Utilities Board Allots New Sum To Improvements Project Account

Fund Still Short Of Early Estimate; Haste Urged In Water Plant Work

The Greenville utilities commission at its meeting Monday night voted to transfer $50,000 from its general fund account to its improvement project account.

It was pointed out at the meeting that the transfer of funds will leave the improvement project account some over $100,000 short of the estimate which was secured on the over-all improvement program begun in 1946.

Swartz explained that the capacity of the present water plant of the city is rated at one and one-half million gallons a day, but during recent months approximately two million gallons of water have been pumped through the filtering plant.

Plans for the interconnection with Virginia Electric Power company have gone to the drawing board and specifications for the purchase of equipment needed for the interconnection should be ready shortly after the first of the year.

MEET WITH PRESIDENT WASHINGTON (AP)—Attorney General McGrath and FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover met with President Truman at the White House today amid indications the President will act soon to counter tax central testimony flooding from Capitol Hill.

Modest Hero

Here's the latest Congressional Medal of Honor winner talking with his fiancée Rose Aranda at his home in San Bernardino, Calif. He is 23-year-old Sgt. First Class Joseph C. Rodriguez who speaks modestly of his action which the Army said was "an incredible display of valor." Single handed he knocked out five enemy strong-points in Korea last May 21 and killed 15 of the enemy. Rodriguez was inducted October 23, 1950. (AP Wirephoto).

Naster Testifies In Scandal Hearing

Accused Shakedown Artist Tries Avoid Public Questioning; Relates First Association With Caudle Was Favor

WASHINGTON (UP)—Bert K. Naster, ex-convict and accused participant in a $500,000 tax shakedown, said today he got a passport to go to Europe within 48 hours after he talked to T. Lamar Caudle about it.

Naster was on parole at the time. He pleaded guilty in Chicago to income tax evasion in 1946 and served about 20 months of a five-year sentence.

Naster testified before a House subcommittee investigating tax scandals after one member demanded the immediate replacement of Atty. Gen. J. Howard McGrath.

Russian Blasts Hopes Of Any Plans To Disarm

Vishinsky Delivers Coup-de-Grace Before UN Political Committee

PARIS (UP)—Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky blasted any remaining hope today for an early Big Four disarmament agreement.

He delivered the coup de grace in the United Nations General Assembly's 60-member political committee by:

- 1. Rejecting the West's Baruch plan for international control and regulation of armaments and the atomic bomb as "Utopian" and charged that even the U.S. would not and could not accept it.
2. Accusing the U.S., Britain and France of full blame for the "mad armaments race".
3. Charging that the West's proposal for disarmament by progressive stages is only a "cunning mechanism" devised to postpone indefinitely the outlawing of the atomic bomb.

Mayor Confirms Paying Of Bonus

City Will Go Ahead, Expecting Utilities To Provide Money

Mayor Lester D. Page confirmed officially yesterday afternoon the payment of Christmas bonuses for city employees.

Following a call meeting of the finance committee of the Greenville board of aldermen, the mayor said, "We are going ahead and pay the bonus." The payment of the bonus was approved by the aldermen Thursday night, but a question about the bonus came into the picture yesterday when the utilities commission plans to turn over to the city $800,000 this fiscal year while the budget set up by the aldermen specified $625,000 from the utilities to go into the city general fund.

Shoppers Begin Buying Earlier

Christmas shopping is now in full swing in Greenville and stores report buyers here from many places in Eastern Carolina.

Charles B. Bissette, manager of Bissette's Drug Store; Charles E. Blair, manager of Blount-Harvey's; B. D. Johnston, manager of Belk-Tyler's; and Dan Saleed, manager of Saleed's department store, said Christmas shopping has started in volume earlier this year.

UN Warns Of Communist Trickery In Sought-For Trade Of War Prisoners

PANMUNJOM, Korea (UP)—The United Nations warned today that the Communists may try to hold back "sizeable numbers" of captured Allied soldiers from any exchange of war prisoners.

Rear Adm. R.E. Libby, chief U.N. delegate on the prisoner of war subcommittee, bitterly accused the Reds of refusing to follow "civilized rules of warfare" in handling the question.

The program would grant these Communist demands:
1. Neutral instead of joint U.N.-Communist observer teams to check behind the lines for armistice violations.

concessions, but balked at those demanded of the Communists on grounds they would "interfere with the internal affairs" of North Korea.

Bar Association Elects Officers

Falkland Attorney Named President For Coming Year

T. K. FOUNTAIN

At a supper and business session last night, the Pitt County Bar Association elected T. K. Fountain of Falkland president for the coming year.

What was termed the "largest gathering of the association in many months", with 24 of the 36 members present, also elected Clifton Everett of Bethel as vice-president and Kenneth Hite of Greenville as secretary-treasurer.

Italy May Pass Defense Goal In Sending Troops

ROME, Italy (UP)—Italy is close to passing her 1951 goal of delivering five divisions to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's North Atlantic Pact army, military sources said today.

The poorest of the Atlantic Pact partners has turned over to Eisenhower three divisions, plus three independent brigades which numerically amount almost to two more divisions. Another regular infantry division is now being outfitted with American armor.

PANMUNJOM, Korea (UP)—Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway promised the Communists today that "appropriate disciplinary action" would be taken against an Allied pilot who bombed and strafed the Kaesong area early Tuesday.

Clark Knew?

CHARLOTTE (AP)—The Charlotte News said today that Tom C. Clark, then Attorney General, was advised by the FBI of "indiscretions" by T. Lamar Caudle as U.S. attorney in North Carolina before Caudle's nomination July 18, 1945, to be an Assistant Attorney General.

Britain Will Pay Loan Installment

Could Have Invoked Waiver Clauses In 1946 Agreements

LONDON (AP)—Britain has decided to pay in full installments of capital and interest due on the United States and Canadian loans at the end of the year, an informed government source reported today.

This country could have avoided paying the interest on both loans by invoking waiver clauses which were written into the 1946 agreements. In view of its economic plight, there had been speculation that it would do so.

Romania Claims U.S. Parachuted Guerrilla Spies

BUCHAREST, Romania (UP)—The government has accused the United States of parachuting two spies into Romania Oct. 18 to organize guerrilla action and gather military information.

The accusation was contained in a note handed to American official James W. Gantenbein last night by Alexander Bunicaciu, first assistant minister of foreign affairs.

Washington called a charge "absolutely fantastic." They said it seemed to fit into the pattern of accusations made recently by Soviet bloc nations in connection with the $100,000,000 fund voted by Congress for helping refugees from those countries.

McCloy Critical Of German View

Excessive Demands And Exaggerated Burdens Noted

FRANKFURT, Germany (UP)—U. S. High Commissioner John J. McCloy criticized the Germans sharply today for making excessive demands on Allied occupation authorities and exaggerating their burdens.

McCloy made his criticisms in a quarterly report. He expressed the hope that a more objective mood will prevail when final decisions are taken on agreements now being negotiated to give West Germany near-sovereignty.

Fifteenth Straight Day Of Near-Lull In Ground Fighting; Air War Idles Due To Poor Visibility

8TH ARMY HQ Korea (UP)—United Nations and Communists infantrymen sparred lightly along the 145-mile Korean front today at the half-way mark in a 30-day "cease-fire."

Intermittent snow flurries fell along the battlements as U.N. planes took off to continue their attacks. The air war, which resumed Tuesday for the first time in three days, halted again as haze and fog closed over North Korea. F-86 Sabrejet pilots flying screening missions over "MIG Alley" Wednesday reported no sign of Communist fighters.

Court To Again Review Legality Public School Religion Classes

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Supreme Court has agreed to take another look at the constitutionality of religious instruction in public schools.

The New York complaint was filed by two Brooklyn parents who objected to the state practice of releasing pupils for an hour each week to attend religious classes at the parents' choice. They claimed the system produces religious division among children and violation of the American tradition of separation of church and state.

Program Of Religious Music At Music Club Meet

The Greenville Music Club held its December meeting in the Eighth Street Christian Church, Tuesday evening, December 11, at 8 o'clock at which time a program of religious music used for the Christmas season was presented by the choirs of St. Paul's Episcopal and the Immanuel Baptist Churches.

Music written in forms used by the Roman, Episcopal, Lutheran and Protestant Churches comprised the numbers sung.

Mr. George Perry, organist and choir director of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, presented his choir for the first part of the program, directing the group from the organ bench, where he accompanied them on the organ. An Advent hymn written in plainsong for the very early Church, was the first number sung, followed by the Ninefold Kyrie Eleison, Sanctus and Agnus Dei of a Communion Service designated to be sung on Christmas Day, and written in plainsong around the 10th, 12th and 14th centuries.

Palestrina's lovely Gregorian Chant "Adoremus Te" was the only number sung that is used strictly in the Roman Church, and was the best number on the program. The final number was the stirring Liturgical Episcopal hymn, "Let All Mortal Flesh Keep Silence." This hymn was originally written to be sung in the early Church as a grand procession for priests and people in presenting the bread, wine and flowers to the Altar prior to the celebration of Holy Communion.

The Immanuel Baptist Choir sang under the direction of their choir director, Mrs. Moye Dail, being accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Howard Bodkin. The first number sung by this choir was the choral "Break Forth, O Beauteous Heavenly Light," taken from "The Christmas Oratorio" by Johann Sebastian Bach. Bach, as a Lutheran, was a deeply religious man, and he was also a prolific composer. It is said that when he was organist and teacher, it was his duty to conduct a new cantata or oratorio each Sunday, and to write one as needed.

Carols are folk in origin, are dear to everyone at Christmas time because of the simple emotions they evoke, and are among the oldest forms of music. The next number sung by this choir was the lovely old French Carol "Sleep of Child Jesus." The final number presented was that universally loved Christmas hymn, "Silent Night, Holy Night." This well known hymn was written in 1818 by a young Austrian priest, Josef Mohr, on Christmas Eve night after spending the night in an humble abode with a mother and new born babe and being inspired by them to write these verses.

Since no gathering dedicated to Christmas music is complete without the singing of Christmas hymns, Mr. Dan Vornholt, teacher of voice at East Carolina College, led the audience in the singing of Christmas hymns, after which the Rev. H. G. Haney, pastor of Eighth Street Christian Church, pronounced the benediction.

Christmas decorations in the Church were arranged by the hostess committee, which was composed of Mr. and Mrs. Charles White, Mrs. S. T. White, Mrs. Travis Hooker, Mrs. H. G. Haney and Miss Agnes Fullilove.

Tarheel Newsmen Assigned Post In Italian Embassy

CHAPEL HILL —(AP)— John P. McKnight, Shelby native who spent nearly two decades as foreign correspondent for the Associated Press, has left for Italy to become information officer for the U. S. Embassy in Rome. Mr. and Mrs. McKnight left by

Strength for the Day

OUR PARISH
A friend said to me recently, "Don't you think every Christian believer is a preacher, more or less, and that every man has his own parish?"
Precisely. If our religion does not shine through our daily acts and make better the home, neighborhood, and community in which we live, then all devotion in the sanctuary on Sunday is vain. The church at large has great mission fields to which it sends workers, and to that program you and I as Christians must give our allegiance. But our personal mission field is much nearer than Asia or Africa. Every one of us stands at the center of a parish. We are the priest therein, either mediating God to someone or unworthily standing in the way of someone who is seeking light.

St. Paul, writing to the Corinthians, said, "Ye are our epistle, written in our hearts, known and read of all men; being made manifest that ye are an epistle of Christ." So every true Christian is a Gospel, and a church, and a preacher. We all stand in the midst of a parish which is distinctively ours.

When Jesus sent out the disciples he said, "As ye go, preach." His instructions to us are the same. We preach more effectively by what we are and what we do than by what we say.

A Choice To Be Made Soon

Time is running out on the Korean armistice negotiations.

If the negotiators are to meet their agreed-upon deadline, they have but fifteen more days to iron out their difficulties. As of now, the United Nations and Communists appear about as far as ever from effecting an armistice acceptable to both sides.

The deadlock now is over the basis for the exchange of prisoners. The deadlock a few weeks ago was over the cease-fire line, and if the present deadlock is broken, the next item on the agenda probably will bring about another stalemate.

The United States and the United Nations want a truce in Korea to end the fighting which has claimed thousands upon thousands of lives. The Communists have only one thought in mind and that is to further their hold on the world no matter what the conditions or what it costs in lives.

Right now the United Nations forces are merely holding their own and not attempting to take any new ground because of the 80-day agreement on the cease fire line. If the truce agreement is not reached by December 27, the current cease-fire line will be tossed out the window and either side will hold the ground it is able to gain.

While we want peace in Korea, the United Nations should have its plans ready to put into action if the negotiations are not completed by the December 27 deadline. The matter of using atomic bombs, which has been suggested from many sources, the use of atomic field weapons if they are ready, and other questions should be decided by the UN military and diplomatic leaders before the deadline.

Fundamentally the UN must decide whether to prosecute a vigorous war against the Communists in Korea, or whether to continue with the defensive, stalemate philosophy in hopes that some terms can be reached with the Communists. In the long run it may cost less American lives to fight a showdown war with the Communists in Korea than it will to let the negotiations drag out indefinitely while men are killed and little progress is made toward peace.

Corruption In Government Can Not Be Compromised

Attorney General Howard McGrath's recent emotional speech about the honesty of government officials somehow failed to touch our heartstrings.

The Reflector is more impressed with the statement of Internal Revenue Commissioner John B. Dunlap that the sore spots must and will be cleaned out of the tax collecting system. To go one step farther along the road to action, we must admit that the investigations carried on by the congressional committees impresses us even more than the statements made by McGrath and Dunlap.

In other words, The Reflector is more interested in the action which will rid the government of the dishonest officials than the promises of what is to be done in the future. The congressional investigations have uncovered a great quantity of muck and mire that has been brought in on the feet of a large number of appointees. Since then it has been tracked through various departments. Nothing less than a thorough house-cleaning will get it out; and nothing less than stringent action against those who brought it in will prevent the same thing happening again.

That is where we are not so sure that the congressional investigators will follow through with their task. The people of the nation have seen in the past that members of Congress are reluctant to take to task members of their own group who have taken part in questionable activities while in the legislative body. In the present inquiries into scandalous activities in government, politics must be relegated to its rightful position of minor importance. Unless care is taken to see that politics is not pushed to the fore, it may prevent the house-cleaning job which needs to be done.

Action should not and must not be taken along party lines. Boosting the government back to a higher moral plane will be of benefit to the people of the nation as a whole, and indirectly it will benefit both the Democratic and Republican parties if they clean out the rat nests made by members of their own parties.

If now, as in the past, politics is considered of primary importance and the general welfare of the nation of secondary importance, we may expect corruptness to continue to grow in the government. The only way to stamp out the beachhead of corruptness is through vigorous disciplinary action against those who are guilty of fraud and corruption in the federal government . . . from the bottom to the top.

National Whirligig

WASHINGTON—The frequent mention of Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson of Kentucky as a presidential possibility in event of a Truman retirement has caused such a stir of ambition among his associate jurists that personal and judicial harmony may be jeopardized until the question is resolved.

Although only four members of the court are considered to be in the running as Mr. Vinson's successor, should he be nominated by Trumanless Democrats next July, there is not a single one of his eight colleagues who is not eager for elevation to the highest honor a judge can attain barring the presidency.

ADVANTAGE—Lest speculation on this question may seem indiscreet or embarrassing to the eight black-robed men on the high tribunal, it should be noted here that personal and political considerations enter into the naming of a Chief Justice as fully as they do into any other partisan appointment. There is nothing sacrosanct about these nominations.

A President normally consults party bigwigs about filling vacancies, seeking to gain whatever advantage he can for himself and the party. Incumbents frequently propose or oppose names on the White House roster, as they did in advance of the appointments of the late Chief Justices Taft and Stone. Sectional and religious considerations sometimes influence the selection.

AMBITIONS—In short, a man does not become immune to personal or political ambitions and motives, or even to human frailties, simply because he goes on the bench. This has been especially true ever since Franklin D. Roosevelt dragged the court into sharp political controversy with his court-packing proposal.

Moreover, both F.D.R. and Mr. Truman, by assigning members to outside tasks, have stripped this tribunal of the aloofness and dignity it once enjoyed and merited.

Thus, as a result of Mr. Vinson's indirect involvement in party politics, and in view of the character of the court, a behind-the-scenes rivalry animates and excites his colleagues.

SENIOR—The four men who are known to believe themselves entitled to promotion to the C. J. assignment are Justices Hugo Lafayette Black of Alabama, Stanley Forman Reed of Kentucky, Robert Houghwout Jackson of New York, and William Orville Douglas of Washington. All four were suggested when Mr. Vinson was brought in from the outside by Mr. Truman in 1946.

Mr. Black is the senior of the court, as well as one of its most able and hard-working members. But he and Mr. Truman have never been close friends. Moreover, the fact that he hails from Alabama would not mean that his selection would be politically helpful. He is 66 years old, which makes him fairly near the retirement age of 70.

FAVORITE—Mr. Reed ranks second to Mr. Black in seniority. His resignation has been expected for some time, but his recent recovery of health inclined him to remain on. Now that there is the slightest chance of his becoming a Chief Justice, he will not quit until the question is settled. He is 68, which may jeopardize his chances.

The lawyers' favorite would be Justice Jackson of New York, who is considered to have the most brilliant legal mind on the court. Contrary to President Truman's failing memory in this instance, he is the man suggested for the Stone vacancy by the late Charles Evans Hughes. Mr. Jackson's other assets are his age—he is 60—and his New York background.

IMPETUOUS—"Cowboy Bill" Douglas is the darling of the so-called "liberals," especially as they are represented by the Americans for Democratic Action, which speaks for the Roosevelt faction of the party. Mr. Truman's growing dislike of that impetuous group, however, may not help the Douglas ambitions.

Court conservatives, as well as politicians and lawyers of that stripe, would be horrified by his selection. His public pronouncements on world problems, especially Russia, make him anathema to them. Mr. Vinson would be the choice of Mr. Truman, who would naturally be consulted about a successor by Mr. Truman, if there should be a vacancy next year.

Although they have not always agreed on the court, both are of the quiet, conservative type. No other appointment would so commend both Mr. Truman and Mr. Vinson to influential legal, financial and business interests in New York and elsewhere. That would be an important consideration in a presidential year, and it will figure importantly in any conversations the President and the Chief Justice may have on the question.

SALEM, OHIO, FARM AND DAIRY: "Government determines to what extent you are to be regimented. It determines what you shall receive for your beef and pork, or did determine, but a ray of light and hope was cast when Congress failed to put its stamp of approval on all the controls and regulations that could be dreamed up by those wanting a controlled economy."

How About Those Closer Home

Somebody Told Me

By J. J. (Jack) EDWARDS, JR.

By checking the news around the country, you can see that some crazy deals are in progress:

Near Seoul, Korea, the U. S. Army's 568th Ordnance Company decided to cancel a $580 contract with the Sam Whan construction company to repair its boiler, because its own Korean carpenter had already done the job for two and a half cents.

In Atlanta, after a watch and two rings disappeared from the home of the Rev. George W. Jordan, he held a special service at his church, gave his congregation a sermon on "The Sin of Robbery." Later, he found the stolen goods on his doorstep.

In Santa Clara, Calif., Jackie Cambra, age 6, started down his chimney, got stuck and finally got unstuck with the help of the fire department. When the ordeal was over, Jackie wrote a letter to Santa Claus: "Use the front door or window."

In Detroit, Mrs. Dorothy Van Dorn sued for divorce, complaining that her husband (1) put all their food in a freezer, (2) kept the freezer locked, (3) made her pay for any food she ate, and (4) also charged her the 3 per cent Michigan sales tax.

In Springfield, Mass., a thief rushed up to a fellow on the street, cut off his necktie, but missed by an inch getting his $150 diamond stickpin.

In Atlanta, a department store manager received an order for five Confederate caps from five U. S. Air Force officers in Korea, and gladly accepted the paying of a $10 Confederate bill.

In Chicago, the police caught a 17-year-old juvenile delinquent on his way to visit his girl friend, and took away from him (1) three pistols, (2) a bayonet, (3) 22 rounds of ammunition, and (4) six switchblade knives.

In Hot Springs, Ark., a bootlegger hunted up a tax collector and paid $73.50 on a batch of homemade whiskey, was arrested for making illegal liquor, put on probation by the judge, who said he was too honest to be put in jail.

In Washington, D. C., a hand reached through the window and helped itself to $81 from the table of Gertrude Hill, who was counting the proceeds from the Helping Hand Club's bazaar.

In St. Louis, the Atlasas Manover Company advertised in its window with a sign: "Woman Wanted." And I thank you.

Around Capitol Square

Reflector Bureau

By LYNN NISBET

Assn. Afternoon Dallas

By LYNN NISBET
DEATH—Dr. Henry O. Lineberger was buried in Raleigh Sunday, afternoon. That night Kerr Craig Ramsay died at his home in Salisbury. Both were victims of heart attacks, both were highly valuable citizens and public officials of the state, and both were popular among Capitol Square folk. It was less than three months ago, in mid-September, that two distinguished citizens and well known Capitol Square figures died within a few hours of each other, Walter P. Stacy, chief justice of the supreme court, and W. T. (Tom) Best, veteran newspaper man and dean of the Capitol reporters. Since the middle of September many other valuable citizens of North Carolina have died, some of them with equal unexpectedness, but four here listed seemed to have more affect in Capitol Square.

RECORDS—Justice Stacy's record as chief extended back over a period of thirty-five years, and included notable contributions in the fields of jurisprudence and arbitration. He was 67 when he died. Tom Best's record as a reporter covered almost half a century, 47 years of it on the Raleigh scene. He was 73 when he died, although anybody who had known him less than sixty years had difficulty in believing it. Henry Lineberger had contributed handsomely to public good as a practicing dentist, as an official in dental societies—local, state and national; through efforts to raise the standard of his profession and to promote the dental college at Chapel Hill. His outstanding contribution was as chairman of the state hospital board of control since 1945. He would resent any claim in his behalf that he was mainly responsible for the progress in mental hospitals during his regime as chairman. His associates on the board will testify that it was his kindly, courteous and diplomatic handling of several incidents pregnant with friction that welded into an actual efficiently working policy the numerous ideas, resulting in the improvements about which the state boasts. He was in his early sixties when he died.

LOSS—Kerr Craig Ramsay was just five months from his fortieth birthday when he died Sunday night. (The State Manual says he was born July 23, 1911.) His service record on state level began with membership in the general assembly of 1941. His ability was recognized, despite his youthful age, and he moved rapidly to leadership in that and subsequent sessions. He became speaker of the house of representatives in 1949. He had been seriously considered as a candidate for governor next year and also as a competent successor to North Carolina's late Chief Justice. He was a member of congress, Robert L. Doughton. There was general belief he would sometime fill one of these posts. It is no disparagement of the others mentioned here to report that because of the age factor, the passing of Kerr Craig Ramsay is regarded a greater loss to the state of North Carolina than any of the other three. Who is to do the jobs in ten years of public service are appraised, it is almost impossible to approximate what he might have done during the succeeding ten, twenty or thirty years.

OPINION—There are all kinds of "public opinion" polls being conducted and there are many people who make it their business to interpret trends in such opinion, which is admittedly the greatest force in any democratic society. Around Raleigh, and presumably in most other state capital cities, politics and the science of government occupies major interest of other people. Exceptions to this general rule occur when the capital city happens to be also the chief business or industrial center of the state. Atlanta, Georgia, is an outstanding example of that situation. It is easy for newspaper and radio reporters whose beats are limited to Raleigh or Washington or Allany or Baton Rouge to get the impression that political matters are of primary concern to the average citizen. Occasional trips to other places provides evidence that while thinking people everywhere recognize the impact of the politics and government upon all their relations, many of them are far less concerned about who may be the next president or governor or public official of lesser rank than about who will be manager of the mill or store where they work, or about the industrial development of their community.

INDIRECT—World politics is an important bearing upon world trade and world politics reflects sentiment of people in small communities. Sometimes the men and women whose chief problem is getting money to buy groceries and keep up payments on the house or the car do not fully understand this relationship. So the impact of politics, except in the political centers, is indirect. Your reporter has had occasion within the past ten days to travel over the state from Carolina Beach to Asheville, and talk with a lot of people whose livelihood is not derived from a government payroll as is largely the case with Raleigh folk.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

A CIO ENDORSEMENT
(Wilson Daily Times)

It stands to reason that at some stage in our life the Democrats who now rule will be ousted. If they are, it stands to reason, moreover, that they'll be replaced by the Republicans. When that happens, what will happen to all the CIO groups which have been backing Truman? Will they be nondescript, in a sense? Or will they, as they did in 1936, try to hop on a new band wagon in the hope of salvaging something from the spoils?

The Communication Workers of America, fifth largest union in the CIO, through its president, Joseph A. Beirne, came out the other day for Truman for another term. He made that endorsement unequivocal. He promised, moreover, to deliver the 300,000 votes that his union can cast. It's pretty big talk. And it's possible he can deliver a large portion of those votes. But similar unions promised the Taft opponent in Ohio something of the same thing in 1960. And they weren't able to deliver. Not all union men see eye-to-eye with their leaders. Some have learned to think for themselves. They belong to the unions not because they want political advice, but to get better wages and working conditions. But some of those union leaders think they own their members, that they can herd them at will. Before them lies a rude awakening when the nation changes. They will still be the leaders of the unions, but they'll be on the outs politically. For, as The Times has said, it stands to reason that one party can't go on forever. Sooner or later it's bound to stub its toe.

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER
A lot of trouble is brewing for a former Army general. He is Telford Taylor, administrator of the Small Defense Plants Administration, set up by Congress last summer.

While Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson has said the defense program is up to schedule, it is moving slower than industry had expected. There have been some cutbacks in civilian production, but they have been mild in the aggregate. Talk of an "operation gullotine" by which many small civilian plants would be put out of business by a cut-off of scarce materials has died down.

Because reaching the defense peak has been slower in coming than most people expected is no reason to believe that it will not come. Mr. Wilson says defense production will eventually exceed three billion dollars a month and that will mean less critical materials for civilian plants.

As that time approaches, owners of small plants, losing civilian work, will intensify their demands for a larger share in defense orders. They will again send delegations to Washington; they will again needle their Congressmen. And 1952 being an election year, the Congressmen will be extremely sensitive to needs. No matter what share of defense work small plants get, they will clamor for more. And Gen. Taylor will catch the brunt of the storm.

He is already taking steps to get more work for small plants. One of the first things he did after taking office was to ask for the elimination of "set-off" clauses in defense contracts. Under these clauses, a prime contractor has a lien on his subcontractors' profits for any sums they may owe him. It materially reduces a small operator's ability to get loans to finance his work.

Gen. Taylor has also asked the Defense Department, in a strongly worded letter, to take steps to give more work to small plants. He asked a new study of the entire procurement program to that end; for termination of what share of work should go to small plants; to adopt new and realistic definitions of what constitutes a small plant; to help small plants form more pools for handling contracts and to coordinate and use existing inventories of small plants.

He may get some action. He has a Congressional mandate and a lot of Congressmen backing him up. But no matter how much action he gets, he will also get a whole lot of blame. It's part of the job.

MAY NOT BE SO SOFT
One small bank has created a national furor. American Trust Co., New York, has announced it plans to stay open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. week days and from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturdays. It has put to New York banks the question of whether they will also stay open evenings and Saturdays as a competitive measure; their decision will influence other banks across the country. Some, however, can't play the game. Experienced manpower is too scarce.

Over the years banks have experimented with late hours. A San Francisco bank once tried around-the-clock hours. But most banks have dropped these experiments, usually because the added costs in salaries were not justified by the amount of business. However, times are changing. Metropolitan banks have been losing deposits to outlying banks in many areas because firms and families have difficulty in getting downtown during banking hours. The rise of Friday and Saturday shopping, resulting from both husband and wife working, has also increased demand for late bank hours in some sections.

NEW PRODUCTS
PAIL: A new ice-cube pail consists of two three-quart compartments. It can be used as a single pail or each section can be used separately. It is cork-insulated and made by Hemex Corp., 41 Murray St., New York. DISPENSER: Newest product in a squeezable plastic dispensing bottle is molybdenum disulfide powder, which is used as a dry lubricant in some industrial processes. The bottle makes it apply while machine parts are in motion. It is by Moly-Lube Products, Great Neck, N. Y. WHEELS: Roller skate wheels of plastic, said to last longer and make less noise than wood or fiber wheels, are now being made (by Fo-Mac Enterprises, Inc., 114 W. Archer St., Tulsa, Okla.). The plastic, Enrup, is said to reduce the danger of skidding on rinks.

CONSTRUCTION DOWN, STILL AT CAPACITY
The government's report that construction declined in November does not signify any let-down in the economy. The report said that residential building declined less than seasonally, while industrial and commercial building declined more. But the reason for the latter decline is the shortage of certain materials. In other words construction is just as high as the supply of materials permit.

Hal Boyle's Column

NEW YORK —(AP)—Dear Santa Claus:

A little girl from the Bronx wrote you recently and asked for a baby gorilla for Christmas. She said if she couldn't have the gorilla—she just wanted to grow up with it—she didn't care for anything at all.

Well, that's pretty much the way I feel, except I don't want a baby gorilla. I want an elf. I've wanted one all my life—a good, well-trained, obedient elf, sound of mind and limb.

As a child I began to suspect there was something wrong with people. Now, after 40 years of living, I've come to the conclusion they just aren't dependable. They get all mixed up.

You do a swell job of straightening things out while you're on duty, Santa, but you take a rather long vacation. What I want is one of your elves to fill in on the 364 days a year you aren't working. And I want him this year—or never.

One of the troubles with civilization, probably, is that it gave up believing in elves—and is now plagued with gremlins.

What I want is a real, conscientious, old-fashioned, good-hearted elf to help me fight the gremlins of today. Every household really needs one.

An elf would help fill the void still left in modern living despite the invention of the electric dishwasher and the all-purpose vitamin tablet. He'd take the place of the cricket on the hearth—or rather, in our house the radiator.

There are so many things for him to do about the place. When the covers slipped off me at night, no more blind groping and grunting about it! The dark little elf would attend to that. He could also bite the alarm clock in the morning, give me a shave, and put the coffee pot on the stove.

All day long he could do little household chores like cleaning the venetian blinds and making elfin remarks to my wife. That would keep her in such good humor that when I came home, she'd say, "Let's eat at home, tonight, dear. I don't feel like going out. I'm just worn out from laughing at that wonderful elf we got for Christmas."

One of his big jobs would be to answer the door and the telephone, tasks I have come to hate. "No, Mr. Boyle isn't at home," he'd say politely. "But this is his elf. Any message, sir?"

There are some days when I'd like to take him to the office. Can't you imagine all the things you could do at your office, pleasant or mean, with the help of a likable elf?

With meat eating what it does now, Santa, I'd prefer a vegetarian elf, of course. We don't have any porridge (I understand they like porridge), but perhaps you have one that could get along on carrots, blackstrap molasses and yogurt?

Naturally, we'd guarantee him social security, a two-pants suit a night out each week, and vacations with pay. Even an elf wants to dress well and relax like everybody else.

I don't know, Santa, how long even an elf could stand the strain of Manhattan life. He may turn into a gremlin himself. But if he does, you can have him back next year.

Sincerely,

Hal Boyle

Letter

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON — Christmas trees are a hobby with Arthur M. Bowder, extension forester, U. S. Department of Agriculture, but with many Americans raising them is an up-and-coming industry and a highly profitable one.

Mr. Bowder estimates that more than 28,500,000 trees—fir, spruces, pines and others—will be on hand to supply the nation's 1951 requirements. Most of the trees come from north Middle West states, New England, New York, Pennsylvania and the Northwest Pacific region.

"The bulk of the trees come out of wild land," he told me, "but more and more producers are getting the seedling stock and actually growing the trees in plantations. They've been getting marketable trees in about 10 years."

The little private growers, he says are turning out bushier, greener, prettier-sized trees than we used to find on the market. But the Forest Extension Service is encouraging all cutters to get better trees for the market.

"There's been a lot of grumbling about the poor trees left on the market after the season," he said. "Some cutters used to just go out and whack down any old tree that had a green branch on it. Now they're getting instructions on how to do the job right."

Mr. Bowder says more women are reported to be taking part in this year's Christmas tree harvest, and he says they have proved excellent workers, especially in sorting, grading and bundling and in jobs requiring care.

"I would like to see hem used more in selecting trees for cutting, because they have a better idea of a shapely tree that would suit the house than the average woodsman or lumberjack," he said. Mr. Bowder believes poor trees should be left in the woods and improved by shearing and pruning before cutting.

Hailing from Coeur d'Alene, on the edge of the Idaho mining country, he has been a tree man about 30 years and has been with the government since 1936.

"I came up the hard way beginning with working in the logging camps," he said. He also taught forestry for six years at the University of Idaho.

Dance Group Entertains At Highway Employees Meet

On Friday night, December 7, following a barbecue dinner given by the Pitt County Chapter of the North Carolina State Highway Employees Association, Mrs. Marie Wallace presented a delightful program consisting of a series of dances featuring Tap, Ballet, Hawaiian and Acrobatics.

Christmas Play Presented At Sans Souci Club

Those taking part, pupils of Mrs. Wallace, were: Barbara Allen, Lib Rogers, Mary Dunn Beatty, Joy Perkins, Linda Joyner, Cynthia Cranford, Ann Hamric, Hannah Proctor, Patsy James, Ann Norris and Buddy Rogers. The entertainers were highly praised by everyone.

The Sans Souci Book Club met Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. T. Chestham on West Fourth Street, with Mrs. W. L. Hall as co-hostess.

Young Hostesses Give Christmas Party At Club

Miss Patricia Morton and Miss Linda Morton were hostesses to 70 of their young friends when they entertained at a Christmas party on last Friday night at the Woman's Club.

The young hostesses are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Morton of this city. Decorations throughout the club rooms emphasized the holiday motif, with Christmas ornaments, trees and garlands of greenery being used.

Chapter officers L. F. Waters and C. D. Bass, Unit officers J. L. McDonald, J. G. Gibbs and E. D. Credle, and members of the Entertainment Committee were recognized by Chairman Annie Laurie Askew, who presided over a short business meeting.

The theme of the play emphasized the idea that Christmas should be observed by reference to the birth and spirit of Jesus and not in a strictly material way.

Guests of the evening were Mr. K. R. Scott, past State president, and Mrs. Scott of Greensboro, and Mr. Fred Biggerstaff, present 2nd vice-president, of Bessemer City.

Following the program, delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses. Christmas carols were played during the refreshment hour.

The Sport Reflector

By JIMMY WELLS

The retirement of Joe DiMaggio as an active baseball player will not come as a surprise to many of the game's followers. It has been expected for quite some time and, in some cases, DiMaggio has been almost begged to quit.

Centerfield in Yankee Stadium will hardly seem the same place without the graceful Italian. He's been there since 1936 and has easily been one of baseball's most outstanding performers since he first donned the uniform of the San Francisco Seals.

DiMaggio has done his job well. He's quitting while he's still on top. He will not soon be forgotten by the American public.

Just who will succeed DiMaggio in centerfield for the Yankees is now Yank Manager Casey Stengel's number one headache. Mentioned most prominently for the job are a pair of young ball players, Jackie Jensen and Mickey Vernon, but both are as yet not proved as major league performers.

Jensen is the former California All-America football star who quit college with a year of eligibility remaining to accept an almost fabulous offer from the Oakland Oaks of the Pacific Coast League. He was a pitcher in college but his hitting made it almost necessary that Chuck Dressen, then Oakland manager, put him in the outfield.

Jensen didn't exactly go crazy with the bat in the PCL but he did well enough to attract the attention of the Yankees. They purchased his contract and put him on the bench. Except for a short stay with Kansas City, that's where he's been most of the time since his contract was bought.

Everyone knows who Mantle is. He's the 19-year-old who spent one year with Joplin, Missouri, and then went to the big show. He was the hottest thing in any of the 16 training camps last spring, batting over .400, and Yankee drum beaters touted him as the successor to Tommy Henrich as the Yankee rightfielder.

Mantle, ordinarily a shortstop, was put in rightfield in the lineup and started the season with a bang. He soon began to slump and it was not too long after the season started that he was striking out more than he was hitting the ball. He got benched and was then sent to Kansas City with specific instructions to be played in centerfield with KC.

Mantle got back into the big show just before the season ended and got into the World Series. He wrenched his knee in one of the early games and had to sit most of the Series out.

Stengel rates both Jensen and Mantle very highly and unless General Manager George Weiss can come up with an established outfielder, one of the two will be taking DiMaggio's place.

Another development that came as no surprise was the announcement that Eddie Stanky had been signed as manager of the St. Louis Cardinals. That deal had been all but completed since Marty Marion was eased out of the job a couple of weeks ago.

The only thing wrong with Stanky's appointment is that it will take him away from Leo Durocher, the fiery manager of the New York Giants. Stanky and Durocher have always gotten along very well. It will be really interesting to see what one can do without the other.

The word from State College this morning is that Horace (Horse) Hendrickson is still the top choice for the job as successor to Beattie Feathers. Hendrickson is still in the running along with VMI Coach Tom Nugent and State Athletic Director Roy Clagston.

At the present time, Hendrickson is the only member of the 1951 coaching staff that is still connected with the school. He served the past season as an assistant coach and chief scout for the Wolfpack. His co-workers, Dick Peacock, Al Rotella and Gwynn Fletcher, have all been relieved.

Hendrickson is under a three year contract in his present capacity at State College. He has formerly been a coach at Elon, Duke, Penn State and with a New York professional football team.

Dimaggio May Take TV Broadcasting Position

Mid-Week Lull In North State Loop

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS
Action hits a mid-week lull in North State Conference basketball circles tonight.

Non-conference Erskine visits High Point in the only game of the night involving a North State team.

Two conference games last night saw Guilford trim Appalachian 72-68 and Western Carolina beat Lenoir Rhyne, 72-70. Elon edged Lynchburg College 76-72 in a non-conference game.

The Catamounts posted their first North State win as Little All-American Ronald Rogers scored 19 points against the Bears. High man for Lenoir Rhyne was Tony Bellari with 23 points.

The Quakers spoiled Appalachian's conference debut with the assistance of Rick Ferrell who scored 30 points against the Mountaineers. It was the second conference win of the season for Guilford.

A long set shot by Melvin Cooper in the final 30 seconds of play gave Elon the win over Lynchburg. Don Hathcox hit with a foul shot following Cooper's score to give Elon an insurance point.

By JOE REICHLER
NEW YORK (AP)—Joe DiMaggio, definitely through as a player at the age of 37, is expected to remain in the New York Yankee organization in the role of a television broadcaster.

The great outfielder, who yesterday announced he would never wear a baseball uniform again—as a player, manager or coach—is considering an offer as TV commentator of Yankee home baseball games.

While both parties refused to commit themselves, Yankee president Dan Topping admitted DiMaggio had been offered the TV job "among other propositions." DiMaggio said all his offers dealt with radio and television and "it is possible" he will accept the Yankee bid. The TV post reportedly would pay him $50,000 a season for three years.

DiMaggio planned to leave for his home in San Francisco on Friday to think over all the propositions. He said he expected to reach a decision "some time next week."

The Yankee Clipper appeared in good spirits as he outlined his reasons for quitting before grinding cameras, glaring lights and the largest sports press gathering since the days of Babe Ruth.

"Old injuries that lingered on and some new ones hastened my decision to retire," DiMaggio explained. Another reason was night baseball. Joe estimated the arc light play cut about two years off his career.

No Coach Yet For State College Football Squad

RALEIGH (AP)—North Carolina State College's Athletic Council held a long closed door session last night and later issued this statement:

"There will be no announcement concerning the disposition of any football coaching contract now in force or the selection of any new personnel until the Board of Trustees of the Greater University of North Carolina has an opportunity to approve them."

Meanwhile, the names of State backfield coach Horace Hendrickson and VMI head coach Tom Nugent continued to be mentioned as the leading candidates for the head coaching job to succeed Beattie Feathers, who was fired last week.

A report said Feathers, whose contract has two years to run at $8,500 a year, will be retained by the college in the physical education department.

Wilson Cyclones Defeat Phantoms 53-49

Briley Scores 19 To Lead Scoring

Briley Stages Almost Single-Handed Comeback Against Cyclones In Return Match Between Two Clubs

WILSON — A fighting Green Phantom basketball team from Greenville went down to a close 53-49 defeat here last night in a return match between the two eastern high schools. Greenville had beaten the local Cyclones earlier in the season in a game played in Greenville.

Coach Hank Mauden's boys picked up an early lead in the contest and were never behind at any point during the game, although Greenville's Sid Briley staged an almost one-man scoring exhibition against them. Briley copped high scoring honors for the night with a total of 19 points, high for both clubs.

Trailing by a score of 15-9 at the end of the first quarter, the Phantoms set to work to cut down the margin held by Wilson. Briley took over almost single-handedly late in the period and he hooked up with Cyclone forward, Ed Woolard in a scoring duel. Briley and Woolard exchanged shot for shot, with each one getting the majority of his points from around the foul circle, before the Greenville star hit on a foul shot with only 45 seconds left in the half to tie up the score at 25-all.

Wilson came back after the halting intermission to run up a quick 11-point lead before Greenville could score. It was Briley again who finally broke the ice, pushing in two rapid shots from close-in. Before the period had finished, Briley and Leon Moore, who came in second high in the Phantom scoring, had narrowed the gap to 46-39.

Joe Rowland and Smith Worthington took over the Greenville offensive in the final period, but they were unable to catch up with the revenge-hungry Wilson team although the Cyclones were held to only seven points while the Phantoms were hitting for 10. Worthington and Rowland each scored four points in the scramble which took place in the final quarter.

Dick Ward, a candidate for all-state honors this year, teamed with Woolard to pace the winners with 13 points apiece. They were followed by Joe Rand, with 10, and Floyd Singleton and Johnny Stierling with eight each.

Briley's 19 points was high for the losers, but Leon Moore trailed close behind with 11 points. Smith Worthington finished third in the individual scoring with eight points, while Rowland and Benny Scott, who led the floor work for Greenville, were tied with five apiece. Tommy Evans rounded out the Phantom scoring with one point.

Personal fouls hurt Greenville as its starting center, Wallace Conway, was charged with four misdemeanors early in the first period and was unable to play more than five minutes in the second period. The big guy fouled out in the early stages of the second half. Worthington also went out of the game because of too many personals in the final period.

Greenville defensive work was led by Scott, Rowland, and Worthington. Wilson was led by Rand, Woolard and Ward.

In a preliminary contest, Greenville's Jayvees ramshacked the local Jays by a score of 46-32. Walter Perkins led the winners with nine points, followed by Pat Sawyer with seven points. Deans and Creekmore paced the losers with eight points.

Dwight Shoe Gets ECC Award For Blocking

At a banquet held last night in the dining room of the Proctor Hotel, Dwight Shoe was awarded the trophy which annually goes to the man selected by his East Carolina College football team mates as the best blocker on the squad.

Shoe, a member of the All-North State Conference team as selected by coaches in the seven team football circuit, is a junior from Salisbury. This was his third year at end for Coach Bill Dole's team. He weighs 180 pounds.

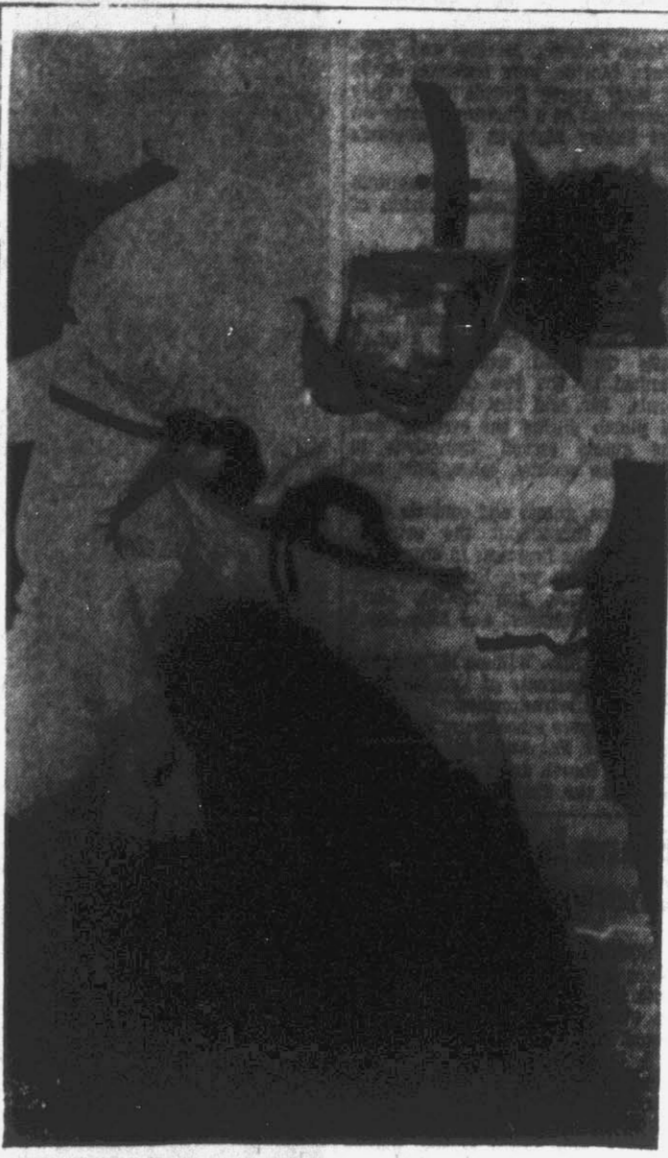

Dole presented the award which was won last year by Dennis (Doc) Smith.

In an informal, short talk to the team and guests, Dole praised the members of the team for their efforts this year and revealed a few of his plans for operation next year. He extended the team's thanks for the banquet to J. Leroy Wheatley, manager of the dining hall.

Mr. Wheatley, one of the sponsors of the banquet along with his partner, Mrs. E. N. Perry, and Hotel Manager Ken Phillips, told the assembled group that it was the hotel's plans to make the banquet an annual event.

Following Mr. Wheatley's remarks, Don MacKenzie, a member of the squad, presented a certificate for a suit from team members.

Others attending the meeting as guests included Dr. John Messick, president of East Carolina; Athletic Director N. M. Jorgensen; Assistant Coach Jack Boone; Alumni Secre-

One Man Gang

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Jim Rivers, newly acquired outfielder for the St. Louis Browns, was a one man gang in the Pacific Coast League last season. He led the loop in batting with a .352 mark.

Rivers, who played for the Seattle Rainiers, also was top man in runs scored with 135, hits with 363.

Porter Praises Subs For Win Over Lejeune

Reserve members of the East Carolina College basketball team came in for their share of praise yesterday as Coach Howard Porter continued preparations for the team's game Friday night in Wright Gymnasium with the Fort Lee Travellers.

"I thought our bench won the game for us Monday night against Camp Lejeune," Porter said yesterday. "We should be stronger in reserves now that the boys have come through," he added.

Porter's remarks were directed toward the four members of the team, besides the starters, who saw action. This foursome is made up of Charles Huffman, Paul Jones, Cecil Heath and John Postas.

Jones saw more action than the other three. He relieved Lou Collier with two minutes remaining in the second quarter and played the rest of the game. He's a sophomore from Thomasville who's been the club's utility man all year long.

Huffman's performance was also a pleasing one to Porter. The 6-3 forward from Thomasville has been running hot and cold all year long but he apparently "found" himself Monday night and should continue to see a lot of action. Porter used Huffman, also a sophomore, as a sub for Bobby Hodges and Sonny Russell. Huffman scored eight points and appeared to be much improved as a defensive performer.

John Postas, the club's number two center, although listed as a guard, was the surprise of the evening. When Hodges came up with four fouls in the first half, Porter sent Postas in to guard Lejeune's Jack Nichols and Postas did just that. Nichols, who scored 23 points in the first half, was held to 10 in the second half by Postas who was in the range for much of the third and fourth quarters. Postas finally fouled out of the game but while he was in the contest, Nichols got only two goals from the floor.

Heath, the fourth member of the reserve group that saw action, wasn't used too much in comparison with the others since Toddy Fennell was having a good night. Heath did get to see right much action, however, although Fennell did play most of the game. Fennell scored 11 points and Heath didn't score at all although both turned in some good ball handling performances.

Thorpe Invited To Spokane Meet

SPOKANE, Wash. (UP)—The Spokane Athletic Roundtable has invited famed Indian athlete Jim Thorpe to spend a free vacation in Spokane at the same time the National Amateur Athletic Union holds its 1952 convention here.

The AAU recently returned for the second time to return medals Thorpe won in the 1922 Olympics. They said the great athlete had lost his amateur standing by playing semipro baseball.

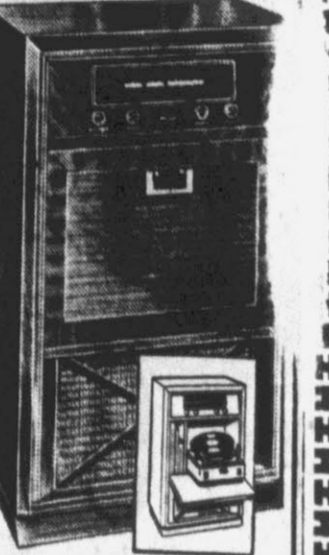

Freshman Is Tops

DURHAM (AP)—Jerry Barger, freshman quarterback from Salisbury, N. C., led the Duke University football team in net yards gained this year with 613 yards, 336 of them by passing. Red Smith, sophomore half back was next with an even 500 yards, 442 of them by rushing.

District Ruritan Governor Speaks To Pactolus Club

WASHINGTON was voted in as a new member and will be welcomed into the organization at its January meeting.

Hubert Simmons, chairman of Agriculture Committee, reported that the Ruritan Pig Chain is now operating "very successfully". Simmons said the chain suffered several losses when it was first introduced, but had experienced great success in recent months.

Chairman of the special Playground Committee R. D. Picklesimer informed the group that all playground equipment at Pactolus School has been erected. "This equipment includes a slide, jungle gym, see-saw and swing," he stated.

Four members were cited by C. J. Satterthwaite, secretary of the Pactolus Ruritans, as having perfect attendance records for this year. They are Noel Lee, Jr., S.O. Bowers, Jr., D. R. House, Jr., and C. J. Satterthwaite. The secretary said the men named will receive perfect attendance pins at the January meeting.

Visitors at the meeting Monday night were O. H. Forrest, principal of Belvoir-Falkland High School and member of the Falkland Ruritans, and J. C. Cobb of Belvoir.

Eugene O'Neill is suffering from Parkinson's disease detection of the nerve centers — has been discharged from the Faulkner hospital. Neither the hospital nor the dramatist's wife would give any indication of his condition but a week ago he was described as being so ill only his wife was permitted to visit him. He was in the hospital about two weeks.

Hospital employees said they presumed he went directly from the hospital yesterday to his home in Marblehead, about 15 miles north of Boston.

O'Neill's works have won him one Nobel and three Pulitzer prizes.

Toll-Supported Turnpikes Said Traffic Solution

RALEIGH (AP) — Toll-supported turnpikes appear to be the solution to handling ever-growing traffic demands, according to Highway Commission Chairman Henry W. Jordan.

He told members of the new State Turnpike Authority at their first meeting here yesterday that North Carolina might very well afford to tie into the network of turnpikes planned in other states.

Attorney General Harry McMullan, who sat in on the organizational meeting, said "Toll roads may be the only means of meeting the demands."

The members were sworn in by Secretary of State Thad Eure. They elected Orton Boren, Greensboro banker and brick manufacturer, chairman; and Edwin L. Jones of Charlotte was named vice chairman. Other members are Ben Roney of Rocky Mount and Nello L. Teer of Durham. Jordan is an ex-officio member.

The authority, created by the 1951 General Assembly to study the feasibility of building a toll turnpike in the state, plans to hold another meeting in January.

Boren, Jones and Teer served on a special committee which looked into the turnpike matter about a year ago. After much study, that committee reported it didn't think a toll turnpike would pay. It suggested that the Legislature create a special turnpike authority empowered to act just in case conditions changed.

Advices Against Railroad Line

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Interstate Commerce Commission examiner Harvey W. Wilkinson has recommended against a proposed new railroad for North Carolina. The proposed line would form a connection with the Atlantic Coast Line railroad at Lassiter from a spot on the Seaboard Air Line and the Norfolk Southern near Raleigh. The rail line would be about 15 miles long.

JANET WATERS

CAROLYN CLAPP

Janet Waters and Carolyn Clapp, freshmen from Greenville College now attending East Carolina College, will have roles in the production of the Moss Hart-George S. Kaufman comedy "You Can't Take It With You" which will be presented in the College Theatre by the Teachers Playhouse of East Carolina in three evening performances beginning tonight. Miss Waters is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. R. Waters, and Miss Clapp is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Clapp. Both young women are graduates of the Greenville High School, where they took part in activities of the Dramateers and the Black Masquers, dramatic organizations. They attended the State Drama Festival for high schools in Chapel Hill last year. Miss Clapp received for 1950-1951 the annual drama award presented to a senior at the local high school. Miss Waters won a scholarship to attend the Drama School at Burnsville last summer, the scholarship to attend the Drama School at Burnsville last summer, the scholarship having been granted by the Carolina Dramatics Association. Since enrolling at East Carolina College in the fall, the two Greenville students have participated in the work of the Teachers Playhouse and have helped in staging the series of weekly workshop plays presented by the college dramatic club.

Real Pole Is Set Up At North Pole

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (UP)—A nine-foot candy-striped barber pole was planted in the polar ice cap at the top of the world today. An Alaskan plane brought reality to what millions of children have believed about the North Pole exactly 12:58 a.m. Alaskan time (5:58 a.m. EST) when the shaft was dropped along with thousands of letters to Santa Claus. Chief Pilot Larry Flayhart reported the drop by radio. The big airliner, its flaps down to reduce its speed, soared over the wastelands in the darkness. Navigators aboard the airliner checked and rechecked its position by the stars overhead. Then word was passed to Flayhart to drop down through the layer of clouds. A sub-zero wind whistled in the plane when the door was opened a moment before the drop. Then the navigators gave the word and the pole and the letters were shoved out into the darkness. The pole was designed to strike upright in the ice. With the pole left standing in Santa Claus' backyard, Flayhart turned the plane around to head back for Fairbanks. Eight crewmen were aboard the plane when it took off from Point

Baby Is Born To Holiday Shopper In Dept. Store

NEW YORK (AP)—A Christmas shopper in Macy's basement yesterday received a gift from the store—a five-pound girl. Mrs. Mary Herlick, 31, gave birth prematurely to the child in a downstairs lounge of the big department store. Excited salesgirls called a doctor from Macy's medical department when the woman's condition became known. She had been shopping with an aunt and a son, John, 4. The baby, named Ann, was taken to a hospital in an incubator-equipped ambulance. Macy's said they would give her a layette. Mrs. Herlick was taken to a hospital in another vehicle. Mother and baby both were reported doing well.

They were apprehended by Greenville police, and then reformatory officers came here for them, they had escaped from city jail. Brooks' mother turned her over to police and he is back at the reformatory. Dupree eluded arrest, although numerous robberies in Greenville recently are attributed to him.

Chief Langston said Kinston authorities will give Dupree a hearing in Juvenile Court here, and then turn him over to Greenville police. Police no longer consider Dupree a juvenile, since he has over half a hundred robberies charged to him. The "one-man crime wave" will be held in jail here for the January term of Superior Court. Judge John W. Burney will preside.

GOOD SYSTEM MONTREAL (AP)—There are three good reasons for the fact juvenile delinquency is not a great problem here, said Assistant Inspector Ovila Pelletier, director of the Police Juvenile Club. He listed these as "good parents, good children, and good organizations contributing time and money to help the children."

Tots Need Guidance Parental

By DAVID TAYLOR MARKE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

We live in disquieting times. Providing our children with the safeguard of a steadfast inner life has become a problem, and not a simple one.

Yet, says Professor Joseph K. Folsom of Vassar College, writing in The National Parent Teacher Magazine, there is not reason to despair of success. Reverence and gentleness are natural to children. By gentle and consistent guidance, based in the earliest years on sensory experience and later on the desire to understand, we can still lead our boys and girls safely toward the sources of unfailing strength.

Whether it be conventional or progressive education, says Folsom, we tend to neglect perception, temptation, meditation. But these periods of attentive passivity are just what we need for spiritual guidance.

Family prayers, grace at meals, the quiet bedtime talk with a child, sometimes followed by prayers, all have spiritual value. Irrespective of their particular religious content, as our life becomes more hurried, we tend to neglect these spiritual rituals, and in so doing we pass by precious opportunities to direct the attention of children to things that are beautiful, wonderful, and eternal.

Service is another basis of spiritual guidance—learning to care for pets or other children, to wait upon sick parents, and the like. From learning to care for property may have spiritual value. But it is necessary that these actions be associated with the right meanings and attitudes.

Today it is more than ever necessary to capture and guide early the child's attention, while he is still somewhat sheltered from the world's distracting barrage of stimuli from traffic, airplanes, radio, movies, comics, variety stores, juke boxes and television. He should learn that it can be pleasant and safe to let his attention dwell at length upon certain objects of the outside world or of the imagination, and for the time being to ignore everything else, except maybe a traffic policeman. These objects become serious things of his life. They should include some symbols he needs to share with others, such as religious services, the flag and the national anthem, the mention of loved ones passed away. Such objects should include also a wide range of things chosen by the child himself as he grows.

These things cannot be forced down a child's throat, says Professor Folsom. Perhaps parents would do well to make a survey of their environment to discover all the interesting, beautiful, and inspiring things that could be shown to their children. These are the foundations of spiritual guidance which must be laid early. They are at the same time foundations for intellectual interests and other phases of the child's development. Later on the parent must be prepared to answer factual questions to a definite philosophy for the growing mind.

Two Gambling Stamps Issued

GREENSBORO (UP)—Two more federal gambling stamps were issued here yesterday by the Internal Revenue Bureau, bringing the state total to four.

Collector Edwin Gill said the $50 stamps were issued to James Norman Harris, Greensboro, and James Victor Roach, Plant Service Station, Lexington.

The Young Men's Christian Association was founded in London in 1844 by George Williams.

Ousted Revenue Officers Indicted By Grand Jury

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—James G. Smyth, ousted northern California federal tax collector, and three others are accused of tampering with income tax returns to defraud the government, as the climax to a seven month grand jury probe.

San Francisco's holdover federal grand jury ended its work yesterday by voting the four indictments.

This didn't mean the northern California Internal Revenue shake-up was over. In Washington, Attorney General J. Howard McGrath said he is naming a special assistant to handle income tax cases here.

And the foreman of the outgoing grand jury told the federal court there were matters still under investigation for the current jury to act on. "Anything can happen in the next few months," he added.

Smyth, his former chief of staff, Paul V. Doyle, and his chief field deputy, John J. Boland, were charged jointly in one indictment with backdating income tax returns, unlawfully extending tax deadlines and removing office records.

Three other indictments accused Doyle and Lloyd J. Cosgrove, prominent San Francisco lawyer, of plotting to defraud the government of $38,864 by back-dating three tax returns.

Smyth, northern California campaign manager for the late President Roosevelt in 1944, was fired by President Truman last month for "failure to manage his office properly."

He and nine other local bureau employees were ousted in a shakeup that began last September.

Speech Specialist Gave Tips In Appearance Here

Mrs. Lucile LaChapelle, voice specialist and radio broadcaster, entertained members of the Executive's Club last night at the college with voice imitations.

Her program was highly entertaining and humorous but at the same time very informative. Throughout Mrs. LaChapelle's lecture, fitting facial expressions and gestures added much to what she said.

Mrs. LaChapelle first imitated the Midwestern twang, complete with the nasal tone of voice. Here she pointed out that eight people "nasality" and most of them blame it on their ancestors.

Her next imitation was that of a "whispering personality." "In a romantic situation, it is the right way to talk, but nowhere else," she said.

Mrs. LaChapelle used the type of voice most frequently found at a football game, the guttural voice, which is placed in the throat. She said the guttural voice came also when a person was angry and the body is tense. Mrs. LaChapelle said she was lecturing before a large audience and as she was demonstrating the guttural voice using the words, "get out of here," someone was walking into the back of the auditorium. They turned.

She said the guttural voice was around and ran back out. Also referred to as the "executive's voice."

Mrs. LaChapelle told of Harold Russell, the boy without any hands who won the academy award for "The Best Years of Our Lives." She said she approached him after a lecture he made before an audience of nearly 3,000 people and gave him advice on relaxing his body so his voice would not be too guttural.

She pointed her finger at the ladies next and accused most women of having voices two octaves higher than the average man. "When a woman gets excited, her voice almost reaches high C," she said.

Mrs. LaChapelle told of a man who approached her following a lecture and said: "If two women of the women in the audience will use your advice and lower their voices, the American Home would be saved."

The speaker told of a young girl who had all of the qualities to become private secretary to the president of a large bank but could not get the job because her voice had no quality at all.

Mrs. LaChapelle touched on the monotone, which she said was also referred to as the "ministerial tone." Another tone she pointed out was the "chesty tone" in which most politicians use and said it had no conversational appeal.

"In order to be heard," Mrs. LaChapelle said, "a person must take a deep breath from the center of the body before talking. That is called an oxygen cocktail and I know of no place where a cocktail can be gotten any cheaper."

She said the essence of speech was the body. "The important thing is how you look when you say something." She said the body spoke for a person and the expressions should correspond with the Executive Board members, chairman of District Operating Committees, and Commissioners.

Mr. Colon McLean, Washington, chairman of the Council nominating Committee, will present nominations for President, Vice President, Scout Commissioner, members at large of the Council, and members at large of the Executive Board. Following the election, the incoming president will announce his major appointments for the coming year. He will name chairmen for the seven operating committees: Advancement, Camping Activities, Finance, Health & Safety, Inter-Racial, Leadership Training, and Organization & Extension.

The concluding event of the evening will be the big annual banquet that features the awarding of Silver Beaver recognitions for those who have been selected by the Silver Beaver Committee. These awards are for "outstanding service to youth" in the geographic area, state Commerce Commission officials. These are kept secret until the actual time of the award and it is one of the most thrilling and moving functions on the banquet agenda.

WILSON. — East Carolina Boy Scout President W. C. Chadwick, New Bern, has announced that the annual business meeting of the Council and the annual banquet will be held on Wednesday, January 9, in the facilities of the Ricks Hotel, Rocky Mount. The business meeting will be held at 5:30 p.m., for the purpose of electing Council officers, members at large, and Executive Board members. Invitations to this meeting will go to all Institutional Representatives,

Truck And Auto Heavily Damaged

A truck and car were heavily damaged early last night when they were involved in a highway accident, one mile west of here on Highway U. S. 264.

Patrolman James W. Boykin, of Ayden, investigating officer, listed the drivers as John Edward Whittier, 28, of Greenville, and Robert Carver Smith, 20, of Route 2, Greenville.

A truck driven by Whittier, owned by the Combs-Rubens Bottled Gas Service of Greenville, was traveling in front of a car driven by Smith, headed towards Greenville at the time the accident occurred, Boykin reported.

According to Boykin, the truck driven by Whittier started to make a left turn into a private drive when the car struck it as it attempted to pass, overturning the truck.

Damage to the truck was estimated at over $300 while damage to the car was placed at $400. Neither of the drivers were injured.

No charges were placed against

Firemen Called To Burning Car

Greenville firemen were called to a burning automobile at the Farmers Warehouse yesterday morning around 11:30.

However the fire was out on arrival of the department's truck. The car was owned by C. D. Owens of Greenville. Origin of the blaze which caused negligible damage was believed to have been faulty wiring.

CRESTON, Neb., (AP)—Mrs. J. W. Larson of Creston sat in her rocking chair darned socks. She reached over to pick up a ball of yarn from the floor. The result: a trip to the doctor for treatment of two broken ribs.

Blaze Destroys Farm Buildings

Two farm buildings on the H. R. Allen farm, about two miles from Greenville, were destroyed by fire of undetermined origin yesterday morning.

Discovery of the fire was made shortly before noon, and a call for aid was telephoned to the Greenville Fire Department.

A firetruck was sent to the scene, but the two small buildings had been engulfed by the flames on arrival of the truck from town.

The blaze started in a hay storage building, which housed nearly the entire hay crop for the past season. The number of bales lost in the blaze was not known by owner H. R. Allen.

A second storage unit, single fire from the burning, and efforts on the part of workers to halt its spread. A large amount of corn and furniture was housed in the building.

Firemen stood by to prevent the spread of the flames or embers to any nearby buildings.

The Protestant Episcopal Church was brought to America in 1607 with the Jamestown Colonists.

Caudle Talked Himself Further And Further Into Bad Position

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON—AP—The-ron Lamar Caudle is a big man with wavy brown hair and a southern accent that is strictly from the honey chile school.

And he likes to use it. It's amazing how this 47-year-old lawyer, who was snatched from relative obscurity in North Carolina and given a top government job, seems to like to talk.

Monday was no exception, although before the day was over he wound up being embarrassed and even at a loss for words. Still, it wasn't the first time he had been embarrassed recently.

When President Truman fired him Nov. 16 as Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Justice Department's tax prosecutions, Caudle said his heart was broken.

In spite of this disability he seemed extremely vigorous when yesterday he began to testify before the committee called him.

Many another trained lawyer, who knows that countering information when under questioning just leads to further questions, might have been content to answer the committee's questions with yes or no or a minimum of explanation.

Not Caudle. With a face just as bright and sunny as a Salvation Army Santa Claus ringing his Christmas bell on a street corner, he would grab a question out of the air and run away with it.

Sometimes he ran in the wrong direction. Once he talked for a few minutes, suddenly stopped, a little puzzled, told the committee he realized he hadn't been answering the question, and asked for it again.

And the more he talked the more questions he seemed to put since he was opening new avenues for questioning. One example will explain it.

The committee, reminding him that he had previously spoke of frequent trips to race tracks, asked him if he ever won a good sized bet. Caudle could have said: "Yes. Once I won $1,701 on a daily double. Period."

But he explained the time, place, kind of day, who was sitting in front of him; who was behind him; and how he sprinted down just at the last minute to place his $10 bet.

How did he come to pick that particular daily double? The committee didn't have to ask. Caudle volunteered: He had heard rumors it was a good bet.

The committee wanted to know how he heard the rumors. Caudle suddenly grew vague.

It was later in the day that his sunny expression disappeared, his face grew ashen, and he was truly embarrassed.

The committee had been told in previous sessions by a Chicago lawyer, Abraham Teitelbaum, that two men, Bert K. Naster and Frank Nathan, had tried to shake him down for $500,000.

The two men told him, Teitelbaum said, that they were in with a clique of important Washington officials, including Caudle. They were rummaging around, Teitelbaum related, for soft touches like Teitelbaum—who was in tax trouble. He said the two threatened him with serious tax trouble, if he didn't come across.

Monday—just before Caudle took the witness chair—another lawyer, I. T. Cohen of Atlanta, told the committee Teitelbaum had told him this same story months ago. Then Cohen said he told Caudle about this story which involved him. That was Aug. 20.

But the story didn't come to light till Teitelbaum testified last week. The committee asked Caudle—since Cohen swore he had told Caudle about it months ago—what he had done about it. Had he investigated? Had he called in the FBI? Anything?

Caudle said he hadn't done anything. He was least talkative now. He was white. The chairman of the subcommittee, Rep. King, California Democrat, did the talking at the end.

He said Caudle—who admitted to "indiscretion" but not dishonesty—was a failure as a public official and had done his country harm that wouldn't be mended for a long time.

Fines Reduced For Alert Pair

IPOH, Malaya—(AP)—The Appeal Court has reduced fines of $80 imposed on two engineers who locked up a sentry when they found him sleeping on duty at the dam.

The two company engineers felt they were wrongly convicted of confining the special constable. They felt it their duty to see that Communist terrorists don't damage the dam and a sleeping sentry with his gun at his side was not of much protective value.

Warrant Wanted Ten Long Years

WARWICK, R. I.—(AP)—The long arm of the law happened to be exactly as long as Police Captain Sam Henderson's memory.

When he read that a man had been charged in nearby Providence with driving off with two tons of the city's coal, Henderson's memory guided his hand to a dusty warrant which had laid in his desk for 10 years.

Result: the culprit paid an old $5 drunkenness fine, plus $4.80 costs, plus $2.60 for extra paperwork by the jailer, who collected the old fine in Kent County jail.

Page Urges Delaying Of Millionth Fatality

Mayor L. D. Page today asked every resident of Greenville to join with the National Safety Council in the nationwide campaign to postpone the millionth traffic death.

"This tragedy, which will mark the violent death of 1,000,000 men, women and children since the advent of the automobile 50 years ago, will occur during the Christmas holiday," the mayor said, "unless every pedestrian and motorist uses the utmost care and caution when walking and driving."

"Ten traffic deaths have already occurred in the county this year and two of them were in the city limits of Greenville. Let's make sure the third death does not happen within the holiday season."

"The Christmas holidays always bring extra hazards. Traffic accidents reach their peak during this period because of winter weather, earlier darkness, heavier travel and holiday festivity.

"It will be ironic if the Christmas season—the time of good will to men—is the backdrop for the millionth auto fatality. I sincerely hope everyone in Greenville will be especially careful this Christmas time and that no accident-

Children Home Funds Drive Is Short Of Goal

The annual Christmas Fund Campaign which has provided funds to operate the Children's Home Society of North Carolina, Inc. for 48 years, is $26,000 short of its 1951 goal of $40,000.

The society is operated as a private child-placing agency which receives babies from all over and attempts to place them in good homes. In its 48 years of operation, 112 babies from Pitt County have been cared for and placed in private homes through adoption procedure.

Farmers Advised To Plan Ahead

"To be forewarned is to be forearmed" applies to the conservation of the nation's soil as well as it does to national defense.

James Meredith, chairman of the Pitt County Production and Marketing Administration made that point this morning when he urged farmers to look ahead to see what materials and help may be needed to carry out Agricultural Conservation Program practices in the months ahead.

Walter Harrington of Greenville, member of the Board of Directors of the Children's Home Society, asks all who wish to contribute to the cause to mail their contributions to him, or send them directly to the Children's Home Society of North Carolina, Inc., 740 Chestnut Street, Greensboro, N. C.

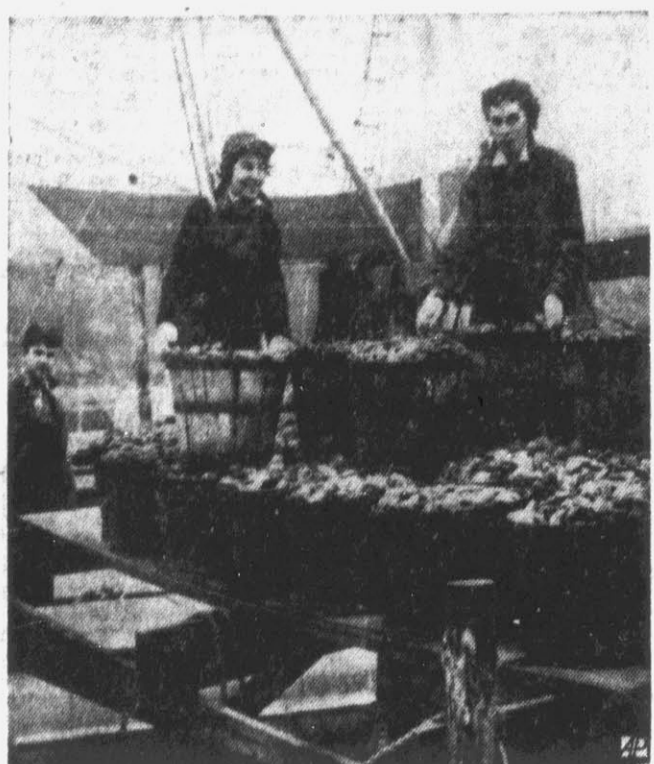

Miss Harriet Tynes, executive director of the society, said at least 18 babies live at the nursery at all times, cared for day and night by highly trained and competent personnel. "In addition to caring for babies until they are placed, the society maintains a counseling service for parents of our children who have been adopted," she asserted.

The director emphasized that these activities take money—money which can be supplied only by the citizens of North Carolina. The annual budget of the society is $90,000, one-tenth of which is raised each September by the State Junior Women's Clubs. The remainder is raised in the annual Christmas appeal.

Simple To Start Arguments Over Relative Prices

United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP)—It's a simple matter to start an argument around the world by mentioning how much it costs for this or that here and there.

Not long ago I quoted a friend in Singapore that you could get a haircut there for 40 cents. I stacked that up against the "Washington price" which is $1.25, plus a tip to the clipper, plus a tip for the porter who waves a whisk broom at your coatails.

Today, I got a memo from Dan Crumley, who is back in the navy at Kodiak, Alaska.

Up there, he says, it costs a man $2.00 plus for a crock trim. And, according to Dan, you come out looking like they did use a crock.

A lot of the navy men, Dan reports, have gotten into the habit of cutting their own hair.

In Singapore, gasoline is 55 cents a gallon. In Kodiak, it is only 31 cents—but very few people in Kodiak have cars.

By way of other comparisons: Bob Boylan, who wrote from Singapore where he directs public relations for the State Department, says you can take a cab "a fur piece" from downtown to his hotel for a little less than 15 cents, American money.

Dan says Boylan is lucky. In Kodiak, it's less than five miles from the navy base to town, but the cost is $4.50.

"Take a short bus ride," Dan says, and "it comes to 50 cents."

Dan, a great lover of milk, found that Alaskan cow juice costs 25 cents a small glass. He switched to beer, but quickly went back to milk when he found beer costs 50 cents a glass, and mostly foam at that.

Everything in Kodiak is high, according to Dan. He says clothing, which navy men don't worry about buying, is "out of this world, pricewise." A suit of civvies, he reports, costs "whatever the traffic will bear—a couple of hundred or so."

Dan says a lot of people up that way can afford it. Stevedores, for example.

In some Alaskan ports, he said, stevedores make up to $35 a day, plus overtime, and get cut-rate haircuts and food on top of that.

In 1949 New York and Texas were the only states in the United States that had more than 500 hos-

After 20 Years He Got Answer

NEW YORK—(AP)—After 20 long years it finally opened—Arthur Wagner, a ship's steward, finally got an answer to the bottled notes he's been tossing into the ocean these many years. He's been using one-gallon bottles for the notes which ask the finder to write him or Sam Finkelstein, another steward. When the Constitution docked recently in New York, Finkelstein received a letter from one Donato Giganti of Marsala, Italy, which said: "My dear Sam: I've found it, your bottle with this message in it where you wrote to get it back and I'm doing it as you see. Well, I've founded it at the seaside. I should like to know why you did it because I never found it anything, but this I think it must be something very important." Sam and Art aren't so sure now just what the point of the whole thing was.

Triple Play

TOKYO—(AP)—The Task Force 77 radio crackled: "O'Malley to McGinty to O'Bannon." This is what it meant: Lt. Francis J. O. O'Malley, 27 Gorman Rd., Framingham, Mass. ditched his Skyraider in the Sea of Japan after a Korea strike. The destroyer escort McGinty picked him up and transferred him to the destroyer escort O'Bannon for return to the carrier Essex.

India's Joan Of Arc Center Of Film In Making

BOMBAY, India—(AP)—The life of India's Joan of Arc will provide the plot for an English-language color motion picture filmed in this country. American and Indian technicians have joined in the Mine-va Movie-tone Company's production of the life of the Rani of Jhansi, who gave her life in the anti-British rebellion of 1857. The Hindu princess, legend runs, fought sword-in-hand mounted on horseback during the rebellion. Faithful subjects burned her remains after her death, lest the foreigners touch her Brahminic body.

HANGMAN'S COULEE

By AL CODY

AP News Service

Chapter 8
The town was taking on a holiday aspect, with people coming from the country, pitching tents near the big one, staying for the duration of the lectures. Word had spread, favorably. The professor wasn't trying to sell anything. He was entertaining and instructive, and there was the expectation of something bigger—something dramatic that everyone could sense. The log benches had been extended to accommodate the increasing crowds, a raised board platform built up front, three feet above the ground, twenty feet in width. The speaker's stand and the organ were on it.
"By the time you've been here three weeks, this will be a different community, just as we'd hoped," Malta commented.
Three weeks! He had planned to get out after about a week. But now he didn't like the idea of going on, back to the old life. Yet what else could he do? If he remained, Big Nose Sullivan and the Weasel would be coming, depending on him to make good. In the background was the law, not to mention Deal Hathaway—"Hoist by his own petard!" he muttered. "I've had a taste of respectability, and I like it—and it's as far out of reach as the moon!"
Ten-Spot Lolo was in the crowd tonight, in a fresh shirt and with slicked-back hair. But there was no disturbance as he got well into his lecture. Then a commotion arose near the rear of the tent.

talking himself into a corner—in to a position from which soon there would be no retreat.

"You're a scoundrel and a liar, I say, and tonight you die for the black-hearted ingrate and hypocrite that ye are!"

It was the same voice that had created the earlier disturbance. He couldn't mistake it. Now the face was before him, lined and weather-beaten, showing the marks of the years, of time which had not dealt gently. It was capped by thinning white hair, the eyes gleaming and fanatical.

The old man had raised up suddenly, crawling out from under the platform on which Gentleman Jim stood. After being thrown out, he must have crept back, under the shelter of the newly-raised platform.

Now, as he raised to trembling erectness, a thin shabby figure, he held a six-gun. In the sudden silence the click of the hammer was loud and unmistakable as he eased it back.

Here was more than fanaticism. This was hatred, dark as the brooding shadows of the tree in the coulee behind them. On other occasions when peril threatened, he responded, but now he seemed frozen.

But the old man was slow, and his purpose motivated him to the exclusion of all else. He was too intent to think about the crowd, and they were upon him before he could shoot. Only his age and manifest frailness saved him from being hustled toward the hanging tree.

They hustled him outside, with threats and imprecations. Gentleman Jim stood taut, his eyes still fixed on the spot where the old man had risen up so suddenly.

Liar! Black-hearted ingrate! The words had stabbed before, but they had been like thorns along the trail, ripping away a man's coat, scratching to the skin. This time, with protection torn off, they struck deep. He came quietly down from the platform, the spell broken. Still, this opposition had increased his popularity, fused the crowd behind him.

What he wanted was to get away, and there was no place to go. A man could not outrun his thoughts—or his conscience. What was it that Happy had said? That he had no conscience?

Abstractedly he agreed to afternoon as well as evening lectures. What did it matter now? Malta walked beside him, not speaking, respecting his mood. Having her beside him was somehow comforting. Only when they paused outside the house did she speak.

"Something is troubling you," she said, and half-lifted her hand as if to lay it on his arm, then withdrew it. "I wish that there was some way in which we could help. You're doing so much for us."

As he made no reply, she went on, half-timidly.

"It has to do with that man, doesn't it—McClurey in his name, I think. He lives a couple of miles out of town, just he and his wife. They're very poor. And of course they feel alien here, I suppose, for they've always lived off by themselves and been left pretty much alone."

"He and his wife?" Gentleman Jim repeated. "And they are poor, you say?"

"Very poor. And very much alone. He—well, they both seem a little strange—queer, perhaps, to the rest of us. Probably we seem as much so to them. What I mean is—I wouldn't take it too hard, the wild things he said about you."

"It's usually the truth that hurts," Gentleman Jim answered quietly. "And I find that there's too much of truth in his words to brush them aside. But thank you, Miss Malta. Your sympathy is a real comfort."

Thriller Movies Big Hit In Japan

TOKYO (UP)—Americans have their cowboy movie; the Japanese have their "chambara." Actually, there's not too much difference.

The chambaras, or "sword play" movie themes, are historical dramas with action enough to rival any good western from Hollywood. Occupation officials banned the chambara productions for a time after World War II but they are staging a comeback. Occupation officials were worried about the common characteristics of these films—feudalistic backgrounds and themes based on revenge and feuds.

None was produced during the latter months of 1945, the first months of the occupation. Two appeared in 1946, but they were very restrained. Occupation officials "suggested" that the blood and thunder sword-swinging be held to a minimum.

Each year since, more and more have appeared and are playing to capacity audiences.

Some of the other Japanese films make money but the local industry finds it hard to compete against the super-colossal Hollywood productions.

To help meet the competition, Japanese studios have combined the old with the new. In some films, they have the very popular sword fighting done by the newly-popular strip-show chorus girls.

Tenths of the asbestos used by U.S. industry comes from Quebec.

Tempestuous Tallulah Replies To Story Of Orgiastic Living Today

NEW YORK (UP)—Actress Tallulah Bankhead, belling her tongue and standing today to deny her former husband's charges that she spent her money for such "incidental" as marijuana, liquor, and lovers.

Miss Bankhead, as tempestuous a belle as ever came out of the Old South, was the state's star witness in the eck-kling trial of an old vaudeville trumper named Ebbiee R. R. Cronin.

Mrs. Cronin, 59, white-haired and motherly looking, was the star's personal maid and secretary during 18 months in which the state charges she stole $4,284.60 from Miss Bankhead by raising the amounts of "incidental" expense checks.

In his opening address before an all-male jury yesterday, Assistant Dist. Atty. Jerome Kidder said that under a "loose system based entirely on good faith in the maid's honesty" Mrs. Cronin would pay tips, taxi fares, and such expenses out of her own money and Miss Bankhead would reimburse her by check each week.

There was one instance, Kidder said, when Miss Bankhead told the maid to make out a $50 check for herself as a birthday present. Tallulah signed it. When the check got to the bank, Kidder said, something new had been added.

"It turned out to be a $250 check and the defendant used it as part payment on a new automobile for herself," the prosecutor said.

The prosecutor said the 22-count forgery and larceny indictment covered 38 checks signed by Tallulah.

Kidder said that when Mrs. Cronin was caught in her alleged theft, she threatened to accuse Miss Bankhead of various things if there was any prosecution.

Defense attorney Fred G. Moritt countered with the assertion that "we will prove the Bankhead check system was extremely loose and Miss Bankhead herself was extremely loose."

Mr. Moritt said Mrs. Cronin would testify that the "incidental" money went for marijuana, cocaine, champagne, and gifts.

"We will give you the names of those who smoked the marijuana and tell about the parties," he said. "One very celebrated television and radio star brought loose marijuana to Miss Bankhead, who always referred to it as 'tea'."

The defense proved, the attorney said, that Miss Bankhead was rarely sober and "spent a fortune for booze." He said the defendant would testify Miss Bankhead taught her how to roll marijuana cigars and that "she became very adept and in four or five hours she was able to roll 98 of them."

At one point, the defense attorney whirled around toward the audience, from which had emerged a deep throaty sound, and snapped: "Was that Miss Bankhead who laughed?"

"I coughed," said Tallulah from the front row. Moritt began to protest, and the actress arose and said: "Your Honor, I have a bronchial condition I coughed, I apologize."

When Moritt said he would prove Miss Bankhead practiced beating her maid unmercifully, had done so at least 50 times, the actress could not restrain a groan, saying: "Next thing he'll have me doing is vivisectioning my dog, without an anesthetic."

Carolina Queens At Same College

WINSTON-SALEM (AP)—The Queen of North Carolina and the Queen of South Carolina not only seek to each other—they live in the same college dormitory.

Pretty Rooney Barnes of Bennettsville, S. C., is a Belmont College freshman. Pretty Lu Long Ogburn of Smithville, S. C., is a sophomore at Belmont College.

Rooney, a virgin, was crowned only yesterday that she was "Miss South Carolina." She took over the title after Joyce Perry of South Carolina, learned that the original winner of that state's 1951 beauty contest actually was "Mrs. M. L. S."

The former South Carolina queen, Joyce Perry of Conway, was disqualified by a secret marriage that took place before the South Carolina contest. She had to hand over her crown to runner-up Rooney.

The original South Carolina queen won a $500 check, a wardrobe, one trophy and some flowers. She won 10th place in the national beauty contest at Atlantic City.

Three Slightly Injured In Wreck

Three people were injured slightly here yesterday morning when the automobile in which they were traveling overturned on the slippery highway one mile west of here.

A car operated by Gover Lynn Gaskins, 24, Route 3, Vanceboro, headed west on U. S. 264, overturned when the driver applied his brakes, they locked, causing the car to cross the highway and then overturn. Cpl. H. M. Morrow reported.

Injured were: Oscar Gaskins, 56, Route 3, Vanceboro, cuts and bruises, Otis Whinston, Route 2, Washington, shock; Brock Allgood, 45, Route 2, Washington, lacerated leg.

All were taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment and released.

The car was enroute to Raleigh at the time the accident occurred. Damage to the car was estimated at 166 by Cpl. Morrow. No charges were lodged against the driver.

Raleigh Airman Damages MIG

U. S. FIFTH AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS, Korea—(AP)—A Raleigh, N. C. Sabrejet pilot, newest U. S. ace in Korea was credited with damaging one Communist jet Tuesday.

Maj. Vinton W. Marshall of Raleigh was a member of a 36-plane flight that engaged 65 MIGs near Sinanju in northwest Korea. One MIG was reported probably destroyed and two damaged in the clash.

Clubs To Stress Civil Defense

RALEIGH (UP)—Civil defense training was named as the major project in 1952 for the North Carolina Federation of Home Demonstration Clubs today.

Miss Ruth Curran, state home demonstration agent, made the announcement after a meeting of district supervisors.

North Carolina has 67,000 members in 2,300 clubs located in each of the 100 counties.

"Farm women in this state are increasingly aware of the big responsibility which in the organization for defense of our homefront, Miss Curran said. "We are anxious to give the state civil defense program our wholehearted participation."

ON THE HOUSE

By DAVID G. BAREUTHER, AP Real Estate Editor

A damp basement can do more harm to a house than years of weathering or a generation of wear and tear. It can cause dry rot of vital structural members. It breeds mildew. It is destructive to valuable equipment—furnace, laundry machines and other metal work. And it deprives a homeowner of the use of indispensable storage space.

The ideal basement is warm and dry in winter, cool and dry in summer. That dry quality the year round is far cheaper to obtain than paying for excessive repairs and replacements.

The most economical and effective steps toward a permanently dry basement can be taken when a house is being built. But don't give up hope if you're not in the market for a new house. There are many practicable remedies for damp basements.

The only trouble is that the cause of one damp basement may not be the cause of another. You have to analyze your own problem carefully. There is no single cure-all. As in the treatment of an infection, both the symptoms and the cause must be understood.

There are three major forms of basement dampness: condensation, capillary action and outright leakage.

Condensation is probably the most common offender and usually the easiest to combat. It is caused when moist warm air touches a cold surface and invisible vapor suddenly condenses to water. This is illustrated by that old standby—the glass of ice water sweating in the summertime.

Warm air can hold much more water in the form of vapor than cold air. As soon as you heat air, it becomes thirsty and drinks up any moisture present, through the process of evaporation. This can be speeded up by keeping the air in motion.

So heating and ventilating are sometimes enough to overcome condensation. The heat raises the capacity of the air to take up and hold water. It can warm the wall surface above the dew point. Then ventilation, in dry weather, can remove the moist air.

Sometimes an uninsulated water heater will provide enough heat in the basement in summer to prevent condensation. But it's important to have all fuel-burning heaters vented into the chimney, because of moisture added to the air through the process of combustion. Natural gas seems to hold all honors in this moisture-making business.

The only trouble with ventilation is that it depends on outdoor humidity. In wet weather it doesn't help much. But normally it is effective, because more moisture is created in the average house than outside air contains. Clothes dryers and even laundry hanging on lines in a basement send all the water in the wet wash into the air, increasing the humidity. So during laundry operations, the same as during cooking or after bathing upstairs, ventilation is important.

In parts of the country where condensation is an especially prevalent problem, basement walls are sometimes insulated. Adding insulation has been known to help toward decreasing condensation, but it is not rated as a cure. Basement walls are by nature cool.

Removing the moisture from the air is basically the most effective measure in eliminating dampness due to condensation. Mechanical dehumidifiers, working on the principles of a refrigerator, can be purchased. They contain an evaporator coil that is kept just above the freezing point. This does not cool the basement, because the heat removed from the air is blown back into the air through the condenser, while the moisture is removed. The moisture runs down the coil into a drain or container.

It isn't unusual to find a bucket of water removed from the air within 24 hours.

Basements also can be dehumidified with chemicals. Calcium chloride is commonly used because of its ability to absorb moisture and its relatively low cost—about 3 cents per pound in large lots. It can be used only once, though. When liquified it must be disposed of where it cannot injure concrete or any vegetation. It corrodes iron, so flush it well when emptying it down drains.

Lithium chloride is used like calcium chloride.

Silica gel has the advantage of re-use. Heating the gel drives off the water and restores the absorption quality. Some mechanical dehumidifiers employ silica gel by discharging the heated moisture through a vent to the outdoors.

Jersey Breeders Elect Officers

STATESVILLE—(AP)—Forrest Fancher of Billmore Farms, Asheville, will head the North Carolina Jersey Breeders Association for the coming year.

Fancher was reelected president at the association's annual meeting here yesterday.

DURHAM (UP)—Duke University has only 19 days to raise nearly $400,000 needed if its development campaign is to reach its goal of $8,650,000 by the end of the year.

President Hollis Edens said yesterday the campaign has raised $8,251,243 since Jan. 1, 1950. He predicted that the goal will be reached.

Annual Ladies Night Is Held By Firemen

Annual ladies, 1:30-4:00 P.M. Over 65 Greenville firemen, their wives and special guests attended the annual Firemen's Ladies' Night program held last night at Respass Brothers barbecue house on the Bethel Highway.

Following a supper of barbecue chicken and barbecue, Fire Chief George Gardner introduced Rev. H. Glenn Haney, newly-elected Chaplain of the Fire Department for the year 1952.

Gardner explained that it was the custom of the local department to have both its outgoing Chaplain present for the meeting as well as the new one, but previous engagements prevented Rev. Leonard W. Topping, this year's Chaplain from being present.

Dr. Haney told the firemen he considered it an honor to be chosen to serve as Chaplain and that would have "added interest, from now on, in the work carried on by the department: I shall be with you in spirit if not in body, Haney said in closing.

Mayor L. D. Page was next to be called on to speak by Chief Gardner. Page said, "We know that you are short of equipment and men, but in the near future we will try to make amends. Possibly we will be able to supply more hose if not more pumps." Page stated further, "The Aldermen and I are well pleased with the work carried on by the department. We know that you have had some bad luck in the past year, but that was not your fault for you have done your best. "We are now thinking about the addition of a sub station, to be placed somewhere in the western part of the city," Mayor Page said in closing. He did not elaborate. Lt. Leo T.

White, of the Salvation Army, newly-elected member of the department, spoke briefly about Christmas and its special meaning, closing with the reading of the Christmas Store from the Bible.

Chief Gardner then called on Ralph Heidenreich, president of the Volunteer Department for a few words.

The highlight of the evening program came with the presentation of gifts to each person present; the gifts having been donated by merchants in the city.

Presentation of the gifts was made by E. W. Harvey.

SPCA Convinced Dog Is Trying Commit Suicide

PROVIDENCE, R. I. (AP)—The Rhode Island Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is convinced it has a dog on its hands that is trying to commit suicide.

George J. Reilly, manager of the society, said last night the small, brown mongrel dog jumped in the Woonasquatucket River twice in the last two days, both times fighting off rescuers until captured with long poles and nooses.

Now, Reilly says, the dog is apparently trying to starve himself, rejecting both food and warm milk. Reilly says he's hoping the dog's owner would show up so he can find out what's troubling the dog.

Doctor Facing New Warrant In Narcotics Case

RALEIGH (UP)—Dr. Robert H. Freeman, 66-year-old physician and surgeon scheduled to go on trial in federal court here tomorrow on narcotics charges, today faces a new warrant on similar charges growing out of a narcotics trial in Superior Court at High Point.

Freeman is scheduled to appear before Judge Don Gilliam in federal court here to face trial on 26 counts of violating federal narcotics laws for persons known to be addicts. His arrest Nov. 20 was one of five resulting from investigation of the Waughtown Drug Store at Winston-Salem last June. Four convictions have already resulted. Judge Zeb V. Nettles of Guilford Superior Court swore out a bench warrant against Freeman yesterday after narcotics defendant Keith Todd testified he obtained 23 prescriptions from Freeman for his mother, who was reported suffering from cancer.

Another bench warrant named druggist Kenneth Franklin of Franklin's Pharmacy in Cary on charges of conspiring to violate drug statutes.

Nettles declared a mistrial in the Todd case so that all three could appear together in the January term of court.

Freeman's federal trial in connection with the Winston-Salem case was transferred to Eastern District Court at his request.

John Robert Waters, 48, and his nephew, Fred Carswell, co-owners of the Waughtown store, were convicted and sentenced to three years in prison. Their pharmacist, James F. Rhodes Jr., 38, was sentenced to two years.

Dr. M. A. Bowers, 70, was fined $1,000 and sentenced to 18 months, but the sentence was altered last week to a fine of $2,000 and five years probation.

Big Turnout For Firemen's Ladies Night

A crowd of more than 65 Greenville firemen and their wives, along with special guests attended the annual Greenville Firemen's Ladies' Night program held last night. The annual event was staged at Respass Brothers Barbecue House on the Bethel Highway. (Reflector Staff Photo by Roy Hardee).

Lumber Plant In Williamston Is Razed By Fire

WILLIAMSTON — (AP) — Approximately 150 employees of the Wells Oates Lumber Company were idle today, but out of their jobs by a $250,000 fire which wrecked the plant Monday night.

F. O. Chief G. P. Hall called the blaze the most costly one in the town's history. Firemen battled the fire for three hours, confining it to the main plant.

Manager Frank Welton said it would be almost impossible to replace the plant. The fire was discovered when a passerby turned in the alarm. Origin of the blaze was not determined.

Navy Reservists Close Out Year

Last night the Greenville Naval Reservists' meeting in their last session of the 1951 year, completed all business for the year in preparation for the coming new year.

Meetings of the group were suspended until January 1, at which time a series of talks on the new justice will be conducted. P. E. Powell is slated to hold the course.

Santa Will Visit Ayden Thursday

AYDEN — Kiddies, Santa Claus is coming to town!

The bearded old gentleman will be downtown tomorrow afternoon immediately after the Christmas parade to talk with all the children who wish to see him.

In fact, Santa will ride in the center of the parade which will swing through town tomorrow afternoon at 2 p.m. The annual spectacle will feature a dozen or more floats, accompanied by numerous gaily decorated animals and costumed individuals.

Taylor Corey Stokes said the cash awards would probably total $150. "We expect a large crowd at our annual parade," he announced, "and extend everyone an invitation to come to Ayden and enjoy the holiday festivities."

Auto Association Elects Officers

TY WAGNER Named President

The Greenville Automotive Association met recently to elect officers for 1952, and to set closing dates for the Christmas holidays.

The association, which is composed of the new car dealers of the city, elected Ty Wagner of Wagner-Waldrup Motor Company president for the coming year. Other officers elected were: vice president, Wilton Tetterton of Tetterton Motor Company; secretary, L. P. "Buck" Johnson of Gold Leaf Motor Company; and treasurer, Badger Johnson of John Flanagan Buggy Company.

In the association's regular business session, it was decided that closing dates for Christmas would be from 1 p.m. Saturday, December 22, until Wednesday morning, December 26, at the customary opening hour.

Frost In Night

Winter weather is here again and a heavy frost whitened the rooftops and fields last night.

Highest temperature here yesterday was 47 degrees. Lowest last night, 33, one degree above freezing, and at 8 a.m. today the mercury stood at 35. Light drizzle of rain during the 24-hour period.

Yesterday a year ago, the highest temperature in the Greenville area was 46 degrees. Lowest that night, 27, five degrees below freezing, and at 8 a.m. next day it was 30. Heavy frost that night.

Self-Lighting

FRIBOURG, Switzerland — (AP) — A Swiss chemical manufacturer says he has invented a self-lighting cigarette.

He says it works like this: One end is saturated with a secret chemical which sets the tobacco aflame when it is rubbed gently against the side of the package. It makes no flame, and there's no need to puff on the cigare, while lighting it.

The inventor is 35-year-old Ernest He says self-lighting cigars and cigarettes can be produced at little extra cost, and that several European and American tobacco companies are negotiating for rights to his formula.

MacArthur Story Biggest Of Year

NEW YORK (UP)—The editors of the United Press today announced their selections of the ten biggest news stories of 1951.

1. Truman fires MacArthur.
2. Korean armistice negotiations.
3. Kefauver crime hearings.
4. Government controls to combat inflation.
5. Korean war atrocities.
6. Amateur sports scandals.
7. Internal Revenue dismissals.
8. Churchill's return to power.
9. Missouri-Kansas floods.
10. Development of tactical atomic weapons.

Other stories nominated for the "Ten Biggest" list included: The Japanese peace treaty; 84 killed in Woodbridge, N. J. train wreck; the Anglo-Iranian oil dispute; the National League pennant play-off; the persecution of Americans behind the Iron Curtain (such as William Oatis and Robert Vogeler); the congressional investigation of the RFC; Eisenhower's NATO mission; and the Suez-Sudan crisis.

Will Sue Doctor Over Pictures

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (UP)—Dr. Joseph Lentini faced a $10,000 suit today by Mrs. Stanley Purczynski, who claimed he took moving pictures of her, without her permission, while she was giving birth to triplets.

Mrs. Purczynski said she was so "humiliated" when the doctor showed the moving pictures to his colleagues that she suffered a nervous breakdown.

Champion's Cake Recipe Disclosed

NEW YORK (UP)—Here is the recipe for the devil's food cake which won Mrs. S.P. Weston of La Jolla, Calif., the $25,000 first prize in the bake-off sponsored by Pillsbury Mills, Inc.

Starlight Double Delight Cake
Cream together 2 packages (3 oz. size) cream cheese, 1-4 cup shortening, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla and 1-2 teaspoon peppermint extract until fluffy. Measure 6 cups (1-2 lbs.) sifted confectioners' sugar. Blend half of sugar into creamed cheese mixture. Add 1-4 cup hot water alternately with balance of sugar. Blend in 4 squares (4 oz.) melted chocolate. Reserve half of mixture (2 cups) as frosting for baked cake. Sift together 2 1-4 cups sifted flour, 1-2 teaspoons soda and 1 teaspoon salt. Combine 1-4 cup shortening and remaining chocolate frosting mixture; mix thoroughly. Blend in 3 eggs, one at a time. Beat for 1 minute. Measure 3-4 cup milk; add alternately with sifted dry ingredients to creamed mixture, beginning and ending with dry ingredients. (With electric mixer use low speed.) Pour into two well-greased and lightly-floured 9-inch round layer pans. Bake at 350 degrees F. for 30 to 35 minutes. Cool; frost with reserved chocolate frosting.

All ingredients should be at room temperature.

Florida City's Sanitary Crews Stay On Strike

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UP)—This resort city faced an increasing health menace today from uncollected garbage as a strike of some 600 city employees neared the end of its first week.

City officials reported little if any progress in attempts to settle the walkout by bus drivers, garbage collectors, street repairmen and other city maintenance workers. Housewives hauled refuse to the emergency pits provided as an emergency measure against the threat of disease.

Bus drivers struck for a 19-cent an hour pay hike last Thursday midnight, and some 600 utility workers joined them in a sympathy walkout.

The unpaid principal of the World War I debt owed the U. S. as of July 1, 1950, was $11,434,794,809.
