have agreed with that remark. For never had any bride looked more radiant than Jan did now, arrayed in the white satin wedding gown and the long lace veil fastened with a circlet of orange blossoms to her shining hair.

"Have you something old, something new, something borrowed and something blue?" Aunt Amanda asked. "You know it's bad luck if you haven't, my dear."

Jan laughed. "I'm not afraid of bad luck, any more!" she said. "Nor of anything in the world, she could have added.

For this was the day of days—her wedding day. All her prayers had been answered, her faith justified. The operation had been most successful. Ray would be able to walk up the aisle to meet his bride—the old smiling confident Ray of old."

Chapter 31
Yes, Jan wanted it—all the whole works: orange blossoms, rice and old shoes.

She wanted to be married in a church; she wanted bridesmaids and flower girls and a ring bearer. And Eve, bless her! had seen to all of them.

"The bridesmaids left some time ago," Aunt Amanda warned. She did not dab at her eyes, but she knew very well that she would have a little fling with some of it. For her part, she considered weddings a lot of unnecessary fuss and bother. However, she was pleased and proud that this great-niece of hers, of whom she had grown so very fond, was going to have such a fancy fine one. It would cost a pretty penny, but Amanda had insisted upon paying for it. Since she tried to do as much good as she could with her money, Amanda felt she could have a little fling with some of it too now and then.

"Now, Mother, don't start crying this soon!" Jan reproved. She reached up to pat Eve's cheek, to give her a little gay kiss. "I'm ready," she added, "if Daddy is."

Her stepfather was to give her away. She would walk down the long aisle on Jim Peter's arm.

And Jan was glad that that was the way it was going to be. For it had been as she had said it would be: during these past weeks her stepfather had been a real father to Jan.

"You're going to be late if you don't get going!" Aunt Amanda warned, feeling one of those sniffling catches up with her already.

"And for goodness sake, Jim Peters, don't you let the chauffeur drive too fast or have an accident, all those days and weeks and months, for this one hour. And last night he had given Jan her ring. She wore it now on the finger that soon would hold another, her wedding band.

It was not a large diamond but Jan thought it the most beautiful one any girl ever had on her third finger. And over her heart, Jan also wore the small pin that had been Ray's first engagement gift. It was as dear to her as any diamond.

On the way to the church, with Jim Peters at her side, Jan's thoughts went for a little while to Bernice. She wished that the other girl could have come to her wedding. But Bernice was in France. And last night, too, Ray had told her that he had heard through Mr. Darrow that Bernice was to be married soon.

Jan had been so surprised and pleased and relieved. "Who is she going to marry—a Prince Charming, I hope!" Jan had said.

Ray had grinned at that. He had said that it was practically the truth. "I hear the man does have some sort of title," Ray had said. "It seems he's been in love with Bernice for years. But it took years for Bernice to get over her first love for her cousin."

"If anything ever happens," Jan had said to Ray in the garden the evening before, "I hope you won't forget me, your first love, Ray."

"Nothing is going to happen," he had told her. "But if it should, remember I told you I'm a one-woman man. You are my first, my last, my always love, Janie."

"This is a new experience for me," Jim Peters said now as the car drew up before the long awning of the church. There were crowds of curious spectators waiting for a glimpse of the bride. "I never thought I'd have a daughter to give away! Such a lovely sweet daughter. You look a great deal like your mother today, my dear."

"That's the nicest compliment you could pay me," Jan smiled at him. She thought that she not only looked like Eve she felt as she imagined her mother would have—thrilled and excited, and of course, awfully jittery. She guessed there was as much of Eve in her as there was that New England heritage her mother often spoke about.

She wondered how she managed, even if she did lean on her stepfather's arm, to get out of the car and walk all that distance to the church steps. Her knees were jelly and her heart a hammer. Yet she did manage all this just as, somehow, she could manage the much longer walk down the ribbon-lined aisle.

Jan found a new strength. Her knees not only supported her but her heart settled almost back to normal and from the moment when she saw Ray, waiting for her at the end of that long aisle, she was all right.

Then they were standing side by side—the music had ceased—and now the minister was reading those lovely solemn words and Jan and Ray were answering in low but clear voices, exchanging their marriage vow.

"I now pronounce you man and wife..."

Another ring was slipped onto her third finger.

"You may kiss your bride."

And Ray's lips—two hearts that did indeed beat as one—were against her own.

The organ burst forth into joyous loud acclaim and, hand in hand, the young couple walked rapidly, smilingly, back down the aisle.

At the steps outside the waiting crowd pressed forward, there were cheers and cries. Cameras flashed. Rice rained and pelleted down their heads. Someone had tied old shoes and cans on the rear of the car and tacked on a large printed sign JUST MARRIED.

Then the car door slammed and they were off. The tin cans rattled in their wake, the old shoes thumped along.

Ray put an arm around her and drew her close. There was no need for any words—not when hearts were that full. His lips met hers again. And this kiss was different, too, more tender, more wonderful. For this was not an ending but still another new beginning.

RALEIGH (AP)—George S. Coble of Lexington has been re-elected president of the North Carolina Daughters of the Confederacy Foundation.

Other officers chosen by the association at its seventh annual meeting over the weekend included: Mrs. Kiser of Greensboro, vice president; L. L. Ray of North Carolina State College, secretary; and J. G. Vann, also of State College, treasurer.

Six new directors were also elected. They were: David Snelson, Asheville; Paul Burch, Mountain Park; Paul Landreth, Winston-Salem; William C. Thacker, Winston-Salem; J. H. Huntley, Norlina; and Henry Fleming, Booneville.

UN Headquarters To Have Offshoot In Neighborhood

U. N. NEIGHBOR—The new Carnegie Endowment building designed by Architects Harrison and Abramovitz. Wallace K. Harrison, member of the firm, was one of the U. N. architects.

By ADELAIDE KERR
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK — The United Nations will soon have a new neighbor, which also deals with the problem of international peace, but from a non-governmental standpoint.

The Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, dowered by steel man Andrew Carnegie to work for the abolition of war, is constructing a 12-story building a short distance north of U. N.'s headquarters in midtown Manhattan.

The new building, due for completion by the end of 1952, will follow lines similar to U. N.'s skyscraper. Its First Avenue facade will be "class banded by metal mullions, and its sides limestone. Within will be conference rooms, lounges, offices and a large meeting hall for public gatherings. Besides the Carnegie Endowment, the new building is expected to house other non-governmental, non-profit organizations doing international work.

"The Carnegie Endowment decided some time ago to devote a large part of its activities to strengthening the United Nations and to helping it work in the most effective manner," says the Endowment's president, Dr. Joseph E. Johnson. "We study and analyze U. N.'s activities, publish studies we have completed and work to awaken the public to an understanding of what U. N. is doing."

Women In The Church

The executive committee of United Church Women of the National Council of Churches, representing 10,000,000 Protestant and Orthodox women, and meeting in Minneapolis, Minn., urged its members to study and inform senators of their opinions regarding ratification of the proposed Human Rights Covenant, and the Japanese Peace Treaty. Women were also urged to "support United States efforts through the United Nations to solve the problem of Arab refugees." The women committed themselves "to find ways of promoting world peace through international contacts such as foreign students in the United States and American representatives abroad," and discussed how it might get church women to work in their communities and local churches for the department's recently announced five-point program, called "The Christian Woman's Action Program for World Peace."

COME TO THE FAIR — Cyellis, dressed in fashions of yesteryear, ride through Frankfurt, Germany, heralding opening of the first International Motorcycle and Bicycle Fair.

Twenty-five young women are being recruited for three years of special missionary service in various parts of Asia, under the Board of Missions and Church Extension of the Methodist Church. Twenty-five young men are also being chosen. They will constitute the "Fellowship of Christian Service" to serve in Japan, Okinawa, Korea, the Philippines, Malaya, Burma, India, and Pakistan. The work available covers the whole field of missionary service. A special call is made for teachers, religious educators, nurses, agriculturists, home economists, office secretaries, workers with youth, and those qualified to teach and lead in music, arts and crafts, physical education, children's work, and recreation. Applicants must be between the ages of 21 and 28 years, graduates of accredited colleges, and active members of a church, though not necessarily of the Methodist Church. They must be unmarried and promise to remain unmarried for the three years. Those accepted will be given a six-week period of intensive training and orientation at the Kennedy School of Missions, Hartford, Conn., from June 28 to August 11, 1952, and will sail to their respective field in August and September of 1952. Young people interested should write Dr. M. O. Williams or Miss Kathryn J. Pirates Win Home Opener From Guilford Quakers 65-47

Russel Scores 14, Hodges 12 For Bucs

Next Home Game Tomorrow Night With Catawba Indians In North State Conference Contest Starting At 8

The East Carolina Pirates got point-happy Saturday night in Wright Gymnasium and before time ran out on them in their North State Conference opener, they had run up a 65-47 score on the visiting Guilford Quakers. It was the first victory of the year for Howard Porter's Pirates who had previously lost to the Norfolk Naval Air Station.

All-Conference and All-State forward Sonny Russell, a junior from New Bern, led the point parade for both teams with 14 points. Russell didn't score at all in the third quarter when Bobby Hodges took up the scoring pace. Hodges came in second in the scoring with 12 big points, 10 of them in the third quarter.

Guard Rick Ferrell, a former Coastal Plain League professional baseball player with the Goldsboro Cardinals, led the Guilford scoring with 13 points. Forward Don McLeod was behind Ferrell with a total of 13 points.

The Pirates were behind only once in the game. A packed house at the East Carolina gym saw McLeod put the Quakers in the lead 1-0 with a free throw. That was the only time Guilford enjoyed being ahead, however; and Russell soon erased that lead with a push shot from the side that sent the Pirates into the lead.

After Russell's first shot, the Pirates were off to the races in both offense and defense. Their offense built up a quick and substantial lead and the defense held Guilford scoreless from the floor for the first five and a half minutes. McLeod was the one who finally broke the ice with a push shot from beyond the circle.

After Russell's shot sent the Pirates into a quick 2-1 lead, Lou Collier widened the margin with a set shot from beyond the circle and a free throw. Russell followed up a shot by Charlie Huffman to run the margin to 7-1 before McLeod came through with his first scoring shot.

Fennell hit on a set shot from out front which was matched by two free throws by Bill Woodall. Fennell hit on another set shot from the side and McLeod made a free throw when he was fouled by John Postas. Bobby Hodges made a free throw just before the quarter ended to give the Pirates a 12-8 lead at the end of the first period.

Russell and Fennell got hot in the second quarter for four points apiece to run the Buc margin to 31-15 at the half. After the rest period, Bobby Hodges took over the scoring job for the Pirates and hit on 10 of the 15 points scored by East Carolina in the third quarter. Many of Hodges' points were scored from close in as he used his height advantage well to get behind the Quakers.

Each team tried to outdo the other in the fourth period but wound up all even when 19 points were scored by both clubs.

Defensively, the Pirates were led by Russell, Dick Blake and Collier. Blake practically had a monopoly on the back boards in the first half—a job that Russell took in the second half when Blake was slowed down by fouls. Collier did a good job

Coach Of Year Honors Go To Maryland's Tatum

DURHAM (AP)—Jim Tatum, whose undefeated Maryland team was ranked third best in the nation and won a bid to the Sugar Bowl, has been chosen Southern Conference Football Coach of the Year.

He received 117 points in voting by 36 sportswriters and broadcasters of the Southern Conference Sportswriters Association. The association will award him a plaque at a meeting of the Durham Quarterback Club next Monday.

Runnerup with 112 points was Marvin Bass of William and Mary. He took over as head coach only 10 days before the start of practice. His team lost two of its first three games and then won seven straight before losing the finale.

Bill Murray of Duke and Tom Rogers of Wake Forest tied for third with 28 points each.

Voting was on the basis of 10 points for first choice, nine for second, eight for third, and so on. Other receiving points were: Frank Howard of Clemson, 5; Rex Knight of South Carolina, 7; Tom

Football Runs In Families Of TCU

FORT WORTH — Playing the gridiron sport at Texas Christian U. continues to run in families.

Morgan Williams, sophomore tackle, is the son of Jack Williams who was the captain and star tackle of the '1928 Frog squad. John Medaniel, senior halfback is a brother of Frank who was a featured performer for TCU in the early '40s.

Keith Flowers, Earning Frog line-backer, is a younger brother of Clyde, tackle on the '44 team and former line coach.

Missing Bradley Players In South

PEORIA, Ill.—(AP)—The disappearing Bradley University basketball trio today appeared to be on a southern shopping tour for another school.

The three—Pat Dunn, sophomore guard from Chicago; Don Anielak, 6-foot, 7-inch junior center from St. Louis; and junior guard Dick Pikrone of Chicago—failed to show up for Bradley's opener with Vanderbilt Saturday night.

What at first seemed a mystery turned out to be a case of disgruntled athletes fleeing Bradley at the last moment before the cage season began.

The parents of all three have been in contact with the boys, who left here in an automobile on a canvass of southern schools. Last night the trio turned up at Lexington, Ky. where one had been a U. of Kentucky freshman player. They left Lexington after a short stop.

Pikrone last year played regularly in Kentucky freshman games, placing third in scoring.

Browns And Rams Pace Pros Graham Stars In Cleveland Win

By JOE FALLS
NEW YORK (AP)—With two weeks to go, it seems like a good bet that the Cleveland Browns and Los Angeles Rams again will meet for the National Football League championship.

Both took long strides toward that goal yesterday by racking up impressive, one-sided victories.

The Browns moved to within one game of clinching the American Conference title by smashing the Chicago Cardinals, 49 to 28, behind Otto Graham's brilliant pass work.

And Los Angeles took over the top spot in the National Conference with a 42-17 victory over the once-mighty but now-ordinary Chicago Bears.

This victory, coupled with Detroit's loss to San Francisco, dropped the Lions from first place and all but ended the Bears' hopes for the conference crown.

San Francisco, playing the role of spoiler, upset Detroit, 20 to 10.

Los Angeles (7-3-0) and Detroit (6-3-1) collide next Sunday on the west coast in the game that could decide the conference title.

Meanwhile, the dogged New York Giants retained their slim hopes in the American Conference by blanketing Pittsburgh, 14 to 0. However, Cleveland (9-1-0) can end this race by defeating Pittsburgh next Sunday. The Giants have a 7-2-1 record, their only losses coming to the Browns.

In other games—which had no bearing on the leaders—the New York Yankees won their first game of the season, shading Green Bay, 31 to 28, and Philadelphia outlasted the Washington Redskins, 35 to 21.

The first stud crop of the famed Stymie will get to the races this winter at Hialeah. Stymie ran seven times at this track in 1944.

Jacobs Trophy Goes To Duke's Jack Kistler

GREENSBORO (AP)—Jack Kistler, Duke fullback, is this year's winner of the Jacobs Football Blocking Trophy for the Southern Conference.

Conference sports writers, broadcasters and head coaches gave the big so homore 105 points on the basis of 10 for first choice, nine for second, and so on.

Bob Ward, Maryland guard was runnerup with 42 points, it was announced here yesterday.

Kistler will get the trophy at the annual banquet of the Durham Quarterback Club in Durham next Monday.

Dick Hendley, Clemson quarterback, won last year.

Trudnak Named Outstanding Player In North State

To Be Honored At High Point Banquet

HIGH POINT — (AP) — Steve Trudnak, Lenoir Rhyne fullback, has been voted the year's outstanding football player in the North State Conference.

The junior from Bloomsburg, Pa. set a scoring record of 112 points in helping the Bears win their first conference championship in 20 years. He received 49 points in balloting by coaches, sports writers and broadcasters, it was announced yesterday.

Following in order were: Jim Garrett, Lenoir Rhyne quarterback, 35 points; Sal Gero, Elon tackle, 19; Jack Groce of Appalachian and San Venuto of Guilford, 14 apiece; Lou Rochell of Elon, 10; Bob Linder of Catawba, six, and Bill Topping of Guilford and Gene Robinson of Lenoir Rhyne, three each.

Trudnak will receive an award from the American Business Club of High Point at the club's annual North State banquet in High Point tomorrow night. Jim Tatum, Maryland coach, will be the main speaker.

The banquet will climax a day of conference activity. Coaches will meet in the morning, and the conference executive committee and the full conference will meet in the afternoon. Dr. J. B. Cummings of East Carolina is president of the conference.

Four New Men In North State Basketball Jobs

By the Associated Press
The first week of full competition for North State Conference basketball teams opens today with new head coaches at four of the nine schools.

Jack McComas, former North Carolina State star who has taken over at Atlantic Christian, gets his first taste of league competition. His Bulldogs figure in three of the week's four family games on the 16-game card.

Bob Davis has succeeded C. Q. Smith at High Point, Dave Meredith takes over from Paul Lentz at Guilford and Bob Spangler fills in at Catawba for Earl Ruth, who has a leave of absence to do graduate work.

High Point won the conference tournament last year after Lenoir Rhyne led in the regular season.

Today's games are Atlantic Navy at Elon, Lenoir Rhyne at Newberry, High Point at McCrory and Catawba at Atlantic Christian.

Tomorrow—Lenoir Rhyne at Presbyterian, Catawba at East Carolina.

Wednesday—Milligan at Appalachian.

Thursday—Elon at Presbyterian, Guilford at Atlantic Christian, Western Carolina at Enka.

Friday—Elon at Erskine, Catawba at Presbyterian, Carson-Newman at Western Carolina.

Saturday—Wofford at Lenoir Rhyne, Atlantic Christian at High Point, East Carolina at Camp Lee.

In the only conference game last week, East Carolina defeated Guilford 65-47.

Belvoir Wins Two From Maury High

BELVOIR—After being held down in the first half by a stubborn Maury defense, the Belvoir-Falkland boys cagers pulled away in the second half to win the non-conference game between the two clubs 46-43. The game was played Friday night in the Belvoir gym.

Franklin Garris, the Belvoir mainstay, led the scoring for both clubs with 21 points. His teammate, Howard Bullock, chipped in six for the Belvoir cause. P. Ross and R. L. Moye each scored eight points for Maury.

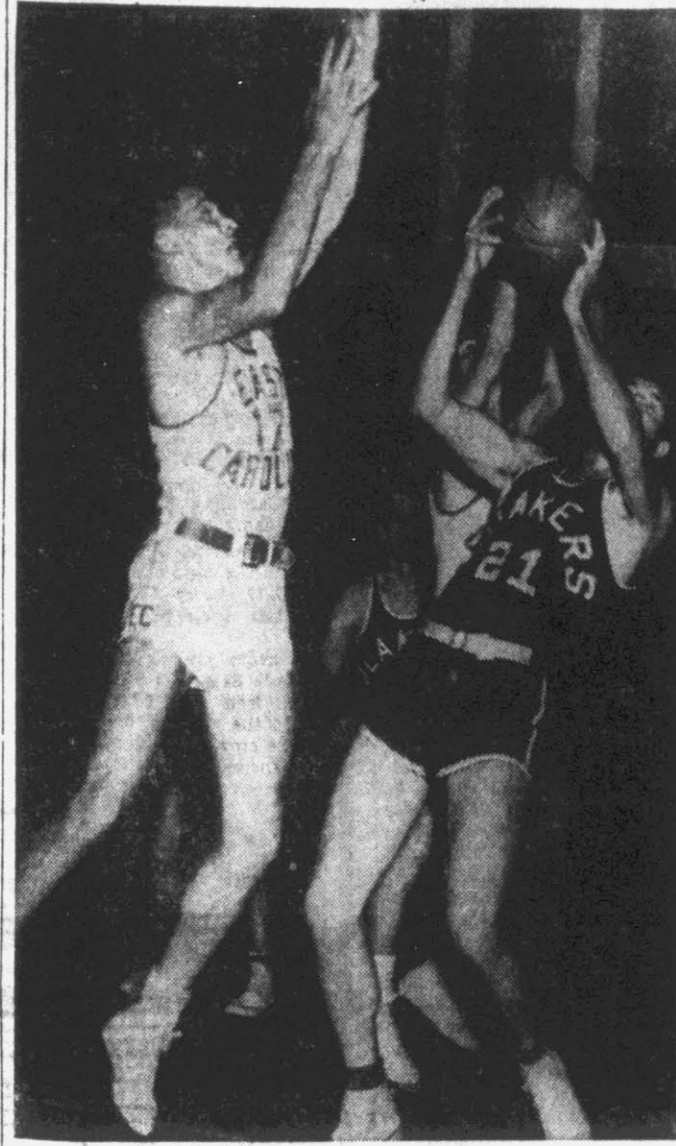

Dwight Meeks led the Belvoir defense while J. Hughes did a good job for Maury. In the girls' game which preceded the boys' contest, Belvoir-Falkland also won, coming out on top 34-10 in this contest.

Nadine Morris of Belvoir led the scoring with 20 points. Jean Jones added 10. Rachel Albritton scored five to lead Maury's scoring.

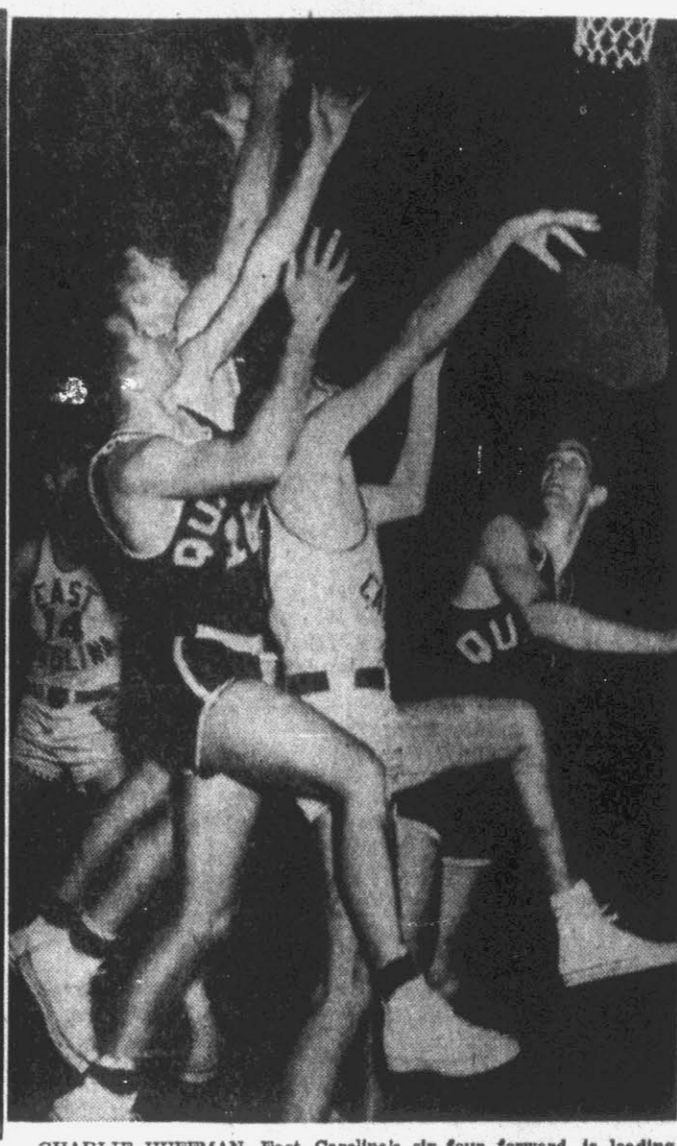

Both Belvoir teams will play again Friday night when they journey to Chocod.

Aldridge Stars In N. C. Shrine Squad Victory

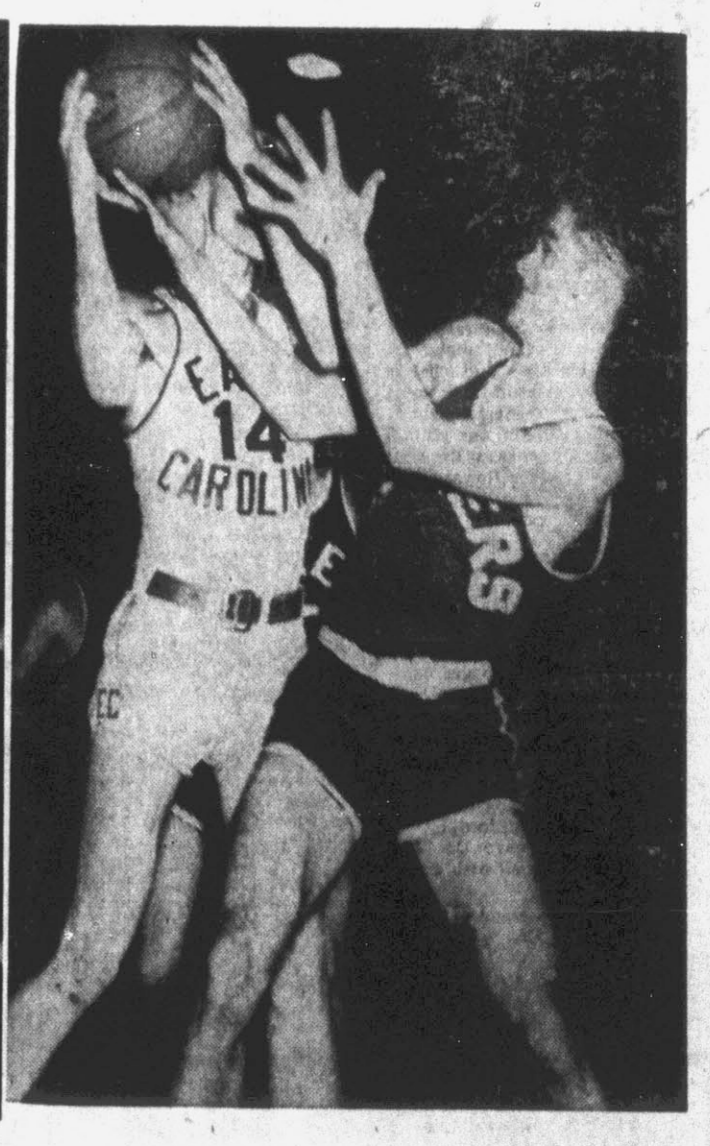

CHARLOTTE—(AP)—It's a good bet that college football scouts are tramping each other today to get Don King of Anderson, Paul Beck of Lenoir and Bryant Aldridge of BILL WOODALL, center for the Guilford Quakers, finds the going rough here. An unidentified East Carolina player already has Woodall hemmed in from the rear and that's big Charlie Huffman closing in from the left. Did Woodall score on the play? Nope. (Reflector Sports Photos by Roy Hardee).

CHARLIE HUFFMAN, East Carolina's six-four forward, is leading this chorus line of basketball players in a pose that would look perfectly at home in Mrs. Bill Dole's modern dance class. Bob Shoaf (No. 18) is the Guilford man behind Huffman. Bill McLeod is the Guilford man at the right. Sorry, the name and number of the ECC player looming up behind Shoaf got lost in the shuffle.

"IT'S MINE, so come on and leave the ball alone," seems to be the comment of Bill McLeod (on the left) as he wrestles ECC's Sonny Russell for possession of the ball. Russell didn't think much of McLeod's argument, though. He kept the ball and paced East Carolina to their first North State Conference win.

Kingston. The three backs were the stars of the Carolinas Shrine Bowl high school football game won by North Carolina 8-6 Saturday on a safety with less than a minute and a half to go.

King's brilliant running—he was voted the outstanding player in the 15th annual benefit game—more than atoned for the safety that came when he was trapped trying to skirt his right end with the South Carolinians fighting on their own one-yard line.

North Carolina scored first on a 21-yard run by Beck early in the second half. The 52-yard scoring drive was set up when Erud Julian Rogers of Wilmington intercepted a pass.

South Carolina tied it up late in the final quarter on a 77-yard punt return by King, with Larry Gosnell of Conway throwing the key block. King went over from the two-

Big Four Teams Impressive In Debut

By The Associated Press

North Carolina's Tar Heels, fresh from an impressive victory Saturday night over the Citadel, can move into the lead in the young Southern Conference basketball campaign tonight.

All the Tar Heels need is a victory over Furman at Greenville, S. C. The Tar Heels tripped the Citadel, 87-69. Vince Grimaldi, an accurate-shooting forward, scored 30 points.

One other conference game is scheduled tonight. Virginia Tech goes to West Virginia.

Outside the league, the Citadel entertains the South Carolina Naval Base Zippers, Maryland invades Virginia. Duke journeys to Winston-Salem to battle the Hanes Hosiers, William and Mary visits Seton Hall and Wake Forest faces the Enka Rayonites at Enka.

Dick Groat, the nation's No. 1 point-producer last year, apparently intends to be the same this season. Groat made his senior year debut Saturday night by pouring in 33 points as the Duke Blue Devils routed Temple, 85-48.

North Carolina State performed as expected in swamping Furman, 88-53. Forward Kim Buchanan made 25 points for State, and center Neil Gordon topped the Furman players with 18.

West Virginia tuned up for tonight's conference inaugural with Virginia Tech by battering West Virginia Wesleyan, 73-41. Meanwhile, Tech wasn't doing much with Eastern Kentucky, losing by 95-43.

Davidson squeezed by Catawba, 65-62, and Washington and Lee downed the Norfolk Naval five, 71-59. Clemson defeated Georgia, 87-47.

William and Mary's invasion of New York's Madison Square Garden resulted in an 85-70 beating by New York University. The independent Hanes Hosiers ruined Wake Forest's opening, 64-55.

After tonight, six conference games will be played this week. The remainder of the week's schedule:

Tuesday—North Carolina State at

Davidson; Wake Forest at Tennessee; University of Richmond at Quantico Marines.

Wednesday—Washington and Lee at Maryland; the Citadel at South Carolina; Clemson at Georgia.

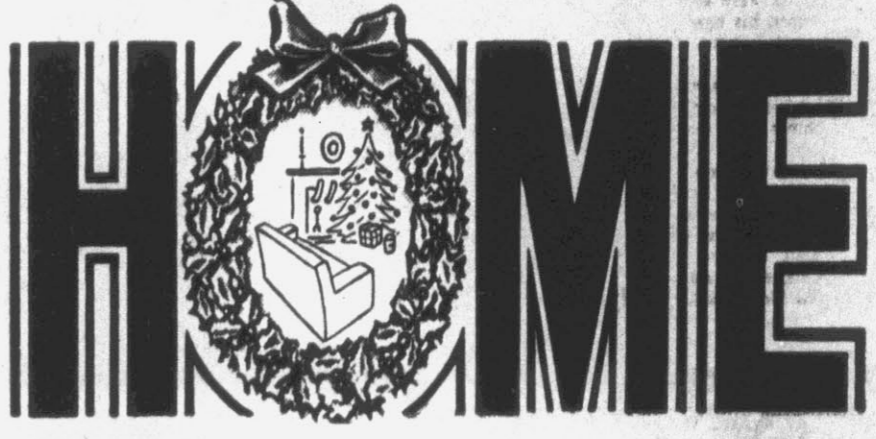

Thursday—North Carolina State at Wake Forest; Newberry at Furman.

Friday—North Carolina at University of Richmond; Virginia at George Washington.

Saturday—Furman at Davidson; Washington and Lee at Kentucky; Newberry at South Carolina; Bradley at Duke; Randolph-Macon at William and Mary; Maryland at Pennsylvania; Wake Forest at McCrory Hosiers.

Mortality Record Of Older People In U.S. Is Lagging

NEW YORK. — Although the over-all mortality record of the United States is one of the best in the world, and death rates in youth and early maturity compare very favorably with those of other countries, for people at ages 45 and over the mortality record lags behind that of other advanced nations, according to Dr. Louis I. Dublin, second vice-president and statistician of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

This is due largely, he pointed out, to relatively high death rates among our older people from these three major causes of death: accidents, the disease of the heart and circulatory system and diabetes. These findings are from a study which compares the United States death rates with those of 16 other advanced nations.

"The situation as to the heart and circulatory disorders, which cause three fifths of all deaths after age 45 in this country, is serious among the older men," Dr. Dublin said. "Only Australia and New Zealand come even near our level, while many countries record much lower rates. Among the older women the death rates for these disorders approximate the average for the other countries."

"The influence of diabetes in causing high mortality at the older ages is most marked among women. For women over 45 in the United States the 1948 death rate from diabetes was 111.6 per 100,000; Canada was next highest with a rate of 91.5.

"The high diabetes mortality may reflect our intensive case-finding activities and better reporting of the disease as a cause of death in recent years, but even granting this, the level is still well above that in other countries.

"The death rate from accidental injuries ages 45 and over for both men and women, is higher in the United States than in any of the other 16 countries."

For other leading causes of death, Dr. Dublin noted, the United States has average or below-average mortality at the older ages, with mortality from tuberculosis, pneumonia and influenza, and other infectious diseases very favorable at the older ages as well as earlier in life. The cancer rate above age 45 is at about the average for the other countries.

Dr. Dublin sees many opportunities for lowering the mortality among older Americans through health education, safety programs, regular medical examinations, and early treatment of the degenerative conditions.

"Some of our states already have death rates among their elders that compare with the best achieved by foreign countries," he observed. "The fact that older people are becoming an increasing large part of our population makes it more urgent than ever that we take adequate measures to safeguard their health."

TOO TOUGH FOR CHAMP
DETROIT — (UP) — Posch Ormsby Forbes XI, one of the country's top bulls, died at the age of 16 and veterinarians listed his diet as the cause of death. An autopsy showed the champion bull had been gorging on barbed wire and nails.

ON THE HOUSE

By DAVID G. BAREUTHER, AP Real Estate Editor

Changes in everyday living—along with new inventories and economic forces—are reflected directly in houses.

If changes in house styles could be forecast accurately, you could build a house that would be 20 to 30 years ahead of its time. You would have the problem of obsolescence licked. The house would be such a good investment a mortgage might pay you to build it. But so far no one has been able to achieve this, because style change in architecture is a most complicated process.

It comes about very gradually and subtly. Few people want to risk their life savings on a fad, folly or freak, to which they'll be tied for the rest of their days. This makes the average home owner conservative—the mortgage lender even more conservative.

The habit runs deep. To the person who grew up in New England environment, where the most beautiful homes were colonial landmarks, the classical house stands for success, security and gracious living.

Yet powerful forces are at work. Glass that was a luxury when classical architecture evolved, is now economical. In large sheets, and when sealed in doubled form, it makes walls of windows entirely practicable. Great sheets of plywood, pre-cast plaster, lightweight concrete and other new materials make new building methods possible. Radiant heat can eliminate the basement and more efficient heating and insulation make all rooms on one floor a comfortable arrangement.

The kitchen has been lifted from scullery to living room status by dishwashers, garbage disposers, food freezers and the long line of sleek electrical equipment.

High building costs compel houses to be planned more compactly. Even the emancipation of women and the spreading popularity of athletics and outdoor activi-

Mild For Season

Unusually mild weather for this season of the year continued to prevail in the Greenville area yesterday. The sky was clear and there was no frost last night.

The highest temperature here yesterday was 69 degrees. Lowest last night, 35, and at 8 a.m. today the mercury stood at 42. The sky was cloudy during today's forenoon.

Yesterday, a year ago, the highest temperature here was 66 degrees. Lowest that night, 34, and at 8 a.m. next day it was 38.

ties mark the house. The result is that designs radically different from what many people think a house should look like, are now glorified in magazines. With flat roofs, shed roofs, butterfly roofs that sag in the middle, glamorous walls of glass and colorful spacious living rooms, these houses capture the imagination. Young people especially are enthusiastic about them.

Such houses are being built in every state. They are becoming most familiar along the Pacific Coast. Blending of indoor-outdoor living is a major feature. Locations with spectacular vistas lend themselves to exploitation with window walls. Smaller plots lacking natural views find living rooms placed on the rear where a view can be created by landscaping.

"One thing is certain," observes Mary Davis Gillies in McCall's Book of Modern House (Simon & Schuster, $5), "a great style is in the process of formation."

Just off the press, this book presents 2 modern houses and their plans. Striking design ideas are shown in 130 photographs, 100 of which are in color. Radical departures from tradition and courageous experiments in functional planning distinguish these homes.

However, they are examples, rather than related components of a crystallized style. Mrs. Gillies points out that modern "does not refer to a style with as specific characteristics as a Cape Cod or Georgian house." She used the word to describe "a house built in the 20th Century and one that reflects the life and spirit of the present time."

Some of the plans are inconsistent, not compact, not efficient. Bedrooms may be strung railroad style down a long hall. Some perimeters obviously involve expensive foundation work. But personal preferences are apparent. For example, one family built a 14x20-foot dining-play room with fireplace adjoining the kitchen, while keeping the living room, without fireplace, 12½x13 feet, like a small old-fashioned parlor.

Expense of building and virtual impossibility of financing are admitted by the author. In a comprehensive "Prime: for Modern Houses," appended to this symposium, Mrs. Gillies weighs the factors involved. She sees progressive builders in all sections of the country watching and considering the modern house.

"In its name," she predicts, "good houses of classical permanence will be built, as well as poor houses which will embarrass builders and owners."

Suggest Reviving Arms Industry In West Germany

BONN, Germany (AP)—Some allied occupation authorities are thinking about resurrecting the German arms industry to help equip Atlantic defense forces.

With American arms output lagging, some influential occupation officials are suggesting that the West must tap the rich industrial Ruhr for armaments along with German manpower to tip the military balance against Russia.

A responsible allied source said today one allied leader in Germany already has proposed to his government that the West should permit full-scale German arms production again. He declined to identify the official of his government.

This source said the arguments of officials who favor helping the Ruhr to the West's arms drive, run like this:

Mass production of tanks, planes, artillery and other equipment by the Ruhr would speed up the equipping of 12 German divisions planned for the European army.

The Germans could also help equip the armies of Italy, Belgium and the Netherlands, which now are receiving weapons from Canada and the United States.

This would insure Britain and France priority on American arms shipments.

Robbery Suspect Returned To Pitt

A young Bethel Negro who allegedly broke into Andrews Hardware Store in Bethel more than a week ago and then fled the state, was brought back from Baltimore, Md., late Saturday by county authorities and placed in jail charged with breaking and entering and larceny.

Jim Jenkins, 23, who was identified by W. E. Andrews as being the man seen in the store Sunday morning, was taken into custody by Baltimore police sometime Wednesday. Sheriff Ruel W. Tyson said he received a wire from authorities there Thursday and sent officers "Duke" Andrews and R. W. King to Baltimore Friday to bring Jenkins back. They returned with the prisoner Saturday, and he was placed in jail under $600 bond. The sheriff said he would be tried in the January term of Superior Court.

Elks Lodge Has Memorial Rites

Greenville Lodge No. 1645, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, held memorial service Sunday afternoon for deceased members. Judge Albion Dunn delivered the address. He recited the history of the Elks, recalling that it was eight men who, nearly 100 years ago, laid the foundation for the order which now embraces 1,000,000 members in the United States and its territories. Judge Dunn attributed much of the growth of the Elks to its four cardinal principles—"charity, justice, brotherly love and fidelity." The service was in memory of the following deceased members:

Roy Barrett, N. O. Warren, Jack Lane, John Flanagan, I. W. Netherland, L. B. Garris, Dall Laughinghouse, Sr., C. B. Rowlette, Jr., Charles F. Manning, Felix Scheller, Cecil C. Jones, C. L. Russ, Clem Gardner and Bruce Baker.

Erskine Duff, exalted ruler, who presided over the memorial services, said, "Our order has decreed that the first Sunday in each December shall be set apart as a day for Elks to gather about their altars and pay tribute to the memory of departed members."

In addition to the exalted ruler, those officiating in the services were J. B. Spilman, esteemed leading knight; Jesse R. Moye II, esteemed loyal knight; R. W. Shippert, esteemed lecturing knight; Dr. J. M. Barrett, esquire; Chester Walsh, chaplain, and Dr. P. W. Pickelsimer, secretary.

Two Cab Drivers Killed By Maniac

Two taxicab drivers—one a double amputee—were slain brutally over the weekend in this tide: after Virginia area. Officers said the slayings were "the work of a maniac."

An intensive manhunt is in progress.

Police today officially listed robbery as the motive in both killings—one sometime Friday night and the other during the night.

The body of Luther M. Callis, 55—stabbed four times with an ice pick and the head crushed by a blow from an auto jack—was discovered early yesterday in near-by Warwick County.

Exactly 24 hours before, the body of Anthony Michael, 28—stabbed nine times around the abdomen and waist—was found about five miles from the spot where Callis' corpse was located.

Callis, who lost both legs years ago in a railway accident, was lying face down beside his empty cab. Beside his body lay the blood-stained ice pick and auto jack. Money, a ring and a watch had been taken from the body of the Seaford widower, father of one son.

The body of Michael, World War II veteran who was married and the father of two children, was located early Saturday in a ditch. His cab was gone, and police finally found it four hours later near Fort Eustis. Also missing were all of Michael's personal possessions.

Gasoline Truck Blown Up; Four Young Boys Die

MIDDLESEX, N. C. (AP)—A gasoline tank truck exploded near here yesterday, killing four young boys, three of whom were brothers. Nash County coroner Vann Matthews said indications were the explosion was set off by a firecracker. The four boys were playing on the parked truck when the blast occurred, he said.

Matthews identified them as Don Hopkins, 14; Dwayne Hopkins, 7; Dexter Hopkins, 3; sons of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Hopkins, and Harold Whitley, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Omus Whitley.

The truck was parked in the yard of the Hopkins home. The Hopkins boys' father, driver of the truck, was in the house at the time.

The Sunrise usher board of Cornerstone Baptist Church had their regular club meeting Sunday afternoon at the home of Mr. Claude Little, which happened to be on his birthday. The hostess served a turkey dinner and was topped with an ice cream birthday cake. Persons served were as follows: Mrs. Ruth Telpher, Mrs. Mamie Dixon, Mrs. Hattie Donelson, Mrs. Lula Heath, Mrs. Lillian Jones, Mrs. Mary Jenkins, Mrs. Lillian Jones, Mrs. Mildred Atkinson, Mrs. Mittle Atkinson, Mrs. Ida Hines, Mrs. Georgia Williams, Mrs. Susie Kelly, Miss Ellen Lurvet, Miss Connie Langley, Miss Marie Merritt, Rev. J. E. Tillet, Henry Peed, Henry Wooten, George Merritt, Levy Jones, Charlie Gray, Sella Price, and the host, Claude Little.

The Bachelor Benedict Club held its weekly meeting at the home of H. W. Payton Sunday, Nov. 25, at 8:40 p.m. A very interesting meeting was had. Reports were called for and given. Jas. Gorham, chairman of the Aid Committee, reported that a check for $10.00 had been sent to the Community Chest Drive. After the meeting Mr. Payton served a delicious repast.

The next meeting will be at the home of Chas. Shivers, 614 Clark St. All members are asked to be present and on time, as the Christmas season is here and there are great plans for the club to perform. Members will regret to learn of the sudden illness of the president, J. M. Foreman, who is confined to his bed at W. 5th St.

The funeral of Sister Amanda Vines will be at Paul's Chapel Primitive Baptist Church on Tuesday, December 4, where she has been a member for many years.

Wave Of Minor Fires In 3 Days

While December came in mild and clear, it ushered in a wave of minor fires for the Greenville fire department, which in the past three days answered four alarms.

An early morning blaze Saturday, believed to have originated from a faulty oil stove, destroyed the six-room farm home of Frank Savage, near the Red Bank Church. A fire truck was dispatched to the scene after a call was received, but was unable to control the flames which had gained too much headway by the time the truck arrived.

Only a small amount of furnishings from the house was saved.

Saturday afternoon, firemen were called to the river bridge fill where they put out a grass fire.

Yesterday around 1:30, a defective flue in the home of John Henry Payton, 1002 Fleming Street, set fire to the house causing minor damage.

Today at 10:10 local firemen were summoned again to a fire blaze, this time at the home of Ruby Moore, 1400 Factory street.

A portion of the wall and ceiling was damaged in the blaze. Firemen stated that the woman kept the blaze down until the firemen arrived by fighting the fire with a bucket of water.

The house was owned by the Garis Evans Lumber Company.

No "Grace Period" In Registering Motor Vehicles

City Clerk H. H. Duncan said this morning the time limit for registering motor vehicles operating in the city of Greenville will probably run parallel with the requirements for purchasing state license plates.

Duncan intimated that the so-called "grace period" would not extend beyond January 31, which is the deadline for buying state tags. "The period of registration includes the 12 month period from January 1 to December 31, 1952," the city clerk disclosed. He said that every resident motor vehicle in the city, except those temporarily operated for a period not exceeding 14 days of any one year, or those used for display or exhibition purposes and displaying dealer's tags, must be registered with the clerk's office.

"The fee for registration is only one dollar," Duncan stated.

Police Break Up Riot In Street By Churchgoers

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP)—Dozens of churchgoers were cast off to the police station yesterday when a riot over outstir of the pastor broke out in the street in front of the Ross Avenue Baptist Church.

Several church members swapped blows. Not content, the churchgoers broke into heated argument at the police station. Police Lt. Wilford Matlock said. He threatened to place all of them in jail.

Matters quieted and all were released. Officers said that technically none of the Baptists had been placed under arrest.

Six policemen were required to stop the riot.

According to U. S. Weather Bureau records, the world's record for the most rainfall in one minute, 65 inch, belongs to Opid's Camp, Calif.

Service League Cleared $2,000 In Recent Follies

The Greenville Service League termed its recent "Follies of '51" a success in both the public's response and the amount of money taken in for the Laughinghouse Hospital Bed Fund.

League President, Mrs. J. H. Thomas, said the league cleared approximately $2,000 from the follies to be used for the Laughinghouse Hospital Bed. The bed at the hospital is sponsored by the league for patients who cannot afford hospitalization.

"I wish to express my appreciation," Mrs. Thomas said, "to the cast, the patrons, the advertisers, the radio station, the newspaper and others for making the 'Follies of '51' a big success."

Prank Blew Up Family's Auto

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (UP)—A delayed-action Halloween prank blew up the automobile of Kent County Fire Chief Adolph Nelson.

Nelson put a concoction confiscated from a group of children Halloween night in the rear of his car and forgot about it. The youngsters had told authorities they included in the brew several ingredients that needed only to be jarred to explode.

The concoction blew up Sunday, apparently from spontaneous combustion, demolishing Nelson's auto.
