Makes Arrest Minutes After Shooting

Cpl. H. M. Morrow, Greenville highway patrolman, is shown with German Reeves, who is being held for murder of a 35-year-old Negro man he shot early last night. The fatal shooting occurred on the L. T. Hardee, Jr. farm, off the Washington highway. Morrow arrested Reeves as he was going to the murder scene some 30 minutes after the shooting. (Reflector Staff Photo by Roy Hardee.)

Arrest Pitt Man In Shotgun Slaying

German Reeves Admits Shooting Half-Brother, Jessie Hardy, In Face Sunday Evening; Held For Grand Jury Action Today

By ROY HARDEE
Reflector Staff Writer
German Reeves, 55-year-old Negro, is being held in Pitt County jail on a murder charge, for the shotgun slaying of his half-brother early last night on the L. T. Hardee Jr. farm.
Reeves was arrested by Cpl. H. M. Morrow, State Highway Patrolman, who was answering a call to the highway as Reeves walked along the highway some distance from the scene.
When stopped by the officer and asked where the trouble was, Reeves replied, "Up at my house."
Morrow, in turn, opened the car door of his patrol car and said, "Get in."
Morrow then asked the man who did the shooting, and he replied, "I did."
Hardy's body was found about 30 feet from the front porch of the Reeves home, lying face down in the white sand. He had been shot at near point-blank range, with the charge of the 12-gauge shotgun striking him in the face. He died instantly.
When asked by Cpl. Morrow where he was going when arrested, Reeves said, "To call the law."
Questioned by Morrow and members of the Pitt County Sheriff's Department about the shooting, Reeves gave the following account. He and his half-brother had an argument earlier in the day with both exchanging blows. Later, Hardy came to Reeves' home and was told to leave. Reeves stated that his wife took the man down a small path and told him to leave before they had any trouble. Hardy then came back and Reeves shot him with his

Complain Army Is Hurting UMT

Supporters Object To Collins' Plan Of Volunteer Basis

WASHINGTON (UP)—Some congressional supporters of universal military training complained today that the army has hurt UMT's chances.
They objected to testimony Friday by Gen. J. Lawton Collins, chief of staff, that the army will recommend that UMT be run on a volunteer basis for at least the first two or three years.
UMT opponents pounced on Collins' testimony as proof of their contention that there is no real need for enactment of compulsory training legislation at this time.
Both sides were reluctant to be quoted. However, Armed Services Committee Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.), who supports the volunteer plan as the best way to get compulsory UMT started, praised Collins' statement.
He said Collins was right in wanting to get the UMT machinery into motion as soon as possible, calling volunteers only, so that it will be ready to go into full-scale operation when the time comes.
But Vinson said he doubted that it would be feasible to run the volunteer phase of the program quite as long as suggested by Collins. Vinson himself has proposed a 12-month voluntary start, with compulsory inductions after that.
Collins told the committee that if Congress gives the word UMT can be started next September or October. He said inductions initially should be limited to volunteers, 17 and 18 years old, who will agree to be called to 18 months active military duty immediately upon completion of six months of UMT.

Veterans' Budget Cut By $1 Billion

Probably 'Last Cut' Says President In Budget Message

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Truman today budgeted veterans' benefits at nearly $1,000,000,000 less than this year. But he said that time and the draft probably will make this the last cut.
He asked for $4,197,000,000 to pay for the reduced veterans' program in fiscal 1953. This year's spending for veterans is expected to reach $5,196,000,000.
He called for quick passage of a readjustment program for veterans of the Korean war, but cautioned against repeating the errors of the now-expired GI Bill of Rights.
Annual spending for veterans' services and benefits has declined 43 per cent from the postwar peak in 1947, when the nation spent $7,400,000,000 on its ex-servicemen. The President credited the reduction to the end of the GI Bill and the national service life insurance program, which was replaced last year by flat $10,000 benefits to families of men killed in service.

$85.4 Billion Budget Is Given To Congressmen As 'Price Of Peace'

Admiral Joy Suggests Reds May Need Some Prodding

WASHINGTON (UP)—Vice Admiral C. Turner Joy, chief U. N. truce negotiator, suggested today that increased military pressure may be needed to stop Communist stalling over a Korean armistice.
Joy said there are only two possible ways to bring a definite show-down in the truce talks:
"Either a sudden voluntary change of heart on the part of the Communists, or the application of sufficient military power to induce such a change of heart."
"After more than six months of tediously frustrating negotiations I am sure that there must be a large number of people who would heartily endorse blasting the Communists off the Korean peninsula," he said in a copyrighted interview with the news magazine U. S. News and World Report.
While not suggesting any definite military steps, Joy clearly indicated that U. N. forces might have to break the "military stalemate" before the Communists would accept a "stable armistice agreement."
"In my present capacity, I have to work with situation 'in being,' and the current situation is one of a military stalemate," he said. "In the absence of change in the military situation, we shall continue to do our best in trying to negotiate an effective and stable armistice."
Joy expressed doubt that the Communists sincerely want such a "stable" armistice, unless it can be drawn up "on their own terms."

Armistice Talks Reach 'Dead End'

Only Major Policy Change Can End Talk Marathon

PANMONJOM, Korea (UP)—The Korean armistice talks appeared to have reached a dead-end today with both sides refusing to budge.
Only a major policy change by the United Nations or the Communists can end the endurance contest and save the negotiations from final collapse.
Neither subcommittee working on a truce held out any hope for agreement.
Each side served notice today that it will not yield on the two main issues blocking an armistice—the U. N. demand for voluntary repatriation of war prisoners and for a ban on military, airfield construction.
A Communist spokesman covering the truce talks told U. N. correspondents that full-scale Korean fighting is "sure to begin" unless the U. N. drops its stand on airfields.
At the same time, the U. N. denied a Communist charge that Allied planes deliberately bombed Communist truce delegation camp on the Pyongyang-Kaesong road last Friday.
It conceded that some Communist vehicles might have been hit during an Allied air attack at the spot—a bridge 40 miles north of Kaesong. However, the U. N. said, the four attacking planes did not see any vehicles in the vicinity.
U. N. Col. James C. Murray moreover hinted that the Reds might have been trying to sneak through an extra convoy under protection of truce markers.
A southbound convoy had been spotted at the bridge three hours and the Allies agreed to permit only one southbound convoy a day. The Reds said two of the three were destroyed and two men injured.

Prisoner Of War Camp Seethes With Intrigue

Riots, Escape Attempts, Kangaroo Courts And 'Executions'; Constant Threat Of Violence Among Red Captives

By PETER GRUENING
United Press Staff Correspondent
KOJE ISLAND, Korea (UP)—Communist intrigue and a continuing threat of violence have turned this camp of 170,000 Chinese and North Korean war prisoners and internees into an island of fear.
Riots, torture and murder have woven a pattern of terror in daily prisoner life here since the first boatload of captives arrived a year ago.
Eight camp commanders in 12 months, working behind a wall of official silence to create order in the barred wire compounds, have failed so far to solve what officials call the thorniest prison administration problem of modern times.
"Each compound seethes with intrigue—half the prisoners figuring ways to escape and the rest pursuing groups fighting each other," Lt. Col. John Moran of Bayonne, N. J., camp executive officer, said. "Killings? Plenty of them."
Evidence of the grisly struggle between anti-Red and "hard core" Communists is the more than 30 murders and scores of beatings and riots that have occurred in the enclosures.
During four days of rioting last September, 15 North Koreans received death sentences from Communist kangaroo courts meeting secretly at night. The victims were then beaten to death, their

Proposed Budget Dwarfs Amount Of Actual Cash

WASHINGTON (UP)—Footnote to President Truman's budget of $85.444,000,000:
There isn't that much money. This may not surprise you. Your per capita share of money in circulation is about $180, while your slice of the spending — be you man, woman or child — would come to $547.72.

Stockholders Of Fountain Bank Elect Officers

FOUNTAIN — At their annual meeting here January 17, stockholders of the Bank of Fountain elected J. M. Horton president for the coming year. G. W. Jefferson and Dr. E. B. Beasley were elected vice-presidents.
At the same time, eight men were elected to the Board of Directors. They are: E. B. Beasley, R. A. Fountain, A. D. Fowkes, J. M. Horton, G. W. Jefferson, C. M. Smith, H. H. Taylor Jr., and G. E. Trevathan.
The officers' report showed a gain of $282,587.00 in deposit over last year—an increase which was termed "very satisfactory."
Following the stockholders' meeting, the directors met and appointed J. E. Owens as cashier, and Mrs. Aileen G. Pittman as assistant cashier.

Inquest Tonight In Page Slaying

ELIZABETHTOWN, N. C. — (AP)—Coroner Walter J. Melvin plans to hold an inquest here tonight into the slaying of former state representative U. S. Page on Dec. 29.
Walter Sawyer, 34, former tenant on the Page farm, has allegedly confessed that he killed Page "because he was taking the bread out of the mouth of my children."
Page's bullet-riddled body was found Dec. 30 lying in his country store at Page's Lake, located 12 miles northwest of here.

New Yorkers Are 'Most Curious'

RALEIGH (UP)—Charles Parker, director of the state advertising bureau, said today New Yorkers are more curious about North Carolina than anyone else.
Parker said last year he got 16,394 questions from New Yorkers. Second high were North Carolinians, asking 15,202 questions about their own state.

President Proposes Huge Expansion Of U.S. Atomic Weapons Program; Foreign Aid Outlay Bigger Than Expected; Third Largest Spending Program In U.S. History Admittedly A Heavy Burden, Says Truman

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Truman today handed Congress an $85,400,000,000 "price of peace" spending budget, and capped it with the announcement of a mammoth future expansion of the U. S. atomic weapons program.
He proposed an outlay of five to six billion dollars over the next five years to double the size of the already-vast atomic project and speed mass production of America's "fantastic" new weapons. Actual spending on the proposed atomic expansion will not start in the 1953 fiscal year so it was not part of the budget. But Mr. Truman unveiled the plan along with his spending proposals for the 12 months beginning next July 1.
The new budget provided a record $1,775,000,000 for atomic energy in fiscal 1953, but its really big items were $51,200,000,000 for our armed forces and $10,500,000,000 to help build up our allies against the Communist menace.
Those two items together mean the United States is carrying about 85 per cent of the cost of rearming the Western world. The foreign aid request was much larger than many congressmen expected and faced rough going.
Anticipating economy outcries from the election-minded lawmakers, Mr. Truman conceded that his budget "will involve a heavy burden for our taxpayers." But he warned that "the price of peace is preparedness."

Present taxes will bring in some $71,000,000,000, far and away the biggest revenue in history.
Mr. Truman renewed last week's request for another tax increase of $5,000,000,000. Congress is not disposed to vote it. That would leave a deficit of $14,400,000,000 and push the national debt to the legal limit of $275,000,000,000 by June 30, 1953.
It was the third largest spending program ever proposed by any American president. Only the peak war years of 1944 and 1945 exceeded it. The top then was about $98,000,000,000.
The federal spending will take 29 per cent of the national income, according to Mr. Truman's figures, against 52 per cent of 1945 when spending was not so much higher. This because the American economy has expanded so much since the war.
The proposed huge spending and taxes are necessary now, Mr. Truman said, because:
"In the current world crisis, the price of peace is preparedness. In terms of the sacrifices which this involves, it is a heavy price, but when freedom is at stake it is a price which all of us will gladly pay."

The budget which he presented today is for the fiscal year 1953, which begins this July 1. The current year's budget calls for spending $70,881,000,000.
Mr. Truman said non-defense spending would be lower by a billion dollars, largely because of a drop-off of that amount in veterans' benefits.
He proposed an expansion of public power projects, but a hold-down on other public works.
He renewed his pleas for federal aid to education, including scholarships to needy college students, and slightly higher social security benefits.
He proposed a new system of insurance and benefits for A-bomb victims in event of war.
He repeated his wish for creation of a Fair Employment Practices Commission, but he did so in one short sentence that passed almost unnoticed.
And he had nothing to say on the controversial compulsory health insurance scheme which loomed so large in his messages of former years.

Mr. Truman did not at this time provide any details of the foreign aid program. He said about $8,000,000,000 of it would be in military aid, and about $2,500,000,000 in economic assistance.
Explaining that our own defense program and the foreign aid measures do not represent all-out mobilization, he said this is being done:
"The vast rearmament program upon which this nation has entered has a single objective—the building of defensive forces and a mobilization base which will serve as a deterrent to Communist aggression and which can, if the deterrent fails give us and our allies the strength to defeat the aggression."
The $51,200,000,000 recommended for the armed forces exceeds by $11,400,000,000 this year's military spending and is four times as much as the services got in the 12 months preceding the Korean war. Eleven billion of the total would be spent on airplanes alone.
He asked $18,900,000,000 for the Air Force, $16,800,000,000 for the Army, and $12,300,000,000 for the Navy and Marine Corps.
Military construction, administrative costs, stockpiling of strategic materials, and supporting activities made up the rest of the military budget.

Truman Seeks Big Increase In Southeastern Power Spending

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Truman today asked congress for a big increase in appropriations for construction and operation of power transmission facilities by the Southeastern Power Administration in the year beginning July 1.
He asked $6,350,000 for construction of additional transmission facilities and $795,000 for operation and maintenance of the power system. This is an increase of $6,527,000 over the appropriations for the fiscal year ending next June 30, when $318,500 was appropriated for new facilities and $200,000 for maintenance and operation.
The President proposed an appropriation of $3,614,000 for construction in the Roanoke River Basin, $2,496,000 in the Savannah River Basin, $50,000 in the Apalachicola River Basin and $190,000 for plant equipment and plans for future plant inter-connections.
The Roanoke River Basin would get $2,864,000 for the John H. Kerr-Suffolk-Prince Edward project, $71,000 for the Suffolk-Naval Base project, $100,000 for the John H. Kerr-VEPCO connection, $125,000 for the Kerr-Altavista project, $450,000 for the Kerr-Kinston project and $4,000 for the Philpott-Appalachian Power Co. connection.
The Savannah Basin would get $869,000 for the Clark Hill-Greenwood project, $1,086,000 for Clark Hill-Batesburg, $37,000 for Clark Hill-Aiken, $25,000 for Clark Hill-Hartselle and $479,000 for Clark Hill-Augusta.
The report said existing transmission facilities are inadequate to provide for an integrated operation and to accomplish the transfer of large blocks of power made available to load centers from projects under construction.
Under the present construction program of Army engineers, congress was told, Southeastern Power will have the responsibility for marketing more than 800,000 kilowatts of electricity by June 30, 1953.

N. C. Political Picture Coming Into Clearer Focus This Week

By UNITED PRESS
North Carolina's political picture is beginning to come into focus. In weekend developments, Hubert E. Olive of Lexington plumped down his filing fee to run for governor in the May Democratic primary. A $100-a-plate Republican dinner at Greensboro brought in $15,000 for the GOP war chest.
Gov. Kerr Scott, returning from a Caribbean cruise, hinted he would favor Olive in the race against former U. S. Sen. William E. Umstead of Durham and two other Democratic hopefuls.
Traditionally, the nomination is rotated from East to West. But many Easterners said Scott broke the tradition when he beat Eastern candidate Charles Johnson. Scott's Haw River farm sits square on the dividing line, and he claimed he was neutral.
Scott wasn't saying so right out, but he indicated he might favor Olive over Umstead.
"He's the only one with a program, isn't he?" Scott asked. Olive's announced "Program of Progress" sounds a lot like Scott's "Go Forward" program.
The rest of the state's political action was also confined to the West. J. T. Joyner Jr. of Winston-Salem withdrew from the race for secretary of state "for personal reasons."
Another Winston-Salem man, three-times State Rep. Winfield Blackwell, is also out of the running. Blackwell said he won't be running for anything this year.
Still a third Winston-Salem politician, State Sen. Irving Carlyle, indicated to friends he probably won't run for re-election.
Lawyer Calvin Graves said he would run for the seat Carlyle has

Talk Of Family Activities Given At West Greenville

The P.T.A. of West Greenville School held its regular meeting in the auditorium on Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

The devotion was given by Mrs. C. B. West III, who used as her theme, "Solomon's Instructions from His Parents," as found in the fourth chapter of Proverbs.

Miss Jane Hadley, chairman of the program committee, introduced Mrs. Theodore Eaton as guest speaker for the afternoon.

Mrs. Eaton used as her subject "Fun With the Family" and centered her delightfully impressive remarks around the theme, "Togetherness." She spoke informally, outlining a broad program which she has carried out successfully with her own family over a period of years. Mrs. Eaton emphasized the idea of sharing the experiences of one's children, both in the minor as well as the major things of life, and thus helping them to meet the needs of emotional security.

Mr. Sherman Parks, president, presided during the business session which followed. Reports were given by all standing committees.

The P.T.A. voted to finance the purchase of vestments for the children of the speech choir and the glee club.

Those present voted their unanimous support to the city-wide P.T.A. study course which will be held in February. This will replace the regularly scheduled meeting of the P.T.A.

Mr. Parks outlined the subjects which will be discussed and they promise to be of great value to both parents and teachers.

Several new members were welcomed by the president.

Miss Fullilove gave a running account of a day's use of the new Utility Building and the P.T.A. realized more fully than ever the community needs which are being met by this addition to West Greenville School.

The attendance prize was won by Miss Hadley's second grade.

Grifton Bride Elect Feted At Friday Bridge Party

GRIFTON—On Friday night Mrs. Jake Worthington and Mrs. Craven Hughes entertained at the home of Mrs. Worthington in Grifton Heights at a lovely party as a compliment to Miss Dorothy Glenn Sugg, whose marriage to Edwin Reeves of Ivanhoe will take place on January 27 in the Grifton Methodist Church.

Guests were received in rooms decorated for the occasion with the nuptial colors of green and white. In the living room, where three tables were placed for bridge, a crystal bowl of green and white carnations was used on the piano. In the den white narcissi and greenery was the setting for the three tables placed there. The bride-elect's place was marked with a dainty corsage and a miniature bride and groom.

During the bridge games food, drinks and salad were served. As cards were laid aside bride and groom with individual coconut cakes and mints were passed. Each table was centered with a tall white candle tied with silver ribbons and fern in crystal holders for the refreshment course.

Miss Sugg was presented a knife in her silver pattern from the hostesses.

The high score award went to Mrs. Cecil Cobb, second high to Mrs. Jack Chapman and the consolation to Mrs. Sam Nelson. Table prizes went to Mrs. Wilbur Murphy, Mrs. Dorman McCotter, Mrs. A. D. Wall, Mrs. A. C. Fletcher, Mrs. Claude Hart and Miss Colleen King.

Mrs. Evans Gives Program At Club On Bok Tower

Bok Tower, at Lake Wales in central Florida, was the topic discussed by Mrs. Plato Evans when the Inter Bok Club met Tuesday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. Burke Stancill.

As an introduction to her talk Mrs. Evans mentioned many highlights in the life of Edward Bok, son of the Mountain Lake Sanctuary. His colorful career was traced from the age of seven when he landed in New York harbor from the Netherlands, until he became editor and owner of the Ladies Home Journal.

Bok Tower was given to the American people as a retreat from the confusion of every day life and as a place of sanctuary experienced through the beauties of nature and the music of the bells.

After a vivid description of the Singing Tower and the sanctuary, Mrs. Evans described the sanctuary bells, noted for their peculiar sweetness of tone, and also for the outstanding technique of the bell-master, Anton Brees, who is the world's master carillonneur.

At the conclusion of the program Mrs. Vance Perkins conducted a brief business session.

A delicious salad course was served by the hostess.

Mrs. R. L. Wolfe was a guest for the afternoon.

Informal Hour Honors Guests

Mr. and Mrs. George Perry entertained informally on Thursday night when they invited a group of friends to come in to greet their overnight guests.

More than 40 people enjoyed a delightful social hour and met Admiral and Mrs. Bernard L. Austin of Annapolis, Maryland, brother and sister-in-law of Mrs. Perry.

Arrangements of carnations and other seasonal flowers were used for decorations. In the dining room the coffee table was presided over by Mrs. J. L. Fleming, Sr., who during the evening poured coffee and invited guests to serve themselves to dainty accompaniments of sandwiches, pastries, nuts and sweets. The table centerpiece was a bowl of pink carnations flanked by silver candle sticks with pink tapers. A white cut work cloth was used on the table.

A pleasant conversational hour was enjoyed as the guests gathered in groups in living and dining rooms.

Benjamin May Chapter, Elects Delegates

FARMVILLE—Rev. Z. B. T. Cox, by putting God's Kingdom first in our lives, by helping our fellowman to attain the highest and best possible for one in God's Kingdom, and by creating fellowship where all are as one.

Introduced by Mrs. Henrietta Williamson, regent, he opened his remarks by quoting an excerpt taken from a speech on peace by President Woodrow Wilson. "It must be a peace without victory. Victory would mean peace forced upon the loser; it would leave a sting, a resentment, a bitter memory upon which terms of peace would rest, not permanently but only as upon quicksand. Only a peace between equals can last only a peace, the very principle of which is equality and common participation in a common benefit."

He listed three methods by which the world could bring about peace: (1) Build the largest Army, Navy and Air Force possible. Force peace on the world. (2) Have a commission with representatives from all the nations with a police force necessary to make the nations do their part and (3) God's plan. Redeeming people and teaching them to live together as a family.

"This kind of peace is the only one that can last and remove war and all other forces that kill or destroy mankind," he said. "The cause of war and its kindred parts must be destroyed before peace can come." In conclusion he stated, "We want the Christian community where people can truly live together and enjoy life as it is. We must pay the price."

Prior to the program presented by Rev. Cox, Mrs. Haywood Smith assisted by Misses Nancy Jane Carroll, Lou Taylor Lewis and Grace Miller presented a musical program. The Chapter House was beautifully decorated with magnolia leaves in arrangements with fruits and candles in brass and silver candelabras. Arrangements of cut flowers, gladioli, and Dutch iris were used with fern on the speaker's table.

The refreshments table was covered with a lace and Madeira embroidered cloth centered with silver candelabra and an arrangement of carnations.

Guests were invited to the table by the hostesses, Mrs. A. C. Monk Sr. and Mrs. D. S. Morrill.

Party sandwiches, sand tarts, olives, cheese biscuits, nuts, pickles, ham biscuits and decorated cake squares were served. Mrs. J. O. Pollard poured coffee.

Dessert Bridge Given Saturday To Miss Sugg

GRIFTON—Miss Dorothy Glenn Sugg, bride-elect of January 27, was guest of honor at a delightful dessert bridge on Saturday night when Miss Mary Dawson McCotter entertained at her home here.

Guests were received at 8 o'clock and found their places at the card tables in the living room, where lovely decorations made a pretty setting. Special emphasis was placed on the mantel where a miniature bride stood against a background of magnolia leaves and tall white candles. On an auxiliary table an arrangement of pale pink carnations and blue iris represented the bridesmaids' bouquet.

The guest of honor was given a corsage of carnations. Mrs. George Sugg, mother of the honored guest, was remembered with a corsage.

Following a dessert course with coffee, which carried out the green and white color note, bridge was played at three tables. During the games the hostess served iced drinks, nuts and mints.

Miss Sugg was given a dinner fork in her silver pattern. The high score award went to Mrs. Cecil Cobb and the consolation to Mrs. Julius Chauncey.

Others guests were Mesdames W. I. Bissette, Granger Haynes, Heber Wade, Thurman J. Williams, Walter Murphy, Milton Hart, Wilbur Murphy, George Sugg, and Miss Rebekah Wall.

Mrs. Posey, a talented folk song singer and popular program entertainer for local organizations, charmed the group with her rendition of several, appealing songs which have become a part of the folkways and lore of the mountain inhabitants of the western part of the state.

The singer accompanied herself on the autoharp and interpreted each song as she introduced it.

During the short business meeting which followed, the club voted a donation to the current March of Dimes drive.

Mrs. L. W. Gaylord, Jr. was a special guest. Books were exchanged and the meeting adjourned.

Strength for the Day

By KARL L. DOUGLAS
GOD IN NATURE

Every season of the year has its appeal. Today as I look out of the window, the sky is overcast and the landscape a dull gray. Yet there is beauty here, for days like this are just as necessary for the fulfilling of the fruitful year as are sunny days and the torrential downpour after a season of drought.

We can well understand why our remote ancestors were nature worshippers. They saw God's beneficence in the natural world. But once in a while there was a tornado or a flood or a season of dryness which killed off their food crops and left them to face winter with trembling hearts. Then the god of nature had to be appeased. Most of the time, however, he was beneficent and kindly. These ancient barbarians realized that some alleged scientists deny today, namely, that there is design and moral purpose in God's creation.

Most of us would be nature worshippers if we were not adherents of the faiths we now cherish. And our creed might well be expressed in the words of an anonymous poet:

"The Lord of the hills and the Ocean dwell with thee
His white clouds shelter thee
His sunlight smiles on thee;
His stars and his golden crescent sail with thee,
O'er the gray and the blue of the sea."

The Unity Still Has Many Loopholes

No two free nations of the world are more closely tied together in their action and their thinking than the United States and Great Britain. Yet the results of the conferences held last week between President Truman and Winston Churchill show just how much the line of thought of these two nations vary.

The two nations confess to a unity of purpose in the present world crisis, but there is often bitter disagreement on which policies should be followed in achieving the ultimate goal.

During the recent conferences between the two international leaders, Churchill was forced to swallow one of the bitter pills of his diplomatic career in accepting the appointment of an American admiral as commander of the NATO naval forces.

The British leader likewise was rebuffed strongly for his suggestion that the United States, France and Turkey send token forces into the Suez canal zone to help the British protect the zone from the Egyptians, and also to show the world that the Western nations are united in their efforts to defend the canal zone. The United States surely wants to see the canal remain open to Western traffic, but this nation can not afford to leave itself open to committing its troops and supplies to battle in Egypt. Once American troops landed, there would be calls for a never-ending string of troops and materials from the United States to help defend the canal zone.

Although on the surface the United States and Great Britain trust each other implicitly, Great Britain has found it necessary to secure in writing from the United States the previous U. S. promise that American bombers stationed in England would not fly from English bases on an atomic bomb raid before British authorities were notified.

Churchill and Truman agreed on the policy of carrying the Korean war into China with pin-point air raids if a truce is reached and then broken by the Chinese Communists. But the agreement between the two leaders has met with heated disapproval in England.

The United States and Great Britain are united in their fight against Communism. But even in their unity, which is closer than that between any other two nations, there are many differences of policy which must be worked out before the full force of their unity can be utilized.

Truman's Operetta Is No Comedy

The deeper officials delve into the corruptness in departments and agencies of the federal government, the more the people of the United States become aware that they are lucky they have not literally lost their shirts to the scheming, unethical individuals in the fabulous bureaucracy of the government.

Before it is all over, we may find we have lost our shirts as well as our pocket-books.

At least a portion of the corruption in the Internal Revenue Bureau has become well known to the general public. And there it is quite likely that only a small fraction of the unethical activities have so far been exposed. The scene is now shifting to the Agricultural Department where U. S. Comptroller Lindsey C. Warren, native of Beaufort County, has said millions of dollars worth of farm commodities purchased by the government have been missed over a period of years. Who got the commodities or who benefited by their disappearance has not yet been established, but at least the people of the country can hope that the information will be forthcoming.

If the Congress could ever get a thorough housecleaning and investigation going full steam in the federal government, there is no telling just how much muck and mire would be uncovered. From the small amount which has been uncovered so far, it is almost certain that if the whole story of corruption in government during recent years is ever told, it will make the Teapot Dome scandal look like a penny-ante poker game played by kids.

If the government is to be cleaned up, it looks like it will have to be done by Congress or the American people themselves, because the Truman administration has strongly indicated by its actions it is out to provide itself with a whitewash rather than a thorough cleaning—despite President Truman's words to the contrary.

Truman's appointment of Attorney General Howard McGrath to head the government clean-up bespoke of the fallacy of the administration's exterior determination for cleaning the rubbish out of the government, for McGrath himself is by no stretch of the imagination above suspicion as a collaborator in the government corruption.

The Truman doctrine for remedying the internal ills of the federal government indeed is like a page from the satirical Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, "The Mikado," an acid travesty of the bureaucracy in the British government in the 19th Century.

National Whirligig

WASHINGTON—Two grave questions involving final control over American foreign policy, including the power to wage war or a "police action," will be threshed out at the current session of Congress and in the 1952 Presidential campaign. The debate may embarrass General Eisenhower and his backers.

Although these problems have not yet attracted general attention in the press or on the House-Senate floor, both Democrats and Republicans have held numerous secret and informal conferences on the matter. They were discussed at the recent San Francisco meeting of the Republican National Committee. The attempt to solve them, or even to decide on an approach to them, has brought wrinkles to the foreheads of Presidential candidates and their back-seat advisers.

AGREEMENTS—The problems have assumed dramatic pressure and prominence because of two agreements reached by President Truman and Secretary Acheson in their recent talks with Prime Minister Churchill and Foreign Minister Eden.

The first concerns the statement's decision that the United States shall not employ any atomic weapons without Britain's prior approval. Churchill raised the question of our possession of atomic bases in England.

The second involves the White House promise to support the French and British in Southeast Asia—Indochina, Thailand, Burma, the Federation of Malaya, possibly Dutch Indonesia—if the Chinese Communists invade that storehouse of valuable raw materials on a grand scale.

ACUTE—Even though the United States may not be able to supply troops, the understanding is that we would furnish air and naval reinforcement. We are now giving the French force in Indochina hundreds of millions' worth of fighting equipment.

There is also the prospect that the three nations may declare a naval blockade and economic boycott of China proper, besides utilizing Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist troops on Formosa.

The Truman-Churchill warning of our preparedness plans may frighten the Chinese Reds out of an all-out invasion. On the other hand, since this rubber-tyre-rich region is far more important than Korea, it could set the stage and scenery for World War III. A "police action" here might not be restricted to a local area, as in Korea.

Thus the question of control over foreign policy decisions and overseas alliances in an atomic world becomes more acute than ever before. It is aggravated by the fact that President Truman, like Franklin D. Roosevelt before and during the last conflict, does not plan to send these far-reaching agreements to the Senate for ratification. He regards them as executive contracts not treaties.

HANDICAP—The British objection to our exclusive right to decide on use of atomic bombs and artillery in a European war is understandable. Such action would make England the first target for retaliation in kind, assuming that the Russians can deliver.

On the other hand, the United States now has six divisions in Europe, and may ship more, if Congress agrees. We also have smaller military forces in England, Austria, Italy, Turkey and North Africa.

If Russia ever attacks, she will not serve us with a three-day warning of her intentions. It will be a blitzkrieg affair, with possible use of every variety of atomic weapon she possesses.

The question raised on Capitol Hill and in various Presidential candidates' camps is: Must our soldiers fight under this handicap, as General MacArthur maintains they are now doing in Korea, while we wait for British consent?

PRECEDENT—The difficulty becomes more serious because with this pact as precedent, we shall probably make the same agreement with other countries where American forces are stationed in "the containment of Russia" strategy.

The Indochina pledge revives and sharpens the discussion which stirred Congress when Mr. Truman ordered our small and weak forces into Korea without first setting Capitol Hill approval.

Having established that precedent, the White House apparently believes that it can be repeated even though Indochina and Korea are two different breeds of fighting cats.

DANGER—Senator Taft has already taken his stand. He has not yet discussed the atomic arrangement with London, but he has criticized the Korean decision as "arbitrary and unconstitutional."

General Eisenhower, naturally, has said nothing, although he will have to face the problem eventually. As a military and diplomatic expert, he knows from experience the danger of granting too much power over foreign affairs to the President. He disagreed with the Roosevelt-Truman program under which Russia was permitted to become so powerful.

Reflector Bureau By LYNN NESBET Ann. Afternoon Edition

IMPORTANT — Admittedly the most important responsibility resting upon voting citizens of North Carolina this year is the election of legislative, executive and judicial officers to administer the tri-lateral government of the state and the nation during the next few years. The obligations of citizenship theoretically are shared by partisan Democrats and Republicans and by those who like to boast of their non-partisan independent voting. Actually, by reason of the fact that in North Carolina nominees in the Democratic primary for statewide offices, and for most district and county offices are certain of election, there is greater responsibility upon Democratic partisans to participate in the party primary. An entirely different process is applied to the nomination of national candidates for president and vice president, which require participation in the party precinct meetings and caucuses. Dates and procedures for the primary elections are fixed by statute. Dates and rules for the party conventions are set by the executive committee.

DATES — The primary this year will be held on May 31, with a runoff if necessary on June 28. Time for filing notice of candidacy for state and district offices expires at noon on March 22, and for county and township offices at noon on April 19. Registration books for the primary open in every precinct at nine o'clock Saturday, May 3, and remain open until sunset of May 17. The general election will be held on November 4, with registration books open from nine o'clock October 11 until sunset of October 25. The state board of elections will meet on Saturday, March 22, to appoint county boards in each of the one hundred counties, which in turn will name precinct registrars and other local election officials. The county boards of elections are required to meet on the second day after any election, and the state board on Tuesday following the third Monday after voting and certify results. These are the dates fixed by statute for important election procedure.

LEGALIZED — Convention nomination of candidates for presidential was legalized by the 1951 legislature, following long practices without authority of law. That is really the only statutory recognition given the party conventions, all the other activities dealing entirely with internal organization matters. There is legal recognition of the executive committees in the statute providing for these committees to nominate members of the local boards of elections who upon their appointment become public officers. Because of this status in the official nominating machinery, party meetings from precinct to state and national level become almost as important as the nominating primaries. Another non-statutory function of the state conventions is the part they play in forming the national committees. As federal control over the daily activities of citizens is tightened, the positions of national committeeman and national committeewoman become more important.

COMMITTEEMEN — Republican procedure for nominating members of the national committee is more democratic than that followed in the Democratic party. In both parties the national convention actually names the members of the national committee, upon nominations from the state. In North Carolina the Republican plan provides for the state convention to nominate a man and a woman for the national committee. The Democratic plan contemplates that the nomination will be made by the delegates to the national meeting, rather than by the state convention as a whole. In event of vacancy the state executive committee of the party makes the nomination.

DIFFERENCE — Because of this difference in procedure the posts of national committeeman and committeewoman are generally given little attention at Democratic state conventions, while they have precipitated some of the most heated contests in recent Republican state meetings. Republican incumbents J. E. Broyhill of Lenoir and Mrs. W. P. Few of Durham have been several times nominated by full state conventions. Democratic incumbents Jonathan Daniels of Raleigh and Miss Beatrice Cobb of Morganton have not been before the state convention. Miss Cobb has been national committeewoman for about fifteen years by successive election in the full committee up on delegation nomination. Jonathan Daniels came on the committee three years ago upon the death of Joe Blythe, who had been nominated by the Tarheel delegation to the Philadelphia convention in 1948.

WHERE NOW? — No real contest seems to be in the offing for the Republican positions this year and Broyhill and Few are likely to retain the posts—unless they get involved in pre-convention presidential politics. There is almost certain to be a contest for Democratic committeeman, and there is probability that effort may be made to change the rules so that the Democratic convention will have the same right as the Republican convention now has to nominate members of the national committee.

What Other Papers Are Thinking

(Hartford County Herald)

Former Superior Court Judge Hubert Olive's coming into the Democratic primary race for Governor means that North Carolina will get a good governor and good government for another four years after the present incumbent leaves office. The State has been fortunate in having elected a succession of good governors, who have governed well and with no trace of mink-cost taint.

We are right happy over the fact that Judge Olive decided to make it a real race. Our position tallies with that of the Greenville Daily News:

"Strong for the competitive spirit in politics is the Daily News. Nobody in North Carolina ought to have the governor's office handed him on a silver platter. Competition, hard work, and a little sweat make the victory sweeter and tells the victor in plainer, clearer tones he is beholden to the people. In this way are issues sharpened, programs shaped and programs hampered out in the forum. If we are closely contested, his majesty's opposition would always be healthy and the ship of state would not sail on perpetually calm waters. It is better under a democracy for high office not to come by default, even to a most acceptable candidate."

That paragraph tells why this newspaper is glad that Candidate Olive is in the race—to make a real contest of what looked like a runaway, by default, for former senator Bill Umstead. We have no candidate and this is not to endorse either of the gentlemen. But, sizing up the two men—Umstead and Olive—from what we know as public servants and as private citizens, we are willing to put our stamp of approval on both of them as highly acceptable gubernatorial material.

It will be a race, and make no mistake about that, even admitting that candidate Umstead is several furlongs ahead now. You simply don't brush aside such a formidable candidate as Olive—the son of a farmer, husband of a school teacher, former carpenter, textile worker, head of the state department of the American Legion, Sunday School teacher, lawyer and judge."

You may also add to that the fact he is geographically "right": he lives in the western end of the State.

While it will not be controlling issue, maybe, geography and the retention of the East-West tradition will have strong weight in the campaign. It is the West's year.

Hubert Olive and Bill Umstead are good men, and you'll make no mistake supporting and voting for either of them. Gubernatorially, North Carolina is safe—now and for four years to come.

GREAT MESSAGES

SIMPLY TOLD

Words fitly chosen, we are told in the Scriptures, are like apples of gold in mesh bags of silver. In this connection some one has pointed out the brevity of words in some of the great messages of all times. For instance:

The Declaration of Independence contains 300 words.

The Ten Commandments contains 297 words.

Lincoln's Gettysburg address contains 266 words.

The Lord's Prayer contains 56 words.

The two commandments that comprise the whole law of God contain 23 words.

BUT the OPS order setting the price of cabbage contains 26,911 words.

Business Today

A man who had spent his boyhood in Europe picked up a broken piece of glass. "What waste!" he said. "In the old country this would not be thrown away but would be melted down to make new glass."

He is probably as aghast at the idea of one-way beer bottles, scrapping autos after a few years wear and the other profligacies of America.

He shares this horror of waste with many of the top economists of the country. But not with Prof. J. K. Galbraith of Harvard. He believes that wastefulness is inevitable in a country as wealthy as the United States and should not be viewed with alarm. He outlines his view in the current issue of Harper's.

He points out that the science of economics began in the 18th and 19th centuries when poverty was the rule. Any waste of food, materials or labor meant more people went hungry or cold. A man writing ads for cigarettes in those days would have meant one less person growing potatoes, hence less total food. Prof. Galbraith hints. This created the belief that waste was a sin and this conception became firmly rooted in economic thinking. It is time, Prof. Galbraith believes, to realize that this is not true amid the abundance in America today.

Economists and a good many others have pointed to the vast energies devoted to selling and advertising with shock and alarm," he writes. "Those who make their living by it have replied, both in anger and sorrow, that it isn't wasteful at all. Some bold spirits, with a knack for generalization, have said that all criticism of such expenditure is subversive. The truth does not lie in between but elsewhere. Our proliferation of selling activity is the counterpart of comparative opulence. Much of it is inevitable with high levels of well-being. It may be waste but it is waste that exists because the community is too well off to care much."

Projecting this thought into government, he contends that we have such resources that we can afford to make mistakes there.

Prof. Galbraith hedges his views slightly, saying that the fact that social efficiency is not as essential as some people think is no reason for total neglect of efficiency. Many poor people, he concedes, would lead fuller lives if elementary goods were produced more abundantly and cheaply.

SHOE COMMITTEE SETTLES ON COLORS

The color called Malacca Brown last season will be Town Brown in the Fall, the color committee of the Tanners' Council, the National Shoe Retailers Association has decided.

The committee in selecting colors for women's footwear, added seven new colors: Sapphire, a lighter, clearer blue of the electric type; Ruby, a darker, rosy red shade; Emerald, a dark green; Smoked Pearl, similar to Avenue Grey of several seasons ago; Dusk, a dark, neutral grey; Chestnut Brown, a medium brown suede, and Copper Lustre, a new and darker version of Burnt Sugar.

Colors for men's shoes will include American Burgundy, Bourbon, Cedar (a new brown) and Ambertone, a golden brown slated for national promotion.

HANGS OVER BUILDERS FALL OF CONTROLS

That's not Los Angeles amog in Chicago today: it's the gloom generated at the eighth annual convention of the National Association of Home Builders.

The builders, naturally, are worried about materials and credit restrictions which may cut new housing units to around 600,000 units this year. It means less work and, as builders are warning Congress, unemployment in the building trades.

However, the builders are interested in new processes and products, especially those that are alternates for restricted supplies. More than 250 exhibitors are displaying $3,000,000 worth of new construction, equipment, materials and accessories.

COLOR: Color is gradually creeping into the kitchen. A new line of 1952 refrigerators by Servel includes a choice of interior trims in Icicle Blue, Sunburst Green and Luminous Gold.

CUPPED: Beer cans can be converted into drinking devices by the addition of cup-like plastic rims that fit lightly over the rim of cans. They are by Beemak Blvd., Los Angeles.

Hal Boyle's Column

By ARTHUR EDSON

(For HAL BOYLE)

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Three congressmen have been warmly debating the question, "Should congress be put on television?" Typically, they have come up with three answers: Yes, No, Yes-and-No.

The debate, prepared for a magazine put out by the Academy of Radio and Television Arts and Sciences, appears in the "Congressional Record."

You, too, may have wondered why it's not possible to see congress in action. Use the word loosely, so let's have a look at the arguments:

Yes, emphatically, says Rep. Javits (R-NY). His view: "We are arbitrarily limiting the scope of our democracy by not televising and broadcasting congressional sessions."

Even Javits won't go whole. He would limit television to major debate. This, he said, would bring enough additional information to the people to make for better government.

No, emphatically, says Senator Gillette (D-Iowa). "Congress is a deliberative and legislative body," Gillette said. "It is not a theater, a music hall or a sports arena."

He thinks television would be a distraction, and that congress should stick to deliberating and legislating.

Yes, and No, says Senator Wiley (R-Wis). Wiley gets off to this glorious start:

"Congress, at least in some respects, provides perfect material for TV."

"The Senate and House have more drama than the most superb television playhouse, more news-worthiness than the most up-to-the-minute video television news reel, occasional humor to for even light-minded onlookers provide splendid refreshment for even light-minded onlookers, variety of subject matter to outmatch the finest variety show."

I don't believe this is quite the way I would describe congress. And after getting his breath back, Wiley seems to shy away from it, too.

He would like to see joint sessions of congress televised, as they are now, and important hearings, as they sometimes are now.

But Wiley foresees numerous difficulties in televising actual House and Senate debates. He faces one problem with admirable frankness.

"In the Senate," he said, "it would be difficult, if not impossible, to force a limitation on debate and thus prevent 'hogging of the TV camera.'"

And indeed it would. Since I don't own a television set, I can be neutral on this.

"Some of the finest, most exciting moments I ever have had have come while watching congress, but the average, routine session offers few lures for the television watchers wanting a quick thrill."

A look at an average Senate day might be helpful.

On this average day the main items were (a) the introduction of a Universal Military training bill, and (b) a discussion of a proposal for home rule for the voteless citizens of Washington.

As usual, the Senators wandered all over the conventional lot.

The talk covered everything from the development of Kentucky's Big Sandy River including the Levisa and Tug Fork thereof," to the Japanese government, to reciprocal trade, to an investigation of the State Department, to a query from Telford O. Thompson, of Hatton, N. D.

Thompson asked Senator Langer (R-ND): "How can a farmer sell eggs for 25 cents a dozen when laying mash costs $4.39?"

The talk went on and on, for four hours and 46 minutes.

By Wiley's standards, the Senate came in with only a 50-50 rating this day. The session certainly provided some news-worthiness, and heaven knows there was a variety of subject matter. But no superb drama, no occasional humor to furnish splendid refreshment for us light minded onlookers.

See what I mean? Am I too late for Kukla, Fran and Ollie?

Washington Letter

WASHINGTON—In the "odds-and-ends of time" she has free from her busy job in the State Department's division of foreign press and publications, Olga Arnold writes about her favorite subject, her father.

It's a sort of Western "life with father." Her father, a convivial, witty, blue-eyed, Van Dyke-bearded Irishman, punched cattle all over the West and finally settled down to ranching and raising a family.

Mrs. Arnold's father was Jack Moore, son of Civil War Union Army captain, Sanford Moore, who operated a freighter wagon caravan carrying supplies from St. Joseph, Mo. to the Black Hills of Wyoming and South Dakota in the gold rush days.

Young Moore first went west at the age of 14 as driver of one of his father's mule teams. Once he was wounded in an encounter with Indians who repented the invasion of the gold miners into the Black Hills, which the government had given the Indians.

Mrs. Arnold, who is the widow of Carl Franklin Arnold, brother of the former New Deal trust-buster Thurman Arnold, was born at Buffalo, Wyo., and grew up on the cattle ranch her father owned.

She first came to Washington with her husband, former dean of the law school at the University of Wyoming, when he was appointed member on the legal staff of the U. S. Maritime Commission in the spring of 1941.

The two had met at the university when Olga was a student. Her husband died several months after they came to the Capital, and Mrs. Arnold went out looking for a job. She finally wound up as a lobbyist for repeal of the oleomargarine tax and after two and a half years wrote a book "I'll Meet You in the Lobby," which was selected as one of the Literary Guild's 1950 bonus books.

"I got my first whack at job by accompanying my father about Wyoming lobbying for public schools," she said. "Later I did a little lobbying on my own for new buildings at the University of Wyoming."

During the later years of the war she worked for OWI in New York and London. Returning to Washington, she was a lobbyist, paid by interested citizens' groups for the Marshall Plan and the Voice of America program on Capitol Hill.

Change of Heart

Chapter 13
Of course she would be glad to see Tommy. There had been times when she had actually been homesick to see him. She could not possibly hurt him by letting him know that she was torn between happiness and regret that he was coming to New York. For how was she going to keep her secret from Tommy MacIntyre?

"He sounds nice," Abigail said. "He sounds just right for you. I suppose Father and Grace approve of him."

"I suppose they do," Marcia admitted. "But I'm not in love with Tommy. I'm not going to marry him, or anything like that."

"That's too bad," Abigail reached a long slender arm for her silver cigarette case. "Let me tell you something, darling. It's better to marry someone who loves you than someone you think you love."

"Why not marry someone when it works both ways?" Marcia spoke lightly, because of that bitterness she felt, but did not understand.

"It seldom works both ways," Abigail spoke shortly. She was silent a moment, then she added, "The most successful marriages, I feel sure, are the ones that are made with one's head, not one's heart. And that is why I am going to marry Victor Scott. He can give me the things I am used to, the surroundings I want."

"But you don't love him!" Marcia protested. "It seems wrong to me to marry someone you do not love. It seems almost wicked."

"I shall make Victor a very good wife," Abigail said. "I don't believe in love any more than I believe in Santa Claus."

"But do you think anyone could be happy," Marcia persisted, "using just his head?"

"Happiness is an illusion, too," Abigail ground out her cigarette with one fierce stub. "It does not last."

It stabbed Marcia to the quick to hear her beloved sister speak in such a way. It stabbed more deeply to realize, as she suddenly did, that Abigail was not happy. For Marcia refused to accept such a bitter philosophy. She believed in love, in trust; she believed in happiness. It was a kind of inward peace, perhaps a kind of inward courage.

"Maybe I shouldn't put on this older-sister act," Abigail spoke now in her light tone, but her violet eyes still searched the younger girl's revealing face. Although she did not want to, Abigail realized she had the responsibility of trying to guide and help this younger sister of hers.

"Promise me one thing," Abigail reached out a slender hand to touch Marcia's smaller, browner one briefly. "Don't turn this boy Tommy down. Be nice to him when he comes. You may find, one of these days, that you will need his love."

"I've already turned him down. I'm afraid," she confessed. "Although Tommy refused to take no for an answer. He says that he'll wait, if it's forever, but Tommy is frightfully young. He'll get over me, I'm sure."

"You're the one who is young," Abigail said. "It's too bad you have to grow up, darling. I hope it won't hurt too much. Though it usually does. Don't look at me like that! I suppose I do sound like an old cynic, but truly, I know whereof I speak. And now that I have spoken, I'll try not to be such a shrew."

When Marcia told Dean that she might not be able to stop by to pose for a few days, as a friend of hers was coming to town, Dean got quite annoyed, almost angry.

"Isn't the portrait more important than some old relative from your home town?" he demanded.

Marcia had to explain that it was not an "old relative," but an old friend. Such an old friend that she felt she had to be free to spend what time there was with him.

"Certainly, the portrait is important," Dean said, added, hurt to think that he would feel she did not think it was.

The scowl vanished from his dark face; he gave her his little crooked smile. "It's all right, youngster. I understand. Run along and have a holiday with the best beau from back home. You've earned it. I hope you have a gay time."

Strangely enough, Dean said almost what Abigail had. "Be nice to your old beau," he told Marcia. "Don't be rough on the poor guy. He must think a lot of you, be very much in love, to come all this way just to see you for a few days."

Marcia explained that Tom had to come East on business and that New York was not much out of the way.

"Don't try to pull wool over my eyes, youngster." Dean laughed at her. Often he loved to tease her, knowing that she never tried to deceive him in the smallest manner. "I'm afraid," he added, "if this guy loves you, you may have trouble pulling it over his. You're such a guileless child."

"All right, I'll be nice to Tommy," she said a bit defiantly. This made it a double promise, first to her sister, now to the man she loved. You might think they were both plotting to throw her into Tommy's arms. Abigail had said that the day might come when Marcia would need Tommy's love.

"Atta gai," Dean said now. Then, in different words, he continued to say what Abigail had said. "You never know. The time might come when you'd be sorry, if you hadn't been nice to him."

Red Sub Fleet A Potent Force

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Russia's submarine fleet is a potent war source, says Secretary of the Navy Kimball, and has grown from 50 to 300 or 400, compared with the U.S. Navy's gain from 70 to 100.

While the Soviets have "no substantial surface fleet," their expanded underwater service in a war would constitute a very real threat, Kimball said yesterday on the CBS television program "See It Now."

"Defeating the submarines of a powerful enemy in wartime may not win xxxa war," he added, "but if we don't defeat them, we would most certainly lose it."

Home Ec Group Stages Dinner

Seventy-eight home economists of Pitt County and members of the home economics department and the home economics club of East Carolina College attended a dinner in the North Dining Hall at the college Friday evening, January 18. Betty Ann Shaw of Weldon, president of the student home economics club of the college, presided at the meeting. The dinner was the second annual event to be sponsored by the college groups for home economists in the county.

Those present, in addition to members of the sponsoring groups, included high school teachers in Pitt County, the home demonstration extension staff, homemakers in the county who are graduates in home economics, and dietitians in the local hospital and health department.

Mrs. Eugenia P. Van Landingham, home demonstration agent in Edgecombe County and president of the state Home Economics Association, who was principal speaker on the program for the evening, discussed "Opportunities and Responsibilities of Today's Home Economist." She was introduced by Dr. Bessie McNeil, director of the college home economics department.

A short social meeting in the parlors of the Planagan building preceded the dinner.

Furniture Mart Exhibition Opens

NEW YORK —(AP)—Buyers were promised "plenty of good bargains" today as New York's mid-winter furniture mart opened its annual six-day session.

And exhibitors dangled two other attractions before buyer-representatives of an estimated 10,000 eastern retail stores: more eye appeal, and greater value.

"Prices are firm," said J. J. Melniker, president of the New York Furniture Exchange whose 16 floors of showroom space house the lion's share of the exhibits.

"But," he said, "manufacturers are offering more for the same money. Quality and styling have improved, he emphasized. "Never have I seen so many new designs and finishes," he declared. "There are so many they will confuse and bewilder the buyer."

Exhibitors cannot expect a recurrence of last winter's panic buying, he said.

"This is a normal market," Melniker said. "It's the first normal market since the war. In other words, it's a buyers' market, and that's what it's going to be from now on. They'll shop around and buy cautiously—they'll shop your ears off."

Voters Should Revolt, Asserts Gov. McKeldin

Greensboro, —(AP)—Republican Gov. Theodore R. McKeldin of Maryland says America's voters should rebel in 1952 against graft, corruption, higher taxation and immorality in government.

McKeldin spoke Saturday night at the South's first $100-a-plate Republican fund-raising dinner. Approximately 400 persons attended the event in Sedgewick Inn.

McKeldin asserted that "it is time, in this year of decisions, for the people to rebel at the ballot box."

He said North Carolina may cast the deciding votes in the electoral college to free the nation "from the totalitarian trap of the one-party rule."

The Sport Reflector

By JIMMY ELLIS

After bouncing around for awhile, the top division in the North State Conference today looked very much like pre-season views said it would look.

Appalachian, a 70-69 victor over East Carolina in pre-Christmas competition, is sitting on the top perch with a 3-1 record. High Point, the favorite to win the title, is in second place with a 5-2 mark while East Carolina is resting in third place with a 4-2 record.

Lenoir Rhyne, the only club to beat High Point besides East Carolina, is in fifth place behind a surprising Guilford club. The Quakers have a season's mark of 3-2 while Lenoir Rhyne and Ernie Sellari have a record of four wins and three losses.

Appalachian will put its league leading mark on the line three times this week. They'll meet a tough Western Carolina team Tuesday, Atlantic Christian Tuesday, and High Point on Saturday. They're the only members of the league who will do any heavy duty this week in conference play as the action slacks up a bit for examinations.

East Carolina won't get a chance to improve its conference mark until next week when the Mountaineers come to Wright Gymnasium. In the first meeting of the two clubs, the Appalachian club won in the last ten seconds in a real thriller over the Bucs and interest should be high for the second meeting of the two teams.

Over in Wilson, Coach Jack McComas of the ACC Bulldogs seems to have caught the backing of the entire town even though his club has lost eight straight games in North State competition. A talk with Jim Fulghum of the Wilson Daily Times seems to indicate that ACC is on the prowl for out-of-state basketball talent. The Bulldogs frankly expect to be a contender for league honors next year if they can get the boys they have their eyes on right now.

McComas unveiled a newcomer to North State play last Friday in 6-5 Ray Shiffner. Shiffner is from Philadelphia and only became eligible at the end of the first semester at Atlantic Christian. The big guy seems to have had considerable experience in basketball in the Philadelphia area, according to Fulghum.

Wilson also seems to have a deal in the fire for a new community gymnasium. At the present time, both the high school and the college have to play in the ACC gym which is not quite large enough. Just when the town will get the new gym remains to be seen but it's at least refreshing to know they're thinking about it at least.

Congratulations are in order for Vic Seixas, the former University of North Carolina tennis ace. Vic has just been given the number one ranking in amateur tennis by the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association.

Seixas got the number one ranking over Dick Savitt and Tony Trabert, who were ranked numbers two and three, respectively. Both were ranked ahead of the Philadelphia ace in the last rankings announced by the tennis group.

Seixas was a member of the U. S. Davis Cup team which only recently finished competition in Australia for the Davis Cup, the symbol of supremacy in amateur tennis. Australia kept the big trophy.

Yanks' Franchise To Be Shifted To Dallas

NEW YORK (AP)—Giles Miller and a large roll of Texas textile money are scheduled to arrive in the east Thursday to complete the transfer of the New York Yanks' professional football franchise to Dallas.

The National Football League, meanwhile, cleaned up its other business—including a hold-the-line television policy—and left commissioner Bert Bell to complete the $300,000 deal that takes radio producer Ted Collins out of the professional picture.

Collins had lost considerable money in the venture and wanted to sell.

Both Bell and Miller, the 32-year-old textile tycoon who heads a syndicate financing the pro venture in Dallas, acknowledged that settlement now is just a matter of routine.

The original schedule called for the deal to be wrapped up in New York but the pro executives concluded their business last night and Bell returned to Philadelphia headquarters.

Frank Fitzgerald, who is expected to be named general manager of the Dallas team, said he had been advised by Miller that there are no plans for selling or trading players on the roster.

This includes the three negro players—Buddy Young, George Taliaferro and Sherman Howard.

Fitzgerald, son-in-law of Collins and general manager of the Yanks, said he and Miller will go to Philadelphia to finish details of the sale.

The league bought the Yanks from Collins for $100,000 and agreed to pay the New York baseball Yankees $200,000 for the remaining eight-year lease on use of Yankee Stadium.

The rival football Giants cancelled—they said "with pleasure"—the $175,000 due them from the Yanks' invasion of their territorial rights.

Louise Suggs Is Winner In Tampa

TAMPA, Fla. (UP)—Little Louise Suggs, always a bridesmaid but never a bride in the $3,500 Tampa women's golf tournament, tucked the $1,000 first prize in her purse today and kissed off a runner-up.

The methodical Miss Suggs, of Carrollton, Ga., who settled for second best in the Tampa meet for five straight years, came in with a point 74 yesterday to take the sixth annual tournament with 293 and a five stroke edge over Mildred (Babe) Zaharias, of Tampa. Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, Tex., captured the $500 third prize with a 299 and Peggy Kirk, of Ponce de Leon, Fla., took fourth and $325.

East Carolina Meets Flyers Tomorrow

Bucs Seeking First Victory Over Flyers

Hodges And Russell Continue To Lead Scoring For Pirates, Tied With 188 Points Apiece; Preliminary Game Tuesday

After two games with conference opponents last week, the East Carolina Pirates will move into non-conference action tomorrow night with a single game stand against the Norfolk Naval Air Station Flyers. This will be a return match of the two teams.

The Flyers won the first meeting 63-55 on November 17 on their home court. After that loss, the Pirates went on a five game winning streak and now have a record of seven wins and four losses.

The latest victory for the Pirates came at the hands of the Atlantic Christian College Bulldogs Friday night and gave the Bucs possession of the Bohunk Bucket at least until February 15 when the teams will meet again.

The Navy team will be led tomorrow night by forward Mike Blatcher who scored 29 points in the first meeting of the two clubs. Blatcher has been the team's scoring leader and offensive ace since the season got underway.

Coach Howard Porter of EOC is expected to start the same five men who have started the last two games for the Pirates. The combination has Bobby Hodges and Sonny Russell at the forwards, Toddy Fennell at center, and Paul Jones and Charlie Huffman at the guards. This quintet worked in a starting role for the first time against High Point last Wednesday and was used again Friday night against Atlantic Christian.

Russell and Hodges continue to lead the scoring race for the Pirates. At the present time, both have 188 points but Hodges has played in only ten games so his points-per-game average is slightly higher than Russell's. For 10 games, Hodges is averaging 18.8 points while Russell, for 11 games, has a 17.1 average.

After tomorrow's game, the Pirates will be idle until January 29 when they entertain the Appalachian Mountaineers. In the first meeting of the two clubs Appalachian won a 70-69 thriller played at Boone.

There will be a preliminary game tomorrow night starting at 6:10. The competing teams will be from East Carolina's intramural "A" League.

Wolves To Have Strong Teams in Gold Medal Play

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Sports Writer

(This is the first of a series of articles on the teams that will participate in the fourth showing of the Coastal Gold Medal tournament to be held in Farmville next week.)

One of the first choices made by the selection committee of the Gold Medal tournament was that of the boys and girls teams of Winterville High School.

Despite the fact that this is the first year that the Winterville teams have played in the tourney, Coach Paul Clark's sextet, considered to be one of the finest ever produced in Pitt County, have been placed on the top rung of the girls division.

The classy six breezed through a 23-2 record last season and appear to have another powerhouse again this season. So far this year, the Winterville team has won 10 games without a defeat, including wins over the second and third place teams in the Gold Medal, Vanceboro and Belvoir.

Winterville lost its last game in the semi-finals of the 1951 Pitt County tournament, a four point upset loss to Belvoir's phenomenal girls team, which went on to win its first county championship by edging the second place Ayden team in the finals.

Winterville's other loss was also a four-point upset at the hands of Chiloc, coming in regular season competition.

Only two seniors are listed on the Winterville roster, forwards Ann Splier and Betsy Castellone. Ann is the scoring leader of the county-leading team, with an average of approximately 20 points in ten games this year, although she has played only about three-fourths of the playing time. Next in the scoring parade is Jean Ann Liverman, a junior with a mean variety of book-shots. Jean Ann is close behind Miss Splier with an average in the neighborhood of 18 points per game.

Ruth Hazelton, a junior, leads the strong guard section of the team, one of the most potent in the county. Faye Branch, a junior also, and Nancy Worthington, a sophomore, round out the starting guards.

The girls play in the third game of the opening night, with Winterville's sextet. The winner of this Wednesday night contest played on Wednesday night in the semi-finals to be played on Thursday night, with the winner of the second game advancing into the finals on Saturday night.

Winterville is averaging nearly 56 points per game.

Boys Team
The Wolves will make their debut in the Gold Medal under the direction of a new coach, Snag Clark of Greenville.

Winterville, which has a 6-4 record this season, plays Belvoir in its first game on Wednesday night. Belvoir upset the Wolves in their county conference contest this year by dropping a field goal in the last five seconds.

Clark also has but two seniors on the squad, Bobby McGlohon and Rex Wainright. McGlohon, a six-foot-plus center, is the scoring leader for the boys team, with an average of approximately 14 points per game for the ten contests played thus far.

Winterville also has a scoring threat in Bobby Cole, who is one of the floor leaders for the Wolves. Guard Leck Keeter, a little fellow who stands in at only a fraction over five feet, six inches, is the set shot artist on the club and is capable of breaking up a contest at any time.

Dean Wingate, a jumping-jack center-forward, is also a potential scorer. Wingate dropped in 11 points against Belvoir's top seeded Indians in a scheduled game played on January 15, which Belvoir won, 66-50.

Winterville has an average of around 43 points per game this season.

Play Tuesday
Winterville's girls will probably give an inkling of what to expect in the finals of the Gold Medal tomorrow night when they meet Vanceboro's high stepping lassies. The two clubs met in an earlier game and Winterville won in the Vanceboro court. The boys teams of the two schools will also meet in an inter-county scrap.

This is the fourth showing of the Coastal Gold Medal tournament in Farmville, and is expected to improve over its thrilling contests last season, which saw a record-breaking attendance congregate in the Farmville gymnasium.

Bethel's teams will be featured in tomorrow's issue.

Dead-eye Dick by Pap'

Groat Still Leads Southern Scoring

By the Associated Press

Dick Groat, Duke University's great guard who remained idle last week, today continued to lead the Southern Conference basketball scoring scramble.

Even though Duke was idle, nobody could catch up with Groat. Dandy Dick has an average of 24.5 points for six conference games. His closest rival is Dwane Morrison, the South Carolina gem, who has a 23.5 mark.

Mark Workman, the West Virginia beanpole, is third with 23.4. Frank Selvy, Furman guard, is fourth with 21.3.

Morrison retained second place Saturday night by dropping in 27 points as South Carolina won its fourth league game in six outings by knocking off Virginia Tech, 71-60.

Selvy matched Morrison's efforts by dumping in 27 markers in Furman's 76-53 conquest of The Citadel. The Furman victory was its fifth in loop competition against three setbacks.

Bill Chambers, William and Mary's star center who hadn't been performing with his brilliance of last season, returned to his 1951 form as the Indians tripped the University of Richmond Spiders, 86-70. Freshman Warren Rowe was high for Richmond with 21.

North Carolina State's Wolfpack, the league leaders with seven wins and no defeats, traveled outside the conference and lost to Villanova, 86-71. The licking was the fifth in 16 games for the Pack. Bobby Speight was State's best point-maker with 18.

Washington and Lee lost to the Quantico Marines, 76-58, despite 28 points by Jay Handian.

Three other conference teams scored outside victories in outside games. North Carolina rallied in the second half to overhaul Temple, 70-65. West Virginia, with Workman collecting 33 points, battered Waynesburg, 87-57. Virginia Military's Karl Kilnar sank 26 points to lead the eKydets to a 76-71 verdict over the Norfolk (Va.) Navy Flyers.

North State Race Slowed By Semester Examinations

By the Associated Press

An even half dozen North State Conference basketball games appear on the schedule for the coming week, as the pace slows slightly for examination time.

Loop leaders, Appalachian, High Point and East Carolina, in that order, head the parade as the scramble for tournament berths goes into high gear. The North State tournament is slated for Statesville in February.

Tonight Norfolk Navy will visit Elon and Catawba College will be at Hanes Hosiery.

Tuesday evening Western Carolina will play host to Appalachian, and East Carolina will be at home to Norfolk Navy.

Wednesday night Catawba will play at McCrary and Erskine will tangle with Elon. Thursday Appalachian will play host to Atlantic Christian and Western Carolina will play Guilford. Friday night Western Carolina meets Guilford at Guilford.

Saturday night Catawba plays host to Elon. Western Carolina visits Guilford. Appalachian journeys to High Point, and Lenoir Rhyne takes on Wofford.

Leading the North State Conference is Appalachian with three wins and one defeat. High Point and East Carolina follow with five victories and two defeats, and four wins and two losses respectively.

Guilford is in fourth place followed by Lenoir Rhyne, Elon, West Carolina and Catawba. Atlantic Christian trails the league.

Says 7 Negroes To Be In Tourney

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UP)—Jo Louis revealed today that seven Negroes will enter the Phoenix Open golf tournament, the first PGA competition ever to welcome Negro professionals.

Louis himself cracked the color ban in the San Diego tournament here last week. But Negro professionals were not permitted to play along with him. Saturday the PGA changed its rules to permit Negroes to play if invited by the local sponsors, and Louis said seven would take advantage of it at Phoenix.

They'll compete against the top stars of the game, including Ted Kroll, deadpan New Hartford, N. Y., pro who shot a last-round 70 yesterday to win the San Diego Open with 276. Jimmy Demaree shot a 69 to finish second with 279.

The big news was the end of the Negro ban, however, and the announcement that the Phoenix tournament would welcome them.

Louis will lead the influx.

Two top Negro pros are included in the group, Bill Spiller of Los Angeles and Ted Rhodes of Nashville, Tenn. Other Negroes making the Phoenix junket are Leonard Reed, Louis' secretary and a good amateur golfer; and Eural Clark, Charlie Cecil, and Bill Phillips.

New French Cabinet Is Already Facing Trouble

PARIS (AP)—Premier Edgar Faure's new French cabinet, less than 24 hours old, headed into trouble today over recent bloody clashes between nationalists and French police in Tunisia.

The cabinet of 40 moderate and right wing ministers and secretaries of state faces the National Assembly for the first time tomorrow, when the 43-year-old Premier is expected to ask for a vote of confidence. He also will face a number of questions, many of them about Tunisia.

The most dangerous questions will come from the Socialist Party. The Socialists voted to confirm Faure in office, but they are threatening to desert him now because they dislike what happened in Tunisia.

A vote against the cabinet by the Socialist bloc, coupled with the inevitable opposition of the Communists and Gen. Charles De Gaulle's followers, would topple Faure at once.

The Socialists disapprove of almost everything the French government is doing in Tunisia. They think France should negotiate with the independence-seeking Neo-Destour Party. They dislike the arrest of the party's leaders last week and they have denounced the police firing on the demonstrators, more than a dozen of whom were killed.

Faure will have less trouble in parliament if yesterday's calm continues in Tunisia. After three days of nationalist rioting throughout the North African protectorate, only two minor incidents were reported yesterday and government precautions were eased.

Faure's new cabinet closely resembles the government of his predecessor, ex-Premier Rene Pleven, who lost a vote of confidence two weeks ago. Foreign Minister Robert Schuman and Defense Minister Georges Bidault still hold those key posts.

American Nun Is Victim In Suez

ISMAILIA, Egypt (AP)—The U. S. Consul from Cairo arrived here today for an on-the-spot investigation of the slaying of an American nun, the first American casualty in the bloody Suez fighting.

British officials said Egyptian "thugs" were responsible for the slaying of Sister Anthony, 52, born Brigitte Ann Timbers, daughter of Samuel Timbers of Peekskill, N. Y. But Egyptian officials asserted that British rifle fire killed her as she stepped from her convent door Saturday with other nuns to welcome a British tank detachment.

As British troops virtually completed their task of clearing out the Arab quarter of this Suez canal zone center, a private Requiem Mass was held for Sister Anthony. U. S. Ambassador Jefferson Caffery in Cairo said her death is a matter of "grave concern" to the United States.

Caffery sent Lamar Mulliner, the U. S. Consul in Cairo, to investigate at first hand the circumstances of the nun's death.

Prayed Together As 26 Died, One By One, In Ocean

(By UNITED PRESS)

MC CHORD Air Force Base, Wash. — (AP)—Seven survivors told yesterday of praying in unison as they watched 26 passengers of a crash-landed Korean airlift plane swept one by one to their deaths in icy north Pacific seas.

One soldier told of baptizing a youth just before he slipped beneath the battering waves.

Thirty-three of the 43 persons aboard got out of the plane safely after it hit the water off the British Columbia coast. But only seven remained huddled on the half-submerged wreckage when fishermen arrived with a skiff.

The seven survivors, flown here Saturday night from Sandspit Airport in the Queen Charlotte Islands, told of a 90-minute struggle for survival in the icy seas. They described how numb with cold, they clung to a slippery wing until the rescue boat arrived.

The four-engine plane, inbound from Japan with troops en route home on emergency leave, crash-landed a mile off Sandspit Airport early Saturday after it developed engine trouble.

The survivors said ten were killed in the crash. The others managed to reach the wing. Pfc Demetris G. (Jimmy) Apostol, 23, Hinton, W. Va., said those on the wing held hands in a chain to stay there.

"I baptized one boy," he recalled. "He said he believed in God, but hadn't been baptized. He slipped off and drowned a few minutes later."

Two men in the fishing skiff reached the wreckage and took the seven survivors to shore 90 minutes after the plane came down.

Blizzard And Rainstorm Move Toward Midwest

(By UNITED PRESS)

Two storms — one a howling blizzard and the other a drenching rainstorm — closed in a giant pincer movement toward the northern Midwest today.

A new blizzard driven by 60-mile-an-hour winds swept the mountains of California and Nevada and moved eastward toward the continental divide in the Rocky Mountains.

Once again, winter vacation resorts in the Sierras were snow-bound. Thousands of cattle in Colorado were trapped by the snow. Railroad officials feared that passage through the mountains would be blocked anew.

The rain-drenched Pacific Coast, however, was promised a day of at least intermittent sunshine.

And an official of the Los Angeles water and power department said last week's siege of rains and floods would prove beneficial in the long run because the water relieved a severe drought facing the area.

A vast rainstorm pelted a good deal of Texas and Oklahoma. The weather bureau said it was marching slowly northeast and should move into the Great Lakes region later today.

Most of the East, however, enjoyed mild weather although the forecast was for clear and slightly colder weather shortly in New England.

At Sun Valley, Idaho, veteran skiers given their way up Mt. Baldy through a severe snowstorm to search for two men believed buried under a snowslide.

Ski instructor Victor Gottschalk, who had been with the missing men, was pulled alive from under the mass of snow, but he died soon afterward.

Fresh snows swept Gunnison, Colo., near where 1,500 or more head of cattle were trapped without food in an inaccessible valley five miles from Crested Butte, Colo. Snow in some locations was 18 feet deep.

The storm blocked all highways west of Reno, Nev., and five bus passengers and 15 motorists were forced to take refuge at a ranch.

Lake Tahoe, already buried in snow 10 to 30 feet deep, was hit by the fresh blast and several resorts were snowbound.

The streamliner City of San Francisco, where some 250 persons spent more than 72 cold, long hours trapped near Donner Summit in the Sierras, finally rolled into Oakland after it was freed from its lofty trap.

Southern Pacific Railroad officials said the pass was still open, but they were hesitant to say how long their luck would last.

Cold weather moved in behind the tail of the Pacific storm of last week which howled north into Canada.

The Los Angeles board of public works estimated the cost of the city's clean-up job at more than $1,000,000. Another $500,000 would be required to repair city facilities damaged by the mud and water.

Typhoid fever inoculations were given to 1,100 residents of the Los Alamitos area because wells there were contaminated by the flood waters.

Costly Damage In 3-Car Collision

Property damage estimated at $1,100 resulted from a three car collision at the corner of Greene and Third streets here Saturday afternoon.

City police arrested Lawrence William Buck, 33, of Greenville, who was charged with crashing a red light, having improper brakes on the automobile he was driving and driving without a driver's license, as a result of the accident.

The police report said the car driven by Buck failed to stop at the intersection and, struck an automobile driven by Richard Henry Briley of 607 A Street, Greenville, which in turn struck another automobile driven by Calvin Edward Moring, 32. Damage to the front of Buck's car was estimated at $600, damage to the sides of Briley's car was estimated at $500, and damage to the front of Moring's car was estimated at $150.

No injuries were reported in the accident. The police report showed the car driven by Buck was owned by Howard Forbes of Greenville, route four, and the car driven by Briley was owned by W. H. Horne, Jr. of Greenville.

Arrest Pitt . . . single barrel shotgun. Reeves changed his story on the shooting some hours afterwards. He first claimed that he shot the man from a distance of about 30 feet as he was coming off his porch, with the man in the yard.

Later, however, he told Sheriff Ruel W. Tyson and Deputy Loyd Manning that he fired the fatal blast at a distance of only a few feet. The man admitted firing twice, the first time to scare the man away, when he was advancing with a knife, Reeves said.

After arrest by Morrow, he was asked by the officer, "Why did you kill him?" Reeves replied, "I told him to leave and stop cussing my wife."

"My wife went down the lane with Hardy and told him to leave but he turned around and came back later," Reeves told the officer. "I told him 'don't come on me,' he had a knife and I fired," Reeves was quoted as saying.

No knife was found at the scene of the shooting.

The murder weapon was found inside the small frame building occupied by Reeves and his wife. The house had been locked and the keys were in the man's pocket. Searched after being arrested, he was found to have one extra gun shell on his person, along with a knife and wallet.

Reeves admitted that he served nine years and five months for shooting a man near Black Jack about 20 years ago. He was given a 15-year sentence at that time, he stated.

The murder was the first for Pitt County this year.

A bill of indictment was drawn up this morning by Superior Court Solicitor W. J. Bundy and the grand jury was expected to act on the case this afternoon.

In the event that a true bill is found the case will be tried this week before Presiding Judge John J. Burney of Wilmington, who opened the January term of criminal court here this morning.

$85.4 Billion . . . substantial gains."

In the tax section of his 33,000-word message, Mr. Truman conceded that his hopes of earning on a pay-as-you-go basis are dead. But he warned Congress that heavy spending will continue at least until the summer of 1954.

"The need for improving the equity of the tax system gives me as much concern as the need for revenue," he said. "The tax laws should not be used as a means of granting special favors or hiding special subsidies."

"Glaring injustices in our tax laws should be eliminated before those with moderate means are asked to shoulder additional burdens."

He cited the shipping industry as one segment of the economy getting "unwarranted" tax benefits.

Sixty-Below And Colder In Alaska

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP)—The temperature skidded to 60 degrees below zero yesterday and Fairbanks' 20,000 residents, their regular air communication virtually cut off by the bitter cold, shivered in a frosty world of their own.

The cold spell, the second in ten days, held most of the far north in its grip. It was 78 below zero at Snag on the Alaska-Canada border and many interior Alaska points reported readings of 70 below or colder.

A dense ice fog which always forms when the mercury drops below minus 45, forced scheduled airlines to cancel flights to and from Fairbanks. The occasional plane that did arrive took off again before its engines got cold.

Visibility at night was reduced to about 30 feet.

Taxis were doing a rushing business as the cold stalled private automobiles. However, the taxi drivers' expenses were running high. Because of the difficulty of starting cold engines, drivers were keeping their motors running 24 hours a day.

Some residents who had to use their cars to get to and from work were parking them with their engines running all night, or getting up every three hours to start them and warm them up.

The morning session was devoted to a discussion on purposes and suggested plans for the drive and Terry Sanford, chairman of the Cumberland County Red Cross, led a group discussion. F. M. Hawk of the national headquarters was the main speaker at the luncheon.
