Nematode-Infested Soil Costs Farmers Heavily

Pitt County tobacco growers are losing thousands of dollars each year as a result of damage inflicted on growing plants by nematode infested soil.

"Approximately 30,000 acres of tobacco soil in Pitt County is infested with either root knot (big root) nematodes, or meadow nematodes, or both," county tobacco specialist Sam Weeks reports. "The annual total dollar loss to local farmers because of reduced yields of salable tobacco is incalculable." Weeks says there are two recommended ways of controlling nematodes—rotation and soil fumigation. "Here in Pitt County, with the lack of sufficient land to plant tobacco in a four to six year rotation," the tobacco specialist asserts, "we suggest that both of these practices be followed in fields where nematodes are reducing the yield of the tobacco crop."

Results from 12 demonstrations throughout the state in 1950 showed that the treated area in nematode infested fields produced an average of 376 more pounds of tobacco than was produced on the untreated area. The per acre value was increased in the same proportion.

"Two soil fumigants are recommended," emphasizes Weeks. "They are dichloropropene-dichloropropane and ethylene dibromide—either of which will give effective nematode control when properly applied."

Sponsored by the home economics department and the student home economics club of East Carolina College, a dinner meeting Friday evening, January 18, will bring together in the North Dining Hall at the college a large group of home economists and students from the campus and Pitt County.

Mrs. Eugenia P. Van Landingham, home demonstration agent in Edgecombe County and president of the state Home Economics Association, will be principal speaker on the program. Her topic for the evening will be "Opportunities and Responsibilities of Today's Home Economist."

Dr. Bessie McNeil, director of the home economics department at East Carolina, will act as chairman and will introduce Mrs. Van Landingham to guests. Betty Ann Shaw of Weldon, president, and Emily D. Faircloth of Fayetteville, program chairman, officers of the home economics club, are assisting in planning the dinner meeting. Members of the student club will give a program of songs during the evening.

Invited to be present at the dinner meeting, in addition to faculty members and students in the college home economics department, are high school teachers of home economics in Pitt County, the home demonstration extension staff, and homemakers of the county who are graduates in home economics.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLAS
DO YOUR OWN THINKING
My college diploma, wrapped in a newspaper, lay in a bureau drawer for almost twenty-five years. One day I got it out and decided to have it framed. It was wrapped in a Sunday edition of a 1913 newspaper.

For a whole hour I sat reading that newspaper, the diploma laid aside and almost forgotten. The newspaper was a special issue devoted to the subject of world peace. It frankly took the position that a world war was practically impossible. Men were too sensible and humane to indulge any longer in war. Furthermore, the Kaiser and his big armies constituted not a threat of war but a guarantee of peace.

Note the date—1913. Fourteen months later the First World War started. Three years after I got out my old diploma and read the newspaper in which it was wrapped, the Second World War burst upon us. Certain alleged leaders of thought, distinguished enough to have their articles published in a great metropolitan daily, had scoffed in 1913 at the possibility of a world war. Five years before the Second World War started, few moulders of opinion thought it probable.

All this started me to thinking: I wonder if our present world leaders—our wisecracks—are as stupid as the people with whom they would properly be equated thirty-eight years ago? or fifteen years ago? It behooves us to do our own thinking.

Justice Was Thrown Out The Back Door

No more flagrant miscarriage of justice has ever been perpetrated upon the people or the courts of North Carolina than was done in Craven County last week when Newton Hanes was acquitted by a jury after admitting that he shot and killed Ishmael Simmons, one of his Negro tenant farmers.

There can be little doubt that the verdict of not guilty of second degree murder or manslaughter handed down by the 12-man white jury was based upon the points of racial prejudice around which the defense built its case.

It is apparent that the jury decision hinged upon the defense story that the slain man had raped the wife of the defendant nine days before the murder took place. According to Hanes' own testimony, however, during the days following the slaying he acted like a man who was vainly seeking to hide a misdeed rather than a man who had killed in self defense or to protect the honor of his wife, as the defense contended. The jury accepted the story of the alleged rape as sufficient basis for allowing the gentleman farmer to go free in spite of the fact that witnesses testified that he already had a bad reputation for "shoot-ing and drinking," and other witnesses testified that Simmons was with them the entire day the alleged rape took place.

Solicitor W. J. Bundy in his argument to the jury termed the rape story "fabricated and imaginary," and in the opinion of The Reflector the terminology is well suited. The 12 men who sat on the jury during the trial did Hanes a great favor by sending him from the courtroom a free man, but those same 12 men did a grave injustice to the courts and the law abiding citizens of North Carolina. The miscarriage of justice in Craven County struck a terrific blow at the vitals of the court system of the state which until now has achieved a fine reputation for unprejudiced justice.

The Hanes case is closed, but the people of North Carolina should be on their guard to see that such mockery of justice does not again occur in the courts of the state.

Still A Menace To The Nation's Welfare

Sensational reports of youthful dope addicts which shocked the nation a few months ago have faded into the background, but the use of narcotics remains a menace to the national welfare and must be stamped out.

It was a few days ago that widespread raids were made in major cities across the nation and hundreds of dope peddlers and others connected with the multi-million dollar narcotics traffic were taken into custody. The authorities admitted openly that they did not spare the "big boys" in the narcotics crackdown. These are the operators which must be brought into custody before the narcotics traffic will be cut appreciably, and no measures should be spared to thrust a fatal blow at the higher echelons of the narcotics business in this country.

There have been numbers of reports of teen-age drug addicts released in recent months. None of those, however, are as disturbing as the report Saturday that New York authorities had uncovered gangs of drug addicts which included boys as young as eight years old. At least one eight-year-old has been committed to Bellevue hospital for treatment as an habitual smoker of marijuana cigarettes. It is likely that there are other boys equally as young who have been led into the haze of narcotic addiction by the unscrupulous individuals who prey upon children for monetary gain.

Efforts to bring into the courts the individuals in the narcotics business must be increased. The state and federal laws dealing with narcotics must be made more rigid and the penalties for violation more harsh.

In spite of the fact that news of the activities of the narcotics rings has slipped from the front pages of the newspapers, the illegal narcotics traffic remains a serious threat to the security of the United States. It is imperative that the problem be coped with effectively by the authorities who must be amply armed with personnel and statutes if they are to accomplish the task.

WASHINGTON—Prime Minister Churchill has applied to Truman-Acheson criticism of Britain's European and Far East policies in friendly but frank language during their conferences here. But even the blunt Churchill had to use more polite and parliamentary speech than some other members of his diplomatic, military and journalistic delegation did in their talks with the Press at Washington.

So, in the hope that it may improve, or at least throw light on the crucial question of Anglo-American relations, here is an attempt to list the British complaints against us as itemized for a small group of Washington correspondents by certain members of Mr. Churchill's party.

INDICTMENT—It must be explained that this free-for-all discussion was staged under most congenial circumstances. The Americans in the group set forth our grievances against England in terms that nobody could misunderstand. The indictment mentioned London's continued recognition of Communist China while Chinese armies in Korea were killing Americans and Britishers; England's refusal to enter any system for economic and military strengthening of Europe; her harsh stand against Mesopotamia in Iran; her rough policy in Egypt and the Middle East; generally, and her insistence that the outworn, colonial, commercial foreign policy of the nineteenth century be perpetuated.

In short, under the agreement made before we began these talks, we took the British Empire for a rough ride. In fairness, we asked the visitors to take the United States for a ride in their own terms. They did. (Here is their indictment of us, and, of course, it reflects the Churchillian viewpoint.)

DISSOLUTION—The British accuse us of having weakened and dissolved their Empire, which is partially responsible for their virtual bankruptcy. (The Churchill spokesmen reminded us of his famous speech in which he declared that he "had not become the King's First Minister in order to preside over the dissolution of the British Empire.") According to our London friends, we forced Churchill to eat those words.

When we recalled that Roosevelt and Churchill had framed the Atlantic Charter, which promised freedom and independence to all peoples battling the dictators, and that our policy of liberating dependencies was based on that document, they had a ready answer.

FREEDOM—Yes, they said, England, France and Holland were willing to abide by that Roosevelt-Churchill pledge. They too, believed in world-wide freedom. But, our British debaters argue with characteristic American impatience, we insisted on the independence of India, Burma, Malaya, Indonesia, Ceylon, etc. before those peoples were ready or intelligent enough for self-government.

We broke up the British system of control and guidance before there was anything to take its place. In short, with almost a thousand years' start on us in the field of politics and government, the Britishers naturally adhere to a slower and a longer-range view of political progress.

INVESTMENT—Why, we asked, do you continue to recognize Red China in view of the Korean hostilities, and at the same time refuse to support the Schuman Plan for industrial integration of Western Europe and the Truman-Eisenhower system for creation of a West European army?

They replied that the British have a several billion-dollar investment in China, Burma and Malaya, which is far larger than their commercial interest in Western Europe. They dare not jeopardize their Eastern holdings. Therefore, they must try to reach a friendly agreement with whatever regime eventually controls China.

STANDPOINT—With respect to Europe and a possible Russian invasion, they assured us that, even though Britain did not become an integral part of the Truman-Eisenhower defense system, our Tommies will fight alongside you Yanks when the times comes.

Indeed, and we had no serviceable answer, they pointed out that it was the British who "held the line" for several years in World Wars I and II before the United States entered the struggle.

From a political standpoint, the Britishers' most important contribution was their hope that General Eisenhower would be the next President of the United States. They knew him and like him because of his long stay in England during World War II. They think he understands England's domestic and world-wide problems better than any other possible candidate, including President Truman.

PRACTICES—A group of six men and one woman will get their heads together on February 8 to further seek uniformity in practices and procedure in connection with the state departments, agencies and commissions. The objective is not new, because the need for correcting the hodge-podge of diverse procedure has been recognized by several general assemblies. The present commission was authorized by the 1951 legislature, which provided for the attorney general or a designated member of his staff as an ex-officio member, three members to be named by the speaker of the house, two by the president of the senate and one by the governor.

COMMISSION—As constituted by reason of these several appointments the present commission is composed of Senator Alton A. Lennon of New Hanover and Julius C. Smith, practicing attorney of Greensboro, named by Lieut. Gov. Pat Taylor; Arch T. Allen, Raleigh attorney and former legislator, with Representatives W. B. Rodman of Washington and Paul Stoner of Lexington, appointed by Speaker Frank Taylor; Claude L. Love, Buncombe county representative in 1951 and now assistant attorney general, to represent Attorney General Harry McMillan; Dr. Roma S. Cheek of Durham, former state official, presently teaching governmental sciences at Duke University, and author of a controversial booklet on reorganization of state government, appointed by Governor Scott.

TASK—The job confronting this group is to bring some sort of order out of the chaos presently existing in procedure required by an approximate one dozen boards and commissions with ordinance-making powers and some two dozen examining and regulatory commissions for professions, crafts and trades ranging from doctors and lawyers to barbers and the folks who repair electric light switches and put new washers on water faucets. Efforts have been made from time to time to reduce the number of commissions and to establish uniformity in practice without avail. The present commission assigned that task is perhaps no more competent than its predecessor, but recognition of growing need for action may help it to accomplish something more.

TIMING—The act establishing this commission was introduced as Senate Bill 328 by Senator Alton Lennon and others on March 9, was ratified on April 14 and became Chapter 1018, Session Laws of 1951. Its effective date was June 1, 1951, and date for final report to the governor for transmission to the next general assembly was set at December 1, 1952. First meeting of the commission has been called for February 8, which means there will be less than ten months for the group to do the job assigned.

HODGE-PODGE—There is wide diversity in practices of the several ordinance-making boards, including the highway and public works commission, the boards of agriculture, conservation and development, education, health, wildlife resources and others of like character; the industrial commission (handling workmen's compensation), the employment security commission, the utilities commission and others. Still different procedure is required by the insurance, motor vehicles and revenue departments before authoritative orders or directives are issued; and there is real hodge-podge of procedural methods among the numerous licensing and regulatory boards.

DUPLICATIVE—There is admitted duplicative activity on part of some of these state agencies. The entire problem is too big for one study group to tackle, so province of the commission is primarily the area of administration and regulation, rather than the delegated authority to enact ordinances with force of law. Basically the assigned task is to work out a uniform method for dealing with plumbers, electricians, barbers and land surveyors; or doctors, nurses, architects and other professionals, when charged with violation of the statutes or the rules promulgated by their particular control boards. In dealing with these matters the commission must consider whether the violator must appear before the board in Raleigh or some other point selected by the board, or if he is entitled to a hearing in his home county, and particularly the objective is to see that uniform procedure is followed by all the boards. And in the background of this discussion is the sixty-four dollar question of how far bureaucracy and commission control is to be allowed to replace the traditional rights of individual citizens to earn a living.

BLOOD—The "Blood for Freedom" campaign which the Red Cross is conducting throughout the country for the department of national defense has been greeted with popular support. The automotive bloodmobiles have visited hundreds of communities, and there has been full cooperation on part of individual citizens and business firms. Railroads have made available roll-

What Other Papers Are Thinking

GET 'EM OR KEEP 'EM (Washington Daily News)
The teachers of North Carolina have again put on the pressure for salary raises. The latest meeting of the teachers, cloaked under the guise of the United Forces for Education, sounded the bugle call this week.

The new schedule calls for a minimum salary of $2,600 and a maximum salary of $4,100. Last year the teachers asked for a $2,400 minimum and a $3,600 maximum. They actually got from the legislature a minimum of $2,300 and a maximum of $3,100.

The Daily News has no objection whatsoever to a maximum salary of $4,100 for a teacher with 10 years of experience. In fact we would not object to an even higher scale.

But to our way of thinking it is ridiculous to pay a boy or a girl just out of college a salary of $2,600 to start. Such a salary is making it difficult for private business to compete. And after all private business must pay a considerable amount in taxes. Yet, private business does not pay a beginner any such salary as that.

We are really penalizing those teachers who through the years are choosing the classroom as a profession. We are doing so by paying those beginners high salaries knowing all the time that most of them will be in the teaching profession only two or three years.

We keep hearing that cry that we must get the teachers in the field. Yes, we must get them in the field. But the Daily News has contended and still contends that our real emphasis should not be

Business Today

By ELMER ROESSNER
With very little fanfare, one branch of the plastics industry is growing at an exceptional rate. That is the fabrication of reinforced plastics.

Giants among corporations make the raw materials, largely polyester resins and fiber glass, but most of the molding is done by small and moderate size firms. "A really big operation in molding reinforced plastics today would not represent a volume of much over $1,000,000 a year," says the Society of the Plastics Industry.

About 30 companies are making reinforced plastics components, some 50 are making plastic fishing rods and a few more are making boats and other complete products. Fishermen have already bought 10,000,000 rods.

Reinforcement of plastics developed during World War II. Engineers discovered that embedding glass, cotton, rayon, nylon, paper and other materials in phenolics, melamines, silicones, epoxys, alkyls, cellulose, polystyrene and polyesters, resulted in much greater strength and stability and permitted the use of plastics in much larger components.

Expansion was moderate until pressure of the defense program. Now expansion is at boom proportions. In 1950, sales of polyester resins were less than 9,000,000 pounds and fibrous glass over 7,000,000 pounds. Production this year may reach 24,000,000 pounds of resin, with a proportionate rise in the glass component. The large glass companies are expanding production of fiber and several new companies have entered the field.

Reinforced plastics are being used in appliances, oil transmission pipes, autos, factory construction, ordnance components, aircraft wings, boats and even body armor. They are also used for tanks for chemicals, safety helmets, insulations and housing, skis, boxes, chairs and so help us, coffins. They are also being considered for use in garage doors, auto bodies and construction.

One washing machine manufacturer designed a spiral bladed agitator to increase efficiency 30 per cent, only to find that it required the manufacture and assembly of 22 metal parts at a prohibitive cost. Turning to reinforced plastics, it found that it could make the agitator out of two parts, with less weight and less expense.

The armed forces use 126 and products of reinforced plastics and more will probably be developed as metals become scarcer and it becomes necessary to reduce weights of wood and glass parts.

"The future looks bright to the companies and people who have a stake in the infant industry," the S. P. I. remarks.

LARGEST AUTO TOWER PLANNED FOR GOTHAM

The "largest auto storage tower in the world" is being planned for New York. A site has been assembled for a 17-story office building and a 30-story parking garage. A person having business in the building will be able to drive in and have his car whisked to a storage cubicle in the tower. On leaving, he will pay a fee on the main floor and by the time he reaches the basement his car will be waiting for him. The garage section will be win dowless and sturdy enough to serve as an atom bomb shelter.

EXPANDING SUBURBS RAISE CITY TAXES

A study of city tax rates by Commerce Clearing House points up the burden that expanding suburbs have on metropolitan cities. Per capita tax rates range from $20 a year in Birmingham, Ala., to $126 in Washington, D. C. There is no state tax, however, in the capital but Boston, at $122 and Newark, at $106, are not far behind.

Most of the cities with high tax rates have fast-growing suburbs outside their limits. People in these suburbs make use of the city for business, shopping or recreation, requiring additional police, health and fire protection services, for which the urban residents pay. In addition, persons needing relief or other aid tend to migrate to cities or, at least, refrain from moving to suburbs.

Hal Boyle's Column

By ED CREAUGH (For HAL BOYLE)
WASHINGTON —(AP)— "One thing you must remember about Mr. Churchill," said the Englishman, "is that he was thrown from a donkey at the age of four—and landed on his head. Then he grinned at our startled expressions and went on to explain himself."

"I'm not suggesting there is anything wrong with the old boy's head now. Far from it. But you can always count on him to do the unexpected, just as he was doing when he was four."

"So I'd go easy, if I were you boys, on the forecasting what he's likely to tell your congress when he addresses it next Thursday. . . . may surprise you. He may surprise even himself."

One of the reporters around the table, an American, nodded. "Like before D-Day in the late war," he said, "Churchill, you know, was dead set against an invasion of the south of France. Fought it at the Quebec conference and kept right on fighting it."

"Well, we did push into southern France, and who should turn up on the deck of a destroyer offshore, giving his V-sign, cheering the boys on—but good old Winnie."

We mulled that one for a while. Then the Englishman said: "He's one of the few great men this century has seen. No doubt about that. But he can act like a spoiled child on occasion."

"At one of the Big Three conferences during the war—Yalta, it must have been, and he's told this story himself—Churchill stormed out of a party because Stalin and Molotov were pulling his leg over the question of what to do with Germany."

"The Russians went after him, clapped him on the back and said what we all know, 'Rats, old boy, come back and have a nip. We were only playing.' They had the devil of a time convincing him."

"Great kidders, those Russians," said one of the Americans, solemnly.

"Churchill, though," another said, "has a priceless sense of humor himself. It's a dry, deliberately nonsensical kind of humor—more American than British. Yet he adds his own John Bull touch to it."

"Back in 1943 he visited Niagara Falls and a young reporter asked how he liked it. Churchill said he'd seen the Falls long before the reporter was born—back around 1900, as I remember."

"Well," the kid said, "have they changed much?"

"Churchill looked as if he were deliberating. Then he said, with that chuckle of his: "The principle seems the same. The water still keeps falling over."

The visiting Englishman laughed. "Like Winston himself," he said, "Keeps going on and on, though not with water."

"In '42, at the end of his conferences in Moscow, Stalin proposed that they adjourn to his quarters in the Kremlin for a touch of something. It was mid-evening, but Churchill went right along in spite of the fact that he had to be up at dawn for the flight back to London."

Change of Heart

Chapter 7
 Marcia had thought she would be frightened, or at least that she would feel very young and alone with her sister's friends. It was lovely, of course, for Abigail to give a party, but Marcia wished it could have been a smaller gathering. The large studio room was so packed with people—there must have been nearer forty than twenty—that it was difficult to make your way about or to sort one person out from the rest.
 Abigail had, of course, seen that her younger sister was presented to each newcomer, but Marcia could not always catch, and seldom remembered, the names, and she got very tired of trying to find some response to the invariable comment that followed each introduction.
 "But you don't look anything like Abigail!"
 "Sisters, now no one would ever guess it... Usually some family resemblance, you know."
 "Don't tell me — how sly of Abigail to keep you hidden. Are you sure she's really your kith and kin. Abigail dear? Absolutely no likeness that I can see!"
 So on and so on. Then Marcia was promptly forgotten and ignored as the guests engrossed in small cliques, becoming engrossed in common gossip and experiences. Naturally Abigail was too preoccupied playing hostess, seeing that everyone was taken care of, to pay any more than the necessary attention to the guest of honor.
 Dean Dearborn had not come. There was, of course, no reason why this should spoil the party for Marcia, but it did. There was no watching the doorway, but she kept on watching it just the same.

 You would think he might have "dropped by." If only for a few minutes. Or just out of politeness. She must remember that he was not such a polite young man.
 "So you are the skeleton in our Abbie's closet!" A woman's voice roused Marcia from these thoughts. She had found a corner where she had thought she would not be noticed for a while, and could avoid having another drink thrust upon her as she had had a time disposing of the others. She had never learned to like the taste or smell of anything alcoholic.
 "My dear Carol," the man with the wavy hair said, wagging his slightly balding head reproachfully. "I am sure that Abbie's pretty young sister does not resemble a skeleton in the least."
 "That wasn't what I meant," Carol or Mrs. Douglas as Marcia decided this must be, sat down next to Marcia, crossing long thin legs and assuming a bored expression. "What I cannot understand is why Abbie never told us about you. Or how she managed to keep you in the dark so long. Why didn't you come visit while Marc was living? Your own mother... it does seem very queer to me."
 "It seems queer to me," the man interrupted. "that you have no better manners. Carol, then to ask such personal questions. You must not mind Carol, my dear."
 "How ungentlemanly of you, Victor!" Carol Douglas reproved, arching thinly plucked eyebrows.

"I don't mind," Marcia said. "I never visited before because my mother did not send for me. It was her wish that Abigail and I spend a year together. I don't suppose Abigail meant to keep me a deep dark secret, or she would not be having this party for me, do you?"
 "Touche! Touche, my dear!" The middle-aged gentleman, or so Marcia classified him, beamed in approval, even giving Marcia a significant wink.
 Then only did it sink in that he must be the man her sister was going to marry, if and when he were free to marry. Mrs. Douglas had called him Victor. Carol, apparently ignored any remark that did not please her. She turned her bright eyes on Marcia. "You certainly don't look anything alike. But then, Abbie is such a beauty. Not that you haven't something, as Victor said—your youth, I assume, but your clothes, darling!" She raised her eyebrows again. "You should never wear that shade of blue. It doesn't do a thing for you."
 Marcia might have been offended, had she cared what Mrs. Douglas thought of her clothes, or of her.
 "I'm sorry you don't like my dress." She spoke quietly, giving Mr. Scott a quiet little smile, as he appeared so distressed at the way her sister's best friend was speaking.

Workers Resist Muffling Noise

MILWAUKEE —(UP)— Workers in noisy places could avoid "boiler-makers' deafness" but they resist the use of devices to protect their hearing, according to an industrial nurse. Irma Schroeder told a meeting of the Milwaukee Hearing Society that earplugs, earmuffs and valves have been developed to shut out damaging high frequency and intensive noises and still admit conversational tones. However, she said, workers are as slow to use those devices as they were to wear safety goggles and safety shoes when they were developed.

Groat Resumes Lead As Scoring Leader

By The Associated Press
Dandy Dick Groat, Duke University's star guard, was back in command in the Southern Conference individual basketball scoring race today.

Groat had an average of 24.2 points for the Blue Devils' six conference contests. It was the fifth straight week the lead had changed hands.

Dwane Morrison, South Carolina forward, who held the lead a week ago, tumbled to second with an even 23-point average. Mark Workman, West Virginia's remarkable center, was in third with 21.7.

To regain first, Groat didn't do a thing—just helped the Dukes to two non-conference victories and scored as far as the league scoring scramble was concerned and watched Morrison go down.

Nobody overhauled North Carolina State, meanwhile, in the league standings. The Pack remained out front as the loop's only team unbeaten in family feuds and gained victory No. 7 Saturday night by overwhelming William and Mary 82-46. Bobby Speight and Mel Thompson scored 20 and 13 points respectively, for State.

West Virginia, which downed non-conference Pittsburgh, 79-60, moved into a tie with North Carolina's Tar Heels for second. Each has 5-1 records.

Fourth-place George Washington (5-2) walloped Virginia Military, still seeking a victory after 10 starts this season, 77-62. Washington and Lee turned back Virginia Tech, 76-41. Clemson pulled into a deadlock with Maryland for fifth place with an easy 89-59 conquest of the Citadel.

Groat's 20 points paced Duke to its second decision over Temple, 86-65. South Carolina trimmed Georgia, 80-63. Two other conference teams lost, Wake Forest bowing to Marshall College, 76-68, and Maryland dropping a 61-55 game to Rutgers.

The battle for second in the standings may undergo change tonight since both West Virginia and North Carolina see action. West Virginia faces unpredictable Wake Forest (2-3) at Morgantown, W. Va. North Carolina is host at Chapel Hill, N.C., to Davidson's up-and-down Wildcats (2-4). Virginia Tech, which hasn't lost a basketball game at home in two campaigns, entertains George Washington at Blacksburg, Va. A non-circuit clash sends William and Mary against the University of Louisville at Richmond, Va.

Officials Willing To Forfeit Six Arizona Games

TEMPE, Ariz. (UP)—Red-faced Arizona State officials said today they are willing to forfeit six football games in which an Indiana University lineman played on their team under a phony name.

"We got hooked and I'm afraid that's all there is to it," Arizona State President Grady Gramage said as he revealed that Joe Mastic played under the name of Andy Matr o to duck NCAA eligibility regulations.

The 240-pound tackle played at Indiana in 1950. And wouldn't be eligible to play for Arizona State, as a transfer student, until 1952. But he played both offense and defense for Arizona State in six conference games under the phony name.

The school probably will not forfeit the games because of a technicality. Border Conference rules stipulate a player's eligibility must be challenged 72 hours before a game.

SPOKANE, Wash. (UP)—Lewis Costello caught a mallard duck in front of his suburban home and called police for guidance. Their answer: "Eat it."

Brown Meets His Match In Rams' Joe Stydhar

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Paul Brown of Cleveland, pro football's poker faced perfectionist, apparently has met his match in a belly-laughing giant named Joe Stydhar. Until next season, anyway.

First it was the Stydhar-coached Los Angeles Rams who beat Brown's Clevelanders for the National Football League championship. Last Saturday it was Stydhar's National Conference All-Stars who trounced Brown's Americans, 30-13, in the second annual pro bowl game.

It was the first time Brown has ever suffered two defeats in a row and it posed a new and puzzling situation for a man who has tasted few setbacks, indeed, in six highly successful years of coaching.

Trailing by 13-10 going into the fourth quarter, the Nationals broke into the lead when fullback John Dotley of the Bears crashed over from the two following a 21-yard throw by Waterfield. Then they tallied twice more on opportunities provided by enemy fumbles.

The bobbles were by old Sammy Baugh of the Washington Redskins, who entered the game in the closing minutes to replace the weary Graham.

"Sam had trouble with the center, obviously," explained Stydhar afterward. "I've seen a lot of good men get behind a strange center and have the same kind of trouble. I sure hated to see Sam have that kind of a day."

The weather hampered not only Brown's Americans; it also kept people away. Only 19,400 fans were in the stands.

At the January 4 meeting of the league directors in Rocky Mount, the withdrawal of the Rocky Mount club by President Frank Walker was accepted but efforts are expected to keep Rocky Mount in the league. Rocky Mount is reported ready to come back into the loop provided there are eight members and the league will agree to operate on a sane basis.

Tonight's meeting was requested by the directors who wanted to defer definite action until after the meeting of the Virginia League directors. That league is having its troubles and at least one member is known to be interested in obtaining a Coastal Plain franchise. Yesterday, directors of that league postponed their meeting for another week.

The Coastal Plain directors are expected to ask President Ray Goodman to remain in his present office for at least another year. Goodman resigned December 31 but no action has been taken on the resignation.

The question of whether the league will play 126 games or 140 games during the 1952 season is expected to hinge on who finally makes up the six or eight clubs in the circuit.

Presidents May Place Ban On Bowls, Practice

CINCINNATI (UP)—College presidents may still ban bowl games and spring practice even though the NCAA will try to talk them out of it, several sources indicated today.

Although the NCAA adopted a much softer program during its convention here, the American Council on Education nevertheless will receive the presidents' tough de-emphasis program at its convention later this month, and mitted, "If the presidents say 'this is the code we want,' and in the colleges say it, then it becomes the code of the NCAA."

But, he added, the NCAA will try to talk the presidents out of being so tough. "They are going to receive our criticisms and our recommendations before final adoption of the report," Willett said. "I think it might be modified considerably as to details."

Bums Sign Campy

BROOKLYN (AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers today had the most valuable player in the National League—catcher Roy Campanella—safely in the fold for another year.

The Brooks announced yesterday that Campanella had signed his contract during Christmas week. No figures were given, but it was believed to be $24,000, an increase of $5,000 over last year.

Joe Louis At War With PGA Over Ban Of Negroes

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP)—An angry Joe Louis was at war with the Professional Golfers Association today over its rule prohibiting him and other negroes from tournament play.

The long-standing PGA rule against non-white players fell on Louis when he arrived yesterday for this week's San Diego Open.

Local tournament officials said the PGA rule, which they declared they had learned about only two days ago, would bar the former heavyweight boxing champion and two other negroes—Bill Spiller and Earl Clark. Los Angeles professionals.

The usually mid-speaking Louis denounced the rule as unamerican and declared PGA President Horton Smith was "another Hitler" in enforcing it.

"Horton Smith believes in the white race like Hitler believed in the super-race," he said. "I'm not immediately available for comment."

The old ring warrior, now 37, said it was the first time he personally had experienced racial discrimination in sports.

He said he understood the San Diego committee expected to clear about $2,000 from the tournament for the benefit of crippled children.

"I'll give them double that amount if they'll cancel the tournament," Louis said. The tournament is scheduled to open Thursday.

He disclosed he long had been aware of the PGA rule—"It's been causing negro players trouble for three years"—and came here intending to "bring it into the open."

The tournament committee invited Louis, before it learned of the ban to play as an amateur.

He declared he would remain with Spiller and Clark until some one connected with the PGA told them they were not wanted.

Louis said golf was the last sport with a color-line. He suggested that the PGA waive its rule, at least to the extent of allowing some outstanding negro player to prove himself.

In this connection, he cited the case of Jackie Robinson opening the gates of professional baseball to negroes.

Indians Sell Two, Cut Roster To 37

CLEVELAND (AP)—Eager for a pennant even before the first bat is unwrapped, the Cleveland Indians today cut their roster to 37 players, signed outfielder Harry Simpson to a contract and established a "school for sluggers."

General Manager Hank Greenberg announced the roster trimming was accomplished by the sale of pitcher Charley Harris and first baseman Herb Conyers to the Cleveland's AAA farm team, the Indianapolis Indians of the American Association.

Conyers, after a brief trial with the Indians, had trouble solving Coast League pitching at San Diego, then wound up with Dallas in mid-season. Harris was purchased from the Philadelphia Athletics last summer and optioned to San Diego where he won one and lost three.

Simpson, a rightfielder, had a .229 batting average last year and drove in only 24 runs. He is believed to have signed for about the same amount he got last year, a little more than the minimum $5,000.

Some of the amateurs shared the spotlight with the touring professionals. Comedian Bob Hope held up his end of a partnership with Demaret for third place in the best ball competition. Hope birdied the 502-yard, par 5 sixth hole, where he already had a stroke handicap, for an eagle. He also put a 200-yard wood shot within an inch of the 555-yard 14th hole, and got a birdie again on the 18th.

Blaik's Powers To Be Split In Athletic Reform

WEST POINT, N.Y. (UP)—Army football Coach Earl Blaik will be stripped of half his powers in a West Point athletic reform, the academy superintendent revealed today.

The shakeup started new reports that Blaik soon will resign.

Major Gen. Frederick Irving said he will institute a series of reforms as a result of the cribbing scandal which wiped out the football team last summer. One of these, he said, will split the jobs of athletic director and football coach.

Up to now Blaik has held both positions.

Although Gen. Irving said he does not know whether Blaik will remain at the academy under the new regime, some athletic sources said Blaik almost surely would quit now. It is known that he was unhappy with the way e cribbers were expelled, especially since his son, Bob, was one of them.

Gen. Irving said he wants West Point to remain a leader in intercollegiate athletics, but that he is opposed to stressing "long winning streaks."

"Red-blooded American young men like to go to a university which ranks high in intercollegiate athletics," he said. "We also feel that this type of competition builds up qualities of leadership, and so we wish to continue to attract athletic stars."

"We like to win as much as anyone else, but I am opposed to concentrating on long winning streaks and long trips away from the academy."

"I definitely am against privileges and segregation of athletes. They must be simply members of the corps."

Caps Get Fat Pat

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP)—The Raleigh Caps of the Class B Carolina League have purchased James P. (Pat) Seery, former outfielder for the Cleveland Indians.

Club President Rudy Knipe announced last night Seery had been obtained from Tampa of the Florida International League where he played about six weeks of last season. In 1950 Seery was with Colorado Springs in the Western League where he batted .300 and hit 44 home runs.

The U. S. Navy rations, during the war of 1912, provided most minerals and vitamins now recognized as essential, but totally lacked vitamin C.

East Carolina Meets Panthers Wednesday Night In Loop Game

The East Carolina Pirates will get back into action on their home court Wednesday night when they entertain the High Point Panthers, currently the top team in the North State Conference. The Panthers have won four games and lost only one—to Lenoir Rhyne's Bears Saturday night.

The Pirates have played only one game—last Wednesday—since December 18 and are riding a three game losing streak. They've lost games to Appalachian, Guilford, and McCrary, after piling up a five game winning streak before the Christmas holidays. The losses to Guilford and Appalachians were North State Conference games and the Pirates a share in fifth place with a 2-2 record.

The Pirates will drill this afternoon and tomorrow on various phases of the attack. While this is going on, college pep leaders have announced plans for a big "Beat High Point" pep rally to be held Tuesday night. The pep rally, the first of the current basketball season, will be held at 6:30 Tuesday night in front of the Wright Building.

No big line-up changes are expected for the Pirates Wednesday night although Coach Howard Porter has been experimenting with various combinations in practices. All 15 members of the squad have been getting considerable attention in the practices sessions for the past two weeks.

Coach Porter is expected to send the five who have been starting against the Panthers. This combination has Sonny Russell and Bobby Hodges at the forwards, Toddy Fennell at center, and Lou Collier and Ritchie Blake at the guards.

Russell and Hodges have been sharing the burden of scoring for the Pirates thus far. Russell is leading in the scoring with 151 points to Hodges' 145 but big Firpo has the best average since he has appeared in only eight games, one less than Russell. Hodges' average for eight games 20.7 points per contest while Russell has a 16.8 mark for nine games.

Other league action by the Pirates this week will find them traveling to Wilson Friday night to meet the cellar-dwelling Atlantic Christian Bulldogs. This game will be a renewal of the series for possession of the Bohunk Bucket, the symbol of athletic supremacy between the two schools.

The U. S. Navy rations, during the war of 1912, provided most minerals and vitamins now recognized as essential, but totally lacked vitamin C.

Lenoir Rhyne Team Surprises High Point Club

By The Associated Press
North State Conference basketball teams open a full week's schedule with two games carded tonight. Catawba meets Western Carolina at Asheville while Appalachian continues its invasion of Alabama, playing at Troy.

The week's schedule calls for 13 games, six of them conference affairs.

Talk of the loop last week was the surprising performance of Lenoir Rhyne. For a team that was supposed to be "green," the Bears did very well. They set a new scoring mark for themselves in swamping Catawba 96-71, then squeaked by Atlantic Christian 61-59, and finished by handing the conference-leading High Point Panthers their first defeat of the season, 61-57. The three wins boosted the Bears into third place in the conference standings with a 4-2 mark. High Point continues to lead the pack with its 4-1 record, tallied by Appalachian with 3-1. Guilford holds fourth place with 3-2, while Catawba, East Carolina and West Carolina share fifth place with 500 marks.

FIRE CHIEF CONFIDENT CENTER OSSISPEE, N. H. (UP)—When the fire bells rang, everyone attending Sunday service at the Congregational Church held his breath. The Rev. Clifford W. Laws continued with his sermon after saying he had every confidence in the fire fighters. The pastor doubts as Center Ossipee's fire chief.

Build Big Dam By Remote Control

HOLDEN, Mass. —(UP)—The huge Cabinet Gorge dam in Idaho in effect is being built by remote control from this central Massachusetts town.

Faculty members and staff technicians of Worcester Polytechnic Institute's Alden hydraulic laboratory here are calling the signals, 2,000 miles from actual operations. They use a scale model of the dam to simulate actual problems such as what would happen if the water pushed a three-ton boulder against the dam.

Using the model, the technicians determine the feasibility of proposed construction steps and notify-on-the-job engineers.

U. S. Particular About Prisoners

FORT WORTH, Tex. —(UP)—A telephone call to Washington was needed to get a man, charged with criminal assault, across the street from the county jail to the courthouse for his trial.

Shortly before the trial, officers learned the man recently had been given a two-year federal court sentence for forging a government check. That put him legally in custody of the federal bureau of prisoners.

U. S. Marshal J. R. Wright called Washington to get permission to take the man to court.

Radar Trap Bows To Speedometer

BILLINGS, Mont. —(UP)—Rudy Swoboda tried to sell the city a radar device for catching speeders, but wound up by being arrested himself for speeding.

The judge listened to Swoboda's arguments then fined the radar salesman $1, believed to be the lightest fine ever levied in the local court.

He sympathized with Swoboda, the judge said, but would have to base his decision on the arresting patrolman's speedometer.

Agnes Fullilove, president of the chapter and principal of the West Greenville School, presided at the meeting and conducted a short business session.

Mrs. George E. Perry of the East Carolina faculty introduced Mrs. Perkins, and discussed briefly her work at the college and her leadership through workshops and clinics in the field of the training of handicapped children.

Mrs. Perkins' talk was an account of laws in the nation and in the states which determine in large measure the education and training given to handicapped children. She devoted a considerable portion of her talk to a discussion of North Carolina law.

Top Tax Men Are Called To Talks

WASHINGTON —(AP)—Collectors of internal revenue from all over the country were called into conference here today to discuss a reorganization plan that would abolish their jobs.

President Truman has proposed that the officers of the 64 collectors be replaced by a new and smaller setup of district commissioners.

Revenue Commissioner John B. Dunlap called today's meeting to discuss what may be expected if congress doesn't kill the reorganization plan.

Mr. Truman's proposal, offered in the wake of a series of internal revenue bureau scandals, would create 25 district revenue smaller setup of district commissioners. They would take over, not only the work of the 64 present collectors, but all other field activities in their districts.

Many revenue units in the field now operate independently of the collectors, who are appointed by the White House. The new district commissioners would be selected under the Civil Service system.

The reorganization proposal goes into effect automatically within 60 days after it is formally submitted to congress, unless either House votes against it.

Dunlap has indicated that many of the 64 collectors probably will not be retained in the reorganization, and that some probably will prefer to leave the revenue bureau.

Service Station Broken Into On Saturday Night

A prowler or prowlers broke into Johnny Case's Service Station near Ayden sometime Saturday night by forcing entry through a window.

The station is located on N.C. 11, about three miles south of Ayden.

Yesterday's investigation was conducted by the county sheriff's department and Capt. S. B. Dorsey, city investigation officer. The investigation is being considered.

ing equipment to serve points on their lines like the automotive equipment serves other communities. Modern methods of preserving and transporting fresh blood make it possible for the front to get the blood that may save his life within six days after some person back home has donated a pint.

VICIOUS — Response of the public generally to the call for blood has been so gratifying, that one hesitates to mention the vicious, in many instances unconsciously so, propaganda that wounded soldiers are charged a cash fee for blood transfusions from sources supplied by the voluntary "Blood for Freedom" donors. It is true that civilian pa-

Items in domestic hospitals are supposed to pay in cash for blood drawn out of the local blood bank or to replace the blood through voluntary donation by friends or relatives. Even so, there is at hand no substantiated instance of an emergency hospital patient being denied transfusion for lack of money to pay for it. Certainly in the military hospitals at the fighting front there is no thought of charging the soldier for replacement of the blood he gave on the battle field. Whether the rumors about charging the blood against the soldier's pay check arise out of ignorance or viciousness, they are groundless and their result is to retard the blood program at expense of the men who have offered their lives to preserve freedom in the world.

To The Women

You may know a wife like Mary, who turns pale at any mention of her past. You may know a husband like Jim, who thought he was broadminded till it came to HIS wife! You've probably only heard of unlicensed doctors . . . but they're around! This all adds up to pretty strong stuff, but as an adult woman you will know how even a "Nice Girl" can get in "Big" trouble!
